Mr. G. Wetherbee's With Pipe and Dance (215) is a lovely piece, a large landscape of the quasi-classic order in which Corot in our day has reigned supreme, and yet not so like his work as to be a plagiary. It depicts, with choiceness of style and taste in colour, tone, and all the finer harmonies painters delight in, a wide and level landscape of a heath between a halcyon sea and a still and shining pool, and in the foreground a young girl clad in white is dancing, with super-abundant joy in life and natural grace, to the piping of a young shepherd. The more distant landscape is like a glimpse of that Arcady Keats dreamed about, but, of course, never saw in nature or in art, although his visions had so much of solidity that he would have thanked Mr. Wetherbee for realizing them thus fully, gracefully, and sympathetically. Dawn the Rosy-Fingered (201) is another charming piece of Mr. Wetherbee's, and deserves the attention his larger picture is sure to command. Possessing less of a subject other than that which is wholly poetic and artistic, it is not less lovely in its way.

The largest subject picture here comes from Mr. A. T. Nowell, to whom we have never before been indebted for anything half so accomplished. We have, in fact, had works of his which were much the reverse of this. We are, therefore, perhaps grateful in excess of its merits for his life-size figures in The Expulsion from Eden (254), where, if the Archangel and his attendants were a little less genteel, there would be nothing to challenge. There is nothing particularly like our notions of the Garden of Eden in Mr. Nowell's background of trees, which nevertheless suit his comely and well-drawn and ably painted figures of Adam and Eve, who are consciously naked, while the gracious-looking angels who stand on guard about the gate are gorgeously clad, and their only expression is that of pity for the weeping culprits who pass away before them. We gladly praise the excellent draughtsmanship of these figures as well as the rich and strong carnations of the nudities and the harmony and love of grace which the whole picture affirms. It is not given to every artist to work in such a scholarly manner when life-size figures, and above all nudities, are in question. Another picture here excels 'The Expulsion from Eden' in this respect; what the work mostly lacks is, not commendable technical qualities, but more vigour of conception and a more animated design. Mere learning and care, accomplishments and a refined sense of beauty, are not nearly sufficient to do justice to so grand a theme; but Mr. Nowell's training and powers are, of course, quite equal to a less ambitious and impressive subject.

The subject of The Vampire (15) has taxed the resources and invention of Mr. P. Burne-Jones to the utmost, and, indeed, the result of his studies does not quite equal our hopes. The scene is a moonlit room, where the victim of the vampire, a stalwart young man, who is either dead, dying, or in a trance of terror, lies supine on his bed; upon his uncovered breast is the red mark of the monster's fatal caress, and she, in the shape of a wan, demon-like woman, sits at his side, and looks as if her lips had just parted from their horrid work. So far this is an easily understood illustration of what are, after all, but the externals of the ghastly legend, and there is nothing in the design or the picture as such which adds to its horror. What we see is doubtless suitable enough to the tale, but we are unable to discover signs of deeper insight at work to raise the picture far above the level of an illustration in the common sense of that term. On the other hand, let us praise the good judgment which selected this cold and wan moonlight as the effect best suited to the theme, the skill which enabled Mr. Burne-Jones to paint it so well; also let us commend to students the simplicity of the design, which contains no extraneous and unnecessary features, nor any excess of details, incidents, and circumstances. The livid greyness and the olive pallor of the woman are exactly what they ought to be. The artist's technique is evidently rapidly improving, so that it is easy for us to see how much better 'The Vampire' is painted than any of his pictures which have preceded it. Mr. Rudyard Kipling's lines, 'For the Picture,' which are printed in the Catalogue under its name, may have a very remote and quite indirect connexion with the vampire legend, and be a sort of allegory unattached, but that is as much as can be said of them. On the whole, Mr. Burne-Jones's graceful and modest little picture Beside a Summer Sea (24) is more thoroughly satisfactory. It is practically a study in grace, delicate forms, an elegant pose, and choice as well as reticent colours. This is all; there is no other subject than beauty to be taken account of here, but that is enough, and more than enough, to charm us.

Quite another sort of subject, mood, and method is apparent in Mr. A. F. Hughes's Lesson in Arcadia (22), with the motto

> To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
> Equal with wondering.

The motto, it is true, hints at more graces and nymph-like beauty than the comely damsel who reclines on the sward before us can boast of. In spite of this she is charming; her face and air are really pretty, while the sweetness of the picture throughout delights us; it could, indeed, hardly be more pleasing, more of an idyl in paint; the very light is almost Arcadian, and the coloration is such as would give pleasure to Stothard, who, if any Englishman knew of it, was a lifelong sojourner in such an Arcadia as Mr. Hughes has depicted.—Far away again from its forerunner here is the theme of Mr. A. Lemon's Strange Sails (53), a painty but spirited illustration of a subject which is quite new in itself, although it belongs to a class (much better known and appreciated in Paris than in London) which the artist has often selected before. The scene is a sandy dune overgrown with rushes, where two ancient Britons (?), mounted on horses as unkempt as themselves, look out upon the sea in alarm at the approach of a group of galleys with red and white sails. Small as this example is, it is quite first-rate so far as it goes.—Sir E. Burne-Jones's large allegory The Pilgrim of Love (134) was described in these columns some weeks back, so further notice of it may be deferred for the present.

VITRUVIANA.

University of Edinburgh.

The notion that "Vitruvius" is a forgery, like the kindred theory that Pausanias wrote his peregrination of Greece without quitting his own library at home, reappears from time to time in learned writings. The view of Schultz that it was a figment of the tenth century is disposed of by the fact that the MSS. of the work go back to the ninth. The recent ascription of it to the third or fourth century A.D., mentioned by Prof. Aitchison in your issue of April 17th, may have some linguistic support, but runs counter to the internal evidence supplied by the matter of the work. That there was a Roman Vitruvius versed in architectural matters seems clear from the mention of him by Frontinus ('De Aquæd.' 25) in the first, and by Sidonius Apollinaris ('Ep' iv. 3) in the fifth century. What this real Vitruvius wrote may have perished, and a forger of the third or fourth century may conceivably have published his lucubrations under the honoured name. He must have been a forger of phenomenal skill, for as a fact the matter of "Vitruvius" agrees exactly with the account the writer gives of himself, and with the casual indications of date occurring in the treatise. This, assuming it to be genuine, appears to have been compiled earlier than the time of Augustus, and to have been published when that ruler was already busily engaged in his great public works. The practice it presupposes, and the character of the monuments referred to, both correspond to the last age of the Republic rather than to that of the early Empire, and Vitruvius does not write about Roman architecture as we know it, as a system depending on the forms, materials, and processes which only came in with the Empire. That a forger of a later time would have let no word escape him to betray his acquaintance with the characteristic productions of the Imperial period is extremely improbable, and this consideration will outweigh a good many scruples based on the language of the work. Thus the general descriptions of towns and buildings in Vitruvius do not apply to the time of the Cæsars, but correspond to the simpler arrangements of the provincial Greek and Italian cities of about B.C. 100. The Forum is still the place for shows and gladiatorial contests (v. 1, 1; x. Pref.). The author knows of one stone theatre at Rome—that of Pompeius (iii. 2, 2); but the normal material in his eyes is still wood (v. 5, 7).

He seems to have known no other kind of bathing establishment than the modest balneæ, of which an example survives in the smaller baths at Pompeii, of a date about B.C. 70. The characteristic features of the later Roman Thermæ, the walks, the racing and exercise grounds, the alcoves, the porticoes, are indeed described in the 'De Architecturâ,' but in connexion with the Greek Palæstra, an institution which the author expressly says was not in fashion in Italy (v. 11, 1). The Imperial Thermæ were a combination of the balneæ, or baths proper, with the open-air attractions of the Greek Palæstra. Of this combination Vitruvius seems to know nothing, but could a writer of the third or fourth century have dealt with the subject without betraying a knowledge of the Thermæ in their established Imperial form? The great Imperial structures depended essentially on the use of concrete, made with the volcanic earth or "pozzolana" of the Roman Campagna. Vitruvius is acquainted with the excellent qualities of this material, but only knows it as found near Cumæ and Baiæ, and around Mount Vesuvius, of any recent activity of which as a volcano he is unaware (ii. 6, 1; v. 12, 2). The inference is that the pozzolana deposits near Rome had, at the time of his writing, not been tapped. He makes no mention of the practice of veneering a brick and concrete structure with marble, which became so characteristic a feature of Roman Imperial decoration. To him this use of marble is still an outland fashion, only known in Italy as imitated in painting by the mural decorator (vii. 5, 1).

If it is answered to all this that the later forger was careful only to copy from documents belonging to the age of the author whose personality he assumed, it comes to be a case of the old jest over again, and the 'De Architecturâ' is to be ascribed not to Vitruvius, but to another writer of the same name. The point of importance for the student of ancient art is to know that the treatise is one of solid practical value, giving the ideas and the technique of a definite period, and written by those actually experienced in the materials and processes described. That this is the case no careful reader can doubt. Some of the technical descriptions in Vitruvius, notably that about plaster work and the fresco painting that completed it (vii. ch. 2 to 7), are among the most interesting pieces of the kind in artistic literature, and certainly were not the work of a mere littérateur.

G. Baldwin Brown.

SALE.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 27th ult. the following engravings: After Sir E. Landseer, Dignity and Impudence, by T. Landseer, 30*l.* After J. Constable, Salisbury Cathedral, by D. Lucas, 35*l.*; The Lock and The Cornfield, by D. Lucas, 134*l.*; The English Landscape, by D. Lucas, 61*l.* After T. Lawrence by S. Cousins, Miss Julia Peel, 36*l.*; Countess Grosvenor, 25*l.*; Master Lambton, 55*l.*; Countess Gower and Child, 48*l.* After Sir J. Reynolds, Mrs. Braddyll, by S. Cousins, 35*l.* After J. L. E. Meissonier, La Partie Perdue, by F. Bracquemond, 29*l.*; Portrait of the Sergeant, by J. Jacquet, 35*l.*; Le Guide, by A. Jacquet, 25*l.*; '1806,' by J. Jacquet, 40*l.*; '1807,' by J. Jacquet, 68*l*; Les Bons Amis, by A. Blanchard, 29*l.*; The Chess Players, by A. Blanchard, 29*l.*; La Rixe, by F. Bracquemond, 115*l.*; '1814,' by J. Jacquet, 115*l.* After Sir E. Landseer, Night, and Morning, by T. Landseer, 36*l.*; Spaniel and Pheasant, and Retriever and Woodcock, by T. Landseer, 42*l.*; Odin, by T. Landseer, 33*l.*; Hafed, by C. G. Lewis, 27*l.*; Hunters at Grass, by C. G. Lewis, 73*l.*; The Monarch of the Glen, by T. Landseer, 57*l.*; The Stag at Bay, by T. Landseer, 65*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

A second edition of Lord Leighton's 'Address to the Students of the Academy' is coming, edited by his sister, Mrs. Sutherland Orr, who has written a preface and added a much needed table of contents.

It will be good news for all admirers of his art that Mr. Jan van Beers has issued invitations to a private view of an exhibition of his paintings to-day (Saturday) at the Fine-Art Society's gallery.—For the same day private views of works by Madame Bries and Miss M. Earl are appointed to occur in the Graves Galleries, Pall Mall. The public may go to both these exhibitions on Monday next.

The second number of the Annual of the British School in Athens, covering the session 1895–6, is now nearly ready for issue to subscribers, and on this occasion a limited number will be also offered to the public through Messrs. Macmillan. Besides the usual reports by the Director and students of the School on the work of the session, including some of the results of the excavations in Melos, the volume will contain the following special contributions: 'The Campaign of Artemisium and Thermopylæ,' by Prof. J. B. Bury; 'A Visit to Cyrene in 1895,' by Mr. Herbert Weld-Blundell; 'Lesbos,' by Mr. W. H. D. Rouse; and 'Goulàs: the City of Zeus,' by Mr. Arthur J. Evans.

The exhibition of Alpine drawings and paintings at the Alpine Club opens on Monday and will close on June 2nd.

On October 3rd last, while reviewing the latest of the numerous lives of the graceless George Morland, we remarked (p. 455, col. 3) that his biographer had failed to discover the painter's birthplace, which we may take for granted was the home of Henry R. Morland, his father. When his celebrated son was born, viz., on the 26th of June, 1763, he was, according to the catalogues of exhibitions, living in the Haymarket. Quite recently, while inquiring into another subject, we have found in the catalogue of the Society of Artists' Exhibition in Spring Gardens, 1765: "Mr. Moreland, Three Doors below the Opera House, in the Haymarket. 86. A Servant with a candle, in crayons. 87. The general post, ditto." George Morland was then two years old. The Opera House was, of course, that built by Vanbrugh, opened in 1705, and burnt down in June, 1789. Less than a year afterwards the second Opera House, designed by Novosielski, was begun, and continued to exist until a few years since. "Three Doors below" the older building meant, it is manifest, in a southern direction, i.e., nearer Pall Mall, and close to the spot where was murdered in February, 1682. The enlargement of the site of Vanbrugh's building, including as it did the whole space between Charles Street and Pall Mall, and the formation of the well-known Opera Colonnade, necessitated the demolition of Henry Morland's house, in which he lived until he went to occupy in Leicester Fields that mansion which he sold to Sir Joshua Reynolds, and now tenanted by Messrs. Puttick & Simpson.

> Long Tom Thynne, of Longleat Hall,

On the 23rd ult. there were sold in Paris 'Le Petit Pêcheur,' by Corot, for 11,900fr., and, for 14,200fr., 'Les Bords de l'Oise,' by C. F. Daubigny.

Karl von Lützow, who has held the Chair of Art-History in the Academy of Vienna for so many years, died in that city on April 22nd. He was born at Göttingen on Christmas Day, 1832, and was educated at the University there, devoting himself to philosophical and archæological studies, which he afterwards continued at Munich, and later at Berlin. He co-operated with Lübke in the production of the second and third editions of the 'Denkmäler der Kunst,' and after Lübke's death he published, about two years ago, as sole editor, the seventh and latest edition. For some time he was teacher of art-history at Munich, but in 1863 was called to Vienna, where he remained until his death. In 1877 he published a history of the Vienna Academy, and in 1891 his history of German copperplate and wood engraving. He was also the founder of the Zeitschrift für bildende Kunst.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Theatre Royal, Manchester.—The Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company: Production in English of Puccini's 'La Bohème.'
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts.
Crystal Palace.—Mr. Manns's Benefit Concert.

When Signor Puccini's opera 'Manon Lescaut' was performed, for the first time in London, on the opening night of the Covent Garden summer season in 1894 (Athen. No. 3473), we were compelled to speak somewhat harshly of the disjointed and generally clumsy libretto, while according praise to the composer for his mingled eclecticism and originality. Both qualities may again be noted in the work heard, for the first time in England, at Manchester on Thursday last week. If 'Manon Lescaut' displayed rich promise, 'La Bohème,' to be known in English as 'The Bohemians,' may be described as a masterpiece. The French predilections of Puccini were strongly apparent in the earlier work, and they have not altogether disappeared, though they are not so prominent in the new score, distinctly Parisian as the subject treated by Henri Murger may be. There is not much difference between Bohemianism in the thirties of this century and in the present day, nor is smug "respectability" much improved. It cannot be denied that the first three acts of Signori Giuseppe Giacosa and Luigi Illica's book, founded, or rather suggested, by Murger's description of Bohemian life, are not exactly pleasant. Rudolph the poet, Marcel the painter, Schaunard the musician, and Colline the philosopher may be types of humanity, but clearly not in a lofty stage. With them are mingled Mimi, a timid and sweet girl, but certainly not a paragon of virtue, and Musetta, a soubrette of a far more brazen type. The scenes of what may be termed domestic Bohemian life as well as those in the Latin Quarter and the outer boulevards of Paris are vividly sketched; and the last act—in which Mimi dies prettily, and every one of the characters affords evidence that there may be more than a trace of good in things which appear to be mainly evil—is as touching as anything that has ever been witnessed on the lyric stage. It should be said that the English version of the libretto is a joint affair, the late Mr. William Grist having written the translation of the first and second acts, and Mr. Percy Pinkerton that of the third and fourth. Although it cannot be said that either of the adapters has been altogether happy in diction, they have both succeeded in preserving much of the spirit of the original, and thanks to the admirable stage management of Messrs. H. Brooklyn and R. Brennan, Murger's ideas were well reflected.

Turning to the consideration of the music, we have first to note that Signor Puccini displays the same spirit of eclecticism that he did in 'Manon Lescaut,' but with greater freedom, that is to say with more breadth in dealing with each style of musical penmanship. Again, we have much that reflects the style of modern French composers, much that suggests Wagnerian influences in the freedom of the voice parts in concerted movements, and over all Italian warmth and colouring, whether in the illustrations of typical Bohemian life or in the pathos of love and death. It need scarcely be said that the score runs on freely, and is not cut up into formal numbers as in the effete school of Italian opera. But for this reason it practically defies analysis in comprehensible language; and we may add that some of the English is not immaculate. We have "Paris chimneys ri-se," "Not a morsel he gets," "Od-es of Passion," and other such like anachronisms. But we forget these in the glow of the music, which goes on increasing in intensity until the end. The Wagnerian system of leading themes is employed, but only to a limited extent, and the greatest effect is won in the ensembles, such as the first episode of a love nature that closes the first act, the splendid finale of the third act, and nearly the whole of the fourth. With respect to the close of 'The Bohemians,' as we are expected to term Puccini's latest effort for the present, it may safely be asserted that nothing finer in the way of a tragic catastrophe has been presented since Gounod wrote his very French edition of 'Faust.' The close, marked pppp, after a series of discords in C sharp minor, is almost tear-compelling. We have little but praise for the initial English performance at Manchester last week. Mr. Robert Cunningham, who was underlined for the part of Rudolph, the leading spirit of the Bohemians, was unfortunately very hoarse, but he struggled on gallantly, and sang better towards the end than at first. Miss Alice Esty was delightful in appearance, vocally, and dramatically as Mimi; and Miss Bessie Macdonald improved on all her previous efforts as Musetta. Mr. William Paull, Mr. Charles Tilbury, and Mr. A. S. Winckworth were among those who rendered excellent service; and the orchestra and chorus under the direction of Mr. Claude Jaquinot left little, if any, cause for complaint. The presentation of the opera in London next autumn is certain to meet with favour.

It was, of course, fitting that as early as possible "In Memoriam" concerts should be given in honour of the late Johannes Brahms, and due tribute was paid to the genius of the deceased master at the first of the new series of Mr. Robert Newman's Symphony Concerts last Saturday afternoon. The selection was perhaps as judicious as it could well be in an orchestral programme, for it included the melodious Symphony in D, No. 2, the 'Tragic' and 'Academic' overtures, two of the Hungarian Dances as orchestrated by Albert Parlow, and five Lieder. All the instrumental items were superbly given by Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra, and the songs were most intelligently rendered by Madame Blanche Marchesi, though she would do well not to force her not too sympathetic voice in forte passages.

The annual benefit concert of Mr. August Manns at the Crystal Palace was very well attended, and with this performance the Saturday concerts at Sydenham came to an end until the autumn. The orchestra was increased to a hundred performers, and very fine interpretations were secured of Schumann's Symphony in D minor, known as No. 4, Brahms's 'Song of Destiny,' and Beethoven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 3. Mr. Herbert Bunning's new overture, denominated 'The Mistral,' is programme music, and that of the most pronounced type. It is suggestive of various ideas connected with the epoch of the troubadours, and the themes are characterized by charm and variety. The piece is unquestionably effective, and the young and clever composer was cordially applauded. The interpretation of Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto by Miss Maud MacCarthy was simply an astounding display of precocious talent. The child is said to be only in her fourteenth year, and such mastery over the work did she evince that Mr. Manns was almost overcome with emotion. Madame Albani contributed strangely contrasted vocal items by Donizetti and Wagner in her most effective manner.

Musical Gossip.

The second pianoforte recital of ensemble music, held by Messrs. Ross and Moore at St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, was no less successful than the first. The two artists, who understand each other's intentions exactly, played a Sonata in D by Mozart, Schumann's Theme with Variations in E flat, Op. 46, and various items by Chopin, Liszt, Rubinstein, and other composers with a measure of accuracy that was at times almost astounding. Mrs. Hutchinson contributed songs by Brahms, Durand, and J. J. Rousseau in acceptable style.

The Walenn Chamber Concerts came to a conclusion for the present season at the Queen's Hall on Tuesday evening. The clever young composer Eduard Schütt, Russian by birth, was represented by a Pianoforte Trio in E minor, Op. 51. It is a fresh and piquant work, and it was crisply interpreted by Miss Maude Rihill and Messrs. Gerald and Herbert Walenn. The miscellaneous instrumental and vocal selection was well rendered by all concerned, including the artists named, Miss Dorothea Walenn, Miss Esther Palliser, and Mr. Arthur Walenn.

Sir Alexander Mackenzie's comic opera 'His Majesty' has finished its somewhat brief career at the Savoy Theatre; but we are informed that the Scottish composer will contribute the music of another work for the same house in due course.

Many will regret to learn the death of Mr. Ernest Lockwood, the highly esteemed harpist, which occurred on Wednesday last week. Mr. Lockwood had attained his fifty-seventh year, and was a valued artist in most of our principal orchestras.

JOHANNES BRAHMS is said to have made the following statement in a letter to a music publisher at Berlin: "I do not owe any one a single penny, but other people owe me large amounts. I release them, however, of all obligations towards me after my death." It is also reported that the composer has left a fortune amounting to 285,000 marks, and that among his musical remains there are only a few songs and a Protestant Choralbuch.

THE Mozart Society will resume its operations in November next, and the programmes will include some novelties which should command attention.

THE tickets for the forthcoming Wagner Festival at Bayreuth are selling very rapidly, and over 16,000*l.* has already been taken.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Orchestral Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall
— National Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON. Bohemian Quartet Concert, 3, St James's Hall
— Miss Evelyn Ward and Mr Owen Morgan's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall
— Mr Carl Armbruster's 'Parsifal' Lecture, 3, King's College.
— Mlle Mohlter's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
— Miss Greta Williams's Concert, 8, Kensington Town Hall.
TUES. Mr F Lamond's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St James's Hall
— Highbury Philharmonic Society, Rossini's 'Stabat Mater' and Selection from Gounod's 'La Reine de Saba,' 8, Highbury Athenæum
— Herr Hyllsted's Orchestral and Choral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall
— Miss Violet Defries's Recital, 8.30, Steinway Hall
WED. Miss Spiller's Violin Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
— Royal Engineers' Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
— Miss A Hart's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
THURS. Señor Esposito's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St James's Hall.
— Miss Sarah Fenning's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
— Royal Choral Society, Queen's Commemoration Concert, 8, Albert Hall.
— Miss Lily Heale and Miss Constance Leslie's Concert, 8, Steinway Hall.
— The Strolling Players' Orchestral Society's Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall
FRI. Miss Beata Francis's Concert, 3, Albert Hall (West Theatre).
— Mr Clyde Twelvetrees's First Violoncello Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
— Mr. George A. Clinton's Chamber Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
— Mr Isidor Cohn's Trio Concert, 8, Steinway Hall
SAT. Herr Otto Hegner's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
— Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3
— Miss Kate Goodwin's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

STRAND.—'Dr. Johnson,' a Play in One Act. By Leo Trevor.

HER MAJESTY'S.—Opening.

"A DRAMATIC episode in one act" is the description afforded of 'Dr. Johnson,' Mr. Leo Trevor's little play produced on Friday in last week at the Strand. Not at all a bad piece of work is this trifle, against which nothing is to be urged except that it takes away light-heartedly the character of Boswell's cousin and wife, who, besides being, as Boswell says, "a true Montgomerie," was a very chaste and faithful spouse. That she did not love Johnson is known, and Johnson himself was acute enough to detect the fact, though while he was her guest she "paid him the most assiduous and respectful attention." Again and again he banters her upon her delight in seeing him go, and declares that he loves her none the less, and that he could wish to visit her again in order to give her the renewed pleasure of his departure. She was naturally disgusted with "his irregular hours and uncouth habits, such as turning the candles with their heads downwards when they did not burn bright enough, and letting the wax drop upon the carpet." Very far from sharing her husband's enthusiasm was she, and she told the devoted Boswell to his face that she had seen many a bear led by a man, but had not previously seen "a man led by a bear." It is during Johnson's visit to Boswell in Edinburgh that the action of Mr. Trevor's play is laid. The Doctor acts up to the character assigned him, as dirty, slovenly, snuffy, loud-voiced, and assertive; and, if he does not spill the wax of the candles on the floor, extinguishes the lights on the furniture. Mrs. Boswell is, however, anything but "assiduous and respectful," and gives the Doctor "a piece of her mind" with as much outspokenness as if he had been her husband instead of her guest. Quite pardonable is all this; and though there is a touch of caricature in the presentation of life under the Boswell roof, there is also a good deal that is lifelike and vivacious. Mr. Trevor, however, paints Mrs. Boswell as so jealous of the influence of Johnson over her spouse as to be on the point of eloping with her cousin and former lover, a young captain of foot. It is surely a serious matter to blast thus the character of an irreproachable Scottish matron. Fortunately Johnson, by a very familiar and conventional device, surprises the secret of the lovers, if such they are. He persuades Mrs. Boswell that her suspicions concerning her husband are baseless, and that James occupies his leisure hours in writing poems to his beloved Margaret; then, taking the lady's place, he meets the captain, and ultimately convinces him that his duty as a gallant and honourable man is to depart. The serious interest in this is poor, and the piece is lacking in grip. It is, nevertheless, written with some spirit, and has abundance of colour. Mr. Arthur Bourchier gives a gruff and recognizable portrait of the Doctor, and is seen to genuine advantage. Boswell appears as a very grotesque and comical character, but Mrs. Boswell and her soldier lover are rather tamely presented.

Her Majesty's was duly opened on Wednesday by Mr. Tree in presence of a large and brilliant audience. It is a handsome and commodious house, and constitutes a pleasant addition to the long list of West-End theatres. A recitation by Mrs. Tree of an occasional address by the Laureate formed the inaugural ceremony. 'God save the Queen' was then duly sung, and the occasion wound up with an address by Mr. Tree. The opening piece consisted of Mr. Gilbert Parker's adaptation of his Franco-Canadian novel 'The Seats of the Mighty,' which is new to England, but has been seen more than once in America. To the performance of this piece we shall recur.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—W. M. A.—H. E. C.—M. M.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

	£.	d.
For Twelve Months...	15	3
For Six Months	7	8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months	9	0

THE FAUNA of BRITISH INDIA, including Ceylon and Burmah. Published under the authority of the Secretary of State for India in Council. Edited by W. T. BLANFORD. Medium 8vo with numerous Woodcuts HYMENOPTERA. Vol I WASPS and BEES. By Lieut.-Col C. T. BINGHAM Price 12*s* With 4 Coloured Plates MAMMALIA. By W T BLANFORD, F.R.S. 1 vol complete, price 12*s* FISHES. By F. DAY, C.I.E. LL.D. 2 vols price 12*s* each BIRDS. By EUGENE W. OATES, F.Z.S. Vol I. price 12*s*, Vol II price 15*s*, Vol III, by W. T BLANFORD, F.R.S., price 15*s*. REPTILIA and BATRACHIA By G. A. BOULENGER. 1 Vol complete, price 12*s* MOTHS. By Sir G. F. HAMPSON, Bart. 4 vols price 12*s* each.

London: Taylor & Francis, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street. Calcutta: Thacker, Spink & Co Bombay: Thacker & Co, Limited. Berlin: R Friedlander & Sohn, Carlstrasse 11.

In imperial 8vo Vol. II (I-Q) pp. 888,

MODERN ENGLISH BIOGRAPHY. By FREDERIC BOASE Containing nearly 6,200 Concise Memoirs of Persons who have died since 1850 With an Index of the most interesting matter 30*s* net, carriage free. "As a work of reference the book is just what it should be."—Times, April 14, 1892.

Some copies of Volume I. are still on sale at 30*s*.

Netherton & Worth, Truro.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 589 pp. 6*s*.

"Extremely interesting.....A brilliant picture of a contemporary mania."—Daily Telegraph.
"On English Fashion."—National Observer.
"Clever.....The irreclaimable 'Cocky' is an excellent creation."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"Thoroughly interesting, and touches of real pathos mingle with its vigorous satire and strong situations."
"Brilliant, if daring."—Scotsman. Glasgow Herald.
"Incomparably the best the author has ever written." National Observer.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE TRACK OF MIDNIGHT.

By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.

THE MISTRESS OF THE RANCH.

By FRED. T. CLARK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

HIGHLAND COUSINS.

By WILLIAM BLACK.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2*s*. 6*d*.

Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON

The Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain.

By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.,
Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36*s*. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written." Times.

"A great biography, and one to be read by all men."—Spectator.

VOLUME I. NOW READY.

Royal 8vo. 700 pp. 25*s*. net.

THE ROYAL NAVY

From the Earliest Times to the Present.

By WM. LAIRD CLOWES.

 Each Volume will be complete in itself, with an Index, and orders will be taken either for Sets or for separate Volumes.

In 5 handsome royal 8vo. vols. 25*s*. each, net.

PUBLISHERS' NOTE.

THE CONTRIBUTORS.—The present work, in the preparation of which Mr. LAIRD CLOWES is being assisted by Sir CLEMENTS MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, Author of 'Ironclads in Action'; Mr. THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Mr. E. FRASER, and many other competent writers, aims at being a trustworthy and, so far as space allows, a complete history, from the earliest times to the present.

NOW READY, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

MAY NUMBER.

Full of Interesting and Charming Illustrations.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

ISBISTER & CO.'S NEW LIST.

JUST PUBLISHED, with 2 Maps, demy 8vo. gilt top, 10*s.* 6*d.*

A STUDY of ST. PAUL: his Character and Opinions. By the Rev. S. Baring-Gould, M.A.,
Author of 'The Tragedy of the Cæsars,' &c.

In the press, demy 8vo. gilt top, 10*s.* 6*d.*

ST. FRANCIS of ASSISI: his Times, Life, and Work. By the Rev. W. J. Knox Little, M.A.,
Canon of Worcester. With a Portrait from the Painting by Fra Bartolommeo.

In the press, crown 8vo. gilt top, 6*s.*

IN GARDEN, ORCHARD, and SPINNEY. By Phil Robinson, Author of 'In My Indian Garden,'
'Birds of the Wave and Woodland,' &c.

NEXT WEEK, fcap. 8vo. 1*s.* net (post free, 1*s.* 2*d.*).

WORDSWORTH'S SONGS of LIBERTY and INDEPENDENCE. With an Introduction by by STOPFORD A. BROOKE, M.A., Author of 'Tennyson: his Art and Relation to Modern Life,' &c.

In the press, with Portrait, demy 8vo. gilt top, 10*s.* 6*d.*

RICHARD HUSSEY, FIRST LORD VIVIAN: a Memoir. By the Hon. Claud Vivian.
An interesting sketch (largely made up of his letters) of the career of the brilliant cavalry officer, Richard Hussey Vivian, who served in Flanders and the Peninsula, commanded the Sixth or Light Cavalry Brigade at Waterloo, took a distinguished part in Parliamentary affairs between 1820 and 1841, and was raised to the peerage as Baron Vivian of Glynn and Truro.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The BOOK of PARLIAMENT: an Account of the Customs and Curiosities of the Two Houses.
By MICHAEL MACDONAGH, Author of 'Bishop Doyle: a Biographical and Historical Study.'
The GLOBE says:—"We know no work on the subject at once so comprehensive, so full of information, so accurate, and so reliable."
PUNCH says:—"A masterpiece of compendious information."

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. gilt top, 5*s.*

BREAD from the HOLY PLACE: a Book of Daily Devotions. Compiled from Leading Authors
by M. A. COLEBY.
The DAILY MAIL says:—"The best of our devotional literature is laid under contribution, and always with felicitous results."

In dainty bindings, each 1*s.* net (post free, 1*s.* 2*d.*).

ENGLISH CATHEDRALS.

The TIMES says:—"A series of dainty little booklets.....The names of the authors are a guarantee that they are written with knowledge.....The illustrations add to their charm."
The SCOTSMAN says:—"The names of the authors and artists are enough to vouch for the literary skill, historical accuracy, and charm of the illustrations."
The GLOBE says:—"Attractive little volumes, all neatly bound and clearly printed, while in each case the letterpress is readable and informing."
The ROCK says:—"A dainty series of little books, carefully illustrated and well got up." The GENTLEWOMAN says:—"A really admirable series."

VOLUMES JUST READY.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY. By Dean Farrar. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.
YORK MINSTER. By Dean Purey-Cust. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted.
WINCHESTER CATHEDRAL. By Canon Benham. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.
ST. ALBAN'S ABBEY. By Canon Liddell. Illustrated by F. G. Kitton.
CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL. By Dean Fremantle. Illustrated by W. Lapworth.
NORWICH CATHEDRAL. By Dean Lefroy. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted.
GLOUCESTER CATHEDRAL. By Dean Spence. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.
SALISBURY CATHEDRAL. By Dean Boyle. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted.

VOLUMES IN PREPARATION (READY IN JUNE).

ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL. By Canon Newbolt. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.
ELY CATHEDRAL. By Canon Dickson. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo. gilt top, 5*s.*

FROM the GARDEN to the CROSS. A Study of our Lord's Passion. By A. B. Cameron, M.A. D.D.
The CHURCH TIMES says:—"We venture to think that any priest who will give to it the attentive consideration it deserves will gain from it fresh matter and many striking thoughts."

THIRD THOUSAND, with 2 Portraits, 2 vols. medium 8vo. 32*s.*

The LIFE and CORRESPONDENCE of ARCHBISHOP MAGEE. By John Cotter Macdonnell, D.D., Canon of Peterborough.
The TIMES says:—"The portrait drawn is that of a great man, a great prelate, and a great wit."

CHEAP EDITION, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The LIFE and WORK of BISHOP THOROLD. By the Rev. C. H. Simpkinson, M.A., Rector of Farnham, Author of 'Life and Times of Archbishop Laud,' &c.
The ATHENÆUM says:—"His life deserved to be written, more especially from the Episcopal side, and Mr. Simpkinson may be congratulated on the discretion that marks his treatment of the materials placed at his disposal by Dr. Thorold's executors. In an age of indiscreet biography he has realized the necessity of reticence.....Altogether, we lay down the volume with the feeling that the Church of recent years has been served by few Bishops more ably, and by none more unselfishly, than by Dr. Thorold."

THIRD THOUSAND, crown 8vo. gilt top, 5*s.*

The CLOCK of NATURE. By Hugh Macmillan, D.D., Author of 'The Daisies of Nazareth,'
'The Gate Beautiful,' &c.
The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"It need scarcely be said that the gifted author writes with ease and fluency; the imagery is beautiful in its simplicity, and each address is full of instruction, clear, definite, and to the point. We can heartily recommend it."

ISBISTER & CO., LIMITED, 15 and 16, Tavistock-street, Covent-garden, London, W.C.

REVISED LIST OF GEORGE REDWAY'S PUBLICATIONS.

BOOKS FOR COLLECTORS.

The ACTOR'S ART: Theatrical Reminiscences, Methods of Study, and Advice to Aspirants. Specially Contributed by Leading Actors of the Day. Edited by J. A. HAMMERTON. Prefatory Note by Sir HENRY IRVING. [Shortly.

The CONNOISSEUR: Essays on the Romantic and Picturesque Associations of Art and Artists. By FREDERICK S. ROBINSON. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The STORY of OUR TOWNS. Told by P. H. DITCHFIELD, F.S.A., Author of 'Old English Customs Extant at the Present Time.' With Introduction by the Rev. AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, D.D. 6*s.* net.

PORPHYRY, the PHILOSOPHER, to his WIFE MARCELLA. Translated, with Introduction, by ALICE ZIMMERN, Girton College, Cambridge. Preface by RICHARD GARNETT, C.B. LL.D. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

FINE PRINTS. By Frederick WEDMORE. With 12 Plates. (The Collector Series.) 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The CHASE. By William Somer- VILE. Reprinted from the Original Edition of 1735. With a Memoir of the Author. Illustrations by Hugh Thomson. 5*s.* net.

RARE BOOKS and their PRICES. With Chapters on Pictures, Pottery, Porcelain, and Postage Stamps. By W. ROBERTS. 5*s.* net.

The COIN COLLECTOR. By W. CAREW HAZLITT. With 12 Plates, depicting 129 rare Pieces. (The Collector Series.) 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

OLD ENGLISH CUSTOMS EXTANT at the PRESENT TIME. An Account of Local Observances, Festival Customs, and Ancient Ceremonies yet surviving in Great Britain. By P. H. DITCHFIELD, F.S.A. 6*s.* net.

The WAYS of the WORLD. Vers de Société. By COTSFORD DICK. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

FICTION, &c.

BEYOND ATONEMENT. A Story of London Life. By A. ST. JOHN ADCOCK. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

NEPHELE. The Story of a Sonata for Violin and Piano. By FRANCIS WILLIAM BOURDILLON. 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The LURE of FAME. By Clive HOLLAND, Author of 'My Japanese Wife.' 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

A BRIDE'S EXPERIMENT. A Story of Australian Bush Life. By CHARLES J. MANSFORD, Author of 'Shafts from an Eastern Quiver,' &c.; and JOHN A. INGLEBRIGHT. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

The TANTALUS TOUR. The Story of a Theatrical Venture. Chronicled by WALTER PARKE, Joint-Author of 'Les Manteaux Noirs,' and other Comic Operas. With Illustrations by J. Harrison. 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

ANIMAL EPISODES and STUDIES in SENSATION. By G. H. POWELL. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

The MORALITY of MARRIAGE, and other Essays. By MONA CAIRD. 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

A HUSBAND'S ORDEAL; or, the Confessions of Gerald Brownson, late of Cowra-Coora, Queensland. By PERCY RUSSELL. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

A MAN and a WOMAN. Faithfully presented by STANLEY WATERLOO. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

A DAUGHTER'S GRIEF. By F. H. CLIFFE. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

A TRAGEDY of GRUB STREET, and other Stories. By S. J. ADAIR FITZGERALD. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

SENTENTIÆ JURIS: Legal and other Epigram. By WILLIAM HOLLOWAY. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

TOBACCO TALK and SMOKERS' GOSSIP. 1*s.* 6*d.* net.

The OLD ECSTASIES. By Gaspard TREHERN. A Romance of Modern Life. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

The BEAUTIES of MARIE CORELLI. Selected and Arranged by ANNIE MACKAY. Elegantly printed and bound, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

ZENIA the VESTAL, a Story of Occult Life. By MARGARET B. PEEKE. 5*s.* net.

HOW to WRITE FICTION, especially the Art of Short Story Writing. A Practical Study of Technique. 3*s.* 6*d.* net. [Recommended by Prof. Edward Dowden.]

HETERODOXY.

The UNKNOWN GOD. 2s. 6d. net.

OURSELVES in RELATION to a DEITY and a CHURCH. 6*s.* net.

PRIMITIVE CHRISTIANITY. (Vol. I. containing the Lost Lives of Jesus Christ and the Apostles.) By J. RODES BUCHANAN, M.D. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

OCCULT SCIENCE.

DEMON POSSESSION and ALLIED THEMES: being an Inductive Study of Phenomena of our Own Times. By Rev. JOHN L. NEVIUS, D.D., for Forty Years a Missionary to the Chinese. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

MIRACLES and MODERN SPIRITUALISM. By ALFRED RUSSEL WALLACE, D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S. Revised Edition, with Chapters on Apparitions and Phantasms. 5*s.* net.

DEVIL WORSHIP in FRANCE; or, the Question of Lucifer. A Record of things seen and heard in the Secret Societies, according to the evidence of initiates. By ARTHUR EDWARD WAITE. 5*s.* net.

TRANSCENDENTAL MAGIC: its Doctrine and Ritual. By ÉLIPHAS LÉVI. A complete translation of 'Dogme et Rituel de la Haute Magie,' including all the Original Engravings and a Portrait of the Author. With a Biographical Preface. By ARTHUR EDWARD WAITE. 15*s.* net.

The SECRET SOCIETIES of all AGES and COUNTRIES. A Comprehensive Account of upwards of One Hundred and Sixty Secret Organizations—Religious, Political, and Social—from the most Remote Ages down to the Present Time. By C. W. HECKETHORN. New Edition, thoroughly Revised and greatly Enlarged. 2 vols. 31*s.* 6*d.* net.

BIOGRAPHY.

FOUR GENERATIONS of a LITE- RARY FAMILY. By W. CAREW HAZLITT. With Photogravure Portraits, Facsimiles, &c. 2 vols. [Out of print.

ANNA KINGSFORD: her Life, Letters, Diary, and Work. By her Collaborator, EDWARD MAITLAND. Illustrated with Portraits, Views, and Facsimiles. In 2 vols. 31*s.* 6*d.* net.

REMINISCENCES of a YORKSHIRE NATURALIST. By the late WM. CRAWFORD WILLIAMSON, LL.D. F.R.S., Professor of Botany in Owens College, Manchester. Edited by his WIFE. 5*s.* net.

The SOLDIER in BATTLE; or, Life in the Ranks of the Army of the Potomac. By FRANK WILKESON, a Survivor of Grant's Last Campaign. 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The GREAT SECRET, and its UN- FOLDMENT in OCCULTISM. A Record of Forty Years' Experience in the Modern Mystery. By a Church of England Clergyman. 5*s.* net.

EIGHTY YEARS AGO; or, the Recollections of an Old Army Doctor. His Adventures on the Field of Quatre Bras and Waterloo, and during the Occupation of Paris in 1815. By the late Dr. GIBNEY, of Cheltenham. Edited by his Son, Major R. D. GIBNEY. 5*s.* net.

BOOKS FOR SPORTSMEN.

GREAT SCOT the CHASER, and other Sporting Stories. By G. G. With Portrait of the Author. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

NEW SPORTING STORIES. By G. G. 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

CURIOSITIES of BIRD LIFE. An Account of the Sexual Adornments, Wonderful Displays, Strange Sounds, Sweet Songs, Curious Nests, Protective and Recognitory Colours, and Extraordinary Habits of Birds. By CHARLES DIXON, Author of 'The Migration of British Birds,' 'British Sea Birds,' &c. [Shortly.

SPORTING SOCIETY; or, Sporting Chat and Sporting Memories. Stories and Wrinkles of the Field and the Racecourse; Anecdotes of the Stable and the Kennel; with numerous Practical Notes on Shooting and Fishing. Edited by FOX RUSSELL. Illustrations by Randolph Caldecott. 2 vols. 12*s.* net.

TRAVEL and BIG GAME. By Percy SELOUS. With Two Chapters by H. A. BRYDEN. With 6 Original Drawings by Charles Whymper. 10*s.* 6*d.* net.

IN SCARLET and SILK; or, Recol- lections of Hunting and Steeplechase Riding. By FOX RUSSELL. Illustrations. 5*s.* net.

GEORGE REDWAY, Publisher, Hart street, Bloomsbury.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

The ANCIENT HEBREW TRADITION as ILLUSTRATED by the MONUMENTS. A Protest against the Modern School of Old Testament Criticism. By Dr. FRITZ HOMMEL, Professor of the Semitic Languages in the University of Munich. Translated from the German by EDMUND McCLURE, M.A., and LEONARD CROSSLE. With Map. Large post 8vo. buckram boards, 5s. [Ready about the middle of the month.

 The work will appear simultaneously in Munich, London, and New York.

OUTLINES of the HISTORY of the THEOLOGICAL LITERATURE of the CHURCH of ENGLAND from the REFORMATION to the CLOSE of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. The Bishop Paddock Lectures. By JOHN DOWDEN, D.D., Bishop of Edinburgh. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s.

The STRUGGLE of the NATIONS: Egypt, Syria, and Assyria. By Professor MASPERO. Edited by the Rev. Professor SAYCE. Translated by M. L. McCLURE. With Maps, 3 Coloured Plates, and over 400 Illustrations. Demy 4to. (approximately), cloth, bevelled boards, 25s.; half-morocco (bound by Riviere), 50s.

This is a companion volume to 'The Dawn of Civilization,' and contains the History of the Ancient Peoples of the East from the XIVth Egyptian Dynasty to the end of the Ramesside period. This interval covers the sojourn of the Israelites in Egypt and their Exodus therefrom. The recent discovery of an Egyptian Stele mentioning the Israelites gives special interest to this volume, where the matter is discussed with his usual acumen by the Author.

The DAWN of CIVILIZATION (EGYPT and CHALDÆA). New and Revised Edition. By Professor MASPERO. Edited by the Rev. Professor SAYCE. Translated by M. L. McCLURE. With Map and over 470 Illustrations, including 3 Coloured Plates. Demy 4to. (approximately), cloth, bevelled boards, 24s.; half-morocco (bound by Riviere), 48s.

Professor Maspero, by using the result of the most recent researches in Egypt and Mesopotamia, has brought this New Edition up to the latest date.

The LAMBETH CONFERENCES of 1867, 1878, and 1888. With the Official Reports and Resolutions, together with the Sermons preached at the Conferences. A New and Revised Edition, with Index. Edited by the Right Rev. RANDALL T. DAVIDSON, D.D., Bishop of Winchester. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

CHRIST in HIS HOLY LAND: a Life of our Lord, written during and after a Journey through the Holy Land. By the Rev. ALEXANDER A. BODDY, F.R.G.S. With Maps and several Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

DIOCESAN HISTORIES.

LINCOLN. By the late Rev. Canon E. Venables and the late Ven. Archdeacon PERRY. With Map. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

ROCHESTER. By the Rev. A. J. Pearman, M.A. With Map. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4s.

A HANDY BOOK of the CHURCH of ENGLAND. By the Rev. EDWARD L. CUTTS, D.D. New and Improved Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

An OFFICE of PRAYER for the USE of the CLERGY, with The COUNTRY CLERGYMAN'S IDEAL; or, the Pastoral Allusions in Keble's 'Christian Year.' By the Rev. Canon MEDD. New and Revised Edition. Small post 8vo. printed in red and black, cloth boards, 2s.

PRIVATE DEVOTIONS of BISHOP ANDREWES. Selected and Arranged, with Variations adapting to General Use, by JOHN EDWARD KEMPE, M.A., Prebendary of St. Paul's. 18mo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

The CONVERSION of the HEPTARCHY. By the Right Rev. G. F. BROWNE, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Stepney. Small post 8vo. with several Illustrations, cloth boards, 3s.

The CHRISTIAN CHURCH in THESE ISLANDS BEFORE the COMING of AUGUSTINE. By the Right Rev. G. F. BROWNE, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Stepney. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

AUGUSTINE and HIS COMPANIONS. By the Right Rev. G. F. BROWNE, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Stepney. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

PATRIARCHAL PALESTINE. By the Rev. A. H. Sayce, Professor of Assyriology, Oxford. Crown 8vo. with Map, buckram boards, 4s.

[This book is the first to apply the Tel-el-Amarna Tablets, both published and unpublished, towards elucidating the condition of Syria at this period. It also contains a recent and important revision of the Egyptian Geographical Lists bearing on Palestine.]

The "HIGHER CRITICISM" and the VERDICT of the MONUMENTS. By the Rev. Professor SAYCE, Queen's College, Oxford. Fifth Edition. Demy 8vo. buckram, bevelled boards, 7s. 6d.

"A really valuable and important work; perhaps the best which Professor Sayce has yet written."—Academy.

ANCIENT HISTORY from the MONUMENTS. — The HISTORY of BABYLONIA. By the late GEORGE SMITH. Edited and brought up to date by the Rev. Professor A. H. SAYCE. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

VERSES. By Christina G. Rossetti. Reprinted from 'Called to be Saints,' 'Time Flies,' and 'The Face of the Deep.' Small post 8vo. printed in red and black on hand-made paper, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.; limp roan, 5s.; Levantine, 6s. 6d.; limp German calf, 7s.; limp morocco, 7s. 6d.

The PROTESTATION ISSUED by the ENGLISH ROMANISTS in 1788. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by the Rev. A. J. C. ALLEN, M.A. Small post 8vo. limp cloth, 6d.

PAPAL CLAIMS and ANGLICAN ORDERS. By the Right Rev. C. W. SANDFORD, D.D., Bishop of Gibraltar. Small post 8vo. paper cover, 4d.

THE CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

These Publications are issued under the auspices of the Church Historical Society, of which the President is the Right Rev. M. CREIGHTON, D.D., Bishop of London.

XXII. The ELIZABETHAN BISHOPS and the CIVIL POWER. Statute 8 Eliz. c. 1 (A.D. 1565-66). Small post 8vo. paper cover, 2d.

 A Complete List of the Church Historical Society's Publications may be had on application.

LIFE of HER MAJESTY the QUEEN. With Sketches of the Royal Family. A "Diamond" Jubilee Memoir. Copiously illustrated. Fcap. 4to. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The QUEEN, HER EMPIRE, and the ENGLISH-SPEAK-ING WORLD, 1837-1897.

This Volume, specially prepared for the approaching celebration of the "Record Reign," consists of:—

I. A LIFE of QUEEN VICTORIA. By Mrs. ISLA STEWELL. A short but comprehensive Sketch of Her Majesty's Life, illustrated with Portrait.

II. The BRITISH EMPIRE. Selected Views of the Colonies and Dependencies of the Crown, including the following countries:—India, Australasia, Africa, Egypt, Canada, Bermuda, Jamaica, Bahamas, &c.

III. The ENGLISH SPEAKING WORLD. Fifty Views selected from those of the most interesting places in America.

Over 130 Illustrations carefully reproduced from copyright photographs, constituting the most complete set of views on the subject ever published. Large portfolio size, cloth boards, 5s.

DR. NANSEN: the Man and his Work. By Frederick DOLMAN. With Map and Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 1s.

The HEROES of the ARCTIC and their ADVENTURES. By FREDERICK WHYMPER, Author of 'The Romance of the Sea,' &c. Ninth Edition, Revised and brought up to date, with Illustrations and Map of the Arctic Regions. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s.

BEAUTIFUL BRITAIN. The Scenery and Splendours of the United Kingdom. Specially approved by Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. Consisting of 196 Photo Reproductions of the most noteworthy scenes in these Islands, with accompanying Text. This is an Edition de Luxe, and is beautifully got up. Large 4to. 1*l.* 1s.

The ROYAL COLLECTION of FOREIGN and COLONIAL VIEWS. Photographic Reproductions of the most Interesting Scenes in British Colonies and Dependencies, and all Countries comprising the English-Speaking World. 4to. cloth boards, 4s.

The ROMANCE of the SEA: its Fictions, Facts, and Folk-lore. By FRED. WHYMPER. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

WAYSIDE SKETCHES. By Professor Hulme, F.L.S. F.S.A. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 5s.

FLOWERS of the FIELD. By the late Rev. C. A. Johns. New Edition. With an Appendix on Grasses by C. H. JOHNS, M.A. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 6s.

EDIBLE and POISONOUS MUSHROOMS. What to Eat and What to Avoid. By M. C. COOKE, M.A. LL.D. A.L.S. With 18 Coloured Plates illustrating 48 Species. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

FRUIT CULTURE for PROFIT. For Farmers, Small Holders, Allotment Holders, Cottagers, &c. By C. B. WHITEHEAD, B.A. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 1s.

SIMPLE EXPERIMENTS for SCIENCE TEACHING. With numerous Diagrams, including 200 Experiments fully illustrating the Elementary Physics and Chemistry Division in the Evening School Continuation Code. By J. A. BOWER. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

HOW to MAKE COMMON THINGS. For Boys. By John A. BOWER, Author of 'Science Applied to Work,' &c. Copiously illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

THE ROMANCE OF SCIENCE.

The SPLASH of a DROP. By Prof. Worthington. With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

OUR SECRET FRIENDS and FOES. By Percy Faraday FRANKLAND, Ph.D. B.Sc. (London), F.R.S. Third Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 3s.

"It is a book which every clergyman, every magistrate, every guardian of the poor, every governor of a school, ought to possess and master."—Guardian.

COLOUR. By Captain Abney, F.R.S. With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

COAL. By Prof. R. Meldola. With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

DISEASES of PLANTS. By Prof. Marshall Ward. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

TIME and TIDE: a Romance of the Moon. Third Edi-tion, Revised. By Sir ROBERT S. BALL, LL.D. F.R.S., Royal Astronomer of Ireland. Illustrated. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The STORY of a TINDER-BOX. By the late Charles MEYMOTT TIDY, M.B.M.S. F.C.S. With numerous Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s.

The BIRTH and GROWTH of WORLDS. A Lecture by Prof. GREEN, M.A. F.R.S. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 1s.

SOAP BUBBLES and the FORCES which MOULD THEM. Being a Course of Three Lectures delivered at the London Institution, in December, 1889, and January, 1890, before a Juvenile Audience. By C. V. BOYS, A.R.S.M. F.R.S. With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

SPINNING TOPS. The Operatives' Lecture of the British Association Meeting at Leeds, September, 1890. By Prof. J. PERRY, M.E. D.Sc. F.R.S. With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

The MAKING of FLOWERS. By the Rev. Prof. George HENSLOW, M.A. F.L.S. F.G.S. With several Illustrations. Post 8vo. cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN'S NEW BOOKS.

THE WHIRLPOOL: a Novel.
By GEORGE GISSING.
Crown 8vo. 6s.

"The character of Alma is one of those careful, accurate, and perfectly truthful studies which Mr. Gissing alone among English novelists can produce..... All who know Mr. Gissing's work will hasten to read 'The Whirlpool.' And there should be no lover of the art of fiction to whom his work is unknown."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE WHIRLPOOL.
"The two chief figures, Rolfe Harvey and his wife Alma, are finished studies."—Manchester Guardian.

THE WHIRLPOOL.
"This novel has the signal merit in which nine-tenths of contemporary novels are wanting. It is realistic in the best and most fundamental sense which it is possible to attach to that vague and misused word. It is obviously a study of life at first hand."—National Observer and British Review.

THE WHIRLPOOL.
"In a word he gives us life itself."—Daily Chronicle.

MARGOT:
A Novel of Student Life in Paris.
By SIDNEY PICKERING.
Crown 8vo. 6s.
"An exceptionally interesting and clever novel."—World.

MARGOT.
"We have nothing but praise for this well-constructed and excellently-written novel, the scene of which is mostly laid in Paris.....A very good plot, which, though full of incident and unexpected complications, never over-taxes our credulity and is worked out in an admirable and perfectly natural way."—Pall Mall Gazette.

MARGOT.
"Excellent reading."—Academy.

THE SECRET ROSE.
By W. B. YEATS.
Illustrated by J. B. Yeats. With a Cover designed by Althea Giles.
Crown 8vo. 6s. net.
"A book that is full of beauties."—Saturday Review.

THE SECRET ROSE.
"Told by a poet of genius, and their very style enchants and enthrals you."—Truth.
"The author has a firm and delicate touch, a powerful imagination, and much humour."—Manchester Guardian.

THE FLIGHT OF THE EAGLE:
A Romantic History.
By STANDISH O'GRADY.
Crown 8vo. 6s.
"Mr. O'Grady has steeped his mind in the history of Elizabethan Ireland, and therefore all that he writes of it has value."—Athenæum.

THE FLIGHT OF THE EAGLE.
"Mr. O'Grady, inspired by much knowledge of old Ireland and much enthusiasm for its chiefs, tells us a stirring tale."
Glasgow Herald.

MANY CARGOES.
By W. W. JACOBS.
Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.
"Their drollery is perfectly irresistible."—Punch.

DRY FLY FISHING.
THE BOOK OF THE DRY FLY.
By GEORGE A. B. DEWAR.
With a Preface by the MARQUIS OF GRANBY, And Plates (plain and hand-coloured) of Natural and Artificial Flies.
Demy 8vo. 15s. net.
"An agreeable and even indispensable addition to the angler's library."—Times.
"The wisdom of the fisherman is freely and yet modestly infused, and the pleasure derived from the literary quality will not be decreased by the profit derived from the practical suggestions with regard to fishing the stream, the rise, evening fishing, trout flies, and the pursuit of the trout."
Field.

TO BE COMPLETED IN TWENTY MONTHLY PARTS.
Price Two Shillings a Part.
THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF SPORT.
Edited by the EARL OF SUFFOLK AND BERKSHIRE, HEDLEY PEEK, and F. G. AFLALO.
Imperial 8vo.
 Parts I., II., and III. now ready. Part IV. will be published on Monday May 27.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, LTD.,
16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER'S LIST.

FAMOUS SCOTS.
NEW VOLUMES.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d. each; cloth extra, gilt top, 2s. 6d.

The 'BLACKWOOD' GROUP. By Sir GEORGE DOUGLAS. [This day.

FLETCHER of SALTOUN. By G. W. T. OMOND.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT. By Oliphant SMEATON.

JAMES BOSWELL. By W. Keith LEASK.

SIR JAMES Y. SIMPSON. By his Daughter, EVE BLANTYRE SIMPSON. Second Edition. Tenth Thusand.

List of the "FAMOUS SCOTT" Series post free.
Twelve Volumes now ready.

NEW BOOKS.
SPRING SEASON, 1897.

JOHN ARMIGER'S REVENGE. By P. HAY HUNTER, Author of 'James Inwick,' &c., and Joint-Author of 'My Ducats and my Daughter.' Art canvas, 3s. 6d.

SPRAYS of NORTHERN PINE. By FERGUS MACKENZIE, Author of 'Cruisie Sketches,' &c. Art canvas, 3s. 6d.

A MAN'S VALUE to SOCIETY: Studies in Self-Culture and Character. By NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS. Cloth extra, gilt top, 5s.

The PERSONAL MINISTRY of the SON of MAN: Studies in the Saviour's Application of His Own Teaching. By the Rev. JAMES JEFFREY, M.A. Cloth extra, 5s.

IN the TIGER JUNGLE, and other Stories of Missionary Work among the Telugus of India. By the Rev. JACOB CHAMBERLAIN, M.D. D.D. With an Introduction by the Rev. FRANCIS E. CLARK, D.D. Cloth extra, illustrated, 3s. 6d.

LADY BLANCHE BALFOUR: a Reminiscence. By the Rev. JAMES ROBERTSON, D.D., Whittinghame. Cloth extra, illustrated, 1s. [Ready.
These personal recollections of the mother of Mr. A. J. Balfour and the sister of Lord Salisbury will be read with interest by both followers and opponents of these eminent men.

NEW AND UNIFORM 3s. 6d. EDITIONS OF FAVOURITE NOVELS BY ANNIE S. SWAN.
All now ready in handsome bindings.

SHEILA.	3/6
The GATES of EDEN.	3/6
The GUINEA STAMP.	3/6
MAITLAND of LAURIESTON.	3/6
BRIAR and PALM.	3/6
ST. VEDA'S.	3/6
A LOST IDEAL.	3/6
WHO SHALL SERVE?	3/6

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
21, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.;
and Edinburgh.

A. D. INNES & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BY GENERAL SIR CHARLES GOUGH, V.C. G.C.B., AND ARTHUR D. INNES, M.A.
The SIKHS and the SIKH WARS.
With 13 Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.
The Scotsman says:—"A work of high historical value and of most absorbing interest....This book may be heartily recommended as beyond question the best history of the Sikh War that has been written, and than which no better could be desired."

BY LIEUT.-GENERAL M'LEOD INNES, V.C.
The SEPOY REVOLT: a Critical
Narrative, covering the whole Field of the Indian Mutiny, its Causes and Course till the Final Suppression. With numerous Maps and Plans. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.
The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The gallant author has marshalled and drilled his facts with masterly precision, and presents a wonderfully lucid survey of the Mutiny....From first to last 'The Sepoy Revolt' is a valuable and conscientious history."

BY J. S. RISLEY, M.A. B.C.L.
The LAW of WAR: a Study of the Legal Obligations and Conditions applying to Belligerents or Neutrals in Times of War. Demy 8vo. cloth, 12s.
The Scotsman says:—"The book...is admirably done. It avoids technicalities and...is admirably suited to serve as a guide and first introduction to a most instructive subject."

BY G. BOISSIER (de l'Académie Française)
CICERO and his FRIENDS. Translated by A. D. JONES. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.
The Scotsman says:—"The most fascinating study of Cicero and his times."

BY C. R. B. BARRETT.
Dedicated by permission to General H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G.
BATTLES and BATTLEFIELDS in ENGLAND. With an Introduction by H. D. TRAILL, and profusely illustrated by the Author. Super-royal 8vo. buckram, gilt top, 18s.
The Sketch says:—"A remarkably good book of its kind."

The COMPLETE CYCLIST: being
Vol. II. of the Isthmian Library. By A. C. PEMBERTON, Mrs. HARCOURT WILLIAMSON, C. P. SISLEY, and GILBERT FLOYD. Edited by B. FLETCHER ROBINSON. With numerous Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by J. F. Sullivan. Post 8vo. cloth, 5s.

NEW NOVELS.
BY J. C. SNAITH, Author of 'Mistress Dorothy Marvin.'
FIERCEHEART the SOLDIER.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
The Observer says:—"Mr. Snaith has given us a romance that for terse, pregnant phrasing, exceptional character drawing, and vivid depiction of dramatic situations, is the best thing of its kind we remember to have seen for a long time."

BY MAX PEMBERTON.
CHRISTINE of the HILLS. Crown
8vo. cloth, 6s.
The Daily Mail says:—"Assuredly he has never written anything more fresh, more simple, more alluring, or more artistically perfect."

BY EDEN PHILLPOTTS.
LYING PROPHETS. Third Edition.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"An excellent novel. ..A piece of serious and admirable work....not unworthy of a place with George Eliot's 'Adam Bede' and 'Mill on the Floss.'"

BY ISABEL CLARKE.
The EPISODE of ALETHEA. Crown
8vo. cloth, 6s.
The Scotsman says:—"The author deals with admirable taste and tact with the situation....The story is one of high merit from beginning to end."

BY ESTHER MILLER.
The SPORT of the GODS. Crown 8vo.
cloth, 6s.
The Athenæum says:—"It is very well told....The novel is exciting and preserves its interest to the end....An excellent story."

RECENT POPULAR NOVELS.
BY F. E. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.'
LIMITATIONS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
BY STANLEY WEYMAN.
MY LADY ROTHA. Crown 8vo.
cloth, 6s.
BY J. C. SNAITH.
MISTRESS DOROTHY MARVIN.
A Romance of the Glorious Revolution. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. Fourth Edition.
BY FRANK BARRETT.
A SET of ROGUES. Crown 8vo.
cloth, 6s.
BY X. L., Author of 'Aut Diabolus aut Nihil.'
The LIMB. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

ANTHONY HOPE'S SOCIETY NOVELS.
COMEDIES of COURTSHIP. Crown
8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
HALF a HERO. Crown 8vo. cloth,
3s. 6d.
MR. WITT'S WIDOW: a Frivolous
Tale. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

London: A. D. INNES & CO.
31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

J. M. DENT & CO.

BY MRS. ERNEST HART.

PICTURESQUE BURMA, PAST AND PRESENT.

By Mrs. ERNEST HART.

Illustrated with about 10 Photogravures, and about 70 to 80 Reproductions from Original Photographs and Drawings, Maps, &c.

Royal 8vo. 21*s.* net.

The TIMES says:—"This handsome volume deals exhaustively with the past history and the social life of the Burmese, touching also upon their resources and probable future, and giving as well a vivid series of travel sketches, supplemented by a large number of beautiful photographs, reproduced with great care and excellent effect."

The PALL MALL says:—"The most useful and interesting description of Burma that has yet appeared.....Besides its interesting matter, Mrs. Hart's book contains three excellent things in a book of travel—good maps, fine illustrations, and a careful index."

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"As a thorough-going account of one of the newest and most important additions to the British Empire, Mrs. Ernest Hart's 'Picturesque Burma' may be warmly commended."

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'CAPTAIN JACOBUS.'

The MASTER BEGGARS: a Story of the Wars of the Beggars.

By L. COPE CORNFORD. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"Compared with the general run of historical novels, 'The Master Beggars' shines as a triumph."

The SPEAKER says:—"A historical romance of distinct merit.....As a stirring tale of adventure, in which there is enough of fighting and of the wild incidents of a turbulent time, 'The Master Beggars' can hardly fail to achieve popularity."

The SCOTSMAN says:—"A delightful historical romance.....The story is of sustained interest throughout, and deserves a good reception by lovers of the highest order of fiction."

TALES of the ISLES of GREECE. Sketches of Modern Greek Life.

By ARGYRIS EPHTALIOTIS. Translated from Modern Greek by W. H. D. ROUSE. Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"The simple truth and vigour of his touch are manifest in the translation, and one is not surprised to hear that these tales and sketches of the peasantry of the Greek islands have attracted notice and admiration in their native country."

T. P. O'CONNOR in the WEEKLY SUN says:—"'The book of the week.' May it stir many hearts to the prayer that before many years no Christian man or woman on the face of the earth will live under a ruler where such atrocities are possible."

JOAN SEATON. By Mary Beaumont, Author of 'A Ringby Lass.'

Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"It is a noble and moving story. When once the spell of the book is on the reader it becomes impossible to lay it down."

The CHRISTIAN WORLD says:—"Is one of the books which, in these days of disintegration and decay, give one hope for England, and hope for English letters."

The MANCHESTER COURIER says:—"This is one of the most beautiful idylls we have ever read."

QUO VADIS. A Narrative of Rome in the Time of Nero. By HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ.

Translated from the Polish by JEREMIAH CURTIN. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"This is emphatically a great book. We do not merely read, we live through the scenes which are conjured up before us."

MR. EDMUND GOSSE concludes his article on Henryk Sienkiewicz in the April number of the CONTEMPORARY REVIEW by saying:—"If Sienkiewicz does not ruin the impression he has made in these books by an effort to excel in all other branches of fiction, if he is true to his curious virile gift for rendering the movements and phenomena of savage warfare, he ought to secure a place only just below Scott and Dumas among the active and creative writers of masculine romance."

THE TEMPLE CLASSICS.

Under the General Editorship of ISRAEL GOLLANCZ.

A Series of Volumes containing the Masterpieces of English Literature in Prose and Poetry, and other Books acknowledged as Universal Classics. Pott 8vo. with an Etched or Photogravure Frontispiece, limp cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.* net; limp lambskin leather, 2*s.* net.

Latest Volumes.

FLORIO'S MONTAIGNE. Edited by A. R. Waller. In 6 vols. [Vols. I. and II. ready.

MALORY'S MORTE D'ARTHUR. In 4 vols. [Vols. I., II., III. ready.

CARLYLE'S FRENCH REVOLUTION. Edited by G. Lowes DICKINSON. In 3 vols. [Vols. I. and II. ready.

The DAILY TELEGRAPH says:—"Unsurpassed as a cheap, artistic, and what is more, scholarly edition."

The NEW SATURDAY says:—"They contain really trustworthy and complete texts."

The ATHENÆUM says:—"This delightful little edition."

The GRAPHIC says:—"It would be difficult to speak too highly of this edition."

THE TEMPLE DRAMATISTS.

A Series of the best Tragedies and Comedies of the English Dramatists. Edited by well-known and competent Scholars, and produced in a similar size and style to that of the 'Temple Shakespeare.' One Play is published per month. Limp olive cloth, 1*s.* net; olive paste-grain roan, 1*s.* 6*d.* net per vol.

Latest Volumes.

SHAKESPEARE'S and FLETCHER'S The TWO NOBLE KINSMEN. Edited by Professor C. H. HERFORD.

MARLOWE'S DR. FAUSTUS. Edited by Israel Gollancz.

The ST. JAMES'S BUDGET says:—"The new edition should be welcome to all interested in the older dramatists."

The SPECTATOR says:—"We know of no pleasanter and prettier reprints."

The NEW SATURDAY says:—"The edition has been carried out with a due regard to conciseness; the introduction does not contain a superfluous word."

A SPECIAL PROSPECTUS of both the DRAMATISTS and CLASSICS and the NEW GENERAL CATALOGUE will be sent to any address on receipt of a postcard.

ALDINE HOUSE, E.C., AND 67, ST. JAMES'S-STREET, S.W.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Just published, price 1s.

PHILIPS' SPECIAL MAP OF GREECE.

Illustrating the Greco-Turkish War and the Cretan Question, with Inset Maps of the Seat of War (on an enlarged scale), the Balkan Peninsula, and the Mediterranean Sea.

THE TERRITORIAL TYRANNY OF THE TURK. 1453–1896.

A Coloured Map with Tabular Statement showing at a glance the date of conquest, and period of subjection, of the various Turkish dependencies past and present.

By ARTHUR PAUL, M.A. (Lond.), Lecturer in English, King's College, London.

Price, folded in cover, 1s.

MR. GLADSTONE writing to the Author says:—"Allow me to thank you for your interesting map, and to express the hope that it may aid in quickening the attention of the public to the Eastern Question, the curse and shame of Christendom."

THE FOUNDATIONS OF SUCCESS.

A Plea for Rational Education.

By STANLEY DE BRATH, M.Inst.C.E.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The aim of this book is to make a practical suggestion towards supplying the admitted demand for Systematic Secondary Education by showing the natural principles on which it should be based. These principles, underlying all sound thought, are the 'Foundations of Success' for individuals and nations.

"For comprehensive treatment of his subject, for thorough acquaintance with what has been previously written, and for lucid statement of common-sense principles, this little work deserves the highest commendation."

Prof. RAMSAY, F.R.S., in the Academy.

ENGLISH MAPS FOR ENGLISH READERS.

"It is, we are afraid, true that many of the current phrases of patriotic support to home products are honoured, even by those who utter them, in the breach rather than the observance. Those who patronize foreign in preference to English articles not seldom enter the excuse that the former are the cheaper, and if inferior yet serve their turn. We are the more pleased to be able to call attention to a publication which at once meets the needs of the time, is of English origin and manufacture, and is produced at a price which, when the value of work and the excellence of its execution is considered, is strikingly small. Lord Rosebery once, to the indignation of Mr. Labouchere, prided himself that the little England party was dead. As regards the crank of individuals the legitimate congratulations perhaps came too soon. Taken in its broad sense the verdict is a true one, and irrespective of political parties British hearts beat proudly at the thought of the mighty empire over which the flag of England waves. Each morning brings news from every quarter of the globe of the doings of England's sons. The colonies, with their vigorous life, are pressing on from strength to strength. Level laws and even justice are daily gaining wider rule in lands where barbarism and savage tyranny have reigned supreme. The advance of civilization into the dark places of the earth has progressed with leaps and bounds. Lord Salisbury's wise advice to statesmen wishful to appreciate properly international questions to study large maps is received as a leading rule. But not less is it incumbent on all citizens of a world-wide empire to study on the map the dominions linked with the destiny of the race. Even to follow the 'little wars,' which it is the pride of England that her naval and military forces can, when called upon, carry out so brilliantly, it is essential that an up-to-date atlas should be at hand. Never, perhaps, was the need more in evidence than the last few years. It is excellently met by the 'New Handy General Atlas,' just published by George Philip & Son, of 32, Fleet-street, at a cost, according to the binding, of 2*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.* or 2*l.* Not the least of the merits of this production is that it is entirely of English origin and manufacture. Edited by Mr. George Philip, jun., F.R.G.S., it has been specially designed with reference to the requirements of the British public, and after a careful examination of its contents it appears to us to admirably provide what is wanted. The British colonies and dependencies are shown in great detail. Railways, means of communication, and so forth, are set out, and the clearness of the plates and the exhaustive means of reference render all its mass of information instantly available."

Morning Advertiser.

 Illustrated Prospectus of PHILIP'S NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS gratis on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.

Liverpool:

PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45–51, South Castle-street.

PUBLICATIONS NOUVELLES
DE LA
LIBRAIRIE HACHETTE ET Cie.
London : 18, King William-street, Charing Cross.
Paris : 79, Boulevard Saint-Germain.

ÉTUDES sur le DRAME ANTIQUE, par M. HENRI WEIL, membre de l'Institut. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 3 fr. 50.

BEAUMARCHAIS, par M. ANDRÉ HALLAYS. 1 vol. in-16, avec un portrait de Beaumarchais en héliogravure, broché, 2 fr.
(Collection des Grands Écrivains français.)

DERNIERS VOLUMES PARUS :

LACORDAIRE, par M. le comte d'HAUSSONVILLE, de l'Académie française.

ROYER-COLLARD, par M. E. SPULLER.

LA FONTAINE, par M. GEORGES LAFENESTRE, de l'Institut.

MALHERBE, par le duc DE BROGLIE, de l'Académie française.

POUR PARAITRE PROCHAINEMENT :

MARIVAUX, par M. GASTON DESCHAMPS.

ATLAS UNIVERSEL de GÉOGRAPHIE, par MM. VIVIEN DE SAINT-MARTIN et FR. SCHRADER, construit d'après les sources originales et les documents les plus récents, cartes, voyages, mémoires, travaux géodésiques, &c., avec un texte analytique comprenant 85 cartes in-folio gravées sur cuivre, sous la direction de MM. COLLIN et DELAUNE.

Mise en vente des cartes : No. 15, FRANCE SUD-EST (France en 6 feuilles, par F. PRUDENT. Feuille VI), à l'échelle de 1,000,000e. No. 55, ARCHIPEL ASIATIQUE, à l'échelle de 1/10,000,000.

Chaque carte double in-folio, gravée sur cuivre, avec texte, 2 fr.

CONDITIONS ET MODE DE PUBLICATION :

L'ATLAS UNIVERSEL de GÉOGRAPHIE est publié par cartes isolées.

Chaque carte, protégée par une couverture et accompagnée d'une notice sur les documents qui ont servi à sa construction, se vend séparément 2 fr.

L'ouvrage complet comprendra 85 cartes gravées sur cuivre et imprimées en taille-douce.

36 cartes ont déjà paru.

DICTIONNAIRE GÉOGRAPHIQUE et ADMINISTRATIF de la FRANCE et de ses COLONIES, par M. PAUL JOANNE. Liv. 117 (Paray-Paris). Chaque livraison, 1 fr.

NOUVEAU DICTIONNAIRE de GÉOGRAPHIE UNIVERSELLE (Supplément au), contenant, 1, la géographie physique ; 2, la géographie politique ; 3, la géographie économique ; 4, l'ethnologie ; 5, la géographie historique ; 6, la bibliographie, par MM. VIVIEN DE SAINT-MARTIN, ancien président honoraire de la Société de géographie de Paris, et ROUSSELET (Louis).

Mise en vente du septième fascicule du SUPPLÉMENT (Caroline-Colchester). Chaque fascicule in-4, broché, 2 fr. 50.

Post 8vo. strongly bound, price 7s.

CAREY'S GRADUS AD PARNASSUM. With the English Meanings Revised, Corrected, and Augmented by a Member of the University of Cambridge. London : published by the Stationers' Company, Stationers' Hall, Ludgate-hill.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS of the ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON.

PROCEEDINGS of the ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON. Part IV. containing Papers read at the Scientific Meetings held in November and December, 1896, with 16 Plates. Price to Fellows, 9s. ; to the Public, 12s.

TRANSACTIONS. Vol. XIV. Part III. containing the following Papers :—'The Suprarenal Bodies in Fishes and their Relation to the so-called Head Kidney,' by SWALE VINCENT, M.B. Lond. With 6 Plates. 'A Supplementary Report on the Crustaceans of the Group Myodocopa obtained during the "Challenger" Expedition, with Notes on other New or Imperfectly known Species,' by G. STEWARDSON BRADY, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S. With 3 Plates. Price to Fellows, 15s. 9d. ; to the Public, 21s.

To be obtained at the Society's Office, 3, Hanover-square, W., or through Booksellers.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10s. 6d. English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

Just published, price 2s. 6d. post free,

GOUT and its CURE. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D. "The author has had a wide experience in gout, and presents us with a very readable little book."—County Gentleman.
London : James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS.

A NEW WORK ON THE SULTAN AND THE TURKS

The SULTAN and his SUBJECTS. By RICHARD DAVEY. With Frontispieces, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. demy 8vo. 24s. Just ready.

The Daily News says :—"Mr. Davey's learned most interesting and finely impartial book gives us minute pictures of palace life."
The Daily Chronicle says :—"Mr. Davey's book is not a mere treatise on the present Eastern crisis. It deals with the past and the far-off past as well as the present.... It deserves not only to be read, but also to find a permanent place on the bookshelf."

NEW WORK BY W. S. LILLY

ESSAYS and SPEECHES. By W. S. Lilly, Author of 'Ancient Religion and Modern Thought,' 'A Century of Revolution,' &c. Demy 8vo. 12s. Ready.

The Scotsman says :—"The different subjects of his essays all take on a fresh and very interesting colour from the light so able a thinker casts upon them, and the book, as a whole, is of a profound interest to the intellectual readers of all shades of opinion or belief."

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD'

WHITE MAGIC : a Novel. By M. McD. BODKIN, Q.C., Author of 'Lord Edward Fitzgerald : an Historical Romance.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

The Daily Telegraph says :—"Mr. Bodkin has written a novel of indubitable vigour, rarely dull, full of hairbreadth escapes by flood and field, crammed with enthralling incidents from cover to cover."

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.
Edited by W. L. COURTNEY.
MAY.

A STUDY in TURKISH REFORM. By a Turkish Patriot.
UNPUBLISHED LETTERS from J. S. MILL to PROF. NICHOL. By Prof. W. Knight.
The TWENTIETH ITALIAN PARLIAMENT. By Ouida.
PROF. WILLIAM WALLACE. By J. H. Muirhead.
"EPIC and ROMANCE." By John Oliver Hobbes.
The ISLAND of SAKHALIN. By Harry de Windt.
DEGREES for WOMEN. By J. R. Tanner.
The WRONG WAY with the NAVY. By William Laird Clowes.
The IDEA of COMEDY and PINERO'S NEW PLAY. By W. L. Courtney.
RUSSIA on the BOSPHORUS. By Capt. Gambier, R.N.
MADAME BARTET. By Yetta Blaze de Bury.
The CASE against GREECE. By Diplomaticus.
CRETE and the CRETANS. By E. J. Dillon.

CHAPMAN'S MAGAZINE.
Edited by OSWALD CRAWFURD.
Contents for MAY.

VIOLET HUNT.—Unkist, Unkind! Serial.
ALAN OSCAR. The Guiding Voice.
DOUGLAS SLADEN.—A Deceased Wife's Sister.
FRANCES E. HUNTLEY.—Unto the Shore of Nothing.
HAROLD CHILD.—The Death Chair.
LADY ARABELLA ROMILLY.—Lady Cyprian.
EDWARD FITZGERALD.—The Mystery of the Sahib's Goods.
HUME NISBET.—Back in Ten Minutes.
WICKHAM FLOWER.—"Vexilla Regis."

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

"The LOG of the MAYFLOWER."
A Reproduction in Facsimile of the Original Manuscript of WILLIAM BRADFORD, entitled 'OF PLIMOTH PLANTATION,' now by a decree of the Judge of the Consistory Court of London to be transmitted to the President of the United States of America. Super-royal 4to. 4l. 4s. net. The Edition is limited.
 This is the facsimile referred to at the hearing of the petition to the Court.

The STORY of the PILGRIM FATHERS as told by Themselves, their Friends, and their Enemies, 1606-23. Edited from the Original Texts by EDWARD ARBER, F.S.A., Fellow of King's College, London, Hon. Member of the Virginia and Wisconsin Historical Societies. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 644 pp. cloth extra, 6s.

"Students of the Puritan movement, and of the origins of American history, cannot be too grateful for a volume in which such a priceless mass of original material has been presented with rare skill of editing, in a scrupulously exact yet thoroughly accessible and even popular form."—Glasgow Herald.

A PASSING WORLD. By Madame BESSIE RAYNER BELLOC, Author of 'In a Walled Garden,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s. Now ready.

Contents :—A Passing World—Two Fredericks—Dr. Samuel Parr—Franklin's America—Elkanah Watson—Wansey—Augusta Theodosia Drane—Dr. Trélat—The Moment of Miracle—An English Saint, &c.

The CONFESSIONS of a COLLECTOR. By WILLIAM CAREW HAZLITT. 1 vol. crown 8vo. buckram, 6s. Now ready.
 In this book Mr. Hazlitt describes his experiences as a collector of books, china, and coins, and gives many curious anecdotes of famous dealers and collectors of our day.

NEW NOVELS.

FROM GRUB TO BUTTERFLY. By JOSEPH FORSTER. 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

The FINGER and the RING. By CHARLES JAMES, Author of 'Holy Wedlock,' 'Always Wrong,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

MARGARET MOORE, SPINSTER : her Love Story. By A. W. BUCKLAND, Author of 'Molly's Story,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6s.

"There is an excellent balance between form and matter in Miss Buckland's homely romance of a hundred years ago, the simple, unstudied style being exactly attuned to the character of the narrator."—Spectator.

WARD & DOWNEY, LIMITED,
12, York-buildings, Adelphi, W.C.

THE WARWICK LIBRARY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Under the General Editorship of Prof. C. H. HERFORD, Litt.D.

Crown 8vo. Volumes, in figured cloth, cut edges, or plain cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d. each.

NEW VOLUME JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH LYRIC POETRY, 1500-1700. With an Introduction by FREDERICK IVES CARPENTER, M.A., Lecturer in English Literature in Chicago University.

PREVIOUSLY PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH PASTORALS. With an Introduction by E. K. Chambers, B.A.

ENGLISH LITERARY CRITICISM. With an Introduction by C. E. VAUGHAN, M.A.

ENGLISH ESSAYS. With an Introduction by J. H. Lobban, M.A.

London : BLACKIE & SON, LIMITED, 50, Old Bailey.

THE SECOND VOLUME IS NOW READY OF

THE POLITICAL LIFE OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

Illustrated from 'PUNCH,' with 57 Cartoons on plate paper, and 145 Sketches in the Text.
Printed "de Luxe" with wide and handsome margins on laid antique paper.
Demy 4to. bound in buckram, bevelled boards, gilt top, price 20s. net.

London : BRADBURY, AGNEW & CO., LIMITED, Bouverie-street, E.C.

This day, 400 pp. crown 8vo. price 7s. 6d. cloth.

A HANDBOOK OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Originally Compiled by AUSTIN DOBSON.
NEW EDITION, REVISED, WITH NEW CHAPTERS, AND EXTENDED TO THE PRESENT TIME.
By W. HALL GRIFFIN, B.A.,
Professor of English Language and Literature at Queen's College, London.

"For truth of criticism it is about the best book of the kind."—Westminster Review.
"An excellent handbook of English literature."—Athenæum.

London : CROSBY LOCKWOOD & SON, 7, Stationers' Hall-court, E.C.

VERNON LEE'S NEW BOOK.

Mr. GRANT RICHARDS begs to announce that he has this day published LIMBO, and other Essays, by VERNON LEE, Author of 'Euphorion,' 'Renaissance Studies,' 'Althea,' &c. With Frontispiece. Fcap. 8vo. buckram, 5s. net.

LADY TROUBRIDGE'S NOVEL.

He has also ready PAUL'S STEPMOTHER: a Novel, by Lady TROUBRIDGE. With Frontispiece by Mrs. Adrian Hope. Crown 8vo. art linen, 3s. 6d.

MR. ROTHENSTEIN'S LITHOGRAPHED DRAWINGS.

He will also publish immediately the First Part of Mr. WILL ROTHENSTEIN'S ENGLISH PORTRAITS: a Series of Lithographed Drawings, containing Drawings of Sir Frederick Pollock and Mr. Thomas Hardy. The price of this and succeeding Parts, issued Monthly, will be 2s. 6d. net, while Subscribers in advance to the whole Series of Twelve Parts will be presented, in addition, with a cloth binding case designed by the artist. In succeeding issues will appear Portraits of Mr. Grant Allen, Mr. William Archer, Mr. Robert Bridges, Mr. Sidney Colvin, Mr. Walter Crane, the Right Rev. Dr. Creighton, Bishop of London, Mr. George Gissing, the Marchioness of Granby, Sir F. Seymour Haden, P.R.E., Mr. W. E. Henley, Mr. W. Holman Hunt, Lady Jeune, Professor A. Legros, Mr. A. W. Pinero, Mr. John Sargent, R.A., Mr. G. Bernard Shaw, Professor Villiers Stanford, Miss Ellen Terry, Miss Alma Strettell, Mr. William Watson, and Mr. Whistler, all of whom have already sat, or have promised to sit. The Portraits will be accompanied by Short Texts by various hands.

GRANT RICHARDS, 9, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

SEELEY & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

THE PORTFOLIO.

Published Quarterly, 3s. 6d. net.

APRIL NUMBER.

CROME and COTMAN. By Laurence Binyon.

"Clever and sympathetic essay.....Admirably illustrated."—Manchester Guardian.
"The number is admirably got up and printed."—Eastern Press.

JANUARY NUMBER.

The PAINTINGS and DRAWINGS of ALBERT DURER. By LIONEL CUST, Director of the National Portrait Gallery.

"A very complete account of the great artist's paintings and drawings."—Times.
"Illustrated with numerous admirable reproductions."—Daily Chronicle.

The MOUNT: Narrative of a Visit to the Site of a Gaulish City on Mont Beuvray. With a Description of the Neighbouring City of Autun. By the late P. G. HAMERTON. 3s. 6d.

"The late Mr. P. G. Hamerton had a very rare gift of delicate word-painting, and his artistic instinct was never more conspicuous than in this his last volume of essays."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"Nothing more delightfully genial and informing ever fell from the pen of that accomplished artist and man of letters."—Manchester Guardian.

SOCIAL TRANSFORMATIONS of the VICTORIAN AGE. By T. H. S. ESCOTT, Author of 'England: its People, Polity, and Pursuits.' 6s.

[Ready next week.

CASTLE MEADOW: a Story of Norwich a Hundred Years Ago. By Mrs. MARSHALL. 3s. 6d. [Now ready.

LIFE at the ZOO. By C. J. Cornish. With Illustrations by GAMBIER BOLTON. Fifth and Cheaper Edition. 6s.

"A more companionable book we cannot imagine."—Spectator.
"Curiously felicitous in description, with frequent touches of quiet humour."—Times.

London: SEELEY & CO., LIMITED, 38, Great Russell-street.

DAVID NUTT,

270-271, STRAND.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS.

The CHILD of the BONDWOMAN, and other Verses. By JEAN CARLYLE GRAHAM, Author of 'Woman's Work,' 'Songs, Measures, Metrical Lines,' &c. 16mo. vi-65 pages, printed by Messrs. T. & A. Constable on laid paper, buckram, uncut edges, 1s. net.

AMERICAN MEN of LETTERS. By HENRIETTA CHRISTIAN WRIGHT. 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, uncut, each 3s. 6d.

Vol. I. 1660-1860:—The Early Literature—Audubon—Irving—Cooper—Bryant—Prescott—Whittier—Hawthorne—Bancroft—Poe—Emerson—Longfellow—Motley—Harriet Beecher Stowe—Lowell—Parkman—Holmes.
Vol. II. 1860-1896:—Curtis—Stoddard—Eggleston—C. D. Warner—Stedman—Bret Harte—Bayard Taylor—Howells—F. H. Burnett—Louisa Alcott—Aldrich—Cable—Fiske—Mark Twain—The Southern Story-Writers—New England Women Writers.

MASSILIA-CARTHAGO SACRIFICE TABLETS of the WORSHIP of BAAL. Reproduced in Facsimile, Edited, Translated, and compared with the Levitical Code by the Rev. J. M. MACDONALD, Houghton Syriac Prizeman, Oxford. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

The LOGICAL COPULA and the QUANTIFICATION of the PREDICATE. By E. ADAMSON. Demy 8vo. 1s. net.

FOR STUDENTS OF MODERN GREEK.

A SHORT and EASY MODERN GREEK GRAMMAR. With Grammatical and Conversational Exercises, Idiomatic Proverbial Phrases, and Full Vocabulary. After the German of C. WIED by MARY GARDNER. With a Preface by ERNEST GARDNER, M.A., Director of the British School of Archæology at Athens. Crown 8vo. cloth, 4s. 6d. net.

ARCHITECTURE at the ACADEMY and the SALONS; Illustrations of Château de Buillon; a Grain Silo at Greenwich; Window at St. Peter's, Saffron-hill; New Wall-Paper by Mr. Walter Crane; Fire-Clay Manufactures; New Gallery Exhibition, &c., see the BUILDER of MAY 1. Post free, 4½d.
Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.
EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.
THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NEW VOLUMES.

COMPLETION OF 'SOCIAL ENGLAND.'

SOCIAL ENGLAND. Edited by H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L. Vol. VI. From the Battle of Waterloo to the General Election of 1885. Price 18*s.* [Ready.

Also supplied in sets, half-morocco, full gilt, price 5*l.* 15*s.* 6*d.*

The MAGAZINE of ART. First Half-Yearly Volume for 1897. Vol. XX. With Exquisite Photogravures and other Plates, about 400 Illustrations from Original Drawings by the First Artists of the Day and from Famous Paintings, and a Series of Full-Page Plates. Cloth, price 10*s.* 6*d.*

PICTORIAL ENGLAND and WALES. With upwards of 320 beautiful Illustrations prepared from Copyright Photographs. Cloth, price 9*s.* [Ready shortly.

THE NEW IMPORTANT ILLUSTRATED WORK ON THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND.

Volume I. now ready, price 6*s.*

The CHURCH of ENGLAND. A History for the People. By the Very Rev. H. D. M. SPENCE, D.D., Dean of Gloucester. Beautifully illustrated throughout. (To be completed in Four Volumes.)

COMPLETION OF THE POPULAR EDITION OF

CASSELL'S NATURAL HISTORY. Edited by P. MARTIN DUNCAN, F.R.S. With about 2,000 Illustrations. Cheap Edition. Three Double Volumes, containing 2500 pages, cloth, price 6*s.* each.

CHEAP EDITION OF

The STORY of the HEAVENS. By Sir ROBERT STAWELL BALL, LL.D. F.R.S. F.R.A.S., Lowndean Professor of Astronomy in the University of Cambridge. Illustrated by Chromo Plates and Wood Engravings. Cloth, price 10*s.* 6*d.*

NEW NOVELS.

A NEW STORY BY A NEW WRITER.

ILL-GOTTEN GOLD:

The Story of a Great Wrong and a Great Revenge,

By W. G. TARBET,

Is just published, price 6*s.*

MR. HORNUNG'S NEW NOVEL.

MY LORD DUKE,

By E. W. HORNUNG,
Author of 'Tiny Luttrell,' &c.,

Will be ready about the middle of May, price 6*s.*

NOTICE.

"ROGUES OF THE FIERY CROSS,"

By S. WALKEY,
Author of 'In Quest of Sheba's Treasure,' &c.,

Will be shortly issued, price 5*s.*

MR. STOCKTON'S NEW WORK.

A STORY-TELLER'S PACK,

By FRANK STOCKTON,
Author of 'The Adventures of Captain Horn,' 'Rudder Grange,' &c.,

Will be ready during May, price 6*s.*

NOVELS.

THIRTY-FIFTH THOUSAND, price 6*s.*

SENTIMENTAL TOMMY. By J. M. BARRIE.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Little Minister (Illustrated). 6s.

THIRD EDITION, price 6*s.*

A PURITAN'S WIFE. By Max PEMBERTON.

OTHER WORKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

The Impregnable City. 6s.
The Sea Wolves. 6s.
The Iron Pirate. 5s.
The Little Huguenot. 1s. 4d.

SECOND EDITION, price 6*s.*

WHAT CHEER! By W. Clark RUSSELL.

SECOND EDITION, price 6*s.*

The ROGUE'S MARCH. By E. W. HORNUNG.

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

Tiny Luttrell. 6s.

WORKS BY STANLEY WEYMAN.

The MAN in BLACK. Price 3s. 6d.

The STORY of FRANCIS CLUDDE. Price 6*s.*

From the MEMOIRS of a MINISTER of FRANCE. Price 6*s.*

CHEAP EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.

The REPUTATION of GEORGE SAXON, and other Stories. By MORLEY ROBERTS. Price 3*s.* 6*d.*

The ADMIRABLE LADY BIDDY FANE. By FRANK BARRETT. With 12 Full-Page Illustrations. Price 3*s.* 6*d.*

POMONA'S TRAVELS. By Frank R. STOCKTON. Illustrated. Price 3*s.* 6*d.*

LIST, YE LANDSMEN! A Romance of Incident. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. Price 3*s.* 6*d.*

Dedicated by permission to Her Majesty Queen Victoria.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK OF UNIQUE CHARACTER AND INTEREST,

In MONTHLY PARTS, price 6d.,

ENTITLED

THE QUEEN'S EMPIRE.

A Pictorial Record, in which the Modes of Government, National Institutions, Forms of Worship, Methods of Travel, Sports, Recreations, Occupations, and Home Life of the Inhabitants of the British Empire will be faithfully and vividly portrayed by means of ARTISTIC REPRODUCTIONS of PHOTOGRAPHIC VIEWS, a large number of which have been made specially for this work.

PART I. NOW READY.

 So great has been the demand for copies of The QUEEN'S EMPIRE that the immense edition prepared of PART I. has already been exhausted, but the Part having been reprinted, copies can now be obtained at all Booksellers' and the Railway Bookstalls.

Messrs. CASSELL & COMPANY will publish,

In Five Parts, 1s. each,

Or in One Volume, handsomely bound in cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

ROYAL ACADEMY PICTURES, 1897.

PART I. READY MAY 3,

And the remaining parts as soon thereafter as practicable.

'ROYAL ACADEMY PICTURES' forms the most perfect representation of the Academy ever placed within reach of the public.

Not only is the best work of the year in painting and sculpture represented in the pages of this unique Fine-Art Work, but the scale upon which the pictures are produced, and the manner in which they are rendered, give an idea of the originals such as can be gained from no other source.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London, Paris, and Melbourne.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 1, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3628. SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6.
SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

ARTISTS' GENERAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION,
For the Relief of Distressed Artists, their Widows and Orphans.
President—Sir EDWARD J. POYNTER, P.R.A.
The ANNIVERSARY DINNER will take place at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE, on SATURDAY, May 8, at half-past 6 o'clock, the Right Reverend the LORD BISHOP OF LONDON in the Chair. Dinner Tickets, including Wines, One Guinea.
Donations will be received and thankfully acknowledged by ALFRED WATERHOUSE, R.A., Treasurer.
WALTER W. OULESS, R.A., Honorary Secretary.
DOUGLAS GORDON, Secretary.
19, St. James's-street, S.W.

ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.
The ANNIVERSARY MEETING will be held (by permission of the Senate) in the HALL of the UNIVERSITY of LONDON, Burlington-gardens, W., on MONDAY, May 17, at 2 30 P.M.
Sir CLEMENTS R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. F.R.S., President, in the Chair.
During the Meeting the Council and Officers will be elected for the ensuing year, the Annual Report of the Council will be read, the President will give his Address, and the Gold Medals and other Awards of the Society will be presented.
The ANNUAL DINNER of the Society will be held on the evening of the Anniversary Meeting at the HOTEL METROPOLE, Whitehall Rooms, Whitehall-place, at 7 30 P.M. Dinner charge, 1*l.* 1*s.* Friends of Fellows are admissible to the Dinner.

SUMMER SCHOOL of the LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.
The FIFTH SESSION will COMMENCE on MONDAY EVENING, May 31, with a Reception at 7.30 P.M., in the Rooms of the Association, at 20, Hanover-square, W., and will be continued during the week. Prizes will be offered for competition. Intending Students should send in their names without delay to the undersigned, from whom further information may be obtained. All communications should be accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope.
HENRY D. ROBERTS, Hon. Sec.
St. Saviour's Public Library, 44½, Southwark Bridge-road, S.E.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE, 1897.
President—
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.
Hon. Treasurer—
HENRY R. TEDDER, Esq.
Hon. Secretary—
J. Y. W. MACALISTER, Esq.,
20, Hanover-square, W.
The Conference will be held (by the kind permission of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Corporation) in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, GUILDHALL, LONDON, on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Lord Mayor has invited the members of the Conference to a Conversazione in the Mansion House on the evening of July 13.
An Exhibition of Library Appliances will be an important feature of the Conference. Intending exhibitors should communicate with the Hon. Secretary of the Exhibition Committee, THOMAS MASON, Esq., 115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to attend all meetings and social gatherings. Applications for membership should be sent at once to the HON. SECRETARY.

PALL MALL CLUB. (Established 1893.)
Candidates' names are now being received (prior to entering on New Premises) for the election of 500 NEW TOWN MEMBERS and 1,000 NEW COUNTRY MEMBERS.
NOTE.—Windows and Balconies have been secured on the LINE of ROUTE of the QUEEN'S PROCESSION, JUNE 22, to enable MEMBERS and their FRIENDS to have SEATS at MODERATE PRICES.
For further particulars apply to the HON. SECRETARY,
PALL MALL CLUB OFFICES, 60, HAYMARKET, S.W.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

YOUNG MAN (20), well educated, with Literary and Commercial experience, desires SECRETARIAL or similar situation. Shorthand, Type-Writing, Cataloguing, Indexing, and French. Good references.—Write LITTÉRAIRE, care of Anderson's Advertising Agency, 14, Cockspur-street, S.W.

TO PUBLISHERS.—LITERARY ADVISER to one of the oldest London Publishing Firms for the last 7½ years NOW AT LIBERTY.—Letters to S. G., care of C. B. Ward, Solicitor, 35, Bedford-row, W.C.

PUBLISHING TRADE.—Advertiser, having represented a leading London Publishing House in the Country for some years, is desirous of a SIMILAR ENGAGEMENT. Good connexion. Wide experience. First-class references.—Address R. P. DOBSON, 62, Queen's-road, Leeds.

WANTED, in PUBLISHER'S OFFICE, experienced ASSISTANT for COUNTRY DEPARTMENT.—Write stating age, salary, &c., to PUBLISHER, Messrs. Francis & Co., 13, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination.—DRAUGHTSMAN in the HYDROGRAPHICAL DEPARTMENT in the ADMIRALTY (17-25), JULY 7th. Experience in Hydrographical Chart Drawing essential. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

MERCHANT VENTURERS' TECHNICAL COLLEGE, BRISTOL.
JUNIOR FRENCH MASTER REQUIRED in SEPTEMBER. Salary 120*l.* a year, increasing to 150*l.*—Candidates must send in their applications not later than TUESDAY, May 25, and must state that they have read the particulars as to the post, which can be obtained from the REGISTRAR on application.

LIVERPOOL COLLEGE for GIRLS.
The Council are desirous of electing a HEAD MISTRESS. She must be a Member of the Church of England. Her remuneration will be 180*l.* per annum, with board, furnished rooms, and attendance, and a Capitation Fee to be arranged hereafter. Duties to commence after the Summer Holidays.—Testimonials, not more than six (twelve copies), including three recent ones, stating age, qualifications, and general experience, to be sent on or before May 31 to the REV. GEORGE H. DARSON, Secretary, Liverpool College, Shaw-street, to whom application may be made for further information.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL, CANADA.
CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.
The Governors of McGill University are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the newly founded PROFESSORSHIP of ZOOLOGY. Salary $2,500 per annum.—Candidates from Great Britain are requested to forward applications, with any testimonials and references they may desire to submit, on or before June 15, addressed PRINCIPAL, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria-street, Westminster.

MASON COLLEGE, BIRMINGHAM.
FACULTY OF SCIENCE.
RESEARCH SCHOLARSHIPS
(Founded by the late T. Aubrey, Esq., of Melbourne, Australia).
The object of these SCHOLARSHIPS is to encourage higher work and research in Scientific Professional Engineering, and in Chemical and Metallurgical Science.
Applications, supported by details of educational training, and references to former teachers and others, should be sent in to the Registrar on or before the 1st of JUNE, 1897. The Awards will be made in SEPTEMBER NEXT, and the Scholarships will be tenable during the Session 1897-98
(a) TWO BOWEN SCHOLARSHIPS in ENGINEERING, of the value of 100*l.* each
(b) ONE BOWEN SCHOLARSHIP in METALLURGY, of the value of 100*l.*
(c) THREE PRIESTLEY SCHOLARSHIPS in CHEMISTRY, of the value of 100*l.* each.
Further particulars may be obtained on application to the REGISTRAR.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

CAMBRIDGE TRAINING COLLEGE for WOMEN TEACHERS.—THREE SCHOLARSHIPS (25*l.*, 20*l.*, 15*l.*) are offered to Graduates for SEPTEMBER, 1897.
Full details can be obtained from the PRINCIPAL, to whom applications must be made before June 24.
A certain number of Bursaries of 6*l.* and 10*l.* are also given each year to Students of inadequate means.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON, for WOMEN,
York-place, Baker-street, W.
Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.
The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGAN on THURSDAY, April 29.
The HALF-TERM BEGINS on MONDAY, May 31.
ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.
ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48*l.*, and ONE CLIFT SCHOLARSHIP in ARTS, value Thirty Guineas, each tenable for Three Years, will be awarded on the result of the Examination to be held at the College on JUNE 24 and 25.
Names to be sent in to the Principal not later than June 15.
LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

CENTRAL SCHOOL of FOREIGN TONGUES. Psychological Method.—Gouin Series, perfected by MM. SWAN and BETIS. Mental Evocation and Symbolic Grammar. (See Review of Reviews 1892-1893.) French, German, Latin, Greek, Spanish, Italian, &c. New Classes forming. Teachers sent out. TRAINING CLASSES for TEACHERS DURING HOLIDAYS and IN TERM. Children at New School, Bedford Park, W.—Apply to SECRETARY, Howard House, Arundel-street, Strand.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, in Association with the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn-road.—For Prospectus, Scholarships, &c., apply to THE SECRETARY, at the School, 30, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

A GENTLEMAN of literary ability, Author, M.A. Oxon, residing amidst lovely surroundings and influences in the Channel Islands, will receive a YOUTH to prepare for the WRITING PROFESSION, to whom he offers valuable tuition in Composition, Arrangement, and Style, as well as putting him in the way of Publishing or entry to Journalistic work.—Address ORGUEIL, Payn's Library, Jersey.

AN ENGLISH ARTIST, Exhibitor at Royal Academy (and one who has studied under some of the best English and French Artists), at present residing in Paris, is making a TOUR into the COUNTRY for SKETCHING for a few months, Brittany or elsewhere, and would be glad to take charge of a Pupil who wishes to take Lessons in Sketching. Reference permitted to Canon Beaumont, Holy Trinity Church, Coventry.
Address G. L. ANDERSON, Esq., 63, Avenue du Maine, Paris.

PUBLISHING PARTNERSHIP.—An experienced man has an opportunity of PURCHASING on highly favourable terms a PUBLISHING BUSINESS of which he is at present the Manager, and wishes to meet with one or more gentlemen who could bring in capital to join him as Partners (either working or sleeping).—Address Box 826, care of Willing's, 125, Strand.

TO LECTURE SOCIETIES.
MR. R. WALLACE, M.P. (Edin.), is now making his Lecturing arrangements for the Season 1897-98. Subjects:—'Cant,' 'House of Commons,' 'Mrs. Grundy,' and 'Shams.' Details on application.—9, Edith-villas, London, W.

SCHOLARLY TYPE-WRITING.—Foreign and Classical MSS., and others requiring special care, undertaken by a Graduate. English at usual rates.—TYPOGRAPHIC AGENCY, Dan, Beeches-road, West Bromwich.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. 1*d.* per folio. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—10*d.* 1,000. Accurate, neat, and quick. Plays a speciality. Send for sample.—"De Luxe" Office, GASSETT, Allandale-road, Leicester.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1*s.* per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING UNDERTAKEN PRIVATELY. Copying Work of all kinds. French, Italian, and German Translations. Very moderate charges.—Miss FANCOURT, 51, Thornhill-road, Barnsbury, N.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. H. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,
WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6090. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

THE NORWICH SCHOOL OF PAINTING.

A Series of Autotype Reproductions of Works by John Sell Cotman, Old Crome, Stark, Ladbrooke, Bright, Middleton, Daniell, Leman, Lound, &c. Forty Autotype Plates, mounted on grey boards, in Portfolio. Price Ten Guineas, net.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.

This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.

An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor Mr A M BURGHES 1, Paternoster-row The interests of Authors carefully represented Personal Agreements between and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors MSS placed with Publishers Translations carefully conducted Thirty years' personal experience as Clerk of Publishing and Book Trade Engaging Consultations free Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr A M Burghes Authors' Agent 1 Paternoster-row

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY. The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS. or offering to place MSS. without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society By order G HERBERT THRING, Secretary 4 Portugal-street Lincoln's Inn W C

N B The AUTHOR the organ of the Society is published monthly price 6*d.*, by Bemrose & Sons Bream's buildings E C

9 HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul Trench Trübner & Co Limited begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books Address as above

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries and the Reading Public Illustrated Catalogue post free on application

Catalogues.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms. CATALOGUES on application DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever Ainsworth, Books illustrated by G and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W C.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works Illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.

CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3*d* post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.
CATALOGUES of NEW PURCHASES issued at frequent intervals.
Libraries Arranged, Catalogued, Valued, and Purchased.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E C.

AMERICAN

COLONIAL TRACTS.

MONTHLY.

Number One, MAY, 1897.

A DISCOURSE CONCERNING THE DESIGNED ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW COLONY TO THE SOUTH OF CAROLINA, IN THE MOST DELIGHTFUL COUNTRY OF THE UNIVERSE, BY SIR ROBERT MOUNTGOMERY, BARONET, LONDON, 1717.

Price 25 Cents. $3.00 a Year.

PUBLISHED BY
GEORGE P. HUMPHREY
25, EXCHANGE-STREET,
ROCHESTER,
NEW YORK,
U.S.A.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.

All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—

241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

LONDON LIBRARY, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S W.
Patron—H R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN Esq
Vice-Presidents—Rt Hon W E Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K C B.
Trustees—Right Hon Sir M Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages Subscription, 3*l* a year; Life Membership, according to age Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six Catalogue, Fifth Edition 2 vols royal 8vo price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

FOR SALE, BURTON'S ARABIAN NIGHTS, 16 vols first-rate condition, 28*l.* net.—A. F. L., 32, Sinclair-road, West Kensington

KENTISH MANUSCRIPTS.

TO BE SOLD, an extensive Collection of Deeds Leases, Inventories, Overseers' Accounts, Bills, Marriage Settlements, Grants of Land, Tradesmen's Bills, Autograph Letters, Topographical Memoranda and other interesting Documents, some on vellum, with Seals from Edward IV to George III., a most valuable and important Collection, entirely Kentish, the Property of an F S.A., deceased. Price 40*l.*—Apply L. Le Roy, 2, Grosvenor-gardens, Willesden-green, N.W.

FINE ARTS.—TO CONNOISSEURS ONLY.

Part of an ESTATE of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, under directions of co-Executors, TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY in whole or in part It is a small Collection by Ancient and Modern Masters of distinction Solicitor, HAROLD F. P. ROBERTS, Esq., 7, Gray's Inn-place, Gray's Inn, Holborn, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKS, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

THE ROYAL STEWARTS.
THEIR ORIGIN AND RISE.
SEE
THE ISLE of BUTE in the OLDEN TIME.
By JAMES KING HEWISON, M.A. F.S.A. (Scot.), Minister of Rothesay
With Illustrations, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. crown 4to. 30*s.* net.
William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

Sales by Auction.

The Holton Collection of Coins and Medals.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the HOLTON COLLECTION of COINS and MEDALS, comprising Greek and Roman Coins in Gold, Silver, and Bronze—British, Anglo-Saxon, and English and Scotch Coins, in Gold, Silver, and Bronze—English Patterns and Proofs, including a Fair Example of the Celebrated Petition Crown—Foreign Coins in Gold and Silver—English and Foreign Medals—Coin Cabinets.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Engravings formed at the end of the last century, the Property of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS formed at the end of the last century, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, comprising Fancy Subjects by F. Bartolozzi and others—Sporting Prints—and an extensive Collection of Mezzotints by Masters of the English School, including some fine Specimens from the Works of Sir J. Reynolds.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts, including a Portion of the Library of Sir CECIL DOMVILLE, Bart., and a Selection from the Library of J. S. BURRA, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 12, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including a Selection from the Library of Sir CECIL DOMVILLE, Bart., comprising County Histories and Archæological Works, the Property of a LADY of TITLE, including Whitaker's History of Richmondshire, 2 vols. Large Paper—Whitaker's Loidis and Elmete, and Thoresby's Ducatus Leodiensis, 2 vols.—Rare Books relating to America, &c.; a Selection from the Library of J. S. BURRA, Esq., comprising Manuscript Horæ, with finely painted Miniatures—Evangeliarum, MS. on Vellum—Columna, La Hypnerotomachia, 1545—Pontificale Romanum, MS. on Vellum, Sæc. XV., &c.; a Selection of Valuable Books from a Library in Essex, the Property of a COUNTY FAMILY, including Burns's Poems, First Edition, Kilmarnock, 1786—Byron's Hours of Idleness, First Edition, Large Paper—Bishop Hall's Virgidemiarum, 1602-1599—Heywood's Fourth Hundred of Epygrams, 1560—Coryat's Crudities, First Edition, 1611—Tennyson, Poems by Two Brothers, uncut—Gascoigne's Works, 1587—Milton's Paradise Lost, First Edition, 1669—More's Utopia, First Edition, 1516—Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice, the excessively rare First Edition, 1600—Sir John Oldcastle, First Edition, 1600—Spenser's Complaints, 1591—Coverdale's Bible, 1525—Caxton, Vitæ Patrum, First Edition, 1485—Voragine, Legenda Aurea, 1527—and other extremely rare Books—a large Collection of Books relating to Gardening, &c.—an extensive and unique Collection illustrating the celebrated South Sea Bubble.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Antique Gems, the Property of Lieut.-Colonel H. H. GODWIN-AUSTEN.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 13, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ANTIQUE GEMS, collected in the Punjab and Afghanistan, the Property of Lieut.-Colonel H. H. GODWIN-AUSTEN, F.R.S.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

BIBLIOTHECA PHILLIPPICA.

A FURTHER PORTION of the Famous Collection of Manuscripts and Autograph Letters of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the FAMOUS COLLECTION of MANUSCRIPTS and AUTOGRAPH LETTERS of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c., of Middle Hill, Worcestershire, and Thirlestaine House, Cheltenham, including nearly 120 MSS. on Vellum dating from the Ninth Century, together with valuable Works relating to Scotland and Ireland—a fine Series of State Letters and Papers of the Reigns of Charles II., William III., and Queen Anne—Illuminated Biblia, Psalters, Missals, &c.—Wardrobe Books of Edward II., Richard II., Thos. Duke of Gloucester, Prince Henry, &c.—Collections relating to Queen Elizabeth and Mary, Queen of Scots—Early English Poetry and Literature, together with an important Series of Shakespeare Quartos; also fine Topographical Collections relating to the Counties of Cornwall, Derby, Hants, Lancaster, Norfolk, Salop, York, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Two Shillings each.

Valuable Books selected from the Library of a Gentleman, deceased.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, May 21, at 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS selected from the LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, comprising Early Editions of the English Dramatists—Books on Witchcraft, including the First Edition of Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, Dr. Dee, &c.—several remarkable Collections of Early Chap-Books—Tracts relating to Mary Toft, the Rabbit Woman of Godalming, from the Nassau Collection—Richard Brathwait's various Works—Jest Books—Chalkhill's Thealma and Clearchus, 1683—Defoe's Moll Flanders, First Edition—Sir John Mennis's Musarum Delicæ, 1656—Simon Grahame's The Anatomie of Humors, First Edition—A Mirror for Magistrates, 1610—Boccaccio's Decameron, 1620—Brant's Stultifera Navis, 1570—Johnson's Highwaymen, First Edition, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Important Autograph Letters and Historical Documents.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, May 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, important AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS comprising interesting Specimens of R. Burns, Byron, Garrick, Johnson, John Evelyn, Samuel Pepys, Lord Nelson, Sir Peter Paul Rubens, &c.—a large and most important Collection of Letters addressed to Victor Hugo—an Autograph Manuscript of Dean Swift, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.

The Valuable and Extensive Collection of Medals commemorative of British History.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Five Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of MEDALS commemorative of British History, the Property of the late HYMAN MONTAGU, Esq., F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Nine Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3s. each.

The Library of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D. Litt.D., formerly Head Master of Queen Elizabeth's School, Ipswich, Editor of Aristophanes, Plutarch's 'Lives,' &c., consisting of valuable Classical Works—History—Poetry—Critical Treatises—Scientific Periodicals—Educational Books—First Editions of the Writings of A. C. Swinburne, Robert Bridges, Matthew Arnold, Robert Browning, &c.—Firdusi, The Shah Nameh, Manuscript, with Miniatures, Sæc. XVII.—Thackeray's The Snob, the Eleven Numbers complete, 1829; also a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Rev. W. WALBRAN, of Pendleton, Clitheroe, comprising Theological and Classical Works—Archæological Publications—Dictionaries, &c.; Horæ Beatæ Marie Virginis, Manuscript on Vellum, with finely Painted Miniatures, Sæc. XV.—Rare Books on Gardening, &c.; and other Properties, consisting of Scarce Books relating to America—Chronicles—Voyages, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 10, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS formed by WALTER HAMILTON, Esq., Vice-President of the Ex-Libris Society; also his Reference Library of Works on Heraldry and Book-Plates.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 11, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of RARE BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS, formed by the late RICHARD ASHBY, Esq., of Staines (by order of the Executors).

Catalogues on application.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 12, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS ENGRAVINGS, including the Property of the late J. ROBSON, Esq., comprising Mezzotint and other Portraits—Fancy Subjects of the Bartolozzi School—Scarce Topographical Prints—Historical and Scriptural Subjects—Modern Prints and Etchings (mostly Proofs) after Marcus Stone, Laslett Pott, Alma Tadema, &c.—Water-Colour Drawings—and Paintings.

Catalogues on application.

Scarce Engravings and Paintings, including the Property of the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a fine COLLECTION of PRINTS, principally printed in Colours, and in fine state. Also the COLLECTION of OIL PAINTINGS formed by the late E. P. LOFTUS BROCK, Esq., F.S.A.

Catalogues in preparation.

Library of the late Rev. ROBERT CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 19, and Two Following Days, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. ROBERT CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral, comprising Theological, Classical, Early Printed, and Miscellaneous Books in all Branches of Literature, both English and Foreign.

Catalogues in preparation.

THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT, May 13 and 14.

Rare old Print Collections arranged.

Bank of England—Royal Exchange—Somerset House—House of Commons—House of Lords—Hyde Park—The Temple—Diamond Jubilee Route—Queen Victoria—Shakespeare's Hamlet and Othello—Rubens, Raphael, Vandyke—Kew Gardens—Queen Elizabeth—Royal Portraits—Pageants—Triumphs—Tilts—Tournaments—Thanksgivings—Shows—Fêtes—Processions—Illuminations—Funerals—Monuments of France—Apsley House—Sicily—Mary, Queen of Scots—United States of America—Albert Dürer—East Indies—Australia—Spain—Portugal—Germany—Prussia—Russia—English and Foreign Portraits, with arms—Medici Family—Knights of the Garter, Bath, and Thistle—Heraldry and Portraits of old Families of Great Britain—old Lord Mayors and Heraldry of London—Emperors of Germany—old Venice—old Amsterdam—old Antwerp—old Constantinople—Crete, Candia, and Greece—old Vienna and Buda—old London Views—Counties of Middlesex, Essex, Sussex, Bucks, Herts, Berks, Beds—Embassies—Early Turkish Wars—Famous Battles by Land and Sea—the Young Pretender—the old Irish Parliament—the old Volunteers—old Versailles—old Paris—old Metz—old Strasburg—old New York—old Birmingham—old Bristol—old Canterbury—old Edinburgh—old Berlin—old St. Petersburgh—old Genoa—old Florence—old Naples—old Nuremburg—Saxony—Pomerania—Mecklenburgh—Hohenzollern—Bohemia—Silesia—Brunswick—Hanover—Osnaburg—Bavaria—Franconia—Westphalia—Swabia—and the Rhine—old Royal Spanish Bull-Fights—old Military and Civil Costumes of Germany—old English Patriotic and Sea Songs.

MR. JOHN PARNELL, Print Auctioneer and Antiquary, will SELL the above by AUCTION (if not sold previously by Private Sale), at his Private Literary and Art Sale-Rooms, 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., on THURSDAY and FRIDAY NEXT, May 13 and 14, at 1 o'clock.

On view Tuesday and Wednesday next, up to 5 P.M.

FRIDAY, May 21.—Without reserve.

The Print and Art Collections of the late WILLIAM GILES PARNELL, Esq., the REMAINDER of the COLLECTION of the late ARTHUR PARSONS, Esq., and a PORTION of the COLLECTION of the late ALFRED TABOIS, Esq., B.A.

MR. JOHN PARNELL, Print Auctioneer and Antiquary, will SELL by AUCTION, at his Literary and Art Sale-Rooms 12, Rockley-road, Shepherd's Bush-green, London, W., at 1 o'clock, early LITHOGRAPHS, brilliant OLEOGRAPHS, and CHROMO-LITHOS—rare Portraits of the Victorian Era, Medical Men, Authors, and Actresses, Paintings, Mezzotints after Lawrence and others, Portraits after Reynolds, Drawings, Proofs by T. O. Barlow, A.R.A., after Phillips, Coloured Engravings, rare Bartolozzi Engravings—Caricatures, Photos, Jubilee 1887 Portraits, Tuck's grand Oleograph Portraits of Queen Victoria and Statesmen, Sixteenth Century Engraving of Alexander Farnese—Fan Designs, and other Items of value.

[For Continuation of Sales, see next page.]

A. & C. BLACK'S LIST.

HANDBOOK to CHRISTIAN and ECCLESIASTICAL ROME. By H. M. and M. A. R. T. Part I. The CHRISTIAN MONUMENTS. Illustrated with 23 Cuts and Plans. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

NAPLES in the NINETIES. A Sequel to 'Naples in 1888.' By E. NEVILLE ROLFE, H.B.M. Consul at Naples. With numerous Illustrations. Square crown 8vo. cloth, price 7*s.* 6*d.*

THROUGH FINLAND in CARTS. By Mrs. ALEC TWEEDIE. With 18 Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo. price 15*s.* [Ready next week.

CARLYLE'S SARTOR RESARTUS. Edited, with Notes and Introduction, by JAMES A. S. BARRETT. [Ready shortly.

The ASSUMPTION of MOSES. By Rev. R. H. CHARLES, Author of 'The Apocalypse of Baruch.' Crown 8vo. cloth. [Ready shortly.

FADS of an OLD PHYSICIAN. By Dr. GEORGE S. KEITH, Author of 'Plea for a Simpler Life,' to which this is a Companion Volume. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

FERRETS: their Management in Health and Disease, with Remarks on their Legal Status. By NICHOLAS EVERITT. With numerous Illustrations. Small crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

ZIG-ZAG GUIDE to the KENTISH COAST. By F. C. BURNAND. Illustrated by Phil May. Crown 8vo. limp cloth, rounded corners, price 2*s.* 6*d.* [Ready shortly.

A DOZEN WAYS of LOVE. By Miss L. DOUGALL. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

OUT of HER SHROUD. By Henry OCHILTREE, Author of 'Redburn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

A MATTER of TEMPERAMENT. By CAROLINE FOTHERGILL, Author of 'The Comedy of Cecilia' and 'A Question of Degree.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

The JUCKLINS. By Opie Read, Author of 'A Kentucky Colonel.' Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

WHO'S WHO, 1897, contains nearly 6,000 Biographies—mostly Autobiographies—of the Leading Men and Women of the Day, besides being a complete Peerage, Baronetage, Knightage, &c. Edited by DOUGLAS SLADEN. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

A. & C. BLACK, Soho-square, London.

Sales by Auction.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

MR. J. C. STEVENS begs to announce that his Auction Rooms and Offices, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, are OPEN DAILY for the reception of

MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY OF EVERY DESCRIPTION,

which is included in Sales held every Friday throughout the year

Established 1760 Telegraphic address: "Auks, London."

MONDAY NEXT.

A Selection of Oriental, Mirzapore, English Axminster, Wilton, Brussels, Velvet Pile, and other Carpets, and an Assortment of Hearth Rugs, direct from the Manufacturers.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, May 10 at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view Saturday prior 12 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

A valuable Astronomical Telescope, 3½ in. diam. Aperture, with Equatorial Mount, by T. Cooke & Son, York—Theodolites, Microscopes, Spectroscopes, &c., being the remaining Contents of an Observatory—High-Class Scale Working Model Locomotive and other Models—Expensive Cameras, Lenses, and Shutters by leading Makers—Books—and an Assortment of Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, May 14, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MONDAY, May 17.

Two Libraries of Natural History, Travels, Scientific and other Works.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY, May 17, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the Saturday prior 12 till 3, and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY, May 18.

A valuable Collection of Minerals, including many Choice and Rare Specimens, also the Cabinets in which they are contained.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, May 18, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY, May 25.

A valuable Collection of Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, May 25, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of NATIVE WEAPONS, Ornaments, Dress, War Clubs, and other Curios from New Guinea, South Africa, and other Parts—Native Gods, Carved Tusks, Cannon Ball, and other Curiosities just received from Benin City—Armour and Arms—Antiquities—China—Engravings—a Magnificent Skin Carpet—Chinese Carvings, &c.

On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 10, and Two Following Days, COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS of the Early English School, formed by a well-known Amateur.

On MONDAY, May 10, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late K. R. MURCHISON, Esq., and of the late Mrs. J. E. WINGFIELD-STRATFORD.

On WEDNESDAY, May 12, the CELLAR of WINES of the late HENRY J. STOURTON, Esq., of Holme Hall, York; and other fine Wines from various Private Cellars.

On THURSDAY, May 13, ENGLISH and FOREIGN DECORATIVE and TABLE PLATE, BOXES, &c., of the late J. PEARSON COX, Esq., and from numerous other Sources.

On FRIDAY, May 14, PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART of the late Mrs. EDWARD FISHER, of Newton Abbot, and the late J. PEARSON COX, Esq., of Nottingham.

On SATURDAY, May 15, the COLLECTION of PICTURES and DRAWINGS formed by the late ELI LEES, Esq., and the STARKEY COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES.

On MONDAY, May 17, MODERN ENGRAVINGS of the late Sir J. E. MILLAIS, Bart.

On WEDNESDAY, May 19, and Two Following Days, the COLLECTION of ANTIQUE BRONZES and GEMS, ITALIAN CINQUECENTO BRONZES, MAJOLICA, COINS, SILVER, PICTURES, &c., of the late Rev. MONTAGUE TAYLOR.

On FRIDAY, May 21, FINE OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, LIMOGES ENAMELS, the GLENLYON BROOCH, and other Early Scotch Relics, &c.

On SATURDAY, May 22, Fifty important ENGLISH and FOREIGN PICTURES, the Property of BENJAMIN ARMITAGE, Esq., of Sorrel Bank, Manchester; the important COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of F. W. ARMITAGE, Esq., of Melbourne, and a choice COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29 and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues may now be had, price One Guinea. Further notice will be given.

Miscellaneous Books—1,500 vols. of Recent Travels and Biographies from a West End Circulating Library. Suite of Handsome Oak Library Furniture—Antique Carved Oak Bookcase—Revolving Bookcases, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 13, and following Day, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS OF ALL CLASSES, including 1,500 vols. of Recent Travels and Biographies from a West End Circulating Library; also A HANDSOME SUITE of OAK LIBRARY FURNITURE, the Property of a GENTLEMAN—Antique Carved Oak Bookcase—Mahogany-Glazed Bookcases—Revolving Bookcases—large Oil Painting, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Valuable Library of Archæological and Antiquarian Books of the late Rev. WM. SPARROW SIMPSON, M.A., D.D., Sub-Dean of St. Paul's.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., during the present Month the VALUABLE LIBRARY of the late Rev. WM. SPARROW SIMPSON, M.A., D.D., Sub-Dean of St. Paul's and Hon. Librarian to His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, comprising MANY VALUABLE ARCHÆOLOGICAL, TOPOGRAPHICAL, and ANTIQUARIAN BOOKS, as well as the usual Standard Works in Theology and General Literature.

Further particulars will be duly announced and Catalogues are preparing.

The RUSSELL INSTITUTION, 55, Great Coram-street, Russell-square.—Valuable and Extensive Library of upwards of 20,000 vols. of Books—Two capital Billiard Tables—Statues, Busts, &c.—Mahogany and other Bookcases, and the usual Fittings.

MESSRS. HODGSON have received instructions to SELL by AUCTION, at the end of the present Month, on the PREMISES of the RUSSELL INSTITUTION, 55, Great Coram-street, Russell-square, W.C., the above VALUABLE and EXTENSIVE LIBRARY, also the Mahogany and other Bookcases—Two Billiard Tables by Thurston—Stone Statues of Antinous, Hercules, and Euphrosyne—Busts of Heroes, Poets, and Statesmen—Large Board-Room Table—several Card and Occasional Tables, and the usual Fittings.

Catalogues are preparing, and will be forwarded (when ready) on application to the AUCTIONEERS, No. 115, Chancery-lane, W.C.

67 and 68, CHEAPSIDE, LONDON, E.C.

TWO DAYS' SALE of the highly important Collection of Antique China and Decorative Furniture—Bronzes—Carved Statuary Marbles, Clocks, and Candelabra—Old Engravings—and Miscellaneous Articles, being the Remaining Portion of the Collection formed by Mr. G. WILLS, late of Park-street, Bristol, who has disposed of his Premises.

MESSRS. PROTHEROE & MORRIS will SELL by AUCTION, at their Sale-Rooms, 67 and 68, Cheapside, London, E.C., on THURSDAY and FRIDAY, May 13 and 14, at 1 o'clock precisely each Day, the whole of the valuable COLLECTION of ANTIQUE and MODERN CHINA, in Sèvres, Dresden, Oriental, Worcester, Chelsea, Crown Derby, &c., in Dinner and Dessert Sets, Groups, Figures, Vases, and Cabinet Specimens—a large assortment of Decorative Furniture, in Old French, Inlaid and Painted—Old English Satinwood and Mahogany Cabinets and Fancy Tables—Carved Chippendale Chairs—Three very fine Carved Italian Cabinets in the Renaissance Style—a Beautiful Old Ivory Cabinet in Bureau Form, fitted with numerous Drawers—Two fine Old English Satinwood Commodes, decorated in Figures, Flowers, and Devices—a fine Old French Marqueterie Escretoire—a Pair of fine Old Buhl Thermes, with massive Metal-Gilt Mounts—a finely Carved Ivory Tankard of unusual merit, and other Carved Ivory Specimens—a small Collection of Arms and Armour—a Complete Set of 22 Coloured Engravings by Bunbury, in Gilt Frames—a variety of Choice Bronzes, including a fine Old Group of the Farnese Bull—a ditto Group, 'The Education of Bacchus'—Old Battersea Enamel and other Boxes—Old Silk and Tapestry Curtains and Draperies—Two fine Old English Chime Clocks, one in Upright Case—Glasses in Carved and Gilt Chippendale Frames—several Suites of Costly Clocks and Candelabra, including a Pair of fine Metal-Gilt Louis XVI. Candelabra, supported by Figures of Boys, for Seven Lights each—a Service of Old Cut Glass—and a large quantity of Articles of a varied description.

May be viewed Tuesday and Wednesday prior to and mornings of Sale. Catalogues of the AUCTIONEERS, 67 and 68, Cheapside, E.C.

Sale of a Library of Books (chiefly illustrating Art); Cotsly Ornaments; Indian Arms; a Cabinet of Coins and Medals; Antique Silver, and other Objets d'Art; a large Collection of Autotypes; a few Water-Colour Drawings, &c., the Property of the late Dr. T. B. BARRETT, of Welshpool.

MESSRS. WILLIAM HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN are favoured with instructions to conduct the above important SALE, at the COUNTY MART, SHREWSBURY (where the Property will be removed from Welshpool for convenience of viewing and sale), commencing TUESDAY, May 25, and Two Following Days.

Catalogues forwarded on application.

PARIS.—M. PAUL CHEVALLIER, Auctioneer, 10, Rue Grange Batelière, assisted by MM. DURAND-RUEL, BRAME & MANNHEIM, Experts, will SELL by PUBLIC AUCTION, in PARIS, HOTEL DROUOT, Rooms Nos. 7 and 8, on MAY 18 and 19, at 2 P.M., the important COLLECTION of Madame G. VAN DEN EYNDE, comprising Modern Paintings, Water Colours, Pastels, and Drawings of the 1830 School—Porcelains of China and Japan—Seats upholstered in Tapestry of the Louis XV. Period, &c. On view May 16 and 17, from half-past 1 to half-past 5 P.M.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL.

Contents. MAY. 2*s.*

Some Results of the Norwegian Arctic Expedition, 1893-96. By Dr. Fridtjof Nansen.
The North Polar Problem. A Discussion.
The Mesopotamian Petroleum Field. By Captain F. R. Maunsell, R.A.
Beazley's 'Dawn of Modern Geography.'
Recent Biography.
Dungeness Foreland. By F. P. Gulliver.
Russian Expeditions in Tibet.
The Monthly Record.—Obituary: Antoine d'Abbadie, by E. G. Ravenstein.—Correspondence: Drifting Sands, by C. Carus Wilson.—Meetings of the R.G.S.—Geographical Literature of the Month.—New Maps.—Numerous Maps and Illustrations.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE (Exterior View); the Lesson of the Paris Fire; New Office Buildings, Liverpool; an Architect's Sketches in Brittany, the Royal Academy Exhibition, &c., see the BUILDER of May 8. Post free, 4½*d.*

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

NEW NOVEL OF THEATRICAL LIFE.

"Daring in the scheme of it, and even more so in its denouement."
Sheffield Daily Telegraph

DAUGHTERS of THESPIS. By JOHN BICKERDYKE, Author of 'Lady Val's Elopement,' &c

Published at 6*s.*

Simpkin, Marshall & Co. Paternoster-row, E.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

VOLUME II. NOW READY.

A HISTORY OF ENGLISH POETRY.

By J. COURTHOPE, C.B. M.A. D.Litt., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

Vol. II. The Renaissance and the Reformation; Influence of the Court and the Universities.

8vo. 10*s.* net.

BY REV. FREDERIC RENDALL.

The ACTS of the APOSTLES in GREEK and ENGLISH. With Notes. By Rev. FREDERIC RENDALL, M.A., formerly Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Assistant Master of Harrow School. Crown 8vo. 9*s.*

Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged.

READINGS on the PURGATORIO of DANTE, chiefly based on the Commentary of Benvenuto Da Imola. By the Honble. WILLIAM WARREN VERNON, M.A., Accademico Correspondente della Crusca and Cavaliere di S. Maurizio e Lazzaro in Italy. With an Introduction by the late Very Rev. DEAN of ST. PAUL'S. In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 24*s.*

BY SIR ARCHIBALD GEIKIE.

ANCIENT VOLCANOES of GREAT BRITAIN. By Sir ARCHIBALD GEIKIE, F.R.S., &c. With 7 Maps and numerous Illustrations. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. 36*s.* net.

TIMES.—"An exhaustive treatise, which may be supplemented by the researches of the future, but which can hardly be superseded.....To geologists it is unnecessary to commend it. To all who are interested in the checkered career of this earth of ours it will be found to abound with interest."

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.

New Volume.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5*s.*

PARENTS' ASSISTANT; or, Stories for Children. By MARIA EDGEWORTH. Illustrated by Chris. Hammond. With an Introduction by ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE.

THE MODERN READER'S BIBLE.

New Volume.

Pott 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.*

Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by RICHARD G. MOULTON, M.A. (Camb.). The Text is that of the Revised Version. It is used by special permission of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge.

JEREMIAH.

Demy 8vo. sewed, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The THEORY of SOCIALIZATION. A Syllabus of Sociological Principles for the use of College and University Classes. By Professor F. H. GIDDINGS, M.A. With references to the Third Edition of 'The Principles of Sociology.'

CLASSICAL SERIES.—New Volumes.

The FIRST PHILIPPIC and the OLYNTHIACS of DEMOSTHENES. With Introduction and Critical and Explanatory Notes by JOHN EDWIN SANDYS, Litt.D., &c. Fcap. 8vo. 5*s.*

The TROADES of EURIPIDES. With Revised Text and Notes by ROBERT YELVERTON TYRRELL, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College, &c. Fcap. 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S NEW NOVELS AND PUBLICATIONS.

THREE REVIEWS OF THE NEW BRIGHTON GUIDE!

"A model for all Shilling Guides."—Pall Mall Gazette. "May be sincerely commended."—Daily Telegraph.
"Can be read with genuine pleasure and interest.....The printing is splendid and the illustrations as numerous as they are well produced."
Brighton Gazette.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S SHILLING ILLUSTRATED GUIDE-BOOKS

Aim above everything at being up-to-date and correct, are carefully Revised from Year to Year, and are by far the most reliable and cheapest Handbooks published.

They are strongly bound, of handy size, printed in clear type on good paper; furnished with excellent Maps and Plans and are superbly illustrated.

SURE TO BE IN GREAT DEMAND DURING THE HOLIDAY SEASON.

Red cloth, round corners, 1s.

The Series numbers SIXTY-EIGHT, and comprises nearly all the principal Health Resorts of England, all parts of Scotland and Ireland, North Wales, and the most important Continental Touring Grounds.

ENGLAND AND WALES.

LONDON.
NORTH WALES.
BATH.
BIDEFORD.
BIRMINGHAM.
BOURNEMOUTH.
BRIDLINGTON and FILEY.
BRIGHTON.
BUXTON and the PEAK DISTRICT.
The CHANNEL ISLANDS.
DARTMOOR.
The ENGLISH LAKE DISTRICT.
EXETER.
HARROGATE and its SPAS.
FURNESS ABBEY and MORECAMBE BAY.
HASTINGS.
HEXHAM and CARLISLE.
ILFRACOMBE and NORTH DEVON.
ILKLEY.
The ISLE of MAN.
The ISLE of WIGHT.
LEAMINGTON, WARWICK, &c.
LIVERPOOL.
LYNTON and LYNMOUTH.
MATLOCK and DOVEDALE.
OXFORD.
PLYMOUTH.
REDCAR, MIDDLESBROUGH.
SALTBURN-BY-THE-SEA.
SCARBOROUGH.
SHERWOOD FOREST, NOTTINGHAM and "THE DUKERIES."
SOUTHPORT.
STRATFORD-ON-AVON.
TORQUAY.
WHITBY.
WINDSOR and its CASTLE.
WYE VALLEY.

IRELAND.

BELFAST.
CARLINGFORD BAY.
CONNEMARA HIGHLANDS, WEST of IRELAND.
CORK, GLENGARIFF, BANTRY, and the S.W. of Ireland.
DUBLIN and COUNTY WICKLOW.
GIANT'S CAUSEWAY, &c.
LIMERICK, COUNTY CLARE, and the LOWER SHANNON.
LONDONDERRY and the DONEGAL HIGHLANDS.
KILLARNEY.
NORTHERN LAKE DISTRICT of IRELAND.
Counties WATERFORD and WEXFORD.

SCOTLAND.

ABBOTSFORD, MELROSE, and the SCOTTISH BORDER.
ABERDEEN and DEESIDE, BALMORAL, &c.
AYR, ARRAN, DUMFRIES, and LAND of BURNS.
EAST COAST of SCOTLAND.
EDINBURGH and its Environs.
FIFE, KINROSS, DUNFERMLINE, &c.
GLASGOW and the CLYDE.
HIGHLANDS and ISLANDS of SCOTLAND.
INVERNESS.
OBAN, FORT WILLIAM, and the WEST of SCOTLAND.
PERTH, DUNDEE, &c.
SKYE, ORKNEY, SHETLAND.
SOUTH-WEST of SCOTLAND.
The TROSSACHS, LOCH LOMOND, LOCH KATRINE, &c.

THE CONTINENT.

BELGIUM and HOLLAND. | PARIS. | The RHINE and RHINELAND. | The RIVIERA. | SWITZERLAND.

TWENTY-FIRST AND ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

Medium 8vo. cloth, 21s.; half-calf, 28s.; full or tree calf, 35s.

HAYDN'S DICTIONARY OF DATES

AND UNIVERSAL INFORMATION.

A COMPLETE RECORD OF ALL NATIONS AND TIMES.

CONTAINING THE

HISTORY OF THE WORLD TO THE AUTUMN OF 1895.

BY

BENJAMIN VINCENT,

Hon. Librarian of the Royal Institution of Great Britain.

"'Haydn's Dictionary of Dates' is the most universal book of reference in a moderate compass that we know of in the English language."—Times.
"There can be nothing except congratulation for the care with which the various articles have been brought up to date."—Standard.

Demy 8vo. 924 pages, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d.; half-calf, 12s.

EVERY MAN HIS OWN MECHANIC. Being a Complete Guide for Amateurs in Household Carpentry and Joinery, Ornamental and Constructional Carpentry and Joinery, and Household Building, Art and Practice.

Medium 8vo. 784 pages, cloth, 7s. 6d.

HOME CARPENTRY for HANDY MEN. By Francis CHILTON-YOUNG, Author of 'Every Man his Own Mechanic,' &c. With over 550 Illustrations.

A book of practical instruction in all kinds of constructive and decorative work in wood that can be done by the amateur in House, Garden, and Farmstead.

THE BEST COOKERY BOOK IN THE WORLD.

620th Thousand, crown 8vo. strongly bound, half-roan, 7s. 6d.; cloth gilt, gilt edges, 8s. 6d.; half-calf or half-morocco, 12s. 6d.

MRS. BEETON'S HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT. New, greatly Enlarged and Improved Edition. Containing about 1700 pages, with Thousands of Recipes and Instructions, Hundreds of Engravings, and Coloured Cookery Plates.

Royal 8vo. 844 pages, very handsomely bound, cloth gilt, bevelled boards, 10s. 6d.

BEETON'S NEW BOOK of GARDEN MANAGEMENT. A New and Greatly Enlarged Edition. A Complete Guide to Gardening in all its Branches. Profusely illustrated with Coloured Plates and 600 Engravings.

Just ready, crown 8vo. art canvas, gilt, 6s.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.

"There is mingled delicacy and power.....Intensely interesting. The book is one to be read and remembered."—Speaker.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.

"It is a worthy successor to the author's 'Rust of Gold.'"—Standard.
"'False Dawn' is as interesting as it is smart, while its study of Nina Wendover is perfect."—Illustrated London News.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.

"Beautifully written, with real and rare powers both of psychology and of word painting."—Academy.
"Francis Prevost's books the critic always snatches greedily. Invariably interesting, he is invariably productive of hope. One reads him expecting an illumination."
Vanity Fair.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.

"Two types of manhood and womanhood that are as noble as they are unhappily rare. Mr. Prevost has all the qualities that go to make up the successful novelist. He understands his men and women. He has an eye for a plot and its situations. He can construct brilliant dialogue to any extent. We might compare him to Anthony Hope in this respect—to the latter's disadvantage. He has wit and humour and an eye for nature."
Glasgow Herald.

Just ready, crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

NEW NOVEL BY COULSON KERNAHAN,

Author of 'God and the Ant,' and 'The Child, the Wise Man, and the Devil,' of which 100,000 have been sold. Illustrated by F. S. Wilson.

CAPTAIN SHANNON.

"Here is a story which every novelist should have thought of years ago. No man possibly but Conan Doyle could have treated such an admirable first idea as well as Mr. Kernahan has treated it."—Daily Chronicle.
"As ingenious and thrilling a one, in fact, as we have ever read."—Christian Age.

CAPTAIN SHANNON.

"The perils which Rissler has to undergo before he runs the victim to earth—or rather to water—are so terrible that they might well be warranted to turn the hair of any man white."—Speaker.

Ready immediately, crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

FORDHAM'S FEUD. By Bertram Mitford, Author of 'The Curse of Clement Waynfleete,' 'The Expiation of Wynne Palliser.' Illustrated by Stanley L. Wood.

"A powerful and decidedly interesting novel. The plot is a clever one.....full of interest.....gives some remarkably vivid portraits."—African Critic.

London: WARD, LOCK & CO., Limited, Salisbury-square, E.C.; New York and Melbourne.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL.

ON MAY 14.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

UNCLE BERNAC:

A Memory of the Empire.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of 'The White Company,'

'Rodney Stone,' &c.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

READY THIS DAY. With a Preface entitled "On the Ebb Tide." Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The WAYS of LIFE. Two Stories: I. MR. SANDFORD. II. The WONDERFUL HISTORY of MR. ROBERT DALYELL. By MRS. OLIPHANT.

NEW NOVEL BY ALEXANDER INNES SHAND.

READY THIS DAY. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The LADY GRANGE. By Alexander INNES SHAND, Author of 'Kilcarra: a Novel,' 'Half a Century; or, Changes in Men and Manners,' &c.

The REVIVAL of LEARNING. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. Large crown 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*. [Immediately.

 This is Volume II. of a New and Cheaper Edition of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*. each. The remaining Volumes will be published at intervals.

FROM GRAVE to GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with certain Subjects of Serious Interest, with the Puritans, with Literature and with the Humours of Life. Now for the first time Collected and Arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

"Undeniably clever, well-informed, brightly written, and in many ways interesting."—Times.

"Mr. Strachey writes admirably; he has a great fund of knowledge, and a great power of illustration; he often throws a novel light upon those matters of common concern which get overlooked just because they are 'everybody's business'; and sometimes, as in his article upon the 'Horrors of Astronomy,' his analysis of popular consciousness is really masterly."—Guardian.

COLLECTED CONTRIBUTIONS on DIGESTION and DIET. With an Appendix on the Opium Habit in India. By Sir WILLIAM ROBERTS, M.D. F.R.S. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 5*s*.

"A book which, primarily intended for medical men, may be read and understood by any intelligent person, and the perusal of which may be calculated to do an immense deal of good."

DR. ANDREW WILSON in the Illustrated London News.

New Volumes of SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S Popular 2s. 6d. Series.

Crown 8vo. limp red cloth, 2*s*. 6*d*. each.

The MARTYRED FOOL. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Rainbow Gold,' 'Joseph's Coat,' &c.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island. By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurrish,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c.

London:

SMITH ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

NULMA: an Anglo-Australian Romance, Mrs. Campbell Praed's New Novel, is now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.

The LAST ENTRY, by W. Clark Russell, with a Frontispiece by Max Cowper, will be ready on May 13. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY, the New Irish Romance by Richard DOWLING, will be ready on May 14. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

CARLTON PRIORS, by John Stafford, Author of 'Doris and I,' will be ready on May 13. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s*.

A COUNTRY SWEETHEART. By Dora Russell. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s*. [May 15.

The RIDDLE RING. By Justin McCarthy, M.P. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

The GILDED AGE. By Mark Twain and Charles Dudley Warner. With 212 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

The CHARLATAN. By Robert Buchanan and Henry Murray. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s*.

ACADEMY NOTES, 1897. (Founded by Henry Blackburn.) With nearly 200 Illustrations. Price 1*s*.

ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE of the PARIS SALON, 1897. With 400 Illustrations. Price 3*s*.

NEW VOLUME OF 'A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.'

On MAY 20 WILL BE READY, demy 8vo. cloth extra, 13*s*.

(Uniform with the Library Edition of the first Four Volumes.)

A HISTORY of OUR OWN TIMES, from 1880 to the DIAMOND JUBILEE. By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Cr. 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugene Rougon). By Emile Zola. Authorized Version. With a Preface by ERNEST VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on Sardou and Moreau's Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Translated by JOHN DE VILLIERS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

The MASTER CRAFTSMAN. By Sir Walter Besant. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn Linton. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s*. 6*d*.

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.

BEYOND the PALE. By B. M. Croker, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' Crown 8vo. buckram, 6*s*. [SECOND EDITION just ready.

WITH the RED EAGLE. By William Westall. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s*.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. Illustrated by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.

A MINION of the MOON: a Romance of the King's Highway. By T. W. SPEIGHT, Author of 'The Mysteries of Heron Dyke.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By ALLEN UPWARD.

The PLUNGER. By Hawley Smart.

The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. CLARK RUSSELL.

The WHITE VIRGIN. By G. Manville FENN.

MR. JERVIS. By B. M. Croker.

MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie MURRAY.

BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir WALTER BESANT.

AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.

LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO.

AN INDIAN NOVEL.

A PRINCESS of ISLAM. By J. W. Sherer, C.S.I., Bengal Civil Service (retired), Author of 'Alice of the Inn,' &c. 6*s*. A Tale of Zenana Life and of the Effect produced by Western Influences on a Mahomedan Lady of Rank.

The EVOLUTION of the ARYAN. By Prof. Rudolf von Ihering. Translated by A. DRUCKER, M.P. Demy 8vo. 10*s*. 6*d*. Book I. The ARYAN PARENT-NATION; II. ARYANS and SEMITES; III. EMIGRATION of the ARYANS; IV. The WANDERING; V. The SECOND HOME.

The YOUNG BEETLE-COLLECTOR'S HANDBOOK. By Dr. E. HOFMANN. Translated by W. EGMONT KIRBY, M.D. With 20 excellent Coloured Plates (containing over 500 figures).

NEW VOLUME OF THE YOUNG COLLECTOR SERIES.

HANDBOOK of GRASSES. By W. Hutchinson. Fully illustrated. 1*s*. "A cheap popular work adapted for the use of elementary students. There is nothing which covers the same field in existence already, and it fulfils its purpose excellently well."—Nature. "Should do much to popularize the study of grasses."—Science Gossip.

TWO AUSTRALIAN NOVELS.

(1.) MOSTYN STAYNE. By Roderick Quinn. 3s. 6d.

(2.) HAROLD EFFERMERE: a Story of the Queensland Bush. By MICHAEL COSTELLO. 3*s*. 6*d*.

STEPS to the TEMPLE of HAPPINESS. Thirty-two Moral Stories for the Young. With Hints to Parents on the Education of Children. By HENRY SMITH. With 14 Illustrations by Owen Dalziel and Katie Hobbs. Fcap. 4to. silk, 5*s*. "As a prize book the volume is ideal. The stories are good, the printing is clear, and the illustrations are excellent."—Publishers' Circular. "These stories inculcate, often in a winning and attractive manner, lessons of kindness, and lay stress on the homely but primary duties of truthfulness, obedience, and unselfish regard for others."—Speaker.

The RATIONAL, or SCIENTIFIC, IDEA of MORALITY. Containing a Theory of Cognition, a Metaphysic of Religion, and an Apologia pro Amore. By P. F. FITZGERALD. 376 pages, 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*. "There is much that is suggestive of high thinking in the pages of this book."—Scotsman. "Painstaking and conscientious, and his book deserves all the thought his readers can give it. A book to be carefully studied by those interested in writings of a profound nature." Bristol Times.

The FARM in the KAROO: a Sketch of South African Life. By Mrs. CAREY-HOBSON. Illustrated. 2*s*. 6*d*. "Delightfully natural."—Daily Telegraph. "Excellent reading."—Literary World.

ON HUMAN NATURE: Essays in Ethics and Politics. By ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER. Translated by BAILEY SAUNDERS, M.A. 2*s*. 6*d*. Contents: Human Nature—Government—Free Will and Fatalism—Character—Moral Instinct—Ethical Reflections.

FERDINAND LASSALLE and HELENE VON DONNIGES. A Modern Tragedy. By ELIZABETH E. EVANS. 1*s*. "No novelist ever imagined a more romantic story."—Glasgow Herald. "A well-written and deeply interesting little book."—Western Morning News. "Cannot fail to arouse general interest."—Westminster Review.

NEW EDUCATIONAL BOOKS.

The KINDERGARTEN SYSTEM: its Origin and Development as seen in the Life of Friedrich Froebel. Adapted from the Work of A. B. HANSCHMANN for the Use of English Kindergarten Students by FANNY FRANKS. With an Appendix on 'The Education of Man.' 5*s*.

The EDUCATION of GIRLS and WOMEN in GREAT BRITAIN. By C. S. BREMNER. With a Preface by Miss E. P. HUGHES, of Cambridge, 4*s*. 6*d*. "A valuable repertory of information."—Times. "An interesting record of progress and results."—Scotsman. "She is to be congratulated on her thoroughness and moderation."—National Observer.

SIDE LIGHTS on SHAKSPERE. With 2 Illustrations. By L. ROSSI and E. M. CORBOULD. 3*s*. 6*d*. "Filled with facts and written with a degree of freshness which is uncommon. Exactly the kind of information which students preparing for examinations require."—Speaker.

AESCHYLUS. PROMETHEUS BOUND. Edited, with Introduction, Appendices, and Notes, by C. R. HAINES, M.A. (Uppingham). With 10 Archæological Illustrations and Map. 3*s*. 6*d*. "A beautiful little edition. Excellent both from a scholastic and æsthetic point of view, the notes showing great taste and judgment, the illustrations from ancient art being charming and instructive, and the printing and paper of first-rate quality."—Educational Review. "The attention is at once arrested by the taste and excellent get-up of the book. A charming little volume."—Academy.

The NICENE CREED: a Manual for the Use of Candidates for Holy Orders. By the Rev. J. J. LIAS, Chancellor of Llandaff and Examining Chaplain to the Bishop of Llandaff. 6*s*. "He has done excellent service in the preparation of this scholarly, open-minded, and luminous exposition of the Nicene Creed."—Speaker. "Of the highest value to theological students."—Guardian. "A clear and unflinching defence of dogmatic Christianity."—Westminster Review.

GEOMETRY for KINDERGARTEN STUDENTS. Specially adapted to meet the requirements of the Examinations of the National Froebel Union. By ADELINE PULLAR. With about 500 Figures. 3*s*.

SOAMES'S PHONETIC METHOD.

The TEACHER'S MANUAL. Edited by Prof. W. VIETOR, M.A. Part I. The Sounds of English, including some Foreign Sounds used in Loan Words. [Shortly.

The SCIENCE of EDUCATION. By J. F. HERBART. Translated, with a Biographical Introduction, by H. M. and E. FELKIN, with Preface by OSCAR BROWNING, M.A. Second Edition, Revised, with an Index. 4*s*. 6*d*. "The book is of enormous value."—Westminster Review. Mr. and Mrs. FELKIN'S 'INTRODUCTION to HERBART' is also published, 4*s*. 6*d*.; and they have in preparation an Annotated Translation of his 'LECTURES on EDUCATION.' A Translation of his 'APPLICATION of PSYCHOLOGY to EDUCATION,' by Miss MULLINER, will also be issued shortly.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

ART SCHOOLS of LONDON: Painting, Music, &c. By T. MACKENZIE. 2*s*. 6*d*. "An able handbook for the guidance of those intending to follow the study of art. It is assuredly the best of its kind."—Black and White.

BRADSHAW (Dr. JOHN). CONCORDANCE to the POETICAL WORKS of MILTON. 12*s*. 6*d*. net.

DALBIAC (Col. P. H., M.P.). DICTIONARY of QUOTATIONS (ENGLISH). By Col. P. H. DALBIAC, M.P. Second Edition. 8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*. Including Authors and Subjects Indexes. (1) All Quotations direct from Original Authors; (2) Best Editions used; (3) Full references to Chapter and Verse. "An improvement upon Bartlett."—Times. "The fulness and accuracy of its references make it worthy of a place in every library where scholarship is valued."—Scotsman. "A distinct advance on all its predecessors."—Journal of Education. "Up-to-date and admirably explicit."—Pall Mall.

DEMARR (J.). ADVENTURES in AUSTRALIA FIFTY YEARS AGO (1839-41). Map and Plates. 6*s*.

FIELDING (HENRY). TOM JONES. Adapted for Family Reading by his Great-Granddaughter, J. E. FIELDING. 6*s*. "All the alterations have been effected with a very skilful hand."—Times.

HARTMANN von AUE: der ARME HEINRICH. With Introduction, Notes, and Glossary by J. G. ROBERTSON, M.A. Ph.D. 4*s*. 6*d*.

HINTON (C. H.). SCIENTIFIC ROMANCES. Series II. 6*s*.

INDERWICK (F. A., Q.C.). The KING'S PEACE: Historical Sketch of the English Law Courts. 16 Plates. 4*s*. 6*d*.

LAYCOCK (F. U.). ECONOMICS and SOCIALISM: the Cause and Cure of Trade Depressions and National Poverty. 7*s*. 6*d*.

LEA (Dr. H. C.). HISTORY of AURICULAR CONFESSION and ABSOLUTION in the LATIN CHURCH. 3 vols. 15*s*.

LILLIE (A.). The WORSHIP of SATAN in MODERN FRANCE. 6*s*.

MORRIS (Wm.) and BAX (E. B.). SOCIALISM: its Growth and Outcome. Second Edition. 3*s*. 6*d*.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS YEAR BOOK, 1897. Eighth Year of Issue. 2*s*. 6*d*. Full information relating to 60 Public Schools, Woolwich, Sandhurst, Cooper's Hill, and "The Britannia." Appendices of Preparatory Schools, Entrance Scholars, Public School Bibliography, New Books, &c.

SANDEMAN (G.). PROBLEMS of BIOLOGY. 6*s*.

STEPHEN (LESLIE). SOCIAL RIGHTS and DUTIES. 2 vols. 9*s*.

STOUT (Prof. G. F.). ANALYTIC PSYCHOLOGY. 2 vols. 21*s*.

TEBB (W.) and VOLLUM (Col. E. P., M.D.). PREMATURE BURIAL. 5*s*.

WUNDT (Prof. W.). LECTURES on HUMAN and ANIMAL PSYCHOLOGY. Edited by Prof. J. E. CREIGHTON and Prof. E. B. TITCHENER. Cuts. Second Edition. 10*s*. 6*d*.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

8vo. 14s.

HISTORY OF INTELLECTUAL DEVELOPMENT.

On the Lines of Modern Evolution.

By JOHN BEATTIE CROZIER,
Author of 'Civilisation and Progress.'

Vol. I. GREEK and HINDOO THOUGHT; GRÆCO-ROMAN PAGANISM; JUDAISM; and CHRISTIANITY down to the CLOSING of the SCHOOLS of ATHENS by JUSTINIAN, 529 A.D.

NEW BOOK BY DEAN FARRAR.

THE BIBLE:

Its Meaning and Supremacy.

By F. W. FARRAR, D.D. F.R.S.,
Dean of Canterbury.

8vo. 15s.

8vo. 16s.

VITA MEDICA

Chapters of Medical Life and Work.

By Sir BENJAMIN WARD RICHARDSON, M.D. LL.D. F.R.S.

"Both those who know something of medicine and those who do not will find 'Vita Medica' an exceedingly instructive and stimulating book."—Westminster Gazette.

"An admirable picture of the character of the writer, displaying not only his geniality and kindliness, but also his unwearied industry, and his never-failing enthusiasm."
Times.

With 2 Portraits. 8vo. 18s.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF THOMAS WAKLEY,

FOUNDER AND FIRST EDITOR OF THE LANCET, MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT FOR FINSBURY, AND CORONER FOR WEST MIDDLESEX.

By S. SQUIRE SPRIGGE, M.B. Cantab.

HARVARD HISTORICAL STUDIES.

NOMINATIONS FOR ELECTIVE OFFICE IN THE UNITED STATES.

By FREDERICK W. DALLINGER, A.M.,
Member of the Massachusetts Senate.

8vo. 7s. 6d.

8vo. 7s. 6d.

PAPERS AND NOTES ON THE GENESIS AND MATRIX OF THE DIAMOND.

BY THE LATE
HENRY CARVILL LEWIS, M.A. F.G.S.,
Professor of Mineralogy in the Academy of Natural Sciences, Philadelphia,
Professor of Geology in Haverford College, U.S.A.

Edited from his Unpublished MSS. by Prof. T. G. BONNEY, D.Sc. LL.D. F.R.S., &c.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LECTURES IN THE LYCEUM;

Or, Aristotle's Ethics for English Readers.

Edited by ST. GEORGE STOCK.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CROMWELL'S PLACE IN HISTORY.

Founded on Six Lectures delivered at Oxford.

By S. R. GARDINER, D.C.L.,
Ford's Lecturer, 1896.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

NOW READY, crown 8vo. 6s.

THE STORY OF A GREAT AGRICULTURAL ESTATE:

An Account of the Origin and Administration of the "Beds and Bucks" and "Thorney" Estates.

By the DUKE OF BEDFORD.

Contents.

HISTORY and ORIGIN of THORNEY.
FINANCIAL RESULTS.
The BEDFORD PRINCIPLE of ESTATE MANAGEMENT.
CHARITIES.
RENT REMISSIONS and REVALUATIONS.
ALLOTMENTS and SMALL HOLDINGS.
ALLOTMENTS and PARISH COUNCILS.
An EXPERIMENT STATION:—1. AGRICULTURAL; 2. HORTICULTURAL; 3. EDUCATIONAL.
FARMS in HAND and the LAYING DOWN of LAND to GRASS.
DETAILED ACCOUNT of the BEDS and BUCKS and THORNEY ESTATES.

NOW READY, with Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6s.

HOW TO LISTEN TO MUSIC:

Hints and Suggestions to Untaught Lovers of the Art.

By HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL,
Author of 'Studies in the Wagnerian Drama,' &c.

With an Introduction by Sir GEORGE GROVE, C.B. D.C.L., Editor of 'Dictionary of Music and Musicians.'

Contents.

RECOGNITION of MUSICAL ELEMENTS.
The CONTENT and KINDS of MUSIC.
The MODERN ORCHESTRA.
AT an ORCHESTRAL CONCERT.
AT a PIANOFORTE RECITAL.
AT the OPERA.
CHOIRS and CHORAL MUSIC.
MUSICIAN, CRITIC, and PUBLIC.

NOW READY, fcap. 8vo. 2s.

MURRAY'S CYCLIST'S ROAD-BOOK, from London, through

Chichester, Portsmouth, Southampton to the New Forest, and back by Romsey, Winchester, Dorking, Leatherhead, and Epsom. Illustrated by a Road Atlas at the end of the book.

With Maps and Illustrations, 8vo. 14s.

PHILIP and ALEXANDER of MACEDON. Two Essays in

Biography. By DAVID G. HOGARTH, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, Author of 'A Wandering Scholar,' &c.

"Written with spirit and in a fascinating manner; it will appeal alike to the student of history and the general reader. .....Romance is outdone by the tale of the great Macedonians."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The book is written in so spirited a manner that it would not fail to please an indifferent reader, while for a student of the most interesting chapter in the history of ancient Greece it has more points of profit and charm than a single reading could discover."—Scotsman.

REPRINT NOW READY, 2 vols. demy 8vo. 32s.

The LIFE and LETTERS of BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A.,

Master of Balliol College, Oxford. By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., and the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D. With Portraits and other Illustrations.

"A most agreeable impression of his own personal character is left upon us by this biography, one to make those who read it realize what a privilege it was to be intimate with him, and to account for the almost religious respect with which he was regarded by successive generations of Balliol men."—Standard.

With Illustrations, 8vo. 18s.

SOME UNRECOGNIZED LAWS of NATURE. An Inquiry into the Causes of Physical Phenomena, with special reference to Gravitation. By IGNATIUS SINGER and LEWIS H. BERENS.

This is an entirely new and original work, the result of long study and independent experiment and research. By a close examination of the conditions under which various phenomena are manifested, an attempt has been made to throw light on the Laws of Nature to which such manifestations are due.

NOW READY, 8vo. 6s.

THE QUARTERLY REVIEW.

No. 370. APRIL, 1897.

Contents.

1. QUEEN VICTORIA.
2. The PSALMS in HISTORY.
3. BENJAMIN JOWETT.
4. FRENCH ART.
5. The JERNINGHAM LETTERS.
6. CRIME in ENGLAND.
7. The POETRY of SPORT.
8. LAMENNAIS.
9. The HUMAN MIND and ANIMAL INTELLIGENCE.
10. RISE of the GERMAN INFANTRY.
11. HISTORICAL WRITINGS of FRANCIS PARKMAN.
12. The POLITICAL SITUATION.

2 vols. crown 8vo. 18s.

NOTES FROM a DIARY, 1851–72. Kept by the Right Hon.

Sir MOUNTSTUART E. GRANT DUFF, G.C.S.I., sometime Under-Secretary of State for the Colonies; Governor of Madras, 1881–86.

"This is a charming book, full of good things. It consists of the lighter reminiscences of a singularly accomplished man of the world, who in the course of a varied and active life has come in contact with a vast number of distinguished people in many countries."—St. James's Gazette.

With Portrait, fcap. 4to. 10s. 6d.

LORD BOWEN: a Biographical Sketch. With Selections from his Unpublished Poems. By Sir HENRY STEWART CUNNINGHAM, K.C.I.E.

"Every one who knew Lord Bowen well must be grateful to Sir Henry Cunningham for writing, and to Lady Bowen for empowering him to publish, this brilliant sketch of one of the most brilliant men of our century."—Spectator.

With Maps, 8vo. 14s.

The NAVY and the NATION. By James H. Thursfield, M.A.,

and Lieut.-Col. Sir GEORGE SYDENHAM CLARKE, R.E. K.C.M.G. F.R.S.

"We have called this volume a text-book, it is therefore, perhaps, needful to add that there is not a dry or a dull page in it. Whether it is Mr. Thursfield dealing with the statistics of our seaborne commerce, or Sir George Clarke explaining the relation of submarine mines to war, the subject is so dealt with that not only is it made intelligible to any average Englishman, but attention is rivetted by the charm of literary style."—Times.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

London: 10, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

MR. JAMES BOWDEN'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

Just ready, fcap. 4to. art canvas, gilt top, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The HOUSE of DREAMS. A New and Striking Allegory by an Anonymous Author.

"'The House of Dreams' belongs to the same class as Mrs. Oliphant's 'A Pilgrim in the Unseen,' and may rival the great popularity of that striking fancy.....Faith may be much helped by such a book as this—a book of signal literary beauty, of profound tenderness, and deeply reverent throughout; the work of a man who finds in earth and heaven alike the sign and token of the Cross."—British Weekly.

"A very beautiful allegory concerning the mysteries of life and death, of the power of love, and the wages of sin.....The author's deep reverence and exalted fantasy never ring false, and his work cannot fail to inspire the reader with reverence for ideals undreamed of in worldly philosophy."
Pall Mall Gazette.

JOSEPH HOCKING'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The BIRTHRIGHT: a Romance. By Joseph Hocking, Author of 'All Men are Liars,' &c. With Illustrations by Harold Piffard.

"We confess that we read Mr. Joseph Hocking's book at a sitting; not because we had any leisure for the task, but simply because the book compelled us.....Mr. Hocking possesses unquestionably the first gifts of the romance writer—the gift to tell a story and to tell it well.....We hold our breath as each chapter draws to an end, yet cannot stop there, for the race is unflagging.....We congratulate Mr. Hocking upon his book, for it is a great advance upon anything he has done. We prophecy a big public for 'The Birthright.'"—Daily Chronicle.

FIRST EDITION EXHAUSTED.—SECOND EDITION IMMEDIATELY.—Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, gilt top, 2*s.*

LITANIES of LIFE. By Kathleen Watson.

Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., in the Weekly Sun ("A Book of the Week"):—"Fancy a woman so gifted sitting down with the resolve to crush into a few words the infinite tale of all the whole race of her sex can suffer, and you have an idea of what this remarkable book is like.....As wonderful an epitome of a world of sorrows as I have ever read."

FREDERICK LANGBRIDGE'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The DREAMS of DANIA. By Frederick Langbridge, Author of 'Sent Back by the Angels,' &c. With Illustrations by J. B. Yeats.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2*s.* 6*d.*

The WHITE SLAVES of ENGLAND. By Robert H. Sherard. Being True Pictures of Certain Social Conditions in the Kingdom of England in the Year 1897. With about 40 Illustrations by Harold Piffard.

The Contents include:—The Chemical Workers—The Nail-makers—The Slipper-makers and Tailors—The Wool-combers—The White Lead Workers—The Chain-makers—Appendix.

FOURTH EDITION ready immediately, crown 8vo. cloth, round corners, 1*s.*

MANNERS for MEN. By Mrs. Humphry ("Madge" of 'Truth').

"Always in most excellent taste as well as astonishingly complete.....Certainly the world would be a very much pleasanter place to live in if all men did read and practise her admirable precepts."—Saturday Review.

"Mrs. Humphry's book will be worth its weight in gold."—Queen.

Ready immediately, crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

EAST-END IDYLLS. By A. St. John Adcock. With a Preface by the Hon. and Rev. James ADDERLEY, M.A.

Shortly, crown 8vo. cloth, 2*s.*

The WIDOW WOMAN. A Cornish Tale. By Charles Lee. Uniform with "Litanies of Life."

In preparation, crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

METHODIST IDYLLS. By a New Writer.

Crown 8vo. art linen, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ORGEAS and MIRADOU, with other Pieces. By Frederick Wedmore, Author of 'Renunciations,' 'English Episodes,' &c.

"The beautiful story of 'Orgeas and Miradou' is specially typical of Mr. Wedmore's power of expressing and translating the poignancy of human emotion.....It is charged with depths of feeling, and vivid in its extreme reticence and discrimination of touch. In it there is nothing short of divination."
Athenæum.

Fcap. 4to. art linen, 6*s.* net.

IN CHILDHOOD'S COUNTRY. By Louise Chandler Moulton. With Full-Page Illustrations by Ethel Reed.

"Mrs. Moulton's verses are charming. We commend them heartily to all children and their lovers."—Bookman.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 2*s.* 6*d.*

WHEN HEARTS are YOUNG. By Deas Cromarty. With 8 Illustrations by Will Morgan.

"Deas Cromarty has imparted to her book something of the freshness of the mountain side and the springiness of the heather. It is delightful to read. One has come across few recent books that leave a pleasanter impression on the reader's memory."—Manchester Guardian.

FIFTIETH THOUSAND.—Long 8vo. sewed, 1*s.*; neat cloth gilt, 2*s.*

The CHILD, the WISE MAN, and the DEVIL. By Coulson Kernahan, Author of 'God and the Ant,' &c.

"There is a touch of genius about this brilliant and original booklet."—Saturday Review.

"Work which deserves to live. No one can read these pages without emotion."—Bookman.

London: JAMES BOWDEN, 10, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NOTICE.

MISS BROUGHTON'S NEW NOVEL,

DEAR FAUSTINA,

Is ready this day at all Booksellers' and Libraries.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOW READY.

PANTALAS.

By EDWARD JENKINS, Author of 'Ginx's Baby.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NEAR NEIGHBOURS.'

THE CAREER OF CLAUDIA.

By F. M. PEARD, Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

NOW READY.

A ROYAL SMILE.

By J. RAINE.

In 1 vol. fcap. 8vo. 2s.

NOW READY.

UNTHINKABLES.

Discussed by F. H. BALFOUR, Author of 'Dr. Mirabel's Theory,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

NOW READY.

THEN AND NOW.

By JOHN GEORGE WITT, Q.C.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

NOTICE.—The EIGHTEENTH EDITION of The LIFE of LORD ROBERTS, V.C. ('Forty-one Years in India'), is now ready, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits, &c., 36s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7s. 6d.

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6s.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c.

WITHOUT ISSUE. By Henry Cresswell, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The writer well understands the value of an interesting opening chapter to a work of fiction, and, having aroused the attention of the reader at the outset, Mr. Cresswell holds him absorbed to the end."—Dundee Advertiser.

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin, Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'Cousin Jem' is an entertaining tale and contains some excellent character studies."—Black and White.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le Clerc, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. Munro Ferguson, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The story depends more on its all-round literary merit than upon variety of incident, though in this regard it is by no means poor; it is sure to be read with warm appreciation by discreet lovers of good fiction."—Scotsman.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'All in All' is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction."—Athenæum.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda Gardiner, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6s.

"An excellent story of a well-imagined mystery, skilfully expounded and wrought out.....Has many light and pleasant passages and is readable throughout."—Globe.

The WOOING of a FAIRY. By Gertrude Warden, Author of 'The Sentimental Sex,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A clever, well-written story, which has this merit, that the key of the well-constructed plot is hidden until the last chapter."—Pall Mall Gazette.

An AUSTRALIAN DUCHESS. By Amyot Sagon, Author of 'A Fair Palmist,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A pleasant book about pleasant people who fully deserve the pleasant places in which their lots fall."—Guardian.

"Mr. Sagon's brightly written romance."—Daily Telegraph.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, Limited, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 25s. net.

MEMORIALS of CHRISTIE'S. By W. ROBERTS, Author of 'The Book-hunter in London,' 'Printers' Marks,' &c. With 75 Collotype and other Illustrations, and a full Index.

"*" This history of the famous auctioneers, through whose hands have passed so many important works of art, will be found a reference book of great practical value to all interested in the arts. The chief items in each sale are described, the prices which they fetched under the hammer are recorded, and in all cases of interest the purchaser's name is given. The illustrations of pictures and bric-à-brac are selected chiefly from those objects which obtained "record" prices. In a size uniform with the catalogues of the firm, it should be an indispensable book in all libraries and art schools.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G. Quartermaster-General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book.

Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book. The service may also be congratulated that amongst its Field-Marshals and General Officers on the active list are so many who can emphasize their leading in the field by their literary counsels in peace. Among that band of able writers the Quartermaster-General to Her Majesty's Forces well holds his own."—Times.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

NEW VOLUME.

The PROSE WORKS of JONATHAN SWIFT. A New Edition, with an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. In about 5 vols. 3s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. A TALE of a TUB, The BATTLE of the BOOKS, and other early works. Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT. With Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. With Portrait and Facsimile.

Pott 4to. 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Indexes of Names and Subjects, and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net. each.

"In bulk, in paper and type, and in general thoroughness it strikes us equally favourably."—Academy.

Pott 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SILVER CROSS. A Selection of Poems for the Sick and Suffering. Edited by HELEN DOUGLAS, with an Introduction by the LORD BISHOP OF ST ANDREWS. Pott 8vo printed in red and black on antique paper at the Chiswick Press.

"The selection has been judiciously made, and to many the volume will be welcome and useful."—Glasgow Herald.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3s. 6d.

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

"On the whole the work seems to be for all practical purposes quite as good in its cheaper as in its more expensive form. In spite of many defects, it is by far the best existing work of its kind, with the single exception of Messrs. Farmer and Henley's 'Slang and its Analogues,' which is not only much more costly, but contains a great deal of matter unfit for general circulation."—Manchester Guardian.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

Edited by GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.

Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.

NEW VOLUMES.

ROCHESTER. By G. H. Palmer, B.A. 128 pages. 38 Illustrations.

OXFORD. By the Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A., Christchurch. 136 pages. 34 Illustrations.

"We have so frequently in these columns urged the want of cheap, well-illustrated, and well-written handbooks to our cathedrals, to take the place of the out-of-date publications of local booksellers, that we are glad to hear that they have been taken in hand by Messrs. George Bell & Sons."

St. James's Gazette.

*" Illustrated Prospectus of the Series on application.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
The Dictionary of National Biography	607
A Book on Fly-Fishing	608
Philip and Alexander of Macedon	609
Student's Dictionary of Anglo-Saxon	610
New Novels (The Dagger and the Cross; Mr. Blake, of Newmarket; The Knight's Tale; A Pot of Honey; Broken Away; In a Country Town; The Kestyns of Cather Castle)	611
Educational Literature	612
Tales of Adventure	612
The History of Canada	613
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	613–615
Prof. Land; The 'Dictionary of National Biography'; 'The Chaurapanchasika' ...	615–617
Literary Gossip	617
Science—Astronomical Literature; The Proposed Jungfrau Railway; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	618–620
Fine Arts—The Salons at Paris; The Society of Painters in Water Colours; Excavations at El Kab; Sale; Gossip	620–623
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	624–625
Drama—The Week; Library Table; Gossip	625–626

LITERATURE

Dictionary of National Biography. Edited by Sidney Lee. — Vols. XLVIII. – L. Reilly–Scobell. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

The 'Dictionary of National Biography' has reached the letter S; that is to say, the end is well in sight, and Mr. Lee merits hearty congratulations on this satisfactory state of affairs. It needs organizing powers much above the ordinary to turn out volume after volume of an elaborate work like this punctually on the date fixed for publication, and yet giving evidence on every page of the most careful workmanship. His own contributions, besides, are the result of minute research, and their quantity is almost as remarkable as their quality. Mr. Lee has not spared himself over the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' and he has every cause to feel proud of what he has done before and in this last instalment.

In vol. xlviii. we notice that Mr. Macdonald deals rather tenderly with John Rendle, the author of 'The History of Tiberius.' He may have acquired some reputation at the beginning of the century; but his book is poor stuff, and its speculations are absurd. The two Rennies, George and Sir John, have been entrusted to Mr. Prosser, who might have said something about their designs of machinery for the Bombay and other mints. Mr. Courtney gives, under Frederic Reynolds, one version of the story of Sheridan's complimenting the dog which appeared in his play 'The Caravan' at the expense of the dramatist. There is another which visits the sarcasm on Dignum, the actor: "You ill, my good fellow? You terrified me; I thought you were going to say the dog was taken ill." We are glad to see that an ambiguous sentence in Mr. Norman Moore's article on Sir John Russell Reynolds has been amended in the next volume. It certainly reads as if Reynolds had taken part with Dr. Marshall Hall in an unprofessional agreement for the transference of patients. Mr. Cosmo Monkhouse writes fully and ably about Sir Joshua Reynolds, though, to our taste, the 'Lord Heathfield' in the National Gallery is not the painter's noblest heroic portrait. Mr. Leslie Stephen contributes a lucid account of David Ricardo's position as an economist. But cannot the theory of rent be traced further back than Malthus or West, namely, to Dr. James Anderson? Mr. Lee, in an admirable article on Lady Rich, questions whether Sidney's "poetic expressions are consistent with the maintenance of innocent relations" between him and that much eulogized dame. We fear that they leave mighty little room for doubt. Mr. T. A. Archer has acquitted himself most creditably in dealing with the turbulent career of Richard Cœur-de-Lion. "A splendid savage" is the right estimate, no doubt; but the fact that his rebellion against Henry II. was sanctioned by his mother and brothers can hardly be held as a valid excuse, even when mediæval times are concerned. Mr. Tait struggles hard to do justice to Richard II., and on the whole succeeds. But did the king possess "a capacity for sustained action"? He could remember injuries; otherwise he appears to have been a creature of impulse. Richard III. has fallen to the highly competent hands of Mr. Gairdner, and with excellent results. We note, however, that Mr. Gairdner now seems to attribute to the Duke of Gloucester the murder of Edward, Prince of Wales, after Tewkesbury. In his 'Lancaster and York' he advanced the reasonable plea that possibly "when Richard in after years horrified the world by a crime still more revolting, a number of earlier deeds of violence were attributed to him of which he was really guiltless." The same argument applies to the death of Henry VI., from which Edward IV. necessarily profited far more than his younger brother. That worthy person Henry Richard is decidedly overweighted with four columns of undiscriminating praise. Mr. Leslie Stephen in his excellent criticism of Samuel Richardson might have alluded to the undoubted indebtedness in central idea of Richardson's 'Clarissa' to Rowe's 'Fair Penitent.' Mr. Cosmo Monkhouse might possibly have traced the present abodes of some of George Richmond's portraits; that of Bishop Selwyn, for example, is at St. John's College, Cambridge. Leitch Ritchie is rather oddly described as a novelist. He was emphatically an all-round man of letters. We do not exactly understand why two Ritsons, who bore no relationship to him, are placed at the end of Mr. Lee's article on Ritson the antiquary. Under Charles Rivington, the publisher, his partnership with Osborne is never definitely stated by Mr. Tedder. Mr. Armstrong's account of David Roberts is silent as to his illustrations of Bulwer's 'Pilgrims of the Rhine.' As precise statement is cultivated in the 'Dictionary' we might have expected that Mr. Leslie Stephen would allude to George Croom Robertson's co-operation with Prof. Bain in the editing of Grote's 'Aristotle.' Similarly Mr. Joseph Knight might have included under T. W. Robertson, the dramatist, his contributions to Fun under H. J. Byron's editorship. Mr. Seccombe, on the other hand, is rather too dogmatic on Robertson the historian's influence as Moderator of the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland. It is hardly true to say that through his policy "peace and unity were preserved until a new principle was established" in 1834—unity, perhaps, but not peace.

Mr. Russell Barker's article on Frederick John Robinson, Viscount Goderich, afterwards Lord Ripon, which is to be found early in vol. xlix., is put together rather clumsily. The Croker Papers have not been consulted, as they should have been, for the circumstances of his Premiership, nor the Greville Journals for his respectable tenure of office under Sir Robert Peel. An obvious slip, not due to Mr. Barker — the break-up of "the Melbourne ministry," instead of the Grey ministry, over the Irish Church question—has been corrected in the next volume. But the present Lord Ripon has served not as "Governor-General," but Viceroy of India. Among the sons of Admiral Hercules Robinson, Sir W. C. F. Robinson, the late Governor of Western Australia, should have been included. "Perdita" Robinson, according to Mr. Knight, "is said," in her later years, "to have taken part, under various signatures, in the Della Cruscan literature." There can be no doubt about that. One of her poems describes the Seraphim as reduced to silence by Merry's song, and she was gibbeted by Gifford in two brutal lines. Among Sir Boyle Roche's "bulls" which Mr. Dunlop quotes we cannot discover the most celebrated, about the bird being in two places at once. Mr. Seccombe, too, has dealt with the late Rev. William Rogers without working in "Hang theology!" Prof. Laughton's study of Lord Rodney is, we need hardly say, thoroughly accurate and authoritative. We miss, however, some allusion to the unfounded claim that has been advanced on Rodney's behalf of having originated the manœuvre of breaking the line. A more serious omission is that of his election as member for Westminster in 1780. Mr. Courtney's article on Frederic Rogers, Lord Blachford, was presumably written before the appearance of the 'Letters.' Hence it is defective in several respects — Rogers's connexion with the Times, for instance, and his settlement of the Church question in the colonies. Mr. Hewins supplies a tame sketch of Prof. Thorold Rogers, some of whose epigrams are quite worth preserving. Dr. Garnett gossips pleasantly enough about Samuel Rogers, but he greatly overestimates his personal worth, without sufficiently emphasizing, perhaps, his importance as connecting the age of Dickens with that of Byron. A weak little article on Lord Rolle, by Mr. Rigg, does not contain the familiar incident of his stumbling on the steps of the throne at the Queen's coronation. Mr. Hamilton should have alluded to some of Lord Romilly's most celebrated decisions such as that in the leading case of Edwards v. Edwards. Mr. Walter Armstrong's article on George Romney is one of the soundest contributions to this volume. But why write about "the mysterious Pamela Sims"? Pamela's parentage, thanks to Mr. Austin Dobson, is no secret now; and few among her contemporaries really doubted that she was the child of the Duke of Orleans and Madame de Genlis. Dr. Garnett's notices of the Rossettis are admirable, so far as they go, but there are one or two minor omissions. Christina's 'Short Studies of the Benedicite' are unmentioned; and so is Maria Francesca's translation of the Italian ode on the death of Lady G. Talbot—a most interesting effort. As for Dante Gabriel, Dr. Garnett treats his literary side more adequately than the artistic. His water-colour 'The Passover,' now in the Taylorian Museum at Oxford, and the two glass paintings and the altar panels at St. Martin's, Scarborough, are achievements worth noticing. In accounting for Rowley's share in various plays Mr. Seccombe pays rather too much attention to Mr. Fleay's opinions. The attempt to deprive Webster of all share in 'A Cure for a Cuckold' is more ingenious than convincing. Mr. Firth has produced a most scholarly article on the difficult subject of Prince Rupert. The only fault we have to find with it is a certain reluctance to come to definite conclusions about Rupert's failures as a naval commander. Prof. Laughton deals but ineffectively with the political career of Edward Russell, Earl of Orford. He was implicated, for one thing, in Fenwick's conspiracy, and, for another, his administration of the navy escaped censure by only a single vote. Prof. Laughton does not seem to be aware that Orford held the double appointment of First Lord of the Admiralty and Treasurer of the Navy, a combination obviously detrimental to the public service. John, Earl Russell, has secured in Mr. Fraser Rae a most capable biographer in brief. His Foreign Secretaryship under Lord Palmerston, with its "rich harvest of autumnal indiscretions," as Mr. Disraeli called it, is, however, slurred over rather disappointingly. We find not a word of his refusal to entertain Napoleon III.'s proposal for the summoning of a congress to reconsider the treaties of 1815, though it had not a little to do with the disinclination of France later on to intervene on behalf of the Danes. And somebody—presumably the editor—is to blame for the omission of Lord John's brother, the seventh Duke of Bedford, whose opinion was held in high regard by Whig Cabinets, and of whom Greville has left an elaborate portrait.

In vol. l., under the Ruthvens — the Earl and Master of Gowrie—Mr. Henderson investigates that most mysterious affair the Gowrie conspiracy. We agree with him that to exculpate Gowrie is not necessarily to inculpate King James. But surely the strongest argument against the king's having visited Perth to effect the assassination of the earl or his brother is his deficiency in personal courage. We always thought that sculpture was an art, but Mr. Lionel Cust talks of Rysbrack as retiring from business. A small omission at the beginning of the S's is Sabert, King of the East Saxons, and nephew of Ethelbert of Kent. Dr. Garnett asserts that Charles Sackville, Earl of Dorset, took no part in public affairs under William III. This is not quite correct; he was prominent during the debates on Fenwick's attainder. Mr. Warwick Wroth should have included among his authorities on John Sadleir the swindler Mr. D. Morier Evans's 'Facts, Frauds, and Failures,' which furnishes the most accessible account of him. And that reminds us: are not two other scoundrels, Roupell, and Redpath, the man who defrauded the Great Northern Railway, dead by this time? If so, the 'Dictionary' has overlooked them. Except for passing an irritating "Windham" for Wyndham (p. 135, col. 2), Mr. Leslie Stephen is to be congratulated on a most masterly study of Henry Saint John, Viscount Bolingbroke. We are heartily glad that he has disposed of the myths that have gathered round Bolingbroke's second retirement to France. Mr. Lee has acquitted himself well with the career of George Augustus Sala, which is out of his usual line. He does not seem to know, however, that much of Sala's apparent facility was due to laboriously kept commonplace books. Mr. Lyon should have given a reference to Dr. Johnson's last letter to Nichols under Sale the Orientalist, since it contains some exact information about his collaboration in the 'Universal History.' Col. Vetch appears to judge rather harshly Sir Robert Sale's decision in the first Afghan war not to advance on Kabul and so come to Elphinstone's rescue. The question of provisions was all-important with Sale, nor is there any reason to question his statement as to the insufficiency of his ammunition. The Rev. W. H. Hutton treats Archbishop Sancroft with a sympathy that never runs to partisanship; but a sentence or two as to the guiding principles of the archbishop's churchmanship would have made the article more intelligible. He was really consistent in his resistance both to James and William. Mr. Bagwell might have included Mr. C. T. Wilson's 'James II. and the Duke of Berwick' among the authorities on Patrick Sarsfield. A well-balanced criticism of Richard Savage, by Mr. Irving Carlyle, disposes conclusively of the Rivers parentage; his supposed identity with the Thales of Johnson's 'London' was, however, worth demolishing as well. George Savile, Marquis of Halifax, gets his full deserts from Mr. Seccombe; the article, indeed, is one of the most striking in the volume. The fundamentally republican spirit of Halifax's writings might have been insisted upon. Mr. Courtney should have referred to Sir Luke Schaub's services in the detection of the Atterbury plot. Finally, is not Mr. Sclater-Booth, afterwards Lord Basing, to be remembered as the minister at whose expense Lord Randolph Churchill first made a name in the House of Commons?

The Book of the Dry Fly. By G. A. B. Dewar. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

Except to trout anglers the title of this book must be full of mystery. It refers to the latest development of fly-fishing, which finds much favour with some as being the most scientific, and pleases young and active anglers, while elderly men for the most part cling to the lazy, but pleasant mode of using the wet fly as has been done from time immemorial. The dry-fly angler fishes with only one fly, and, having first noticed a good trout rising repeatedly in the same situation, endeavours to get as close to it as he conveniently can by crawling, hiding, and the like. Then he tries to drop his line as lightly as the traditional snow-flake just above the trout, so that it may float gently down to the fish. If this is skilfully done the trout may (or it may not) rise and take it. Generally speaking, however, the process is much more lengthy. The fly may stick on a bough above or a tuft of grass behind; the trout may distrust it and let it float on, or it may get wet and sink. This leads to troublesome work. It has to be dried again with extreme care, first, perhaps, in a handkerchief, then by flicking it lightly through the air, finally by dipping it in a bottle of paraffin, which for a time renders it buoyant. At length another attempt is made—again, it may be, with the same ill luck. Thus a man may literally besiege one trout for an hour or more, when it is evident that the style of angling approaches the old "dully sluggardized" style of worm-fishing, inasmuch as the fisherman cannot leave his position, which may be exceedingly constrained. At length, with good fortune as his ally, he may take late at night two or three brace home, but they will naturally be fine trout, for he would not waste his time in laying siege to smaller fish so laboriously.

In old days men were every now and then dry-fly fishers without knowing it, but the mystery has been systematized of late years. It is evident that many rivers and lochs are unsuited to its practice altogether. On the other hand, on such rivers as the Test, the Dove, the Derbyshire Wye, and other Midland streams, its use answers excellently to the angler's hopes. A plain man would perhaps decide that dry-fly fishing is more scientific, but ordinary old-fashioned fly-fishing infinitely more pleasant, and this may be said without prejudice to Mr. Dewar's book, which is carefully written and assiduously endeavours to teach the neophyte even the smallest points connected with the practice of this art. Rod, fly, action, choice of localities, all are made abundantly plain, and Mr. Dewar almost persuades the most inveterate disciple of the old style to become a dry-fly fisher, and than this no higher praise can be bestowed. The Marquis of Granby has supplied a preface, and Mr. J. E. Booth contributes a chapter on dry-fly fishing in Derbyshire; but they add nothing to the author's own maxims. Few treatises have as yet been written on this branch of angling. Mr. J. M. Halford has done more than almost any living authority to inculcate and popularize the practice, and with his book and the present volume on his shelves the angler may be confident that he possesses all the aid towards this style of angling that literature can offer.

Mr. Dewar begins by considering the reason for dry-fly fishing, and he thinks the best time from May onwards through the summer. It is of great importance not to be hurried in dry-fly fishing; indeed, it is delightful to a busy man to remark what an abundance of spare time apparently falls to the lot of its professor. The very difficulties of the art form its charm. Let a windless day be chosen, and "provided you can get the dry fly neatly to the trout, and provided the trout is feeding, you need not greatly concern yourself as to whether the light is dull or dazzling, as to whether the wind is east, north, south, or west."

The angler will note how this contradicts current belief, and even Mr. Dewar excepts days when a heavy, sad-coloured atmosphere prevails—days which Scotch gillies shake their heads at, and "dinna like." The aim of the dry-fly fisher is to secure large fish; but

Mr. Dewar's condemnation is surely a little summary when he speaks of "a number of sprats which only a snob keeps." If the size of takable fish is not laid down by fast rules, it is not ungentlemanly for an angler to keep the smaller fish he captures if he cares to do so. Some of the best paragraphs in the book teach how to fish "backwaters"; while the mysteries of "tailing," "bulging," and "smutting" fish are carefully treated and at some length. He describes in the steel rod with the line running through a small cavity inside it what seems a useful implement, though something of a novelty.

This will give some idea of the topics handled by Mr. Dewar. A whole chapter is devoted to "dibbing with the dry fly," hardly a pleasant mode of fishing. When a trout has been discovered feeding under closely overhanging boughs where it is impossible to throw a fly in the orthodox manner, the angler is bidden to crawl in as close to the fish as he can without being discovered. A very short line must now be used, say a foot of gut, which is usually the most that can conveniently be managed:—

"The rod has to be gently slid above, or beneath, or amongst, as the case may be, the herbage and bushes, till the top is over the trout. Then the rod is slowly lowered till the fly alights on the water. Sometimes the trout will wait for the fly in the orthodox manner, and suck it in quietly as it passes over his nose. At other times he will come to meet it impatient of the least delay, and in not a few cases I have known a good trout simply rush to his destruction, causing quite a commotion in the shallow water."

The angler's interest is much increased by his being generally able to see the procedure of the trout in this style of fishing. But it must involve many discomforts, the old-fashioned angler will think—wet, insects, heat, and a cramped posture.

Some of Mr. Dewar's maxims are valuable. Thus he tells his readers that when a thick mist rises from the water at nightfall fish at once cease rising, and he advises them only to use fancy flies when imitations of nature are of no avail. An interesting comparison is made, too, between the number of fish caught in the Test in the early part of the century by Col. Hawker and the bags of the present day. Nor is piscine psychology forgotten, as when Mr. Dewar discusses the problem whether fish gradually become "educated" through their own intelligence or by transmission from a long succession of ancestors which have been much harassed with artificial flies. Most men will agree with Prof. Romanes and Sir Herbert Maxwell that this singularly developed caution in many trout is wholly due to their own observation; but philosophical anglers can find few problems on which it is so pleasant to accumulate observations at the water-side.

These remarks will give a fair notion of the intention of Mr. Dewar's book. It is one of those delightful books which are best perused out of doors in the shade or during the mid-day halt by a trout stream. It is beautified by an etching of the head-waters of the Lea near Hatfield by Mr. Lewis Cohen, and by some admirable coloured plates, not only of artificial flies, but also of their living prototypes, to which no higher praise can be awarded than to say that they are worthy to be placed on the same shelf with Ronalds's 'Fly-fisher's Entomology.'

Philip and Alexander of Macedon. By D. G. Hogarth. (Murray.)

There is no living scholar whose contributions to ancient history are more welcome than those of Mr. Hogarth. He combines ease and learning, grace and erudition, in the presentment of his facts; he knows the value of personal inspection of sites; he can estimate the small value of mere commentators and mere students in comparison with travellers and explorers.

The subject he has chosen for his new volume is one of the most fascinating in all ancient history. Alexander's figure looms across the intervening centuries huge and dim through all the mists of fable and romance, and yet he has received—perhaps on account of his vastness—but scanty treatment from modern English scholars. Still less has he been handled in connexion with his great predecessor Philip. He was so eminently the starting-point of a new era that his sonship from Ammon seemed but a mythical expression of an historical fact. The empirical cause, to speak with Kant, of the great effect was human; the intelligible cause was divine. And consequently Grote was as little able to appreciate the supranatural close as the supernatural beginnings of Greek history.

But Mr. Hogarth well comprehends the passage from the talent of Philip to the genius of Alexander, or, if you will, from the genius of Philip to the inspiration of Alexander; and if the scholar cannot but quarrel here and there with his judgment in detail, there is a great body of acute observation, just inference, and picturesque narrative in this fascinating volume. Particularly good, for example, is his sketch of the policy of Demosthenes and of Athens in the conflict with Philip. He has taken up the moderate and practical standpoint which has gradually pervaded English criticism regarding this question for the last twenty-five years, in contrast to the learned but enthusiastic lucubrations of Schäfer and his school. He knows well that the patriot-knave is a type as real in ancient as in modern Greece; he knows how to admire the real patriotism, he knows how to censure the not less real knavery.

This excellent part of the book reconciles the reader with Mr. Hogarth's judgment after the rude shock received from the not very necessary digression upon Thebes, in the course of which he is told that "the Cadmeian characteristics are those of a conquering people of the East; both in war and peace they foreshadow those of the Ottoman Turk"! Whatever their prehistoric origin, Bœotia from Hesiod to Plutarch represents a Greek type not so much lower than the average Greek type as the Attic type was above it. One is tempted, in the face of such a judgment, not to take Mr. Hogarth quite seriously, and to suspect that his object is sometimes rather to surprise than to instruct. Indeed, it is to be feared that the facility and brilliancy of his style run away with him occasionally, and that in his horror of dulness he falls into the snares of petulance and of paradox. There are moments when he seems desirous of breaking down the barrier between history and journalism, and when he bustles and disconcerts the sober reader with both his want and his excess of dignity. Here is an example of the former. Alexander contracts an illness, "from which he was hard put to it to recover," and immediately after "the back of the revolt was broken finally." This is quite clear, but is it good enough for the subject and the writer? Here is an example of the latter: "Because his empire in no part, but the Indian, reverted to what it had been before him, he himself put on instant immortality as the political god of his legacy of kingdoms from the Oxus to the Nile." Is this clear? "They suffered sorely if the sea was kept for long together, for the boats were crank, needing frequently to be overhauled." Why should a boat because it is crank need frequent overhauling? It is, we know, subject to frequent upsetting. But these are trifles, nor would they be worth mentioning in any author of a lower calibre than Mr. Hogarth.

Turning to the substance of his book, we have nothing but admiration for the clear and convincing way in which he sketches the characters and the work of the two great kings. But in his next edition he might add some important traits to complete the picture. Although he has made a long and careful study of the composition of the Macedonian army, he is singularly meagre on the strategy, still more on the tactics, by which this army was led to victory. It is well known that Alexander won his battles with heavy cavalry and by flank attacks. Did Philip ever do so? The story of the battle of Chæronea being decided by the cavalry charge of the young Alexander, a boy of sixteen, is more than suspicious. It was the sort of invention that his flatterers would be sure to be guilty of. The remarkable analogy between Alexander's Companions and Cromwell's Ironsides should have been discussed, nor does Mr. Hogarth show any just appreciation of either the skill displayed in the battle of the Granicus or its important results. He regards it as a mere rush of horsemen through the stream, with the king as one of the foremost troopers. A study of Rüstow and Köchly's analysis will show any careful reader that this is but a sorry account. Not only were Alexander's tactics most ably thought out, but the problem to be solved was one of extreme importance. Was Alexander's new force of heavy cavalry (for with Philip it seems to have had no importance) a match for the famous horsemen of the Persians? The Greek cavalry was not. Unless, therefore, he could defeat the Persians with this arm, his success would be impossible.

Questions of strategy are too large for such a notice as this. We turn, therefore, to another point of contrast between the father and the son which was worth putting before readers. We have a genuine document under the name of Philip, his despatch to the Athenians, now to be found among the speeches of Demosthenes. We have also a couple of proclamations by Alexander. The contrast in style is most remarkable. While Philip's letter is up to the high level of the most polished Attic prose (cf. the analysis in Blass's 'Attic Eloquence'),

Alexander's letter to Darius is quite schoolboys' Greek. Even if neither of them actually perused his document, the secretary of Philip was evidently chosen with an appreciation of style quite different from that of his son. Philip was therefore no "rude Hellene" (p. 164), but trained to know the delicacies of Greek prose, and trained, too, among the "Turks of Hellas" at Thebes, far better than was his son at Mieza by Aristotle. The picture drawn by Æschines of Philip's urbanity is surely as trustworthy as the suggestion of Demosthenes that he was a boor, with but a superficial varnish of culture.

Most probably Philip was more nearly a Hellene than Alexander was, even in his youth, for with Alexander's progress he confessedly drifted away from that type. Yet even so, to speak of a certain sentiment of his as "not amounting to sin" is a phrase we should not have expected from Mr. Hogarth, for is it not doing what he himself cautions us against in very odd language (p. 262)—"a slippery matter, wherein the ethics of a later age are most apt to be substituted for the ethics of contemporaries"?

We will in conclusion present Mr. Hogarth with a few suggestions for his next edition. We know not eight but nine of the special bodyguards, or aides-de-camp (p. 21), for Ptolemy was appointed in place of a certain Demetrius. Antigonus was surely an abler general than Parmenio, and was a man far above the average. Philip did not enter his theatre "under a gateway," which would imply a Roman theatre, and not a Greek, which never had a covered entrance gate. Nor did the pursuers of Philip's murderer "pull him to his feet," which was quite unnecessary. Diodorus says he was just rising after his fall when they smote him. On the destruction of Tyre "the great trading area of the Levant was without focus." Has Mr. Hogarth forgotten Rhodes? Is Hellenisticism a proper word? Why not Hellenicism? We have only left ourselves space to commend for patience and sobriety the careful appendix on the chronology of Alexander's life.

The Student's Dictionary of Anglo-Saxon. By Henry Sweet. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

Dr. Sweet explains in his preface that this work was prepared by him at the request of the Delegates of the Clarendon Press to supply the want of an abridgment of Prof. Toller's still uncompleted edition of Bosworth's dictionary. "With a view to forestalling unauthorized abridgments," he was required to produce the book within a limited time, and he acknowledges that on this account he has been unable to render it as perfect as he would have desired. A scholar of Dr. Sweet's attainments, however, could not possibly content himself with merely epitomizing the Bosworth-Toller dictionary, which, in its earlier part, is notoriously incomplete and inaccurate. He has accordingly made large additions to the vocabulary, and corrected a great multitude of errors. There is no doubt that this 'Student's Dictionary' is by far the most trustworthy dictionary of the language that has yet been published. The only book which can for a moment be brought into comparison with it is the 'Concise Anglo-Saxon Dictionary,' published by Dr Clark Hall in 1894; but this, although greatly superior to any earlier work of the kind, unfortunately abounds in spurious words and erroneous forms and renderings, and is altogether on a lower level of workmanship than Dr. Sweet's dictionary.

The feature of this work that is most apparent at first sight is its extraordinary condensation. It contains only 215 pages, while Dr. Clark Hall's dictionary contains 376. This economy of space has been attained partly by the use of ingeniously devised abbreviations, such as "wg." for "with genitive," "waa." for "with double accusative," and so on. For these contrivances we have nothing but praise, as they involve no sacrifice of clearness, and have enabled the author to furnish a much larger amount of syntactical explanation than is ordinarily found in a dictionary of such moderate size. Another mode of saving space that has been adopted is the almost entire omission of references. Unfortunately this has been carried too far. The many words and senses not to be found in any other dictionary render the book indispensable to scholars; but the value of these additions is to some extent lost owing to the absence of any indication of the sources from which they are obtained. The existence of a masculine "eow," a sheep, for instance, is known to us from this dictionary only; the information is of considerable philological interest, but needs to be authenticated. In some cases Dr. Sweet has inserted words either without any explanation at all, or with an explanation which is marked as doubtful. If references had been added, these entries would have had their use; as things are, it is difficult to see why the words might not as well have been omitted altogether. It is to be hoped that the collections from which these words are taken will be made available for the supplement to Prof. Toller's dictionary. In the case of the more important words the absence of references is partly compensated for by the abundance of illustrative quotations, which add greatly to the value of the book. The etymological remarks are rigorously confined to the citation of cognate words in Anglo-Saxon itself and of the proximate source of borrowed words, all mention of cognate forms in other Germanic languages being excluded. A considerable amount of etymological knowledge is, however, conveyed indirectly by the diacritics attached to certain vowels. The correct placing of these marks must have cost the author a great deal of labour, which has been well bestowed. On the whole, Dr. Sweet's sparing introduction of etymology seems to be justifiable. Some scholars may think that the modern English forms of the words ought to have been cited; but young students are oftener hindered than helped in the understanding of Anglo-Saxon literature by the associations of the modern language. In this connexion it may be remarked that Dr. Sweet is the first among Anglo-Saxon lexicographers to adopt the rational principle of never giving an etymological equivalent as a rendering, unless it happens to be the most accurate expression that can be found for the meaning.

There are one or two peculiarities in Dr. Sweet's general method which call for some remark. The adoption of "early West Saxon" spelling in the catchwords has the consequence that a large proportion of words are entered under forms that do not occur at all, or occur very rarely, in the literature; and as few cross-references are given, the student has often to depend on his knowledge of the manner in which certain letters interchange, or to refer to the table of equivalent letters, in order to find a word in the dictionary. Whether Dr. Sweet has carried out his practice of normalization too consistently, and whether he should have given more cross-references, are questions which only long experience in using the book can decide. It is not likely, however, that the method followed will cause any great difficulty to students who have worked their way through Dr. Sweet's own 'Reader.' To give a cross-reference wherever a y is used for ie or i would, of course, require a great deal of additional space, and it is not a good thing to accustom a learner to be too dependent on assistance of this kind. The two regular deviations from alphabetical order that are mentioned in the preface—the grouping of compounds under their first element, and the placing of the words with the prefix ge- after the simple words from which they are formed—are entirely commendable; but Dr. Sweet omits to call attention to a third peculiarity of his arrangement, which may at first give some trouble. The endings of the infinitive, -n, -an, -ian, are treated as non-existent for the purpose of alphabetical sequence, so that tȳn comes before tȳdrian, and āscian before āscacan. The rule has some exceptions in the case of verbs of nominal derivation; wilcumian, for example, follows wilcuma. There may be some good reason which we have not discovered for this departure from the usual practice of dictionaries, and when it is once understood it will cause no embarrassment; but it ought surely to have been explained beforehand.

The first edition of any original dictionary, however great a degree of scholarship and diligence has been employed in its preparation, is almost sure to contain a considerable number of errors. The mistakes which we have been able to discover in Dr. Sweet's work are, however, surprisingly few. The sense of "medicine" assigned to lāc has, we believe, been shown by Prof. Napier to be evolved from an abbreviated gloss. The rendering "everlasting" for the plant-name efelāste seems to be a mistaken guess of Cockayne's, based on the accidental similarity of sound. Fealufor can hardly be "field-fare"; the Latin words corresponding to it in various glossaries seem to indicate some very different bird. Under gehþu there is a cross-reference to geohþu, but the word has been omitted in its proper place. The singular of geleoso is given as gelise, and marked with a star as not extant. It occurs, however, as gelis in the 'Epistola Alexandri.' The derivation of gēol, geohhol (Yule), from the Latin Julius seems quite impossible for several reasons. The word forwēned (insolens), which is in this as in all other dictionaries marked with a long vowel, should, we think, be read forwened, and connected with wenian instead of with wēn.

The connexion of æbere (æ long) with āberan can hardly be maintained in the face of the Old Frisian form, which Van Helten seems to have explained satisfactorily. The assumption of an unrecorded "gyrle, maiden" (= girl?), to explain the gloss "gyrlgyden, Vesta," seems to be without justification. We suspect that Vesta was connected by pseudo-etymology with vestire, and that the first element is to be referred to gierla, clothing. Foxesglofe, foxglove, should probably be foxes glōf, as the recorded form foxes glōfa may very well be plural. There is, we believe, no evidence for the form forca, a fork, though it is given in all dictionaries. The recorded form is force (feminine). We have noted a few other oversights, but they are still more trivial than those which have been mentioned. Very probably there may be many more points in which Dr. Sweet's work will hereafter be found to admit of improvement; but it is quite safe to say that 'The Student's Dictionary of Anglo-Saxon' is worthy of the distinguished reputation of its author.

NEW NOVELS.

The Dagger and the Cross. By Joseph Hatton. (Hutchinson & Co.)

Mr. Hatton's new novel might be described as the story of Faust and Margarita, where Mephistopheles takes the part of Faust. It is a highly sensational and effective tragedy, and ends in the marriage of Margarita and Valentine, though not before Mephistopheles has deceived the heroine with a mock marriage. The scene is near the Peak of Derbyshire, the time is the first decade of the reign (de facto) of Charles II., and the plot is based on the visit of a party of Venetians to the Derbyshire village of Eyam. The great plague of 1665–6 does much to simplify the situation. As a whole, Mr. Hatton's novel suggests that it has been put together rather for dramatic than literary presentment. If the reader surmounts the initial difficulty of assimilating a group of foreigners with the life of a secluded English village in the seventeenth century, he will find no obstacle to his appreciation of the story. It will take its place among the many historical romances of the day, not, perhaps, as the best among them, but certainly as a painstaking work which often involves brilliant and dramatic situations.

Mr. Blake, of Newmarket. By Edward H. Cooper. (Heinemann.)

This is, of course, a story of horse-racing and gambling, and the covers of the single volume are disfigured — intentionally, no doubt—by a bit of coarse, vulgar, offensive illustration, which is eminently appropriate to the subject. The author, though evidently well acquainted with all the sordid details of the life which it is his main purpose to depict, equally evidently has a supreme and praiseworthy contempt for them; he discloses sentiments which are extremely creditable to him; and he displays sometimes a graphic power, occasionally a tenderness, always an appreciation of rural scenery and domestic interest, and, here and there, a refinement of feeling far above the level of the topics with which he is concerned in the main. He describes the rapid descent to Avernus of his titular hero, Mr. Blake, of Newmarket, a young gentleman who, having inherited a good estate, proceeds to ruin himself after the fashion of the notorious Mr. Benzon, commonly called "the plunger"; and the doings of what is known among the initiated as "the jockey ring," an association of rascals, jockeys and trainers, who are or were—for the gang, if it ever existed, is understood to have been broken up—supposed to decide among themselves by what nefarious means the races in which they may or might be engaged shall or should be won. All this is commonplace enough; but the way in which Mr. Blake accomplishes, or bids fair to accomplish, the admittedly difficult task of retracing his steps and emerging into the upper air is connected with a little episode of true love, to which a similar remark does not apply. So preponderant, however, are the horse-racing and the gambling, that the tale is unlikely to have much attraction for readers who care for none of such things. It is to be regretted, moreover, that the writer, instead of serving up afresh a dish with which we are all familiar, did not think it worth his while to show up the mischief done by the professional bettor, against whom there seems a chance that an Act long unheeded may be at last enforced. You cannot stop betting, say the illogical advocates of the ring; no, and you cannot stop disease; but you can, and you do, take measures against it. You do not say, We cannot stop glanders, so let it have its fling within a certain area; nay, let us facilitate it even, within that circuit.

The Knight's Tale. By F. Emily Phillips. (Blackwood & Sons.)

Miss Phillips has probably in the past been rebuked for diffuseness, and, consequently, in her new story she errs in the other direction. 'The Knight's Tale' has, we should say, been so severely pruned that it is quite difficult to follow the author's exact meaning or to get a clear grasp of her characters in their relation to one another. In the same way her sentences are often concise to a point where they become unintelligible. We quarrel with her further for an obvious effort to substitute a literal translation from the French for her own good English, merely because she writes mainly of French people and lays her plot in Paris. But these criticisms apart, the story is a good one—and they would not be worth making were it otherwise—and full of still better intentions. It is not easy to understand the exact nature of Veronica's feeling for the young Communist, nor where he allows his love for her to dominate that for his cause; while Cosmo Lindsay, though he plays an important part, remains to the end an enigma. None the less is the picture of Paris during the Commune, of her utter demoralization after the siege, admirably presented to us. Veronica's rescue of her lover claims our absorbed attention, and an excellent point is made in her defence of him to his party at the sacrifice of her personal reputation. There is scarcely a pleasant person in the book, yet it is interesting, occasionally thrilling, and we close it with the hope that the author will eventually do herself fuller justice.

A Pot of Honey. By Susan Christian. (Fisher Unwin.)

With more literary skill and less study of Mr. George Meredith in his more cryptic moods, 'A Pot of Honey' would be a good novel. It is difficult to say as much as this in favour of a book when its faults are so numerous and obvious; but the reader's view will be favourably affected by some excellent chapters towards the end of the volume, where the scene is laid in Malta. It would have been easy, and much to the advantage of the volume, to avoid such phrases as a "gratulatory publisher," "the air of being inevitably like a nice mother," "public-houses were numerously gorgeous"; and such a verbal puzzle as this, "The hardiest virtue she practised was, perhaps, a humble toleration for his smiling tolerance of her sometimes fantastic evasion of social duties." With all its disadvantages, the book is the outcome of a clever mind.

Broken Away. By Beatrice Ethel Grimshaw (Lane.)

It is not easy to write a novel which deals with so-called great novelists and their works. Mr. Henry James has done so successfully in his 'Lesson of the Master,' but B. E. Grimshaw's story cannot be strongly commended. She deals with two would-be eminent writers, of one of whom it is said "there was a nasty little twist" in his character, and he is shortly afterwards found to be suffering from homicidal mania. The reader is inclined to smile when he is told that "a handsome woman is a handsome woman always, unless that fatal enemy of beauty, accumulating flesh, steps in." The book is the result of a painstaking effort, and contains some very good passages; but it is not very interesting or attractive.

In a Country Town. By Honor Perceval. (Bentley & Son.)

Miss Brunhild Fayne is the subject of this story; and there is sad trouble because she is in two minds on the subject of marriage. She derives much consolation from nursing a child whom she imagines to be the illegitimate offspring of one of her admirers; while another of her friends, a baronet, marries a girl who is afflicted with a painful habit of telling lies. However, the baronet and Miss Fayne arrive at an understanding which is not the least unsatisfactory portion of the story. There is no conspicuous merit in the book; it is best calculated to please young ladies who are not yet "out." Its moral lessons are quite obvious and unexceptionable.

The Kestyns of Cather Castle. By Robey F. Eldridge. (Digby, Long & Co.)

This is a tale of youth and love, but there is neither laugh nor smile from gloomy cover to gloomy cover. The shadows of fate hang black round the ill-omened family of Kestyn; portents, and omens, and prophecies all conspire to its undoing. It is a very, very long book, all written with the heart's blood, and with the sad result that it is wearisome and fatiguing. Not that there are not good ideas in it—there are many; but the writer does not know how to write a novel—does not even appear to know that there is an art of storytelling. It is a long, diffuse, badly written tale, without construction of any sort, without charm, without light and shadow. Yet these gloomy Kestyns have a certain life and personality. The wretched Netta is far from being a badly conceived character, and in the hands of a master this hag-ridden, unhappy girl might have appeared a fine creation. But in these days it is rare to find a tale told so drearily, and we fear that few will be the high-couraged readers who will follow the family of Kestyn through 510 closely printed pages. Yet the book is not common; it shows no facility, but it has something in it; only we question whether the thoughtfulness and observation which make that something are wisely spent in writing tales. Books such as this drain the vitality of the writer, and only when he has genius can they bring him any compensation. Worse books may have success; this and its like are doomed to failure, for such merits as they have are buried under a mountain of cumbrous verbosity, and the thought, care, industry, and perseverance lavished on them could hardly be less profitably employed. 'The Kestyns of Cather Castle' is the strongest argument we have met in favour of a school of fiction. It is grievous to feel how utterly and completely it has failed through the author's ignorance of the first principles of his craft.

EDUCATIONAL LITERATURE.

In The Foundations of Success: a Plea for Rational Education (Philip & Son) Mr. S. de Brath shows that he has carefully studied the varying successes achieved by our nation and others in the struggle for commercial existence and progress. "A successful nation," he tells us, "is made up of successful units"; it follows, therefore, that the nation which produces the largest proportion of really successful units will in the long run gain and retain the greatest prosperity. But the production of successful units in any nation depends upon the system of national education; and the consideration of national education and the endeavour to find a scientific foundation for it have resulted in the publication of this volume, which is issued at an opportune moment, and which will be read with interest and profit by all whose thoughts are occupied with the physical, intellectual, and moral training and equipment of the youth of our time. It may be that some will object to Mr. de Brath's teaching as resting on a basis almost entirely physical and material. But for our own part we think that in showing that sound and serviceable education must harmonize with what, for lack of a better term, we call natural law, the author indicates a foundation on which teaching can securely rest. Education is shown to be (and it is interesting to see how this accords with the derivation of the word) "the provision of such an environment as will favour the ethical process in the fullest application of that term." Mr. de Brath rapidly sketches the general forward movement of the human race, and tells us that as "it is environment that has produced variations in the past, as it is to it that the horticulturist and the stock-breeder look to produce those at which they aim; so to it, and not to mere didactics, must the educator look for his results also." To environment we are to look for the development of character and of intellect. The individuals in a successful nation must be highly developed in both; but in the rivalries between nations, character is of the two perhaps the more valuable. Both character and intellect will be stunted if the body is subjected during childhood and youth to conditions in which the laws of nutrition and growth are unheeded. Personal hygiene and the priceless value of a healthy habit of body are insisted on; consideration of manliness and health in our schools leads Mr. de Brath to speak in sad seriousness of the terrible effects of ill-regulated, unchecked bodily appetites. From the department of education which is mainly hygienic, physical, and incidentally moral, the author turns to purely mental education. He treats of the unended and seemingly unending contention between Formalists and Realists; divides the subjects of education into two groups, one pertaining to the life of man, the other to the life of nature; and shows not only that both groups are indispensable in a scheme of liberal education, but that there is time for both in ordinary school life. Interesting specimen-schemes of the occupation of a typical school day and of the arrangement of subjects in a typical day's work are supplied, and much useful and suggestive matter is added concerning method and kindred topics. The volume closes with a practical proposal which Mr. de Brath is willing "to take a share in carrying out." He proposes to form an association for starting and conducting a school in which boys shall be educated (at a reasonable cost) in accordance with the principles stated and explained in his work.

The scope of Messrs. Cox and Macdonald's suggestions in Practical School Method (Blackie & Son) embraces the curriculum of the majority of our public elementary schools — obligatory subjects, class subjects, object lessons, music, drill, and suitable occupations. Specific subjects are not treated, except incidentally. Most of the chapters are the outcome of experience and observation in the school and class room, and will be studied with advantage by the young teacher or pupil-teacher. But the first two, devoted respectively to the consideration of the "child" and the "teacher," seem to be of less value, as they take the reader into the rarefied atmosphere of pedagogy, so dear to the heart of the certificated teacher. On the first page of the work we are brought to bay as it were by the conundrum, "What is education?" The answer is depressing: "Education is the term used to describe the work of the teacher"; but its meagreness is more or less eked out by a cumbrous passage from the report of the Royal Commission on Secondary Education. Perhaps the student will do well to hurry forward to the chapters devoted to practical school management and class teaching. He may, however, note in passing the very sensible remark that "the ideal teacher is wise rather than learned; a man more than a scholar"; and he will regretfully admit that most of the schoolmasters he knows differ greatly from the ideal one. The candidate for a queen's scholarship will learn much from the chapters devoted to "the class" and to "notes of lessons," and he will appreciate the extreme difficulty of writing really accurate notes of lessons, for he will find the authors sometimes falling into error, as when, in outlining a lesson on "the square," they are satisfied with the statement that this figure has four sides of equal length and four corners. The suggestions thrown out for the right teaching of reading, writing, and arithmetic will prove valuable and helpful to the young teacher. It is pleasant to find in the discussion of the practical work of teaching that Messrs. Cox and Macdonald do not approve the present publishers' craze for the foolish and ungainly systems of vertical handwriting which disfigure so many copybooks; they say, "Writing with a slight slope is more graceful, and is done with greater ease and rapidity." There are few (if any) subjects, outside the group of obligatory elementary ones, of greater educational value than object lessons and geography. These subjects and the methods of teaching them are well and thoughtfully treated. Hand and eye training is not yet introduced into the compulsory curriculum of our elementary instruction, but it would be well for our growing boys and girls if a place could be found for it in all schools, without overburdening the schoolmasters and schoolmistresses whose lives are already in many cases sufficiently laborious. The advantage of this department of school work is pointed out, and hints are supplied for rendering manual training efficient. Every chapter is followed by a number of "Government questions," and one appendix consists of model answers to a queen's scholarship examination paper in school management, so that the book is made as useful as may be to young teachers; and it fulfils its purpose as a practical guide to them, "both in their preparations for examination in school management and practical teaching, and also in the daily routine work of the schoolroom."

TALES OF ADVENTURE.

When Captain Castle: a Tale of the China Seas, by Mr. Carlton Dawe (Smith, Elder & Co.), opens, his hero is represented as seeking employment on board one of the merchant steamers sailing from Hongkong. He takes service as second mate on board the Corea, commanded by Capt. Castle, who possesses all the qualities of a hardened scoundrel except courage. On shore he posed as a cynical dandy, and on board his ship he proved to be a drunken ruffian. The officers, with the exception of the hero, were sufficiently sycophantic to please him, and over them and his crew he ruled with a rod of iron. To the astonishment of all the ship's company, just before they sailed he introduced to them his newly wedded bride. It is needless to say that this lady was perfectly beautiful, generous, high-souled, and fearless. Having married in haste, she soon found occasion to regret her choice, and the more disgusted she became with her husband, the more she found a congenial companion in the hero. With these materials to hand, and the addition of a cargo of piratical Chinese passengers, there is plainly the making of a very pretty romance, and the ship has not been long at sea when adventures come thick and fast, beginning with a mutiny of the Chinese and various attempts to seize the vessel. At last Mr. Dawe becomes evidently puzzled to know how to clear the stage, and he chooses a short and decisive method for effecting the transformation. Cholera breaks out. First of all the captain's wife dies almost in the hero's arms. The captain follows next, then the engineer and the first mate, leaving only the hero and the second engineer to represent the officers. There is now nothing for it but to take the ship into port, and the adventures being over, a coaster bears down upon her, and safely tows "her into the Port of Samarang." Those who like to sup their fill of horrors will find abundance in this work to satisfy them.

Mr. Opie Read is pre-eminently a man of action, action of an out-of-door stirring character, which in The Jucklins (Black), the scene being laid principally in North Carolina, consists largely of shooting, incendiaries, fisticuff encounters, and almost a hanging. In the South human emotions, whether they be of love or hate, are expressed in a primitive and straightforward manner. The two young men mostly concerned are simple and manly, but the one who tells the story has a tendency to the use of stilted language, and they are indeed both at their best when actively employed. The girls, as might be expected from such a virile pen, are less satisfactory. The author presents them to the reader entirely from the exterior. It is in his studies of older folk, and especially of Limuel Jucklin and his wife, that he achieves his greatest success as a portrayer of character. Mr. Jucklin, who swears by the Book "kiver to kiver," but in the crises of life finds his best support in cockfighting, is only equalled in excellence by the woman who in patient suffering is worthy of the "stock that stood at the stake."

The mutual though undemonstrative devotion of this old couple is touched with rare delicacy, and adds no little to the interest and entertainment of a book which has the further merit of a happy conclusion.

The demand for tales of military adventure is daily increasing, and there seems to be no failure in the supply. The most attractive of such stories are those which are purely military, not mixed up, as are some of Grant's, with stories of second-rate society, and not too long. Barrack and Battlefield: Tales of the Service at Home and Abroad, by Mr. W. Wood (Hurst & Blackett), is of this description, and some of his tales are truly stirring, while two or three are really touching. The author evidently understands and sympathizes with soldiers, and his productions will, therefore, be popular among the military, while the human nature in them will make them attractive to civilians. The most pathetic of the stories, 'The Shot of Honour,' relates how a nice young fellow, very good at the theory of his profession, but morally and physically unfit for a soldier's life, was forced by his father to accept a commission. One of the captains took a fancy to the boy, who, in spite of being a milksop, was liked among his comrades, and apparently escaped practical jokes. Barton—that was the name of the captain—tried his very best by kindly admonition to make a man of the lad, who one day volunteered the following confession: "If I were ordered away with the regiment on active service, I'd move heaven and earth to get out of the miserable business." The moment of trial comes, and proves that the poor lad is an irredeemable poltroon. Another story, of a similar character, but with a different ending, shows how peril brought out the best qualities of a young officer who appeared to be destitute of any military aptitude.

Mr. Egerton R. Young's Three Boys in the Wild North Land (Ward & Downey) will prove of absorbing interest to all young lovers of adventure. The hunting-lodge of Sagastaweekee, on the Nelson river, where the missionary, Mr. Ross, entertains the English, Scotch, and Irish trio of explorers, is the basis of innumerable expeditions, productive of divers stirring incidents with wolf and bear, moose and elk and reindeer. The "tallest" story is that of the children captured by bears, and retained as berry-pickers for their playmates the cubs. On the whole, the book gives a pleasant picture of life in the old Hudson Bay territories, not the less that justice is done to our generally good relations with the Indians. It is rather hard on that gallant explorer Dr. John Rae that his name should be spelt wrong in a book so much connected with the field of his labours.

THE HISTORY OF CANADA.

Canada has been added to the "Story of the Nations" Series (Fisher Unwin), and Dr. J. G. Bourinot, who is the author of the volume, has done justice to his subject. The history of Canada in a full and final form has been undertaken by Dr. Kingsford, and the eight volumes which have appeared are rightly included by Dr. Bourinot, with commendation, among his authorities. To condense the story, and tell it well within the space assigned to him, was Dr. Bourinot's task, and his execution of it is highly praiseworthy. He necessarily confines himself to narrate in greatest detail the events which passed in the eastern part of Canada and on the Atlantic seaboard. Like other writers, he gives striking pictures of the physical conformation of the country, of its varied and beautiful flora, of its picturesque and wonderful scenery; but he never refers to the existence of mosquitoes, black flies, and sand flies, which in Canada, as in the United States, from the Atlantic to the Pacific, detract greatly from the enjoyment of life. He is somewhat rash in accepting the story of Verrazano, a Florentine, who was commissioned by Francis I. to go on a voyage of discovery. Verrazano is correctly styled "a well-known corsair"; Dr. Bourinot should have added, "and romancer." Due notice is taken of the interesting fact that the settlers in Upper Canada who redeemed it from the wilderness were Americans expelled or compelled to flee from their native country, their descendants glorying in the appellation of United Empire Loyalists. The name of Denison, one of the most famous, is strangely omitted from the list of those in Ontario, a member of that family, Col. G. T. Denison, having carried off the prize offered by the Government of Russia for the best history of cavalry. It is noteworthy that Cunard, the founder of the fleet which bears his name, who has helped to link America with England, was a descendant of a loyalist who sought refuge in Nova Scotia from the tyranny of republican New Englanders. We have noticed a few slips. The author has written at p. 213 of the "duchy" instead of kingdom of Bohemia; and also at p. 203 he has put "St. John" instead of St. Johns.

The History of Canada, by Dr. Kingsford (Toronto, Rowsell & Hutchinson; London, Kegan Paul & Co.), of which the eighth volume has now appeared, deals with the period between 1808 and 1815. The story of the war which the United States declared against Great Britain in 1812 is told in a judicial spirit by Dr. Kingsford. Before the United States had resolved to fight, the chief grievance had been removed by the revocation of the Orders in Council issued by our Government. Yet hostilities were not abandoned because the conquest of Canada was the real object, and Henry Clay, whose fiery spirit animated his country to declare war, had predicted a triumphant march through Canada and the dictation of peace at Halifax. Dr. Kingsford makes it clear how determined the Canadians were to preserve the form of government which they preferred, and how valiantly the descendants of the United Empire Loyalists fought for the homes which their fathers had formed in the land of their adoption. A less brave and united people than the inhabitants of Upper Canada would have succumbed to the attack of so powerful an assailant. Much of the existing antagonism between Canada and the United States is a legacy of the cruel and wanton war of 1812. It cannot be denied that the burning of the Capitol at Washington by the British troops was an act of vandalism; but the descendants of those who burnt the Legislative Chambers and the library at York, the capital of Upper Canada, now better known as Toronto, the capital of Ontario, are not the persons by whose tongues or pens condemnation should be uncompromisingly expressed. On the whole, we congratulate Dr. Kingsford on his success, and we hope he may receive at the hands of his countrymen a substantial recognition of it. The opinion that we have before expressed about the work may be repeated after perusing this volume: it is a standard one, and deserves a place in all good libraries.

The Bishops of the Church of England in Canada and Newfoundland (London, 'Church Bells'; Toronto, F. N. W. Brown) is a work in which Canon Mockridge, of St. Alban's Cathedral, Toronto, has collected materials for a history of the Church of England in Canada. The Puritans who left England and settled in America did so to escape from the tyranny of the bishops; the members of the Church of England who fled to Canada and settled there after the thirteen American colonies had declared their independence did so because they found the tyranny intolerable of those who maintained that "all men were created equal," and are endowed by their Creator with an inalienable right to "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness." Dr. Inglis, the first Protestant bishop in Canada, was assistant minister of Trinity Church, New York, and when Washington occupied that city before the Declaration of Independence, he sent a message to the effect that he purposed attending service, and that he desired the omission of the State prayers. Mr. Inglis declined to omit them, nor did he yield on another Sunday, even when a company of soldiers was sent to church to carry out the threat to shoot him. Historically, the separation between Church and State in 1857 was the most important event concerning the Episcopal Church in Canada. Dr. Mockridge admits that on this occasion the Church "did not suffer an absolute loss." The Canadian bishops are now elected by the Synods, in which the clergy and laity meet and act together. Some interesting details are furnished of the several bishops, the last of them being the third Bishop of Niagara, who was elected in May, 1896. Portraits of them are inserted, and the woodcuts of churches and other buildings in olden days are curious and instructive.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Messrs. Chapman & Hall publish The Sultan and his Subjects, in two volumes, by Mr. Richard Davey, an entertaining book of gossip on the Ottoman Court, which we are carefully taught by Mr. Davey not to allude to as Turkish, unless we mean to be—what most Englishmen at present are to the Sultan—disagreeable. Among the stories in this readable book, intended rather for the general public than for specialists, are anecdotes of De Tott and his scheme, and plans for piercing the Isthmus of Suez. The author does not go on to explain the extent to which De Tott's 'Memoirs' form a base for the last part of the adventures of Baron Munchausen. Munchausen in the English part, added, we believe, at the end of the last century, succeeds where Lesseps afterwards failed, and fails where he succeeded. He easily pierces Panama, attempts to carry out De Tott's plan at Suez, and, even by his own admission, hopelessly breaks down. A good many holes might be picked in Mr. Davey's work, but they do not affect its interest. He protests against the popular belief that people are obliged as a sign of respect to take off their shoes before entering mosques, and puts the obligation only upon cleanliness; but the two things are connected, and undoubtedly in some parts of the East respect is the first consideration. This extends beyond the Mohammedan world, and is exacted with extreme attention and with British official recognition in many non-Mohammedan religious buildings in India, such, for example, as the Golden Temple of the Sikhs at Amritzar. Our author explains why clocks and those who set them play a great part in mosques, but he does not exactly give the simplest explanation of Turkish time. The Turkish day of a fixed number of hours begins, all the year round, at sunrise, and ends at sunset, and therefore the length of the hours changes every day, and fixed time-tables denoted by figures of the watch become impossible, or, if they are to have meaning, the watches must be reset every day at least. In Constantinople, where trains and steamboats have to start to time-table hours, the most extraordinary confusion results, for it is found impossible in practice to keep everybody right every day to Turkish time, and a conventional time has sprung up, by which the alterations are made every three or four days in a little jump. There is one clock in the world constructed, at enormous cost, to keep Turkish time; but unfortunately it will no longer go. Another difficulty is that, as the population take their notion of sunrise from the gun-fire or the bugle call which proclaims it, and as this takes place according to the local actual rising of the sun, and not its computed rising, if a big mountain intervenes, as is frequently the case in the Turkish Empire, the time at one village is wholly different from that a short way off.

For example, at Lord Salisbury's house at Beaulieu the Turkish day in winter would end shortly after 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and at a place hard by would end at 4 o'clock. It is an exaggeration to say that "the opium eater soon passes away." Some of the best native troops in India, such as our crack Sikhs, are heavy opium eaters, and do not pass away until the normal age. The author is not particularly accurate in his use of foreign languages and in his spelling of names, and the family name of the Empress Josephine and other names are wrongly printed, as well as the title of a French newspaper published in Constantinople. The account of Princess Nasli (whose name the author gives as "Nazāli," contrary to the customary pronunciation) is not exactly accurate. He seems to think that this Egyptian princess and Turkish lady waited for the British rule in order to live like a European, and that her expulsion from Constantinople was the result. This is not so. The Princess's mode of life has not altered since the British occupation. She lives as a European in fact, but keeps up Turkish forms for the public, and the order for her expulsion from her Constantinople summer palace, though issued for other reasons, was not at the time carried into effect.

Mr. St. Loe Strachey is evidently an able journalist, but he does not in his volume From Grave to Gay, which Messrs. Smith & Elder publish, show a similar capacity for writing a book. There is hardly one of these articles which has really body enough for reproduction in this more permanent form; and by this criticism it is not meant to imply that the papers are not solid; quite the contrary, they are sometimes even stodgy. There is nothing to complain of if an article in a newspaper is somewhat crude and undigested; it is necessarily written in a hurry and is generally read in a hurry, and as long as it suggests some idea or raises a problem it is perhaps all that can be legitimately demanded of it. But in a book, which by its form seems to postulate a more deliberate perusal, something more measured and complete is required. These essays, as the title of the book implies, are partly on serious subjects and partly on trifles, and it must be confessed that the general impression of the book is that the author is ponderous on the trifles and superficial on the more serious matters. The subjects of the "grave" essays sound most promising; 'Tasting Life,' 'The Dread of Thought,' 'The Magic of Words,' 'The Melody of Prose,' for example, are all subjects well worth writing and thinking about; but beyond the suggestion of the subject Mr. Strachey gives very little more. He enunciates, for instance, the perfectly obvious truth that people would employ their time much better in the railway train in thinking than in drenching their minds with Tit-Bits or Snippets; but that is a thought which has occurred to most people, and Mr. Strachey hardly does anything to raise it above a commonplace. Again, his essay on the melody of prose is really little more than a collection of undoubtedly fine excerpts from some of the best English prose-writers. There is one notable omission, however, in this essay: it seems hardly possible to think of modern English prose-writers without an allusion to Meredith; certainly no other living writer has reached such perfect effects in the most direct way as the writer of a passage like this, to take but one example:—

"The sweet heaven bird shivered out his song above him, the gracious glory of heaven fell upon his soul, he touched her hand, not moving his eyes from her, nor speaking, and she with a soft word of farewell passed across the stile and up the pathway, through the dewy shades of the copse, and out of the arch of the light away from his eyes."

The essays on which Mr. Strachey states that he chiefly relies for appreciation are the series on 'The Puritans,' and they certainly are the best in the book. He has in them something definite to say; he is enthusiastic about his subject, and, at least in the essay on Cromwell, he communicates some of his enthusiasm to the reader. He devotes himself chiefly in this to bringing out the human aspect of Cromwell—the tenderness and the wisdom, the noble pride and the toleration; and he elaborates his idea of him as the finest type of Englishman; in fact, he succeeds in presenting him as a man proud of himself and of whom Englishmen may be proud. The other essays on the Puritans are slighter, and, except for the amusing sketch of Tom Verney, not very interesting. The essay on Pepys, for example, appears to be hardly well thought out; such denunciation of his hypocrisy seems excessive and ill-grounded. For if Mr. Strachey accepts without demur Pepys's own statement of his meannesses, why should he reject as hypocritical and nauseous every exhibition of penitence and of higher sentiments? They were no more meant to be paraded before the world than his meannesses, and are probably just as real. Man is not a simple creature, merely bad or merely good. As for the "gay" studies, the less said about them the better. They certainly do not tend to gaiety, rather to depression; they deal with a heavy hand with such subjects as 'The Society Boarder,' 'Grave Jocularities,' 'A Perfect Lady' (what does the cook mean when she uses that expression?), and so on.

R. H. Sherard's articles on the worst sides of underpaid labour in dangerous or unhealthy trades are republished in book form, under the title The White Slaves of England, by Mr. James Bowden. The articles have been the subject of fierce controversy, and the author slightly damaged the strength of his case by some overstatement upon a few not particularly material points, and was further damaged by the sensational reproductions of one of the illustrations, for which he has stated that he, personally, was not responsible, and which is not in the book. It was a highly indecent picture of a beautiful woman working, stripped to the waist, in woolcombing at Bradford; and its insertion in the illustrated periodical in which the article appeared, and its reproduction in other similar publications, when it was impossible to substantiate the facts, did great harm to a good cause. In the volume there is a certain exaggeration of the facts as to foreign Jew labour, which is to be regretted. For instance, we are told that in a single provincial town there are 1,000 Jew families engaged in the slipper trade, and 4,000 Jew families engaged in the tailoring trade. At the ordinary calculation of five persons to a family this means 25,000 Jews supported by these two trades alone in one town. Now the Board of Trade figures and the detailed reports which have been made by special inspectors show that these numbers do not exist. Otherwise there is far too much truth in the account given of the wretched position of the white-lead workers and of some of the other classes alluded to in the book.

It is difficult to decide whether Mr. L. Housman's volume of prose, Gods and their Makers (Lane), is a novel or not. It reads like an allegory, and as such the author must have been at some pains to spin out the narrative until it filled a volume. Children in an age when society was in its infancy construct dolls and call them gods, thereby incurring the wrath of the priesthood, and the adventures of the children form the main subject of the volume. In a so-called preface Mr. Housman speaks of the "power" which the story possesses of "cajoling to laughter." We do not see any reason why the story, though carefully and often cleverly written, should cause laughter, for it possesses a very elementary sense of wit or humour. This fact, however, need not prevent the reader from recognizing the literary merits of the volume.

The preliminary report of the Council of Administration of the Ottoman Public Debt for the year 1896 7, or Turkish year 1312, is published by the Council, with a preface by Sir Vincent Caillard, president for the year. It shows that the year was a record one as regards the yield of the Turkish taxes, although the partial default of the Bulgarian Government in paying the Eastern Roumelia annuity caused a falling off in the total figures as compared with the previous year. The general behaviour of the staff is referred to with high praise, as proving what excellent officials Turks are if only paid and justly treated.

A numero unico which is really unique has just been issued in Rome on behalf of the charitable association Carità e Lavoro, under the presidency of Princess Pallavicini. It is a large folio of forty-six pages, containing poems, articles, pictures, music, and facsimiles by writers, artists, and musicians of many countries; the text is in Italian, French, English, German, Norwegian, and Hungarian. Among the contributors are MM. François Coppée, J. K. Huysmans, Gabriele d'Annunzio, Paul Bourget, Anatole France, Stecchetti, and Maeterlinck, and Count Primoli; among the English names are those of Mr. Alfred Austin, Dr. Garnett, Vernon Lee, Mr. W. B. Yeats, and Mr. Arthur Symons. There are pictures by Sir E. Burne-Jones, M. Puvis de Chavannes, Mr. Alma Tadema, M. J. E. Blanche, Mrs. Stillman, M. Hébert, Herr Uhde, and Gyp; and there is an admirable reproduction in photogravure, hors texte, of the picture known as 'La Derelitta,' belonging to Prince Pallavicini, and by some attributed to Botticelli, which is described in M. Zola's 'Rome.' There are also reproductions of drawings by the German Emperor, the King of Portugal, the Princess Victoria, and the Princess Mathilde. The number, which is called Roma, and is published at six francs, can be obtained from the depôt of the Committee, 93, Via Condotti, Rome.

It betokens some courage on the part of Messrs. Macmillan to reprint The Parent's Assistant in their "Illustrated Standard Novels," but they no doubt put their trust in the wave of revival which has undoubtedly set in in favour of the writers of the first quarter of the century, in the attraction of an introduction by Mrs. Thackeray Ritchie, and the clever illustrations of Miss Hammond. Mrs. Ritchie by no means plays the part of an apologist for 'The Parent's Assistant'; in fact, she takes Archbishop Whately to task for saying that the stories are too didactic, and thinks such a complaint unworthy of an archbishop. Yet we confess our recollection of the little volumes with red leather backs inclines us to side with him. We quite agree with Mrs. Ritchie in preferring Miss Edgeworth "to the favourite experiments in garbage of our present Laura Matildas"; still, we cannot help thinking that in these stories there is a little too much anxiety to improve the reader.—Messrs. Service & Paton have added a neat edition of Shirley to their "Illustrated English Library." Mr. Townshend's clever cuts would be better if printed on thicker paper.

Messrs. Chapman & Hall send us the first volume of Oliver Cromwell's Letters and Speeches in their handsome "Centenary Edition" of Carlyle's works. The accompanying portraits are excellent.

A cheap reprint of Mr. Ashe's Two Kings of Uganda has been included by Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. in their excellent "Library of Travel and Adventure."

More than twenty years ago Mr. Austin Dobson wrote a Handbook of English Literature, an excellent little volume, which in spite of many rivals holds a place of its own. Messrs. Crosby Lockwood & Son have wisely employed Mr. W. H. Griffin to revise it and bring it up to date. It is much to be recommended.

We ought long ago to have acknowledged the receipt of the fifteenth volume—that for 1897—of Burdett's Official Intelligence (Spottiswoode & Co.), the Bible of Capel Court, indispensable alike for its fulness and accuracy. It is, indeed, beyond criticism, and we have found but one or two oversights in the index. The United States Brewing Company is duly dealt with at pp. 978–9, but we cannot find it in the index. Again, may we suggest that it would be well to spell Anonima consistently, and not sometimes "Anonyma"? The account of the precautions against famine in India is full and interesting.

We have on our table Victoria, Queen and Empress, by Sir Edwin Arnold (Longmans),—The Hill-Caves of Yucatan, by H. C. Mercer (Redway),—The Primer of English History, Part III., by S. Benson Thorp (Burns & Oates),—Class-Room Conversations in French, by V. Bétis and H. Swan (Philip),—Domestic Science Readers, by V. T. Murché, Book IV. (Macmillan),—Exercises in Analysis, Parsing, and Correction of Sentences (Blackwood),—Experimental Science, by A. Hubble (Chapman & Hall),—A Short Catechism of Chemistry, by A. J. Wilcox (Simpkin),—Economic Science and Practice, by L. L. Price (Methuen),—The Aurora Borealis, by A. Angot (Kegan Paul),—Higher Mathematics, a Text-Book for Classical and Engineering Colleges, edited by M. Merriman and R. S. Woodward (Chapman & Hall),—The Strong and Weak Inflection in Greek, by B. F. Harding (Ginn),—The Survival of the Unlike, by L. H. Bailey (Macmillan),—Unknown London, by A. T. C. Pratt (Neville Beeman),—Life in West London, by A. Sherwell (Methuen),—The Parasitic Diseases of Poultry, by F. V. Theobald (Gurney & Jackson),—Cheese and Cheese-making, by J. Long and J. Benson (Chapman & Hall),—A Course of Lectures on Medicine to Nurses, by H. Cuff (Churchill),—A Yachting Holiday (Simpkin),—Précis of the Archives of the Cape of Good Hope: Journal, 1699–1732, by H. C. V. Leibbrandt (Cape Town, Richards & Sons),—The Kipling Birthday Book, compiled by J. Finn (Macmillan),—The Romance of Commerce, by J. M. Oxley (Chambers),—Paradise Row, by W. J. Wintle (Milne),—The Story of the Indian Mutiny, by A. R. Hope (Warne),—Abigail Templeton; or, Brave Efforts, by E. Marshall (Chambers),—Aimée Furniss, Scholar, by K. St. John Conway ('Clarion' Office),—The Bayonet that came Home, by N. W. Williams (Arnold),—A Mystery at King's Grant, by A. E. D. (S.P.C.K.),—Half-a-Dozen Transgressions, by H. Gingold (Iliffe),—Twilight Thoughts, by O. Blackburn (Gardner),—The Garden of Dreams, by M. Cawein (Louisville, Morton),—Picture Portions: The Gospel of St. Luke, by H. A. Harper and J. Clark (Walters),—The Religion of Manhood, by J. O. Coit (Putnam),—Studies in Hebrew Proper Names, by G. B. Gray (Black),—The Bible in the Light of To-day, by C. Croslegh, D.D. (S.P.C.K.),—The Child, the Wise Man, and the Devil, by Coulson Kernahan (Bowden),—The Hope of Israel, by F. H. Woods (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Messengers, Watchmen, and Stewards, by A. F. W. Ingram (Gardner, Darton & Co.),—Where is the True Church? by the Rev. J. W. H. Heslop (Skeffington),—John Gifford, Memories and Letters, by Mary Raleigh (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—and Misère de la Philosophie, by K. Marx (Paris, Giard & Brière). Among New Editions we have The Private Life of the Renaissance Florentines, by Dr. Guido Biagi (Florence, Bemporad),—Under many Flags, by W. H. D. Adams (Warne),—Daudet's Robert Helmont, translated by L. Ensor (Dent),—A Gentleman's Gentleman, edited by Max Pemberton (Innes),—Little Wanderlin, and other Fairy Tales, by Annie and E. Keary (Macmillan),—and The Imitation of Christ, by T. à Kempis (Dublin, Eason).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Dimock's (R. N.) History of Book of Common Prayer in its Bearing on Eucharistic Controversies, 8vo. 4/ net, cl.
Jeffrey's (J.) The Personal Ministry of the Son of Man, 5/ cl.
Noyes's (H. E.) Church Reform in Spain and Portugal, 2/6 cl.
Observances at Augustinian Priory of St. Giles and St. Andrew, Barnwell, ed. Clark, 8vo. 21/ net, cl.
Thomas's (Rev. E.) "When Ye Come Together," cr. 8vo. 3/6
Williams's (E. F.) Christian Life in Germany as seen in the State and the Church, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.

Law.

Lushington's (G.) The Law of Affiliation, &c., cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Descriptive Album of London, a Pictorial Guide-Book, 6/ cl.
Gladstone, W. E., Illustrated Political Life of, with Cartoons from 'Punch,' Vol. 2, 4to. 20/ net, cl.
Massilia Carthago, Sacrifice Tablets of the Worship of Baal, edited by Macdonald, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Richardson's (R.) George Morland's Pictures, their Present Possessors, &c., 8vo. 6/ cl.
Roberts's (W.) Memorials of Christie's, a Record of Art Sales from 1766 to 1896, 2 vols. imp. 8vo. 25/ net, cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Courthope's (W. J.) A History of English Poetry, Vol. 2, 8vo. 10/ net, cl.
Hester's (G. N.) The Annals of England in Verse and Rhyme, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Kuhn's (L. O.) The Treatment of Nature in Dante's Divina Commedia, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Rooper's (W. L.) Sweet Little Songs for Sweet Little Singers, 4to. 2/6 cl.
Russell (E. R.) and Standing's (P. C.) Ibsen on his Merits, 5/
Thead's (A. W.) The Story of Jephthah, and other Poems, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.

Music.

Irvine's (D.) Wagner's Ring of the Nibelung and the Conditions of Ideal Manhood, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Krehbiel's (H. E.) How to Listen to Music, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Bibliography.

Kitton's (F. G.) The Novels of Charles Dickens, a Bibliography and Sketch, 12mo. 4/6 cl.

Philosophy.

Bosanquet's (B.) Psychology of the Moral Self, 3/6 net, cl.
Crozier's (J. B.) History of Intellectual Development, Vol. 1, 8vo. 14/ cl.

History and Biography.

Burton, Isabel Lady, The Romance of, told by herself and W. H. Wilkins, illus. 2 vols. 8vo. 36/ cl.
Cromer, Lord, a Biography, by H. D. Traill, illus. 8vo. 16/
Davanant, J., The Life, Letters, and Writings of, by M. Fuller, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Du Toit's (S. J.) Rhodesia, Past and Present, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Gardiner's (S. R.) Cromwell's Place in History, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Gibbon's (E.) The History of the Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, Vol. 3, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ihering's (R. von) The Evolution of the Aryan, 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Johnsonian Miscellanies, arranged and edited by G. B. Hill, 8vo. 2 vols. 28/ cl.
Peter the Great, by K. Waliszewski, translated by Lady M. Loyd, 2 vols. 8vo. 28/ cl.
Pratt's (E. A.) Pioneer Women in Victoria's Reign, 5/ cl.
Rampini's (C.) A History of Moray and Nairn, 8vo. 7/6 net.
Ramsden's (J.) The Brontë Homeland, or Misrepresentation Rectified, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wakley, Thomas, Founder and First Editor of the 'Lancet,' Life and Times of, by S. S. Sprigge, 8vo. 18/ cl.
White's (W.) The Inner Life of the House of Commons, 2 vols. 8vo. 16/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

Glimpses of the Orient, A Sunshine Trip, Extracts from Letters written by M. Bottome, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Murray's Cyclist's Handbook from London through Guildford to the New Forest, 18mo. 2/ cl.
Satchel Guide for the Vacation Tourist in Europe, 6/ net.
Tozer's (H. F.) A History of Ancient Geography, cr. 8vo. 10/6

Philology.

Demosthenes's First Philippic and Olynthiacs, with Introduction, &c., by J. E. Sandys, 12mo. 5/ cl.
Euripides, The Troades of, with Revised Text and Notes by R. Y. Tyrrell, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Livy, Book 6, edited by W. F. Masom, cr. 8vo. 5/6 cl.
Wyatt's (A. J.) An Elementary Old English Grammar, 4/6

Science.

Anderson's (W.) The Deformities of the Fingers and Toes, 6/
Barton's (F. T.) Unsound Horses and How to Know Them, &c., 32mo. 5/ net.
Helm's (D. G.) The Principles of Mathematical Chemistry, cr. 8vo. 6/6 cl.
Hofmann's (Dr. E.) The Young Beetle Collector's Handbook, illustrated, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Jaeger's (G.) Problems of Nature, Researches and Discoveries, 8vo. 4/ cl.
Maxwell's (Sir H.) Memorials of the Months, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Morris's (Rev. F. O.) History of British Birds, Vols. 5 and 6, royal 8vo. 15/ each, net.
Nichols (E. L.) and Franklin's (W. S.) The Elements of Physics, Vol. 3, cr. 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
Reynolds's (S. H.) The Vertebrate Skeleton, cr. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Waring's (H. J.) Diseases of the Liver, &c. 8vo. 12/6 net, cl.
Wing's (H. H.) Milk and its Products, 12mo. 4/ net, cl.

General Literature.

Allen's (A. M.) Gladys in Grammarland, illus. 4to. 2/6 cl.
Balzac's (De) Works, Uniform Edition: The Lily of the Valley, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Bedford's (Duke of) A Great Agricultural Estate, the Story of Woburn and Thorney, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Black's (M. M.) Facts and Fancies about Flowers, 2/6 cl.
Bradshaw's (Mrs. A. S.) False Gods, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Bridge's (J.) Dinner for Thirteen, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Chesson's (W. H.) A Great Lie, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Clarke's (Lieut.-Col. Sir G. S.) Imperial Defence, 5/ net, cl.
Costello's (M.) Harold Effermere, a Story, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Crane's (S.) The Third Violet, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Escott's (T. H. S.) Social Transformations of the Victorian Era, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Evans's (J. M.) Exemplification of a System of Accounts for County Councils, &c., folio, 21/ net, cl.
Hanschmann's (A. B.) The Kindergarten System, its Origin and Development, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Hawels's (Mrs.) A Flame of Fire, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Leatherdale's (Rev. V. J.) A Lady of Wales, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Le Breton's (J.) Miss Tudor, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Lynch's (H.) Jinny Blake, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net, cl.
Lytton's (Lord) Harold, edited with Introduction, &c., by G. L. Gomme, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
McCarthy's (J.) The Riddle Ring, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Marshall's (E.) Castle Meadow, a Story of Norwich, 3/6 cl.
Merriam's (G. S.) The Chief End of Man, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Oliphant's (Mrs.) The Ways of Life, Two Stories, cr. 8vo. 6/
Praed's (Mrs. C.) Nulma, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Prime Minister of Wurtemberg, The, by Eller, cr. 8vo. 3,6 cl.
Quinn's (R.) Mostyn Stayne, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Scott's (G. F.) The Track of Midnight, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Shand's (A. I.) The Lady Grange, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Sherer's (J. W.) A Princess of Islam, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Steel's (F. A.) In the Tideway, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Walpole's (G. H. S.) The Great Example, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Whitfield's (E. E.) Précis-Writing and Office Correspondence, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Williams's (Lady W.) Sybil Foster's Love Story, cr. 8vo. 6/

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Anz (W.): Zur Frage nach dem Ursprung des Gnostizismus, 3m. 50.
Wilmers (G.): De Religione Revelata, Libri V., 8m.

Law.

Affolter (F. X.): Das römische Institutionen - System, Part 1, 12m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Winckler (H.): Altorientalische Forschungen, Part 5, 6m.

Poetry and the Drama.

Dubout: Frédégonde, 3fr. 50.
Montépin (X. de) et Dornay (J.): La Mendiante de Saint-Sulpice, 2fr. 50.

Philosophy.

Cresson (A.): La Morale de Kant, 2fr. 50.
Malato (C.): Philosophie de l'Anarchie, 1888–97, 3fr. 50.
Ribot (Th.): L'Évolution des Idées Générales, 5fr.
Stern (W.): Kritische Grundlegung der Ethik als positiver Wissenschaft, 7m. 20.

Political Economy.

Gomel (C.): Histoire Financière de l'Assemblée Constituante, Vol. 2, 1790-91, 8fr.

History and Biography.

Fleury (Général Comte): Souvenirs, Vol. 1, 1837–59, 7fr. 50.
Oehler (R.): Der letzte Feldzug des Barkiden Hasdrubal u. die Schlacht am Metaurus, 3m.
Pellenc (Cap.): Les Italiens en Afrique, 1880–96, 5fr.
Tyssandier (L.): Le Général Lecointe, les Buzot et les Caffieri, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Coubertin (P. de): Souvenirs d'Amérique et de Grèce, 2fr.
Delon (F.): Étude sur les Différentes Chartes de la Compagnie Anglaise des Indes, 4fr.
Rute (M. L. de): Lettres d'une Voyageuse, 3fr.

Philology.

Cohn (L.) et Wendland (P.): Philonis Alexandrini Opera quæ Supersunt, Vol. 2, 9m.
Diels (H.): Parmenides' Lehrgedicht, Griechisch u. Deutsch, 5m.
Hayduck (M.): Joannis Philoponi in Aristotelis de Anima Libros Commentaria, 27m.
Meyer (K.) u. Stern (L. C.): Zeitschrift f. celtische Philologie, Vol. 1, Part 3, 6m.

Science.

Laumonier (J.): La Physiologie Générale, 5fr.

General Literature.

Amaudru (N.): L'Abbé de Watteville, 3fr. 50.
Castelar (E.): La Politique Européenne, 3fr.
Floran (M.): Adoptée, 3fr. 50.
Margueritte (P. et V.): Le Carnaval de Nice, 3fr. 50.
Mimande (P.): Forçats et Proscrits, 3fr. 50.
Nibor (Y.): Gens de Mer, 3fr. 50.
Pavy (A.): L'Expédition de Morès, 2fr.
Pontsevrez: Faute d'un Mot, 3fr. 50.
Prince (A.): Lucienne, 3fr. 50.
Roche (D.): Histoires sur tous les Tons, 3fr. 50.

PROF. LAND.

The death of Prof. J. P. N. Land, of Leyden, at the age of sixty-three, which occurred on Friday, the 30th of April, will be sincerely regretted by his many English friends. Of Scandinavian descent, yet a thorough Dutchman—his grandfather was taken prisoner by the English at Camperdown, and he himself was born at Delft and bred at Leeuwarden in Friesland — Land represented in an unusual degree the international interests and the linguistic versatility of his countrymen. He was brought up at the well-known Moravian school at Neuwied on the Rhine, and afterwards at the University of Leyden. Here he devoted himself specially to Semitic philology, and took his degree as Doctor of Theology. Some time later he spent a couple of years in England, working among the Syriac manuscripts at the British Museum. On his return to Holland he was made Professor of Classical and Oriental Languages at the Academy (now the Municipal University) of Amsterdam, whence he was promoted early in the seventies to the Chair of Logic and Metaphysic at Leyden. This latter post he held for more than twenty years, filling in due course the office of Rector of the University, and lecturing on Syriac when required, until a paralytic seizure in the autumn of 1895 compelled him to retire to Arnhem, where he continued to busy himself with learned tasks, so far as the state of his health would allow him, almost until the time of his death.

The versatility of Land's powers is indicated by the titles of the chairs he filled. It used, indeed, to be a byword that at Leyden one might see a leading Arabic scholar, Dozy, Professor of History, while Land, the Syriac scholar, was Professor of Logic. Yet neither was really misplaced. Land always maintained that in philosophy lay his main interest, and his standard edition of the works of Spinoza, produced in association with Van Vloten, was one which could only have been executed by a scholar at once a philosopher and a Hebraist. He also edited the works of Geulincx, and wrote, in German, a biography of that protagonist of Cartesianism. He contributed papers on philosophical subjects to the Transactions of the Royal Academy at Amsterdam, and, in English, to Mind. Even in the last year of his life he was occupied upon a work on philosophy in the Low Countries, which perhaps may even now be published. Land's Oriental publications belong to his earlier years. He will probably be best remembered by the solid volumes of his 'Anecdota Syriaca.' His Hebrew work, brilliant as it was, did not succeed in making a lasting impression. In 1869 he published the first volume of a Hebrew grammar which was conspicuous for the originality of its treatment of the vowel system. This was translated into English by Mr. R. L. Poole in 1876, but proved in practice valuable rather for its suggestiveness to scholars than as a text-book for learners. Land's other Oriental contributions are buried in various Dutch periodicals and journals, and (if our memory is correct) in one article, on the 'Physiologus,' in the last edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.'

Outside his immediate fields of study, Land was indefatigable in his work on the history of music in the Netherlands, and was for some time president of the society which devotes itself to that subject, the Vereeniging voor Noord-Nederlands Muziekgeschiedenis, writing extensively in its journal, and helping much in those parts of the society's operations which called for the assistance of a scholar. His technical skill was well displayed in his publication of the seventeenth century lute-book of Thysius, and his taste in the edition of the musical works of Constantine Huyghens, in which the late Prof. Jonckbloet was his colleague.

Amid this unwearied activity Land found time to keep in touch with friends in England, Germany, and France. Speaking English almost like a native, and French and German little less fluently, his house on the Heerengracht and afterwards in the Breestraat at Leyden was a centre where students of various subjects and divers languages were sure to find a hospitable welcome and all possible aid in obtaining access to the learned collections of the place. It would be out of place here to do more than allude to the high-bred courtesy, the genial friendliness, the readiness to take trouble for others, which marked this worthy representative of Dutch learning; but it may be said without exaggeration that had Land written nothing his distinguished personality would have still left unfading memories in the minds of all who were privileged to know him.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

THE 'Dictionary of National Biography' is now rapidly approaching completion. Below we publish a further instalment (completing the letter W) of the final list of names which it is proposed to insert. Cross-references are excluded. When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

Winch, Humphrey, judge, 1625
Winch, Nathaniel John, botanist, 1769*-1838
Winchelsey, Robert, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1313
Winchester, Alexander, Catholic divine, 1703
Windebank, Sir Francis, Secretary of State, 1583-1641*
Windele, John, antiquary, 1801-1865
Winder, Henry, Dissenting divine, 1693-1752
Windet, James, physician, 1661
Windeyer, Richard, financial writer, 1806-1847
Windham, Sir Charles Ashe, general, 1810-1870
Windham, Joseph, antiquary, 1739-1810
Windham, William, politician, 1750-1810
Windsor, Gerald de, steward of Pembroke, fl. 1116
Windsor, Henry, 8th Earl of Plymouth, 1768-1843
Windsor-Hickman, Thomas, 1st Earl of Plymouth, 1627-1687
Windus, John, 'Journey to Mequinez,' 1725
Winefride, Welsh saint, fl. 650*
Wing, Samuel, divine, 1771-1861
Wing, Vincent, astronomer, 1668
Wingate, Edmund, legal writer, 1593-1656
Wingfield, Sir Anthony, diplomatist, 1552
Wingfield, Anthony, reader in Greek to Elizabeth, 1593
Wingfield, Edward Maria, 1st President of Virginia, fl. 1608
Wingfield, Sir Humphrey, Speaker of the House of Commons, 1546
Wingfield, Sir John, soldier, 1596
Wingfield, Hon. Lewis, traveller and author, 1842-1891
Wingfield, Sir Richard, statesman, 1469-1525
Wingfield, Richard, 1st Viscount Powerscourt, 1634
Wingfield, Sir Robert, statesman, 1539
Wingham, Henry de, Bishop of London, 1262
Wini, Bishop of the West Saxons, 675*
Winkworth, Catharine, translator, 1829-1878
Winnington, Sir Francis, Solicitor-General, 1634-1700
Winnington, Thomas, politician, 1696-1746
Winram, John, Scots Reformer, 1500*-1582
Winrana, George, Scottish judge, 1650
Winslow, Edward, Governor of Plymouth Colony, 1595-1655
Winslow, Forbes Benignus, physician, 1810-1874
Winsor, Frederick Albert, inventor, 1763-1830
Winstanley, Henry, architect, 1703
Winstanley, John, verse-writer, 1671-1750*
Winstanley, Thomas, scholar, 1749-1823
Winstanley, William, compiler, fl. 1687
Winston, Charles, writer on glass painting, 1814-1864
Winston, Thomas, Professor of Physic at Gresham College, 1575-1655
Winter, Robert, "Gunpowder Plot" conspirator, 1605
Winter, Thomas, known as Tom Spring, pugilist, 1795-1851
Winterbotham, Henry Selfe Page, politician, 1837-1873
Winterbottom, Thomas Masterman, 'Account of Sierra Leone,' 1859
Wintersel, Mr., actor, 1679
Winterton, Ralph, Professor of Physic to Charles I., 1636
Winterton, Thomas, Augustinian, fl. 1382
Winthrop, John, Governor of Massachusetts, 1587-1649
Wintringham, Clifton, physician, 1689-1748
Wintringham, Sir Clifton, physician to George III., 1710-1794
Winwood, Sir Ralph, statesman, 1564*-1617
Winzet or Wynzet, Ninian, controversialist, 1592
Wisden, John, cricketer, 1826-1884
Wisdome, Robert, Archdeacon of Ely, 1568
Wise, Francis, scholar, 1695-1767
Wise, Henry, landscape gardener, 1653-1733
Wise, Michael, composer, 1648*-1687
Wise, William Furlong, rear-admiral, 1784-1844
Wiseman, Nicholas Patrick Stephen, Cardinal-Archbishop of Westminster, 1802-1865
Wiseman, Richard, sergeant-surgeon to Charles II, fl. 1686
Wishart, George, Scottish Reformer, 1514*-1546
Wishart or Wischart, George, Bishop of Edinburgh, 1609-1671
Wishart, Sir James, admiral, 1729
Wishart, Sir John, Scottish judge, fl. 1570
Wishart, Robert, Bishop of Glasgow, 1318
Wissing, William, portrait painter, 1656-1687
Withals, John, lexicographer, fl. 1560
Witham, George, Catholic divine, 1725
Wither, George, poet, 1588-1667
Withering, William, scientific writer, 1741-1799
Witherington, William Frederick, landscape painter, 1785-1865
Withers, Thomas, post-captain R.N., 1760-1843
Witherspoon, John, Presbyterian divine, 1722-1794
Withman, Abbot of Ramsey, 1047
Wittlesey, William, Archbishop of Canterbury, 1374
Wivell, Abraham, portrait painter, 1786-1849
Wix, Samuel, divine and author, 1771-1861
Wodehouse, Robert de, judge, 1315*
Wodenoth, Arthur, colonist, 1650*
Wodhull, Michael, translator, 1740-1816
Wodrow, Robert, Scottish Church historian, 1679-1734
Woffington, Margaret, actress, 1720-1760
Wogan, Sir Charles, Royalist adventurer, 1653
Wogan, Sir Charles, "Chevalier Wogan," fl. 1718
Wogan, Nicholas, Jacobite, 1667-1734
Wogan, Thomas, regicide, fl. 1650
Wogan, William, author, 1678-1758
Wolde, Charles Godfrey, scholar, 1725-1790
Wolcot, John, "Peter Pindar," 1738-1819
Wolfe, Arthur, Viscount Kilwarden, 1739-1803
Wolfe, Charles, 'The Burial of Sir John Moore,' 1791-1823
Wolfe, David, legate in Ireland, 1578*
Wolfe, James, general, 1726-1759
Wolfe, Reyner, printer, 1574*
Wolff, Joseph, missionary, 1795-1862
Wollaston, Francis, F.R.S., author, 1731-1815
Wollaston, Thomas Vernon, entomologist, 1822-1878
Wollaston, William, 'Religion of Nature Delineated,' 1659-1724
Wollaston, William Hyde, man of science, 1766-1828
Wolley, Edward, Bishop of Chester, 1636
Wolley, Sir John, French secretary to Queen Elizabeth, fl. 1579
Wolley, Richard, divine and author, fl. 1667-1691
Wollrich, Humphry, Quaker, 1665*-1706
Wolman, Richard, divine, 1577
Wolrich, Sir Thomas, Royalist, 1598-1660
Wolseley, Sir Charles, Cromwellian lieutenant-colonel, 1714
Wolseley, Sir Charles, politician, 1769-1846
Wolseley, Richard, soldier, fl. 1690
Wolseley, William, admiral, 1756-1842
Wolsey, Thomas, statesman and cardinal, 1471-1530
Wolstenholme, Sir John, merchant adventurer, 1562*-1639
Wolstenholme, Joseph, mathematician, 1829-1891
Wombwell, George, showman, 1778-1850
Womock, Lawrence, Bishop of St. David's, 1612-1685
Wood, Alexander, surgeon, 1725-1807
Wood, Sir Andrew, Scottish sea commander, 1540*
Wood or à Wood, Anthony, Oxford antiquary, 1632-1695
Wood, Charles, Viscount Halifax, 1800-1885
Wood, Edmund Burke, Canadian jurist, 1820-1882
Wood, Ellen (Mrs. Henry Wood), novelist, 1820-1887
Wood, Frederick John, Chairman of Convocation, University of London, 1829-1892
Wood, Sir George, judge, 1749-1824
Wood, James, mathematician, 1760-1839
Wood, Sir James Athol, rear-admiral, 1756-1829
Wood or Wode, John, Speaker of the House of Commons, fl. 1482
Wood, John, Scottish judge, 1568
Wood, John, medical writer, fl. 1600
Wood, John, architect of Bath, 1754
Wood, John, history painter, 1801-1870
Wood, Capt. John, geographer, 1811-1871
Wood, John, Professor of Surgery, 1825-1891
Wood, John George, artist, 1838
Wood, John George, naturalist, 1827-1889
Wood, John Muir, 'Songs of Scotland,' 1892
Wood, John Philip, Scottish antiquary and biographer, 1839-
Wood, Lambert, 'Florus Anglicus,' fl. 1659
Wood, Sir Mark, Bart., politician and author, 1755*-1829
Wood, Mary Anne, afterwards Mrs. Everett-Green, author and calendarer of State papers, 1818-1895
Wood, Sir Matthew, Bart., Alderman of London, 1768-1843
Wood, Robert, mathematician, 1685
Wood, Robert, "Palmyra Wood," 1716-1771
Wood, Thomas, legal writer, fl. 1720
Wood, Sir William, 'The Bowman's Glory,' 1609-1691
Wood, William, "Wood's Halfpence," fl. 1722
Wood, William, entomologist, 1745-1808
Wood, William Page, Lord Hatherley, Lord Chancellor, 1801-1881
Woodall, John, surgeon, 1556*-1643
Woodbridge, Benjamin, divine, 1622-1684
Woodburn, Samuel, virtuoso, 1786-1853
Woodcock, John, Franciscan, 1603-1664
Woodcock, Martin, Roman Catholic priest, 1646
Woodcroft, Bennet, inventor and Commissioner of Patents, 1803-1879
Woodd, Basil, hymn-writer, 1760-1831
Wooddeson, Richard, jurist, 1745-1822
Woodfall, George, editor of Junius, 1767-1844
Woodfall, Henry Sampson, publisher of the 'Public Advertiser,' 1739-1805
Woodfall, William, publisher of 'Parliamentary Debates,' 1746-1803
Woodford, Sir Alexander, field-marshal, 1781-1870
Woodford, Edward, educationist, 1800-1869
Woodford, James Russell, Bishop of Ely, 1820-1885
Woodford, Sir John, major-general, 1785-1879
Woodford, Samuel, verse-writer, 1636-1700
Woodford, William, Franciscan, 1397*
Woodforde, Samuel, history painter, 1764-1817
Woodham, Mrs., actress, 1743-1803
Woodhead, Abraham, divine, 1608-1678
Woodhouse, James, the poetical shoemaker, 1804
Woodhouse, John Chappell, annotator of the Apocalypse, 1749-1833
Woodhouse, Peter, author of 'The Flea,' fl. 1605
Woodhouse, Robert, mathematician, 1773-1827
Woodhouse, Thomas, Jesuit martyr, 1573
Woodington, W. F., A.R.A., sculptor, 1806*-1893
Woodlark, Robert, founder of St. Catharine's Hall, Cambridge, fl. 1452-1479
Woodley, George, author, 1786-1846
Woodman, Richard, Protestant martyr, 1524-1557
Woodman, Richard, engraver, 1784-1859
Woodroffe, Anne, author, 1830
Woodroffe, Benjamin, Principal of Gloucester Hall, 1638-1711
Woodrow, Henry, Indian educationist, 1823-1876
Woods, Joseph, botanist, 1776-1864
Woods, Julian Edmond Tenison, Australian geologist, 1832-1889
Woodville, Anthony, Earl Rivers, 1442*-1483
Woodville, Lionel, Bishop of Salisbury, 1484
Woodville or Wydville, Richard, 1st Earl Rivers, 1469
Woodville, William, physician, 1752-1805
Woodward, Bernard Bolingbroke, librarian at Windsor, 1816-1869
Woodward, George M., caricaturist, 1809
Woodward, Henry, actor, 1717-1777
Woodward, Hezekiah or Thomas, Dissenting divine, 1588*-1675
Woodward, John, physician and geologist, 1665-1728
Woodward, Samuel, archæologist and geologist, 1790-1838
Woodward, Samuel Pickworth, naturalist, 1821-1865
Woodward, Thomas, animal painter, 1801-1852
Woodward, Thomas Jenkinson, botanist, 1745*-1820
Wooley, John, Principal of the Sydney University, 1816-1866
Woolf, Arthur, engineer, 1766-1837
Woolhouse, John Thomas, oculist, 1730
Wooll, John, head master of Rugby School, 1833
Wooller, Thomas James, journalist and politician, 1786-1853
Woollett, William, engraver, 1735-1785
Woolley, Hannah, author, fl. 1670

Woollgar, Thomas, antiquary and botanist, 1761-1821
Woollnough, Joseph Chappell, captain R.N., author, and inventor, 1839
Woolman, John, Quaker, 1720-1772
Woolner, Thomas, R.A., sculptor and poet, 1826-1892
Woolrych, Humphrey William, legal writer, 1795-1871
Woolston, Thomas, 'Discourses on the Miracles,' 1669-1733
Woolton or Wolton, John, Bishop of Exeter, 1535-1594
Wootton, John, animal painter, 1765
Worboise, Emma Jane, novelist, 1825-1887
Worcester or Botoner, William, scholar and annalist, 1415*-1490*
Worde, Wynkyn de, printer, 1493-1534
Wordsworth, Charles, Bishop of St. Andrews, 1806-1892
Wordsworth, Christopher, Master of Trinity College, Cambridge, 1774-1846
Wordsworth, Christopher, Bishop of Lincoln, 1807-1885
Wordsworth, William, poet, 1770-1850
Worgan, John, organist and composer, 1724-1790
Worlidge or Woolridge, John, agricultural writer, fl. 1669
Worlidge, Thomas, painter, 1700-1766
Wornum, Ralph Nicholson, writer on art, 1812-1877
Worsdale, James, portrait painter, 1692-1767
Worsley, Edward, Jesuit, 1603-1676
Worsley, Sir Henry, major-general, 1841
Worsley, Philip Stanhope, poet and translator of Homer, 1866
Worsley, Sir Richard, virtuoso, 1751-1805
Worth, William, scholar, 1677-1742
Worthington, Hugh, Dissenting divine, 1752-1813
Worthington, John, Master of Jesus College, Cambridge, 1618-1671
Worthington, Thomas, President of English College at Douai, 1548*-1626
Worthington, William, theological writer, 1703-1778
Wortley, Sir Francis, Royalist poet, 1652
Wotton, Antony, Professor of Divinity at Gresham College, 1626
Wotton, Sir Edward, statesman, 1489-1550
Wotton, Edward, physician and author, 1492-1555
Wotton, Sir Henry, poet, 1568-1639
Wotton, Nicholas, diplomatist, 1497*-1567
Wotton, Thomas, patron of learning, fl. 1560
Wotton, Thomas, editor of the 'Baronetage,' 1766
Wotton, William, scholar, 1666-1726
Woty, William, poet, 1791
Woulfe, Peter, chemist, 1805
Wrangham, Francis, Archdeacon of Cleveland, 1770-1843
Wratislaw, Albert Henry, Slavonic scholar and schoolmaster, 1822-1892
Wraxall, Sir Frederick Charles, miscellaneous writer, 1828-1865
Wraxall, Sir Nathaniel William, historical writer, 1751-1831
Wray, Sir Cecil, Bart., politician, 1731-1805
Wray, Sir Christopher, Chief Justice, 1524-1592
Wray, Daniel, antiquary, 1701-1783
Wray, Robert Bateman, gem engraver, 1715-1770
Wreford, Henry G., 'Times' special correspondent, 1806-1892
Wren, Sir Christopher, architect, 1632-1723
Wren, Matthew, Bishop of Norwich, 1585-1667
Wrench, Benjamin, comedian, 1778-1843
Wrenn, Ralph, commodore, 1692
Wrey, Sir Bourchier, dilettante, 1784
Wright, Abraham, divine and poet, 1611-1690
Wright, Christopher, conspirator, 1606
Wright, Edward, mathematician, 1615
Wright, Fortunatus, privateer, 1757
Wright, George Newenham, miscellaneous writer, 1723*-1877
Wright, Ichabod Charles, translator of Dante, 1795-1871
Wright, James, miscellaneous writer, 1644-1715
Wright, Sir James, Bart., Governor of Georgia, 1714-1785
Wright, John, author and editor of 'Hansard,' 1771-1844
Wright, John, weaver and poet, 1805-1854*
Wright, John Masey, water-colour painter, 1773-1866
Wright, John Skirrow, politician, 1823-1880
Wright, John Wesley, commander R.N., 1805
Wright, John William, water-colourist, 1802-1848
Wright, Joseph, historical painter, 1734-1797
Wright, Joseph Michael, portrait painter, 1700*
Wright, Laurence, physician to Cromwell, 1657
Wright, Lawrence, commodore, 1713
Wright, Leonard, pamphleteer, fl. 1589
Wright, Sir Nathan, judge, 1653-1721
Wright, Mrs. Patience, wax modeller, 1725-1793
Wright, Peter, Jesuit, 1604-1651
Wright, Richard, marine painter, 1735-1775*
Wright, Richard, physician, 1786
Wright, Robert, tutor to Essex, fl. 1585
Wright, Sir Robert, judge, 1689
Wright, Samuel, Dissenting divine, 1746
Wright, Thomas, engraver, 1792-1849
Wright, Thomas, "Manchester Prison Philanthropist," 1788-1875
Wright, Thomas, historical writer, 1810-1877
Wright, Thomas Barber, philanthropist of Birmingham, 1809-1878
Wright, William, Jesuit, 1562*-1639
Wright, William, physician and botanist, 1735-1819
Wright, William, aurist, 1774-1860
Wright, William, Arabic scholar, 1830-1889
Wrighter, Clement, "Anti-scripturist," fl. 1645
Wriothesley, Charles, 'Wriothesley's Chronicle,' 1508-1562
Wriothesley, Henry, 3rd Earl of Southampton, 1573-1624
Wriothesley, Thomas, 1st Earl of Southampton, 1550
Wriothesley, Thomas, 4th Earl of Southampton, 1607-1677
Wroe, John, founder of sect of Christian Israelites, 1782-1863
Wroe, Richard, Warden of Manchester, 1641-1718
Wroth, Sir Robert, politician, 1606
Wroth, Sir Thomas, politician, 1573
Wroth, Sir Thomas, politician and author, 1672
Wrotham, William de, judge, 1217
Wrottesley, John, 2nd Baron Wrottesley, 1798-1867
Wrottesley, Sir Walter, captain of Calais, 1473
Wroughton, Richard, actor, fl. 1812
Wulfere or Wulphere, King of Mercia, 675
Wulfhelm, Archbishop of Canterbury, 928*
Wulford, Ralph, personator of the Earl of Warwick, 1497
Wulfred, Archbishop of Canterbury, 829
Wulfstan of Winchester, biographer of Ethelwold, 990
Wulfstan or Wulstan, Archbishop of York, 1023
Wulfwig, Chancellor to Edward the Confessor and Bishop of Dorchester, 1067
Wulstan, Bishop of Worcester, 1008-1095
Wyatt, Sir Francis, Governor of Virginia, 1575*-1644
Wyatt, Henry, portrait painter, 1794-1849
Wyatt, James, architect, 1748-1813
Wyatt, John, mechanic, 1700-1766
Wyatt, John, surgeon-major, 1874
Wyatt, Matthew Cotes, sculptor, 1775-1862
Wyatt, Sir Matthew Digby, architect, 1820-1877
Wyatt, Richard James, sculptor, 1795-1850
Wyatt or Wyat, Sir Thomas, poet and statesman, 1503-1542
Wyatt, Sir Thomas, rebel, 1555
Wyatt, Thomas Henry, architect, 1807-1880
Wyatt, William, friend of Jeremy Taylor, 1686*
Wyatville, Sir Jeffrey, architect, 1766-1840
Wyborn, Percival, Puritan divine, fl. 1560-1580
Wyche, Sir Peter, 'Turkish Historie,' 1643
Wycherley, William, dramatist, 1640*-1715
Wyck, Thomas, marine painter, 1616-1682
Wydow, Robert, poet and musician, 1505
Wyer, Robert, printer, fl. 1535
Wyeth, Joseph, Quaker, 1663-1730
Wykeham or Wickham, William de, Bishop of Winchester, 1324-1404
Wykeham or Wickham, William, Bishop of Winchester, 1539-1595
Wyld, James, geographer, 1812-1887
Wyld, John, lawyer and politician, fl. 1650
Wylde, Henry, Gresham Professor of Music, 1822-1890
Wylie, David, Canadian journalist, 1811-1891
Wylie, Sir James, physician to Alexander I. of Russia, 1768-1854
Wylie, James Aiken, Protestant writer, 1890
Wylie, W. Howie, Baptist minister, 1834-1891
Wylie, Sir William, G.C.B., general, 1802-1891
Wyndham, Charles, Earl of Egremont, 1763
Wyndham, Francis, judge, 1592
Wyndham, Henry Penruddocke, topographer, 1736-1819
Wyndham, Hugh, judge, 1603*-1684
Wyndham, R. H., Scottish actor, 1814-1894
Wyndham, Thomas, Lord Chancellor of Ireland, 1745
Wyndham, Wadham, judge, 1668
Wyndham, Sir William, politician, 1686-1740
Wynn, Charles Watkyn Williams, politician, 1775-1850
Wynn, Charlotte Williams, author of 'Letters,' 1807-1860
Wynn, Sir John, Bart., antiquary, 1555-1626
Wynne, Edward, legal writer, 1734-1784
Wynne, Ellis, Welsh author, 1671-1734
Wynne, John, Bishop of St. Asaph, 1667-1743
Wynne, John Huddlestone, miscellaneous writer, 1743-1788
Wynter, Andrew, physician and journalist, 1819-1876
Wynter, Sir William, admiral, fl. 1570
Wyntoun or Winton, Andrew, Scottish poet, fl. 1415
Wynyard, Robert Henry, Governor of New Zealand, 1864
Wyon, Benjamin, seal engraver, 1802-1858
Wyon, Joseph Shepherd, medalist and seal engraver, 1836-1873
Wyon, Leonard C., chief engraver to the Mint, 1826-1891
Wyon, Thomas, medalist, 1792-1817
Wyon, William, R.A., medalist, 1795-1851
Wyrley, William, herald and poet, 1618
Wyse, Sir Thomas, diplomatist and author, 1791-1862
Wythens, Sir Francis, judge, 1704
Wyvill, Christopher, admiral, 1863

'THE CHAURAPANCHASIKA.'

University College, London, April 27, 1897.

Neither Sir Edwin Arnold nor your critic in the current issue of the Athenæum (No. 3626, p. 539) seems to be aware of the real authorship and date of this charming poem. These points were settled by Dr. Bühler in his famous Kashmir tour in 1875. He shows at pp. 48, 49 of his Report that the poet must be identical with the Kashmirian author Bilhana, who flourished neither at the commencement of the Christian era nor in the seventh century, but in the eleventh century A.D. Further interesting suggestions may be found in Dr. Solf's excellent text and translation ('Die Kaçmir-Recension der Pañcâçikâ,' Kiel, 1886).

Cecil Bendall.

Literary Gossip.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. are about to issue in their "English Citizen Series" a volume on the 'National Defences,' by General Maurice, C.B. In his introduction the author shows how gradually public opinion has grown to recognize the enormous importance of the navy (a fact which he, though a soldier, was among the first to urge), and that now there is some risk of the fact being lost sight of that without an adequate army we cannot maintain on land "those gifts which we owe to our power on the sea."

Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. are about to issue a new book by the author of 'Proud Maisie' and 'The Violin-Player.' It will be entitled 'Camera Lucida; or, Strange Passages from Common Life.' In a series of stories, chiefly of English society, Miss Bertha Thomas presents various pictures of modern life, studied from somewhat novel points of view.

Quite the most interesting "lot" of books to be offered for sale next week at Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge's, is in itself a library. It is a unique collection of books, pamphlets, documents, caricatures, newspapers, letters, portraits, views, broadsides, &c., dealing with the South Sea Bubble and the Mississippi scheme of John Law, numbering in all 481 items. We should like to see the collection permanently lodged in the Guildhall; and here is a unique opportunity for the Diamond Jubilee philanthropist! This sale also includes very many articles of interest—a complete set of the rare and valuable writings of William Usselincx on the peace with Spain in 1608; the fifteenth century MS. of Christine de Pisan, 'Livre de Faits d'Armes et de Chevalerie,' from the Didot Collection; a fine Kilmarnock Burns; two exceptionally fine Shakspeare quartos, the 'Merchant of Venice,' 1600, and the spurious play 'Sir John Oldcastle,' both genuine first editions; a fairly good copy of Wynkyn de Worde's second edition of the St. Alban's 'Chronycle,' 1502; and an excellent one of the same printer's edition of the 'Legenda Aurea,' 1527.

Mr. Henry Craik, C.B., is engaged upon a history of Scotland from the Union, which will deal in special detail with the hundred years following 1745. The work has already made considerable progress, and will be published by Messrs. Blackwood & Sons.

'The Two Duchesses,' the correspondence of the two Duchesses of Devonshire, which, as we mentioned a fortnight ago, Mr. Vere Foster is printing, will contain letters of Fox, Sheridan, Gibbon, Moreau, Napoleon, the Emperor Alexander I. of Russia, the Prince Regent, and others.

The Selden Society is about to issue the eleventh volume of its publications, being the second volume of 'Select Pleas in the Court of Admiralty,' A.D. 1547–1602, edited by Mr. Reginald E. Marsden. It contains about two hundred cases and documents of the reigns of Edward VI., Mary, and Elizabeth, when the jurisdiction of the Admiralty was at its zenith, and a summary of all the cases dealt with in the period. It also illustrates the foreign policy of Elizabeth, the Armada, marine insurance in 1548, &c. The introduction treats of the history of the court between the fourteenth and the eighteenth centuries, gathered from original documents, including the later records, many of which are State Papers not calendared in 'S. P. Dom.,' nor, it is believed, to be found or referred to elsewhere. Vol. xii., on 'The Court of Requests,' edited by Mr. I. S. Leadam, is now in the hands of the printers.

A portion of the collection of ex-libris formed by Mr. Walter Hamilton, Vice-President of the Ex-Libris Society, is to be dispersed at Messrs. Puttick & Simpson's on Monday. The sale includes a good many rarities, notably the German plate with the initials A. V. H., which Sir A. W. Franks thinks may stand for A. von Hecht; of this only two copies are known. The sale catalogue contains several illustrations, and a preface from Mr. Hamilton's pen.

Mr Hessels is going to complete the publication of the papers of the Dutch Church of London by the issue at the Pitt Press of the third volume, which fills some thousands of pages and is divided into two parts: yet in order to find room for all the letters and documents—the most important of them are given in extenso—the editor has been forced to reduce the size of the type. The third volume contains a great deal of correspondence relating to the Thirty Years' War. It throws light on the Protestant communities in Flanders and their extinction, on Laud's policy towards the foreign churches in England, and their condition under the Commonwealth and the Restoration.

Mr. J. K. Jerome's new book, 'Sketches in Lavender: Blue and Green,' which Messrs. Longman are announcing, consists of short stories which have appeared in serials.

Mr. A. W. Crawley Boevey is privately printing memoirs of the Boevey family and their leading members. The book will be illustrated. It will contain the Dutch connexions of the old stranger families in London, the Bonnells, Van Ackers, Courtens, Van Loors, &c. Strype the historian comes in. His father was a silk merchant and weaver in Spitalfields, and the record of his baptism at the Dutch Church has been unearthed. His brothers and sister were christened at Stepney.

The second part of the French Canterbury registers is reaching completion. Mr. Robert Hovenden is the editor. Mr. Minet and Mr. Waller are busy for the Huguenot Society with the French Bethnal Green registers, and Mr. Moens is editing the second volume of the registers of the French Church in Threadneedle Street and also those of the Dutch Church at Colchester, introducing the latter by an historical preface. Mr. Moens is further writing a paper for the Society of Antiquaries on the district of the New Forest in Saxon times and the origin of the rights of common there.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. will publish the limited English edition of Mr. Eyre Crowe's 'Thackeray's Haunts and Homes' to which we referred in our last issue.

The obituary of the week includes the names of Dr. Goulburn, formerly Dean of Norwich and Tait's successor in the headmastership of Rugby, but best known to the public by his devotional manuals, which enjoyed a singularly wide circulation; and of Mrs. Linnæus Banks (Mrs. Varley), the author of 'God's Providence House,' 'The Manchester Man,' 'Caleb Booth's Clerk,' and many other novels. A handsome édition de luxe of 'The Manchester Man' appeared only a few weeks ago. The decease is also announced of Mr. Lamb, the author of 'Dundee and its Antiquities.'

Mr. Heaton, who was for nearly half a century connected with the firm of W. Thacker & Co., died on Thursday in last week at his house in Clapham at the age of seventy-four years. He had been ailing in health for some years, and his place in Newgate Street was taken twelve months ago by Mr. R. A. Everett, formerly of Mudie's Library.

Dr. Karl Blind has been elected President of the Viking Club.

Messrs. Lawrence & Bullen will publish in a few days 'Minuscula: Lyrics of Nature, Art, and Love,' by Mr. F. W. Bourdillon. Some of the poems in this little volume are new, but others are the siftings of three yet smaller volumes of verse published anonymously at Oxford in 1891, 1892, and 1894, and now withdrawn from sale.

In conjunction with the Cumberland and Westmorland Antiquarian Society Mr. Elliot Stock will shortly publish 'The Register of Wetherhal Priory.' It will be edited, with notes and an introduction, by Archdeacon Prescott.

A good deal of interest has been recently excited in America by the appearance of an American-African poet, Mr. Paul Laurence Dunbar, who is declared by eminent critics to be the first to render perfectly the dialect of his people and their characteristics. Mr. Dunbar, whose parents were slaves in Kentucky until liberated by President Lincoln's proclamation, was born and educated in Ohio. His recitations of his own poems in various American cities have excited enthusiasm, especially in literary circles. His 'Lyrics of the Lowly' will shortly be published by Messrs. Chapman & Hall, with an introduction by Mr. W. D. Howells. It is further said that Mr. Dunbar will early in June give in London a public recital of some of his poems, under the patronage of the United States Ambassador.

In a forthcoming part of the Rendiconti of the Reale Accademia dei Lincei (tom. v. fasc. ii.), Signor Carlo Conti Rossini will publish the Ethiopic text of an apocryphal work entitled 'The Prayer of the Virgin at Bartos,' which he has edited chiefly from MSS. in the Vatican. It is thought that the Ethiopic version was based upon a Coptic original, and it is probably as old as the fourteenth century of our era.

The Parliamentary Papers of the most general interest to our readers this week are a Minute of the Committee of Council on Education with regard to the Voluntary Schools Act (1*d.*); Report for 1896 on Intermediate Education in Ireland (8*d.*); an Education Report for the Eastern Division of England and Wales (2*d.*); and a General Index to Bills and other Parliamentary Papers, 1880–1889 (3*s.* 10*d.*).

SCIENCE

ASTRONOMICAL LITERATURE.

A Study of the Sky. By Herbert A. Howe. (Macmillan & Co.)—This is a very favourable specimen of an introduction to what the author appropriately calls "the most ancient and the noblest of the physical sciences." It begins with a rapid sketch of the early history of astronomy. Then an explanation is given of the apparent daily motion of the heavens, followed by a description, with diagrams, of the principal constellations. Some idea is afforded of the construction of an observatory and of the instruments used therein, not forgetting the most important item of all, the astronomer himself; and if his qualifications are drawn in a way which almost recalls the remark of Rasselas at Imlac's enumeration of those of a poet, it is undoubtedly true that astronomical work is a great training in patience, steadiness, and accuracy, and can only be effectively pursued under the impulse of enthusiastic interest in the science. Nearly half the book before us is occupied with these preliminary and important matters; the remainder contains a very careful and accurate survey of the facts which have been ascertained or the probable surmises which have been put forth with regard to the worlds around us, both in the system of which our earth forms a part and the more distant stars and nebulæ, of the numbers and distribution of which in space (to some extent also of their nature) our knowledge has in recent years, by the aid of modern methods and instruments of observation, been so greatly increased. The illustrations, many of which are taken by permission from Knowledge, the Astrophysical Journal, and other periodicals, are of a very high order, and give information on solar, lunar, planetary, stellar, and nebular objects which could not be communicated in any other way. As the author modestly asks for correction on points requiring it, we may mention two which struck us in the course of a somewhat hasty perusal (the first, but not the last, we shall give). The old story of the burning of the Alexandrian library by the Saracens has been long regarded by most historians as an invention of later times, and, at any rate, it is very unlikely that many scientific books were then destroyed. When Neptune was discovered in 1846 Encke, not Galle, was Director of the Observatory at Berlin. The latter was one of Encke's assistants; in 1851 he was placed in charge of the observatory at Breslau, where he is still. We hope that when a new edition of this useful little compendium is called for the author will somewhat enlarge his scheme, and treat (as he is evidently well able to do) more fully and in greater detail of the celestial objects here brought in rapid succession before us.

The first volume of the Annales de l'Observatoire d'Astronomie Physique de Paris, situated in Meudon Park, and under the direction of M. Janssen, has appeared. It contains an historical introduction with a description of the observatory, and a memoir on solar photography, with specimens of the beautiful studies of the sun's surface obtained by that means. Other volumes will follow as funds allow.

We have received the numbers of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani for November and December, 1896, completing the twenty-fifth volume. Prof. Tacchini gives an account of the solar phenomena observed at Rome during the last quarter of 1896, with notes on their distribution in latitude during the third and fourth quarters. The December number contains an account of the observations made by MM. Kostinsky and Hansky, at Malya Karmakouly on the west coast of Novaya Zemlya, of the total eclipse of the sun on the 9th of August, together with reproductions of some of the photographs obtained. The sky was nearly clear at the commencement of the phenomenon; light cirrus clouds gradually overspread the sun during totality but were scarcely sufficient to affect the observations.

THE PROPOSED JUNGFRAU RAILWAY.

The projectors of the Jungfrau Railway, for which a concession has lately been granted by the Federal Government, have published a portfolio containing an account of their enterprise "considered from its scientific, technical, and financial aspects," together with an elaborate series of maps and sections and a fine panorama from the summit, the value of which would have been increased had the more distant peaks been identified.

The extreme height to be attained by the line, 13,430 ft.—we do not reckon the summit lift—is 1,000 feet less than that reached by railroads already constructed in South America, and far steeper gradients are now in use on Pilatus and some of the minor Alpine heights. The novelty of the Jungfrau line lies in the fact that almost its whole course will be above the snow-level. It will start from the summit station of the Wengern Alp Railway and ascend by an open incline towards the Eiger Glacier. At this point it will bury itself in the cliffs of the mountain, never to emerge again. The stations, of which there will be eight, will be excavated, but partly open, galleries. The Eiger Gallery Station will command a view of Grindelwald; the Mönch Station is expected to be "a favourite with tourists," who may hope to find guides ready to take them for a run on the Ewigschneefeld, or even to the top of the Mönch and down to the Eggishorn. The seventh station, a cavern 230 ft. below the summit, will be the true terminus, and from it passengers will have the choice of a lift or a spiral staircase to the highest ridge. The temperatures of the tunnel are calculated to range from $-2°$ to $-10°$ centigrade, and it is assumed that the permanent frost will prevent damage from disintegration or flooding. The maximum gradient will be 1 in 4; the motive power will be electricity, the force for which is to be obtained from the two Lütschinen torrents. The total cost of construction is estimated at 400,000*l.*; the length will be about twelve kilomètres. It is proposed to charge 40 francs for return tickets, and it is hoped that about 10,000 passengers will visit the summit every season.

Among the lovers of mountain-tops such a project for "la vulgarisation des sommités"—to use the French phrase—is sure to excite much probably undeserved ridicule and some perhaps legitimate disgust. It may, however, be difficult for the small minority who can hope to reach the top of a great Alp on their own legs to deny the right of the rest of mankind to any share in the glories of nature they themselves so highly prize. Climbers have persistently contradicted Mr. Ruskin's assertion that there are no beauties beyond the reach of children and cripples. The cripple may seem to have some reason for reminding us that he too is God's creature, and for asking to be given a chance to judge for himself of the highest works of his Creator. He may urge that one mountain—even though that mountain be the beautiful Jungfrau—is comparatively but a small sacrifice of privacy to ask from mountaineers. There is doubtless some truth in what the promoters add, "that those possessing the requisite bodily and mental strength will, in spite of the railways, find ample opportunities left to devote themselves to their noble sport." But while they profess to cater for the feeble, they condescend to argument, and are ready to hold out inducements even to the strong. The first "to desecrate the mountains," they remind them—not without point—were those "who did mountains simply in order to 'beat the record' or to invent 'new ascents' by choosing the most awkward route their foolhardiness could hit upon." The Mönch Station, they point out, will be an admirable starting-point for glacier expeditions. They have won the Swiss Alpine Club to their side by yielding to the, we should have imagined, superfluous stipulation that "all climbers, i.e., those who have made the ascent on foot, should have free access to the summit." Swiss generosity is proverbial! In their gratitude the local club have, through a special committee, certified that the rarity of the air will do no harm to tourists, and fortified their warranty by the remarkable statement that "on returning from those ice-bound peaks we always felt as fresh and more fit for work than when we started."

A great deal of the pamphlet is occupied with the consideration of the dangers to health likely to result from the sudden transport of numbers of promiscuous persons to a high altitude. The Federal Assembly required it to be proved that the risk was small or trifling. It has been satisfied, although it apparently requires the Company to insure the lives not only of their workmen, but also of their passengers, and there are some suggestions of a doctor being held in readiness to examine doubtful cases. No very new light is thrown on "mountain sickness" by the various communications from experts here collected. The reports are, as usual, somewhat contradictory, and some of the writers seem deficient in practical experience. Prof. Regnard, for instance, says, "No such thing will occur except in the case of a few nervous people gifted with a lively imagination," while M. Vallot and Dr. Egli-Sinclair take a somewhat different view. Prof. Regnard, however, supplies a curious experiment, illustrating the effect of exertion in intensifying the symptoms. Two guinea-pigs were placed under a bell-shaped globe, one being allowed to move freely, while the other was confined in a revolving cage, where it was forced to climb a treadmill. They were then subjected to a gradually rarefied atmosphere. The working guinea-pig collapsed in an atmosphere equivalent to that of the top of Mont Blanc. The idle guinea-pig held out till the air was reduced to that of 8,000 mètres, the height of Mount Everest, when it "became excited, rolled over on its back, foamed at the mouth, and seemed about to die."

Great stress is laid on the scientific advantages of the project. The promoters offer a donation of 4,000*l.* towards equipping an observatory, and 240*l.* a year more towards its support. Unless, however, the line can be kept open in winter, which must be more than doubtful, the scientific results are hardly likely to be equal to those of lower stations where permanent residence has been found possible.

It will be seen that the promoters are many-sided; they are even poetical. They describe their enterprise as "an ideal task," they regard it as "a child of our times, one of the daintiest flowers reared by science, human skill, and perseverance." The "dainty flower"—it is an odd phrase, surely, to use of a wormhole—will call, however, for something more than enthusiasm before it becomes a reality, and (since a share in the undertaking is offered to foreigners) it would seem as if there were still a possibility—shall we say a hope?—that the Swiss public may decline to provide the necessary capital.

SOCIETIES.

Society of Antiquaries.—April 23.—Anniversary Meeting—Viscount Dillon in the chair.—Mr. J. G. Waller and Mr. F. Davis were appointed scrutators of the ballot.—The following were elected Members of Council and officers for the ensuing year: President, Sir A. W. Franks; Vice-Presidents, Right Rev. the Bishop of Stepney, Sir H. H. Howorth, and Viscount Dillon; Treasurer, Dr. E. Freshfield; Director, F. G. Hilton Price; Secretary, C. H. Read; Other Members of Council, L. Alma Tadema, W. P. Baildon, Sir J. Evans, W. Gowland, E. Green, A. Higgins, J. Hilton, C. E. Keyser, P. Norman, W. Page, Sir O. Roberts, Sir J. C. Robinson, M. Stephenson, and Capt. J. B. Telfer.—In the absence of the President through ill health, his Annual Address was read by the Secretary. It contained the usual obituary notices of deceased Fellows, and reviewed the chief events of the year, including the excavations at Silchester and the partial destruction by rebuilding of the west front of Peterborough Cathedral. The President also dealt at some length with the provisions in force in foreign countries for the preservation and protection of ancient buildings and monuments, from particulars obtained through the courtesy of the Foreign Office.

April 29.—Sir H. H. Howorth, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. W. Gowland, late of the Imperial Japanese Mint, read the first part of a paper 'On the Dolmens and Burial Mounds in Japan.' The paper was illustrated with photographs, diagrams, and lantern-slides, and contained a résumé of Mr. Gowland's explorations of these sepulchral monuments during his long residence in Japan. The earliest burial mounds were simple tumuli of earth, in which bronze weapons and stone ornaments alone were found. These were succeeded by dolmen mounds, i.e., mounds containing stone chambers larger than cists, often of a spacious character, generally of rude megalithic structure, and all of the Iron Age. The dolmens are very numerous in the country, many hundreds being known to the author, and of these he had explored 406, and had made drawings of or measured 140. They are of four chief types—allées couvertes, dolmens with a partially defined chamber, dolmens with a perfectly defined chamber and entrance gallery, and dolmens with two chambers. The stones used in the construction of some are of a very ponderous character, several being from thirty to eighty tons in weight. The dolmens occur in groups, generally on the lower slopes and crests of the hills bounding the larger plains, and are found chiefly in four great centres, viz., the north of the Yedo plain, the central provinces (Yamato, Kawachi, &c.), Izumo, and the north of the island of Kyushu. The mounds which cover them are conical, sometimes with terraced sides, and a form which is peculiar to Japan—a combination of a square and a circular mound. The first two kinds vary in diameter from 25 ft. to 200 ft., and from 10 ft. to 35 ft. in height. The last are often 700 ft. to 1,000 ft. in length, 50 ft. to 90 ft. high, and one—that of the Emperor Nintoku, which is surrounded by two moats—covers eighty acres of ground. The dolmen chambers are of varying sizes, ranging from 12 ft. to 80 ft. in length. Several contain sarcophagi of hewn stone, terra-cotta, and wood, and similar sarcophagi are found in non-dolmen burial mounds. The contents and age of these structures will be dealt with in the second portion of the paper.

Numismatic.—April 29.—Sir J. Evans, President, in the chair.—Major-General M. W. E. Gosset exhibited a gold coin of Nasir-ed-din Khusru Shah, King of Delhi, who usurped the throne for four to five months in A.D. 1320. His coins are of extreme rarity, three only being known, one in the British Museum and one in the Berlin Museum, this specimen, brought from Afghanistan in 1873, being the third.—Dr. O. Codrington exhibited a gold amulet inscribed in the Arabic character with the ninety-nine epithets of the Deity.—Mr. Ready exhibited an unpublished variety of the common Porto Bello medal, distinguished by the initials I. K. and the word DUBLIN in the exergue; also an unpublished medal commemorating the victories of Frederick the Great in 1757.—Mr. W. C. Boyd read a paper on a find of Roman denarii at Cambridge, consisting of 193 coins ranging from the time of Commodus to that of Philip, A.D. 248.—Mr. Warwick Wroth read a paper on the Greek coins acquired by the British Museum in 1896, chiefly from the famous Montagu and Bunbury cabinets.

Linnean.—April 15.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. B. Hemsley was admitted, and Mr. D. A. Jones was elected a Fellow.—Mr. H. Fisher, the naturalist of the Jackson-Harmsworth Polar Expedition, made preliminary observations on the plants collected by him in Franz-Josef Land.—On behalf of Mr. A. O. Walker an abstract was read of a paper on some new Crustacea from the Irish Seas. Of the four species of Edriophthalma described as new, two of them, viz., Leuconopsis ensifer and Stenothoë crassicornis, were taken, at a depth of thirty-three and twenty-three fathoms respectively, during the dredging and trawling operations of the Liverpool Marine Biological Committee, in April, 1896, in the steamer John Fell, which was then employed in obtaining ova for the experimental fish-hatchery at Port Erin. It was found that by attaching a tow-net with a light cane ring to the back of the trawl-net, a short distance behind the foot-rope, many small Crustacea were captured, including the above-named species. Of the other two novelties, Apseudes hibernicus was taken by Mr. Gamble between tide-marks during a week's collecting at Valentia Harbour, and Parapleustes latipes was found by Mr. Walker while naming the collection of Amphipoda in the Dublin Museum. Four specimens were taken in 750 fathoms off the south-west coast of Ireland. Until the publication of the Report of the Committee on the Marine Zoology of the Irish Sea (Brit. Assoc. Report, 1896, pp. 417-450), little had been done in investigating the Edriophthalma, except in the neighbourhood of the Isle of Man, where Mr. Walker had collected a number of species.—The Secretary gave an abstract of a paper by Dr. A. J. Ewart 'On the Evolution of Oxygen from Coloured Bacteria.' The author found that coloured bacteria under certain appropriate conditions possess the power of evolving oxygen in greater or less amount. In some the oxygen appeared to be absorbed from the air by the pigment substance excreted by the bacteria. The process he considered was not a vital one. The substances contained in an alcoholic extract were found to have the same power, though less marked, of occluding oxygen, but this property was soon lost. The purple and green bacteria, in which the pigment forms an integral part of the bacterial plasma, when exposed to radiant energy showed a very weak evolution of oxygen, continuing for an indefinite period under favourable conditions. In the former of these the assimilatory "pigment" is "bacterio-purpurin," in the latter "chlorophyll." The process in this case is a vital one, and the oxygen evolved is apparently derived from the assimilation of carbon dioxide.

CHEMICAL.—April 29. Prof. Dewar, President, in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'On the Explosion of Chlorine Peroxide with Carbonic Oxide,' by Messrs. H. B. Dixon and E. J. Russell,—'Monochlordiparaconic Acid and some Condensations,' by Dr. H. C. Myers,—and 'On the Decomposition of Iron Pyrites,' by Mr. W. A. Caldecott.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—May 1.—Annual Meeting.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The Annual Report of the Committee of Visitors for the year 1896, testifying to the continued prosperity and efficient management of the Institution, was read and adopted.—The following gentlemen were elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, the Duke of Northumberland; Treasurer, Sir J. Crichton-Browne; Secretary, Sir F. Bramwell; Managers, Sir F. Abel, Right Hon. A. J. Balfour, J. Wolfe Barry, W. Crookes, E. Frankland, C. Hawksley, D. W. C. Hood, V. Horsley, W. Huggins, Right Hon. Lord Lister, L. Mond, A. W. Rücker, B. W. Smith, Hon. Sir J. Stirling, and Sir H. Thompson; Visitors, Sir J. Blyth, W. A. Brailey, E. Dent, J. A. Fleming, E. Kraftmeier, Sir F. Laking, H. Leonard, Sir P. Magnus, T. L. Mears, L. M. Rate, T. Tyrer, R. W. Wallace, J. Westlake, His Honour Judge F. M. White, and J. Wimshurst.

May 3.—Sir J. Crichton-Browne, Treas. and V.P., in the chair.—The following were elected Members: Mrs. Silvanus P. Thompson and Mr. C. E. Southwell.

SOCIETY OF ARTS.—May 3.—Mr. L. F. Day delivered the first lecture of his course of Cantor Lectures 'On Design in Lettering.'

May 4.—A paper 'On the Arctic and Antarctic' was read before the Foreign and Colonial Section by Mr. A. Trevor-Battye.

May 5.—A paper 'On the Railway to India' was read by Mr. C. E. D. Black, and was followed by a discussion.

May 6.—Field-Marshal Lord Roberts in the chair.—A paper 'On Kafiristan: its Manners and Customs,' was read before the Indian Section by Sir G. Scott Robinson. The paper was illustrated by a collection of costumes, weapons, &c., and by a series of lantern-slides.—A discussion followed.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—May 3.—Mr. G. M. Lawford, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. H. O'Connor entitled 'Automatic Gas Station Governors.'

SOCIETY OF BIBLICAL ARCHÆOLOGY.—May 4.—Sir P. Le Page Renouf, President, in the chair.—A paper by the Hon. Miss Plunket was read, entitled 'The Median Calendar.'

ARISTOTELIAN.—April 26.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. E. C. Benecke read a paper 'On the Logical Subject of the Proposition.' If logic is regarded as the science of proof, or of the establishment of the results of thought, it is necessary for it that the import of the propositions in which those results and their grounds are stated should be determined; and this involves determination of their subject. Now every proposition has various meanings. In an actual argument the particular meaning is fixed by the context. Where there is no context, the subject can be determined, if at all, only by the form; and unless it is so the proposition is unmanageable for logic. This justifies the very great attention paid to the A, E, I, O propositions in formal logic, but also lays on logicians certain obligations which they have not always shown great readiness to fulfil.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. Aristotelian, 8.—'Aristotle's Theory of Incontinency,' Mr. W. H. Fairbrother.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Design in Lettering,' Lecture II., Mr. L. F. Day. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—Discussion on 'Some Legal Incidents of Tenancies of Urban Property as illustrated by Recent Decisions.'
— Geographical, 8½.—'Recent Journeys in Sze-Chuan, Western China,' Mrs. Bishop.
TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'Volcanoes,' Dr. T. Anderson.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'A Half Century of Line Engraving, 1780–1830,' Mr. G. Clulow.
WED. United Service Institution, 3.—'The Defects of our Military Financial System: 1, For Peace; 2, For War,' Lieut.-Col. S. Churchill.
— Huguenot, 8.—Annual General Meeting.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Motor Traffic. Technical Considerations,' Sir D. Salomons.
— Geological, 8.—'The Gravels and Associated Deposits at Newbury (Berks),' Mr. E. P. Richards. 'The Mollusca of the Chalk Rock,' Part II., Mr. H. Woods.
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Liquid Air as an Agent of Research,' Prof. Dewar.
— Royal, 4½.
— Electrical Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'The Generation of Electrical Energy for Tramways'; 'Disturbances of Submarine Cable Working by Electric Tramways,' Mr. A. S. Trotter.
— Mathematical, 8.—'On Cubic Curves as connected with Certain Triangles in Perspective,' Mr. S. Roberts; 'An Analogue of Archimedes' Lemma,' Mr. J. Jack. 'An Essay on the Geometrical Calculus,' Herr E. Lampe (communicated). 'On the Partition of Numbers,' Mr. G. B. Mathews.
FRI. Physical, 5.—'An Instrument for comparing Thermometers with a Standard,' Mr. W. Watson. 'An Experiment on Surface Tension,' Mr. A. S. Ackerman. 'The effect of Temperature on the Magnetic and Electric Properties of Iron,' Mr. D. K. Morris. 'The Formation of Mercury Films by Electric Osmosis,' Mr. R. Appleyard.
— Astronomical, 8.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Explosion Flames,' Prof. H. Dixon.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Greek Theatre according to Recent Discoveries,' Rev. J. P. Mahaffy.

Science Gossip.

THE Institution of Civil Engineers are making what is for them an entirely new departure, in imposing an examination on candidates for associate-membership. It is thought that the profession will be thereby raised to a higher standard in the public mind—more on equality with that of medicine—as tending to check the possible entry of the unqualified. On the other hand, any system of examination can scarcely fail to encourage the detestable practice of "cramming." It remains to be seen how the new method works. In former days it was thought that a civil engineer could alone be judged by his actual personal accomplishments in his own sphere of action.

PROF. GEORGE FORBES, who took a leading part in the utilization of the Falls of Niagara, has recently been examining the Nile cataracts with a view to reporting on the feasibility of harnessing them in a similar way for purposes of the transmission of power. He has also quite lately examined the Victoria Falls of the Zambesi river, on his way to Egypt from New Zealand.

THERE is no doubt that enormous power exists in the Falls of the Nile; but whether they can be profitably turned to account is another question. The item for consideration is, of course, whether the work would not involve an expenditure as great as, or greater than, that attached to erecting the ordinary electric-power stations of to-day. It may also be asked whether such power would ever be likely to be of service within a reasonable distance from the source of supply.

AT the Deutsche Geographentag, which has just been held at Jena, it was decided to hold the next meeting at Berlin in 1900, instead of in 1899, in case the twelfth Internationale Geographentag should be held at the German capital in the last-named year.

THE small planet, No. 348, discovered by M. Charlois at Nice on November 28th, 1892, has been named May.

WE have received the Report of Mr. Tebbutt's Observatory at the Peninsula, Windsor, New South Wales, for 1896. That year was characterized by a very large number of clear nights, and Mr. Tebbutt obtained many excellent observations, both meridian and equatorial. No fewer than 161 phases of occultations of stars by the moon were recorded.

MISS CATHERINE WOLF BRUCE, of New York city, proposes to found a gold medal, to be awarded annually by the Astronomical Society of the Pacific, for distinguished services in astronomy, to persons of either sex and of any nation. That society already awards a bronze medal, founded in 1890 by the late Joseph A. Donohoe, for the discovery of each unexpected comet.

FINE ARTS

THE SALONS AT PARIS.

(First Notice.)

THE Salons have opened this year in an atmosphere of rubbish and building materials. Both at the Champs Élysées and the Champ de Mars, on the two banks of the Seine, the pickaxe has begun its work of demolition to make room for the buildings intended for the Universal Exhibition of 1900. At the Champs Élysées, in particular, the sight is a sorry one. This Palace of Industry, which, in spite of its name, the artists had become used to consider as their building, as the Salons have been held there since 1857, is already half ripped open; but its walls, ever ready to do service, have been devoted for this one and last occasion to the display of the canvases which record the artistic output of the year.

The varnishing in these recent ruins has suggested some gloomy thoughts. Apart from the recollections of the past, very dear to all the artists for whom the palace has been the scene of their first appearance and the witness of their success, minds have been full of uneasiness about the future. Where will next year's exhibition be held? This is the great question exhibitors are asking to-day, which overrides all others, and agitates every spirit. It seems that the very existence of art is bound up with a building where pictures can be hung, and statues ranged in line like orange-trees in tubs. The feeling excited by this question of future Salons during the interval between the demolitions of to-day and the completion of the Palace of Arts, which will raise its head on the new avenue projected to continue the view from the Invalides, and the bitter and vehement tone which the discussions have taken on every side, have given a better understanding of the abnormal element in the conditions under which works of art are produced in our day.

Formerly monuments, religious and civil, cathedrals and abbeys, palaces or "Hôtels de Ville," were built, and statues and pictures grew with these monuments, were supported from the same source, served to complete or glorify their meaning, or display their soul. Works of art always had a definite end. The artist received his programme ready made from his contemporaries; the invention on his part was generally confined to technical matters; he felt about him a homogeneous public to whose words he gave expression, at once its servant and its herald.

This public has long disappeared; it has been so cut up, so torn into rags, that it has lost all power to afford the modern artist any hopes of its support. He does not even know any longer where to find this public, yet he must effect a meeting; he gives himself up to the marketing of the annual rendezvous: hence the institution of the Salons. The producer, the exhibitor, makes a show of his stock, on which the public bestows a curiosity for the most part superficial and indifferent; and as people never agree on any essential point, the showman must attract the attention of the loungers or tempt the ennui of buyers. Properly speaking, the Palace of Arts is more like a money-market than anything else; it is idle for the architects to erect their colonnades, crown them with pediments and domes; they will only be adding a new banking branch, a new cashier's counter, to the monuments of the modern Babel.

It is a wonder how in such circumstances serious and true art, of the sort which grows from the intimate harmony of souls in meditation, can continue to flourish. But, God be thanked, the human heart is full of resource, and, however unfavourable the soil, the small blue flower of the ideal persists in raising a head pensive and delicate, but tenacious of life, to an inclement sky. In spite of the seeming incoherence and anarchy of the art of to-day works appear here and there which will represent for the future some of the aspirations of the modern soul, and it is our business to discover them among this confused mixture, this great display of pictures bad and good which we call a Salon.

The statutes of the corporation of Sienna painters in the fourteenth century contained a declaration admirable in its simplicity. "We are," said they, "those who make known to men unpolished and illiterate the miracles performed by virtue and by means of the holy faith. And nothing, however small, can have either beginning or ending without these three things: ability, knowledge, and volition with love." Times and circumstances may change, the various media may be transformed and ideas evolved, but we must always return to this standard. No one, indeed, would be ingenuous enough to-day to require from our artists such decorations as those of the painters of Sienna. A reporter who interviewed the studios from Montmartre to Montparnasse has brought back from his visitation such contradictory answers that it would be a task of great difficulty to extract from them a concordant definition of the aim and mission of art. And yet in every work of art worthy to be so styled what one ought to seek and find to-day, as in old times, is perhaps only a wish served by knowledge and determined by love. The critic's sole business is to estimate the relative value, the degree of beneficence, of these diverging loves and wishes. This quality of volition is marked in an important and much debated work by M. Jean Paul Laurens, exhibited at the Champs Élysées. Le Lauraguais (No. 968) is a large decorative panel destined for the town hall of Toulouse. M. Jean Paul Laurens is a native of the Haute Garonne; he has already painted for the same destination an episode in the siege of Toulouse by Simon de Montfort at the time of the Albigensian crusade. This year he has chosen to represent a corner of Haut Languedoc, where he was born. Professional landscape painters make many objections to the conception as well as the execution of this picture; their criticisms have not shaken my faith, and I rely on the very strong emotion which this picture has called up in me. I have had occasion recently to cross a part of that Lauraguais whose characteristic aspects M. Laurens has chosen to sum up. Standing before his picture, I thought I saw suddenly rising a heroic vision of the country I had traversed. As far as the edge of the horizon under an autumn sun the ridges of the hills round themselves off and disappear. Hung on their sides, pairs of oxen drag heavy ploughs, and, as far as the eye can reach, in the fields, separated here and there by low green hedges, the furrows run side by side in lines, showing up sharply by a reddish brown, here the grass which has turned pale, there the stubble which has grown yellow in the heat of the Southern summer, which is almost over. With such materials it was not easy to make what one calls an interesting picture and to fill a large canvas. These difficulties have not stopped M. Laurens. He seems to have given himself up with a sort of tender, yet manly enthusiasm to the appeal of his native country, the sweet, strong charm of early recollection. With eyes and memory full of the splendour of the familiar horizons which saw him grow up in the midst of nature, he has joyously returned to her, and to make his picture has only needed to look into the double vision of his youth and his heart. The Hôtel de Ville of Paris and the new Sorbonne, of which the decoration is not yet completed, have not been so well treated as the town hall of Toulouse. For the Sorbonne, M. G. Dubufe has painted a ceiling, exhibited at the Champ de Mars under the title Et Scientia quoque Poesis erit (442). The painting of a ceiling is always a delicate and somewhat paradoxical business. Although this form of art numbers certainly masterpieces since the sixteenth century, it is difficult to regard as normal a painting which can only be seen after great trouble at the cost of a dislocation of the head most unfavourable to æsthetic pleasure. Michael Angelo, when he left the Sixtine Chapel, where he had passed years with his solitary and austere dreams as his only companions, had contracted (so Vasari and Condivi tell us) so great a stiffness that he had lost the power of looking from the top to the bottom. In order to read a letter he was obliged to lift it above his face. Certainly, details such as these go to increase the religious respect, not unmingled with a suggestion of fear, which one feels on entering the Sixtine Chapel, but they show, nevertheless, the paradoxical element in the painting of ceilings. M. Dubufe is not Michael Angelo, and he has not a stiff neck; the allegory by which he has attempted to express the thought that science also will be a form of poetry is not very clearly made out, still less is it sublime; it is an academical figure whose elegance is sufficiently commonplace.

It must be confessed that painter-decorators often have very strange themes dictated to them. For the Social Museum M. Axilette has had an allegorical ceiling to paint (Champs Élysées, 52), Humanity, the Fatherland, the Social Muse. For the Ministry of Commerce M. Sinibaldi (Champs Élysées, 1569) has painted French Commerce receives Specimens of the First Stuffs presented to Her by Peace and Plenty, and really he has extricated himself from his difficulty with great ingenuity, mingling with a kind of candour reality and allegory, and composing a design in which all harmoniously gathered together make up a cluster highly agreeable to the eye. For the Hôtel de Ville, lastly, M. Lagarde (Champ de Mars, 736) has painted with a very decorative bias The Lake of the Bois de Boulogne at the end of an autumn afternoon. He is the loving painter of sad and silent hours, clouded horizons, modulations in low tone of half lights. He has made of the Bois de Boulogne a melancholy solitude enlivened only by the great swans which slowly intersect the dreaming water, of which the tranquil surface reflects the sweetness of the sky and the rusted green of the leaves soon to die.

M. Montenard, in the fervent Southern style, has composed The Basin of the Tuileries, also for the Hôtel de Ville of Paris (Champ de Mars, 920), a bit of country in the sun, and for the palace of the French Union at Constantinople he has put in the roadstead of Marseilles (919) all the azure of the Mediterranean, and even more. And everything considered, it is still the decorative landscape which produces on the walls of our public buildings the happiest effect, and calls up the most reposeful images to gaze upon. Dear good nature refreshes us after allegories and academical figures more or less pretentious; to her we must always return.

André Michel.

THE SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER COLOURS.

Several artists of distinction who are frequent contributors to the gatherings in Pall Mall are this year conspicuous by their absence. There are, of course, here as elsewhere, a considerable number of commonplace, mannered, and dull drawings, but these are so far from being the staple of the exhibition that it is unjust to say that it is destitute of fine things. It is to be regretted, however, that Sir E. Burne-Jones and Messrs. Abbey, Alma Tadema, Dobson, Shields, and Wallis have contributed nothing, and that several excellent painters have sent only one picture each.

Sir John Gilbert's dramatic way of treating romantic and legendary themes, which he has long excelled in, is, despite some few inevitable shortcomings, once more exemplified in his illustration of Scott's 'Ivanhoe,' which represents Cedric's Pledge at the Festival at the Castle of Ashby (No. 27); indeed, nothing could be better in its way, or broader, more animated, or richer in colour. Sir John's other contribution, which he calls A Standard-Bearer (119), is not a little hackneyed, yet no one in this society but the venerable President could paint so bold and masculine a work.

Mr. W. Field's position is much improved as an idyllic painter by his Way to Borough Marsh (9), a capital example of the school of David Cox. The shadows are, however, rather dirty, a fault injurious to the charm of a firmly drawn and crisply painted view. The composition is excellent. Hampstead Heath (162), by the same artist, possesses similar merits, but it is not so happily designed, nor are its somewhat hackneyed elements so well put together. — Mr. T. Lloyd is a neat-handed painter, but his range of subjects, although pleasing, is decidedly narrower than his friends could desire, for they almost invariably include tall figures grouped on the banks of streams, where, Mr. Lloyd's horizons being inevitably low, they rise sharply and solidly against the skies the artist is devoted to. The figures are always excellent in their way, clearly and firmly drawn, and suitable to the subjects they are intended to illustrate. A Primrose on the River's Brim (11) comprises two such figures, lovers who seem to be having a tiff. It is a clever, but not an ambitious drawing of a class that is much too numerous, and admitting that it is practically faultless, we feel that we should like a change in the artist's mood as well as his manner, his materials, and his motives. A Dance at the Hall (63) indicates that even Mr. Lloyd feels the necessity of a change, so far, at least, as his choice of subjects goes, for the theme is that which the late Mr. S. Read often essayed to treat. No. 63 is a capital picture of full moonlight over a snowy landscape, and, of course, an ancient mansion is inserted of the kind dear to painters of Mr. Lloyd's calibre, partly surrounded by bare trees, and fully lit up because of a festival within. The effect of moonlight on snow is happily represented, and the scene is pleasantly and skilfully painted, but the freshest point about it is the introduction of a group of deer, who, fascinated by the glowing light of the windows, and perhaps attracted by sounds of revelry within the house, approach timidly and wonderingly. Water Lilies (158) is another enjoyable drawing which shows Mr. Lloyd has improved since last year, when he sent to this gallery nothing so good as Nos. 63 and 158. The figures are, like the rest of the work, decidedly pretty. Spring Evening (170) is another instance of Mr. Lloyd's limited choice of subjects; otherwise it is decidedly acceptable.

Mrs. Allingham, too, is more than usually well represented. Her Old Kentish Inn (7) is a highly idyllic drawing of an ancient roadside tavern, with its half-timber front and quaint tiled roof. It is embowered among trees nearly as old as itself, and it is all the more precious in these days of improvements, when old things are rarely left alone. The colour and brightness of this drawing make the slightness and weakness of the foreground more regrettable. A Bluebell Hollow (113) reminds us of that not remote date when Mrs. Allingham had never painted anything less fresh and beautiful than this delicate picture. Broad, solid, and simple, 'A Bluebell Hollow' is worthy of her best period. In a Spring Copse (213) ought not to be overlooked by those who care for No. 113. Of A Primrose Bank (225) much the same may be said, although its subject is somewhat hackneyed, and its execution is not quite so sound and solid. In short, it may be said that Mrs. Allingham is herself again in these landscapes, while we should like to see some more of her figure pictures.

Turning to the other landscapes, we may begin with Mr. Albert Goodwin's dignified and sympathetic Bamborough Castle (31), a delicate, massively painted, and most subtly toned and drawn panorama of vast grey sands and a pale sea in the distance, an atmosphere softened by mist and suffused with pallid light. The unity and vigour of the painter's inspiration have added greatly to the impressive simplicity of this fine piece; indeed, if the rushy foreground were more solid, it would be irreproachable. Amsteg, St. Gothard (94), is as broad as it is tender, silvery in tone and colour, and yet perfectly solid and strong. Mr. Goodwin's Spiez, Lake Thun (96), it may safely be said, combines many of the charms of the art of Turner and Alfred Hunt; in fact, its draughtsmanship is at once firm and solid, its gradations are exquisite, and its colour is extremely delicate. The Jumna and the Taj Mahal, from Agra Fort (116), is one of the broadest and subtlest of Mr. Goodwin's Indian drawings. However, the thinness of the handling is against it, and the same objection may be urged against the technique of The Pilgrims, "Here have we no continuing city" (150), in which a poetical idea is suggested rather than expressed, and the means are inadequate for success and out of keeping with the motive. Whitby Abbey (183) is not equal to several of Alfred Hunt's drawings of that noble ruin, and the subject of Mont St. Michel (198) is too large and important to be treated as it is. Mr. Goodwin's drawing can hardly be said to suggest anything like a concrete idea such as pervades his highly telling view of the Jumna, No. 116.—Fuller of sentiment, but far less delicate, searching, and subtle in their execution than those of Mr. Goodwin, are the numerous drawings which Mr. S. P. Jackson has sent. Like Mr. Lloyd, he in more than one instance has departed from the studies and themes which he repeats too often. It is well that this should be so, and it is better than well that he should have pitched upon so little hackneyed a theme as that of No. 59, Stonehenge, Winter Sunset, which, though with different materials, is as poetical and fully as impressive as any of those studies of Cornish bays in misty twilight we have so often admired. The style and simplicity of the drawing are exactly what the subject demands. A Thames Backwater (45), an old drawing by Mr. Jackson, is rather weak if not commonplace. Quite another theme is that of The Hamoaze from Devonport Dockyard (89), as it was fifty years ago. It is a good example of Mr. Jackson's most vivid manner of depicting nature. In it he appears to a certain extent as a realist rather than the painter of ideas of which his coast scenes and their effects are but the expressive materials and types, borrowed from nature, and conventionalized according to the artist's mood. In Moonrise at the Land's End (163) the reader will find an apt illustration of our meaning and of the painter's characteristic style and mannerisms combined in the representation of the ghastly cliffs, the moonlight fading on the misty sea, and that stern solemnity of the time and place which is proper to the scene. As a drawing, on the contrary, it can hardly be said to be up to Mr. Jackson's standard. Porth Cotham, Cornwall (168), is, on the other hand, one of the best and most representative examples we have had from him for many years, because it gives, with appropriate dignity and simplicity that are almost classic, the solemnity of the scene when the full moon rises through the mist which is so frequent and fine an element of the landscape in West Cornwall. It is an especially excellent representation of, or rather it suggests, the calm atmosphere, where not a movement or change of colour in the scene at large distracts our attention from the low murmuring and remurmuring of the waves where they fall upon the level sands, and the waves' slow beat is distinctly yet but softly audible. Headland extends beyond headland in the coast-line till the vapour-charged air absorbs the last of them. All the while, the sun being but indirectly visible, there is a faint rosy flush upon the edges of the loftiest clouds, and the firmament darkens behind them. The reddened moon grows paler as it rises behind the evening band, with which our artist knows so well how to deal. A non-naturalistic landscape, yet instinct with the dignity of nature, 'Porth Cotham,' however much it may lack of his colour and force, possesses a considerable share of the idyllic mood of Samuel Palmer, who in his younger days painted much in Cornwall, and there found not a few of the materials which he used with so much genius. Another view of the same sort appears in No. 169, On the Wild North Cornish Coast. The effect represented here is that which immediately precedes sunset, and while the latest direct light still flushes the pinnacles and step-like grades of the slate cliffs. The drawing is more precise and firm than Mr. Jackson's usually is when he is dealing with twilight effects. It should be so, because more of daylight than ordinary makes the outlines clear and the shadows darker and more distinct than when the evening's mists have risen. Yet another drawing by Mr. Jackson claims attention, viz., A Barque endeavouring to beat off Shore in a Sea-Fog at the Lizard (188).

Mr. R. W. Macbeth's Gipsies' Sunday (60) is a water-colour version of a capital picture in oil of his which we lately praised, a young gipsy seated on the bank of a rapid stream and bathing her limbs. This drawing is all Mr. Macbeth has contributed to the gallery, but it is powerful and masculine.—Mr. R. T. Waite sends a picture (72) of a party of villagers gathering nuts at the side of a copse; in it he has adopted the manner of A. D. Fripp, and in some respects it is almost as good a drawing as any of Fripp's, but it is not so solid, nor does it possess the same purity of colour and delicacy of tone. On the other hand, the landscape, the figures of the nutters, and the sky effect where the sun and full moon are almost equally powerful, are broad, well drawn, and natural, and the white calm is depicted with all Fripp's delicate appreciation of nature and the lightness of his touch. Haymakers changing Ground (102) is more in Mr. Waite's usual manner, but not so good. None of his other drawings is particularly attractive.

Another group of landscapes with figures may now be criticized, and we shall begin with the works of Miss M. Butler (one of the Society's most recent and fortunate acquisitions), which are pleasantly fresh and bright. The young lady knows how to look at her subjects with the eyes of a well-trained artist; she can make good pictures out of simple and, indeed, trivial materials; and all her three contributions are extremely interesting and even beautiful, although there is not a shred of a story, anecdote, incident, or an atom of pathos beyond that which always attends really artistic representations of homely nature. The Banquet (75) is perhaps the best of her contributions; yet, although it depicts nothing more recondite or romantic than what Browning called "a flutter-down of doves" eager to feast on a mass of spilt grain, it is a true picture, admirable in tonality and colouring. Some needless blackness in the shadows is all that is objectionable in it. No. 69, Toll from the Turnip Cart, comprises nothing more ambitious and pretentious than a group of cattle in a sunlit spring meadow, an excellently painted and well-composed clump of beeches behind them, and a noteworthy sky overhead. The merits of the picture, which is bright, pure in colour, and well modelled throughout, culminate in the cows, who are picking up turnips shaken down from a passing cart. They are a little rough in handling, and the picture suffers accordingly. Miss Butler's third contribution is Shine and Shadow (140), a well-composed group of white cows lying in a sunny meadow, the colour of which is a little positive, if not somewhat crude, and the herbage itself is rather heavy in tone and touch. These pictures command attention by the massing and breadth of their chiaroscuro, and the solid way in which they have been handled.—Mr. D. Murray, absorbed in working for the Royal Academy, where he appears in very great strength, has sent but a single drawing. It is, however, a capital specimen of his ability and the wealth of his resources. It is called Cut Timber (92), and in some respects reminds us of John Linnell's broad way of painting; it is full of solidity and good draughtsmanship. Besides, there is plenty of force, both of tone and colour. There is no doubt, however, that it is a little too chalky. The composition, as is usually the case in a good David Murray, is happy.

We shall conclude our notes upon a series of drawings selected on a second survey, or rather re-selected from a number of meritorious examples, by noticing Sir F. Powell's marine piece, A Glimpse of the Sea (106), which represents two young children gazing intently over a wall, at the edge of a cliff, through the warm mist which half shrouds the sea, yet does not hinder its surface from glittering through the dense haze. Sir Francis, who has always been fond of painting misty and opalescent effects upon the sea and shore, has added much to our admiration of his art by the fineness, breadth, and beautiful colouring of this, his best drawing of the sort. It is, in fact, an approximation to the work of A. D. Fripp, and yet preserves the impress of the living painter, and is, moreover, a capital exercise in tone.

The remaining examples that possess some importance may be briefly disposed of. Mr. Marshall has done for A City of the Guelderland, Holland (2), what he has done for countless English cities. This is a tender picture of moonlight and sunlight combined, while yet the latter rules. Its grading and the difficult and contradictory tones and colours demand much praise. From Lambeth Embankment (73) is a good specimen of Mr. Marshall's older manner of painting Thames-side subjects half-shrouded in lurid yet opalescent smoke and mist. Mannered as it is, it is artistic, characteristic, finely massed, large in its style, and true. We care less for a mannered if well-conceived view of The Tower (23); and Mr. Marshall's Old Essex Wharf, Limehouse (58), has little of the racy roughness and sympathetic spirit and rare force of Mr. Whistler's pictures of such themes; still it is good in itself. Nymegen (218) takes us back to the style and mood of 'A City of the Guelderland.'—With Mr. C. Davidson we go to Perranporth (3), a vista of a sunlit moorland path which is delicate and harmonious, but rather more woolly than is usual with this artist, whose Surrey scenes of many years ago were quite as bright as this Cornish one, and erred rather on the side of hardness and over definition than otherwise. On the Moor, Perranporth (48), is a good composition and at the same time a capital sketch of the coast in calm and sunny weather. Mr. Davidson sends several other works of the same kind; perhaps too many of them.—Of Mr. S. T. G. Evans's Sheep's Bridge (4) much the same may be said, although it is sweet in sentiment, harmonious, and English, in the mood and manner of the artist's distinguished father, "Sam Evans of Eton." No. 25, Early Spring on the Thames, near Windsor, is decidedly good, modest, and also reminds one of his father, and has besides a touch of David Cox about it.

Mr. S. J. Hodson has of late distinguished himself by painting German buildings and streets of all sorts in a manner of which Entrance to the Rathaus, Goslar (5), is a capital example. Although it lacks force and would be much improved by a massive colour scheme, it is solid, well drawn, and sound. The pearliness of its light is enjoyable, and would be more so if the chiaroscuro were more massive. The Holz Markt and Rathaus, Halberstadt (44), a work of the same sort, is good but confused, and not one of Mr. Hodson's best drawings. A decidedly picturesque subject, which deserved a simpler sort of treatment, is that of the same painter's Market-Place, Goslar (181). Mr. Hodson is a sort of Samuel Prout come to life again, as if to paint Prout's subjects.

One of the most unequal painters of animals now flourishing is Mr. J. M. Swan, whose Tiger and Tigress (10) is full of energy and character, but the dirtiness of its landscape, its unclean colours and slovenly drawing are really distressing.—Mr. Birket Foster's thoroughly characteristic Wild Flowers (13) is quite as pleasing as any of his innumerable drawings of the same class, and it is less spotty. Near Connel Ferry (209), cottages with pines, is not less characteristic, and is perhaps more mannered, still it is pleasing and wholesome, if not ambitious. Much the same may be said of Crofters' Cottages at Strath, Gairloch (220), a curious group of rude and slovenly dwellings. — Sir E. J. Poynter's On the Lake of Geneva (16) is as firmly and solidly executed as if it were a sculpture in marble. Though rather cold, it is bright, finished, and veracious, the invariable qualities of his workmanship. No. 197, From a Garden on the Lake of Geneva, is another example, but brighter and warmer, and possesses much of the same skill and energy. There must be a good deal of facility, too, for without it no energy or industry could produce so much solid work. — At Tanjiers (20), by Mr. E. A. Goodall, is picturesque, its colouring is pretty, and the atmosphere is warm; but his Entrance to the Grand Canal, Venice (38), is a better drawing; it is, however, by no means innocent of the lamp.—Mr. M. Hale's Winter Twilight (21), a striking view of a gaslit, smoky London street, its glaring shops and crowded pavements, as they appear after a rainy sunset, is an extraordinary tour de force, worthy of careful study, and sure to win applause when it has been thoroughly examined. It is a curious contrast to Sir E. Poynter's works. No student will, or ought to, overlook Mr. Hale's broad and solid Spring (228).

No. 24, Mr. R. Little's Italian Landscape, hardly deserves that title. It is woolly and neither beautiful nor romantic. Much more might have been made of the subject, which is a good one, of Mr. Little's Orange Seller (226). —If Mr. J. W. North's thoroughly unreal as well as unpoetical King Arthur's Pool (30) were less like a piece of feeble stained glass it would be a better work of art. Crude, thin, and gaudy, it is destitute of draughtsmanship of any sort.—Very graceful in its serenity and sentiment, and admirably drawn without forfeiting breadth and softness, is Mr. E. A. Waterlow's A River Road, Evening (37), which is happy in combining some of the skill and taste of Cox with the breadth and Englishness of Constable. It is one of the truest pastorals of the year. — The Choir of St. Père, Chartres (41), shows Mr. T. M. Rooke at his best as a painter of picturesque architecture. It is a pity that this fine view of a noble interior is injured by the lack of solidity in the nearer columns. But for this No. 41 would be stereoscopic as well as bright, good in colour, and broad. Other drawings of architectural subjects by Mr. Rooke are much to be praised. The best of them is Rue de l'Épicerie, Rouen (49).—Mr. R. Allan's On the Loing (64) is excellent in colour and grading. His Fresh from the Sea (68), a picture of fisher-folk landing their catch, is rich in colour and tone, and, in its way, effective. But the shadows of the foreground are too dark and hot, and therefore out of keeping with the rest of the picture. —In its treatment, subject, and colour comparable with the last-named example, Mr. A. Hopkins's The Entrance to our Cove (77) possesses spirit, abundance of movement, colour, and a well-arranged chiaroscuro. It is, however, decidedly conventional, and not a little mannered.—The West Wind (81) and The Dawn (185), by Mr. Walter Crane, we are bound to say, are neither of them worthy of him.—Mr. H. S. Marks, in Golden-headed Conures (90) and other drawings of birds now here, is exactly where he was last year and the year before.—In Touraine (104), by Mr. C. Gregory, is tender, careful, and sincere, but rather weak in tone, and not so powerful in colour as it might have been. —Hard, and somewhat too positive in its colour, Mr. W. E. Walker's The Gladness of a Summer Day (132) is bright and its sentiment is pretty. —Mr. G. Clausen's ideas of clouds, to say nothing of his notions of the earth's surface, as they are manifest in Earth and Sky (135), are somewhat indefinite and as ugly as they are original. It is well for him that Mr. Ruskin is not likely to see what Mr. Clausen is hardy enough to call clouds in this picture. We never saw anything so bad before and intended for clouds. —Technically speaking, the sea in Mr. Napier Hemy's Misty Weather (147) possesses every merit and proves the artist's knowledge. The fishing-boat is excellently painted, and the sea is first rate. The visitor should look at Mr. Hemy's Long Liners (65), the vigorous and thoroughly studied A Gale (87), and two other drawings of his.

Mr. E. R. Hughes's Jacques (200) is not particularly interesting; nevertheless it is a good piece of character, and admirably painted and modelled.—Mr. Bulleid's At the Well, Callirhoe (177), is purely classic in its draughtsmanship, finish, grace, inspiration, and treatment, a sort of modern revival of the phase of art which prevailed in what antiquaries call the "perfect style" in speaking of Greek vases. Two somewhat statue-like damsels are gossiping within an enclosure lined with the warmest of white marbles. The one kneels at the fountain, dipping her vase of red and black into its waters, and, while it fills, turns to her companion, who is quitting the place with a full vase in each hand. One of these very Greek girls is dressed in saffron brown, the other is in rose colour, and these colours harmonize admirably with the whiteness of the marble. As this work lacks animation and a purpose, we must be content to enjoy its refined drawing, the beauty and character of the faces of the damsels, their choice proportions, and the unaffected elegance of their attitudes.

EXCAVATIONS AT EL KAB.

Sharoonah, April 19, 1897.

My copy of the Athenæum of April 10th has just reached me on my way down the Nile. I see in it the notice of 'Wall Drawings and Monuments of El Kab.' It may interest your readers to know in the merest outline what has been the result of this season's work at El Kab.

In addition to the rock tombs, the temples, and the great wall, there are numbers of tombs, some enclosed by the walls, others lying on the side towards the desert, and others to the north. It is, of course, a very easy matter to empty tomb-pits, but it is quite another thing to have an adequate knowledge of the contents when found, of the methods of burial, &c. Ignorant rummaging is more harmful than letting things rest. Knowing that I had not the experience to carry on this department of the work, it was agreed between Mr. Tylor and myself that I should consult Prof. Petrie; and, joining forces with the Egypt Research Account, the examination of the cemeteries has been made by Mr. J. E. Quibell, who has been my companion for the last four months.

It is no doubt true that, so far as we can tell by inscriptions, the tomb of Sebeknekht is the oldest of the rock tombs at El Kab, but it is hardly probable there have not been others much earlier than it; more especially may we hold this opinion in the light of Mr. Quibell's recent discoveries. Buried beneath the slope of sand which lies against the north side of the great wall were found several mastabas of brick with panelled sides; bowls of diorite—two bearing the name of Senefru—were, with other things, in the wells. Staircase tombs were also found similar to those at Naqada, a number of Libyan burials, also a cemetery of the twelfth dynasty, part of it outside the great wall and part within. The remains of mastabas similar to those found outside and of the same period were found inside the enclosure. The wall was evidently built regardless of the ancient cemeteries. No evidence was found that any town had ever existed within the enclosed space except that comparatively small area of house ruins which lies west and north-west of the temple. Diligent investigation has not enabled us to establish the date of the great wall, three of the gates of which have been opened out and drawn. I think the date to be decidedly later than that usually assigned, possibly even Ptolemaic. The inscriptions in the immediate neighbourhood had already assured us of the importance of El Kab in the sixth dynasty; our researches have now carried it back to the fourth, and judging by the importance of the tombs, it must at that time have been a place of no little consequence.

Somers Clarke.

SALE.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 1st inst. the following pictures, from the collection of the late Mr. G. Richmond: T. Gainsborough, Portrait of Gainsborough Dupont, 630*l.*; Second Sitting of Himself, aged twenty-eight, 609*l.* T. Kearsley, Portrait of Charles Heathcote Tatham, Esq., 136*l.* Johan Bettes, Portrait of Edmund Butts, 462*l.* Mireveldt, Portrait of a Lady, 168*l.* Raphael, A Landscape, 210*l.* Filippino Lippi, Madonna and Child, with St. John and an Angel, 210*l.* Niccola di Ancona, The Virgin adoring the Child, lying on her lap, 257*l.* G. Richmond, In the First (?) Garden, 210*l.*; Napoleon I. holding his Letter of Abdication, 1814, 246*l.*; Haymakers, 262*l.*; The Eve of Separation, 199*l.*; The Burial of the Virgin, 162*l.*; The Agony in the Garden, 105*l.*; after Gainsborough, Mary, Duchess of Montagu, 157*l.*; after Antique Roman Fresco, The Aldobrandini Marriage, 120*l.* The Filippino Lippi, it is understood, was originally purchased by Mr. Richmond for a few shillings.

The following were from the collection of the late Sir J. E. Millais. Pictures: J. C. Hook, A View on the Coast, with gulls, 336*l.* Tito Conti, The Introduction, 168*l.* C. de Heem, Still Life on a Table, 126*l.* M. Sweerts, Dutch Noblemen playing at Chess, 157*l.* Van Dyck, Time clipping the Wings of Love, 1,102*l.* Holbein, Portrait of a Man, 3,150*l.* Sir J. E. Millais, The Empty Cage, 735*l.*; The Naturalist, 1,785*l.*; The Girlhood of St. Theresa, 682*l.*; The Forerunner, 504*l.*; Time, 441*l.*; Sweet Emma Morland, a girl carrying a basket of roses, 409*l.*; "The moon is up, and yet it is not night," 1,102*l.* Statuary: Cordier, Bust of a Negro, and Bust of a Negress, on marble pedestals, 37*l.* Lord Leighton, Needless Alarms, a statuette in bronze on a marble pillar, 46*l.*

The following pictures were from various collections: J. C. Hook, A Devonshire Homestead, 152*l.* C. Stanfield, Melrose, 120*l.* B. Riviere, Circe and the Friends of Ulysses, 892*l.* A. Bonheur, The Challenge, driving cattle over the Highlands, 252*l.* Sir E. Burne-Jones, Pan and Psyche, 798*l.*; Luna, 504*l.*; Sowing, 577*l.* Lord Leighton, Helen on the Walls of Troy, 346*l.* J. M. Swan, Maternity, 430*l.* T. S. Cooper, A View near a Farm, with cattle and sheep, 152*l.* G. F. Watts, Hope, 651*l.* W. D. Sadler, "For he 's a jolly good fellow," 141*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

The excavations at Silchester last year, begun on May 1st and continued until October 26th, took place in Insulæ XV. and XVI. Insula XV. appears, like Insulæ IX.—XIII., to have been given up to the dyeing industry. It contained two houses, one of large size, and four other blocks of buildings, as well as the remains of several hearths and furnaces. A large area in the northern part was perhaps used as a bleaching ground. Two wells were discovered, one with a wooden framing at the bottom, the other with a large wooden tub in fairly perfect condition. Insula XVI. contained a large and important house of the courtyard type in the north-west angle, and two other houses of the corridor type, as well as an isolated square building. Traces were also found of other structures, probably of wood. The tracing of a pipe into Insula III. led to the discovery of a hitherto unknown gate in the city wall. It had a single opening 12 ft. wide, the jambs of which were standing to a height of over 6ft. The roadway to it had subsequently been raised, and the gate reduced to 7 ft. in width, by blocking it with masonry. The Committee propose during the current year to excavate the two Insulæ (XVI. and XVII.) extending from Insula III. as far as the south wall.

The illustrated catalogue of the Montagu collection of medals, which is to be dispersed by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge in the last week in May, has reached us. The collection is rich in medals commemorating the destruction of the Armada, the Gunpowder Plot, the great Civil War, the Dutch wars of the Commonwealth and the Restoration, Marlborough's victories, the Jacobite risings, the wars with Spain and France under the second and third Georges, &c. The gold medals are numerous, comprising the coronation medals since Charles I., the Blake medal of Simon, the Culloden and Louisbourg medals, and those of Anson and Cook.

The Council of the Royal Academy has bought with the Chantrey Fund Mr. Napier Hemy's powerful sea-piece called 'Pilchards' (204), Miss L. E. Kemp-Welch's 'Colt-Hunting in the New Forest' (346), and Mr. F. W. Pomeroy's statuette 'The Nymph of Loch Awe' (1980). There may be more purchases.

The Amateur Art Exhibition in aid of the Parochial Mission Women Fund will be held on the 12th, 13th, 14th, and 15th inst. at 105, Piccadilly, by permission of the executors of the late Sir Julian Goldsmid. It contains, besides other works, portraits by Count d'Orsay and A. E. Chalon, drawings made in India by Lady Wenlock, and paintings by the Princess of Wales, the Princess Louise, and the Crown Princess of Roumania. In addition there will be shown embroideries, brass, gold, silver, and copper work, stamped leather, and fans.

The Fine-Art Society, having acquired Mr. J. L. Propert's magnificent collection of miniatures, proposes to sell them in detail, and has appointed to-day (Saturday) for a private view of them.

The Société Philanthropique de Paris has organized an extensive collection of portraits, exclusively of women and children, the works of artists from the days of Ghirlandajo to those of Meissonier, and including many admirable pictures by Reynolds, Gainsborough, Hoppner, Romney, and other Englishmen of the last century, and Landseer of the present age. The pictures are now to be seen at the École des Beaux-Arts, Paris. The Gazette des Beaux-Arts for June will contain an article upon these works from the pen of that excellent authority M. Maurice Tourneux, and enriched with many illustrations.

French journals announce the death on Monday of last week of M. Émile Placide Lambert, a distinguished sculptor, whose works we have often noticed in the Salons. He was born in Paris, became a pupil of Franceschi, and obtained the Legion of Honour in 1890. He was sixty-nine years old.

A Correspondent writes :—

"In the Athenæum of April 24th, No. 3626, p. 550, Prof. Flinders Petrie says of a scarab from Curium in the British Museum that the label assigns it to the twenty-sixth dynasty, but that on examination 'it proves to bear no dating whatever by its inscription, as it has simply a figure of the god Thoth with the common title "the great god."' It is not, however, 'simply a figure of the god Thoth,' but a figure of Thoth with the attributes of Chonsu. The inscription reads neter-aa-Behutet, which is the characteristic epithet of Chonsu-Thoth. And the deity was not worshipped in this form until a comparatively late period. It may be added that the 'style, material, &c.,' which the professor associates with 1200 B.C., are associated with far later dates by men of wide experience, and that many of the dogmatic statements in his letter appear to be equally disputable. He also speaks of 'a fine bronze ring of Amenhotep IV.' It is presumably on the strength of the words nefer-kheperu-Ra that he attributes the ring to Amenhotep IV.; but the inscription does not proceed ua-en-Ra, as it naturally would if this attribution were correct. The other words are neb-Maat, meri-Ptah, Heru-khuti, and rut. It may be noted that the ring is made of silver, not of bronze, as the professor says. Speaking of this ring and another, he says that 'the massive fabric is peculiar to that date.' Notoriously this massive fabric is not peculiar to that date, but belongs to a period extending from the twenty-sixth dynasty down to Roman times. And he does not appear to have any warrant beyond this massiveness of fabric for saying that the other ring is 'imitated from one of the same king.'"

Those interested in the architecture of the Norman Byzantine churches in Apulia may be glad to know that photographic studies of the monuments at Bari, Altamura, Bitonta, Barletta, Benevento, Troia, and other cities of the province have been executed by Signor Moscioni, of Rome. The series contains general views of the edifices and details of the more important examples of the ornamentation. The work was undertaken at the suggestion of the Cav. G. Boni, attached to the Ministero della Pubblica Istruzione, after inspecting the monuments with a view to their preservation. It is satisfactory to know that necessary repairs are in progress, and being under Signor Boni's inspection there is no fear of destructive restoration being perpetrated.

Some important frescoes of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries have been discovered beneath the plaster on the walls of the church and convent of San Domenico at Rieti. Amongst them are a coronation of St. Peter the Martyr, a really fine composition, which is attributed to Pinturicchio, and a head of the Saviour by Manenti, both in the first transept of the so-called aula capitolare. The frescoes found in the interior of the church belong to the school of Giotto, and represent the Last Supper, two crucifixes with the Maries, and some saints.

At Susa, in the Regency of Tunis, an archæological museum will shortly be opened. Amongst the first acquisitions, it will present to the visitors the fine mosaic pavements found last year in that city, which have been lately entirely repaired. They represent, as our readers know, the triumph of Bacchus and the rape of Ganymede.

At Imola, the ancient Forum Cornelii, some notable mosaics have been discovered, which formed the pavements of four rooms of a rich Roman house. The larger amongst them belongs, very probably, to the tablinum, and is adorned with leaves, fruits, and scenic masks.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Mr. F. Lamond's Pianoforte Recital. Mr. Hyllested's Concert.
Queen's Hall.—Philharmonic Concert.

The comparatively young Russian composer Anton Stepanowitsch Arensky, whose Symphony in B minor, No. 1, was performed for the first time in England at the Queen's Hall Symphony Concert on Saturday afternoon last week, is not much known as yet in this country. He was born at Novgorod in 1862, and at the age of twenty was appointed a professor of harmony and composition at the Moscow Conservatorium. The B minor Symphony was produced a year later, and since that time Arensky has written much, chiefly instrumental. As in Slavonic music generally, we find here more thematic beauty and vigour than elaboration and consistency in development. The scherzo, in five-four measure, is the least effective section, and cannot compare with that in the same peculiar time in Tschaikowsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique.' Arensky's work comes to a brilliant conclusion, and, taken as a whole, it may be regarded as certainly worth a hearing. The rest of the programme was devoted to Grieg, and very fine performances were secured of the picturesque overture 'Im Herbst,' first performed in England under the Norwegian composer's direction at the Birmingham Festival in 1888; the set of four Scandinavian Dances, Op. 35, both compositions being originally penned as pianoforte duets; the Pianoforte Concerto in A minor, the solo part in which was finely, but perhaps too strenuously played by Miss Adela Verne; the 'Peer Gynt' Suite, No. 2, which is rarely heard; and the three movements from the incidental music to Björnson's tragedy 'Sigurd Jorsalfar,' first rendered in London under Grieg's own direction at a Philharmonic Concert on May 24th, 1894 (Athen. No. 3475). Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra last Saturday was at its best from first to last.

Mr. Frederic Lamond, who has been winning laurels as a pianist in Germany and Russia of late, gave his first London recital this season on Tuesday afternoon, and showed that he has made further progress since he was last with us. There are intellectual and also sentimental pianists, and of few can it be said that they combine the two qualifications. In other words, the executant who can render justice to Beethoven and Brahms may not unreasonably fail in Chopin, or vice versâ. Mr. Lamond belongs mainly to the first-named school, and he gave a really great performance of Brahms's Sonata in F minor, Op. 5, on this occasion, conquering the most difficult passages with apparent ease. The work has now become a favourite, and so it is likely to remain. The same energy that characterized its interpretation was noticeable in Schumann's 'Carnaval'; but in some of the sections of this work there was an excess of vigour and a want of expression. Mr. Lamond's fingers went with lightning rapidity over the keys, and few wrong notes could be detected. Various smaller pieces by other composers were included in the programme, the whole tending to show that the Scottish artist is one of the most powerful pianists of the day.

Herr Augustus Hyllested, a Danish pianist and composer, who, we understand, has resided for some years in America, was responsible for a concert with orchestra and chorus at St. James's Hall on Tuesday evening. There were only three items in the programme, but one of these, a symphonic poem by the concert-giver, Op. 25, proved to be of prodigious length. Whether the writer had the intention of illustrating any given theme cannot be said, for no information as to this was vouchsafed, and in default it was impossible to follow the complications of the music. As the first three movements occupied nearly an hour, and there was a finale with double chorus to follow, it was not surprising that the audience began to melt away before the end. Herr Hyllested's knowledge of the resources of the modern orchestra was apparent, and also his intimate acquaintance with the most advanced works of Wagner. He has ability, and something far better than this symphonic poem may be expected in due course. There was nothing in Herr Hyllested's pianoforte playing in concertos by Beethoven and Liszt to call for remark. His first recital will take place on Monday afternoon, the 17th inst.

The Philharmonic Society's concert on Wednesday evening was chiefly noteworthy for the brevity of the programme. The nearest approach to a novelty was Prof. Villiers Stanford's Pianoforte Concerto in G, Op. 59, first performed at a Richter Concert on May 27th, 1895. It is dedicated to Mr. Leonard Borwick, by whom it was interpreted, as to the solo part, on that occasion, and also at the Philharmonic Concert this week. The work improves much on acquaintance, and the admirable performance, conducted by the composer, resulted in enthusiastic expressions of approval. Brahms's Symphony in C minor, No. 1, a truly magnificent work, first heard in England twenty years ago at Cambridge, made its usual affect, and the verdict pronounced in 1877 as to the merits of a great though rather sombre symphony has not yet been reversed. The instrumental items in the scheme were completed by Beethoven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 3, and Sir Arthur Sullivan's to Shakspeare's 'Tempest.' Madame Sigrid Arnoldson sang florid operatic airs by Meyerbeer and Gounod with much charm.

Musical Gossip.

Señor Michaela Esposito, who gave a pianoforte recital at St. James's Hall on Thursday afternoon this week, is not an entire stranger to London, as he appeared at the Princes' Hall in the summer of 1891. His touch is delicate, and if some lack of strength may be noted in his general execution, there was little to give offence in Señor Esposito's rendering of Beethoven's Variations in C minor, Schumann's Sonata in F sharp minor, and several graceful pieces from his own pen. It was pleasant to hear refinement in pianoforte playing at a time when storm and stress are so much in vogue.

There will probably be a "gala" performance during the Royal Opera season at Covent Garden Theatre, which commences next Monday night. The date will be fixed shortly, and will be about June 24th.

Mlle. Elsa Ruegger will make her London début by giving an invitation recital at the Salle Erard, under the management of Mr. W. Adlington, on the afternoon of May 24th, when she will play a concerto of Lindner, a sonata of Boccherini, and smaller pieces by Max Bruch, Schumann, and Popper.

Mr. Hayden Coffin will give a concert at St. James's Hall on the afternoon of May 25th, assisted by a large number of well-known artists.

It is now certain that MM. Jean and Édouard de Reszke will not take part in the Bayreuth concerts this year, and, so far as can be gathered, the casts will not differ greatly from those of recent years.

A mass composed by Donizetti for the funeral of Bellini in 1839 has been discovered by Signor Pizzi. It is to be performed at the cathedral in Bergamo in August. Many orchestral works by Donizetti are also said to have been unearthed, but of their merits it is, of course, impossible at present to offer an opinion.

A Brahms memorial festival of chamber music will be held at the Beethoven Hall, Bonn, on five successive days, commencing on Sunday, the 23rd inst. Besides the recently deceased master, who will, of course, be strongly represented, Beethoven will largely figure in the performances, in which a number of eminent artists, with Herr Joachim at their head, will take part.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	Orchestral Concert, 3 30, Queen's Hall.
—	National Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
Mon.	Mr. David Bispham's Recital of Brahms's 'Magelone,' Lieder, &c., 3, St James's Hall.
—	Miss Emma Barnett's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Carl Armbruster's 'Parsifal' Lecture, 3, King's College.
—	Mr Livesey Carrott's Concert, 8 Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Faust,' 8
—	Musical Artists' Society, 8, St. Martin's Hall.
Tues.	Mr F Lamond's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Patti Concert, 3, Albert Hall.
—	London School Board Vocal Competition, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Trinity College Students' Concert, 7.
—	Miss Olive Harcourt's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Misses Mackenzie and Jeans's Recital, 8, Steinway Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Roméo et Juliette,' 8.
—	Herr Felix Mottl's Wagner Concert, 8 15, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	London County Council Band Concert, 2 30, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. H. Such's Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Valleris and Miss Honor Brooke's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall
—	Miss K Ellenberger's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall
—	Miss Bondy's Pianoforte Recital, 3 30, No. 8, Whitehall Gardens.
—	Miss Munro's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall
—	Mr. Ernesto Palmiere's Concert, 8, St. Martin's Hall.
—	Mlle. Alice Roselli's Concert, 8, Chelsea Town Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Tannhäuser,' 8.
Thurs.	Hans Brousil's Chamber Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr Eugen d'Albert's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Choral Society, 'St Paul,' 8
—	Mr. Charles Lunn's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Bohemian String Quartet Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Aida,' 8.
Fri.	Mlle Heymann's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St James's Hall.
—	Madame Blanche Marchesi's Vocal Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Louisa Macpherson's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Miss Annie Cunnah's Costume Concert, 8, St George's Hall.
—	Mr. Robert Hensler's Vocal Recital, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Les Huguenots,' 8.
—	M. E. Jaques Dalcroze's Chamber Concert, 8 30, Steinway Hall.
Sat.	Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3.
—	Mr. George Grossmith's Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss M L Hemming's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Manon,' 8.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Her Majesty's.—'The Seats of the Mighty,' in a Prologue and Three Acts. By Gilbert Parker.

Strand.—Afternoon Representation: 'John Gabriel Borkman,' a Play in Four Acts. By Henrik Ibsen.

Everything at Her Majesty's Theatre promises well except the piece. The house is bright, comfortable, and artistic, an excellent mise-en-scène is provided, a good company has been engaged, and the opening performance has every charm except the dramatic. Not wholly the fault of Mr. Parker is it that his adaptation of his own work is inadequate. What is most dramatic in his novel, the long series of indignities to which his hero is subjected in prison, is no more capable of effective presentation on the stage than is the combat which cost France Montcalm and England Wolfe. More serious still is it for him that by superior authority the one character on which he might pride himself has been sentimentalized into insignificance. Doltaire in the book may be regarded as an incarnation of all that was worst in that aristocratic society of the last century which in its licence, its extravagance, its irresponsibility, and its irreligion prepared the way for its own effacement. This man, relentless as death itself, gallant, polished, and heartless, is now endowed with vaticinatory gifts which serve no purpose, except to render him unpopular in his own circle—is presented as capable of earnest and heroic passion, and as animated by a God-like pity for the overladen and the oppressed. With the aspirations of the class from which on one side he springs he has no sympathy. He admires only the râble of the peasant, such as was his mother. Doltaire is, indeed, deprived of all that gave his character a certain lurid splendour, and is made a mere theatrical poseur. A change analogous to that of Fechter, who converted Hamlet into a jeune premier, is made in Doltaire, who is, of course, a far less important character. The result of these processes is that there is not a personage with whom it is possible to sympathize, or for whom we can feel a spark of admiration. The actor does not profit since, though Doltaire in the hands of Mr. Tree is superbly picturesque, he does and exhibits nothing more than Mr. Tree has shown us a score of times. Our pulses are unstirred by the loves of Alixe Duvarney and Robert Moray, though the former is played by Miss Kate Rorke and the latter by Mr. Lewis Waller. For some reason difficult to conjecture, the love-making, even to the very caresses, is on the part of the lady, and the gentleman does no more than yield a rather morose and half-hearted consent. The episode (for to such it is converted) of Voban and Mathilde is without significance to those unacquainted with the novel, and Mathilde herself is a mere encumbrance. Madame Cournal remains nondescript. Her relations with Bigot are indistinct, and the part she plays in the later action seems inconsistent with that assigned her in the earlier. Mrs. Tree furnished in the character a remarkable display of power, but her sudden changes of bearing in regard to Doltaire were as baffling as they were impressive. The best portion of the play was the introduction, which has no place in the novel. We were sorry when, after the first act, we had to change the pictures of Court life for those of rough soldiering, and could have been content to contemplate a comedy of sword and powder. Mr. Charles Brookfield gave a clever sketch of Louis XV., and Miss Janette Steer presented the Marchioness de Pompadour at the time when her political influence was waning, and she was trusting for her power to the Paphian attractions of the Parc aux Cerfs. The general performance was adequate, but the whole was accepted rather than approved.

So brief a time has elapsed since we dealt with the aspects, literary and dramatic, of Ibsen's latest play that a short notice of its production at the Strand by the body styling itself the New Century Theatre must suffice. Unlike most plays, this work gains little, perhaps loses, by stage interpretation. The sombre-clad characters in Ibsen do little to light up the stage, and the depressing influences that are felt in perusal become even more funereal when we contemplate these gloomy personages in the flesh. More clearly than before we recognize the directness of purpose, the strength of the action, and the sternness of the teaching. We are but slightly stirred, however, and the reconciliation of the twin sisters over the body of the man both in their ways have loved loses a portion of its pathos. The one thing that stands out more clearly is the contrast between the two sisters, one the personification of relentless, obdurate hate, the other of undying and hopeless love. The duel between these two is stirring, though the mood it awakes is anger. Resentment is, indeed, the feeling that this tragedy of gloom is calculated to beget. Bold enough are the types of character, and some of them are doubtless lifelike products of a provincial monotonous and joyless existence. They interest us but little, however, and we would rather they had been left in their obscurity. They are all more or less of mad people, dreamers, fantastics, bigots. Not more mad is the reckless dreamer who peoples empty fiords with bustling life, hears the engine throb and pant in the heart of the black rock, and goes out to wrestle physically for gold and fame with the bleak, empty night, than the woman who sits at home and broods over the never to be accomplished regeneration of her name. Of this stern, implacable Gunhild, who has dwelt eight years in the same house with her husband, and has not once looked on his face or heard the sound of his voice, Miss Genevieve Ward gives a superb interpretation. The acting in this character is tragic in its intensity. Miss Elizabeth Robins shows the pained pensiveness of Ella, a frail, dying creature, resolute in her way, and, like the rest, a dreamer of dreams. It is hard to see what more than was made by Mr. Vernon could be got out of the criminal who, while not daring to go out and meet his fellow men, acquits himself of crime in the mental autopsy he conducts, and stands colossal in his selfishness and his indifference to others. Mrs. Beerbohm Tree brings in the one element of lightness the piece possesses, though her dress is scarcely calculated for a midnight journey through the snow, even in a covered sledge. The allurement of the character was finely shown, and the contentedly cynical acceptance of her juvenile lover rendered almost conceivable the frightfully profligate abduction of the little Frida, to whom she will bequeath her lover when her own fancy for him has passed. Nothing can be reasonably urged against any individual in the cast. It is not the fault of Mr. Martin Harvey that his declaration concerning his love for "Fanny" moved risibility. Much in Ibsen is so compounded of naïveté and perversity as to have a ludicrous side. Not without interest has been the experiment, but it is inconclusive in the main and disappointing.

The Pierrot of the Minute: a Dramatic Phantasy in One Act. By Ernest Dowson. (Smithers.)—With the conception of this fantasiuccia—this is the best description of it which we can hit upon—we have no quarrel, with its execution but little. The latter is quaint rather than poetical, and the whole is pretty rather than imaginative. In a glade in the Parc du Petit Trianon, Pierrot, who has lost of late his more marked and mischievous features, and been sentimentalized until he can almost claim kinship with Chérubin, comes at some mysterious bidding in search of love. The Moon-maiden arrives, and, after counselling him to shun her, gives him the kiss for which he asks. She then, with softening thoughts in her mind, leaves him to sleep and believe it all a dream, and to pay the penalty of his boldness:

> Whom once the moon has kissed loves long and late,
> Yet never finds the maid to be his mate.

The motive of this seems to be in 'La Belle Dame sans Merci,' of which it is a pale reflection. It is not, however, without beauty. Mr. Dowson, in the earlier parts at least, seems to pronounce Pierrot as though it were a dissyllable:—

> Why came I here, and why am I Pierrot?
> That music and this silence both affright;
> Pierrot can never be a friend of night.
>
> In gracile pairs the very lilies grow:
> None is companionless except Pierrot.
>
> What Pierrot ever has escaped his fate?

Surely "None is companionless save Pierrot" would be better than "except Pierrot," which suggests an incorrect pronunciation, if it does not render it obligatory. The volume, which is prettily printed, is illustrated by Mr. Aubrey Beardsley in his characteristic fashion. In the first plate Pierrot, very soft, young, and dodu, with a moon face and without his hat, is standing among the lilies in the glade at the foot of the very plumpest cupid ever designed. At the end he takes his departure, looking very worn and haggard, and having aged apparently a score years. The illustrations, like the story, may, however, be taken as purely fantastical, and as such have a certain amount of suggestion.

Dramatic Gossip.

'Mr. Sympkyn' is the title of a three-act adaptation from the French by Mr. A. J. Flaxman and the late Wm. Younge, produced last Saturday at the Globe. It is a thoroughly extravagant and preposterous farce, the humour of which springs from equivoques of the most conventional and arbitrary kind. Mr. Sydney Paxton gave a capital picture of respectable smug bourgeoisie, but as a whole the performance was no more noteworthy than the piece.

On the same occasion was played 'Confederates,' a one-act drama founded by Mr. Henry Woodville on a supposed episode of the American Civil War. The notion on which this is based is a species of vicarious sacrifice such as is celebrated in 'A Tale of Two Cities.'

The first representation of ''Chand d'Habits,' announced for Monday last at Her Majesty's, has been postponed until this evening, when M. Séverin reappears in his original part of Pierrot. Mlle. Zanfretta is the dancing girl, and Mr. Charles Lauri the old-clothes man.

'On Leave' was finally withdrawn from the Avenue last Saturday. The house will next be occupied by Mr. Chudleigh, who will produce a comedy by Mr. Lumley, in which Mrs. John Wood is to reappear.

Yet one more enterprise is to be made at the Olympic Theatre, which will reopen on Monday with Shakspeare at popular prices under the management of Mr. Ben Greet.

'A Doll's House' is to be revived at the Globe on Monday afternoon by Miss Janet Achurch, who contemplates a subsequent production of 'The Wild Duck.'

For the forthcoming production at the Haymarket of Mr. G. Bernard Shaw's four-act comedy 'You Never Can Tell,' Mr. Brandon Thomas and Mr. Allan Aynesworth have been engaged. Mr. Cyril Maude, Mr. Barnes, Mr. Kemble, Miss Fanny Coleman, Miss Winifred Emery, and Miss Eva Moore will also take part in the representation.

'The Devil's Disciple,' a drama by Mr. Bernard Shaw, has been performed for copyright purposes at the Bijou Theatre, Hammersmith.

Mlle. Jane May will appear at the Royalty on the 17th inst. Her rather extensive repertory will include 'La Petite Fadette,' 'Le Monde où l'on s'ennuie,' 'Si jamais je te pince,' 'Un Mari dans du Coton,' and several pantomimes.

A new theatre is, it seems, to be erected for Mr. Charles Wyndham on a site in St. Martin's Court, with a frontage in Charing Cross Road.

On June 28th, as we learn, the Deutsches Volkstheater company will appear at Daly's Theatre in a series of afternoon representations. It will be succeeded by an Italian company.

To Correspondents.—W. A. C.—A. C. G.—M. L.—H. A. K.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Terms of Subscription by Post.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

	£	d
For Twelve Months...	15	3
For Six Months	7	8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months	9	0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND THE LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON

The Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain.

2 vols. demy 8vo. Illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics. By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

"A carefully planned, skilfully executed, and withal elaborate portraiture of the life and character of the greatest of our naval heroes .....This great work."—Athenæum.

"A great biography, and one to be read by all men."—Spectator.

"Destined to take its place among the foremost biographies of any literature."—Graphic.

VOLUME I. NOW READY, AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

THE ROYAL NAVY

A History from the Earliest Times to the Present.

By WM. LAIRD CLOWES,

Fellow of King's College, London.

Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, &c.

5 vols. with numerous Illustrations, royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each, net.

The First Volume of the History brings the narrative to the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

"He has produced an indispensable and standard work."—Standard.

"Everywhere the book affords evidence of painstaking research."—Morning Post.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."—National Observer.

"Extremely interesting.....A brilliant picture of a contemporary mania."—Daily Telegraph.

"Every one is reading Ouida's 'The Massarenes.'"—Vanity Fair.

"On English Fashion."—National Observer.

"Clever.....The irreclaimable 'Cocky' is an excellent creation."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Brilliant, if daring."—Scotsman.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

A Tale of the Australian Bush. By G. FIRTH SCOTT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

HIGHLAND COUSINS. By WILLIAM BLACK. Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

NOW READY, price One Shilling.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

MAY NUMBER.

Contents.

UNDERGRADUATE LIFE at HARVARD. Edward S. Martin. With Illustrations by W. H. Hyde and Howard Pyle.
HARVARD COLLEGE in the SEVENTIES. Robert Grant.
GOLF. H. J. Whigham, Amateur Champion of America.
The WORKING of a BANK. The CONDUCT of GREAT BUSINESSES.—FOURTH PAPER. Charles D. Lanier. Illustrated.
A NEW ENGLAND MAY FESTIVAL. A STORY in SIX PICTURES. Drawn by Maude and Genevieve Cowles.
LONDON: as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. IV. The DRAWING-ROOM. Written and Illustrated by Mr. Gibson.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. Chaps. 12, 13. Richard Harding Davis. Illustrated by C. D. Gibson. (To be concluded in June.)
BETWIXT CUP and LIP. Grace Howard Peirce. Illustd.
The STORY of a PLAY. Chaps. 8–10. W. D. Howells. &c. &c. &c.

London:

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Messrs. HUTCHINSON & CO. beg to announce, on MONDAY NEXT, a New and Important Work, The ROMANCE of ISABEL, LADY BURTON: the Story of Her Life, told in part by Herself and in part by W. H. Wilkins, in 2 vols. cloth gilt and gilt top, with Photogravure Portraits and 40 full Illustrations, 36s.

THE CONCISE KNOWLEDGE LIBRARY.

The aim of the Publishers in inaugurating this Series is to provide a Library of Volumes on great subjects which will contain in a concise form a wealth of exact information which can be thoroughly relied upon by the student, and yet will be in such a popular form as to meet the needs of the general reader. Each volume will be in the convenient large crown 8vo. size, with the text specially arranged and a full index for easy reference.

THE FIRST VOLUME, READY NEXT WEEK, WILL BE ENTITLED

THE CONCISE KNOWLEDGE NATURAL HISTORY.

By R. LYDEKKER, F.R.S., Dr. R. BOWDLER SHARPE, W. F. KIRBY, F.L.S., W. GARSTANG, M.A., B. B. WOODWARD, F.G.S. F. A. BATHER, F.G.S., R. J. POCOCK, H. M. BERNARD, F.L.S., and R. KIRKPATRICK.

Complete in 1 vol. in large crown 8vo. containing NEARLY 800 PAGES, with 530 ORIGINAL ILLUSTRATIONS, in half bound leather, gilt, 5*s*.

The Cheapest Natural History ever published.

COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME, PRICE 5*s*.

This work aims to be a concise and popular Natural History, at once accurate in statement, handy in form, and ready in reference.
The several departments of Zoological Science are treated by specialists, all of whom are distinguished as authorities and as original investigators.
A concise, systematic Index precedes the work, and a full Alphabetical Index, which contains about 10,000 references, is given at the end.

NEW AND CONCLUDING VOLUME OF

THE POETS AND POETRY OF THE CENTURY.

Edited by ALFRED H. MILES.

SACRED, MORAL, and RELIGIOUS VERSE. Containing Selections from the Poetry of John KEBLE, J. H. NEWMAN, STOPFORD BROOKE, E. H. PLUMPTRE, S. BARING-GOULD, S. J. STONE, W. H. HOW, RICHARD WILTON, Dr. ALEXANDER, and others. With Biographical and Critical Notices. 830 pages, in cloth, gilt top, 4*s*.; in buckram gilt, gilt top, 6*s*.

IMMEDIATELY.

LAZARUS: a Tale of the World's Great Miracle.
By LUCAS CLEEVE. In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

THIS DAY.
A NEW NOVEL BY JAMES PRIOR.

RIPPLE and FLOOD. In buckram gilt, 6s.

SECOND EDITION IN THE PRESS.
JOSEPH HATTON'S NEW NOVEL.

The DAGGER and the CROSS.

"A permanent and ennobling addition to English literature."—Yorkshire Post.
"Mr. Hatton's new romance is excellent."—Daily Mail.
"It is successful in a very remarkable degree."—Scotsman.
"A most interesting book which will have a very large sale."—Queen.
"The story is of a high standard of excellence."—North British Daily Mail.

"IT IS SO SINGULARLY POWERFUL, FASCINATING, AND WELL-WRITTEN, ITS SUCCESS SHOULD BE ASSURED."—Pall Mall Gazette.
MORLEY ROBERTS' NEW NOVEL.

MAURICE QUAIN. In buckram gilt, 6s.

"It is altogether a striking work, full of power, full of promises. A book which promises a future great novelist."—Manchester Courier.
"The characterization throughout the book is indeed admirable."—Morning Post.

NEW NOVEL BY E. LIVINGSTON PRESCOTT.

SCARLET and STEEL: a Story of Military Life, containing certain Humours, Sentiments, and Tragedies of Cavalry Life. In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

"A very interesting and admirably written story. It may be doubted whether 'Scarlet and Steel' should not be placed above 'It is Never Too Late to Mend.'"—Daily Telegraph.
"Mr. Prescott has written a story of remarkable power. We hope this narrative will direct public attention to the subject."—N.B. Daily Mail.

A THIRD LARGE EDITION IS IN THE PRESS OF FRANKFORT MOORE'S NEW ROMANCE.

The JESSAMY BRIDE. In cloth gilt, 6s. With Illustrations by A. Forestier.

"Mr. Frankfort Moore's best literary feat."—World.
"A very remarkable book."—N.B. Daily Mail.
"In the end one puts down a delightful novel."—Graphic.
"A really remarkably clever tour-de-force."—Scotsman.
"This very delightful novel."—Daily Mail.
"Quite worthy even of the author of 'I Forbid the Banns.'"—Literary World.

RICHARD PRYCE'S NEW NOVEL.

ELEMENTARY JANE. In cloth gilt, 6s.

"The reading public owe the author a debt of gratitude."—World.
"Mr. Pryce does his work well and skilfully, and with rare analytical power."
"A story which palpitates with actuality."—Morning Advertiser. Pall Mall Gazette.
"'Elementary Jane' is a triumph of characterization."—Daily Chronicle.
"A very charming tale, which rings true."—Westminster Gazette.
"The characters are such as Dickens might have painted; but we have little doubt that they are truer to life than most of the creations of the master."—Vanity Fair.
"The whole story has a charm."—Manchester Guardian.

"THIS STORY IS SURE TO EXCITE A LARGE AMOUNT OF INTEREST."

The FALL of CONSTANTINOPLE. A New Historical Romance. By A. WALL. In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

FIRST REVIEW.

"'The Fall of Constantinople' is a notable book. The characters stand out from the canvas heroic and lifelike. Mr. Wall's historical accuracy and scholarship is rare in these days of novelists in a hurry. The siege of Constantinople and the final assault of the janissaries are magnificent."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"IT IS WORTH A DOZEN ORDINARY NOVELS."
NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'DARK.'

The EARTH CHILDREN. By Mrs. Stephen BATSON. In cloth gilt, 2*s*. 6*d*.; in artistic paper, 2*s*. With numerous Illustrations by G. H. Edwards.

"Mrs. Stephen Batson's clever study of rural naturalism is beautifully printed and covered and pleasantly illustrated, and Messrs. Hutchinson include it in their 'Leisure Library' at the extremely cheap price of 2*s*. It is brightly, smartly written. This is a really clever book, and it is worth a dozen ordinary novels."—Manchester Courier.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE

For MAY

Contains an Account of the

"LOG OF THE MAYFLOWER,"

With a Facsimile of the Register of the Ship's Passengers.

"The first number, just issued, gives evidence of an excellent design admirably carried out."
Literary World.

"Of value as well as interest."—Academy.

"There can be no doubt but that the magazine will prove of the utmost usefulness to antiquarians and students of genealogy."—Dundee Advertiser.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 8*s.* 6*d.*

The HOUSE of CROMWELL. A Genealogical History of the Family and Descendants of the Protector. By JAMES WAYLEN, sometime Secretary to Thomas Carlyle. A New Edition, Revised by JOHN GABRIEL CROMWELL, M.A., Oxon, Hon. Canon of Durham.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 8*s.* 6*d.*; Large-Paper Copies, 2*l.* 2*s.* each.

NATURAL HISTORY in SHAKESPEARE'S TIMES. Being a Compendium of the Natural History of the Animals, Plants, Minerals, &c., mentioned by Shakespeare, and illustrated by Facsimiles of the Woodcuts in an early edition of the 'Hortus Sanitatis.' Compiled and Edited by H. W. SEAGER, M.B., &c.

"Mr. Seager's compilation affords an interesting insight into the condition of natural science three centuries ago."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"A quaint idea cleverly carried out. The quotations are admirable. This volume should be an acceptable addition to our bookshelves."—Public Opinion.

NEW TRANSLATION OF BOETHIUS.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth, tastefully printed and bound, price 4*s.* 6*d.* with a Portrait of the Father of Boethius.

The CONSOLATION of PHILOSOPHY: a new rendering into English Prose and Verse from the Latin of Boethius. By H. R. JAMES, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford.

In crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 6*s.*

HUGO of AVENDON. A Drama in Four Acts. By E. L. M.

"The work reads well, and should be enjoyed by those who patronize the drama without leaving their own firesides."—Scotsman.

"There is good material in the play, and the climax is skilfully planned."—Dundee Advertiser.

In fcap. 8vo. tastefully printed in antique type and bound in cloth, price 6*s.*; 50 Large-Paper Copies, price 1*l.* 1*s.* each.

IN PRAISE of MUSIC. An Anthology. Prepared by CHARLES SAYLE, M.A.

'In Praise of Music' presents a series of extracts selected with considerable care from the greatest and most appreciative writers on the subject during the centuries.

NEW VOLUME OF THE 'BOOK-LOVER'S LIBRARY.'

Cloth, price 4*s.* 6*d.*; Roxburghe, half-morocco, price 7*s.* 6*d.*; Large Paper, price 1*l.* 1*s.* net.

THE NOVELS OF CHARLES DICKENS.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY AND SKETCH.

By FREDERIC G. KITTON,
Author of 'Charles Dickens by Pen and Pencil.'

With a Portrait which has not been published before.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

A. D. INNES & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BY GENERAL SIR CHARLES GOUGH, V.C. G.C.B., AND ARTHUR D. INNES, M.A.

The SIKHS and the SIKH WARS. With 15 Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16*s.*

The Scotsman says:—"A work of high historical value and of most absorbing interest. This book may be heartily recommended as beyond question the best history of the Sikh Wars that has been written, and than which no better could be desired."

BY LIEUT.-GENERAL M'LEOD INNES, V.C.

The SEPOY REVOLT: a Critical Narrative covering the whole Field of the Indian Mutiny, its Causes and Course, till the Final Suppression. With numerous Maps and Plans. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The gallant author has marshalled and drilled his facts with masterly precision, and presents a wonderfully lucid survey of the Mutiny....From first to last 'The Sepoy Revolt' is a valuable and conscientious history."

BY J. S. RISLEY, M.A. B.C.L.

The LAW of WAR: a Study of the Legal Obligations and Conditions applying to Belligerents or Neutrals in Times of War. Demy 8vo. cloth, 12*s.*

The Scotsman says:—"The book....is admirably done. It avoids technicalities and....is admirably suited to serve as a guide and first introduction to a most instructive subject."

BY G. BOISSIER (de l'Académie Française).

CICERO and his FRIENDS. Translated by A. D. JONES. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

The Scotsman says:—"The most fascinating study of Cicero and his times."

BY C. R. B. BARRETT.

Dedicated by permission to General H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G.

BATTLES and BATTLEFIELDS in ENGLAND. With an Introduction by H. D. TRAILL, and profusely illustrated by the Author. Super-royal 8vo. buckram, gilt top, 18*s.*

The Sketch says:—"A remarkably good book of its kind."

The COMPLETE CYCLIST: being Vol. II. of the Isthmian Library. By A. C. PEMBERTON, Mrs. HARCOURT WILLIAMSON, C. P. SISLEY, and GILBERT FLOYD. Edited by B. FLETCHER ROBINSON. With numerous Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by J. F. Sullivan. Post 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

The Birmingham Daily Gazette says:—"It is a book of charmingly varied interest, and it will please all cyclists without distinction."

NEW NOVELS.

BY J. C. SNAITH, Author of 'Mistress Dorothy Marvin.'

FIERCEHEART the SOLDIER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The Observer says:—"Mr. Snaith has given us a romance that, for terse, pregnant phrasing, exceptional character drawing, and vivid depiction of dramatic situations, is the best thing of its kind we remember to have seen for a long time."

BY MAX PEMBERTON.

CHRISTINE of the HILLS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The Daily Mail says:—"Assuredly he has never written anything more fresh, more simple, more alluring, or more artistically perfect."

BY EDEN PHILLPOTTS.

LYING PROPHETS. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"An excellent novel. ..A piece of serious and admirable work. ..not unworthy of a place with George Eliot's 'Adam Bede' and 'Mill on the Floss.'"

BY ISABEL CLARKE.

The EPISODE of ALETHEA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The Scotsman says:—"The author deals with admirable taste and tact with the situation....The story is one of high merit from beginning to end."

BY ESTHER MILLER.

The SPORT of the GODS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The Athenæum says:—"It is very well told....The novel is exciting and preserves its interest to the end....An excellent story."

RECENT POPULAR NOVELS.

BY F. E. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.'

LIMITATIONS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BY STANLEY WEYMAN.

MY LADY ROTHA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

BY J. C. SNAITH.

MISTRESS DOROTHY MARVIN. A Romance of the Glorious Revolution. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.* Fourth Edition.

BY FRANK BARRETT.

A SET of ROGUES. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

BY X. L., Author of 'Aut Diabolus aut Nihil.'

The LIMB. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

ANTHONY HOPE'S SOCIETY NOVELS.

COMEDIES of COURTSHIP. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

HALF a HERO. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

MR. WITT'S WIDOW: a Frivolous Tale. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

London: A. D. INNES & CO.
31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

THE QUEEN'S "DIAMOND JUBILEE" BOOKS.

The LIFE of QUEEN VICTORIA, 1819-1897. By G. BARNETT SMITH. With 12 Plates, large crown 8vo. gilt edges, 3*s.* 6*d.*

SIXTY YEARS of the QUEEN'S REIGN. By the Right Hon. Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., G.C.S.I. D.C.L. LL.D. F.R.S. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*; paper cover, 1*s.*

The LIFE of QUEEN VICTORIA, 1819-1897. By G. BARNETT SMITH. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*; paper cover, 1*s.*

NATIONAL PROGRESS DURING the QUEEN'S REIGN, 1837-1897. By MICHAEL G. MULHALL. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 1*s.*

ROUTLEDGE'S DIAMOND JUBILEE GUIDE to LONDON and its SUBURBS. Edited by the Rev. ROBERT GWYNNE, Vicar of St. Mary's, Charing Cross-road. With 100 Illustrations and a Map. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 1*s.*

EVENTS of the QUEEN'S REIGN. The Events of each Year fully described on two pages. Edited by G. BARNETT SMITH. Crown 8vo. paper cover, 6*d.*

LIFE of the QUEEN, 1819-1897. By G. BARNETT SMITH. 160 pages, paper cover, 2*d.*

LIFE of the QUEEN, 1819-1897. By G. BARNETT SMITH. 96 pages, paper cover, 1*d.*

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LIMITED,
London, Manchester, and New York.

FAMOUS SCOTS.

NEW VOLUMES.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.* each; cloth extra, gilt top, 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE 'BLACKWOOD' GROUP.

By Sir GEORGE DOUGLAS.

[This day.

FLETCHER OF SALTOUN.

By G. W. T. OMOND.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT.

By OLIPHANT SMEATON.

JAMES BOSWELL.

By W. KEITH LEASK.

SIR JAMES Y. SIMPSON.

By his Daughter,
EVE BLANTYRE SIMPSON.

Second Edition. Tenth Thousand.

List of the "FAMOUS SCOTS" Series post free.

Twelve Volumes now ready.

OLIPHANT, ANDERSON & FERRIER,
21, Paternoster-square, London, E.C.;
and Edinburgh.

FROM WALTER SCOTT'S LIST.

THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

Edited by HAVELOCK ELLIS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each; some volumes at 6s.

NEW EDITIONS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. with numerous Illustrations. SECOND EDITION.

MAN and WOMAN. A Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters. By HAVELOCK ELLIS.

"Mr. Havelock Ellis belongs, in some measure, to the continental school of anthropologists; but while equally methodical in the collection of facts, he is far more cautious in the invention of theories, and he has the further distinction of being not only able to think, but able to write. His book is a sane and impartial consideration, from a psychological and anthropological point of view, of a subject which is certainly of primary interest."—Athenæum.

Crown 8vo. cloth. 3s. 6d.

FOURTH EDITION, COMPLETELY REVISED.

HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll.

The new edition of this work—which is the most authoritative on the subject—has beeen revised throughout, and a considerable quantity of new and important matter added.

READY SHORTLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

HALLUCINATIONS and ILLUSIONS. A Study of the Fallacies of Perception. By EDMUND PARISH.

This work deals not only with the pathology of the subject, but with the occurrence of the phenomena among normal persons, bringing together the international statistics of the matter. It discusses fully the causation of hallucinations and the various theories that have been put forward; and, further, it examines and adversely criticizes the evidence which has been brought forward in favour of telepathy.

READY SHORTLY, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The PSYCHOLOGY of the EMOTIONS. By Prof. TH. RIBOT.

The latest and most important work of Prof. Ribot, editor of La Revue Philosophique, and the chief living French psychologist. The work contains a very full exposition and defence of the physiological theory of the emotions, which has lately caused much discussion. This theory regards all emotions, from the most elementary to the most exalted and refined, from—to quote one of the author's examples—the pain of a corn to the grief of unattained ideals of Michael Angelo's sonnets, as of identical nature, in the sense that they are the effect and not the cause of bodily changes, and that it is, therefore, incorrect to speak of the "expression of the emotions," the emotion itself being the consciousness of what we call its expression. In the course of his wide ranging exposition the author deals with the social and moral feelings, the sexual instinct, religion, art, the psychology of laughter, the morbid emotions, the classification of characters and temperaments, &c.

Previous Volumes of the Series.

EVOLUTION of SEX. By Prof. Geddes and Thomson.
ELECTRICITY in MODERN LIFE. By G. W. de Tunzelmann.
The ORIGIN of the ARYANS. By Dr. Isaac Taylor.
PHYSIOGNOMY and EXPRESSION. By P. Mantegazza.
EVOLUTION and DISEASE. By J. B. Sutton.
The VILLAGE COMMUNITY. By G. L. Gomme.
The CRIMINAL. By Havelock Ellis.
SANITY and INSANITY. By Dr. C. Mercier.
HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll (Berlin).
MANUAL TRAINING. By Dr. Woodward (St. Louis).
SCIENCE of FAIRY TALES. By E. S. Hartland.
PRIMITIVE FOLK. By Elie Reclus.
EVOLUTION of MARRIAGE. By Prof. Ch. Letourneau.
BACTERIA and their PRODUCTS. By Dr. Woodhead.
EDUCATION and HEREDITY. By J. M. Guyau.
The MAN of GENIUS. By Prof. Lombroso.
The GRAMMAR of SCIENCE. By Prof. Pearson.
PROPERTY: its Origin. By Prof. Ch. Letourneau.
VOLCANOES, PAST and PRESENT. By Prof. Hull.
PUBLIC HEALTH PROBLEMS. By Dr. J. F. Sykes.
MODERN METEOROLOGY. By Frank Waldo, Ph.D.
The GERM-PLASM. By Prof. Weismann. 6s.
The INDUSTRIES of ANIMALS. By F. Houssay.
MAN and WOMAN. By Havelock Ellis. 6s.
MODERN CAPITALISM. By John A. Hobson, M.A.
THOUGHT-TRANSFERENCE. By F. Podmore, M.A.
COMPARATIVE PSYCHOLOGY. By Prof. C. L. Morgan. 6s.
The ORIGINS of INVENTION. By O. T. Mason.
The GROWTH of the BRAIN. By Henry Herbert Donaldson.
EVOLUTION in ART. By Prof. A. C. Haddon. 6s.

UNIFORM WITH PREVIOUS YEARS' ISSUES.

READY IN A FEW DAYS. Crown 8vo paper boards, 3s 6d.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1896. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction on 'The Need for an Endowed Theatre,' and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

Copies may still be had, uniform with the above, of

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1895. With an Epistle Dedicatory to Mr. Robert W. Lowe. By WILLIAM ARCHER.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1894. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction by GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1895. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With a Prefatory Letter by ARTHUR W. PINERO, and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

IBSEN.

In view of the Ibsen Season in London, the announcement of the following Cheap Editions of separate Plays by Ibsen will be of interest:—

Crown 8vo. paper covers, 1s each.

The WILD DUCK [1884]. Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

The LADY from the SEA [1888]. Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

GHOSTS [1881]. Translated by William ARCHER.

ROSMERSHOLM [1886]. Translated by CHARLES ARCHER.

An ENEMY of the PEOPLE [1882]. Translated by Mrs. ELEANOR MARX AVELING.

Paper covers, 2s.

A DOLL'S HOUSE. With a number of Photographic Illustrations.

COUNT TOLSTOY AS THE DELINEATOR OF WAR
HIS LONGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT WORK
ISSUE IN TWO DOUBLE VOLUMES, 7s the Set.

WAR and PEACE. By Count Tolstoy. Contains 1600 pages, printed in very clear type.

London:
WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED, Paternoster-square.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

PHILIPS' NEW HANDY GENERAL ATLAS OF THE WORLD.

Containing 120 pages of Coloured Maps and Plans, dealing exhaustively with Physical, Political, and Commercial Geography, with an Index of over 100,000 Names.

EDITED BY
GEORGE PHILIP, Jun., F.R.G.S.

Size, 15 by 12 inches. Weight, 9 lb.

Handsomely bound in half-morocco, gilt top, £2.

Full bound morocco, gilt edges, £2 12s. 6d.

SPECIAL FEATURES.

1. It is entirely of English origin and manufacture, and has been planned with special reference to the requirements of the British public. For this reason it will be found clearer, more up-to-date, and easier of reference than the Foreign Atlases which are being so extensively advertised in this country.

2. Special care has been taken to show all the British Colonies and Dependencies in great detail.

3. Physical and Commercial Geography are adequately treated in a series of Maps of the World and of the Continents.

Detailed Prospectus on application.

The Daily Mail says:—"In these days, when geographical and political questions are largely intermixed, to the general disturbance of the public mind, a new atlas which, in addition to being complete in every other respect, defines with scrupulous accuracy the most recent frontier limitations, is sure to be liberally welcomed. Such an atlas makes its appearance this week from the house of G. Philip & Son, under the title 'The Handy General Atlas of the World' (40s.). For ordinary purposes of study and reference this is the most convenient and complete work of its kind that I know. The index, which comprehends over 100,000 geographical names, quickly guides one to the discovery of the desired place on its particular map, and the maps themselves are in all respects admirable, carefully drawn, and beautifully printed in colours. The physical and climatological maps and the commercial charts are most useful."

Just published, price 1s.

PHILIPS' SPECIAL MAP OF GREECE.

Illustrating the Greco-Turkish War and the Cretan Question, with Inset Maps of the Seat of War (on an enlarged scale), the Balkan Peninsula, and the Mediterranean Sea.

THE TERRITORIAL TYRANNY OF THE TURK. 1453–1896.

A Coloured Map with Tabular Statement showing at a glance the date of conquest, and period of subjection, of the various Turkish dependencies past and present.

By ARTHUR PAUL, M.A. (Lond.),
Lecturer in English, King's College, London.

Price, folded in cover, 1s.

MR. GLADSTONE writing to the Author says:—"Allow me to thank you for your interesting map, and to express the hope that it may aid in quickening the attention of the public to the Eastern Question, the curse and shame of Christendom."

THE FOUNDATIONS OF SUCCESS.

A Plea for Rational Education.

By STANLEY DE BRATH, M.Inst.C.E.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

The aim of this book is to make a practical suggestion towards supplying the admitted demand for Systematic Secondary Education by showing the natural principles on which it should be based. These principles, underlying all sound thought, are the 'Foundations of Success' for individuals and nations.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.

Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOTICE.—Prof. KARL PEARSON'S New and Important Work, entitled The CHANCES of DEATH, and other Studies in Evolution, will be ready on WEDNESDAY NEXT at all Libraries and Booksellers, with Illustrations, 2 vols. demy 8vo. 25s. net.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

THE

SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Edited by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.

VOL. III. NOW READY.

THE SPORTSMAN IN IRELAND.

By A COSMOPOLITE.

Illustrated by 6 Coloured Plates and numerous other Illustrations by P. Chenevix Trench. Large 8vo. handsomely bound, 15s. Also a limited Large-Paper Edition, with Plates on Japanese Vellum, 2l. 2s. net.

VOLUMES ALREADY ISSUED.

Vol. I. The LIFE of a FOX and the DIARY of a HUNTSMAN. By THOMAS SMITH.

Vol. II. A SPORTING TOUR through the NORTHERN PARTS of ENGLAND and GREAT PART of the HIGHLANDS of SCOTLAND. By Col. T. THORNTON, of Thornville Royal.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WILD SPAIN.'

WILD NORWAY. With Chapters on the Swedish Highlands, Spitzbergen, and Denmark. By ABEL CHAPMAN, Author of 'Wild Spain,' &c. Fully illustrated by the Author and Charles Whymper. Demy 8vo. 16s.

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL'S NEW BOOK.

MEMORIES of the MONTHS. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Editor of "The Sportsman's Library," &c. With Photogravure Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6s. [Ready on Monday.

OLD ENGLISH GLASSES. An Account of Glass Drinking-Vessels in England from Early Times to the End of the Eighteenth Century, with Notices of Continental Glasses during the same Period. By ALBERT HARTSHORNE, Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. With nearly 70 Full-Page Lithographic Plates and over 400 smaller Illustrations. Super-royal 4to. 3l. 3s. net.

This magnificent and unique work is dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen. A full Prospectus can be had on application. [Nearly ready.

A SUNSHINE TRIP: Glimpses of the Orient. Extracts from Letters written by MARGARET BOTTOME. With Portrait. Handsomely bound, 4s. 6d.

The TREATMENT of NATURE in DANTE'S 'DIVINA COMMEDIA.' By L. OSCAR KUHNS, Professor in Wesleyan University, U.S.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

THIRD EDITION, with Portrait.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Master of Balliol. A Personal Memoir. By the Hon. LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, Author of 'Safe Studies,' &c. Third Edition, with Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

TIMES.—"Although Mr. Lionel Tollemache is not among the authors who are read by a very wide circle, there are a certain number of readers, and those not the worst judges, who regard him as one of the most stimulating writers of the day, especially in the sketch-portraits of the people who have influenced him. His essay on Mark Pattison is not likely to be forgotten by any Oxford man, or, indeed, by any student of modern letters who has chanced to read it, and it is safe to foretell that the same will be the case with the 'Personal Memoir' in which he has enshrined his recollections of the late Master of Balliol."

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street,
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

"That delightful repository of forgotten lore, NOTES AND QUERIES."

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

"That useful resuscitant of dead knowledge, yclept NOTES AND QUERIES, the antiquaries' newspaper."

Quarterly Review.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

Every SATURDAY, 24 Pages, Price 4d., of all Booksellers,

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication for Literary Men, Artists, Antiquaries, Genealogists, &c.

CONTAINING EVERY WEEK AMUSING ARTICLES ON SOME OF THE FOLLOWING SUBJECTS:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY,

Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY,

Including unpublished Correspondence of eminent Men, and unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY,

More especially of English Authors, with Notices of rare and unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE,

Preserving the fast-fading Relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY,

With Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS,

Their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY,

Including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY,

Including Histories of Old Families, completion of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES.

On points of ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY, TOPOGRAPHY, FINE ARTS, NATURAL HISTORY, MISCELLANEOUS ANTIQUITIES, NUMISMATICS, PHOTOGRAPHY, &c.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

And may be had, by order, of all Booksellers and Newsvendors.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24*s.*

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

In imperial 8vo. Vol. II. [G to pp. 888

MODERN ENGLISH BIOGRAPHY. By FREDERIC BOASE. Containing nearly 6,000 Concise Memoirs of Persons who have died since 1850. With an Index of the most interesting matter. "No part exchange here. . . . As a work of reference the book is most valuable."—Times, April 14, 1897.

Some copies of Volume I. are still on sale at 30*s.*

Netherton & Worth, Truro.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES—Dante and Books of Academy—Superstitions—Changes in Trades—G Romney—Ghost Names—'Stars' the rarest—Three acres and a cow—Free Lances—D N B MPs—Civis Romanus sum—History of the Guillotine.

QUERIES—Scots Greys at Blenheim—Ship Constitution—Veil of the Queen of Scots—Toad under the Harrow—Cadeck—Holmby House, Local Areas—Bible of 1551—Tenor Bells—Capt R Cole—Evance—'Not worth a rap'—Preservation of Bronze—Rutstead—J Calfhow—Phillips-Judd Family—Nursery Rhyme—Thompson—Dean of Raphoe—'Chanson de Roland'—Ben Jonson Motto in Gibbon's History—Irish Costers—Dukes of Aquitaine and Normandy—Rev M Williams.

REPLIES—Browning's Maternal Ancestors—Chaucer and Villani—'Dead rides Sir Morten'—Family—Eagles Captured at Waterloo—'Old Mortality'—Lighting for conciliation—Sir M Costa—'Wallop'—Wyvill—Author Wanted—Cutting Barrymaids Hair—'Mally Lee'—London Topography—Dutch Scots Brigade—Medals for Battle of Nile—Arse Verses—Bishops' Wigs—Holly Meadows—Jet Fought—Touch of Madmoud—Deer and Fiel—Scales—British Steamers—Red, White, Blue—J Gayton—Blanket Lagen—Hanwell Church—Law Stationer—Pinasaud—Wooden Pedlers—Noblemen's Door-plates—Hotham of Dalton—Relics—Pur-blind.

NOTES on BOOKS—Sinker's Librarians of Trinity College—'The Queen's Empire'—Magazines and Reviews.

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d.* by post 4½*d.*

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

A HISTORY of the ENGLISH NAVY.
EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGES.
PROF. SAINTSBURY on MEDIÆVAL EUROPEAN LITERATURE.
HEROES of the NATIONS—ROBERT BRUCE.
NEW NOVELS—The Pilgrimage of the Ben Beriah, Elementary Jane, Essentially Human, Sweet Irish Eyes, Life Again, Love Again, Cousin Jem, As a Roaring Lion.
MILITARY LITERATURE.
SCOTTISH STORIES.
ANTIQUARIAN LITERATURE.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
'TRAVEL and BIG GAME', TWO PROTHALAMIA, The INTERNATIONAL LITERARY CONGRESS.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Bicycles; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—The Royal Academy, The New Gallery, Vitruviana; Sale; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week.

The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence.

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2*s.*

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardraada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull—"Very successful."
Metropolitan—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News—"Right well done."
News of the World—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

H. GREVEL & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

Just published, 1 vol. demy 8vo. cloth extra, price 12*s.* 6*d.*

RELIGION OF THE ANCIENT EGYPTIANS.

With 73 Illustrations from the Monuments.

By ALFRED WIEDEMANN, Ph.D.,
Professor in the University of Bonn,
Author of 'Aegyptische Geschichte,' 'Herodot's Zweites Buch,' 'Ancient Egyptian Doctrine of Immortality,' &c.

This manual of Egyptian mythology is based on the original texts, references to which are given in the foot-notes It is carefully illustrated; and a full index facilitates reference, especially in the case of deities that receive only isolated or incidental notice.

1 vol. demy 8vo. price 7*s.* 6*d.*

THE ELEMENTS OF ELECTRO-CHEMISTRY TREATED EXPERIMENTALLY.

By Dr. ROBERT LÜPKE,
Head Master of the Municipal Dorothea Realgymnasium, and Lecturer in the Imperial School of Posts and Telegraphs, Berlin.

With 54 Figures in the Text.

Translated from the Second Edition, Revised and Enlarged,
By M. M. PATTISON MUIR, M.A.,
Fellow and Lecturer of Gonville and Caius Coll., Cambridge.

Electro-Chemistry is of much importance, alike to the student of physics and the student of chemistry. The object of this book is to present, in condensed form, the results of the more important work, most of which has been done in the last twenty years and much in the last ten years, in this department.

1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth extra, price 6*s.*

CHEMISTRY IN DAILY LIFE.

POPULAR LECTURES.

By Dr. LASSAR-COHN,
Professor in the University of Königsberg; Author of 'A Laboratory Manual of Organic Chemistry,' &c.

Translated by M. M. PATTISON MUIR, M.A.,
Fellow of Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge.

With 21 Woodcuts in the Text.

"We like this book, and every page proves it to be interesting reading. Our wonder is that it did not appear in the English language at an earlier date."—Lancet.

1 vol. crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

WAGNER'S RING OF THE NIBELUNG,

AND

THE CONDITIONS OF IDEAL MANHOOD.

By DAVID IRVINE.

Showing the revolutionary idea in Wagner's mind, and how it received treatment in his art-work.

2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, price 1*l.* 1*s.*

CORRESPONDENCE OF WAGNER AND LISZT.

Translated into English, with a Preface, by
Dr. FRANCIS HUEFFER.

With an Index by W. ASHTON ELLIS.

"One of the most fascinating volumes in the literature of music."—Black and White.

London: H. GREVEL & CO.
33, King-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892 and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s.* 4*d.*, or free by post, 1*s.* 6*d.*

John C Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

DAVID NUTT, 270–271, Strand.

NOW READY.

The PROCESSION and ELEVATION of the CERI at GUBBIO. By H. M. BOWER. Demy 8vo. illustrated, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

 The above Volume forms the extra publication of the Folk-lore Society for 189 , and is sent gratis to all Members who have paid their Subscription for that year.

The Annual Subscription to the Folk-lore Society is 1*l.* 1*s.* The publications for 1896 are: FOLK-LORE: a Quarterly Journal of Myth, Tradition, and Custom, Vol. VII., 1*l.* 1*s.* net, and Mr. BOWER'S PROCESSION of the CERI, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

The PROCESSION of the CERI describes the very remarkable spring festival annually celebrated at Gubbio. The Author connects this with the ancient lustration, the ritual of which is recorded on two of the Iguvine Tables, and he prints, for the first time in English, a translation of these tables.

TO BE ISSUED IMMEDIATELY.

TOTE LISTOIRE de FRANCE

(CHRONIQUE SAINTONGEAISE). Now first Edited from the only Two MSS., with Introduction, Appendices, and Notes, by F. W. BOURDILLON, M.A. With Prefatory Letter by M. GASTON PARIS. Small 4to. printed on Hand-made Paper. Only 250 copies printed. Price for the first 150 copies, 10*s.* net.

 A thirteenth century text in the Saintonge dialect of great philological interest. Mr. Bourdillon prints both MSS., which belong to different stages of the language, in full.

THE CLASSICAL REVIEW.

Vol. XI. No. 4. MAY, 1897. 1*s.* 6*d.* net.

Contents.

W. M. LINDSAY. Discovery of a Collation of the Lost 'Codex Turnebi' of Plautus.
C. M. FRANCKEN. On the Text of Francken's Edition of Lucan.
A. W. VERRALL. On the Date of Tyrtaeus.
C. D. BUCK. On the Genitives Τλασιᾶφο and Πασιάδᾶφο.
R. C. CHRISTIE. The Earliest Appearance in Print of the First Idyll of Moschus.
E. POSTE. Notes on Jebb's Edition of Sophocles.
H. W. GREENE. Notes on the 'Oedipus Tyrannus.'
A. E. HOUSMAN. Critical Notes on Ovid's 'Heroides.'
ROBINSON ELLIS. Emendations of Lucretius.
JOHN E. B. MAYOR. Three New Fragments of Cicero.
W. E. HEITLAND. Note on Lucan viii. 7.
Krumbacher's Byzantine Literature. J. B. BURY.
Bruhn's Edition of the 'Iphigenia in Tauris.' A. T. MURRAY.
Greenidge's Greek Constitutional History. E. M. WALKER.
McCosh's Edition of the 'Bacchides.' J. H. GRAY.
Zuretti's Editions of the Iliad and Odyssey. C. M. MULVANY.
Die Marcussäule. PERCY GARDNER.
Gardner's Handbook of Greek Sculpture. II. G. F. HILL.
C. TORR. Torr's Memphis and Mycenae.
Monthly Record—Summaries—Bibliography.

Crown 8vo. cloth, Half-a-Crown.

OUTSPOKEN ESSAYS on SOCIAL SUBJECTS. By E. BELFORT BAX. Contents:—1. From Phallism to Purism. 2. The Everlasting Female. 3. The Materialistic Doctrine of History. 4. The Futility of Holiness. 5. Early Christianity and Modern Socialism. 6. Century-Ends and Mid-Centuries. 7. The Rule of the Small Middle-Class. 8. Two Questions begging "Saws." 9. Luxury, Ease, and Vice. 10. The Natural History of the Nonconformist Conscience. 11. Value. 12. Voluntaryism v. Socialism.

ANNALS of TOIL or LABOUR. HISTORY OUTLINES, ROMAN and BRITISH. By MORRISON DAVIDSON. Two Books, 1*s.* each.

A CREED for CHRISTIAN SOCIALISTS. By the DEAN of ELY. 1*s.*, cloth, 2*s.*

LAWS of ETERNAL LIFE. Studies in the Church Catechism. By Rev. STEWART HEADLAM. 1*s.*; or cloth, 2*s.*

London: William Reeves, 185, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

NEW EDITION, pp. 324, cloth, 1*s.* post free,

HOMŒOPATHIC FAMILY INSTRUCTOR. By Drs. R. and W. EPPS. Describes fully and Prescribes for General Diseases.

London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 48, Threadneedle-street, and 170, Piccadilly.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for MAY.

The CONCERT of EUROPE.
The SULTAN and the POWERS.
OUR NAVAL DEMONSTRATION. By W. Laird Clowe
The POPE and the ARCHBISHOPS. By Principal Rainy.
BRAHMS and the CLASSICAL TRADITION. By W. H. Hadow.
The OBVERSE SIDE of ARISTOPHANES. By R. E. S. Hart.
WAS FENIANISM EVER FORMIDABLE? By William O'Brien.
The DEVIL in MODERN OCCULTISM. By F. Legge.
RUSSIA AS IT IS. By W. Durban.
The AWAKENING of the COPTIC CHURCH. By a Coptic Layman.
The FINANCIAL RELATIONS BETWEEN IRELAND and GREAT BRITAIN. By the Right Hon. L. H. Courtney, M.P.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.

No. 243. MAY, 1897.

The POWERS and the EAST in the LIGHT of the WAR. By Francis de Pressensé (Foreign Editor of Le Temps).
SIDE-LIGHTS on the CRETAN INSURRECTION. By Ernest N. Bennett.
AMONG the LIARS. By H. Cecil Lowther.
The SCHLESWIG-HOLSTEIN QUESTION and its PLACE in HISTORY. By the Right Hon. Professor Max Müller.
On BANK HOLIDAYS—and a PLEA for ONE MORE. By the Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P.
MAY CAROLS. By Miss A. M. Wakefield.
The HOME of the CABOTS. By Senator H. Cabot Lodge.
The PROGRESS of MEDICINE during the QUEEN'S REIGN. By Malcolm Morris, F.R.C.S.Ed.
GOREE: a Lost Possession of England. By Walter Frewen Lord.
The APOTHEOSIS of the NOVEL under QUEEN VICTORIA. By Herbert Paul.
The SPEECH of CHILDREN. By S. S. Buckman.
TOBACCO in RELATION to HEALTH and CHARACTER. By Ed. Vincent Heward.
GONGORA. By James Mew.
The SACRIFICE of the MASS. By J. Horace Round.
The DUKE of ARGYLL'S CRITICISMS. By Herbert Spencer.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893 contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s.*; or free by post, 2*s.* 3*d.*

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

MEMORY.

PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s.* 6*d.* English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10*s.* 6*d.*, 16*s.* 6*d.*, and 25*s.* each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

Bound in buckram, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

SENTENTIÆ JURIS: Legal and other Epigram.

By WILLIAM HOLLOWAY.

The Publisher has received permission to print the following from the Author of 'John Inglesant':—

"SIR,—As a rule no class of people are more detestable to me than that of authors who send me their books; as a professed Christian I hope I do not hate anybody more; but in your case, I must in mere fairness say that I have not laughed so much for a very long time as I have over your book, so that your salad (V. 113) has not been altogether a failure, as many salads are. I am your obliged servant, J. HENRY SHORTHOUSE."

"William Holloway, Esq."

GEORGE REDWAY, Hart-street, Bloomsbury.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO.'s LIST.

AT ALL LIBRARIES, BOOKSELLERS', AND BOOKSTALLS.

IN the TIDEWAY. By Flora Annie Steel. 6s.

The FOLLY of PEN HARRINGTON. By Julian Sturgis. 6s.

The AMAZING MARRIAGE. By George Meredith. 6s.

DRACULA. By Bram Stoker. 6s.

GREEN FIRE. By Fiona Macleod. 6s.

SELECTED POEMS. By George Meredith. 6s. net.

NEW POEMS. By Francis Thompson. 6s. net.

The OBSERVATIONS of a FOSTER PARENT. By John Charles Tarver.

An ENGLISH GARNER. By Professor Edward Arber. Vol. VIII. now ready, 5s. net.

POPULAR RELIGION and FOLK-LORE in NORTHERN INDIA. By William Crooke. Illustrated. 2 vols. 21s. net.

The PREACHING of ISLAM. By T. W. Arnold. Demy 8vo. 12s.

ENGLISH SCHOOLS, 1546–1548. By A. F. Leach. Demy 8vo. 12s. net.

WHITMAN: a Study. By John Burroughs. 6s. net.

An ESSAY on COMEDY, and The USES of the COMIC SPIRIT. By George Meredith. 5s. net.

The CHRONICLE of VILLANI. A Book for Dante Students. Translated by Rose E. Selfe. Edited by P. H. WICKSTEED. 6s.

HAROLD. By Lord Lytton. Edited by J. Laurence Gomme. 3s. 6d.

A WRITER of FICTION. By Chris Holland, Author of 'My Japanese Wife.' 2s. 6d.

The LOVE of an OBSOLETE WOMAN. 2s. 6d.

IMPERIAL DEFENCE. By Sir Charles Dilke and Spenser Wilkinson. New Edition. 2s. 6d.

The GAME of POLO. By T. F. Dale. 21s. net.

The NATION'S AWAKENING. By Spenser Wilkinson. 3s. 6d.

SONGS of the MAID. By John Huntley Skrine. 5s.

SONGS and MEDITATIONS. By Maurice Hewlett. 5s.

SONGS for LITTLE PEOPLE. By Norman Gale. Illustrated by Helen Stratton. 6s.

The STORY of an AFRICAN CRISIS and the JAMESON RAID. Illustrated. By F. E. Garrett, Editor of the Cape Times. 3s. 6d.

BOSWELL'S LIFE of JOHNSON. Edited by Augustine Birrell. With Frontispieces. 6 vols. fcap. 8vo. cloth, paper label, or gilt extra, 2s. net per Volume; also half-morocco, 3s. net per Volume. Sold in Sets only.

CONSTABLE'S REPRINT OF THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

THE FAVOURITE EDITION OF SIR WALTER SCOTT.

With all the Original Plates and Vignettes (Re-engraved). In Forty-eight Volumes.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, paper label title, 1s. 6d. net per Volume, or 3l. 12s. the Set. Also cloth gilt, gilt top, 2s. net per Volume, or 4l. 16s. the Set; and half-leather gilt, 2s. 6d. net per Volume, or 6l. the Set.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. 2, Whitehall-gardens, Westminster.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by John Edward Francis, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by John C. Francis at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for Scotland, Messrs Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 8, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3629. SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL INSTITUTION of GREAT BRITAIN, Albemarle-street, Piccadilly, W.

THURSDAY NEXT (May 20), at 3 o'clock, CHURTON COLLINS, Esq., M.A., FIRST of FOUR LECTURES on 'The French Revolution and English Literature—Burke, William Godwin, Mary Wollstonecraft, Wordsworth, and Coleridge.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.

SATURDAY, May 22, at 3 o'clock, J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND, Esq., M.A. F.S.A., FIRST of FOUR LECTURES on 'Music in England during the Reign of Queen Victoria.' With Musical Illustrations. Half-a-Guinea.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY. (Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

Patron—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

President—The Right Hon. Sir M. E. GRANT-DUFF, G.C.S.I.

THURSDAY, May 20, 5 P.M., at the Museum of Practical Geology, Jermyn-street, S.W., the following Paper will be read:—'Some Political Theories of the Early Jesuits,' by Rev. J. NEVILLE FIGGIS, M.A.

HUBERT HALL, Director and Hon. Secretary.

115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.

The NEXT EVENING MEETING of the FOLK-LORE SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE-STREET, PICCADILLY, on TUESDAY, May 18, at 8 P.M., when a Paper on the 'Folk-lore of the Uraons' will be read by Mr. H. RAYNBIRD, Junior.

Mr. E. S. HARTLAND will also exhibit a leaden charm found in a house at Dymock, Gloucestershire, and read an explanatory Paper.

F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6

SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE, 1897.

President—
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.

Hon. Treasurer—
HENRY R. TEDDER, Esq.

Hon. Secretary—
J. Y. W. MACALISTER, Esq.,
20, Hanover-square, W.

The Conference will be held (by the kind permission of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Corporation) in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, GUILDHALL, LONDON, on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Lord Mayor has invited the members of the Conference to a Conversazione in the Mansion House on the evening of July 13.

An Exhibition of Library Appliances will be an important feature of the Conference. Intending exhibitors should communicate with the Hon. Secretary of the Exhibition Committee, THOMAS MASON, Esq., 115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to attend all meetings and social gatherings. Applications for membership should be sent at once to the HON. SECRETARY.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C., Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

PARIS CORRESPONDENT of experience is OPEN to an ENGAGEMENT.—A. H. W., Box 869, Willing's, 125, Strand, W.C.

LONDON HONOURS GRADUATE seeks post as SECRETARY or LIBRARIAN, or would undertake Literary Work. Good knowledge of French.—Address Z 486, at Shelley's, 38, Gracechurch-street, E.C.

PRIVATE SECRETARY.—Appointment wanted by GENTLEMAN (33) of large experience, Secretarial, Literary, and Journalistic. Expert Shorthand Writer, Typist, and Accountant; experienced in Estate Management.—M. B., 63, Campsbourne-road, Hornsey, London, N.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL, CANADA.

CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.

The Governors of McGill University are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the newly founded PROFESSORSHIP of ZOOLOGY. Salary $2,500 per annum.—Candidates from Great Britain are requested to forward applications, with any testimonials and references they may desire to submit, on or before June 15, addressed PRINCIPAL, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria-street, Westminster.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination—DRAUGHTSMAN in the HYDROGRAPHICAL DEPARTMENT in the ADMIRALTY (17 25), JULY 7th. Expertness in Hydrographical Chart Drawing essential. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, in Association with the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn-road.—For Prospectus, Scholarships, &c., apply to THE SECRETARY, at the School, 20, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON, for WOMEN, York-place, Baker-street, W.

Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.

The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGAN on THURSDAY, April 29.
The HALF-TERM BEGINS on MONDAY, May 31.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48*l.*, and ONE CLIFT SCHOLARSHP in ARTS, value Thirty Guineas, each tenable for Three Years, will be awarded on the result of the Examination to be held at the College on JUNE 24 and 25.

Names to be sent in to the Principal not later than June 15.

LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

GOVERNESSES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can RECOMMEND several highly qualified English and Foreign GOVERNESSES for Resident and Daily Engagements.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

A GENTLEMAN desires to INVEST 3,000*l.* as PARTNER in a PUBLISHER'S BUSINESS.—Address LITTÉRATEUR, Box 1,463, Sell's Advertising Offices, London.

A FIRM of PUBLISHERS can receive a GENTLEMAN as PARTNER who will invest about 1,000*l.* Salary 150*l.* per annum, besides good return on Capital. Particulars can be given at interview only and in confidence.—Address PARTNER, Box 1,364 Sell's Advertising Offices, London.

TRADE JOURNAL FOR SALE, established some years, capable of great development in the hands of the right person. Price 1,500*l.* Terms could be arranged.—JOURNAL, Mather & Crowther, Limited, Advertising Offices, New Bridge-street, E.C.

EGYPTOLOGY.—Prof. FLINDERS PETRIE will deliver a Course of SIX LECTURES on THURSDAYS, 3 P.M., beginning on MAY 20, with 'Recent Discoveries in Egypt,' which will be a Lecture open to the public without ticket.

The CLASSES for EGYPTIAN LANGUAGE will be held by Mr. F. L. GRIFFITH on the above days at 2 and 4.30 P.M. Tickets for Lectures and Classes, 1*l.* 1*s.* per term, on application to

THE SECRETARY, University College, W.C.

MR. EDWARD WHYMPER will accept engagements to LECTURE on MOUNTAINEERING and MOUNTAIN TRAVEL during the Season 1897-8.—For full particulars apply to THE LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, London.

TO LECTURE SOCIETIES.

MR. R. WALLACE, M.P. (Edin.), is now making his Lecturing arrangements for the Season 1897-98. Subjects:—'Cant,' 'House of Commons,' 'Mrs. Grundy,' and 'Shams.' Details on application.—9, Edith-villas, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process. Authors' references.—MISS SIKES, West Kensington Type-writing Agency, Hammersmith, W.

SCHOLARLY TYPE-WRITING.—Foreign and Classical MSS., and others requiring special care, undertaken by a Graduate. English at usual rates.—TYPOGRAPHIC AGENCY, Dan, Beeches-road, West Bromwich.

TYPE-WRITING.—10*d.* 1,000. Accurate, neat, and quick. Plays a speciality. Send for sample.—"De Luxe" Office, GASSETT, Allandale-road, Leicester.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 28, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1*s.* per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type writing). Usual terms. Misses E. R. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES. The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 1*s.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, 'Glossator, London.'

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

MESSRS. KARSLAKE & CO., Publishers of the exceedingly successful "Early Portraits of Queen Victoria," are prepared to treat with AUTHORS and ARTISTS for the PUBLICATION of ILLUSTRATED WORKS upon unusually favourable terms.—61, Charing Cross-road, W.C.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MSS. in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs

CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3*d.* post free.

MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books, Manuscripts, and Engravings.

CATALOGUES of NEW PURCHASES issued at frequent intervals.

Libraries Arranged, Catalogued, Valued, and Purchased.

29, New Bond-street, London, W.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,

14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

CATALOGUES on application.

Now ready,

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

THORNTON & SON, Booksellers, 11, BROAD-STREET, OXFORD.

Just out.

A CATALOGUE of INTERESTING GENERAL BOOKS.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

SOTHERAN'S PRICE CURRENT of LITERATURE, No. 254, just published, contains a Collection of Books in Classical Literature, including numerous Early and Recent English Translations and Works on Classical Antiquities.

Post free from H. SOTHERAN & Co., Booksellers, 140, Strand, W.C. or 37, Piccadilly, W., London.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

WILL BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

THE NORWICH SCHOOL OF PAINTING.

A Series of Autotype Reproductions of Works by John Sell Cotman, Old Crome, Stark, Ladbrooke, Bright, Middleton, Daniell, Leman, Lound, &c. Forty Autotype Plates, mounted on grey boards, in Portfolio. Price Ten Guineas, net.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.

This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.

An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS

NOW OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST

(100 PAGES)

Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;
241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;
48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at
BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

AMERICAN

COLONIAL TRACTS.

MONTHLY.

Number One, MAY, 1897.

A DISCOURSE CONCERNING THE DESIGNED ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW COLONY TO THE SOUTH OF CAROLINA, IN THE MOST DELIGHTFUL COUNTRY OF THE UNIVERSE, BY SIR ROBERT MOUNTGOMERY, BARONET, LONDON, 1717.

Price 25 Cents. $3.00 a Year.

PUBLISHED BY

GEORGE P. HUMPHREY,
25, EXCHANGE-STREET,
ROCHESTER,
NEW YORK,
U.S.A.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

SEVERAL valuable OIL PAINTINGS by E. J. Memann, sen., W. Shayer, sen., Montague J. Holland, Poelemburg, Salvator Rosa, Roghman, and others, FOR SALE, cheap.—20, Bristol-road, Sheffield.

FINE ARTS.—TO CONNOISSEURS ONLY.

Part of an ESTATE of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, under directions of co-Executors, TO BE SOLD PRIVATELY, in whole or in part. It is a small Collection by Ancient and Modern Masters of distinction.
Solicitor, HAROLD F. P. ROBERTS, Esq., 7, Gray's Inn-place, Gray's Inn, Holborn, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.
(The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)

Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 17, MODERN ENGRAVINGS of the late Sir J. E. MILLAIS, Bart.

On TUESDAY, May 18, COLLECTION of MEISSONIER ETCHINGS of J. H. BIRCH, Esq.

On WEDNESDAY, May 19, and Two Following Days, the COLLECTION of ANTIQUE BRONZES and GEMS, ITALIAN CINQUECENTO BRONZES, MAJOLICA, COINS, SILVER, PICTURES, &c., of the late Rev. MONTAGUE TAYLOR.

On FRIDAY, May 21, FINE OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER and SILVER-GILT PLATE, LIMOGES ENAMELS, the GLENLYON BROOCH, and other Early Scotch Relics—fine Gobelins and Brussels Tapestries, &c.

On SATURDAY, May 22, Fifty important ENGLISH and FOREIGN PICTURES, the Property of BENJAMIN ARMITAGE, Esq., of Sorrel Bank, Manchester, the important COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of F. W. ARMITAGE, Esq., of Melbourne, and a choice COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On MONDAY, May 24, a COLLECTION of CHELSEA GROUPS and FIGURES, and other Porcelain and Decorative Objects, the Property of RICHARD RATCLIFF, Esq., of Stanford Hall, Loughborough.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 100 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner, of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues may now be had, price One Guinea.

Scarce Engravings and Paintings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C. on MONDAY, May 17, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a choice COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, principally in Colours, including Lady Smythe and Children after Sir Joshua Reynolds—Mrs. Fitzherbert, Mrs. Inman, Mrs. Beauvarie, Mrs. Abingdon, Miss Tickell, Mrs. Jackson, and many others after Conway—The remaining Portion collected by a connexion of the Conway Family together with the PAINTINGS of the late L. P. LOTTUS BROOK, Esq., R.S.A.

On view the Friday and Saturday prior to and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Books, many in fine Bindings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C. on THURSDAY, May 20, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, many in fine bindings, amongst which will be found Kipling's Departmental Ditties and Quartette, First Editions—Hamerton's Portfolio, 20 vols.—Bush's Antiquities, 3 vols.—Bentley's Miscellany—Ainsworth's Jack Sheppard—Thornton's Don Juan, Coloured Plates, complete in original parts as issued—Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, Coloured Plates by Rowlandson—Ariosto Orlando Furioso, 3 vols., morocco extra—The Satirist, 5 vols.—Heptameron, 3 vols.—Retif de la Bretonne, Les Contemporaines, First Editions of Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, &c., many in fine bindings by Zaehnsdorf, Bedford, &c.

Catalogues may be had, if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Musical Instruments.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C. on TUESDAY, May 25, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, comprising Grand and Cottage Pianofortes—Organs—Harmoniums—Single and Double Action Harps—Italian and other Violins, Violas, Violoncellos and Double Basses, with the Bows, Cases and Fittings—a large quantity of American Banjos—also Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments by well-known Makers, and several small Libraries of Ancient and Modern Music.

Catalogues on application.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, RARE BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, May 28, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY from various Private Sources, comprising Old English, Sèvres, Dresden, and other China—Antique and Modern Silver—Coins—Enamels—Bronzes—and Antique Furniture.

Catalogues in preparation.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX LIBRIS, including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles, many with Dates and Engravers' Names.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

MR. J. C. STEVENS begs to announce that his Auction-Rooms and Offices, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, are OPEN DAILY for the reception of which is included in Sales held every Friday throughout the year.

MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY OF EVERY DESCRIPTION,

Established 1760. Telegraphic address: "Auks, London."

MONDAY NEXT.

A Library of Books, comprising Works on Botany, Chemistry, Travels, Natural History, and other subjects; also Bookshelves, a handsome Library Table, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, May 17, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view Saturday prior 12 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY NEXT.

The valuable Collection of Minerals, Corals, Shells, &c., formed by the late Mr. W. STUART, of Aldenham Abbey, Aldenham, Watford, together with the costly Cabinets.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY NEXT, May 18, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, without reserve.

On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

A large quantity of Telegraphic Instruments and Apparatus (sold by order of the Postmaster General)—superior Photographic Cameras—Lenses in many sizes, Stands, Shutters, Dishes, &c., by leading London Makers—Scientific Instruments, and a General Collection of Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, May 21, at half-past 12 o'clock.

On view the day prior 2 till 5, and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

TUESDAY, May 25.

VALUABLE COLLECTION OF CURIOSITIES.

The Collection of African Native Work formed by the late WILLIAM GRAHAM, Esq. (sold by order of the Executor): Curiosities from Benin City, New Guinea, South Africa, and other parts, Spears and Native Weapons from the South Sea Islands, Arms and Armour, Prints, China, Antiquities, Chinese Carvings, a valuable Skin Carpet, &c.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY, May 25, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogue had.

BIBLIOTHECA PHILLIPPICA.

A FURTHER PORTION of the Famous Collection of Manuscripts and Autograph Letters of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the FAMOUS COLLECTION of MANUSCRIPTS and AUTOGRAPH LETTERS of the late Sir THOMAS PHILLIPPS, Bart., F.R.S., &c., of Middle Hill, Worcestershire, and Thirlestaine House, Cheltenham, including nearly 120 MSS. on Vellum, dating from the Ninth Century, together with valuable Works relating to Scotland and Ireland—a fine Series of State Letters and Papers of the Reigns of Charles II., William III, and Queen Anne—Illuminated Biblia, Psalters, Missals, &c.—Wardrobe Books of Edward II., Richard II., Thos. Duke of Gloucester, Prince Henry, &c.—Collections relating to Queen Elizabeth and Mary, Queen of Scots—Early English Poetry and Literature, together with an important Series of Shakespeare Quartos; also fine Topographical Collections relating to the Counties of Cornwall, Derby, Hants, Lancaster, Norfolk, Salop, York, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had: if by post, on receipt of six stamps.

Valuable Books selected from the Library of a Gentleman, deceased.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, May 21, at 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS selected from the LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN, deceased, comprising Early Editions of the English Dramatists—Books on Witchcraft, including the First Edition of Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, Dr. Dee, &c.—several remarkable Collections of Early Chap-Books—Tracts relating to Mary Tofts, the Rabbit Woman of Godalming, from the Nassau Collection—Richard Brathwait's various Works—Jest Books—Chalkhill's 'Thealma and Clearchus, 1683—Defoe's Moll Flanders, First Edition—Sir John Mennis's Musarum Delicie, 1656—Simon Grahame's 'The Anatomie of Humors, First Edition—A Mirror for Magistrates, 1610—Boccaccio's Decameron, 1620—Brant's Stultifera Navis, 1570—Johnson's Highwaymen, First Edition, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Important Autograph Letters and Historical Documents.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, May 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, important AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS, comprising interesting Specimens of R. Burns, Byron, Garrick, Johnson, John Evelyn, Samuel Pepys, Lord Nelson, Sir Peter Paul Rubens, &c.—a large and most important Collection of Letters addressed to Victor Hugo—an Autograph Manuscript of Dean Swift, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.

The Valuable and Extensive Collection of Medals commemorative of British History.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Five Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of MEDALS commemorative of British History, the Property of the late HYMAN MONTAGU, Esq., F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues, illustrated with Nine Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3s. each.

The Library of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D Litt.D., formerly Head Master of Queen Elizabeth's School, Ipswich, Editor of Aristophanes, Plutarch's 'Lives,' &c., consisting of valuable Classical Works—History—Poetry—Critical Treatises—Scientific Periodicals—Educational Books—First Editions of the Writings of A. C. Swinburne, Robert Bridges, Matthew Arnold, Robert Browning, &c.—Firdusi, The Shah Nameh, Manuscript, with Miniatures, Sæc. XVII.—Thackeray's The Snob, the Eleven Numbers complete, 1829; also a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Rev. W. WALBRAN, of Pendleton, Clitheroe, comprising Theological and Classical Works—Archæological Publications—Dictionaries &c.; Horæ Beatæ Marie Virginis, Manuscript on Vellum, with finely Painted Miniatures, Sæc XV.—Rare Books on Gardening, &c.; and other Properties, consisting of Scarce Books relating to America—Chronicles—Voyages, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

PARIS.—M. P. CHEVALLIER, Auctioneer, 10, Rue de la Grange Batélière, assisted by MM. MANNHEIM & SONS, Experts, 7, Rue St Georges, will SELL by PUBLIC AUCTION, in PARIS, at the GALERIE GEORGES PETIT, 8, Rue de Sèze, THURSDAY and FRIDAY, May 20 and 21, at 2 P.M., the important COLLECTION of Mr A. TOLLIN, comprising Objects of Art and rare Curiosities of the Middle Age and the Renaissance period—Faenza—Glass Ware—Stained Glass—Gold and Silver Ware—Enamels—Sculptures—Furniture—Tapestry—Painting of the Early Italian and Flemish School. On view May 18 and 19.

PARIS.—M. PAUL CHEVALLIER, Auctioneer, 10, Rue Grange Batélière, assisted by MM. MANNHEIM & SON, Experts, 7, Rue St. Georges, will SELL by PUBLIC AUCTION, in PARIS, GALERIE GEORGES PETIT, 8, Rue de Sèze, from MONDAY, May 31 to THURSDAY, June 10, at 2 P.M., the important COLLECTION of M. ÉMILE GAVET, comprising Objects of Art and rare Curiosities of the Renaissance Period—Italian Faenza—Della Robbia Terra-Cottas—Limoges Enamels—Leather Work—Bernard Palissy Faenza—Venetian Glass Work—Brass and Copper Wares—Clocks—Art Bronzes—Sculptures—Tapestry—Furniture and Seats in Carved Wood—Paintings of the Early Italian School—Drawings—Miniatures. On view May 29 and 30, from 1 to 6 P.M.

THE OLD MASTERS.

MESSRS. FREDERIK MULLER & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at AMSTERDAM, on TUESDAY, June 1, the very important CABINETS of OLD PICTURES of G. DE CLERCQ, Esq., and of Mrs. JENTINK-FARRET, containing exceedingly fine Specimens by Avercamp, Asselyn, Bakhuysen, Berckheyde, Berghem, Van Beyeren, F. Bol, J. Both, Velvet-Breughel, Pieter Claesz. Codde, Decker, Duck, Van Everdingen, Fyt, Hackaert (Two pieces), D. Hals, Heda, De Heem, B. Van der Helst (magnificent composition of Four Figures life size), Hondecoeter, Honthorst, Koninck, Lievens, Maes, Van der Meer, Van der Meulen, J. M. Molenaar (Three pieces), Aert van der Neer (Five pieces), G. Nevts, A. Palamedesz. (Three pieces), Pijnacker (Two pieces), G. de Ring, J. Ruysdael, S. Ruysdael, H. Saftleven, Slingelandt, Jan Steen (Three pieces), Stoop (Two pieces), Van Streeck, Terborch, A. Van de Velde, W. Van de Velde, jun. (capital Battle-scene of the English and Dutch Fleets), Van de Venne (Five pieces), Verboom, Vinckboons, S. de Vlieger, Mart de Vos, R. van Vries, Walscappelle, Van de Werf, Weenix, &c.

Illustrated Catalogues are to be had at the Office, Doelenstraat, 10, Amsterdam, price Four Shillings, free by post.

MESSRS. FREDERIK MULLER & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, on the same day, the beautiful COLLECTION of OLD DRAWINGS, the Cabinet of W. F. PIEK, Esq.

Please apply for the Illustrated Catalogue at the said Office, price One Shilling, free by post.

Valuable Library of the late Rev. WM. SPARROW SIMPSON, D.D.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 18, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock, the valuable LIBRARY of the late Rev. WM. SPARROW SIMPSON, D.D., Sub-Dean of St Paul's, comprising valuable Archæological, Topographical, and Antiquarian Books, many relating to the City Companies, London and its Suburbs, and the usual Standard Works in General Literature—Liturgical Works and Books on Church Ceremonial and Ritual—Roman Brevaries, Missals, Psalters, and Books of Devotion—Books on Music and Musical Instruments—Oratorios, Anthems, and Organ Music—Early Tracts, and Sermons.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Sale of a Library of Books (chiefly illustrating Art); Costly Ornaments; Indian Arms; a Cabinet of Coins and Medals; Antique Silver, and other Objets d'Art; a large Collection of Autotypes; a few Water-Colour Drawings, &c., the Property of the late Dr. T. B. BARRETT, of Welshpool.

MESSRS. WILLIAM HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN are favoured with instructions to conduct the above important SALE, at the COUNTY MART, SHREWSBURY (where the Property will be removed from Welshpool for convenience of viewing and sale), commencing TUESDAY, May 25, and Two Following Days.

Catalogues forwarded on application.

PARIS FIRE; PLAN of BUILDING, with further particulars; Illustrations of Presbyterian College, Cambridge, and Sculpture for Town Hall, Oxford; the Workmen's Compensation Bill; the Paris Salons of 1897; Architecture at the Royal Academy (II.), &c., see the BUILDER of May 15. Post free, 4½d.

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

VIOLET TWEEDALE'S NEW BOOK.

1 vol. 3s. 6d.

AND THEY TWO.

NEW EDITION.

London:
H. Henry & Co., Limited, 93, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

LOUIS BECKE'S NEW VOLUME.

Pacific Tales. By LOUIS BECKE, Author of 'His Native Wife,' 'By Reef and Palm,' &c. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt tops, 6s.
[Next week.

Life of Sir Henry Parkes. By CHARLES E. LYNE. Cloth, 16s.

The Inner Life of the House of COMMONS. From the Writings of WILLIAM WHITE. Introduction by JUSTIN McCARTHY. 2 vols. cloth, 16s.

Twelve Bad Women. Edited by ARTHUR VINCENT. Illustrated. Cloth, 16s.

A Great Lie. By WILFRID HUGH CHESSON, Author of 'Name this Child,' &c. Cloth, 6s.

A Pot of Honey. By SUSAN CHRISTIAN, Author of 'Silhouettes.' Cloth, 3s. 6d.

South Africa as It Is. By F. REGINALD STATHAM, Author of 'Mr. Magnus.' Cloth, 10s. 6d.

The National Cook-Book. By MARION HARLAND and CHRISTINE TERHUNE HERRICK. Cloth, 7s. 6d.

Juvenile Offenders. By W. DOUGLAS MORRISON. Cloth, 6s.

A Village Politician. By J. C. BUCKMASTER. Introduction by Right Hon. A. J. MUNDELLA. Cloth, 6s.

Canada. By J. G. BOURINOT, LL.D. (A vol. of the "Nation" Series.) Maps, Illustrations, and Index. Cloth, 5s.

British India. By R. W. FRAZER, LL.B. (A vol. of the "Nation" Series.) Maps, Illustrations, and Index. Cloth, 5s.

Pioneer Work in the New Zealand Alps. By A. P. HARPER. 40 Illustrations and Maps. Cloth, 21s. net.

Sindbad, Smith and Co. By ALBERT STEARNS. Illustrated by R. Birch. Cloth, 5s.

The Burden of Life: Essays by the late J. HAIN FRISWELL. Edited, with a Memoir, by his DAUGHTER. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

Quotations for Occasions. Compiled by KATHERINE B. WOOD. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

St. Mark's Indebtedness to St. Matthew. By F. P. BADHAM. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

The Shadow Christ: an Introduction to Christ Himself. By G. S. LEE. Paper boards, 2s. 6d.

The Queen's Reign for Children. By W. CLARKE HALL. Cloth, 2s. 6d.

Anthony Jasper. By BEN BOLT. (A "Pseudonym" vol.) Paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth, 2s.

A Noble Haul. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. (The New "Little Novel.") Paper, 6d.; cloth, 1s.

Mr. T. FISHER UNWIN'S ILLUSTRATED SPRING LIST will be sent post free to any address on application.

London:
T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-sqare, E.C.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

8vo. 15s.

THE BIBLE:

Its Meaning and Supremacy.

By F. W. FARRAR, D.D. F.R.S.,
Dean of Canterbury.

"This book will rank among the most important and influential works of the kind that have issued from the press during recent years. It is at once a powerful vindication of the truths of Scripture, their majesty, and their harmony with the lofty conceptions of human society; but it is, at the same time, an equally powerful blow at dogmas which are no part of the Christian faith, or are in nowise essential to its integrity."—Scotsman.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LECTURES IN THE LYCEUM;

Or, Aristotle's Ethics for English Readers.

Edited by ST. GEORGE STOCK.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CROMWELL'S PLACE IN HISTORY.

Founded on Six Lectures delivered at Oxford.

By SAMUEL RAWSON GARDINER, D.C.L.,
Ford's Lecturer, 1896.

With 2 Portraits, 8vo. 18s.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF THOMAS WAKLEY,

Founder and First Editor of the 'Lancet,' Member of Parliament for Finsbury, and Coroner for West Middlesex.

By S. SQUIRE SPRIGGE, M.B. Cantab.

8vo. 18s.

THE ANNUAL REGISTER:

A Review of Public Events at Home and Abroad for the Year 1896.

 Volumes of the ANNUAL REGISTER for the Years 1863–1895 can still be had, 18s. each.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY PRESS SERIES.

Vol. V. 8vo. 14s. just published.

THE CORRESPONDENCE OF CICERO:

A Revised Text, with Notes and Prolegomena.

By ROBERT Y. TYRRELL, D.C.L. LL.D.,
Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Greek in Trinity College, Dublin; and

LOUIS CLAUDE PURSER, Litt.D.,
Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Dublin.

 Vol. I., 12s.; Vol. II., 12s.; Vol. III., 12s.; Vol. IV., 15s.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

SKETCHES IN LAVENDER:

Blue and Green.

A Collection of Short Stories.

By JEROME K. JEROME.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

MESSRS.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' SELECTED LIST.

DR. MUNRO'S NEW WORK.

This day is published,

PREHISTORIC PROBLEMS. By ROBERT MUNRO, M.A. M.D. F.R.S.E., Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland, Author of 'The Lake-Dwellings of Europe,' 'Rambles and Studies in Bosnia-Herzegovina and Dalmatia,' &c. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* net.

Next week will be published,

OLD MEMORIES. By General Sir HUGH GOUGH, G.C.B. V.C. With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

Immediately will be published,

The WOODLAND LIFE. By Edward THOMAS. With a Frontispiece. In 1 vol. square 8vo.

COUNTY HISTORIES OF SCOTLAND.

Just published,

MORAY and NAIRN. By Charles RAMPINI, LL.D., Sheriff-Substitute of these Counties. With 3 Maps and Plan. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

THE ROYAL STEWARTS.

THEIR ORIGIN AND RISE.

SEE

The ISLE of BUTE in the OLDEN TIME. By JAMES KING HEWISON, M.A. F.S.A. (Scot.), Minister of Rothesay. With Illustrations, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. crown 4to. 30*s.* net.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THIRD EDITION, now ready,

A SPOTLESS REPUTATION. By DOROTHEA GERARD (Madame LONGARD DE LONGGARDE), Author of 'Lady Baby,' 'The Wrong Man,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

This day is published,

AUDREY CRAVEN. By May SINCLAIR. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

POPULAR NOVELS

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

BY GEORGE ELIOT.

	s.	d.
ADAM BEDE	3	6
THE MILL ON THE FLOSS	3	6
ROMOLA	3	6
FELIX HOLT	3	6
SILAS MARNER	2	6
SCENES OF CLERICAL LIFE	3	0
MIDDLEMARCH	7	6
DANIEL DERONDA	7	6

BY GRAHAM TRAVERS.

MONA MACLEAN. Twelfth Edition ...	6	0
FELLOW TRAVELLERS. Fourth Edition	6	0

BY BEATRICE HARRADEN.

HILDA STRAFFORD. Tenth Edition ...	3	6
IN VARYING MOODS. Twelfth Edition...	3	6

WILLIAM BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

JOHN C. NIMMO'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW WORK by FRANCIS AIDAN GASQUET, D.D. O.S.B., Author of 'Henry VIII. and the English Monasteries.'

In demy 8vo. 408 pages, cloth, 12*s.* net.

The OLD ENGLISH BIBLE, and other Essays.

Contents:—Notes on Mediæval Monastic Libraries—The Monastic Scriptorium—A Forgotten English Preacher—The Pre-Reformation English Bible—Religious Instruction in England during the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Centuries—A Royal Christmas in the Fifteenth Century—The Canterbury Claustral School in the Fifteenth Century—The Note-Books of William Worcester—A Fifteenth-Century Antiquary—Hampshire Recusants—With a Complete Index

TIMES.—"Full of the learning and research which Father Gasquet has made so peculiarly his own."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"Rich in quaint, curious information."

SCOTSMAN.—"He has thrown much light on obscure passages and features of later mediæval history in our country."

MONTH.—"Father Gasquet has dealt a heavy if not a final blow to the venerable legend regarding Wyclif and the Bible."

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION IN MONTHLY VOLUMES.

Volumes I. and II. now ready.

In extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 5*s.* per vol. net.

The Rev. S. BARING-GOULD'S

LIVES of the SAINTS. With a Calendar for Every Day in the Year. New Edition, Revised, with Introduction and Additional Lives of English Martyrs, Cornish and Welsh Saints, and a full Index to the entire Work. Illustrated by over 400 Engravings.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"No student of history—to go no further—can dispense with such a valuable book of reference. There is nothing like it in our language."

BOOKMAN.—"No English book on the subject can compete with it. It should be in every library, and whatever shelf holds it will be frequently visited."

ACADEMY.—"Mr. Baring-Gould's general plan has been to give an anecdotal and humanly interesting sketch of each saint."

LITERARY WORLD.—"Mr Nimmo's edition is as nearly perfect as possible—good paper, pleasant type, appropriate illustrations, and comely binding."

SCOTSMAN.—"Mr. Baring-Gould, Anglican priest though he be, fulfils the promise of his original edition in so far as he does not obtrude either prejudice or sectarianism into his record of the saints."

NEWCASTLE CHRONICLE.—"The illustrations drawn from ancient sources are extremely curious and interesting."

In 2 vols. extra crown 8vo cloth, gilt top, 21*s.* net.

The FLORA of the ALPS. Being a Description of all the Species of Flowering Plants indigenous to Switzerland; and of the Alpine Species of the adjacent Mountain Districts of France, Italy, and Austria, including the Pyrenees. By ALFRED W. BENNETT, M.A. B.Sc. F.L.S., Lecturer on Botany at St. Thomas's Hospital. With 120 Coloured Plates.

TIMES.—"The illustrations are numerous and accurate."

ACADEMY.—"The whole book forms a valuable contribution to the intelligent enjoyment of a holiday in Switzerland."

LAND AND WATER.—"These very beautifully illustrated volumes will be welcomed by the numberless people whose summer holiday is spent in Switzerland or the Alpine districts."

STANDARD.—"Mr. Bennett gives an adequate description, and one which is both clear and exact, of all the species of flowering plants common to Switzerland."

A NEW AND POPULAR WORK ON THE OPERA.

1 vol. large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

The OPERA: a History of the Development of Opera. With full Descriptions of all Works in the Modern Repertory. By R. A. STREATFEILD. With an Introduction by J. A. FULLER-MAITLAND.

TIMES.—"The raison d'être of this admirable volume of essays, which together form a sketch of the development of opera from the sixteenth century to the present day, may be found in the interesting introduction by J. A. Fuller-Maitland....Throughout the volume there is a welcome freedom from prejudice, while the author exhibits much sound judgment and critical acumen."

NATIONAL OBSERVER.—"A book which will give pleasure and instruction to all lovers and students of opera."

DAILY NEWS.—"An important work in the criticism and historical development of music."

THE LARGE-TYPE
"BORDER" EDITION
OF THE
WAVERLEY NOVELS.

With Introductory Essays and Notes by
ANDREW LANG,
Supplementing those of the Author.

Illustrated by more than 250 New and Original Etchings.

Some ARTISTS and ETCHERS contributing to the "Border Edition":—Sir J. E. Millais, Bart., P.R.A.—Lockhart Bogle—Gordon Browne—D. Y. Cameron—Frank Dadd, R.I.—Herbert Dicksee—W. B. Hole, R.S.A.—John Pettie, R.A.—Sir James D. Linton, P.R.I.—Ad. Lalauze—W. E. Lockhart, R.S.A.—R. W. Macbeth, A.R.A.—H. Macbeth-Raeburn—J. Macwhirter, A.R.A. R.S.A.—W. Q. Orchardson, R.A.—James Orrock, R.I.—Walter Paget—Sir George Reid, P.R.S.A.—Frank Short—Sir Henry Raeburn, R.A. P.R.S.A.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Of all the many collections of the Waverley Novels, Mr. Nimmo's 'Border Edition' is incomparably the most handsome and the most desirable."

TRUTH.—"I cannot believe that any more superb avatar of Scott can ever appear than this 'Border Edition,' with its perfect print and exquisite etchings."

TIMES.—"The illustrations by various competent hands are beautiful in themselves and beautifully executed, and, altogether, the 'Border Edition' of the Waverley Novels bids fair to become the classical edition of the great Scottish classic."

In large crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, price 6*s.* per Volume.

THE NOVELS CAN BE HAD SEPARATELY.

The prices of Sets in Leather Bindings may be obtained from the Booksellers.

London:
JOHN C. NIMMO, 14, King William-street, Strand.

B. H. BLACKWELL'S LIST.

The JOURNAL of JOACHIM HANE. Containing his Escapes and Sufferings during his Employment by Oliver Cromwell in France from November, 1653, to February, 1654. Edited from the MS. in the Library of Worcester College, Oxford, by C. H. FIRTH, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

"All who are interested in the history of the seventeenth century will be grateful to Mr. Firth for giving this manuscript to the world. The Introduction is excellent."
Saturday Review.

A HISTORY of the CHURCH and PARISH of ST. MARTIN (CARFAX), OXFORD. By the Rev. CARTERET J. H. FLETCHER, M.A., last Rector. With 4 Collotype Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.* net.

"Mr. Fletcher's well-timed little book."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"Our thanks are due to him, not only for an extremely interesting book, but also for his strenuous and successful exertions in retaining the tower, which narrowly escaped being swept away with the rest of the buildings."
Westminster Gazette.

RIXÆ OXONIENSES. By Samuel F. HULTON, New College. Illustrated with Views of Demolished Buildings of Oxford taken from Skelton's 'Oxonia Antiqua Restaurata.' Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 5*s.*

"The book is full of good things. We can give unreserved praise to the illustrations."—Academy.

"A compilation from historical records which the author has joined so deftly that the reader need not skip a page."
Saturday Review.

The MARSH WARBLER in OXFORD- SHIRE and SWITZERLAND. By W. WARDE FOWLER, Author of 'A Year with the Birds,' 'Tales of the Birds,' &c. 29 pp. demy 8vo. sewed. 1*s.*

"Only a scholar and a naturalist could write such a paper."—Nat. Notes, Feb. 1894.

FEILDEN'S SHORT CONSTITU- TIONAL HISTORY of ENGLAND. Thoroughly Revised by W. GRAY ETHERIDGE, M.A., Keble College. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

"The editor, Mr. Etheridge, has done his work well. In its new form the manual has been carefully re-edited, fresh matter introduced, and the work brought more or less up to date."—Oxford Magazine.

WITH DOUBLE PIPE. By Owen SEAMAN, Author of 'Œdipus the Wreck,' 'The Battle of the Bays,' &c. Imperial 16mo. cloth extra, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"Among pleasant poems of to-day let not one forget to name Owen Seaman's clever and melodious volume 'With Double Pipe.' Mr. Seaman pipes through either mask, the serious and the smiling, and pipes well."
MR. ANDREW LANG in Longman's Magazine.

A CATALOGUE of PORTRAITS in the possession of PEMBROKE COLLEGE, OXON. By A. R. BAYLEY, B.A., Pembroke College. Demy 8vo. pp. viii–73 and wrapper, sewed, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

"Mr. Bayley deserves all praise for his painstaking industry and zeal. It is to be sincerely hoped that the example set by him will be followed until every College possesses a similar record."—Oxford Magazine.

JUST PUBLISHED.

LAZARILLO de TORMES: an exact line for line Reprint from the Chatsworth Copy of the Burgos Edition of 1554, with Facsimile Title-Page. Edited by H. BUTLER CLARKE, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. Roxburghe binding, 5*s.* net. (250 copies printed.)

POEMS. By W. H. Savile, M.A. Fcap. 8vo. half-parchment extra, 2*s.* 6*d.*

OXFORD QUESTIONS in ARITH- METIC and ALGEBRA. Enlarged Edition, containing the Papers set in Responsions from Michaelmas Term, 1880, to September, 1896, with the ANSWERS. Edited by the Rev. C. A. MARCON, M.A., St. Mary Hall, Oxford. Extra fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

IN THE PRESS.

A STUDENT'S MANUAL of ENG- LISH CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY. By DUDLEY JULIUS MEDLEY, M.A., Tutor of Keble College, Oxford. Second and Revised Edition.

B. H. BLACKWELL,
50 and 51, Broad-street, Oxford.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

ARCHIVES OF THE DUTCH CHURCH, AUSTIN FRIARS.

READY NEXT WEEK, Volume III., in Two Parts, Completing the Work, demy 4to. 4*l.* 4*s.* net.

Copies of Volumes I. and II. can still be supplied at the reduced price of 2*l.* 2*s.* net each, and complete sets at 6*l.* 6*s.* net.

Dedicated to Her Majesty the Queen of England and to Her Majesty the Queen Regent of the Netherlands.

ECCLESIAE LONDINO-BATAVAE ARCHIVVM. TOMI TERTII Pars Prima. (Paginae 1–1504: Epistulae et Tractatus. A.D. 1523—16 Jun. 1631.) TOMI TERTII Pars Secunda. (Paginae 1505—3149: Epistulae et Tractatus. A.D. 23 Jun. 1631—3 Jan. 1874.) Ex Autographis Mandante Ecclesia Londino-Batava. Edidit JOANNES HENRICVS HESSELS, A.M. Coll. D. Johannis Evangelistae Cantab.

The MISSION of ST. AUGUSTINE to ENGLAND, according to the Original Documents, being a Handbook for the Thirteenth Centenary. Edited by A. J. MASON, D.D., Canon of Canterbury, Lady Margaret Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 5*s.* [Nearly ready.

DOMESDAY-BOOK and BEYOND. Three Essays in the Early History of England. By F. W. MAITLAND, LL.D., Downing Professor of the Laws of England in the University of Cambridge, of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law. Royal 8vo. 15*s.*

ATHENÆUM.—"The advent of a new book from the pen of Professor Maitland is always an event of importance in the world of law and history. There are points, no doubt, in the author's conclusions which are open to some question, and in a few—a very few—cases he may possibly be mistaken; but it is at least safe to say that Domesday students owe him a real debt of gratitude for his perfect and scrupulous candour."

An INTRODUCTION to ABEL'S THEOREM and the ALLIED THEORY, including the Theory of the Theta Functions. By H. F. BAKER, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, University Lecturer in Mathematics. Royal 8vo. 25*s.* net. [Nearly ready.

An ESSAY on the FOUNDATIONS of GEOMETRY. By the Hon. B. Russell, B.A., Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* [Nearly ready.

An ELEMENTARY OLD ENGLISH GRAMMAR. (Early West Saxon.) By A. J. Wyatt, M.A., late Scholar of Christ's College, Cambridge; External Examiner in English to Victoria University. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.*

THREE NEW WORKS ON EDUCATIONAL SCIENCE.

CHAPTERS on the AIMS and PRACTICE of TEACHING. Edited by Frederic Spencer, M.A. Phil. Doc., Professor of the French Language and Literature in the University College of North Wales, formerly Chief Master on the Modern Side in the Leys School, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

TIMES.—"The essays are vigorous and suggestive, and display a command of the theory and practice of education which should secure the attention of all who are interested in educational progress and reform."

VITTORINO DA FELTRE and other HUMANIST EDUCATORS: Essays and Versions. An Introduction to the History of Classical Education. By W. H. WOODWARD, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford, Lecturer on Education in Victoria University. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

TIMES.—"THE FIRST MODERN SCHOOLMASTER.—Mr. Woodward has drawn a most engaging portrait of this great teacher—his aims, his methods, his rare personal qualities, and his disinterested devotion to high educational ideals.....We can warmly commend the whole monograph as at once singularly attractive and full of instruction."

ARNOLD of RUGBY: his School Life and Contributions to Education. Edited by J. J. Findlay, M.A., late Scholar of Wadham College, Oxford, Principal of the College of Preceptors' Training College. With an Introduction by the Right Rev. the LORD BISHOP OF HEREFORD. [Nearly ready.

A SELECTION of PASSAGES of UNPOINTED HEBREW, from Genesis, Isaiah, and the Psalms. By W. H. BENNETT, M.A. Lond. and Camb., sometime Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, Professor of Old Testament Literature, &c., Hackney College and New College, London. Crown 8vo. 1*s.*

TEXTS AND STUDIES.—CONTRIBUTIONS TO BIBLICAL AND PATRISTIC LITERATURE.

Edited by J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, D.D., Norrisian Professor of Divinity.

Vol. V. No. 1. APOCRYPHA ANECDOTA. Second Series. By M. R. James, Litt.D., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge. Demy 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

CAMBRIDGE GEOGRAPHICAL SERIES.

General Editor—F. H. H. GUILLEMARD, late Lecturer in Geography in the University of Cambridge.

A HISTORY of ANCIENT GEOGRAPHY. By the Rev. H. F. Tozer, M.A., Honorary Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. Crown 8vo. with 10 Maps, 10*s.* 6*d.*

CAMBRIDGE NATURAL SCIENCE MANUALS.—BIOLOGICAL SERIES.

General Editor—A. E. SHIPLEY, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College.

A MANUAL and DICTIONARY of the FLOWERING PLANTS and FERNS. By J. C. Willis, M.A., Director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Ceylon. Crown 8vo. 2 vols. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BOOKMAN.—"One of the most useful books existing for students of Botany.....The student who has this book and the chances which Kew, or even one of the smaller gardens, affords him, will make a steady and really scientific progress."

The VERTEBRATE SKELETON. By S. H. Reynolds, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

THE CAMBRIDGE HISTORICAL SERIES.

General Editor—G. W. PROTHERO, Litt.D., Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, Professor of History in the University of Edinburgh.

A HISTORY of the AUSTRALASIAN COLONIES, from their Foundation to the Year 1893. By E. JENKS, M.A., Reader in English Law in the University of Oxford, formerly Dean of the Faculty of Law in Melbourne University. With Maps. Second Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS, Cambridge University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria-lane.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 25s. net.

MEMORIALS of CHRISTIE'S. By W. ROBERTS, Author of 'The Book-hunter in London,' 'Printers' Marks,' &c. With 75 Collotype and other Illustrations, and a full Index.

* This history of the famous auctioneers, through whose hands have passed so many important works of art, will be found a reference book of great practical value to all interested in the arts. The chief items in each sale are described, the prices which they fetched under the hammer are recorded, and in all cases of interest the purchaser's name is given. The illustrations of pictures and bric-a-brac are selected chiefly from those objects which obtained "record" prices. In a size uniform with the catalogues of the firm, it should be an indispensable book in all libraries and art schools.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G. Quartermaster-General. With 20 Maps.

"This brilliant and fascinating little book."
Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Evelyn Wood is to be congratulated on his excellent book. The service may also be congratulated that amongst its Field-Marshals and General Officers on the active list are so many who can emphasize their leading in the field by their literary counsels in peace. Among that band of able writers the Quartermaster-General to Her Majesty's Forces well holds his own."—Times.

BOHN'S STANDARD LIBRARY.
NEW VOLUME.

The PROSE WORKS of JONATHAN SWIFT. A New Edition, with an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. In about 8 vols. 3s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. A TALE of a TUB, The BATTLE of the BOOKS, and other early works. Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT. With Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. With Portrait and Facsimile.

Pott 4to. 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Index and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net, each.

"In bulk, in paper and type, and in general thoroughness it strikes us equally favourably."—Academy.

Pott 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SILVER CROSS. A Selection of Poems for the Sick and Suffering. Edited by HELEN DOUGLAS, with an Introduction by the LORD BISHOP OF ST ANDREWS. Pott 8vo. printed in red and black on antique paper at the Chiswick Press.

"The selection has been judiciously made, and to many the volume will be welcome and useful."—Glasgow Herald.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3s. 6d.

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

New and Revised Edition, post 8vo. 2 vols. 15s.

SLANG, JARGON, and CANT: a Dictionary of Unconventional Phraseology, comprising English, American, Colonial, Tinkers', Yiddish, Pidgin, and Anglo-Indian Slang. With Philological Notes and Illustrative Quotations. Compiled and Edited by Professor ALBERT BARRÈRE, R.M.A., Woolwich, and CHARLES G. LELAND, M.A., Hon. F.R.S.L., Author of 'The English Gypsies and their Language,' &c., 'Hans Breitmann,' &c.

"On the whole the work seems to be for all practical purposes quite as good in its cheaper as in its more expensive form. In spite of many defects, it is by far the best existing work of its kind, with the single exception of Messrs. Farmer and Henley's 'Slang and its Analogues,' which is not only much more costly, but contains a great deal of matter unfit for general circulation."—Manchester Guardian.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.
Edited by GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.
Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.
NEW VOLUMES.

ROCHESTER. By G. H. Palmer, B.A. 128 pages. 38 Illustrations.

OXFORD. By the Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A., Christchurch. 136 pages. 34 Illustrations.

"We have so frequently in these columns urged the want of cheap, well-illustrated, and well-written handbooks to our cathedrals, to take the place of the out-of-date publications of local booksellers, that we are glad to hear that they have been taken in hand by Messrs. George Bell & Sons."
St. James's Gazette.

* Illustrated Prospectus of the Series on application.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent-garden.

A. D. INNES & CO.'S
NEW PUBLICATIONS.

BY GENERAL SIR CHARLES GOUGH, V.C. G.C.B., AND ARTHUR D. INNES, M.A.

The SIKHS and the SIKH WARS. With 13 Maps and Plans. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

The Scotsman says:—"A work of high historical value and of most absorbing interest. This book may be heartily recommended as beyond question the best history of the Sikh Wars that has been written, and than which no better could be desired."

BY LIEUT.-GENERAL M'LEOD INNES, V.C.

The SEPOY REVOLT: a Critical Narrative, covering the whole Field of the Indian Mutiny, its Causes and Course, till the Final Suppression. With numerous Maps and Plans. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"The gallant author has marshalled and drilled his facts with masterly precision, and presents a wonderfully lucid survey of the Mutiny.... From first to last 'The Sepoy Revolt' is a valuable and conscientious history."

BY J. S. RISLEY, M.A. B.C.L.

The LAW of WAR: a Study of the Legal Obligations and Conditions applying to Belligerents or Neutrals in Times of War. Demy 8vo. cloth, 12s.

The Scotsman says:—"The book.... is admirably done. It avoids technicalities and.... is admirably suited to serve as a guide and first introduction to a most instructive subject."

BY G. BOISSIER (de l'Académie Française).

CICERO and his FRIENDS. Translated by A. D. JONES. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

The Scotsman says:—"The most fascinating study of Cicero and his times."

BY C. R. B. BARRETT.
Dedicated by permission to General H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G.

BATTLES and BATTLEFIELDS in ENGLAND. With an Introduction by H. D. TRAILL, and profusely illustrated by the Author. Super-royal 8vo. buckram, gilt top, 18s.

The Sketch says:—"A remarkably good book of its kind."

The COMPLETE CYCLIST: being Vol. II. of the Isthmian Library. By A. C. PEMBERTON, Mrs. HARCOURT WILLIAMSON, C. P. SISLEY, and GILBERT FLOYD. Edited by B. FLETCHER ROBINSON. With numerous Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by J. F. Sullivan. Post 8vo. cloth, 5s.

The Birmingham Daily Gazette says:—"It is a book of charmingly varied interest, and it will please all cyclists without distinction."

NEW NOVELS.

BY J. C. SNAITH, Author of 'Mistress Dorothy Marvin.'

FIERCEHEART the SOLDIER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Observer says:—"Mr. Snaith has given us a romance that, for terse, pregnant phrasing, exceptional character drawing, and vivid depiction of dramatic situations, is the best thing of its kind we remember to have seen for a long time."

BY MAX PEMBERTON.

CHRISTINE of the HILLS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Daily Mail says:—"Assuredly he has never written anything more fresh, more simple, more alluring, or more artistically perfect."

BY EDEN PHILLPOTTS.

LYING PROPHETS. Third Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"An excellent novel. ..A piece of serious and admirable work. ..not unworthy of a place with George Eliot's 'Adam Bede' and 'Mill on the Floss.'"

BY ISABEL CLARKE.

The EPISODE of ALETHEA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Scotsman says:—"The author deals with admirable taste and tact with the situation.... The story is one of high merit from beginning to end."

BY ESTHER MILLER.

The SPORT of the GODS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The Athenæum says:—"It is very well told.... The novel is exciting and preserves its interest to the end.... An excellent story."

RECENT POPULAR NOVELS.

BY F. B. BENSON, Author of 'Dodo.'

LIMITATIONS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BY STANLEY WEYMAN.

MY LADY ROTHA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BY J. C. SNAITH.

MISTRESS DOROTHY MARVIN. A Romance of the Glorious Revolution. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. Fourth Edition.

BY FRANK BARRETT.

A SET of ROGUES. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

BY X. L., Author of 'Aut Diabolus aut Nihil.'

The LIMB. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

ANTHONY HOPE'S SOCIETY NOVELS.

COMEDIES of COURTSHIP. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

HALF a HERO. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

MR. WITT'S WIDOW: a Frivolous Tale. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

London: A. D. INNES & CO.
31 and 32, Bedford-street, Strand.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S LIST.

POPULAR ASTRONOMICAL PUBLICATIONS.

1. An ATLAS of ASTRONOMY. A Series of 72 Plates. With Introduction and Index by Sir ROBERT S. BALL, LL.D. F.R.S. Small 4to. cloth, gilt edges, 15s.

"Sir Robert Ball has always found time to do very much for the amateur astronomer besides his more serious work; but it is doubtful whether any of the very many books which bear his name will rival in popularity and utility the latest. Small in size, it is yet admirable in detail and so clear, well arranged, and comprehensive that not only the beginner, but the far more advanced student will find it of extreme value."—Daily Graphic.

2. The MOON. A Full Description and Map of its principal Physical Features. By THOMAS GWYN ELGER, F.R.A.S. Royal 8vo. 5s. net. The Map may be obtained separately, in sheet, 2s 6d. net; mounted on millboard and varnished, 4s. net.

"The world will be doing itself an injustice if the book does not become popular."—Daily Chronicle.

3. POPULAR TELESCOPIC ASTRO-NOMY. How to Make a 2-inch Telescope and what to See with it. By A. FOWLER, A.R.C.S. F.R.A.S. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. Second Edition, cloth, 2s.

"The book is practicable as well as practical; every instruction in it can be carried out, every observation described bears the impress of experience. Astronomy will gain more by the publication of this little volume than by the issue of a score of works of a descriptive character."
Nature.

4. ASTRONOMY for EVERYDAY READERS. By B. J. HOPKINS, F.R.A.S. With numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. Second Edition, boards, 1s.; cloth gilt, 1s. 6d.

"This book contains accurate and interesting accounts of the phenomena of the heavens, and will especially commend itself to those who regard the ordinary science text-book as 'dry reading.'"
Journal of Education.

5. PHILIPS' REVOLVING PLANI-SPHERES. Showing the Principal Stars visible for every hour in the year. Printed in colours. Edition for Northern Hemisphere, 2s. net; ditto, Transparent, 2s. 6d. net. Edition for Southern Hemisphere, 2s. 6d. net.

This novel Planisphere consists of a circular disc on which the principal Stars visible from our latitude are clearly indicated. By means of an exceedingly simple arrangement the disc may be made to revolve in such a way as to show only those stars visible at any given time. In addition to this, the varying time of sunrise and sunset during the whole year may be shown.

"Useful for those who desire to learn the principal stars and constellations, and handy also for amateur astronomers, who may often wish to ascertain at a glance what part of the stellar sky is visible at an hour when they purpose to look for some special celestial object."
Athenæum

6. PHILIPS' REVOLVING ORRERY. Invented and patented by J. G. PARVIN. 4s. 6d. net.

For indicating the position of a Planet, the Moon, or a Fixed Star, and for telling at what hour they will rise, south, and set: it will indicate also the Phases of the Moon, and when Eclipses will take place. This simple invention, in principle is exactly the same as Philips' "Revolving Planisphere," but only the stars forming the Zodiacal Belt are indicated on the circular disc, within which the motions of all the planets are performed; above this are mounted two brass fingers, divided into degrees, and carrying pointers running in a slot, both fingers and pointers can be set to any desired position and made to revolve across the Horizon with the card.

Illustrated Catalogue of Astronomical and Geographical Apparatus post free on application.

PHILIPS' POPULAR ANATOMICAL MODELS.

The Models consist of Coloured Charts bound up with Explanatory Letterpress, in strong cardboard binding, the whole measuring 7½ by 12½ inches.

1. The HUMAN BODY. Edited by W. S. FURNEAUX. 2s. net.
2. The HEAD and NECK. Edited by W. S. FURNEAUX. 2s. 6d. net.
3. The EYE and its AUXILIARY ORGANS. Edited, with an Introduction on Eyesight, by JOHN BROWNING, F.R.A.S. F.R.M.S. 2s. 6d. net.
4. The HORSE. Edited by George FLEMING, C.B. LL.D. 3s. 6d. net.
5. The OX. Edited by Prof. G. T. BROWN, C.B. 3s. 6d. net.
6. The SHEEP. Edited by Prof. G. T. BROWN, C.B. 2s. 6d. net.

"These models, which are not so well known as they deserve to be, consist of a series of cardboard sections carefully drawn and coloured and carefully explained.... Together with each chart are exhaustive and lucid explanations."—Daily Graphic.

PHILIPS' POPULAR TECHNICAL MODELS.

1. MODEL of a HORIZONTAL STEAM ENGINE, furnished with Meyer's Variable Expansion Gear. With a brief Description of the Parts and the Method of Working, and a Discussion and Explanation of Zeuner's Valve Diagrams. For the Use of General Readers and Elementary Engineering Students. Edited by ARNOLD PHILIP, B.Sc. 2s. 6d. net.

"The ingenious method of representation is likely to prove as valuable in illustrating the structure of machines as it has proved in the case of anatomy."—Scotsman.

Detailed Illustrated Prospectus gratis on application.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45-51, South Castle-street.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NOVELS.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

A ROMANCE of TWO WORLDS.	Marie Corelli.
VENDETTA.	Marie Corelli.
THELMA.	Marie Corelli.
ARDATH.	Marie Corelli.
The SOUL of LILITH.	Marie Corelli.
WORMWOOD.	Marie Corelli.
BARABBAS.	Marie Corelli.
The SORROWS of SATAN.	Marie Corelli.
The GOD in the CAR.	Anthony Hope.
A CHANGE of AIR.	Anthony Hope.
A MAN of MARK.	Anthony Hope.
The CHRONICLES of COUNT ANTONIO.	Anthony Hope.
PHROSO.	Anthony Hope.
ARMINELL.	S. Baring-Gould.
The PENNYCOMEQUICKS.	S. Baring-Gould.
URITH.	S. Baring-Gould.
IN the ROAR of the SEA.	S. Baring-Gould.
MRS. CURGENVEN.	S. Baring-Gould.
CHEAP JACK ZITA.	S. Baring-Gould.
The QUEEN of LOVE.	S. Baring-Gould.
KITTY ALONE.	S. Baring-Gould.
NOEMI.	S. Baring-Gould.
The BROOM SQUIRE.	S. Baring-Gould.
DARTMOOR IDYLLS.	S. Baring-Gould.
GUAVAS the TINNER.	S. Baring-Gould.
PIERRE and HIS PEOPLE.	Gilbert Parker.
MRS. FALCHION.	Gilbert Parker.
The TRANSLATION of a SAVAGE.	Gilbert Parker.
The TRAIL of the SWORD.	Gilbert Parker.
WHEN VALMOND CAME to PONTIAC.	Gilbert Parker.
An ADVENTURER of the NORTH.	Gilbert Parker.
The SEATS of the MIGHTY.	Gilbert Parker.
ROUND the RED LAMP.	A. Conan Doyle.
UNDER the RED ROBE.	Stanley Weyman.
The CARISSIMA.	Lucas Malet.
The WAGES of SIN.	Lucas Malet.

SIX SHILLINGS EACH.

A FLASH of SUMMER.	Mrs. Clifford.
HURRISH.	Emily Lawless.
MAELCHO.	Emily Lawless.
The GREEN GRAVES of BALGOWRIE.	J. H. Findlater.
TALES of MEAN STREETS.	Arthur Morrison.
A CHILD of the JAGO.	Arthur Morrison.
MATTHEW AUSTIN.	W. E. Norris.
HIS GRACE.	W. E. Norris.
The DESPOTIC LADY.	W. E. Norris.
CLARISSA FURIOSA.	W. E. Norris.
The STOLEN BACILLUS.	H. G. Wells.
The PLATTNER STORY.	H. G. Wells.
DODO.	E. F. Benson.
The RUBICON.	E. F. Benson.
IN the MIDST of ALARMS.	Robert Barr.
GALLIA.	M. M. Dowie.
SIR ROBERT'S FORTUNE.	Mrs. Oliphant.
The TWO MARYS.	Mrs. Oliphant.
The KING of ANDAMAN.	J. M. Cobban.
WILT THOU HAVE THIS WOMAN?	J. M. Cobban.
A SERIOUS COMEDY.	H. Morrah.
The FAITHFUL CITY.	H. Morrah.
SUCCESSORS to the TITLE.	Mrs. Walford.
IN the DAY of ADVERSITY.	J. B. Burton.
DENOUNCED.	J. B. Burton.
DR. CONGALTON'S LEGACY.	H. Johnston.
A BUSINESS in GREAT WATERS.	Julian Corbett.
MY DANISH SWEETHEART.	W. Clark Russell.
An ELECTRIC SPARK.	G. Manville Fenn.
UNDER SHADOW of the MISSION.	L. S. M'Chesney.
CAPTAIN JACOBUS.	L. Cope Cornford.
The SPECULATORS.	J. F. Brewer.
A HOME in INVERESK.	F. L. Paton.
The DAUGHTER of ALOUETTE.	Mary A. Owen.
The SPIRIT of STORM.	Ronald Ross.
IN the GREAT DEEP.	J. A. Barry.

THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE EACH.

DERRICK VAUGHAN: Novelist.	Edna Lyall.
MARGERY of QUETHER.	S. Baring-Gould.
JACQUETTA.	S. Baring-Gould.
The SIGN of the SPIDER.	Bertram Mitford.
A HANDFUL of EXOTICS.	S. Gordon.
The SUPPLANTER.	P. Neuman.
The SIN of ANGELS.	E. Dickinson.
A MAN with BLACK EYELASHES.	H. A. Kennedy.
SUBJECT to VANITY.	Margaret Benson.
The MOVING FINGER.	Mary Gaunt.
AUT DIABOLUS AUT NIHIL.	X. L.
The GODS GIVE MY DONKEY WINGS.	Angus Evan Abbott.
The STAR GAZERS.	G. Manville Fenn.
A DEPLORABLE AFFAIR.	W. E. Norris.
The PRODIGALS.	Mrs. Oliphant.
An ODD EXPERIMENT.	Hannah Lynch.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S CATALOGUE and BOOK GAZETTE sent to any address.

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex-street, W.C.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WILD SPAIN.'

WILD NORWAY.

With Chapters on the Swedish Highlands, Spitzbergen, and Denmark.

By ABEL CHAPMAN, Author of 'Wild Spain,' &c.

Fully illustrated by the Author and Charles Whymper.

Demy 8vo. 16*s.*

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"The great charm of this book lies less in the records of great slaughter of elk and reindeer, or of blanks and triumphs of casting and harling, than in that absorbing love of nature and her smallest children which, characteristic of all Mr. Chapman's previous works, pervades every page of the one now before us. A word must be said in praise of the admirable drawings."

PROF. KARL PEARSON'S NEW WORK.

The CHANCES of DEATH, and other Studies in Evolution. By KARL PEARSON, F.R.S., Author of 'The Ethic of Free Thought,' &c. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 25*s.* net.

Contents of Vol. I.—The Chances of Death—The Scientific Aspect of Monte Carlo Roulette—Reproductive Selection—Socialism and Natural Selection—Politics and Science—Reaction—Woman and Labour—Variation in Man and Woman.

Contents of Vol. II.—Woman as Witch—Ashiepattle; or, Hans seeks his Luck—Kindred Group Marriage—The German Passion Play—Index.

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Edited by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.

VOL. III. NOW READY.

The SPORTSMAN in IRELAND. By a COSMOPOLITE. Illustrated by 6 Coloured Plates and numerous other Illustrations by P. Chenevix Trench. Large 8vo handsomely bound, 15*s.* Also a limited Large-Paper Edition, with Plates on Japanese Vellum, 2*l.* 2*s.* net.

VOLUMES ALREADY ISSUED.

Vol. I. The LIFE of a FOX and the DIARY of a HUNTSMAN. By THOMAS SMITH.

Vol. II. Col. THORNTON'S SPORTING TOUR in the NORTH.

LIVERPOOL POST.—"As to the 'get up' of the third volume to Mr. Arnold's really beautiful 'Sportsman's Library,' we can only repeat what we said on the appearance of the first of the set, that the series consists of the most charming and tasteful volumes at present being issued by the English press, and collectors of handsome books should find them not only an ornament to their shelves, but also a sound investment."

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL'S NEW BOOK.

MEMORIES of the MONTHS. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Editor of "The Sportsman's Library," &c. With Photogravure Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

OLD ENGLISH GLASSES. An Account of Glass Drinking-Vessels in England from Early Times to the End of the Eighteenth Century, with Notices of Continental Glasses during the same Period. By ALBERT HARTSHORNE, Fellow of the Society of Antiquaries. With nearly 70 Full-Page Lithographic Plates and over 400 smaller Illustrations. Super-royal 4to. 3*l.* 3*s.* net.

This magnificent and unique work is dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen. A full Prospectus can be had on application. [Nearly ready.

A SUNSHINE TRIP: Glimpses of the Orient. Extracts from Letters written by MARGARET BOTTOME. With Portrait. Handsomely bound, 4*s.* 6*d.*

The TREATMENT of NATURE in DANTE'S 'DIVINA COMMEDIA.' By L. OSCAR KUHNS, Professor in Wesleyan University, U.S.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

The GOSPEL the POWER of GOD. By the Rev. CHARLES D. BELL, D.D., Hon. Canon of Carlisle. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

THIRD EDITION, with Portrait.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Master of Balliol. A Personal Memoir. By the Hon. LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, Author of 'Safe Studies,' &c. Third Edition, with Photogravure Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

MR. H. D. TRAILL in the GRAPHIC.—"Jowett has been Boswellized once for all in Mr. Tollemache's fascinating pages."

ARNOLD'S PRACTICAL SCIENCE MANUALS.

The CALCULUS for ENGINEERS. By Prof. JOHN PERRY, F.R.S. Crown 8vo. cloth, 380 pp. 7*s.* 6*d.*

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street. New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

MR. GRANT RICHARDS'S LIST AND ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOW READY.

PART I. OF

ENGLISH PORTRAITS:

A Series of Lithographed Drawings by Will Rothenstein.

Containing Portraits of Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart., and Mr. Thomas Hardy.

2*s.* 6*d.* net.

There will be Twelve Parts in all.

LIMBO; and Other Essays.

By VERNON LEE,

Author of 'Althea,' 'Euphorion,' 'Renaissance Studies,' &c.

With Frontispiece. Fcap. 8vo. buckram, 5*s.* net.

The TIMES says:—"Vernon Lee affords a dainty feast to her readers in the charming little volume."

"OLD MAN'S" MARRIAGE: a Novel.

By G. B. BURGIN,

Author of 'The Judge of the Four Corners,' 'Tomalyn's Quest,' &c.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"An interesting, even an exciting story."

The MANCHESTER GUARDIAN says:—"It would be difficult to speak too highly of the delicate pathos and humour of this beautiful sketch of a choice friendship in humble life."

CAKES AND ALE.

By EDWARD SPENCER ("Nathaniel Gubbins").

With Cover designed by Phil May.

First Edition exhausted. Second Edition now ready.

Small 4to. cloth, 5*s.*

The SPEAKER says:—"Altogether this is a pleasant book."

IN COURT AND KAMPONG:

Tales and Sketches of Native Life in the Malay Peninsula.

By HUGH CLIFFORD, British Resident at Pahang.

Large crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"The chapters dealing with 'The East Coast' and 'Among Fisher Folk' have rarely, if ever, been surpassed as word-pictures."

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—These tales Mr. Clifford tells with a force and lifelikeness only to be equalled in the stories of Rudyard Kipling."

MR. LEONARD MERRICK'S NEW NOVEL.

READY MONDAY, MAY 17.

ONE MAN'S VIEW: a Novel.

By LEONARD MERRICK,

Author of 'Violet Moses,' 'The Man who was Good,' 'Cynthia: a Daughter of the Philistines,' &c.

READY SHORTLY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'A NILE NOVEL.'

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT WOMEN.

By GEORGE FLEMING,

Author of 'A Nile Novel,' 'Mirage,' 'For Plain Women Only,' &c.

3*s.* 6*d.*

AND THE FIRST VOLUME OF

THE SYLVAN SERIES

ENTITLED

A PEAKLAND FAGGOT.

By R. MURRAY GILCHRIST,

Author of 'The Stone Dragon, and other Stories,' &c.

2*s.* 6*d.*

9, HENRIETTA-STREET, COVENT-GARDEN.

THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE

For MAY

Contains an Account of the

"LOG OF THE MAYFLOWER,"

With a Facsimile of the Register of the Ship's Passengers.

"The first number, just issued, gives evidence of an excellent design admirably carried out."
Literary World.

"A welcome is due to the first number of the Genealogical Magazine, which promises well both as to contents and general 'get up.'"—Guardian.

A Specimen Copy will be sent post free for One Shilling.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 8*s.* 6*d.*

The HOUSE of CROMWELL. A Genealogical History of the Family and Descendants of the Protector. By JAMES WAYLEN, sometime Secretary to Thomas Carlyle. A New Edition, Revised by JOHN GABRIEL CROMWELL, M.A. Oxon, Hon. Canon of Durham.

In large demy 8vo. appropriately bound in art linen boards, 6*s.*

GEORGE MORLAND'S PICTURES. Their Present Possessors, with Details of the Collection. By RALPH RICHARDSON, F.R.S.E. F.S.A.Scot., Author of 'George Morland, Painter, 1763–1804.'

In crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 6*s.*

HUGO of AVENDON. A Drama in Four Acts. By E. L. M.

"The work reads well, and should be enjoyed by those who patronize the drama without leaving their own firesides."—Scotsman.

"There is good material in the play, and the climax is skilfully planned."—Dundee Advertiser.

In fcap. 8vo. tastefully printed in antique type and bound in cloth, price 6*s.*; 50 Large-Paper Copies, price 1*l.* 1*s.* each.

IN PRAISE of MUSIC. An Anthology. Prepared by CHARLES SAYLE, M.A.

'In Praise of Music' presents a series of extracts selected with considerable care from the greatest and most appreciative writers on the subject during the centuries.

NEW VOLUME OF THE 'BOOK-LOVER'S LIBRARY.'

Cloth, price 4*s.* 6*d.*; Roxburghe, half-morocco, price 7*s.* 6*d.*; Large Paper, price 1*l.* 1*s.* net.

THE NOVELS OF CHARLES DICKENS.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY AND SKETCH.

By FREDERIC G. KITTON,

Author of 'Charles Dickens by Pen and Pencil.

With a Portrait which has not been published before.

NEW VOLUMES OF VERSE.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth, price 5*s.*

JENNIFRED, and other Verses. By SEPTIMUS G. GREEN.

"The title poem is finely, even richly coloured, and is suggestive of the romantic period in which its scenes are set. Mr. Green infuses considerable vigour into his lines."
Dundee Advertiser.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5*s.*

The HUIA'S HOMELAND, and other Verses. By ROSLYN.

"These poems are welcome in that they evince a genuine love of national beauty and a poetic perception of its effect. They are beautifully coloured, and bring home to the reader a sense of what constitutes the charm of New Zealand."
Dundee Advertiser.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW LIST.

PETER THE GREAT.

By K. WALISZEWSKI,
Author of 'The Romance of an Empress,' 'The Story of a Throne.'

Translated by LADY MARY LOYD.

In 2 vols. 8vo. 28*s*.

THE NEW AFRICA.

A Journey up the Chobe and down the Okavango Rivers.

By AUREL SCHULZ, M.D., and AUGUST HAMMAR, C.E.

In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with 70 Illustrations and a Map. [Next week.

SPANISH PROTESTANTS IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

Compiled from Dr. WILKEN'S German Work by RACHEL CHALLICE.

With an Introduction by the late the Most Rev. LORD PLUNKET, Archbishop of Dublin, D.D.; and a Preface by the Rev. CANON FLEMING, B.D.

Crown 8vo. buckram, 4*s*. 6*d*. net.

RHODESIA, PAST AND PRESENT.

By S. J. DU TOIT.

8vo. with 16 Full-Page Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches by the Author.

Price 7*s*. 6*d*.

GLOBE.—"Mr. Heinemann has done the State some service by his publication of 'Rhodesia.'..... 'Rhodesia' is well worth reading, seeing that it looks upon the problem from a purely Afrikander standpoint, and it will not have been published in vain if it brings some of the many Englishmen who now take interest in our South African dominions to realize what is the true inwardness of the movement in favour of an Afrikander nationality."

ROMANTIC INDIA.

Translated from the French of ANDRÉ CHEVRILLON by WILLIAM MARCHANT.

8vo. 7*s*. 6*d*. net.

THE OUTGOING TURK.

Impressions of a Journey through the Western Balkans.

By H. C. THOMSON, Author of the 'Chitral Campaign.'

With 76 Illustrations from Original Photographs and 3 Maps. Demy 8vo. 14*s*. net.

AMERICA AND THE AMERICANS FROM A FRENCH POINT OF VIEW.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s*. 6*d*.

NEW NOVELS.

SOLDIERS OF FORTUNE. By Richard Harding Davis. With Illustrations by Charles Dana Gibson. 1 vol. 6*s*. [Next week.

THE THIRD VIOLET. By Stephen Crane. 1 vol. 6s.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE PARISH. By John Quine. 1 vol. 6s.

FLAMES: a London Phantasy. By Robert Hichens. First Edition exhausted, Second now ready. 1 vol. 6*s*.

THE OUTSPAN: Tales of South Africa. By J. Percy Fitzpatrick. 1 vol. 3*s*. 6*d*.

MR. BLAKE OF NEWMARKET. By E. H. Cooper. 1 vol. 3s. 6d.

YEKL: a Tale of the New York Ghetto. By A. Cahan. Cloth, 3*s*. net; paper, 2*s*. 6*d*. net. PIONEER SERIES.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE SECRET OF SAINT FLOREL.

By JOHN BERWICK.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

THE FALL OF A STAR.

A Novel.

By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

VOLUME II. NOW READY.

A HISTORY OF ENGLISH POETRY.

By W. J. COURTHOPE, C.B. M.A. D.Litt., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford.

Vol. II. The Renaissance and the Reformation; Influence of the Court and the Universities.

8vo. 10*s*. net.

NEW BOOK BY PROF. J. P. MAHAFFY.

A SURVEY of GREEK CIVILIZATION. By Prof. J. P. MAHAFFY, D.D. D.C.L. (Oxon), Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin. Extra crown 8vo. 6*s*.

Globe 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

An OUTLINE of the LAW of LIBEL. Being Six Lectures delivered in the Middle Temple Hall during Michaelmas Term, 1896. By W. BLAKE ODGERS, of the Middle Temple, M.A. LL.D. Q.C.

NEW BOOK BY B. BOSANQUET.

PSYCHOLOGY of the MORAL SELF. By B. BOSANQUET. Crown 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*. net.

8vo. 14*s*. net.

The THEORY of ELECTRICITY and MAGNETISM: being Lectures on Mathematical Physics. By ARTHUR GORDON WEBSTER, A.B. (Harv.), Ph.D. (Berol), &c.

VOLUME III. NOW READY.

The ELEMENTS of PHYSICS: a College Text-Book. By EDWARD L. NICHOLS and WILLIAM S. FRANKLIN. In 3 vols. Vol. III. LIGHT and SOUND. 8vo. 6*s*. net.

CLASSICAL SERIES.—New Volumes.

The FIRST PHILIPPIC and the OLYNTHIACS of DEMOSTHENES. With Introduction and Critical and Explanatory Notes by JOHN EDWIN SANDYS, Litt.D., &c. Fcap. 8vo. 5*s*.

The TROADES of EURIPIDES. With Revised Text and Notes by ROBERT YELVERTON TYRRELL, Litt.D., Fellow of Trinity College, &c. Fcap. 8vo. 2*s*. 6*d*.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

STANDARD HISTORICAL WORKS FOR THE LIBRARY.

The HISTORY of GREECE. From the Earliest Time down to 337 B.C. From the German of Dr. ERNST CURTIUS, Rector of the University of Berlin. By A. W. WARD, M.A. In 5 vols. demy 8vo. Each Volume separately, 18*s.*

[Vols. I. and III. reprinting.

The HISTORY of ROME. By Prof. THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated (with the Author's sanction, and Additions) by Dr. P. W. DICKSON. In 5 vols. crown 8vo. 37*s.* 6*d.*

The HISTORY of ANTIQUITY. From the German of the late Prof. MAX DUNCKER. By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., of Balliol College, Oxford. 6 vols. demy 8vo. Each Volume can be obtained separately, 21*s.*

The QUEENS of ENGLAND of the HOUSE of HANOVER. By Dr. DORAN, F.S.A., Author of 'Table Traits and Something on Them,' &c. Fourth and Enlarged Edition. 2 vols. 8vo. 25*s.*

The HISTORY of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR. By ANTON GINDELY. Translated by Prof. ANDREW TEN BROOK. 2 vols. large crown 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, 24*s.*

The HISTORY of the POST OFFICE. From its Establishment down to 1836. By HERBERT JOYCE, C.B., of the Post Office. Demy 8vo. 16*s.*

The NAVAL HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN. From the Declaration of War by France, in 1793, to the Accession of George IV. By WILLIAM JAMES. In 6 vols. crown 8vo. 42*s.*

The HISTORY of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. By ADOLPHE THIERS. Translated by FREDERICK SHOBERL. With 50 Engravings. 5 vols. demy 8vo. 45*s.*

The COURT and REIGN of FRANCIS the FIRST. By JULIA PARDOE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel, and a Brief Memoir of the Author, 42*s.*

The LIFE of MARIE de MEDICIS. By JULIA PARDOE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits and Facsimiles, 42*s.*

LOUIS the FOURTEENTH and the COURT of FRANCE in the SEVENTEENTH CENTURY. By JULIA PARDOE. 3 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel, 42*s.*

A HISTORY of ENGLISH DRESS. By GEORGIANA HILL. 2 vols. demy 8vo. with 14 Illustrations on Steel, 30*s.*

The HISTORY of MUSIC. A New Edition. By J. F. ROWBOTHAM. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure 'The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s.*

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

BROKEN THREADS. By Compton READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The SILENCE BROKEN. By G. M. ROBINS (Mrs. BAILLIE REYNOLDS), Author of 'The Ides of March,' 'Her Point of View,' &c. 1 vol. small crown 8vo. 2*s.*

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c.

WITHOUT ISSUE. By Henry Cresswell, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A well-constructed plot, involved, but never passing the limitations of probability; a very excellent piece of work in every respect."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The writer well understands the value of an interesting opening chapter to a work of fiction, and, having aroused the attention of the reader at the outset, Mr. Cresswell holds him absorbed to the end."—Dundee Advertiser.

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin, Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'Cousin Jem' is an entertaining tale and contains some excellent character studies."—Black and White.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

LOVE AGAIN LIFE AGAIN. By V. MUNRO FERGUSON, Author of 'Betsy,' 'Music hath Charms,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"The story depends more on its all-round literary merit than upon variety of incident, though in this regard it is by no means poor; it is sure to be read with warm appreciation by discreet lovers of good fiction."—Scotsman.

ALL IN ALL. By Corinna A. Bruce. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'All in All' is melodramatic, but not without interest and attraction."—Athenæum.

The SOUND of a VOICE. By Linda GARDINER, Author of 'His Heritage,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, 6*s.*

"An excellent story of a well-imagined mystery, skilfully expounded and wrought out.....Has many light and pleasant passages and is readable throughout."—Globe.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

CONAN DOYLE'S NEW NOVEL.

READY THIS DAY.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

UNCLE BERNAC:

A Memory of the Empire.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of 'The White Company,' 'Rodney Stone,' &c.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

NOW READY. With a Preface entitled "On the Ebb Tide." Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The WAYS of LIFE. Two Stories: I. MR. SANDFORD. II. The WONDERFUL HISTORY of MR. ROBERT DALYELL. By MRS. OLIPHANT.

NEW NOVEL BY ALEXANDER INNES SHAND.

NOW READY. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The LADY GRANGE. By Alexander INNES SHAND, Author of 'Kilcarra: a Novel,' 'Half a Century; or, Changes in Men and Manners,' &c.

The REVIVAL of LEARNING. By the late JOHN ADDINGTON SYMONDS. Large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* [Next week.

 This is Volume II. of a New and Cheaper Edition of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* each. The remaining Volumes will be published at intervals.

NEXT TUESDAY. With Portraits, demy 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

ISABELLA the CATHOLIC, QUEEN of SPAIN: her Life, Reign, and Times, 1451-1504. By M. LE BARON DE NERVO. Translated from the Original French by Lieut.-Colonel TEMPLE-WEST (Retired).

On May 26, with Portraits, and a Preface by Sir EDWARD B. MALET, G.C.B. G.C.M.G., &c., demy 8vo. 16*s.*

GABRIELE VON BÜLOW, Daughter of Wilhelm von Humboldt. A Memoir compiled from the Family Papers of Wilhelm von Humboldt and his Children, 1791-1887. Translated by CLARA NORDLINGER.

FROM GRAVE to GAY: being Essays and Studies concerned with certain Subjects of Serious Interest, with the Puritans, with Literature, and with the Humours of Life. Now for the first time Collected and Arranged. By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"Undeniably clever, well-informed, brightly written, and in many ways interesting."—Times.

"Mr. Strachey's book is indeed 'a cup that cheers and not inebriates.' It is right down good reading, and the critic.....can have nothing worse to say of it than that it is entirely good-humoured."—Daily Chronicle.

New Volumes of SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S Popular 2s. 6d. Series.

Crown 8vo. limp red cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

The MARTYRED FOOL. By D. CHRISTIE MURRAY, Author of 'Rainbow Gold,' 'Joseph's Coat,' &c.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island. By the Hon. EMILY LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurrish,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c.

London: SMITH ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
Mr. Palgrave on Landscape in Poetry	643
History of the China-Japan War	643
M. Maeterlinck's Essays	644
Paris Theologians in the Middle Ages	645
Prof. Jebb's Edition of the Ajax	646
New Novels (Lovice; A Rogue's Conscience; A Great Lie; A Russian Wild Flower; A Last Throw) ...	647
Bibliographical Literature	648
Books of Travel	648
The Libraries of Fiction	649
Our Library Table—List of New Books ...	649—650
S.A.R. the Duc d'Aumale; Royal Historical Society; Sale; A Book Rest; Pierre d'Urte	650—651
Literary Gossip	652
Science—Mr. E. J. Stone; Societies; Meetings; Gossip	653—654
Fine Arts—The Royal Academy; The Salons at Paris; Mr. Theodore Bent; Sale; Gossip	654—658
Music—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week	658—659
Drama—The Week; Gossip	659—660

LITERATURE

Landscape in Poetry. By F. T. Palgrave. (Macmillan & Co.)

If one considers the matter with respect to the meaning of terms, the foundation of a Professorship of Poetry would seem to be as fruitless an idea as ever presented itself to the mind of a would-be benefactor. A professor is a teacher, and teaching can concern itself only with knowledge. Knowledge again is of facts, in the widest sense of the word—of what has been or is being done, said, or thought. Even when we speak of teaching how to do something, all we really mean is teaching how it has been done with the best results in the past. But who can teach how poetry has been done? We have not yet even succeeded in saying what poetry is. "Imitation," says one authority; "criticism," says another. Can criticism or imitation "stir the heart more than with the sound of a trumpet," make the voice tremble, and the eyes grow moist? Clearly the professor of poetry, as such, cannot be placed in the category of technical teachers. He may indeed make an occasional incursion into prosody; but prosody is no more poetry than perspective is the art of painting. If, on the other hand, he turns to what has been done, it is hard to see his reason for existing beside his colleagues in the various faculties that deal with literature, language, and history. All he can do is to drive a road of his own along a strip crossing their various domains, and use it for a "jumping-off ground." After all, this process is not uninstructive; cross-sections seldom are. All we maintain is that it hardly needs a professor to carry it out. The lines available for it would seem to be somewhat limited if we may judge from the fact that two recent professors of poetry at Oxford have practically selected the same ground. Principal Shairp's 'Poetic Interpretation of Nature' appeared, we think, before the author became professor; but that does not affect the point. Now, twenty years later, Mr. Palgrave takes up what is practically the same subject, only extending his illustrations a little further.

The subject is one which of course affords excuse for the stringing together of a pleasing anthology, and this will seem to most readers its chief merit. Landscape in poetry by itself no more affords matter for a separate treatise than would scenery in drama; and as in painting, so in poetry, the landscape only interests when we can conceive of it as the setting or background to human emotion or action. No poet, no painter, of the first order, it may safely be said, has ever dealt with landscape otherwise; and the treatment of it as of itself a sufficient theme for either art has always marked a period of decadence. In the case of poetry, indeed, this treatment has, as Mr. Palgrave points out, been for obvious reasons comparatively infrequent, except in that phase of it in which the human element is supplied by the reader himself; from which arises the "more distinctly modern attempt to penetrate the inner soul of the landscape," or to "clothe it in the hues of human passion"—culminating in Mr. Ruskin's "pathetic fallacy." A shrewder observer than even Mr. Ruskin—less concerned, perhaps, with analyzing feelings, and content merely to register them—has noted that this "fallacy" is after all not without a basis in human nature, however it may have got there. "It is an infinitely blissful sensation," says Heine, "when the world of phenomena is blended with the world of our mood, and green trees, thoughts, the song of birds, melancholy, the blue sky, memory, and the odour of herbs entwine themselves in delicious arabesques." Landscape in poetry pleases in proportion as it is able to call forth this "unendlich seliges Gefühl"; and this can only be done when the poet is himself capable of it. Mr. Palgrave, with great justice, quotes the Virgilian "Singula dum capti circumvectamur amore" as the key to Virgil's secret in lifting a "Farmer's Guide" into an exquisite poem:—

> "His success came primarily and essentially through his own personal enthusiasm for woods and rivers, for the common sights of the country, for the landscape loved in childhood, associating them constantly with human relations, finding and revealing everywhere the beautiful in each."

The words we have put in italics, by the way, contain a good deal of the root of the matter. Not that any one loves a landscape in childhood; what he loves are certain people, certain things, certain habits, which in after days the landscape recalls, whether seen actually or suggested in poetical "imitation." And where does the professor come in?

Mr. Palgrave is a somewhat rugged writer (relying, for one thing, too much on the epithet), and his taste and judgment are superior to his expression of them; but he gives us a true enough bit of criticism now and again. Petrarch "has not the absolute closeness to natural fact, the certain aim, which never seem to fail Dante." The truth, no doubt, is that Petrarch was always thinking about himself. In Browning's descriptive writing

> "the effects are isolated; the sense of effort, the want of relief, of reserve, at last makes itself [sic] felt. Hence, perhaps, despite his fluent copiousness, he rarely succeeds in giving the delightful sense of genuine spontaneity."

On the other hand, we hardly understand the saying that "Cowper's 'Task' is curiously barren of landscape." The scheme of the poem does not admit of very much; but surely what there is, once read, is, in the faculty of "staying by" one, surpassed by hardly any. And why is Clough entirely omitted? Charles Tennyson's sonnets are good; but one of the seven quoted might surely have been spared to make room for the bathing-pool in the 'Bothie.'

To add a piece of minute criticism, the practice of "using as rhymes words identical in spelling but diverse in sense" is not specially Italian. The Romance languages follow it to this day—tombe verb and tombe noun, or lui participle and lui pronoun, are quite good rhymes in French—and Surrey had plenty of English precedent for it.

Lovers of poetry will thank Mr. Palgrave for his book; but the 'Golden Treasury' will remain his highest title to their gratitude.

Heroic Japan: a History of the War between China and Japan. By F. W. Eastlake, Ph.D., and Yamada Yoshiaki, LL.B., Principal of the Chautauquan Association of Japan. (Sampson Low & Co.)

This is a somewhat disconnected and episodical sort of book, containing much interesting matter, but not in itself interesting. No approach to a true history of the China-Japan war is ever likely to be written; the despatches on both sides will not be accessible to the student of a conflict whose origin was as singular as its result was unexpected by the victorious party, while those emanating from the Chinese commanders are almost certainly elegant compositions rather than statements of fact. Admiral von Hanneken has drawn in the pages of the Rundschau a fairly vivid picture of Chinese courage and incompetency, and more than one work has appeared in English describing the excellent organization and discipline to which the Japanese owed their success in a campaign in which administrative rather than purely military qualities (which were, however, conspicuously present) were required. But of the Chinese brave and of the Japanese soldier no portraits have been drawn, scarcely even sketched. What they did—or did not do—in the mass has been told; the story of their achievements and defeats is well known, at least in outline. But of the thoughts, ways, habits, food, and general life-history of the soldier very little has been said, and, real as the events were, on the whole the war between the mother of far Eastern civilization and her aptest pupil has still somewhat of a shadowy and illusive character. Its very origin was a fantasy rather than a motive. In the imperial declaration of war (as well as in the very interesting and curious despatches which follow it as a kind of introduction to the present work) Korea is stated to be an independent country. China's claim to any sort of suzerainty is scouted. Japan advises Korea to reform her administration—in other words, to let Japan reform it for her—"so that the country might be able to discharge the duties of an independent state abroad," that is, become practically a part of the Japanese empire for the purposes of the latter's foreign policy. China, who does not care to reform herself, cares still less to force reforms, Japanese or other, on Korea. China, who has not made a fetish of international law, probably offends against some of its rules. The usual incidents are brought about by means well known to non-Celestial Foreign Offices, Western or Eastern, and war is declared. All this was, no doubt, as much in regular course as was the seizure of Chinese territory for the purpose of compelling the Koreans to accept the Japanese version of sei-yo civilization. At this moment kind fortune intervenes, and the Western powers compel Japan to restore her conquests in exchange for the island of Formosa. A glance at the map is alone sufficient to show what a terrible white elephant to Japan the retention of the territory she coveted, situated many hundreds of miles from her own shores, could not fail to become. Such a result must surely have been foreseen by the statesmen of Japan. The Government of the day was probably not strong enough to resist popular clamour, or the clamour of an Opposition superficially rather than fundamentally patriotic. Formosa is certainly not worth the price paid for it, and the one advantage Japan has derived from the war is to make it clear to the Western Powers that their procedure in the sixties and the seventies is no longer possible in the far East.

Of the naval fight at Haiyang a very interesting and probably a fairly accurate account is given. It was the first encounter that had taken place between fleets of the new and powerful type of recent years. The battle was fought with great fury :—

"It was a deadly grapple between two ancient foes, with all the skill on one side and all the victory, though the Chinese did not fall behind in point of bravery and determined pluck..... Admiral Ting, the Chinese commander, was a good sailor and able officer, no whit less brave and energetic than his adversary and quondam friend Vice-Admiral Ito. Errors of judgment, the want of absolutely devoted crews, faulty gunnery—these were pregnant causes of the Chinese defeat," to which may be added the lack of swift ships.

That the fight was a determined one is shown by the great losses sustained by the victorious fleet, 117 of whose officers and men were killed and 166 wounded. These numbers are within about a hundred of the total killed and wounded on the British side during the whole of the China war of 1857–8. The close of the battle was attended by a curiously significant event, the account of which exemplifies the somewhat theatrical language of the book :—

"The officers of each vessel gathered on the quarterdecks, their hearts filled with joy, and congratulated their lion-hearted captains. Looking towards the eastern horizon, where Japan lay far away, the whole fleet burst into a joyous song, the sonorous strains of the national anthem [invented, we believe, by an English regimental band instructor] resounding far and wide over the peaceful sea.....Suddenly in the still air was heard the sound of flapping wings, and looking up, a fine falcon was seen to alight on the right of the main-topsail-yardarm of the Takachiho. Nomoto Gunzayemon, a second-class petty officer, at once sprang up the rigging.....Evincing not the least perturbation, the falcon allowed the sailor to seize it; and with the bird on his wrist Nomoto descended, greeted as he reached the deck with loud cries of 'Heaven's messenger.'"

To understand the story, the reader must know that "taka" is the Japanese word for falcon, and that the bird in old Japanese days was regarded as a harbinger of good fortune.

The heroic stories relate for the most part acts of endurance prompted by loyalty. The chiushin familiar to those who know the history of old Japan has clearly survived into the meiji period. We have no space to tell any of these feats as they should be told. It is, however, hardly fair to the "soldiers and sailors of Japan," who "carried all before them," to claim that "all these triumphs are due to the virtues, the exalted spirit of His Majesty the Emperor." To many of the stories too close a criticism should, perhaps, not be applied. So far, however, as their heroism turns upon contempt of death they are all of them in full accord with the national character or tradition as exemplified over and over again in Japanese history and romance. One very remarkable instance, absolutely authentic, may be cited from Kinahan Cornwallis's 'Two Journeys to Japan, 1856–7.' The sailing-master of an American sloop of war at Shimoda in 1856, on taking a walk in the neighbourhood of the town in the company of Cornwallis and some others, found himself followed by a two-sworded yakunin, upon which he turned round, and, seizing the officer by the shoulders, kicked him violently.

"Without making the slightest attempt at retaliation [the official] unsheathed one of his swords, which flashed for an instant in the sunlight; the Yankee meanwhile extricated his revolver from its hiding place; it was needless, for at two easy strokes—two gentle slashes of that keen-edged weapon performed in an instant, one across the other, like the letter X—he had disembowelled himself and fell a swiftly dying man.....a few seconds afterwards the man was dead."

The policeman's duty to his lord—he was but a policeman—forbade him to attack a foreigner, his honour forbade him to survive an insult; from the double difficulty the victim of this brutal outrage escaped by a self-inflicted death.

The Treasure of the Humble. By Maurice Maeterlinck. Translated by Alfred Sutro. With Introduction by A. B. Walkley. (George Allen.)

'Le Trésor des Humbles,' a book of essays which M. Maeterlinck published at the beginning of last year, is in some respects the most important, as it is certainly the most purely beautiful, of his works. Limiting himself as he did in his plays to the rendering of certain sensations, and to the rendering of these in the most disembodied way possible, he did not permit himself to indulge either in the weight of wisdom or the adornment of beauty, each of which would have seemed to him (perhaps wrongly) as an intrusion. Those web-like plays, a very spider's work of filminess, allowed you to divine behind them one who was after all a philosopher rather than a playwright. The philosopher could but be divined, he was never seen. In these essays he has dropped the disguise of his many masks. Speaking without intermediary, he speaks more directly, with a more absolute abandonment of every convention of human reserve, except the reserve of an extreme fastidiousness in the choice of words simple enough and sincere enough to convey exactly his meaning, more spontaneously, it would seem, than any writer since Emerson. From Emerson he has certainly learnt much; he has found, for instance, the precise form in which to say what he has to say, in little essays, not, indeed, so disconnected as Emerson's, but with a like care to say something very definite in every sentence, so that that sentence might stand by itself, without its context, as something more than a mere part of a paragraph. But his philosophical system, though it has its essential links with the great mystical system, which has developed itself through many manifestations, from Plotinus and Porphyry downwards, is very much his own, and owes little to anything but his own meditation; and whether his subject is 'La Beauté Intérieure' or 'Les Femmes,' 'Les Avertis' or 'Le Tragique Quotidien,' it is with the same wisdom, certainty, and beauty that he speaks. The book might well become the favourite reading of those persons to whom beauty must come with a certain dogmatism, if it is to be accepted for what it is. It reveals the inner life, with a simplicity which would seem the most obvious if it were not the rarest of qualities. It denies nothing, but it asserts many things, and it asserts nothing which has not been really seen.

Let us choose a few examples, and we will choose them first from the essays on Emerson and Novalis, which (together with the essay on Ruysbroeck l'Admirable) are not translated in the English version before us :—

"Life is neither great nor small, and the action of Regulus or of Leonidas is without importance when I compare it with a moment of the secret existence of my soul. What they have done, it could have done or left undone; these things do not touch it; and the soul of Regulus, when he returned to Carthage, was probably as indifferent, as much absorbed in other things, as that of the workman returning to his work. It is too far from all our actions, it is too far from all our thoughts. It lives solitary, in the depths of us, a life which it does not speak; and from the heights on which it reigns the variety of existences cannot be distinguished. We walk burdened with the weight of our soul, and there is no proportion between it and us. It may be that it never thinks of what we are doing, and this can be read on our countenances. If we could ask an intelligence of another world what is the synthetic expression of the face of men, it would doubtless reply, after having seen them in their joys, in their sorrows, and in their inquietudes, They seem to be thinking of something else."

"It is true that the larger part of men can have lived but in the moment of their death. Meanwhile, this conscience can be increased only by increasing what is inexplicable around us. We seek to know in order that we may learn not to know. We greaten only by greatening the mysteries which weigh upon us, and we are slaves who can indulge in the desire of life only on condition that they burden themselves more heavily, without ever becoming discouraged, with the pitiless weight of their chains."

Now let us choose a passage from 'Le Tragique Quotidien,' and we will give it in Mr. Sutro's translation :—

"I admire Othello, but he does not appear to me to live the august daily life of a Hamlet, who has the time to live, inasmuch as he does not act. Othello is admirably jealous. But is it not perhaps an ancient error to imagine that it is at the moments when this passion, or others of equal violence, possesses us, that we live our truest lives? I have grown to believe that an old man, seated in his armchair, waiting patiently, with his lamp beside him; giving unconscious ear to all the eternal laws that reign about his house, interpreting, without comprehending, the silence of doors and windows, and the quivering voice of the light, submitting with bent head to the presence of his soul and his destiny—an old man, who conceives not that all the powers of this world, like so many heedful servants, are mingling and keeping vigil in his room, who suspects not that the very sun itself is supporting in space the little table on which he leans, or that every star in heaven and every fibre of the soul are directly concerned in the movement of an eyelid that closes, or a thought that springs to birth—I have grown to believe that he, motionless as he is, does yet live in reality a deeper, more human, and more universal life than the lover who strangles his mistress, the captain who conquers in battle, or 'the husband who avenges his honour.'"

These are but three disconnected fragments from three essays, but do they not testify to the rare qualities—the qualities of vision in thought, of serenity in writing—which are to be found in this book? The last extract will show something also of the qualities of Mr. Sutro's translation. On the whole, it cannot be said that this translation is adequate: it is certainly both careful and skilful; but, looked into very closely, it is not impeccable. The only way to render M. Maeterlinck is to render him word for word; by so doing, one does justice to his French, and one produces admirable English. Mr. Sutro is not always quite content to do this. Where, in the extract we have just cited, M. Maeterlinck says "the little voice of light," Mr. Sutro prefers to say "the quivering voice of the light"; where, on another page, the original has "sur le seuil d'un départ," the translation weakens this carefully chosen metaphor, "the threshold of a departure," into the conventional "eve of a departure." Again, where M. Maeterlinck makes his statement unswervingly, not caring whether or not he will be understood by the casual reader, Mr. Sutro sometimes adds an explanatory word, so that "ne comprennent et n'admettent" is rendered "really understood and freely admitted." Nor is he always careful enough to follow exactly the rhythms of the original, a duty which in this case is by no means a difficult one. But on the whole it may be said that the English reader will miss less than he may have expected of the precise, delicate, and spiritual charm of the original.

There remains Mr. Walkley's introduction, and of this we can but express our astonishment that such an introduction should have preceded such a book. Mr. Walkley is a dramatic critic of great vivacity, one of the best of our lighter journalists, and it is to be wished that the daily papers had more contributors as clever and piquant. No one gossips more amusingly about less essential things, or fills a column less tediously. But his preface is flippant and pretentious, and cannot but leave a bad taste in the mouth of any one who opens the book. It is written in this manner: "Reversing the course prescribed by Mr. Squeers for his pupils, M. Maeterlinck, having cleaned w-i-n-d-e-r, winder, now goes and spells it." Any preface at all to such a book as M. Maeterlinck's would be out of place, but such a preface as Mr. Walkley's bit of smart journalism is an insult to the intelligence of any competent or sympathetic reader.

La Faculté de Théologie de Paris et ses Docteurs les plus Célèbres.—Moyen Age. Par l'Abbé P. Feret. 3 vols. (Paris, Picard & Fils.)

The subject which M. Feret has chosen is one that well deserved an historian, for the theological faculty of the University of Paris attracted to itself by far the largest proportion of the great teachers of that study which in the Middle Ages was the undisputed "mistress of sciences." It is unfortunate, therefore, that the author who aspires to write its constitutional and literary record should have taken so little pains to equip himself with the rudimentary knowledge essential to such a work. He opens his book with a sketch of the beginnings of the University of Paris without having read Father Denifle's massive treatise on the universities of the Middle Ages, which placed the whole subject on a new footing. We thought at first that the reverend abbé was not conversant with the German language, but, as we have noticed a few citations of German books in his second and third volumes, we fear he cannot plead this excuse. He knows Father Denifle only through the latter's preface (in Latin) to his 'Chartularium Universitatis Parisiensis,' and has the hardihood to controvert the summary of his conclusions therein contained without looking at the vindication of those conclusions in the separate treatise. Even the chartulary itself has not been made the subject of serious study. We find a reference to it here and there, but these citations give the impression of being insertions after the book was practically finished, and the substance of the text is unaffected by them. M. Feret has, in fact, preferred to spend his time in comparing and reconciling the statements and views of the older scholars, and displays a quite unusual independence of accepted results.

This being so, it is the less surprising that he should sometimes quote mediæval authors through French translations, or should admit without a qualm that notorious interpolation in a letter of Pope Nicolas I. which makes the philosopher John Scotus head of the school at Paris. M. Feret still believes that Bernard of Chartres taught at Paris, and dates his activity at the end of the eleventh or the beginning of the twelfth century, though John of Salisbury, from whom he derives his account, did not go to France until 1136, and Schaarschmidt, so long ago as 1862, showed that Bernard lived not at Paris, but at Chartres. The author's work is not all so bad as this, but still an abundance of obsolete statements are to be found. We have, for example, an account of Anselm of Laon, which ends with the following notice:—

"D'autre part, nous lisons dans l'Index Auctorum du 'Glossarium' de Ducange: 'Anselmi peripatetici rhetorimachia,' MS. Thuan. 589. S'agit-il d'Anselme de Laon?"

Now the 'Rhetorimachia' was printed in full by Dümmler in 1872, and the author was a Milanese clergyman, Anselm of Bisate, who lived more than half a century before his namesake of Laon. In like manner M. Feret is unaware that the best-known treatise of Manegold of Lutterbach, to which he alludes, has been published in recent years in the 'Monumenta Germaniæ.' He thinks that Abailard wrote his treatise entitled 'Theologia Christiana' at a later date than the work to which editors have given the name of 'Introductio ad Theologiam,' though Goldhorn in 1866 proved that the 'Theologia Christiana' was the earlier, and his conclusion has been accepted by all who have really studied the question. M. Feret suggests that Abailard's 'Sic et non' is the same book as the 'Sententiæ,' whereas the latter work is altogether different, having been published in 1835 by Rheinwald under the misleading title of 'Epitome Theologiæ Christianæ.' Moreover in the account of Stephen Langton there is no mention of what was perhaps his most enduring literary performance, namely, his work in revising the text of the Vulgate.

Our author displays an equal lack of criticism in attaching to Paris every conceivable scholar he can lay his hands on. Walter of Mortagne becomes the teacher there of John of Salisbury merely on the strength of a sentence in which John records an opinion which he held. Of Robert Pullus we are told that "avant d'être professeur à Paris, Robert y avait été élève"; but the solitary notice that we possess of this divine's early life states that he went from Exeter to Oxford and taught there in 1133. There is not a hint of his residence at Paris until 1140 or later. The truth is that M. Feret accepts without suspicion almost everything that Bulæus asserts, and with Bulæus it was a point of honour to connect as many scholars as possible with the university of which he wrote the history. No one is disposed nowadays to depreciate the industry of Bulæus; but, at the same time, no critical student is ignorant of his prejudices. In the same way the Benedictines, to whom we owe the earlier volumes of the 'Histoire Littéraire [or, as they spelt it, "Litéraire"] de la France,' deserve the heartiest gratitude of every one who has sought to work out the biography of obscure mediæval writers; but it is absurd to accept their statements without verification, as though nothing fresh had come to light in the past century.

M. Feret's book, so far as it is concerned with the teachers of Paris, contains a vast accumulation of undigested facts, laboriously compiled from most of the older authorities and from some modern French ones. Quite occasionally we note a reference to some manuscript which has escaped the attention of other collectors. The book, indeed, may be used with profit by scholars who can apply to its heterogeneous materials that criticism to which M. Feret has paid no attention. To those who have not this knowledge it presents innumerable pitfalls. Yet, as might have been expected, the second and third volumes are freer from serious mistakes than the first; and we willingly add that the history of the later development of the theological faculty at Paris may be taken, with certain reserves, as a useful and even a substantially sound compilation.

Sophocles: The Plays and Fragments. With Critical Notes, Commentary, and Translation in English Prose by R. C. Jebb, Litt.D., M.P. — Part VII. The Ajax. (Cambridge, University Press.)

The completion of Prof. Jebb's magnificent edition of the seven extant dramas of Sophocles by the publication of the 'Ajax' is an event of signal importance to philology and literature, on which the learned editor is to be most heartily congratulated, and for which gratitude is due from all scholars and all students of English literature. The severely simple prose of the translation embodies more true poetry than the verse of the most renowned versions of classical masterpieces, and has the advantage of being faithfully, but not slavishly literal. These translations are, in fact, valuable additions to modern English literature. We can still look forward with interested expectation to the issue of the two supplementary volumes. Doubtless the fragments will receive an accession of interest and importance from Prof. Jebb's masterly treatment, and we presume that the volume of essays will constitute a general introduction to the study of Sophocles and Greek tragedy, and will sum up the final results of many years of effective study.

The volume before us exhibits all the excellences by which its predecessors have earned such high encomiums that it is now superfluous to dwell upon them. We note the same charm of style, the same lucidity of expression, equivalent evidence of intimacy and sympathy with Hellenic life and thought, and the same rich aroma of a literary instinct which amounts to genius. The fact that the last-mentioned quality was displayed by the poet Sophocles more, perhaps, than by any other ancient author may have influenced our editor in the selection of his subject. Perhaps nowhere are Prof. Jebb's literary instinct and his remarkable grasp of Hellenic ideas better illustrated than in his vindication of the dramatic propriety of the sequel to the hero's death. He demonstrates up to the hilt the view set forth in the following terms:—

"It has to be explained how the action of the play, from beginning to end, can be regarded as an organic whole. The idea which pervades it, giving it unity and coherence, must be such that the death of Ajax can be viewed not as a catastrophe, after which everything else becomes tame, but rather as a tragic event necessarily leading to the events which follow it, so that the true climax is reached only in that decision which rescues the corpse of Ajax from dishonour. We must endeavour to trace this idea; or, in other words, to find the point of view from which Sophocles may be supposed to have regarded his own work."

It is nearly thirty years since our editor first promulgated in brief this convincing account of the play, and yet Mr. A. E. Haigh last year reproduced the stale, exploded criticisms of the plot.

The admission of Odysseus, received without dispute by Agamemnon, that Ajax was ἄριστον Ἀργείων ὅσοι | Τροίαν ἀφικόμεσθα, πλὴν Ἀχιλλέως (1340), is absolutely necessary to the plot as a justification—from the Hellenic point of view—of the hero's murderous resentment, for it implies that he had been wrongfully deprived of what was more precious than life itself, and is parallel to the acknowledgment of Athena in the prologue that he is punished for no crime save "haughty words" and "swelling port" against the gods. She had previously made Odysseus aver his foe's pre-eminence in prudence and valour. This is at last conceded before men by his foes, so that the permission of funeral honours appears not as an act of grace, but as an atonement demanded by justice.

It is remarkable how readily and effectually real or fancied difficulties can be dissipated if a thoroughly competent scholar, instead of altering everything which he cannot construe or comprehend at sight, earnestly sets himself to make the best of the recorded text. Over and over again Prof. Jebb has proved that alterations and suspicions have been due to lack of knowledge and of insight. He recognizes only four interpolations in the 'Ajax,' the verse after v. 554, v. 571, vv. 841, 842, v. 1417, which is only 10 per cent. of the total number of impugned passages. As to the remaining 90 per cent. Prof. Jebb says:—

"In no one of these instances does the suspicion or rejection appear to me well founded; in most of them it seems wholly gratuitous. But it is needless to repeat what I have said in former volumes on this tendency in textual criticism, against which, as we may be thankful to observe, a reaction seems at last to be setting in. It is the duty of an editor to acquaint his readers with the opinions advanced by scholars of repute, however much he may differ from them. The best way of vindicating an impugned text is to provide students with the means of examining each point for themselves."

If the desired reaction be established Prof. Jebb must be regarded as a principal promoter of a benign revolution. His efforts have been seconded directly by several prominent English scholars, and indirectly by Nauck, whose wild athetizing must have tended to bring the art of detecting spuriousness into disrepute. A good example of judicious confidence in the MSS. with respect to single words is the retention of the second ν of κάνόνητα (758), "that avail for good no more." The defence of the MS. version of Tecmessa's speech, vv. 961 – 973, ought to convert and humiliate objectors who have alleged that the passage is incoherent. For Hermann's εἰ τὰ μὲν φθίνει, φίλοι, τοιοῖσδ' (MSS. τοῖσδ') | ὁμοῦ πέλας, vv. 405, 406, we suggest εἰ τὰ μὲν φίλα φθίνει τό δὲ | δεινὸν πέλας. | In uncials σδομο is not unlike εδεινο. The rhythm δεινὸν πέλας | , a tripody followed by a tetrapody, answering to a succeeding similar tripody, πᾶς δὲ στρατὸς | , followed by a tetrapody, is more symmetrical than J. H. H. Schmidt's arrangement, viz., 4, 3, 4, 3, 4, instead of 5, 3, 3 + 2, 2, 2. Hermann's suggestion has been selected as one of two specimens of Prof. Jebb's own emendations, though he ascribes it to its proper author at the head of a classified list of sixteen proposed readings. In v. 191, instead of the difficult μή, μή μ', we would read μή, μή γ', supporting the change by Prof. Jebb's note on 'Antigone,' 648, which shows that Blaydes's μή μοί γ' involves superfluous change.

With regard to interpretation Prof. Jebb almost always carries us with him, but we have noted one or two points which seem to invite discussion. The pronoun ἥδε (v. 114) is not necessarily for τόδε, object of τὸ δρᾶν attracted to τέρψις, but the clause may mean "since the doing is such delight to you"—"that you decline to refrain from this one gratification even when I bid you" being implied. We are sceptical as to ἥκοι ἄν (v. 186) meaning "will" or "must" come, and prefer Goodwin's "may prove to have come" ('Greek Moods and Tenses,' § 328). In v. 207 we would supply νόσου, from νοσήσας in the preceding verse, with τῆς ἡμερίας, rather than consider here "a tendency in Greek idiom to make substantives out of fem. adjectives." As in the note on 252 ff. we read, "In Pind., 'P.,' 11, 36, χρονίῳ σὺν Ἄρει is best taken, with Gildersleeve, as = 'by tardy help of Ares,'" we were surprised to find that an earlier editor, Fennell, translates "with Ares' help at last," the personification being the point of the reference. "On" seems more forcible than "among" (v. 557), πατρὸς δείξεις ἐν ἐχθροῖς οἷος ἐξ οἵου 'τράφης, cf. vv. 43, 1092.

In the appendix on v. 75 there is an interesting and valuable contribution to the study of the οὐ μὴ constructions, which corrects Prof. Goodwin's explanation of the particular classes of sentences in which a command to do something is coupled with a command not to do something else. The vexed question of the origin of these constructions is left alone, possibly because Prof. Goodwin's errors as to actual usage are attributed to the influence of his historical theory. Prof. Jebb seldom passes over any point of interest or dubiety, but we should have liked to learn his opinion on the construction of τί in the double question (101) τί γὰρ δὴ παῖς ὁ τοῦ Λαερτίου, | ποῦ σοι τύχης ἔστηκεν; and on the alliteration of vv. 105, 106, ἡδιστος, ὦ δέσποινα, δεσμώτης ἔσω | θακεῖ, θανεῖν γὰρ αὐτὸν οὔ τί πω θέλω.

We accept the view taken in the introduction of the speech of Ajax (vv. 646–692), with one slight exception, namely, that Ajax as conceived by Sophocles "had come to recognize his offence against social order in failing to reverence" the station of the Atreidæ. The phrase μαθησόμεσθα Ἀτρείδας σέβειν should not be pressed to mean more than Ajax's recognition of the divine ordinance (which he regards as unjust) that his just resentment shall not prevail against the Atreidæ, so that they are and will be rulers de facto to whom he must pay due respect. This he has learnt by his failure and disgrace. By his death he gives way to them for the time; but, as his illustrations show, he feels that they will hereafter give way to him, that his σέβειν is to be succeeded by their αἰδεῖσθαι (note Agamemnon's ἐχθρὸν ὧδ' αἰδεῖ νέκυν; v. 1356). Odysseus (v. 1359) persuades Agamemnon to use discretion by the very reflection as to the alternation of enmity and friendship which Ajax has made in vv. 679–683.

The introduction furnishes us with all the collateral information needed for the thorough understanding and enjoyment of the drama. The legendary Ajax is traced from the Iliad through classical literature and art. We receive full instruction as to the cult of Ajax in Salamis and at Athens, where he received the honours of a divine hero. It was for this apotheosis that due funeral rites were indispensable, and consequently of such paramount importance to the consummation of the poet's conception.

The apparent reminiscences of Æschylean diction in the 'Ajax,' especially of the phraseology of the 'Persæ,' are judiciously pronounced to be coincidences which "merely show that the 'Ajax' belongs to a period when Æschylus had a strong influence on the younger poet's style." Prof. Jebb regards the 'Ajax' as earlier than the 'Antigone,' mainly because the 'Antigone' alone follows the Æschylean dramas in not dividing a senarius between two or more speakers. He seems to accept Lachmann's emendation of Æsch., 'P. V.,' 980, IIR. ὦμοι | EP. ὦμοι· τόδε, κ.τ.λ., which is, indeed, easy and very attractive.

To do due justice to the merit and importance of the volume before us and of the whole work on the extant plays which it brings to a conclusion would need a substantial volume, and even at the end of that we should have to tell scholars that they must discover for themselves many treasures which had been passed by.

NEW NOVELS.

Lovice. By Mrs. Hungerford. (Chatto & Windus.)

The late Mrs. Hungerford in all her numerous stories showed one redeeming gift which outbalanced several deficiencies of which at this date we do not care to speak. There was a certain youthfulness in her point of view, enabling her to touch with a light hand the half-playful, half-serious relations of youths and maidens under the domination of honest, healthy love. This made the charm of her earliest and most successful novels, and this remained with her when in many respects her vein seemed comparatively exhausted. In the present case the altercations and misunderstandings of that frank pair of lovers, Digby Devereux and Louie Crichton, though occasionally farcical, and in any case too long drawn out, have the old playful ring, and go far to alleviate the unduly tragic conclusion of Lovice's short and unhappy dream of passion. Ably presented in some ways, the story of the heroine fails to satisfy us, as from first to last there is nothing to warm the imagination in the spectacle of a soft-hearted and long-suffering girl throwing all the wealth of her affection on a creature without one manly quality except physical beauty, and without the small intelligence which might enable him to comprehend the strain to which his unfaithfulness exposes her fidelity. That the odious "heiress" for whom, when his fortunes seem in jeopardy, Capt. Lambert is willing to sacrifice the truest passion he is capable of knowing, should have "a swivel eye and a nigger mother," as one of the refined male creatures elegantly puts it, is an instance of the defective taste we have hinted at, but makes Lambert's conduct neither better nor worse. That so pure and womanly a character as Lovice should waste a thought on such a "nidering," and that poor honest Jim, her husband, should hear her name so contemptible a rival with her latest breath, are humbling incidents, though not absolutely inconsistent with the paradoxical nature of human passion in the best of us.

A Rogue's Conscience. By David Christie Murray. (Downey & Co.)

"I did mean 'John, dear,' and I always shall." The little bit of love-making in Mr. Murray's book is refreshingly pure and naïve, and provides an antiseptic for much corrupt human nature, also very true to life. The remarkable brace of swindlers, Mortimer and Ross — the pliant, intellectual rogue and his follower, a hard, greedy Scot, whose lapse into crime is a fall not from virtue, but from respectability—are skilfully contrasted. Mortimer's repentance is just possible, from his fertile imagination. He can throw himself into the point of view of honest men when his apprehension has been quickened by being swindled himself. The duller-witted scoundrel can be forced to learn that honesty is the best policy; but to realize his degradation, or to feel the need of restitution, is beyond him. An Irish gold-digger, of a rough and genial type, is also a convincing character. Slight as is the tale, its cleverly managed incidents, local colouring (derived from a mining district in British Columbia), and first-hand knowledge of some curiously freakish products of our complicated modern life will reward the rapid reader.

A Great Lie. By Wilfrid Hugh Chesson. (Fisher Unwin).

Mr. W. H. Chesson's first novel, 'Name this Child,' was a success. His second book is a singularly fantastic production, in which the supernatural is introduced into modern life as freely as by Olive Schreiner in her new story of the Matabele war. Nothing can be more difficult, and a certain clumsiness of plot is an inevitable result. Yet the use of the supernatural allows of appeal to a wider public than can be reached with the same ideas by any other means. A cripple Methodist fisher-boy wishes to be made straight, and for a week becomes the tenant of the body of a glorious youth drowned in a wreck, but finds himself forced to act a foreign character. Yet he is not wholly himself lying, but is partly the other. We are reminded of a Queensland poem in which the lessee of the corporation baths, having tried to frighten the people into using them by telling of an imaginary crocodile, which he has seen upon the bank of the river where they bathe, is eaten by the fictitious beast, and tells the story while he is being digested—tells it at first as a fraudulent town councillor, then as half town councillor, half crocodile, and, at last, honest crocodile altogether. Mr. Chesson's hero is sometimes Methodist fisher-boy and sometimes pagan poet, beyond the lying power of Methodist fisher-folk The two worlds are, however, well handled by our author. The hero reminds us both of some of Robert Louis Stevenson's playful gentlemen and of the more bitterly cynical Dorian Gray. A fisherman asks of the hero, who is sitting to a painter as an Apollo, who that might be. "'He was a god.' 'There's but One,' said the fisherman. 'Artists are only happy when they are making mistakes.'" Again, we find: "The prophet stood no better with posterity for being vindicated by bears when the ribalds cried: 'Go up, thou bald head!'" On the other hand, the author has a pretty appreciation of religion: "He prayed as he always prayed, as though it were for the first time, and his knees were on the steps of the Throne....Permission to pray....was the sovereign answer to all prayer." The charm of the book is that its young author seems to share at once the Puritan enthusiasm, expressed in Nonconformist language, of the fisher-set, and the pagan poetry of the artist and of the drowned man of the wreck. Some of the best things in the book may be called "echoes," but they are at least happily chosen and well placed: "that eruption of self-consciousness which is called confession," for example. Here is a passage of some promise as regards that rare inheritance—a style: "The coarse conviviality of the tap-room, lacking the illusion of gassy splendour, ransacked and laid bare by its enemy the sun....." On the other hand, we have discovered one absolute distinction between the two Edmunds who are built into the concrete hero. Before the drowning the fisher-boy never puts "will" for "shall." After the drowning the repentant-town-councillor-honest-crocodile Edmund occasionally follows the lead of the newspapers of the United States, Scotland, Ireland, and the colonies, and horrifies the English reader by assertions grammatically similar to, but less appropriate than, the classical "I will be drowned. Nobody shall save me."

A Russian Wild Flower; or, the Story of a Woman in Search of a Life. By E. A. Brayley Hodgetts. (Macqueen.)

Prince Obolenski, a selfish and not very honest Russian official, with a general admiration for all pretty women other than his wife, has a dull son and a bright-witted daughter, the latter being the "wild flower" of Mr. Hodgetts's story. Of course the son's tutor is a Nihilist who makes love to Olga Obolenski. She is discontented in her father's house, and visits a friend in Moscow, where her beauty and wit gain for her much admiration and plenty of stirring adventure. The Nihilist comes on the scene again, and plays a large part in the melodrama; and then we are introduced to the hero. Such is the basis of a romance which is not without its interest, and which is written in an easygoing, unexacting, rather slipshod style. Olga's experiences and sensations whilst she is still in search of a higher life are by no means novel and not very subtle. This fact, and the unpretentious manner of the narration, may commend 'A Russian Wild Flower' to a certain number of readers; and probably Mr. Hodgetts has not proposed to himself to attract such as are more or less hard to please.

A Last Throw. By Alice M. Diehl. (Digby, Long & Co.)

Mrs. Diehl revels in all the unreality of the sensational novelist. Her characters perform wonderful acts of wickedness and live in gorgeous palaces which are the abode of vice that takes the form of gambling; but they are inhuman, and the author has evidently no great interest in them. This is obvious from the picture of the chief villain, Diaz de Sorrento. If the heroine's character has any point, he is meant to be so repulsive as entirely to palliate her conduct to him; but somehow he raises sympathy in the reader, and consequently belittles his wife's attitude. Moreover, the love-making of Jack and Althea exhibits a feeble passion without any charm about it. Altogether the story is not well thought out, is neither frankly real nor frankly sensational enough to have the character of success.

BIBLIOGRAPHICAL LITERATURE.

MR. RICHARD GREEN'S monograph on The Works of John and Charles Wesley: a Bibliography containing an Exact Account of all the Publications issued by the Brothers Wesley (C. H. Kelly) is a good instance of what can be effected by the steady work of a succession of labourers in the same field. In form and arrangement his book closely resembles the first section of Dr. Osborn's 'Outlines of Wesleyan Bibliography,' published in 1869, and this in its turn was no doubt largely indebted to the 'Chronological List of the Writings of John and Charles Wesley,' by Alexander Heylin, appended to the 1864 edition of Stevens's 'History of Methodism.' In such cases it is doubtless the pioneer who deserves the chief share of the praise; but if Mr. Green has produced what is practically a second edition of Dr. Osborn's work, it is a second edition greatly enlarged and improved. Works and editions of works of which Dr. Osborn only suspected the existence, or of which he was ignorant altogether, have been tracked down. Books which he recorded only at second hand are now accurately described from personal inspection, and the notes, which add greatly to the interest of the book, are now much fuller and more precise. We do not say that even yet the work is done for all time. The second work registered, 'A Treatise on Christian Prudence,' though known from one of Wesley's letters to have been written and published in 1734, can still be traced in no earlier edition than that of 1742, which Dr. Osborn recorded; and of another book "extracted from Mr. Norris," the 'Reflection upon the Conduct of Human Life,' the first edition appears in like manner to have perished altogether. Wesley bibliography is thus still interesting; there is still something to hunt for; but the gaps which Mr. Green has left will not easily be filled up, and it is probable that another period of thrice nine years will elapse before, if ever, the finishing touches can be put to the book. John Wesley, indeed, was enormously prolific, and many of his works were issued at nominal prices in the large editions which, paradoxical as it may seem, disappear from the face of the earth much more readily than the most limited of limited issues. Mr. Green calculates that no fewer than 391 works may be assigned to the two brothers, of which 326 are in prose, 61 in verse, and 14 musical, the two latter classes apparently overlapping, as otherwise the total would be too great. Out of the 391 as many as 233 are original works by John Wesley, exactly 100 more were extracted or edited by him, for 8 he wrote only a preface or notes, while in 30 he was joint author with his brother Charles, whose own original works number 20. It is this very considerable mass of literature with which Mr. Green has dealt, arranging his entries in chronological order and annotating the majority of them with extracts from Wesley's journals and letters, so as to throw as much light as possible on the circumstances under which each book or pamphlet was written and published. His bibliography is a sound and scholarly piece of work, on which he is heartily to be congratulated.

Institut International de Bibliographie: Bulletin. (Brussels, Rue Ravenstein, 11.)—This Bulletin has two objects mainly in view: one is the cataloguing of scientific literature, the other the propagation of the decimal system of classification associated with the name of Mr. Melvil Dewey, the American library expert. These aims are excellent in every way, and the manner in which they are being promoted by the Institute of International Bibliography recently established in Brussels by Government decree is only equalled by the activity displayed by the Catalogue Committee of our own Royal Society appointed some two or three years ago; by that of the International Bibliographical Bureau in Zurich, presided over by Dr. Herbert Haviland Field; and by similar movements in America. The most systematic scheme, however, seems to be that of the Royal Society, which, if carried out, would render the work of these various bodies needless. The Royal Society propose to form in London an office of scientific bibliography in 1900, and to carry it on under their own auspices for ten years, making in the mean time all the arrangements necessary for so huge an undertaking as an author and subject catalogue of science in the widest sense of the word. However, our continental and Transatlantic brethren, while in sympathy with the Royal Society's scheme, must be doing something meanwhile, and this restlessness chiefly manifests itself in the projection and production of subject catalogues and the issue of card catalogues of them, which will be useful in the compilation of the great catalogue when it is once commenced. Meanwhile bibliography, as understood by the members of the Bibliographical Society and subscribers to Bibliographica, is neglected by these very scientific bodies. Sentiment is strong in the older bibliography, but non-existent in the new, and the bibliography of literature will apparently always remain a thing absolutely different from that of science, so that it is just as well, perhaps, these distinctions should be observed. Apart from all this, however, the Bulletin contains a number of very valuable articles by MM. Gariel, Field, Otlet, and Pierre Dauze, that of the last being the only link which connects such publications as the Bulletin with such Transactions as those of the Bibliographical Society.

Two new instalments of the extensive Bibliographie der schweizerischen Landeskunde have just been issued. "Heft I. Sect. B" contains a bibliography of the publications of Swiss societies (Gesellschaftschriften), of newspapers, and of the numerous yearly calendars, edited by Prof. Leopold Brandstetter. "Heft II. Sect. D" contains the index and supplementary notes to the three earlier sections, A to C, which comprised the catalogue of Swiss maps, plans, and reliefs, edited by Prof. J. H. Graf for the Federal Topographical Bureau.

Bibliography is in the way of the Athenæum, but anarchy is not, and we are, therefore, placed in some difficulty as to the extent of notice to accord to a Bibliographie de l'Anarchie, by M. Nettlau, which has a preface by M. Élisée Reclus, and is published at Brussels by the Bibliothèque des Temps Nouveaux. Those who are interested in the developments of anarchism will find the volume of value, but there has not been very much supervision of the extent to which many of the works mentioned can be truly said to be anarchic. For instance, Burke's 'Vindication of Natural Society' figures in the list, perhaps with some propriety, but is followed by Godwin's 'Political Justice,' which certainly ought not on any sound consideration of its teaching to have been included.

BOOKS OF TRAVEL.

The Outgoing Turk: Impressions of a Journey through the Western Balkans. By H. C. Thomson. With Seventy-six Illustrations and Three Maps. (Heinemann.)—Mr. Thomson's "Impressions" are a timely contribution to our knowledge of that inflammable corner of Europe the Balkan peninsula. His actual journey was confined mainly to Bosnia, and, like other recent writers, he testifies to the great work done by the Austrians in pacifying and developing this province since their occupation of it in 1878. The "outgoing" Turk, he is careful to specify, is the Osmanli official; no other Turks have been molested. The great mass of the Mohammedan population, however, belong to the same Slav race as the rest of the inhabitants. This, no doubt, makes amalgamation easier, and the fact is that Mohammedans, when fairly defeated, can accept the inevitable like other people, and these are rapidly settling down to friendly relations with their neighbours. They are conspicuous for their honesty and sobriety, for, as Mr. Thomson points out, whereas these and other virtues are enjoined by both creeds, it is the Muslim who chiefly lives up to his profession. This, indeed, Mr. Thomson looks on as in some respects a source of weakness. The Muslim must, he says, always remain poor, for such precepts as the forbidding to receive "usury" make almost all trading and banking impossible. But he points out elsewhere that (as in India) contact with other peoples gradually modifies these ideas. Still, a fatalistic resignation is "the key-note of a Mohammedan's life," while the most popular book among Serbs and Croats is Smiles's 'Self-Help' Still, Austria, we are told, is not popular, notwithstanding all she has done for the Christians of Bosnia; for the Orthodox desire union with Servia, and they and the Catholic minority hate each other not less cordially than in the days when their mutual animosity permitted the fall of Constantinople. But the constancy with which generations of the Christian peasantry have stuck to their faith, when by abjuring it they might at once have greatly improved their position, is, as Mr. Thomson points out, heroic. Although the various industries of the country are being wisely and liberally aided by Government, the author noticed many signs of decay in the smaller towns. They are no longer the necessary markets for country produce since the railways were made, and their small industries are suffering from cheap foreign competition. A British trade of 400,000*l.* annually, which flourished under the liberal commercial régime of Turkey, has been extinguished by the Austrian Customs Union. Both man and nature in Bosnia, while still on the meridian of Vienna or Dantzig, seem to bear a strong "Eastern" impress, and Mr. Thomson is often reminded by the great plains and unfrequented rivers, and by the brightly apparelled, excitable crowds, of similar scenes in India, this comparison extending to the devoted band of official workers labouring in each country among an alien race, in a trying climate. Among the interesting matters in the book, and what may to some readers appear the most important, are his concise but clear statements of the aspirations and sympathies of the various neighbouring peoples, Croats, Serbs, and Dalmatians. Into his speculations as to the future, interesting as they are, we cannot enter at any length. He asserts, though not, apparently, from personal observation, that the condition of Macedonia is one of "almost absolute anarchy." Shortly, he attributes the present miserable and dangerous state of affairs mainly to England's persistent jealousy and mistrust of Russia. But this attitude of hers might seem partly justified by his admission—or assertion—that Russia has a secret treaty with Turkey for objects of her own; that she the other day prevented England by the threat of war from coming to the relief of the Armenians; and that she is viewed with distrust by every state in the Balkan peninsula. The illustrations in this volume are mostly much above the average.

The Mount and the City of Autun (Seeley & Co.) is a posthumous publication of some delightful chapters by Mr. Hamerton on the district of the Morvan which he made familiar to English readers. His widow explains in the preface that they were originally intended to form part of 'Round my House,' and Madame Hamerton is much to be commended for having given them to the public. The greater portion of the little volume is devoted to descriptions of expeditions made by the author to Mont Beuvray in company with M. Bulliot, an accomplished antiquary residing at Autun, who survives his lamented friend, though much his senior, and who, both before and after the war, was entrusted by the Imperial and Republican Governments with the direction of the excavations of the Gaulish city of Bibracte on that picturesque mountain. The charm of the book is not merely in its archæological information, which is, however, of great interest; it will be read with keen pleasure by all who are fond of rural France. The sketches of the peasantry and the village priests of Burgundy incidentally met with during the excursions to the Mount, the descriptions of architecture and of rustic scenery, the records of conversations, and the glimpses of provincial life, all combine to form an extremely readable little volume. It is much to be regretted that Mr. Hamerton did not see fit to publish it during his lifetime, as probably the interest called forth by it might have induced him to devote more of his time and talent to particular local description of the regions of France with which he was acquainted. 'Round my House' and 'French and English' are both full of excellent generalizations, but this fragment as well as other minor writings of the author show that he might, had he chosen, have written a work which would at once have been an ideal guide-book and an admirable piece of literature. As it is, if any summer traveller is tempted to explore the beautiful and accessible, though little-known highlands between the Saône and the Loire, he cannot do better than take with him this little book, which is from the pen of one who knew every inch of the country, and understood the art of imparting its charm to others.

Murray's Cyclist's Road-Book (Murray) is likely to have a large sale among the crowds of "wheelmen" who leave London by the Portsmouth road, as it contains an excellent account of the way to the New Forest through Guildford, Chichester, and Southampton, and back by Winchester and Dorking. The sectional route-maps are admirable, and the whole of this little volume will be found eminently useful.

Mr. Chambers's Handbook for Eastbourne (Philip & Son) has reached its thirty-first thousand.

The Librairie Hachette & Cie. publishes an excellent volume by M. Pierre de Coubertin, the French gentleman who lately revived the Olympic games, entitled Souvenirs d'Amérique et de Grèce. The American chapters are on the Far West and California, on universities and athletics. The Greek part is strongly phil-Hellenic.

THE LIBRARIES OF FICTION.

The idea of G. Colmore's Love for a Key, in the "Pioneer Series" (Heinemann), though not novel, is finely conceived; it is of a quiet, unobtrusive wife who gradually refines the coarse nature of her husband by the persistent purity of her love for him. The portrait of the wife is excellent; she triumphantly carries the reader's sympathy for her fine nature, even when he is most conscious that she must be jarring on her husband; she is a creature of flesh and blood whose ugliness and quiet charm are both obvious. The husband is not so good; his aberrations have a somewhat transpontine flavour, so that he appears exaggerated; and the author has too great a fondness for touching scenes of the style which call back a vague recollection of 'Misunderstood,' that book beloved in our sentimental childhood. But these defects are amply compensated by some most refreshing minor characters, while the wife alone puts the book above the ordinary.

A Noble Haul, by Mr. Clark Russell (Fisher Unwin), is No. 11 of the "Little Novels" series. It is, like the majority of this series, a short story of about twenty thousand words, and, like most of Mr. Clark Russell's fiction, is a romance of the ocean. It is well written and interesting, and reads like the narrative of an adventure which has ample foundation in fact. The date at which the scene is laid is hardly fifty years since, and the Atlantic was not yet traversed by innumerable steamboats and so deprived of half its capacities for romance.

The latest addition to the dainty "Acme" volumes, Angela's Lover, by Dorothea Gerard (Constable & Co.), justifies its existence, if, as may be supposed, its purpose is to while away the tedium of a railway journey, or to occupy a wakeful hour in the noon of night. Worse subjects of reflection may be presented to the vacant mind than feminine love which can thus idealize its object—a pure spirit ill lodged in a misshapen tenement of clay:—

"He was beautiful—his soul was more beautiful than other men's faces; and it is only the soul that I see in the face. Is to be high-minded and generous, to be patient under a sharp dispensation, strong under a heavy burden, not to be beautiful? And is there no other charm but that of features and limbs?"

The short married life of the fair Angela and her hunch-backed musician, their quaint and delicate courtship, and the clumsy fate that snaps their thread of happiness at the hands of the unwitting country boor, who sees only that the lady of his adoration is unhappy, form a tragic, but not ignoble study. Vienna supplies a local colouring, adequate to the setting of a pathetic drama in humble life.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Mr. J. T. Danson, the author of the excellent work 'Our Next War in its Commercial Aspect; with some Account of the Premiums paid at "Lloyd's" from 1805 to 1816,' will, when his new book is considered, meet with a different reception from the skilled. All the authorities welcomed the former—the present they will find barren of useful suggestion. In Our Commerce in War and how to Protect It (Blades, East & Blades) Mr. Danson proposes that we should give notice that we will not seize private property at sea nor allow it to be seized. The result of such a notice would be a declaration from France, Germany, and Russia that we had made it for British objects, and that being "unilateral" it had no force, and a howl from the Franco-German press which might precipitate the formation of a coalition. If, after this, Mr. Danson thinks that we should have the pluck to hang the officers and men of the Jeanne d'Arc, of the Rossia, and of the other Commerce Destroyers and fast cruisers which have been built by France and Russia to prey upon our trade (and to face the hanging of the crews of all our merchantmen caught), Mr. Danson will not find many supporters.

The Maison Didot publishes La Crise de l'État Moderne, by M. Charles Benoist, one of those purely academic books, written without much regard to the actual facts of the world, which are useless to practical politicians and misleading to political philosophers. He discusses at great length the representation of the people in the legislation of various countries, but as he excludes from his view those which are the most important owing to the consideration which they have given to the subject—the United States, Canada, Victoria, South Australia, New South Wales, Queensland, and generally the English-speaking world outside Great Britain—and as his account of the British system itself is inaccurate, it will be seen that he is a blind guide. The object of the work is to condemn what the French call universal and we call manhood suffrage; and it may be noted that the English use of the phrase "universal suffrage," for adult suffrage, is convenient, inasmuch as the French, by calling manhood suffrage "universal," are left without a name for the suffrage which exists in New Zealand and South Australia, and is beginning to be adopted in some of the United States. The author is in favour of proportional representation. There is a great deal to be said for this, but it should be supported on an accurate view of facts instead of on a basis of pure theory. The author in his list of electorates disregards the double vote, and as his tables class together the countries in which the principle "one man one vote" prevails, and Great Britain, where there is a wholly different system and an enormous duplication of votes in the same persons, the figures of the tables are entirely worthless.

Messrs. Newnes have added to their "New Library" Mrs. Gaskell's fine novel North and South.—Messrs. Dent & Co. have sent us a tasteful little volume containing The Lyric Poems of Beaumont and Fletcher. The introduction by Mr. E. Rhys is superior to most of his prefaces. The same publishers have included in their pretty "Temple Classics" the third volume of their edition of Malory's Morte d'Arthur and a second instalment of their reprint of Florio's Montaigne.—Messrs. Routledge have issued a convenient edition of Poems by Edgar Allan Poe, and reissued the late Prof. Morley's edition of Pike County Ballads, by Col. John Hay.—The Silver Cross (Bell & Sons) is an anthology of poems and hymns for the sick and suffering, compiled by Helen Douglas. The literary merit of the pieces chosen is not remarkable. The Bishop of St. Andrews supplies a preface couched in conventional phrases.—Bon-Mots of the Eighteenth Century (Dent & Co.) is a fairly amusing collection, edited by Mr. W. Jerrold, and illustrated with grotesques by Miss Woodward.

We have on our table Cardinal Manning, from the French of Francis de Pressensé by E. Ingall (Heinemann),—The Truth from Johannesburg, by A. M Mann (Hutchinson),—Æschylus: Prometheus Bound, by C. R. Haines (Sonnenschein),—The Energy of Living Protoplasm, by O. Loew (Kegan Paul),—Alterations of Personality, by A. Binet, translated by H. G. Baldwin (Chapman & Hall),—Outlines of Economic Theory, by H. J. Davenport (Macmillan),—Comenius' School of Infancy, edited by W. S. Monroe (Isbister),—Cakes and Ale, by E. Spencer (Richards),—Supplement to Reading for the Young, by J. F. Sargent (Boston, U.S., Library Bureau, 146, Franklin Street),—The Science of Status, by H. Seal (Williams & Norgate),—My Book of Inventions (Arnold),—Some Whims of Fate, by M. M. Dowie (Lane),—The Love of an Obsolete Woman, chronicled by Herself (Constable),—A Soldier of the Legion, by D. L. Johnstone (Chambers),—Horse or Blacksmith, by Nat Gould (Routledge),—The Pathos of Poverty, by W. H. Roberts (Westminster Palace Press),—Opals, by Olive Custance (Lane),—The Hebrew Monarchy: a Commentary, with a Harmony of the Parallel Texts, by A. Wood, M.A. (Eyre & Spottiswoode),—Our Sacred Books: Part I. The Old Testament, by A. S. Cantlay (Neville Beeman),—Comme Ils sont Tous! by Julien Berr de Turique (Paris, Lévy),—and Grundriss der indo-arischen Philologie und Altertumskunde, edited by G. Bühler, Vol. III. Part VIII. (Strassburg, Trübner). Among New Editions we have Life of Her Majesty the Queen, with Sketches of the Royal Family (S.P.C.K.),—The Carved Lions, by Mrs. Molesworth (Macmillan),—Lamb's Tales from Shakespeare (Routledge),—Elementary Geology, by G. S. Boulger (Collins),—In Time to Come, by E. Holmes (Hurst & Blackett),—Carroll's Symbolic Logic: Part I. Elementary (Macmillan),—Modern Dogs: Terriers, by R. B. Lee (Cox),—England's Wealth, Ireland's Poverty, by T. Lough, M.P. (Downey & Co.),—Handbuch der neuesten Kirchengeschichte, by F. Nippold (Glasgow, Bauermeister),—and The Early Church and the Roman Claim, by Prof. Rentoul (Melbourne, Melville, Mullen & Slade). Also the following Pamphlets: The Principles of Wealth Distribution, by C. Y. C. Dawbarn (Simpkin),—Territorial Tyranny of the Turk, by A. Paul (Philip),—True Womanhood, by W. Cunningham, D.D. (Sonnenschein),—German Essays for English Thinkers, edited by K. A. Lentzner: Our Art Exhibitions (Williams & Norgate),—and Criticism, and the Criticism of Music, by Roentgen Ray (Sanders, Phillips & Co.).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Adams's (Rev. D. C. O.) The Saints and Missionaries of the Anglo-Saxon Era, First Series, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Bainton's (J.) The Congregational Handbook, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Barrett's (G. S.) The Earliest Christian Hymn, 18mo. 2/6 cl.
Bell's (C. D.) The Gospel of the Power of God, and other Sermons, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dowden's (J.) Outlines of the Theological Literature of the Church of England cr. 8vo. 3/ cl.
McLaren's (Right Rev. W. E.) The Practice of the Interior Life, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net, cl.
Pearse's (Rev. M. G.) Come, Break your Fast, a Daily Meditation, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Pulpit Commentary Reissue: Judges, 8vo. 6/ cl.

Law.

Bonner's (G. A.) The Law of Motor Cars, &c., 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Odgers's (W. B.) An Outline of the Law of Libel, Six Lectures, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Watt's (W. A.) The Theory of Contract in its Social Light, 3/

Fine Art.

Brangwyn's (F.) Thirty-six Illustrations to the Arabian Nights, 21/ in portfolio.
Furniss's (H.) Pen and Pencil in Parliament, imp. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Mann's (W.) Model Drawing on True Principles, 8vo. 5/ cl.
Richard's (F.) Thirty-six Illustrations to the Work of T. Smollett, royal 8vo. 21/ in portfolio.
Royal Academy Pictures, 1897, imp. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Armour (M.) and Macdougall's (W. B.) Thames Sonnets and Semblances, 4to. 5/ net, cl.
Darley's (G.) Nepenthe, a Poem in Two Cantos, 2/6 net, cl.
Elizabethan Sonnet Cycles, edited by M. F. Crow, 5/ net, cl.
Ibbett's (W. J.) A West Sussex Garland, 4to. 2/6 net, swd.
MacBeth's (J.) The Opening of the Gates, a Mosaic of Song, 12mo. 5/ net, cl.
Optimus, and other Poems, by M. R. S., cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Poets and Poetry of the Century: Sacred, Moral, and Religious Verse, edited by A. H. Miles, 12mo. 4/ cl.
Shakespeare's Works, Vol. 8, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl. or buckram. (Whitehall Edition.)
Smith's (H.) Poems, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Thompson's (F.) New Poems, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

Bibliography.

Stephens's (T. A.) A Contribution to the Bibliography of the Bank of England, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.

Philosophy.

Pearson's (K.) The Chances of Death, and other Studies in Evolution, 2 vols. 8vo. 25/ net, cl.

History and Biography.

Annual Register, 1896, 8vo. 18/ cl.
Carlyle's Cromwell's Letters, &c., Vol. 3, 8vo. 3/6 cl. (Centenary Edition.)
Dowden's (E.) The French Revolution and English Literature, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Furse's (Col. G. A.) Military Expeditions beyond the Seas, 2 vols. 8vo. 15/ cl.
Mahaffy's (J. P.) A Survey of Greek Civilization, cr. 8vo. 6/
Queen, The, her Empire and the English-speaking World, oblong, 5/ cl.
Read's (G. M.) Historic Studies in Vaud, Berne, and Savoy from Roman Times, 2 vols. 8vo. 28/ cl.
Royal Historical Society: The Domesday of Inclosures, 1517-1518, ed. by I. S. Leadam, 2 vols. 8vo. 36/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

America and the Americans from a French Point of View, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Bigham's (C.) A Ride through Western Asia, illustrated, 8vo. 8/6 net, cl.
Conway's (Sir W. M.) The First Crossing of Spitsbergen, 4to. 30/ net, cl.
Drake's (S. B.) Among the Dark-Haired Race in the Flowery Land, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Russell's (T. O.) Beauties and Antiquities of Ireland, 7/6 cl.

Philology.

Cicero, M. T., Correspondence, by Tyrrell and Purser, Vol. 5, 8vo. 14/ cl.

Science.

American Year-Book of Medicine and Surgery, ed. Gould, 38/
Bell's (Mrs. A.) Flowering Plants, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Bryan (G. H.) and Rosenberg's (F.) First Stage Mechanics of Fluids, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Brass's (Dr. A.) Atlas of Human Histology, 4to. 31/6 net.
Christian's (G. A.) A New Arithmetic, cr. 8vo. 1/6 cl.
Concise Knowledge of Natural History, by R. Lydekker, R. B. Sharpe, and others, cr. 8vo. 5/ half bound.
Dixon's (C.) The Migration of Birds, Amended Edition, 10/6
Jellett's (H.) A Short Practice of Midwifery, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Nichol's (E. L.) The Outlines of Physics, cr. 8vo. 7/6 net, cl.
Perry's (J.) The Calculus for Engineers, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Raphael's (F. C.) The Localization of Faults in Electric-Light Mains, 8vo. 5/ cl.
Scherren's (H.) Through a Pocket Lens, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Waller's (A. D.) Exercises in Practical Physiology, 2/6 net.
Watson's (D. C.) Practical Handbook of the Diseases of the Eye, 12mo. 4/6 net, cl.
Webster's (A. G.) The Theory of Electricity and Magnetism, 8vo. 14/ net, cl.
Woolwich Mathematical Papers, 1887-96, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

General Literature.

Alexander's (Mrs.) Mrs. Crichton's Creditor, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Berwick's (J.) The Secret of St. Florel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Broughton's (R.) Dear Faustina, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Burnham's (J.) Chips from my Log, illus. cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Cooke's (J. H.) Heaven, an Inquiry, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
De Quincey's Works, Standard Edition, Vol. 8, 2/6 cl.
Dickens's Martin Chuzzlewit, Introduction by A. Lang, 2 vols. 8vo. 12/ cl. (Gadshill Edition.)
Doyle's (A. C.) Uncle Bernac, a Memory of the Empire, 6/
Harvey's (W.) The Harp of Stirlingshire, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Hawke's (W. H.) The Premier Cypher Telegraphic Code, 10/6
Jerome's (J. K.) Sketches in Lavender, Blue, and Green, 6/
Langbridge's (Rev. F.) Hooks and Eyes, 4to. 2/6 cl.
London, Chatham, and Dover Railway, its Passenger Services &c., 8vo. 2/6 sewed.
Macnamara's (L.) Blind Larry, Irish Idylls, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Magnay's (Sir W.) The Fall of a Star, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Naval Annual, 1897, edited by T. A. Brassey, roy. 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Octogenarian Teetotalers, with 113 Portraits, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Oscar's (A.) Capt. Kid's Millions, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Owen's (J. L.) The Great Jekyll Diamond, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Power of the Purse, by Actinotus, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Reade's (C.) Broken Threads, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Richmond's (Mrs.) Sally, a Sydney Tale, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Robins's (G. M.) The Silence Broken, a Story of the Unexplained, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Russell's (W. C.) The Last Entry, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Scott's (Sir W.) Waverley Novels, Standard Edition: Talisman, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Sergeant's (A.) In Vallombrosa, a Sequence, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Sinclair's (M.) Audrey Craven, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Stafford's (J.) Carlton Priors, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Sturgis's (J.) The Folly of Pen Harrington, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Swift's (J.) Prose Works, with Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. Lecky, Vol. 1, 3/6 (Bohn's Standard Lib.)
Thackeray's (W. M.) Pendennis, illus. by C. Hammond, 2/6
Walkey's (S.) Rogues of the Fiery Cross, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Wood's (K. P.) John, a Tale of King Messiah, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Kautzsch (E.): Abriss der Geschichte des alttestamentlichen Schrifttums, 4m.
Walch (J. G.): Luther's sämmtliche Schriften, Vol. 5, 12m. 50.

Law.

Ferrini (E. C.): Institutionum Græca Paraphrasis Theophilo antecessori vulgo Tributa, Vol. 2, Part 3, 9m. 60.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Mars: Mesdames les Cyclistes, 3fr. 50.

Political Economy.

Chevallier (É.): La Monnaie de Paris en 1897, 3fr.

History and Biography.

Adam (P.): La Bataille d'Uhde, 3fr. 50.
Denis (S.): Histoire Contemporaine, Vol. 1 (1870), 8fr.
Larivière (Ch. de): Alexandre Bruckner, sa Vie, son Œuvre, 1fr.
Meaux (Vicomte de): Montalembert, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Verstraete (M.): La Russie Industrielle, Étude sur l'Exposition de Nijni-Novgorod, 7fr. 50.

Philology.

Lamer (J.): De Choriambicis Græcorum Poetarum Versibus, 2m.
Trombetti (A.): Indogermanische u. semitische Forschungen, Introduction, 3m. 20.

Science.

Biscan (W.): Die elektrischen Messinstrumente, 3m.
Griessmayer (V.): Die Proteide der Getreidearten, Hülsenfrüchte u. Oelsamen, sowie einiger Steinfrüchte, 10m.
Weinberg (R.): Das Gehirn der Letten, 2 parts, 20m.

General Literature.

Allais (A.): Le Bec en l'Air, 3fr. 50.
Champol: La Conquête du Bonheur, 3fr. 50.
Chmerkine (N.): Les Conséquences de l'Antisémitisme en Russie, 3fr.
Daudet (A.): La Fédor, 3fr. 50.
Foley (C.): Jolies Ames, 3fr. 50.
Genevois (H.): La Défense Nationale jugée par l'Allemagne, 3fr. 50.
Létang (L.): Le Collier de Cheveux, 3fr. 50.
Paris-Parisien, 1897, 6fr.
Pécaut (F.): L'Éducation Publique et la Vie Nationale, 3fr.

S.A.R. THE DUC D'AUMALE.

THE deep regret with which those who knew the Duc d'Aumale heard the news of his death acquired an added poignancy from its connexion with the ghastly catastrophe of the Rue Jean Goujon, in which there perished miserably so many well known to him and one most closely allied. No one who approached him could fail to recognize his strong attachment to "les miens," the depth and faithfulness of his family affections, or could be blind to the fact that his last days were overshadowed by the recollection of the repeated losses which had so stripped his life of such as stood near to him that he found a chief consolation in the company of those by whom they had been known and served.

I remember how the first time we went out to Chantilly, after the marriage of the Princess Hélène, the Duke received us in his own rooms early in the morning. "Come and look at the photographs of my young people," he said, the moment we came in, with a brightness which showed his satisfaction and his power of still giving himself to the lives of others. Some discussion which then arose on the family photographs ranged on two consoles in the little room suggested the name of his mother Queen Marie Amélie, and he carried us into his bedroom that we might see her portrait by Gérard – not the familiar elderly Marie Amélie with slightly absurd side-combs and a coalscuttle bonnet, but a beautiful young woman wearing the picturesque bodice, the diadem and coiffure à la grecque, which we associate rather with the Empress Joséphine. He bid us look, too, at the portraits of his wife, the Duchess, and of her mother, the Princesse de Salerne, of whom he often spoke. Gradually—standing in this room, of which the bed and the prie-Dieu were the most conspicuous furniture—a reverent sense of sorrowful pathos stole over us as our eyes fell on the relics hanging beneath the portrait of the Queen above her son's bed—the thick grey locks of her hair, of that of the Duchess, and, framed together, dark curls from the heads of the young Prince de Condé and his brother the Duc de Guise.

To his early life the Duke used frequently to recur, telling stories which contrasted the manners of then and now. He described the long journeys which he had made, driving in Italy, as a child with his aunt, Madame Adélaïde. The youngest of four little boys ranged on the back seat—in days when it was considered no hardship for children who had breakfasted at six in the morning to go without food till seven at night—he got restless, and "Montpensier" used to kick him. "I always had the worst of it; it was useless to complain to my aunt; Montpensier was her favourite. Every one, too, stood in awe of her; you know they called her the 'grande Madame.' She used a very different tongue from that which we expect from ladies now; she did not pick her words. When my brother Joinville was twenty-five, and gave his opinion in her hearing on some question of public policy, she turned on him with 'Tais-toi, petit morveux, qui ose critiquer la politique de ton père.'"

I see it has been said that the Duke, had he been born to a less estate, had never been an eminent man. That is not my impression. His marvellous powers of memory, coupled with keen perceptions and absolute freedom of thought and judgment, would have been no mean furnishing for a man ambitious of distinction in any province. To use great wealth as the servant of the soul is, if we may judge by the rarity of such examples, the indication of faculties far above the common. Whilst doing this it is not possible to aim at the achievement of a commanding position either in literature or science, but his appreciation of both had no taint of patronage, it was genuine. A lesser man might have been tempted to pose as an author on the strength of his 'Lettres sur l'Histoire de France' or his 'Vies des Princes de Condé'; the Duke had no such pretensions.

As he did the honours of his great collections, with an exquisite natural courtesy which gave charm to a certain soldierly promptness and habit of command, it was impossible not to recognize the true lover of books. The hours spent by favoured visitors in the library, when the keys, which the Duke carried himself, made their appearance, and the cases, which contained innumerable treasures, were opened one by one, were amongst the most delightful to be enjoyed at Chantilly. There must, of course, be lacunæ in all libraries, however magnificent, but it seemed impossible to name any rare printed book without having it immediately brought out, or any collector of mark without seeing specimens of his or her bindings. Nor was their owner contented with anything short of the finest possible examples in each instance. If a copy was to be sold which had in any degree the advantage of that which he already possessed, it was at once secured without bargaining, so that, as a great bookseller said to me, "the Duc d'Aumale has raised the price of all that is most valuable in the market." Yet his interest in his books was far from being confined to a superficial pleasure in their bindings, their beauty, or their rarity; one could not lay one's hand on a volume in his superb and immense library with the contents of which he was not to some extent familiar. Unless, indeed, you were specially authorized to do so, touching his books was a temptation that it was wiser to resist. He had a jealous sense of their value, and could be angry with a daring hand. On one occasion, when the glass doors before the shelves at the end of the library had been unlocked and some of his most precious treasures —each in its own locked glass case—had been brought forth and opened, I heard him cry out peremptorily to a most distinguished French Academician, who had ventured to handle a volume, "Put it down, put it down, till I come to it. They should only be unlocked one by one, as I show them to Lady Dilke."

To show these things to you, to sit down with you and turn the pages himself—especially if the little brier-root pipe he loved might be lighted—was an evident pleasure. Over the 'Hours of the Duc de Berri,' full of the lovely work of Étienne Fouquet and other painters—the most beautiful volume, perhaps, in the world—he would willingly linger, recounting how he had heard of its existence in a convent near Genoa from Sir James Lacaita; how the nuns had asked 25,000 lire for it of a banker, who was still bargaining when the Duke stepped in, paid the money, and carried off the book, which had been to him, to his wife, and her mother the delight and interest of many long winter evenings spent that year at Palermo.

Keenly as he evidently appreciated the beauty of his beautiful books and other collections, the preponderating element in his interest and admiration always appeared to me to be the historical. Facts rather than impressions were the furniture of his mind. Passing along the galleries, he stopped most readily before the portraits, quoting always the story in point, giving from his inexhaustible stores—sometimes from memoirs of the day, sometimes from family traditions—the details which formed the right setting for the picture. And this with that perfect simplicity, that liberty of judgment and frankness, which marked his every utterance.

Never did these attractive qualities show themselves more noticeably than on one occasion when we were present at a great breakfast of clerical and royalist friends. The name of Victor Emmanuel had been mentioned and had provoked unfriendly comment. The Duke, faithful and frank—slightly apologetic, too, at first—spoke at once: "I know what you ladies think of Victor Emmanuel. I have always a tender place in my heart for him. He was a real friend of France, a brave soldier, and I respect him." Others, of course, will speak at greater length and with greater authority on the Duc d'Aumale's public career, but I think that every Frenchman must repeat in his heart of this man—whom it was impossible to come very near without feeling for him something like affection—the very words which he then used of Victor Emmanuel: "He was a real friend of France, a brave soldier, and I respect him."

EMILIA F. S. DILKE.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THE important event of the amalgamation of the Royal Historical and Camden Societies has been signalized by the recent issue of two or three valuable publications. In vol. x. of the new series of Transactions there are preserved several papers embodying the results of original research, which should be of distinct value to historical specialists. The first volume of Mr. T. G. Law's 'Arch Priest Controversy,' which was edited for the Camden Society, deals with an ecclesiastical and political controversy which reminds us somewhat of the Panzani mission in the reign of Charles I. A further volume of this Northern correspondence is announced amongst the forthcoming publications of the Society. Meanwhile the elaborate edition of the Tudor agrarian inquisitions which was prepared for the Royal Historical Society by Mr. I. S. Leadam with the title of 'The Domesday of Inclosures' has just made its appearance in two substantial volumes. It will be remembered that certain transcripts of these inquisitions were printed by Mr. Leadam some years ago in the Transactions of the Society, and that the political and economic problems of the agrarian evictions to which they refer gave rise to a lively discussion amongst economic historians. Since the publication of those transcripts, the originals of the remaining inquisitions have been discovered by Mr. Leadam amongst the Chancery miscellanea in the Record Office, and have now been transcribed and edited for the Society with great care and skill. An almost faultless text is elucidated by copious topographical and genealogical notes, by tables of areas enclosed and statistics of evictions more complete, perhaps, than anything of the kind which has been attempted since the great work of the late Prof. Thorold Rogers, by an index on the lines of those prepared for Mr. Maxwell Lyte's new Record series, and by an excellent critical introduction.

It should be pointed out, however, that for a complete understanding of the whole question reference must still be made to Mr. Leadam's historical introduction, which originally appeared in vol. vi. of the Society's Transactions. Different opinions may be held upon the questions which are raised in this work, but there can be no doubt whatever as to the close attention which it will receive from scholars in this country and abroad.

The issue of the above-mentioned works is certainly a good beginning for the new scheme of printed contributions arranged by the Publication Committee, which includes Dr. S. R. Gardiner, Prof. Cunningham, the Rev. W. Hunt, Messrs. C. H. Firth, Jas. Gairdner, Frederic Harrison, H. E. Malden, and others whose names are a pledge for the value of the matter and manner alike.

SALE.

LAST week Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods dispersed the library formed by the third Earl of Bessborough. The sale occupied five days. The most important lots were: Audubon's Birds of America and Ornithological Biography, 285*l.* A collection of eighteen Engravings after W. H. Bunbury in one volume, 52*l.* 10*s.* Cheeseman's Female Heads, 21*l.* Dorat, Les Baisers, 1770, large paper, 55*l.* 13*s.* Dryden's Fables and Poems and Translations, extra illustrated, 45*l.* The Works of William Hogarth, 450 plates, published by Boydell, 65*l.* 2*s.* H. N. Humphreys's Ancient Coins and Medals, 1850, 15*l.* E. Lodge's Portraits of Illustrious Personages, a large-paper copy, india proofs, 13*l.* A volume of Drawings and Prints of Views in Malta, 19*l.* Mudford's Historical Account of the Campaign of 1815, with eight additional plates, 26*l.* A collection of Engravings illustrating the Life of Napoleon, 180*l.* T. Pennant, Account of London, 1805, extensively illustrated, 335*l.* Hypnerotomachia Poliphili, 1499, 61*l.* Portraits of Beauties of the Court of George III., 58*l.* 16*s.* Pope's Poems, Foulis, 1785, extra illustrated, 150*l.* Raffaelle, Loggie nel Vaticano, 1772–6, 21*l.* Sir Joshua Reynolds's Works, engravings in mezzotint by S. W. Reynolds, 17*l.* 17*s.* Jorrocks's Jaunts and Jollities, 1843, 18*l.* Surtees's History of Durham, large paper, 18*l.* 10*s.* Whitaker's History of Richmondshire, large paper, 17*l.* The total amount realized was 3,000*l.*

A BOOK REST.

S. writes:—

"Your reviewer, in his notice of 'The Royal Navy,' by Mr. Clowes, remarks: '"A big book is a big evil."……To hold it in the hand while reading is absolutely impossible, and many persons strongly object to reading with the book lying on the table.'

"May I be allowed to draw his attention to a very simple plan for minimizing the evil complained of?—viz. to lay the book upon a small cushion resting on the reader's knees. With the addition of a blotting-pad or a sheet of mill-board, the same arrangement furnishes a convenient writing-table, specially suitable for pencil scribbling within the comfortable confines of an easy chair.

"On that subject, a further remark occurs to me—few people know how to cut a cedar pencil, and artificial cutters, as a rule, are failures. The secret is always to cut from, not towards, oneself, giving a long slope; to cut the wood only, without touching the lead (until the lead is fully exposed); and, in the later part of the process, to push the knife-blade with the left thumb, so as to guide and steady it. The square-sided projection of lead, which appears as the result, should then be separately cut and scraped into a point of any degree of fineness that may be required. The process is neither long nor difficult."

PIERRE D'URTE.

Oxford.

I SHOULD be very glad if you could find room in the Athenæum for the following note recently communicated to me by the Rev. W. Osborn B. Allen, one of the secretaries of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge. I may mention that Mr. Allen was formerly Vicar of Shirburn, and well acquainted with the treasures of Lord Macclesfield's library, among which must be reckoned D'Urte's Basque manuscripts. The manuscripts to which I allude, and to the existence of which I had the pleasure of calling the attention of Basque scholars in 1884, are three in number: a Basque grammar; a Latin-Basque dictionary on a large scale, but only reaching to the word "commotus"; and a Basque translation of Genesis and a part of Exodus. The translation has been edited by the Rev. Llewelyn Thomas, Vice-Principal of Jesus College, and was published by the Clarendon Press in 1894 in their "Anecdota Oxoniensia." This fragment of the earliest translation of the Old Testament into Basque has been printed line for line, and it forms one of the most remarkable volumes of the series. It has been provided with an excellent introduction by the editor, who gave a detailed account of D'Urte's manuscripts, and brought together, with the help of M. Vinson, all the facts then known about the author's life. Mr. Allen's note, which I give in his own words, will be found to be a valuable addition, though a somewhat sad one, to the precarious history of the Basque proselyte.

JOHN RHYS.

S.P.C.K. House, Northumberland Avenue.

After the revocation of the Edict of Nantes many refugees came to England, and received charitable assistance. William III., Queen Anne, and George I. all gave money of their royal bounty or from public funds for the relief and support of these French Protestants. I find among the archives of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge a 'List of the Commissioners appointed for the Relief of the Poor Proselytes,' dated April 2nd, 1717. The origin of this Commission is given in 'Magnæ Britanniæ Notitia' for 1718 (pp. 293–5), where we read that King George I. had "been graciously pleased to allow that the Paymaster of the Pensions for the time being should issue the sum of 400*l.* per annum in such manner and according to such directions as the Lord Arch Bishop of Canterbury [Wake]……shall give for and towards the relief of poor converts from the Church of Rome, by virtue of which powers the Arch Bishop of Canterbury, the Lord Bishop of London [Robinson], the Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench [Baron Parker, afterwards created Earl of Macclesfield], and the Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas [Sir P. King] have agreed to appoint several eminent persons to be Commissioners for the Relief of Poor Proselytes." This explains the issue of the Commission, and as John Chamberlayne, F.R.S., the author of the 'Notitia' mentioned above, was one of the Commissioners, and also the first secretary, and for many years a member of the S.P.C.K., that may explain how the copy of the Commission came into the possession of this Society. Their old minute books, which are in many ways curious, cover the period from May 2nd, 1717, to March 7th, 1721. Amongst the names of those who were relieved I find the following entries:—

Meeting, June 21, 1717.—"Peter D'Urte of Bearne in France, formerly a Capuchin, being in years, and having a wife and one child, the Com^tee are of opinion that he be allowed six pounds."

Meeting, October 10, 1719.—"That Peter D'Urte is married without the consent of the Comm^tee, for which he was excluded in the last distribution, since which he is gone off with his daughter by a former Wife, and his present Wife being no Proselyte is not an object of the Charity of the Commissioners."

This last entry has a note in the margin: "N.B. To endorse these words on Mrs. D'Urte's Petition and to return it by Cerville." Cerville was one of the paid agents of the Commissioners.

From these extracts we may reconstruct something of the life history of Pierre D'Urte. He was a Capuchin monk of Bearne, who, when converted to the Reformed religion, took to himself a wife, and fled to England. Then apparently his first wife died, and he married again without leave. This was against one of the first standing rules of the Commissioners. Then he seems to have deserted his second wife, and "goes off."

Did D'Urte's MSS. fall into "Baron Parker's" hands because he was one of the four appointers of the Commissioners? At least it is curious that the names of the writer and of the owner of the Basque MSS. should both appear in the books belonging long ago to these Commissioners for the relief of poor proselytes. I suppose the wish to translate the Bible into Basque came to P. D'Urte after he left the Church of Rome. The good work which he then began was not finished until Prince Lucien Buonaparte took it in hand in our own day.

W. O. B. A.

 We are sorry to hear this week of the decease of Mr. Thomas.

Literary Gossip.

By Mr. Coventry Patmore's will his widow was made his literary executrix, all his copyrights, manuscripts, correspondence, &c, being left to her. Mrs. Patmore is now preparing a memoir of her husband, a task in which she will be assisted by Mr. Basil Champneys and Mr. Frederick Greenwood.

In addition to the monument by Mr. Basil Champneys, which we describe in another column, a number of Patmore's friends have subscribed in order that that portion of Lymington Cemetery in which his body lies may be planted with trees suited to the occasion and the place. Permission to this effect has been obtained from the local authorities. It has occurred to those concerned that many more of the poet's friends and the admirers of his poetry may wish to share in this tribute. Accordingly we are asked to invite all who wish to do so to send their subscriptions—very small sums only are receivable—to the Rev. Father O'Connell, The Presbytery, Lymington; or to Mr. F. G. Stephens, 10, The Terrace, Hammersmith, W.

Mr. Crockett has written a new story for boys which will probably be published at Christmas by Messrs. Wells Gardner & Darton.

Anthony Hope's sequel to 'The Prisoner of Zenda' will appear in the Pall Mall Magazine. It is to begin in the late summer, and will run through ten or twelve numbers.

In the June number of the Lady's Realm there will be a contribution by Miss Adeline Edwards describing a series of drawings made at Ramsgate in 1822 by her grandmother, the Lady Elizabeth Heathcote, who happened to be on a visit there with her own child at the same time as the Duchess of Kent with the little Princess Victoria. Lady Heathcote was honoured with the friendship of her Royal Highness, and the two children became playfellows, Lady Heathcote availing herself of the opportunities afforded her of making sketches of them. These are now to be reproduced in the Lady's Realm for the first time, by the gracious permission of Her Majesty, to whom the drawings have been submitted. They are among the earliest known pictures of the Queen, and showing her as they do in her play at "peep" and "queens," being taken for a ride on a donkey by her mother, and on her nurse's knee ready for bed, they give a charming glimpse of some of her early days.

A new edition of Sir Edward Hertslet's 'Map of Africa by Treaty' has appeared, and the first edition has been, as far as possible, called in, the copies having been got back from libraries within the reach of Government, so that we advise those of our readers who possess the first edition to "hold on" to what will become scarce. The difference between the first and second editions lies mainly in the maps, which have been entirely revised in consequence of imperfections in the first series.

Mr. William Davies died at Chester on the 9th inst. in his sixty-eighth year. For many years a well-known resident in Rome, he was the author of some works of singularly delicate quality: 'The Pilgrimage of the Tiber,' 'Songs of a Wayfarer,' and other books, the last of which was 'The Pilgrim of the Infinite,' published about two years ago. He also edited the letters of his friend James Smetham. He was an excellent Italian scholar, and knew Dante almost by heart. Mr. Davies's claim to be remembered rests not only upon his works, but on his sympathy with and generosity, according to his means, to the members of that literary and artistic circle with which it was the pleasure of his life to associate. If any one of them fell into trouble or sickness, "Jeff" Davies was certain to hear of it, and equally certain to be one of the first to visit him, and to nurse or assist him as the occasion required.

The Royal Asiatic Society has determined, as a means of commemorating the completion of the sixtieth year of Her Majesty's reign, to found a gold medal for distinguished Oriental scholarship, to be awarded triennially for the best work on an Oriental subject in the English language.

The activity of primary authorities in secondary education does not appear to have been checked by recent discussions, or by any exercise of control from Whitehall; but a concordat just established between the Governors of Burnley Grammar School and the Burnley School Board, in relation to the establishment of a new higher-grade Board school, bears witness to increased care in the prevention of overlapping.

The Oxford University accounts for the past year show, in general, a slight increase of revenue over the figures for 1895, though the income "from internal sources" has diminished by about 1,150*l*. At Cambridge, since the preparation of the statement recently circulated with the Duke of Devonshire's letter, the University has received a donation from Dr. Nansen for the encouragement of geographical teaching.

It is understood that a conference has been arranged between the Scottish Parliamentary representatives and a deputation from the St. Andrews Senate, in connexion with the anomalous state of things in the St. Andrews University Court, a bare majority of which consider themselves bound to follow a course which has been declared by the Universities Commissioners to be illegal.

Mr. C. H. W. Johns, of Queens' College, Cambridge, has prepared an edition of the cuneiform texts of the Assyrian "Contract" tablets preserved in the British Museum. These documents are over eight hundred in number, and the greater part of them were found on the site of the Royal Library at Nineveh; a few were drawn up at the end of the eighth century B.C., but it is clear that the great bulk of them belong to the time of Sennacherib and to the reigns of his son and grandson. Over four hundred of these contracts are dated, and Mr. Johns has thus been enabled to give a list of Post-Canon eponyms, which will extend to probably B.C. 610. Mr. Johns has prepared a list of all the proper names which occur in the texts, and he believes that all the transactions referred to in the Assyrian contracts were conducted by Court officials for their royal masters, the same name usually indicating the same person. The work is to be published in the autumn.

Mr. C. R. Labib, of Cairo, has just published the first part of a bilingual elementary work in Coptic and Arabic for the use of Coptic students in Egypt. To those who can read Arabic the book will be most useful, but those who cannot will regret that an English equivalent to the Coptic text was not added. The little work is dated in the year 1613 of the Era of the Martyrs, and can be obtained at any bookseller's in Cairo.

The Clarendon Press is at last going to bring out the edition of 'The Opus Majus of Roger Bacon' which Dr. J. H. Bridges, sometime Fellow of Oriel College, has been promising for some time. It will fill two volumes.

Yet another portion of the apparently exhaustless collection of manuscripts and autograph letters formed by the late Sir Thomas Phillipps will come under the hammer of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge on the first four days of next week. It includes a great many interesting MSS., notably a fourteenth century Aristotle, with illuminations by an Italian artist; several MSS. of Cicero of the fourteenth and following centuries; the original Wardrobe Book and Jewel Roll of Edward II.; an exceedingly fine Proclamation, dated Greenwich, February 12th, 1565, of Queen Elizabeth, with the queen's signature; a very fine fourteenth century MS. of Higden's 'Polychronicon'; several highly interesting items relating to Mary, Queen of Scots; an apparently uncollated MS. of Ovid, written by an Italian scribe in the fifteenth century; a volume containing the original quarto issues of several plays by or attributed to Shakspeare; and an exceptionally varied and interesting selection of topographical, genealogical, and other MSS.

Mr. Norman Macleod, son of the late Dr. Norman Macleod, died last month of pneumonia at the Mercy Hospital, Chicago. He was well known there as a literary man some ten years ago, and for a time edited a magazine called The Rambler. In 1890 he started a literary agency company in London, but the result was unfortunate to those who invested in it. He returned to Chicago last year, and was engaged in the promotion of a mining enterprise in British Columbia. He was comparatively a young man, had a charming manner, and in appearance much resembled his father.

The Booksellers' Dinner last Saturday was a considerable success. Mr. Lecky, in giving the toast of literature, said nothing was more remarkable than the silent, steady sale of good books long after people had ceased talking about them. Lord Roberts, in reply, made modest reference to his recent volumes, and spoke of the marvellous effect Capt. Mahan's books had produced upon the nation. Archdeacon Sinclair proposed success to the Booksellers' Provident Institution and the Seaside Holiday Home, having made sympathetic reference to the loss which literature had sustained by the death of Mr. Theodore Bent. The archdeacon urged a large increase of membership to the Institution. There was a capital of 30,000*l.*, and if the society were joined by all, no member of the trade, however humble, need ever, under any circumstances, fall into distress.

Mr. Wallace, the sub-editor of 'Burdett's Official Intelligence,' in the absence of Mr. Burdett, who we regret to hear is ill, writes:—

"I beg to thank you for the notice of the above volume which appears in your issue of the 8th inst. With reference to your statement, 'The United States Brewing Company is duly dealt with at pp. 978–9, but we cannot find it in the index,' I would refer you to p. xlix, col. 2, fifty-first entry, where you will find the company duly indexed in proper alphabetical order. With regard to the variations in the spelling of the word anonima, we have throughout strictly followed the spelling adopted by the various companies as being (presumably) the official titles under which they were incorporated."

Of course we knew that the spelling adopted by the different companies was followed, but we questioned the wisdom of such a course.

Mr. Ebsworth, after nineteen years' hard work, has nearly completed the concluding volume of the 'Roxburghe Ballads.' The Ballad Society was started in 1868, the late William Chappell being the editor of the first three volumes, when, owing to failing health, he handed the editorship over to Mr. Ebsworth, who has worked all these years gratuitously, and added fourteen hundred ballads to the collection, besides drawing and engraving innumerable woodcuts. This new volume will contain a complete index to historical names and events for the entire eight volumes.

The historian Dr. Karl Menzel, born in 1835 at Speyer, has just died at Bonn, where he occupied the chair of mediæval history together with that of palæography. He was the author of several valuable historical monographs and of a history of Nassau in three volumes.

Some time ago we announced that the inhabitants of Säckingen intended to erect a monument in memory of the poet Victor von Scheffel, who made the place famous by his 'Trompeter von Säckingen.' We now hear that a committee has been formed at the town of Staffelstein in Upper Franconia for the purpose of erecting a Scheffel-Denkmal on the summit of the neighbouring Staffelberg.

Dr. Wilhelm Baur, the Superintendent-General of the Evangelical province of the Rhineland, who died at Coblence on the 18th of April, was a prolific writer of historical and biographical works, some of which passed through several editions, as his lives of Stein, of Perthes, and of Arndt. His historical sketches of religious life during the German Wars of Liberation were translated into English, and still retain their popularity in his fatherland. His sermons and devotional writings have also had a wide circulation.

The Schiller-Archiv in Marbach has obtained for the sum of 25,000 marks the posthumous manuscripts of the poet Uhland, including his diaries from 1810 to 1820, several valuable political memoranda, and nearly nine hundred letters of his correspondence with his friends and his family.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include a Code of Regulations for Evening Continuation Schools, Scotland (2*d.*); Report of the Committee appointed to inquire into the Distribution of Science and Art Grants, together with a Revised Edition of the Science and Art Directory (11*d.*); and Minutes of Evidence, &c., taken by the Committee on Post Office Establishments (10*s.* 2*d.*).

SCIENCE

MR. E. J. STONE.

It was with great regret that we heard of the somewhat sudden death, on Sunday last, of this distinguished astronomer. Born in London on February 28th, 1831, he studied for a time at King's College, and then went to Queens' College, Cambridge, where he graduated as Fifth Wrangler in 1859, and was appointed the year after Chief Assistant at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, in succession to Main, whom he was subsequently to follow also as Radcliffe Observer at Oxford, though not immediately from Greenwich; for after zealously co-operating with Airy for ten years in the multifarious duties imposed upon the Astronomer Royal and his staff, Stone was nominated to the Directorship of the Royal Observatory at the Cape of Good Hope on the resignation of Sir Thomas Maclear in 1870. He returned to England in 1879, and was appointed Radcliffe Observer, a post which had become vacant by the death of Main in the preceding year. This he held until his own death on the 9th inst., the nineteenth anniversary, by a remarkable coincidence, of that of his predecessor. Few men have accomplished so much solid and substantial work for the progress of astronomy, as is sufficiently evidenced by the production of the Cape catalogue of 12,441 stars, which appeared in 1881, and the catalogue of 6,424 stars from observations made at the Radcliffe Observatory, reduced to the epoch 1890, and published in 1894. These of course are mentioned first as Mr. Stone's magna opera. No fewer than ninety-two contributions are credited to him in the Royal Society's 'Catalogue of Scientific Papers,' though that list is completed only to 1883. Soon after he came to Greenwich he took up the subject of the determination of the sun's parallax from the observations of Mars, and not long afterwards executed an important rediscussion of the observations of the transit of Venus in 1769, by which he succeeded in showing that, when rightly interpreted, they gave a considerably larger value than it had been usual to attribute to them from Encke's investigation, practically in agreement with that obtained from the observations of Mars. This has since been amply confirmed by the transits of Venus in 1874 and 1882, and by results obtained from other methods, in some of which Mr. Stone took part, besides organizing the whole of the English observations of the latter transit. It would occupy too much space to enumerate the other investigations which he carried out whilst still at Greenwich; but we cannot omit his continuation of Main's work in determining the proper motions of stars by comparing the results of Bradley's observations (as reduced by Bessel) with the later ones contained in Airy's catalogues. The Gold Medal of the Royal Astronomical Society was awarded to Mr. Stone in 1869, and he served successively the offices of Honorary Secretary and President of that body. His star-catalogues at the Cape and at Oxford formed only a portion of his work at those observatories; for in recent years he had devoted much attention to the lunar theory, obtaining results which have not met with general acceptance, but appear to demand further consideration. Mr. Stone was elected a Fellow of the Royal Society in 1868, and received the Lalande Prize of the French Academy in 1881. He was, it will be remembered, one of the few successful observers of the total eclipse of the sun last August, the weather being favourable in Novaya Zemlya, whither he went as one of the party which accompanied Sir George Baden-Powell in his yacht.

SOCIETIES.

Geographical.—May 10.—Sir Clements Markham, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Capt. H. R. Gale, Capt. E. Le Mesurier, Lieut. R. A. E. Beun, Lieut. R. R. Hubbard, Lieut. D. G. Seagrim, Lieut. F. C. W. Ware, Rev. W. Vivian, Messrs. G. R. Blades, S. V. Coote, H. Cox, J. E. Dawson, E. W. Greg, D. M. Hall, W. S. Hill, J. A. Ludlow, G. B. Macpherson-Grant, G. J. Poulton, D. C. Stapleton, and H. M. Upcher.—The paper read was 'Recent Journeys in Sze-Chuan, Western China,' by Mrs. Bishop.

Geological.—April 28.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Messrs. H. F. Bulman and C. A. Heussler were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'Note on a Portion of the Nubian Desert south-east of Korosko,' by Capt. H. G. Lyons, with 'Notes on the Petrology,' by Miss C. A. Raisin, and 'Water-Analyses,' by Miss E. Aston (communicated by Prof. Bonney),—and 'On the Origin of some of the Gneisses of Anglesey,' by Mr. C. Callaway.

Society of Antiquaries.—May 6.—Viscount Dillon, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Blair reported the discovery on April 28th, at the Roman station of Cilurnum at Chesters, of an inscription recording the conveyance of water into the camp by the troop garrisoning the place. The inscription, which is quite perfect, reads: AQVA . ADDVCTA | ALAE . II. ASTVR | SVB. VLP. MARCELLO | LEG. AVG. PRPR. Prof. Hübner thinks it is temp. Marcus Aurelius.—Mr. W. Gowland read the second and concluding part of his paper 'On the Dolmens and Burial Mounds in Japan.' All Japanese dolmens are of the Iron Age. Stone and bronze weapons (excepting occasionally bronze arrowheads) are never found in them. Cremation was not practised. When a warrior was laid in the chamber of a dolmen his wants in a future world were supplied in unstinted measure.

He was clothed in his robes, adorned with his personal ornaments; his weapons of war and of the chase, and the bits and trappings of his horse, were placed near him; and around the chamber were arranged food, water, and wine in vessels of pottery of various forms. The author described in detail the contents of one of the dolmens he had explored. The most important remains found in other dolmens were also described. Swords, spears, and arrowheads of iron, horse-bits, and the ornamental appendages of the trappings of horses, also of iron, generally plated with copper coated with gold, and amulets and rings of silver, and of copper sheathed with gold, are the chief objects of metal which usually occur. Sometimes, but rarely, cuirasses and helmets of iron are found. Besides these, round, cylindrical, and curved beads of glass, steatite, rock crystal, jasper, and other stones are of universal occurrence. Vessels of pottery are also numerous in all dolmens, the principal forms being covered dishes, tazzas, and jars for holding food, and a variety of barrel-shaped jars, flasks, and libation vases for water and wine. Less common are certain special forms of vases which were intended for ornamental use, and probably for offerings of flowers. This pottery is almost invariably a hard grey earthenware, made on the potter's wheel, never glazed or painted, and decorated with simple arrangements of straight or waved incised lines. The ornamental vases sometimes bear on their shoulders groups of men and animals rudely modelled. Figures roughly executed in coarse terra-cotta are found on the outsides of some mounds, where they had been set up as substitutes for the retainers and horses which in earlier times were buried alive in the same position at the funeral of a chief. The time when dolmen-building began in Japan did not admit of a very precise determination, but the author would venture to assign an approximate date for it, although he did so with all reserve, viz., about the commencement of our era, with a possible error of one or two centuries. Dolmen-building practically ended about the seventh century A.D. These estimations were based on evidence—given at length in the paper—which was derived from the dolmens and their contents. The builders were the ancestors of the present Japanese. They seem to have left their home on the mainland of Asia, and migrated to the islands through Korea, long before they began to build dolmens, but it was not until the dolmen age that they succeeded in driving the aborigines to the northern extremity of the country. The dolmen period was characterized by a well-developed civilization and a culture which had advanced far beyond the limits of barbarism, and was in marked contrast with the age during which similar structures were built in Western Europe, when stone or bronze weapons only seem to have been in use.

Zoological.—May 4.—Mr. H. Druce in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during the month of April, and called attention to a young male specimen of the wild ass of Somaliland (Equus somalicus) and to a pair of Smith's bronze-winged pigeon (Geophaps smithi).—Mr. O. Thomas exhibited a selection of the mammals recently collected by Mr. A. Whyte during his expedition to the Nyika plateau and the Masuku mountains, North Nyasa. Mr. Thomas described as new a squirrel (Xerus lucifer), brilliantly rufous throughout, with a black dorsal patch; a reed-rat (Thryonomys sclateri), allied to T. gregorianus, but with a longer tail, whitish instead of yellowish underside, and narrower and differently shaped skull; a mole-rat (Georychus whytei), like G. nimrodi, but with longer and broader frontal premaxillary processes; a pouched mouse (Saccostomus elegans), of a general buff colour and with a longer head than S. campestris; and Mus nyikæ, a rat of the size of Mus chrysophilus, but darker in colour and with a more rounded skull. A new subgeneric term (Gerbilliscus) was suggested for Gerbillus boehmi, Noack, of which Mr. Whyte had sent home specimens. Mr. Thomas also stated that the peculiar bulbous-tipped tail-hairs described in Petrodromus proved to be confined to and characteristic of East African examples of the genus, which might therefore be specifically separated from the Zambezi forms as P. sultani.—Mr. H. Saunders exhibited, on behalf of Mr. H. Evans, a series of instantaneous photographs, taken in the Outer Hebrides, of the great grey seal (Halichœrus gryphus). — Mr. J. E. S. Moore gave a general account of the zoological results of his expedition to Lake Tanganyika in 1895 and 1896. Mr. Moore stated that the main object of the expedition had been to obtain materials for the morphological study of certain hitherto uninvestigated animal forms. It appeared that a key to the general interpretation of the lake-faunas of Central Africa would be most readily obtained by a study of their molluscan types. These showed that the faunas of most of the vast inland reservoirs of Africa were composed of normal lacustrine stocks, but that in Lake Tanganyika there were strange forms which certainly could not be included among such groups. All these forms appeared to have marine affinities; but, as they could not be directly associated with any living oceanic species, it was argued that they were probably the survivors of the marine fauna of some more ancient times, when Tanganyika was connected with the ocean. This theory was supported by the similarity of certain Tanganyika gastropods to ancient fossil shells.—Communications were read: from Mr. W. E. Collinge, 'On some European Slugs of the Genus Arion'; this memoir treated of the constancy of anatomical characters in the genus; of the reversion of a colour-variation noticed in a specimen of Arion empiricorum; of the specific validity of Arion fuscus; of a new species proposed to be called Arion cæruleus; and concluded with a synopsis and classification of the genus Arion and a list of the literature on the subject,—from Mr. F. J. Jackson, on the antelopes of Mau district, British East Africa, and on some of the species mentioned,—by the Rev. H. S. Gorham, on the Coleoptera of the family Endomychidæ of the Eastern Hemisphere: eighteen species were described, of which eleven were characterized as new,—and by Mr. F. E. Beddard, on the presence of intercentra in the vertebral column of birds. The existence of free intercentra in the caudal region was described in a number of genera belonging to many families of birds.

Philological.—May 7.—Anniversary Meeting.—Mr. I. Gollancz in the chair.—The following officers were elected for the ensuing session: President, Lord Aldenham; Vice-Presidents, Dr. W. Stokes, Dr. H. Sweet, Dr. J. A. H. Murray, Prof. W. W. Skeat, Rev. A. H. Sayce, Mr. H. Bradley, Prof. Napier; Ordinary Members of Council, J. Amours, E. L. Brandreth, F. Chance, T. Ely, Prof. G. Foster, P. Giles, I. Gollancz, F. Heath, Dr. S. Hodgson, Prof. W. P. Ker, R. Martineau, Prof. W. S. McCormick, W. R. Morfill, Dr. J. Peile, Prof. J. P. Postgate, Prof. Ridgeway, Prof. C. Rieu, J. H. Staples, W. H. Stevenson, and Prof. J. Strachan; Treasurer, Mr. B. Dawson; Hon. Secretary, Dr. F. J. Furnivall.—Prof. Skeat read a paper on the lately recovered MS. of the 'Proverbs of Alfred,' which has for many years been accidentally missing from the library of Trinity College, Cambridge. When editing the poem for the Early English Text Society, Dr. Morris was unable to consult the MS., and had to depend on the texts by Wright and Kemble. The two latter texts are not wholly independent, as Kemble has taken some wrong readings from Wright's text, which is the more trustworthy upon the whole. The MS. proves to be one of great interest, as it was written out by a Norman scribe, and presents, in consequence, many remarkable spellings. Before commencing to write out the poem, the scribe made a note of the four new symbols which he had to employ, and to which he was unaccustomed. These are the A.-S. forms of g, w, th, and the symbol for and, which the scribe calls ant. He also marks the g and th with the names iye, ithorn, where the prosthetic vowel i is introduced to make the names ye and thorn more easy of pronunciation for him. He frequently miswrites one of these symbols for another, producing such forms as sginkin for swinkin, rogen for rowen, and many more; but they can easily be put right. By tabulating the peculiarities of spelling, it is easy to make out which sounds were, for a Norman scribe, the hardest to seize. He writes, for example, st (with long s) for the final ght; t for final th, or occasionally d for the same; and he is troubled as to initial h, which is frequently inserted in the wrong place. For the English final t he frequently writes th, as if the English t sounded more violently explosive than his own; for in this case the sound meant is not the E. th, but a sort of aspirated t. Sometimes he even supplies the place of t by d, writing wid for wit, and hid for hit, i.e., it. He also writes hunt for hund, a hundred, and ant for and. The strong trill of the French r is seen in cherril for churl, arren for arn, are. The difficulty of sounding lth appears in welethe for welthe, wealth. Some final combinations were difficult; hence chil for child, wen for went. The English ng was evidently difficult also; hence kinc for king, kinhis for kingis. Wh was for him a mere w; hence wat for what, &c. Ww is reduced to w, written w; as in wrsipe for worship. Sh is frequently s, as in sal for shal; this is not a sign of Northern dialect, for the whole piece is in the Southern dialect, which is rather strongly marked. Many other peculiarities were discussed, and a collation of the principal variations from Wright's text was added. Other poems were mentioned which also show traces of having been written by a Norman scribe. A clear case is that of the 'Lay of Havelok'; other probable examples appear in the later text of Layamon, the 'Old Kentish Sermons,' and the 'Story of Genesis and Exodus'; and there are probably more all of the thirteenth century or of the beginning of the fourteenth.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Geographical, 8½.—Anniversary.
— Victoria Institute, 4½.—'Indian History,' Dr. Pope.
— British Architects, 8.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Design in Lettering,' Lecture III., Mr. L. F. Day.—Cantor Lecture.
Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—Volcanoes: Dr. T. Anderson.
— United Service Institution, 3.—On the Instruction of our Soldiers to Shoot under Active Conditions of Service, Col. E. C. Browne.
— Zoological, 8½.—Revision of the Lizards of the Genus Scelo-porus: Mr. G. A. Boulenger.—'Contributions to our Knowledge of the Plankton of the Faeroe Channel, II.,' by G. H. Fowler.—'Further Contributions to the Knowledge of the Phytophagous Coleoptera of Africa, including Madagascar, Part II.,' Mr. M. Jacoby.
— Folk-lore, 8.—Folk-lore of the Uraons,' Mr. H. Raynbird (an).
Wed. Meteorological, 4½.—'The Rainfall of Dominica, West Indies,' Mr. C. V. Bellamy.—'Mean Monthly Temperatures of the British Isles, 1871-95,' Messrs. R. H. Scott and F. Gaster.
— Microscopical, 7½.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'London Water Supply,' Dr. P. F. Frankland.
Thurs. Royal Institution, 3.—'French Revolution and English Literature,' Mr. C. Collins.
— United Service Institution, 3.—'The Battle of Shiloh (or Pittsburgh Landing, April 6th-7th, 1862,' Lieut.-Col. F. Tully.
— Royal, 4½.
— Society of Arts, 4½.—'Kerman and Persian Beluchistan, with special Reference to the Journeys of Alexander the Great and Marco Polo,' Capt. P. M. Sykes.
— Historical, 5.—'Some Political Theories of the Early Jesuits,' Rev. J. N. Figgis.
— Numismatic, 7.
— Chemical, 8.—'The Theory of Osmotic Pressure and the Hypothesis of Electrolytic Dissociation.'—'Molecular Rotation of Optically Active Salts.'—'Heats of Neutralization of Acids and Bases in Dilute Aqueous Solution,' Mr. H. Crompton.—'The Platinum-Silver Alloys: their Solubility in Nitric Acid,' Mr. J. Spiller.—'A Comparative Crystallographical Study of the Normal Selenates of Potassium, Rubidium, and Cæsium,' Mr. A. E. Tutton.
Fri. Royal Institution, 9.—'Contact Electricity of Metals,' Lord Kelvin.
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Music in England during the Reign of Queen Victoria,' Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland.

Science Gossip.

Capt. P. Molesworth Sykes, a member of the recent Perso-Baluch Frontier Commission, has made, he thinks, some discoveries about the journeys of Alexander the Great and Marco Polo, and will embody this fresh information in a paper he is to read before the Indian Section of the Society of Arts on Thursday afternoon. Capt. Sykes was, we believe, the first to climb Kuh-i-Taftan, an active volcano distant 200 miles from the sea.

Prof. Ray Lankester's fiftieth birthday is to be celebrated to-night by a dinner at the Savile Club.

M. des Cloizeaux, the distinguished Professor of Mineralogy at the Paris Museum of Natural History, has just died at the age of eighty.

Prof. H. Kreutz, who has superintended the publication of the Astronomische Nachrichten since the death of Prof. Krüger, has now been definitely appointed his successor as editor. This is announced in No. 3419.

FINE ARTS

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Second Notice.)

The visitor who is inquiring after novel bits of genre in this exhibition will find that Mr. Eyre Crowe has hit upon a new and telling subject for his most important work of the year, a comparatively large representation of a Trial for Bigamy (No. 580) in an English court. The first wife, a comely young woman with a child in her arms, is in the witness-box, and nervously gives evidence against the culprit, who does not seem to like his position. The second wife and a sympathetic friend or sister are seated in the lower part of the court; the former hides her face in her handkerchief and weeps silently. The jurymen differ as much as they ought to differ, and every face in their box is full of character; and so are the queer visages of the "public," all of them more or less unwashed and vulgar. The tragi-comedy of the subject has been sympathetically studied; there are traces of humour here and there, not a little satire, and plenty of spirit. The Gipsy's Rest (815), a smaller picture by Mr. Crowe, has the advantage of a pitiful subject, a half-starved, worn-out horse, which, released from the shafts of the van in the distance, has lain down upon a common, and seems to be breathing his last alone. A little in the rear two other horses—fellow slaves with their dying companion—stand apart, so close together that they seem to be whispering about his fate. Two vans and a group of gipsies cooking their food and heedless of the horses complete the picture. The artist's third contribution is styled The Crow-Boy (883). The look and gestures of the ragged country urchin, calling aloud and using a rattle to frighten crows from a cornfield, are decidedly good. The rough surfaces and somewhat opaque colour of these pictures are unfortunate, and tell greatly against them.

Another member of the Academy who has produced what is for him a novelty—a cleverly painted picture that is not at all sentimental—is Mr. Marcus Stone, whose Thoughts (5), his single contribution, a young lady's head in profile, is a pleasing ornament to Gallery I. Its meditative expression justifies the title.—Mr. Bastida, whose name is new to us, has not an atom of sentiment in him, and in technique his Segovian Family (6) is the reverse of Mr. Stone's picture; apart from this there is a good deal of spirit and naturalness about the Spanish subject, which is quite wanting in the English work. If the surface were less rough, and if the textures of No. 6 were choicer, its considerable merits would be very visible.—That robustness which does so much for Mr. Bastida's design is conspicuous by its absence in Mr. A. Hacker's works. "And there was a great cry in Egypt" (23) is intended to illustrate the visit of the Destroying Angel to an Egyptian city as recorded in Exodus xii. 30. The figure of the destroyer does not suggest an angel nor destruction, but it is a nondescript form—if that which is formless deserves the name — sweeping past some very undefined walls, which seem to be blanched in the moonlight. There is a painful lack of virility in the style and execution, although the subject is one of the most tragic art can deal with. The theme of Mr. Hacker's pretty romance, The Sea Maiden (688), may be within his reach, but, if so, he has hardly done himself justice by his very thin and feeble-minded nymph who presents herself in a state of complete nudity to the astonished eyes of a young goatherd on the seashore. It is not clear why she offers him a shell, but it is more difficult to say why her figure should be weakly drawn and painted so thinly. The pretty colour and brightness of the picture do not redeem its extreme feebleness. A nudity ought surely to be drawn and painted with due recognition of its beauty and humanity.—Mr. H. Draper, who painted the sea nymph seated on a rock in the front of Calypso's Isle (39), fully recognizes this canon, and has done his best to obey it; consequently, although his picture is not a masterpiece, and the nymph's carnations are much too pale, and her form is not so plump as it should be, his picture is bright and rich in its colouring. The background is a well-chosen view of a dark green sea and the rosy cliffs which rise out of it. There is a touch of Etty in the pleasing and strong colour of No. 39.—The evolution of Miss A. Sawyer's idea in "The love that flies away" (44) is not particularly clear, but although Miss Sawyer's meaning is not obvious, there is no doubt about the brightness of her colouring and the spirited execution of her group.

On the other hand, gentle domestic humour characterizes Mr. J. Hayllar's "I'm Mary, Tween of Tots" (45). There is only a foot or two of space, but there is a world of difference between the style and temperament of the artists. There is more brightness and simplicity about No. 45 than we remember in any other picture of Mr. Hayllar's. Besides, the design is spontaneous, and his work is clever, if not profound, perhaps too clever, at any rate crisp and pleasing.—Sweet Mistress Prew [Prue] (51) of Mrs. H. Margetson is pretty, but rather slight.—The Old Barn (52) proves that Mr. Clausen can take pains, and, when he does so, succeeds in painting such a simple and homely theme as this interior frankly and firmly, broadly, and without dirty colours, opaque shadows, or a coarse surface. The figures are tolerably good. The picture is soft, luminous where it should be so, and exceedingly broad, homogeneous, and simple in representing outer sunlight reflected within the building, and making golden the dust-charged atmosphere. We like The Mother (582) much less because of its insincere sentiment and almost coarse execution.—Mr. La Thangue's works are, pictorially speaking, rough, coarsely painted, opaque, and painty. The best of the three, however, though far from being good in the higher artistic sense, has more merit than usual, but is in many respects awkward, crude in thought as in technique, and in nearly all respects decidedly ugly. Of course, such a subject as Travelling Harvesters (439) admits of, if it does not require, a certain amount of ungainliness, if not ugliness, in the figures. But, firstly, if the title is to be justified, we demur to the notion of a travelling harvester trudging with his womenkind, especially if he has just left a boat, with a naked scythe on his shoulder. A scythe is much too awkward an implement to be carried about the country in this fashion. He might, perhaps, carry the ugly iron cooking-pot we see in his hands, but surely he would have sense and caution enough to dismount his scythe and tie it to its handle long before he began to travel. Mr. La Thangue has, as we said before, improved in painting (at least, it is manifest that he is trying to paint artistically), and there are qualities of tone and colour in No. 439 which prove that he sees the brightness of the light, if not the purity of the shadows, and has endeavoured to get rid of his usual slovenliness. There is, however, nothing whatever in the work which a modest artist could not have put upon a canvas one-fifth the size. Mr. La Thangue was less obtrusive and less selfish than in claiming for the above space enough for three or four pictures when he sent A Summer Morning (56) to the Academy. The subject fails to commend itself, either on technical or anecdotic grounds; and it would be difficult to say why he made his colours so dirty and indulged in so much slovenly draughtsmanship as appears here. This painter's model appears to be Constable, an artist who never painted shadows, water, or figures in the fashion to be regretted here. The crudities of Gleaners (1081) are less conspicuous.—There is better taste, more reticence, and much less self-assertion in Miss A. L. Henniker's Companions (64), a nice study in its way.—A Spring Cleaning (68), by Mr. L. J. Gunnis, has a touch of humour in the manner of the late Mr. Buss, who painted in a primitive way commonplaces of this sort. The foreground lacks solidity and the background softness.

In The Purple Gown (106) Mr. G. P. Gaskell has introduced solid and firmly painted figures; the treatment of the whole is homogeneous, and the lighting truthful. The colour, too, is good, and if the painter is young it is a work of much promise.—A Pledge (108), by Mrs. Alma Tadema, though not equal to her contribution to the New Gallery, is an excellent specimen of art carefully, logically, and consistently employed for its own sake, and independently of the subject, incident, or anecdote represented. It is an admirable exercise in various whites and fawn colours, not unlike those which the brothers Le Nain delighted in, but painted with a certain clearness, brightness, and lightness of touch to which they never attained. The attitudes are spirited and true to nature, and the picture is broad, harmonious, and animated. — Of Audrey's Toilet (115), by Mr. A. Hughes, we have spoken briefly before. Mr. Hughes understands his Shakspeare much too well, and has too much sympathy with his subject, to paint Audrey like the blowsy wench Mr. Holman Hunt, for moral purposes of his own, depicted in the act of receiving the quaint attentions of "the hireling shepherd." Mr. Hughes's work is strikingly full of light, vivid as nature in its colouring, and drawn with unusual skill and care. Two things militate against the popularity of the painter of 'April Love': they are (1) his excessive fondness for prismatic tints, which mars the simplicity of the coloration, and (2) his habit of indulging in an excess of stippling, so that the surfaces of some of his pictures are actually vermiculated.—In A Fantasy (116) Mr. G. S. Watson has not been ambitious, so to say, of a meaning, but seems to be quite willing the public should make what they can of it. The figures as figures deserved more care and a finer sort of finish.

Our apologies are due to Mr. M. Loudan for having, owing to an accidental transposition of numbers and notes, described his Butterflies (117) in terms which apply to Mr. J. H. Lorimer's A Dance (497). We may now criticize both the works, which both have dancing for their incidents, and (although the latter is the weaker and yet more purposeful) are alike in their defects. 'Butterflies,' a girl performing a sort of skirt-dance while a number of butterflies hover about her head, is much too dirty in its colours and tones to be as beautiful as it should be, while its execution is crude and the touch is heavy. The taste of the artist is, to some extent, vindicated by the liveliness of the child's face and attitude and the homogeneity of the whole. At the best, however, it is manifest that Mr. Loudan has evaded or suppressed nearly every element in his work which is difficult of achievement. Of Mr. Lorimer's dancing picture it was safely said that "it looks well at a distance," where the slovenly execution and curiously bad drawing of an interior and the figures are not distinguishable, and the energy of the dancer and the breadth of the interior's light, shadow, and tonality can be appreciated. Going near this curiously contradictory example, the student sees that much of it, as in Mr. Loudan's contribution, is slovenly and weak. It is a marvel how, with so many occasions (not simply opportunities) for educing beauty, Mr. Lorimer allowed himself to be content with such a figure as that of the attenuated maiden aunt who dances to the music of another withered virgin seated at a piano. The sycophantic nurse-girl who acts as spectator to the depressing performance is really a humorous figure, creditable as such to the cruel wit of her inventor; but she would have been quite as amusing and much better as art if her head had been reasonably well fitted to the rest of her person, and if her features had been, artistically speaking, in harmony with each other. As it is, no successful sketching of a very simple set of attitudes and a by no means recondite effect of light and shade can compensate for the uglinesses and weaknesses of 'A Dance.'

Mr. Bridgman's Bacchanti (133) depicts a long line of modern models disporting themselves while, in the antique manner, they race through a wood and gambol with certain lions. There is a good deal of vivacity and cleverness about their gestures; but if these are not portraits of professional sitters they must be likenesses of dancers from the opera. Their tall, slender figures and general leanness do not indicate sympathy on the painter's part with those sculptured types of antiquity which, robust and vigorous as they are, are at the hand of every student. Had Mr. Bridgman, who generally figures at the Salon, called his picture 'Bacchanti of the Boulevard des Italiens,' we should have believed him; but we cannot accept as mænads of antique Greece the dashing and much-excited girls, whose characters, as Mrs. Grundy is too apt to say, will not bear examination. His execution is thin, though neat and crisp enough, but, on the whole, his work wants solidity.

One of the most remarkable pictures in this exhibition, and one that is even more promising than it is attractive, is the Love's Baubles (164) of Mr. B. Shaw, in which all sorts of fair and eager damsels, and a very plump dowager besides, follow the mocking Cupid, who trips before them, laughing as he carries a tray full of somewhat stony-looking fruit and gew-gaws, which his attendants snatch at. The charm of their vivacious faces, some of which are very beautiful indeed, the animation of their gestures, and the spontaneity of the whole design are important and fresh elements — characteristics, too, of an original and powerful inspiration as well as of a peculiarly vigorous technique. A really pretty and novel incident is the crowd of sparkling and splendidly coloured moths and butterflies which, like their kind when fascinated by a flame, hover round the head of Cupid. One sly damsel bites furtively an apple she has picked up from the grass at her feet, and finds it full of bitterness; another, Atalanta-like, stoops to clutch an apple which eludes her fingers. There are many other appropriate and well-expressed incidents, but it is our duty to praise in the highest terms the extraordinarily vivacious expression and attitude of Cupid, whose face is, perhaps, the most firmly touched and certainly one of the best drawn in an exhibition where such crisp handling as it shows is very rare. By the way, Cupid seems to be lame; but this may be a subtlety we cannot grasp; if so, it must be our fault, because, considering how finely Mr. Shaw has drawn all the faces, it is not likely he cannot draw two feet. In many respects 'Love's Baubles' closely resembles an early picture of Millais: for example, the intense brilliancy and variety of the girls' carnations, the somewhat isolated colours of their dresses, the splendour of those colours, the firm and yet unequal touch of the painter, and the vivacity and spontaneity of his conception, which is pervaded by a sardonic humour Millais had not in him. Yet the very extravagances of Mr. Shaw's work remind us of the young Millais.

Mr. R. Brough's Fantaisie en Folie (138) is half of a life-size figure of a rather ill-looking lady in a capitally painted dress of olive velvet, playing with a Japanese toy. Slight and flat as it is, it is a good exercise in harmonies of tone and colour; the carnations, too, are excellent, so far as they go. This is the foundation of a picture a master might make much of, but only part of a work of fine art.—A much more ambitious production is the Dawn (147) of Mr. F. Dicksee, an artist almost too accomplished, who, founding himself on Leighton, has not enough strength of wing to fly as high as his master. Graceful and sweet as it is, there is nothing in 'Dawn' which needed a canvas more than one-third so large. The tall and slender nymph who is walking "o'er the eastern hill" need not have been more than, say, two feet high to show her refined form and attitude—more graceful, however, than spontaneous — as well as the choiceness of her flesh tints, while no more space was required for the vapours which disperse before Aurora's feet, close to which "grey-hooded Night" descends apace. Of course, a great deal of credit is due to the painter who employed so much taste, academic skill, and care in producing, for art's sake only, this large and pleasing proof of the excellence of his education. Mr. Dicksee's Meditation (280) is a pretty and tender head, a little too thinly painted, but, like even the weakest specimens of his work, complete and accomplished.—As with many other pictures of its class, Mrs. M. H. Welsford's picture, The Clairvoyant (141), may be praised for its good colour and strongly painted flesh, but it has no tale to tell, and, besides other omissions, lacks brightness, solidity, and finish. It is not enough in art to mean much; it is necessary to take the trouble to paint the meaning. The interior of a cottage, where a sick person lies in bed and a nurse-girl shades the light of her candle from his eyes, is all we can make out of No. 151, which Miss M. E. Batley calls Daybreak. Its surface is so dull and its position so unfavourable that the work may be better, or much worse, than it appears to be, but our impression is in its favour.

Mr. Alma Tadema's Watching (173), a charming damsel clad in rose-coloured tissue, and turning for a moment from the object of her watch, is the small and luminous picture which we described some time ago. The door open behind her reveals an inlet of sunlit sea, splendidly coloured, athwart which at the moment flits the white sail of the boat she has waited for, but will thenceforth wait for in vain. A vase full of purple flowers, which stands against the sun-flushed white marble wall of the corridor before us, is a marvel of execution, and a charming element in a work which, like Mr. Tadema's 'Her Eyes are with her Thoughts' (769), in Gallery IX., has all the choiceness and finished solidity of an antique gem, and a delicious coloration and luminosity to boot.—In Mr. Boughton's Memories (165) the light, tonality, and even the local colours are simply the conventions of the painter, the like of which, it is to be hoped, he never sees in nature. The lady's attitude—but not her features, which are of no account—suggested the title, no doubt, but it is the spectator's imagination rather than the face itself on which Mr. Boughton relies to reveal the pathetic purpose of his design, which is painfully trite. Accepting the curious greenish twilight and other peculiar mannerisms of the artist, we are bound to say that all the elements of this work are in harmony with each other, while the picture is broad, effective, and telling. Nevertheless we prefer Nature's mood to Mr. Boughton's. After Midnight Mass (278) is much more true to nature; the design is better and more studied, and is not a hackneyed triviality. The light of the torches and that of the moon struggling through the misty and frozen midnight air are reflected upon the splendid robes of the ladies, their well-designed faces, and the figures of those about them: a somewhat complex and difficult effect, adequately and ably represented. The design, too, is far superior to most of Mr. Boughton's; he is not gifted with what Mr. Ruskin called the "imagination penetrative" that every painter ought to pray for, but few possess. Accordingly, his figures almost invariably, as in No. 165, lack movement and the reality which gives the most precious charm to many pictures which are otherwise of no account. Notwithstanding the unusual good fortune of No. 278, its extreme dryness and partial paintiness are not suitable to the subject the artist was lucky enough to hit upon, and wise enough to paint with all his might.—In No. 182 Mr. C. Smithers's Sea Witch sits on a rock with cormorants at her side, whose blackness and the enamel-like blue-greenness of the sea in sunlight serve well to develope the carnations of the nudity, to aid which the gloom of a cavern's mouth has been introduced. The sunlight, though bright, is not brilliant enough; the flesh-painting is better than the drawing; the design is pleasing because of its animation and freshness.—Quite another subject attracted Mr. C. N. Knight when he set about A Sister of St Vincent de Paul (186), an intensely depressing work in the manner of Heer Israëls, representing the watchful nurse seated near the bedside of her patient, who may be dead or sleeping for all we can discover in the gloom of the apartment. Her face seems to be as expressive and appropriate as her attitude, but, as in another work just mentioned, the surface is so rough and the colours and tones are so dirty that it is impossible to be sure. These pictures are but two out of many which show how much what may be called the rudimentary education of our younger artists has been neglected by their teachers. No trained painter would work in their way.

A striking contrast in all respects to the slovenly commonplaces of Mr. Smithers and Mrs. Welsford is offered by the contributions of Sir E. J. Poynter, of which Phyllis (188) is, despite her name, a very pretty and plump English girl. The drawing of her features and her busy, dainty fingers is as elegant as it is scientific and thorough; but the finish of the draperies is less exact than usual, a circumstance which has suggested to his friends that the new President has of late given up to parties and feasts the hours which were meant for his art. No sign of this is manifest in The Message (299), where the expressions of the faces, especially that of the girl, are all that could be desired in respect to their vivacity; but the carnations, which could not be better modelled or sounder, are very slightly too yellow and somewhat opaque. The portrait of Sidney Colvin, Esq. (376), lacks some of the nervous character of the sitter, and is otherwise not by any means the best of the President's portraits.

We prefer to treat Mr. C. Napier Hemy's Pilchards (204) as a figure picture rather than as a sea-piece, because it represents, with admirable success, comprehensiveness, and knowledge, a frequent scene at daybreak during the fishing season in Mount's Bay, where, it should be known, "fish" means "pilchards," and nothing else. Two boats have drawn together, while their crews lift from the dark green depths of the sea a portion of their drift-net, which, paid out during the night as the tide serves from one end, is drawn in again at dawn from the other end, and is often found as full of fish as Mr. Hemy's picture shows it to be—so full, indeed, that it is no very rare thing that the crews are forced, because of its heaviness, to abandon part of the net. In the bigger craft the men sometimes stand shoulder high amid the heaped pilchards. Mr. Hemy has seized the intensely picturesque elements of his theme; concentrated his most brilliant colours upon the resplendent silver of the pilchards; adroitly grouped their captors, each of whom is true to the life; and displayed how the ravenous gulls, fearing no man in their greed, flutter screaming over the capture. Not the least happy part of this work is the rendering of the dawn, which, rising on the horizon, turns from pallid gold to full-blown rose-colour, leaps upon the higher edges of the waves, and tinges the lowest fringes of the clouds. We congratulate the Academy upon having bought 'Pilchards' with the Chantrey Fund, and still more warmly do we congratulate Mr. Hemy upon the success of his masterpiece.

THE SALONS AT PARIS.

(Second Notice.)

Between the academic spirit—ever present, and maintained by masters who still retain undoubted authority not only in the studios of the École des Beaux-Arts, but also among their large following in the artistic world—and the Impressionism which has been at once as it were the last form of individualism as the Romantics defined it, and of the realism which had aspired to put an end at once to the academic and the romantic schools, modern art feels its way. The young generation who, in the course of the last ten years, have awoke to conscious life and entered on the career of art with the thoughtful and sincere desire to put in their works something more than an idle virtuosity, have experienced the need to look between these two extremes of the French School for the form best calculated to express their inmost ideals. They had a vague feeling that after the dislocations and the violence which the Impressionists inflicted on the picturesque, the eyes of their contemporaries necessarily needed a little rest. Instinct and reflection were no less ready to warn them that the last hours were at hand of one of those reactions, or, to speak more accurately, those détentes, which are so frequent in the history of art. At all events, the time was come to retire within oneself, to compose oneself, to dare to be simple, to free oneself from all the artificial complications with which the æsthetes of the beerhouses and snobbery have poisoned our age.

To hearts and wishes so disposed Nature gives good counsel. She offers at the right time in her store of forms and harmonies, ever inexhaustible, ever changing, the appearance, the fine shades, and the harmony which man needs to form and to express the shifting inward vision which corresponds to every state of his soul. At every season of the year, at every hour of day and night, she has in her store, combines and renews, more pictures than painters can see or ever could paint. Often sung by Dante as "wounding the young pilgrim of love, if he hears from afar the bell which seems to weep the knell of departing day,"—

> Era già l'ora che volge il disio
> Ai naviganti e intenerisce il core,
> Lo dì c' han detto a' dolci amici addio;
> E che lo novo peregrin d'amore
> Punge, se ode squilla di lontano,
> Che paia il giorno pianger che si muore.
> 'Purgat.,' viii. 1–6.

This hour of twilight, propitious to self-communing and contemplation, is also that in which forms are simplified into great masses, and grave colours of a deep tone at once profound and dim are prolonged in vibrations and modulations at once full and delicate. Consequently they are admirably suited for a picture which, in reaction against the abuse of tones too clear and acute on one side and too pale and fugitive on the other, aims at recovering at the same time calm, force, and sanity.

Several young painters seem to have understood this. I cannot here enter into a detailed study of all the works, this year more numerous than usual, which seem to me characteristic of the tendency I have attempted to explain. I shall only mention at the Champ de Mars the works sent by M. André Dauchez (387–392), M. Cottet (327–338), MM. Georges and Lucien Griveau (560–576), M. Boulard (150–160), and M. Prinet (1024–1028); and I shall only dwell on the works of the young painter who seems the most really promising of this group, M. René Ménard. It is not long since at the exhibition of the artists in pastels there was on view a decorative fragment of his, 'Autumn,' which attracted much attention among good judges. Beautiful quiet landscapes of simple and grand lines, with harmonies of a subdued and deep tone, where the sombre greens and the various brown reds are united or opposed in simple yet rich uniformity, a sentiment of rhythm and style which owes solely to a long contemplation of nature its means of expression, a leaning towards reverie which has nothing morbid or quaint about it, but suggests merely the need of solitude and repose in a clear spirit and manly mind—these are the qualities which are displayed more and more persuasively in the works of M. René Ménard. He exhibits at the Champ de Mars (890) the decorative panel of Autumn for which the pastel to which I have alluded was only a "study." The details of its composition remain very pretty. From a sky of green and gold touched with red by the last rays of the setting sun above the distant hills, the river whose ample stretch reflects in a peaceful surface all the glory of the sky, the woods whose green is growing red, a concert of rich and sweet notes rises in a calm and beautiful symphony. Perhaps, however, the figures in the foreground are not treated with sufficient simplicity or decision. The painter has lingered on what one may call certain anecdotal details of modelling and form which jeopardize the unity of decorative scheme which ought to be the result of his picture. This is a fault unusual with him. Indeed, one of his characteristic merits is the noble way in which he matches the human form with landscape, and the firmness of the will which keeps all the picturesque elements of his pictures in due order. An example of this can be seen in The Herd (894), where, as in an eclogue of the heroic age, shepherds and oxen, simple and robust in form, make as it were one body with the landscape which surrounds them and is completed by them. Here is a return to the classic spirit freed of the academic fetters and superstitions of archæology and formalism which have for so long weighed heavily on our artists.

Leo Battista Alberti, in his book 'On Painting,' recommends the studious painter to live in intimacy with the poets. "These learned spirits," said he, "cannot fail to supply him with new inventions and imaginations which will be a very great help towards those beautiful compositions which bring honour and glory to painting." One need not, moreover, he adds, allow oneself to be overcome by the toil of reading. The true means of teaching oneself is to ask of nature the degrees of knowledge. Among those who seek to unite observation of nature with poetical invention there are very few who seem to have taken to heart this advice from one of the greatest spirits of the quattrocento. M. Henri Martin, whose "shoddy" composition conveys—by the delicate but morbid affectation of subtle harmonies obtained by means of the decomposition on the canvas of the elements of tone—the impression of a picture bordering on decomposition, seems to have chosen Baudelaire's 'Fleurs du Mal' for his favourite reading. His big picture at the Champs Élysées, Towards the Abyss (1134), is doubtless not directly derived from Baudelaire's poem, but one figure is pure Baudelaire — the woman with evil looks whose nakedness is revealed rather than cloaked under transparent tissues of black gauze, who drags along behind her a crowd of unhappy creatures whose melancholy gestures or bodies already thrown on the ground cover, to the extremity of the horizon, the dismal desert whither she is carrying her train. The allegory is not over clear, nor is the painting particularly wholesome, and the whole makes a picture pretentious enough. To Glory, by M. Boggio (Champs Élysées, 190), shows the influence of M. Henri Martin. Triumphant Gold and its Victims, by M. Cain (Champs Élysées, 309), is a sufficiently commonplace piece of imagery. The Madness of Titania, by M. Paul Gervais (Champs Élysées, 733), is an academic piece, learned enough, no doubt, but displaying too dry a precision, an imagination at once too sharp and abrupt to illustrate in the proper style the fantasy of Shakspeare's 'Midsummer Night's Dream.' M. Georges Harcourt has, on the contrary, found in Tennyson the subject of a fine picture, The Leper's Wife (Champs Élysées, 814). M. Ary Renan has, without question, drawn on his remembrance of a poem of Victor Hugo's for the original idea of his Voices of the Sea (Champ de Mars, 1058), and his idea has taken its picturesque embodiment on the shore of the sea of Brittany. In a creek where the waves break against the reefs a great sea-bird hovers, skimming the water and filling all the ground of the picture with its open wings. Emerging from the water which rocks it, a pale figure entwines with its folded arm the outstretched neck of the bird. The sweet rhythm of the lines, harmonious and sad, the wings of the bird, the dolorous gestures of the human waif, the undulations of the broken waves, call up a melancholy vision of those voices of the sea in which the poet heard the rising sobs of old shipwrecks.

A painter who by the energetic precision of his design and the uncompromising character of his realism reveals himself readily as Van Eyck's countryman, M. Jef Leempoels, has for several years made himself notable for pictures in which a moral idea always clothes forms and colours which are full of vigorous precision, but intensely crude. Here is his idea this year how to symbolize Destiny and Humanity (Champ de Mars, 777). Above, in a sky whose gloomy radiance seems to shut in rather than light up the horizon, appears, as at a window, a figure at once hackneyed and unmoved; below, from the foreground to the infinite distance at the back, hands are stretched towards her: hands of menace, of prayer, hands entwined in the grasp of love or suffering, armed hands of the desperate, closed fists of the proletariat, gloved hands of cardinals, puckered hands of fetish-worshippers—all times, all conditions, all religions, all races, are represented by these millions of hands all lifted towards inexorable Destiny, whose wide-open eyes are fixed afar off above them, and see them not. Say what you like against the arrangement and the taste of a picture like this, the man who drew with a will so patient and so strong these hands (which Albert Dürer would have looked at with respect) interests and moves me.

André Michel.

MR. THEODORE BENT.

To the great grief of his friends Mr. Theodore Bent died last week in the prime of life. He was forty-five years old, yet he never looked his age, and gave one the impression of being still quite a young man, full of energy and vitality. He and Mrs. Bent had paid, during the winter, a visit to the island of Socotra, which they much enjoyed, although the only way they could reach it was by a long journey in an Arab dhow. They subsequently made an excursion from Aden into the interior, but on their return they were prostrated by malarial fever. When they recovered they proceeded to Marseilles, but there Mr. Bent caught a severe chill, and unfortunately, instead of remaining in the South till he was convalescent, he pressed on in his anxiety to get home, and arrived in London in a dying state. He expired on the evening of the 5th at his house in Great Cumberland Place.

Mr. Bent was educated at Repton School and at Wadham College, Oxford. After taking his degree in 1875, he seemed at first inclined to devote himself to Italian history, publishing in 1879 a monograph on San Marino under the title of 'A Freak of Freedom,' a history of Genoa, and a biography of Garibaldi; but about 1882 he turned his attention to archæology and made excavations in the Greek islands, one of the results being an exceedingly pleasant volume on 'The Cyclades; or, Life among the Insular Greeks.' Hamdi Bey, however, not approving of his excavating on Turkish territory, he was induced to go further, and he and his accomplished wife made every winter an expedition to some out-of-the-way spot for archæological research. Thus they visited Mashonaland, Abyssinia, Hadramut, and other places, undergoing very considerable hardships, and often encountering personal danger, but so fascinated by the charms of archæological adventure that no difficulties deterred them. No doubt in this way Mr. Bent unwittingly overtaxed his constitution. His death is a real loss both to archæology and the cause of geographical discovery, and his friends will long lament one so kind, genial, and unassuming, who never sought for selfish advantage, and was always eager to profit by the knowledge of those more learned than himself.

SALE.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 8th inst. the following from various collections. Pictures: T. Gainsborough, Portrait of Margaret Burr, wife of T. Gainsborough, 220*l.*; A Landscape, with cattle and figures by a fountain, 220*l.*; The Woodman, evening, 346*l.*; Portrait of Charles Frederick Abel, German musician, 1,260*l.*; Portrait of Mrs. Puget (née Hawkins), 5,040*l.*; Portrait of George, second Marquis of Blandford, 315*l.*; Portrait of Anne Elizabeth, Lady Mulgrave, 1,071*l.* P. Mercier,

The Lace-Maker, 157*l*. P. Nasmyth, A View of Harrow, with cattle and figures, 241*l*. Sir H. Raeburn, Sir Walter Scott, when a boy, in Highland costume, 120*l*. R. Smirke, Conjugal Affection, portraits of Alderman Boydell and his family, 102*l*. Sir T. Lawrence, Mrs. Anastasia Jessy Bonar, 609*l*.; Portrait of the First Duke of Wellington, 399*l*.; Portrait of Cardinal Gonsalvi, 840*l*; Portrait of Lady Owen, 997*l*. J. Russell, Mrs. Anne Bonar, wife of Thomas Bonar, 110*l*.; Two Children of the above, Harry and Agnes, 115*l*.; Mrs. Scott Waring and Children, 173*l*. Sir Joshua Reynolds, Lady Waldegrave, afterwards Duchess of Gloucester, 840*l*.; Miss Milles, 420*l*.; Alexander Wedderburn, Lord Loughborough, 1,260*l*.; The Madonna, with the Infant Saviour embracing St. John, 162*l*.; Lady Anne Fitzpatrick as Sylvia, 1,890*l*.; Portrait of Sir John Lade, Bart., 220*l*.; Head of a Man, in red coat and lace collar, 110*l*.; Lady Elizabeth Tufton, 252*l*. J. Stark, A View of a Farm, 199*l*.; Sheep-Washing, 483*l*. G. Romney, Portrait of Anne Henshaw, 2,415*l*.; Portrait of Mrs. Tickell, 2,100*l*.; Portrait of Mrs. Grove, 3,675*l*.; Portrait of Elizabeth, daughter of John Grove, 735*l*.; Portrait of Ralph Willett, Esq., 315*l*.; Portrait of a Child, 131*l*.; Portrait of Lady Hamilton, 504*l*.; Portrait of Mrs. Sanderson, 210*l*. J. Hoppner, Portrait of a Young Lady, 1,533*l*.; Portrait of Mrs. Fielding, 367*l*.; Portrait of General the Hon. Edmund Phipps, 115*l*.; Portrait of Charles, Duke of Richmond, 126*l*. Sir M. A. Shee, Lavinia, a young girl seated on a bank, 231*l*.; Portrait of the Artist when twenty-five years of age, 199*l*. G. Morland, A Woody Landscape, with a sportsman and dogs, 357*l*. Sir W. Beechey, Hebe, 525*l*.; Portrait of the Hon. Henrietta Hanbury Tracy, 294*l*. F. Cotes, Portrait of Miss Vernon, 420*l*. Sir N. Dance, Portrait of Frederick Cooper, 110*l*. Nollekens, A Lady at her Toilet, and An Author reading a Tragedy (a pair), 231*l*. Pastel drawings: F. Cotes, Portrait of a Lady, 84*l*.; Portrait of a Gentleman, 47*l*. J. E. Liotard, Portrait of Lepel, Lady Mulgrave, 84*l*.; Portrait of a Lady, in blue shot dress, 52*l*.; Portrait of a Lady, in blue robe, with white and gold fichu, 57*l*.

Fine-Art Gossip.

The death occurred on the 6th inst., at the age of fifty-seven, of Mr. George Gilbert Scott, eldest son of the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott. Like his father, whose pupil he was, Mr. Scott was bred an architect; but when he was engaged for his father on works of "restoration" at Peterhouse, Cambridge, he entered Jesus College, came out senior in the Moral Sciences Tripos, and was elected a Fellow of Jesus College. He was occasionally an exhibitor at the Royal Academy. A man of much ability, he had for several years been obliged by his health to relinquish the practice of his profession.—On the same day Mr. G. T. Robinson, F.S.A., passed away at the age of sixty-nine, after an illness that lasted only three days. He was educated as an architect, and practised his profession both in the provinces and in London. In 1870 he went out to the seat of the Franco-Prussian war for the Manchester Guardian, and was the only English correspondent shut up in Metz, and on his return he wrote an excellent work on 'The Fall of Metz.' Subsequently he edited Art, we believe; but becoming connected with Messrs. Trollope he gave up literary work, and confined himself to designing and decorating houses in various parts of the country. A most amiable and accomplished man, he will be regretted by a wide circle. Both his daughters, Madame Darmesteter and Miss F. M. Robinson, have made a name in literature.

It is needless to characterize the works of Mr. Jan van Beers, more than fifty in number, which are now assembled in the Fine-Art Society's Gallery. None of them fails to show his rare technical powers, his exquisite touch, his brilliant harmonies of coloration and tonality, and a certain completeness which ensures to the least ambitious of them that stereoscopic quality which is most antagonistic to the coarse methods of the Impressionism of to-day. It is not our business to deal with the undercurrent of voluptuousness which pervades so many of the painter's designs, and is the more seductive because it is never indecent. Our duty being what it is, let us, for the sake of the art we have just analyzed and the thoroughly "modern" beauty which is absent from none of the works before us, commend to students 'Abandon' (No. 2); 'Bergère, Louis XV.' (3); 'Un Souris' (5); 'A Ostende' (19); 'Peine de Cœur' (21); 'Bouffon' (24); the wonderful portrait, which is a biography of itself and a criticism as well, of 'M. Henri Rochefort' (31); 'Le Modèle' (42); and 'Le Courtisan' (54). The expression of the face of the damsel in 'Peine de Cœur' is intense enough to pain the spectator; in 'Abandon,' a handsome lady reclining in a chair, the artist and his art are epitomized.

At the Goupil Gallery, Regent Street, Waterloo Place, Messrs. Boussod, Valadon & Co. have collected a series of landscapes in oil by M. René Billotte, which are now open to the public, and will reward a visit or visits.

The double exhibition of pictures which now occupies the Graves Galleries in Pall Mall will reward a visit by dog-lovers and those who enjoy the sunlit landscapes of Sark. Miss Maud Earl, whose picture in the Academy is a considerable success, has collected about fifty of her portraits of canine wonders and anecdotes in paint of the looks, ways, and kindly acts of their race, including the Queen's white collie "Snowball," the Princess of Wales's wolf-hound "Alex" (who must be as a fish out of water in a wolfless country), and the sledge-dog "Luska" of the Prince of Wales. Not only is the aristocracy of dog-land amply illustrated in Pall Mall, but many a humble animal has had justice done to his or her merits, and the pictures, as such, are a good deal above the average. Mr. F. W. Sturges's drawings of landscapes and sea and coast views in Sark, nearly eighty in number, are (although rather thin and more sketchy than desirable) lightly touched, sparkling with light, and, generally speaking, quite charming as to their colours. More stringent studies would do much for Mr. Sturges's reputation.

Mr. Basil Champneys, a friend of the poet's, has furnished the design for the monument to be erected over the grave of Coventry Patmore in Lymington Cemetery. Its size is such as to be subordinate to a churchyard cross which is to be placed near the centre of the Roman Catholic portion of the enclosure, and the position of the grave was especially selected on this account. It consists of an obelisk placed on a square pedestal raised on three steps symbolical of the Trinity; there will be at each angle of the junction of the obelisk with the pedestal a sculptured lion, the meaning of which in connexion with the obelisk will be readily understood by readers of 'Religio Poetæ.' On three sides of the upper portion of the pedestal will be engraved the name of the poet and the dates of his birth and death; at a lower level they will be adorned with panels symbolically carved. Above will be represented the Cross and Host rising from a stem from which spring lilies intertwined with the initial letter of the Virgin's name, and below will be the laurel wreath denoting that the poet's powers were devoted to the honour of Christ and His mother; this design will be enclosed by a band in the form of a vesica piscis, on which will be the legend, "My covenant shall be in your flesh," and, in the spandrils, the letters A. M. D. G. In the corresponding panels on either side will be inscribed passages from Patmore's writings in prose and verse. The fourth side, which will be immediately in front of the churchyard cross, is to be left plain. The material of the memorial will probably be Irish limestone. We refer to this subject in another column.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Albert Hall.—Royal Choral Society.
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts.
St. James's Hall.—Mr. David Bispham's Concert.
Royal Opera, Covent Garden.—'Faust'; 'Roméo et Juliette'; 'Tannhäuser.'
Queen's Hall.—Herr Mottl's Concerts.

Albert Hall audiences are not, as a rule, prone to favour novelties, but there was a very large assemblage on Thursday last week, when a "Grand Commemoration Concert" was given as a fitting tribute to the prevailing sentiments of the hour. No blame can possibly accrue to Prof. Bridge for his new musical arrangement of the National Anthem, nor to the Dean of Rochester for his modernization of the barbaric second verse, for both words and music have been subjected to continual changes for centuries. Prof. Bridge gives this second verse to a soprano soloist, followed by chorus, preserving the key of B flat throughout. Whether this is an improvement on Costa's version, in which the middle verse is taken by the contralto contingent of the chorus with wind accompaniment, may be doubted. 'The Queen's Song,' words by Sir Edwin Arnold, music by Mr. Eaton Faning, is a well-written and effective piece, suitable, unfortunately, only for the present year. Not so 'The Flag of England,' a setting by Prof. Bridge of Mr. Rudyard Kipling's verses from 'Barrack-Room Ballads.' These lines are purely patriotic, as every one knows, and this brief and invigorating cantata, written for soprano solo, chorus, and orchestra, will certainly be popular for years, as it is impressive in effect and not by any means difficult, though the music is as varied in style as it is energetic. Madame Albani rendered the solo part with all needful force, and the choir has seldom acquitted itself to greater advantage. Handel's coronation anthems, 'Zadok the Priest' and 'The King shall Rejoice,' were also well interpreted, and the concert ended appropriately with Mendelssohn's 'Lobgesang.'

The Beethoven programme offered at the Queen's Hall Symphony Concert last Saturday afternoon may be said to have been chiefly remarkable for an extraordinarily fine performance of the C minor Symphony. Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra displayed not only verve and precision in attack, but the utmost possible intelligence in the observance of the nuances in the second and third movements. We were not much impressed at first with Herr Otto Spamer's efforts in the Violin Concerto, as the tone sounded feeble and the phrasing not sufficiently full and masculine; but Herr Spamer, who we understand has been taught by Herr Wilhelmj, improved as his duties progressed, and he may fairly be pronounced a competent violinist, for his intonation is pure and his execution almost invariably accurate. The overtures to 'King Stephen' and 'The Ruins of Athens' and the 'Congratulations Minuet' were included in the Beethoven selection. Of Glazounoff's 'Carnival' Overture, placed at the end of the programme, we must speak on another occasion.

The concert given by Mr. David Bispham on Monday afternoon was interesting in a peculiar sense. It was a Brahms programme, and opened with the 'Four Serious Songs,' first sung in London by Mr. Bispham last autumn. These beautiful though sombre lyrics were again rendered with the fullest possible expression. The principal feature of the scheme was the 'Magelone' song cycle, Op. 33, which had not been heard here before in its entirety. It may be necessary to state that these fifteen piquant lyrics are founded on one of L. Tieck's fairy stories, of which Mr. Bispham gave a synopsis, reading a few explanatory sentences between the songs. His enunciation was clear and well modulated, and the simple fashion in which he put the story—commencing in the customary fairy-tale fashion with "Once upon a time," and ending with "They were married, and lived happily ever after"—was by no means unsuitable. The concert-giver was ably assisted by Miss Marie Engle, Miss Rosa Olitzka, and Mr. Reginald Groome, while Mr. Leonard Borwick was a perfect accompanist. The 'Magelone' cycle should be repeated at the earliest convenient opportunity.

The "Grand Opera Syndicate," with Mr. Maurice Grau as manager, duly opened the brief season at Covent Garden on Monday with a somewhat indifferent performance of 'Faust,' the orchestra being rather coarse and the chorus very uncertain. Praise must, of course, be given to Madame Emma Eames as Marguerite, M. Plançon as Mephistopheles, and, in lesser degree, to M. Bonnard as Faust. One of the new-comers, M. Noté, was Valentine, and made a favourable impression, thanks to a powerful voice and strong dramatic instincts. Gounod's opera was sung, as it should be, in French.

It cannot be said the performance of Gounod's 'Roméo et Juliette' on Tuesday was beyond reproach, though competent work was shown by the new-comers, Madame Saville and M. Scaramberg; and of course M. Plançon as the Friar, Mlle. Bauermeister as Gertrude, and M. Bars as Mercutio gave satisfaction. The other parts were fairly well interpreted.—Much improvement was noticeable in the rendering of 'Tannhäuser' on Wednesday. M. Van Dyck, who had not appeared at Covent Garden for some years, was welcome, for, although not vocally perfect, his conception of the erring hero was, dramatically speaking, very impressive, especially in the third act. As Madame Eames could not appear, Mlle. Pacary took her place at the shortest possible notice, and afforded ample evidence that she understood the requirements of the part. M. Noté's Wolfram showed intelligence, and Madame Brazzi sang the music of Venus in the opening scene (given in accordance with the Parisian version) in a fairly agreeable manner. The stage arrangements were decidedly better than in former years at Covent Garden, but, as usual, the chorus of younger pilgrims in the final scene was excised, for what purpose it would be difficult to ascertain.

The so-called "Grand Wagner Concert," given under the direction of Herr Felix Mottl on Tuesday evening, was perhaps the most successful of the series. Mr. Alfred Schulz-Curtius has gained permission from Bayreuth for the performance of extensive excerpts from 'Parsifal,' and at this concert the Flower Maidens' chorus and the great duet between the hero and Kundry occupied the central position in the programme. Herr Heinrich Vogl, still one of the finest of Wagnerian artists, impersonated the "Pure Fool" in his finest manner, and Frau Mottl was artistic and vocally charming as Kundry. The chorus of girls was supplied by the Royal College of Music under the tuition of Sir Walter Parratt, and the voices blended beautifully. The solo parts in this section of the sacred music-drama were rendered with all needful refinement by the Misses Esther Palliser, Agnes Nicholls, Hilda Foster, Helen Jaxon, Eleanor Jones, and Ruby Shaw. In the 'Parsifal' selection, as well as in the Prelude and Death Song from 'Tristan und Isolde,' Herr Mottl's orchestra played magnificently and with the dreamy tenderness which generally characterizes the direction of the Carlsruhe Kapellmeister. Of Smetana's symphonic poem, 'Aus Böhmen's Hain und Flur,' the fourth of six published as "Mein Vaterland," we should prefer to speak after a second hearing. It is piquant in theme and delicately scored, but in the matter of form rather vague, and the scenes of Bohemian life are not easy to follow, except, of course, to those who are familiar with the country. We venture to think that so-called "programme" music might be allowed a rest for a brief space. Weber's 'Oberon' Overture, taken rather slowly, though played with the utmost expression, completed the scheme.

Musical Gossip.

Brahms "In Memoriam" concerts continue, and the first of three Trio Evenings announced by Mr. Isidor Cohn to be given at the Steinway Hall was mainly devoted to the recently deceased composer's music. The performance was on Friday last week, and included the melodious Pianoforte Trio in C, Op. 87, and various songs and pianoforte pieces, the able though scarcely inspired pianist receiving assistance from Miss Fillunger, Mr. R. Gompertz, and Mr. W. E. Whitehouse.

Miss Emma Barnett, an intelligent pianist and a member of a very musical family, selected as the first item in her recital in the Queen's Small Hall on Monday afternoon Schubert's fine, but too lengthy and rarely played Sonata in D, Op. 53. Schumann's 'Carnaval' and various minor items by Tschaïkowsky and Mr. John Francis Barnett were included in the programme.

Mr. Henry Such secured a large audience at the last of his violin recitals for the present at St. James's Hall on Wednesday afternoon, and gave evidence of his mastery over the most difficult of all instruments in Beethoven's genial Sonata in G, Op. 30, No. 3, in which he was ably assisted by Mlle. Johanna Heymann in the pianoforte part, and in Max Bruch's Concerto in D minor, No. 2, a work well written for the solo instrument but less generally effective than the first and third of this composer's violin concertos.

Messrs. Boosey & Co. have in the press a set of twenty-five Irish folk-songs, which, with two exceptions, will be new to the musical public. A specially interesting group of these songs is from Miss Honoria Galwey's manuscript collection of Donegal and Londonderry airs. The arranger of the folk-songs is Dr. Charles Wood, of Cambridge, the writer or rewriter of the words to them Mr. Alfred Perceval Graves. The collection is appropriately dedicated to Dr. Villiers Stanford.

Mr. Johann Kruse announces three orchestral concerts at St. James's Hall on the evenings of June 1st, 11th, and 18th, with Prof. Villiers Stanford as conductor.

Dublin celebrates its first musical and literary festival next week. On Monday will be held the Oireachtas (Irish Literary Festival), at which an Irish ode by Dr. Douglas Hyde will be given; a prize rallying song, set to music by Dr. Annie Patterson, will be sung by Miss Rose-Byrne and a trained chorus; and prizes for essays, songs, poems, stories, and recitations will be publicly awarded. On Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, concerts of Irish music, ancient and modern, will be given, at which Prof. Stanford's 'Irish' Symphony (last movement) and 'Cavalier Songs,' Augusta Holmes's symphonic poem 'Irlande,' Dr. Culwick's prize overture, and Signor Esposito's prize cantata 'Deirdre' (with Mr. T. W. Rolleston's words) will be performed amongst many other items of interest. The leading singers will be Madame Marie Duma, Mr. Iver McKay, and Mr. W. Ludwig. There will be a full orchestra and chorus, and a band of harps under the direction of Dr. Joseph Smith, and the Irish pipes will also be heard. On the Friday there will be a distribution of prizes and performances by prize winners, and on the Saturday band contests and competitions of Irish pipes. Irish dances will also take place. In fact, Ireland holds its first Eisteddfod—no, the first Feis Ceol it has celebrated in modern times.

Herr Richter has written to deny emphatically that he intends to resign the conductorship of the Hoftheater in Vienna. He has simply obtained leave of absence to conduct concerts in England, including, of course, the Birmingham Festival, and also to direct some of the Bayreuth performances.

Many excellent concerts which took place during this week must necessarily pass without notice.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	National Sunday League Concert, 7 Queen's Hall.
Mon.	Mr Carl Armbruster's 'Parsifal' Lecture, 3, King's College.
—	Herr Hyllested's Pianoforte Recital, 3 St. James's Hall.
—	Misses Conway's Recital, 3, Steinway Hall
—	Tonic Sol-Fa College Concert, 7 30, Queen's Hall
—	Mr. Isidor Cohn's Trio Concert, 8, Steinway Hall.
—	Miss Anna Roeckner's Concert, 8, Kensington Town Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Roméo et Juliette,' 8
Tues.	Mr Sevadjian's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St James's Hall.
—	Miss Dempster's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall
—	St Cuthbert's Hall Choral Society, Handel's 'Acis and Galatea' and Elgar's 'Banner of St George,' 8
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Tannhäuser,' 8.
—	Wagner Concert, conducted by Herr Felix Mottl, 8 15, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	Miss Clara Butt's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Herr Werner's Violin Recital, 3, St James's Hall.
—	Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr E Vander Straeten's Concert 8 No 54 Wigmore Street.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Carmen' 8
Thurs	Mlle Pancera's Pianoforte Recital 3 St James's Hall.
—	Miss Janie Crompton's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Philharmonic Concert 8, Queen's Hall
—	Mr Cottell's Indian Famine Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss F B Taylor and Madame Lena Law's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
Fri.	Mr. Eugen d'Albert's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Madame Blanche Marchesi's Vocal Recital, 8, St James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden,
Sat.	Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3, Wagner Programme.
—	Madame Kate Cheyne's Concert 3 Queen's Small Hall
—	Herr von Gumer's Zither Concert 3 Queen's Gate Hall
—	Kneisel Quartet Concert 3 St James's Hall
—	Miss Elsa Ruegger's Violoncello Recital 3 30, Salle Erard.
—	Miss Theresa Beney's Concert, 8 15, Steinway Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Her Majesty's.—'The Old Clo' Man,' in Three Scenes By M. Catulle Mendès.

Lyric.—Revival of Knowles's 'Virginius.'

Globe.—Afternoon Performance: Revival of 'A Doll's House.' By Henrik Ibsen.

There is no end to the transmutations of Pierrot, whose figure in France eclipses that of all the other characters of the Comédie Italienne. Springing originally from the Pulcinella of Naples, whose dress he wears, he has lost in time most of his Italian features and become all but entirely French. To the genius of Deburau, whose memory has been perpetuated by Jules Janin, Charles Nodier, Béranger, Théophile Gautier, and Gérard de Nerval, and whose exquisitely comic face is familiar in the portrait of Hillemacher, Pierrot owes his supremacy over his rivals and the features during half a century assigned him. Since women took to playing the part Pierrot has been more and more sentimentalized, till now he has become almost a substitute for Chérubin. The grasshopper of fable—good-natured, penniless, improvident, easily pleased, incapable of sustained thought or purpose—Pierrot flits through comedy, a type of Parisian evanescence. Of late he has been promoted to the position of a lover for whom princely maidens sigh, endeared even to the nymphs. It has been reserved for M. Catulle Mendès to assign him the grimmest physiognomy and convert poor, infantine, helpless Pierrot into a murderer. A scamp and vaurien always, he did, according to his autobiographical confession teste Gautier, rien qui vaille,

Et vécut sans remords en parfait canaille.

Preserving some aspects of his character, M. Mendès has darkened all his traits, and, while showing him consciously criminal, has also made him the victim of remorse. The pantomime of which Pierrot is now the centre is imaginative, ingenious, weird, and gruesome. Disappointed in love—Harlequin, it may be supposed, having supplanted him in the good graces of Isabella—Pierrot has hanged himself to a street lamp under the very shadow of Notre Dame. Musidora, a name unfamiliar in the Commedia dell' Arte, a dancer, cuts him down, warms him into life by her kisses, laughs at his scruples, and asks him to meet her at the ball. No wise reluctant is Pierrot, but he has neither money nor ball costume. A Jew old-clothes man comes by with a rich hussar dress, which is exactly the thing required. Pierrot's appeals for credit are naturally vain. Rushing upon the Jew in an unguarded moment, Pierrot transfixes him with a sword, drops his body into the égout, and, furnishing himself with the money bags and the coveted costume, starts for the ball. Now begins a series of adventures which, toned down to meet the requirements of English modesty, are grotesque and comic, and at the same time wholly without significance. Ever haunted by the spectre of his victim, Pierrot, when he is received into the arms of his mistress, finds it is the Jew whom he clasps. When he begins to fight with a viscount whom he has insulted, it is the spectre by whom he is confronted. At length, compelled by some terrible fascination, he impales himself upon the weapon by which the murder was committed. These things might conceivably be made impressive; as they are, they are grotesque and ludicrous. Much talent is shown by M. Séverin in his pantomime. We fail, however, to see any gain from the absence of words. Pantomime, if occasionally pleasing, is but a trivial art, and the gestures by which an idea of the various situations is conveyed are as conventional as those of the ballet. While giving M. Séverin credit accordingly for his facial expression, and recognizing some subtleties of interpretation, such as Pierrot's rapid transition from abject terror into sensual delight, we are not greatly impressed by his performance. On the night of the first production of 'The Old Clo' Man' things, we are told, went wrong, and the supernatural effects failed to work. These effects seemed to us trivial. It is impossible to conjecture what they might have been under other conditions. Not very impressive to us are such things, even in 'Faust.' The best that can be hoped is that they will stir the imagination.

Mr. Wilson Barrett's appearance in London in Virginius, a part in which he had previously been seen in the country, inspired some interest. It is a good, picturesque, and rhetorical performance, but wanting in passion and intensity. The management of the stage business has been changed, and some new verses have been inserted. These things move no special indignation, and might possibly, had attention not been drawn to them, have passed unnoticed.

'A Doll's House' has been revived at the Globe, with Miss Janet Achurch as the heroine, a part of which she gives now an admirable performance. Miss Featherston, Mr. Fulton, Mr. Charrington, and Mr. Courtenay Thorpe were also included in an excellent cast.

Dramatic Gossip.

The Adelphi has been closed during the present week, to reopen this evening with Mr. Gillette's American drama 'Secret Service.'

'Solomon's Twins,' a three-act farce by Mr. F. Kinsey Peile, was produced on Tuesday afternoon at the Vaudeville. Some very comic acting by Mr. Giddens, Mr. Welch, Mr. Blakeley, Mr. Collette, and other actors commended warmly to the public a piece inherently trivial.

The revival of 'Hamlet' as the first of a series of cheap performances at the Olympic showed us a dignified and princely, but not very forcible Hamlet in Mr. Nutcombe Gould. Mr. Foss was the Laertes, Mr. Courtenay Thorpe the Ghost, and Mr. Ben Greet (the director) Polonius. Miss Lily Hanbury played Ophelia, and Miss Mary Allestree the Queen.

'Trial by Jury' was performed on Thursday at the Gaiety for the benefit of the widow of Charles Harris, Mr. W. S. Gilbert taking a small share in the performance. Mr. Rutland Barrington was the Judge, Mr. Eric Lewis the Counsel, and Miss Florence Perry the plaintiff.

Miss Sydney Fairbrother, whose recent performances at the Princess's, especially in the 'Two Little Vagabonds,' have attracted much attention and raised well-grounded hopes for her future, has undergone a painful bereavement, her husband Mr. Percy Buckler, an actor better known in the country than in London, having died in Colchester while on tour with the 'Jim the Penman' company.

To Correspondents.—S. E. R.—received.
E. W.—Thanks, but we are not second-hand booksellers.
J. D.—We cannot give such recommendations.
No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

JUST PUBLISHED.
THE ENGLISH STAGE.
Being an ACCOUNT OF THE VICTORIAN DRAMA.
By AUGUSTIN FILON.
Translated from the French by FREDERIC WHYTE.
With an Introduction by HENRY ARTHUR JONES.
Demy 8vo cloth, 7s 6d.
Daily News.—"Altogether this is decidedly the best sketch of the history of our drama and stage in recent times."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Interesting and well informed from beginning to end."
John Milne, 12, Norfolk-street, Strand.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.
AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.
PEN AND PENCIL IN PARLIAMENT.
By HARRY FURNISS.
Profusely illustrated by the Author. Crown 4to. cloth, 5s.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.
THE MASSARENES.
By OUIDA.
Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.
The ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE (May 10) says:—"'The Massarenes' is a capital story.....One of the best things she has done.....Will be extremely popular at the libraries."
"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."—National Observer.
"Extremely interesting.....A brilliant picture of a contemporary mania."—Daily Telegraph.
"Every one is reading Ouida's 'The Massarenes.'"—Vanity Fair.
"On English Fashion."—National Observer.
"Clever.....The irrepressible 'Cocky' is an excellent creation."—Pall Mall Gazette.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.
AT ALL LIBRARIES
The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.
A Tale of the Australian Bush. By G. FIRTH SCOTT. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
The MISTRESS of the RANCH.
By FRED T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.' Crown 8vo. 6s.
"A racy American story."—Scotsman.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.
HIGHLAND COUSINS. By WILLIAM BLACK. Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.
THE LIFE OF NELSON
The Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain.
2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.
"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics.....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.
"A carefully planned, skilfully executed, and withal elaborate portraiture of the life and character of the greatest of our naval heroes.....This great work."—Athenæum.
"A great biography, and one to be read by all men."—Spectator.

VOLUME I. NOW READY, AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.
THE ROYAL NAVY
A History from the Earliest Times to the Present.
By WM. LAIRD CLOWES,
Fellow of King's College, London.
Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, &c.
5 vols. with numerous Illustrations, royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each, net.
The First Volume of the History brings the narrative to the reign of Queen Elizabeth.
"He has produced an indispensable and standard work."—Standard.
"Everywhere the book affords evidence of painstaking research."—Morning Post.

HOW to GROW BEGONIAS.
By G. A. FARINI, F.R.H.S., Author of 'Through the Kalahari Desert.' With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.
TALES from CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL, told to Children. By Mrs. FREWEN LORD, Author of 'Tales from Westminster Abbey,' &c. With Plan and View of the Cathedral. Crown 8vo. boards, 1s.

SIXTIETH YEAR OF ISSUE.
UNDER THE EXPRESS SANCTION OF HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
LOW'S HANDBOOK to the CHARITIES of LONDON. Edition 1897. Edited by H. R. DUMVILLE, B.A. Containing particulars of nearly 1,200 Metropolitan Institutions, Revised according to the latest Reports. Paper covers, 1s.; red cloth, 1s. 6d.
London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

CLARENDON PRESS LIST.

Immediately, in 2 vols. medium 8vo. half-roan, price 28*s.*

 UNIFORM WITH DR. BIRKBECK HILL'S EDITIONS OF BOSWELL'S 'LIFE OF JOHNSON,' AND 'LETTERS OF SAMUEL JOHNSON.'

JOHNSONIAN MISCELLANIES.

Arranged and Edited by GEORGE BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L. LL.D., Honorary Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford.

 This Work includes all the Writings generally entitled 'JOHNSONIANA,' most of which have never yet been edited with an adequate Commentary.

OTHER WORKS BY THE SAME EDITOR.

BOSWELL'S LIFE of JOHNSON. Including Boswell's Journal of a Tour to the Hebrides, and Johnson's Diary of a Journey into North Wales. With Portraits and Facsimiles, 8vo. half bound, 3*l.* 3*s.*

SPECTATOR.—"The most exhaustive edition of Boswell's famous work that has hitherto been published."

WIT and WISDOM of SAMUEL JOHNSON. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

SCOTSMAN.—"Probably no man living knows the works and character of Dr. Johnson better than Dr. Birkbeck Hill. The selection and arrangement of characteristic passages from his works and his life and his letters have been admirably done."

RASSELAS. With Introduction and Notes. Extra fcap. 8vo. bevelled boards, 3s. 6d.; parchment, 4*s.* 6*d.*

SCOTTISH REVIEW.—"By far the handiest and best edition of the work which we have seen."

Crown 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.*

The ISLANDS of the AEGEAN. By H. FANSHAWE TOZER, M.A. F.R.G.S.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"Mr. Tozer's remarks on Crete are of special value just now."

SECOND EDITION, 3 vols. 8vo. 2*l.* 10*s.*

MONUMENTA RITUALIA ECCLESIAE ANGLICANAE. Contains the whole order for the Election, Consecration, and Coronation of English Sovereigns from King Ethelred to Queen Victoria, and the Coronation Service for a Queen Consort. By W. MASKELL, M.A.

TIMES.—"We cordially recommend the work as full of interest for the general reader, and as a very mine of valuable material for the student of ecclesiastical antiquity and a Church historian."

Just published, demy 8vo. cloth, Vol. I. 12*s.* 6*d.*

BURNET'S HISTORY of MY OWN TIME: the Reign of Charles II. A New Edition based on that of M. J. ROUTH, D.D., and Edited by OSMUND AIRY, M.A.

SCOTSMAN.—"There can be no doubt that this edition will at once take its place as the leading edition of the work for the use of modern readers."

Just published, 2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, pp. lxx-876, 18*s.*

BRITISH MORALISTS: being Selections from Writers principally of the Eighteenth Century. Edited, with an Introduction and Analytical Index, by L. A. SELBY-BIGGE, M.A., formerly Fellow and Lecturer of University College, Oxford.

SCOTSMAN.—"A reader interested in the ethical thought of this country in the last century could find few books, if any, by which he could be better informed."

A SELECTION OF LEXICOGRAPHICAL WORKS PUBLISHED AT THE CLARENDON PRESS.

ENGLISH. A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY on HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES: Founded mainly on the Materials Collected by the Philological Society. Imperial 4to.

			£.	s.	d.
Vol. I.	A, B	Edited by DR. MURRAY ... ... Half-morocco	2	12	6
Vol. II.	C	Edited by DR. MURRAY ... ... Half-morocco	2	12	6
Vol. III.	D, E	Edited by DR. MURRAY and HENRY BRADLEY. To be published July 1, 1897.
Vol. IV.	F, G, H	Edited by DR. MURRAY and HENRY BRADLEY. Five Sections of F already published.

AN ANGLO-SAXON DICTIONARY, based on the MS. Collections of the late JOSEPH BOSWORTH, D.D. Edited and Enlarged by Prof. T. N. TOLLER, M.A. Part I.-III. A-SAR, 4to. stiff covers, 15*s.* each. Part IV. Sect. I. SAR-SWIDRIAN, 8*s.* 6*d.*

A STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of ANGLO-SAXON. By HENRY SWEET, M.A. Crown 4to. 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

AN ETYMOLOGICAL DICTIONARY of the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. Arranged on an Historical Basis. By W. W. SKEAT, Litt.D. Second Edition. 4to. 2*l.* 4*s.*

A Supplement to the First Edition of the above, 4to. 2*s.* 6*d.*

A MIDDLE ENGLISH DICTIONARY, containing Words used by English Writers from the Twelfth to the Fifteenth Century. By FRANCIS HENRY STRATMANN. A New Edition, Rearranged, Revised, and Enlarged by HENRY BRADLEY, M.A. Small 4to. half-morocco, 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*

A CONCISE DICTIONARY of MIDDLE ENGLISH, from A.D. 1150 to 1580. By A. L. MAYHEW, M.A., and W. W. SKEAT, Litt.D. Crown 8vo. half-roan, 7*s.* 6*d.*

AN ICELANDIC-ENGLISH DICTIONARY. Based on the MS. Collections of the late RICHARD CLEASBY. Enlarged and Completed by G. VIGFUSSON, M.A. 4to. 3*l.* 7*s.*

INDEX KEWENSIS: an Enumeration of the Genera and Species of Flowering Plants from the Time of Linnaeus to the Year 1885 inclusive. Edited by Sir J. D. HOOKER and B. D. JACKSON. 2 vols. 4to. half-morocco, 10*l.* 10*s.* net.

FOSSILS of the BRITISH ISLANDS, Stratigraphically and Zoologically Arranged. Part I.: PALAEOZOIC. By R. ETHERIDGE, F.R.SS.L. and E., F.G.S. 4to. 1*l.* 10*s.*

A GREEK-ENGLISH LEXICON. By H. G. LIDDELL, D.D., and ROBERT SCOTT, D.D. Seventh Edition, Revised and Augmented throughout. 4to. 1*l.* 16*s.*

A CONCORDANCE to the SEPTUAGINT and the other GREEK VERSIONS of the OLD TESTAMENT (including the Apocryphal Books). By the late EDWIN HATCH, M.A., and H. A. REDPATH, M.A. Six Parts. Imperial 4to. each 21*s.*

A LATIN DICTIONARY, founded on Andrews' Edition of Freund's Latin Dictionary, Revised, Enlarged, and in great part Rewritten by CHARLTON T. LEWIS, Ph.D., and CHARLES SHORT, LL.D. 4to. 1*l.* 5*s.*

A SANSKRIT-ENGLISH DICTIONARY, Etymologically and Philologically Arranged, with special reference to Greek, Latin, German, Anglo-Saxon, English, and other Cognate Indo-European Languages. By Sir M. MONIER-WILLIAMS, D.C.L. 4to. 4*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*

THESAURUS SYRIACUS: collegerunt Quatremère, Bernstein, Lorsbach, Arnoldi, Agrell, Field, Roediger. Edidit R. PAYNE SMITH, S.T.P. Vol. I. containing Fasciculi I.-V. small folio, 5*l.* 5*s.*

The First Five Fasciculi may also be had separately: Fasc. VI., 1*l.* 1*s.*; VII., 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*; VIII., 1*l.* 16*s.*; IX., 1*l.* 5*s.*

COMPENDIOUS SYRIAC DICTIONARY. Founded upon the above, and Edited by J. PAYNE SMITH (Mrs. MARGOLIOUTH). Part I, 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

ENGLISH SWAHILI DICTIONARY. By A. C. MADAN, M.A. Extra fcap. 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

A HEBREW and ENGLISH LEXICON of the OLD TESTAMENT. With an Appendix containing the Biblical Aramaic, based on the Thesaurus and Lexicon of Gesenius By FRANCIS BROWN, D.D., S. R. DRIVER, D.D., and C. A. BRIGGS, D.D. Parts I.-V. Small 4to. 2*s.* 6*d.* each.

[Part VI. in the press.

ALSO PUBLISHED BY HENRY FROWDE.

In artistic binding, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

The THACKERAYS in INDIA and some CALCUTTA GRAVES. By Sir W. W. HUNTER, K.C.S.I.

STANDARD.—"Sir William Hunter has given us a fascinating volume..... It is not easy to exaggerate the charm of this record through successive generations of generous emotions and honourable achievements."

FULL CATALOGUES POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS.

NEW NOVEL BY A. K. GREEN,
Author of 'The Leavenworth Case.'

THAT AFFAIR NEXT DOOR.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s*.

Bookman.—"The hand of the authoress of 'The Leavenworth Case' has not lost its cunning. It still weaves meshes and mazes that only itself can disentangle.....We never lost interest for a moment; we guessed and guessed, proud to be ever so little right, but nearly always proved wrong. Among detective stories it is quite in the first rank."

STEPHEN LESCOMBE,

Bachelor of Arts.

By JULIUS H. HURST.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s*.

[Ready next week.

THE BABE, B.A.:

Being the Uneventful History of a Young Gentleman at Cambridge University.

By E. F. BENSON.

Illustrated. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6*s*.

British Review.—"Humorous, pointed, and frequently brilliant criticism of contemporary university life and contemporary university education."

UNIFORM WITH 'THE BABE, B.A.'

HARVARD STORIES:

Sketches of the Undergraduate.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 6*s*.

THIRD EDITION.

THE MAKER OF MOONS.

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, illustrated, 6*s*.

Daily Telegraph.—"We cannot for the moment call to mind any latter-day collection of short tales in which vivacious fancy and subtle wit are so happily combined with constructive dexterity and descriptive force.....Everybody should read these delightful stories."

BY THE SAME AUTHOR.

THE RED REPUBLIC. 6s.

A KING AND A FEW DUKES. 6s.

BOOKS AND THEIR MAKERS DURING THE MIDDLE AGES.

A Study of the Conditions of the Production and Distribution of Literature, from the Fall of the Roman Empire to the Close of the Seventeenth Century.

By GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM, M.A.,
Author of 'Authors and their Public in Ancient Times.'

2 vols. (sold separately), demy 8vo. cloth extra, 10*s*. 6*d*. each.

Complete Catalogue on application.

24, BEDFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.;
and New York.

READY SHORTLY.

Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 3*s*. 6*d*.

THE COUNSELS OF WILLIAM DE BRITAINE.

A Volume of Seventeenth Century Precepts and Aphorisms.

Edited by HERBERT STURMER.

Mr. F. E. ROBINSON also begs to announce that he has almost completed arrangements for producing

TWO SERIES OF

POPULAR HISTORIES OF THE COLLEGES OF OXFORD AND CAMBRIDGE.

Each Volume will be written by some one officially connected with the College of which it treats, or at least by some member of that College who is specially qualified for the task.

Further particulars will be announced later.

London: F. E. ROBINSON,
20, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. GOULD, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2*s*.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post.—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News.—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser.—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull.—"Very successful."
Metropolitan.—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News.—"Right well done."
News of the World.—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror.—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."
Echo.—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."
Nonconformist.—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give out the genuine ring."
Graphic.—"We may fairly say that Dr Bennett has taken up the mantle of Dibdin."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

NEW NOVEL OF THEATRICAL LIFE.

"Distinctly powerful. . . . A series of vigorous if rather satiric social pictures in a narrative of no common interest and power."—Glasgow Herald.

DAUGHTERS of THESPIS. By JOHN BICKERDYKE, Author of 'Lady Val's Elopement' &c. Published at 6*s*.

Simpkin, Marshall & Co. Paternoster-row, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM
Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and the Drama

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

The DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.
A BOOK on FLY FISHING.
PHILIP and ALEXANDER of MACEDON.
STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of ANGLO-SAXON.
NEW NOVELS—The Dagger and the Cross, Mr Blake of Newmarket, The Knight's Jade, A Pot of Honey, Broken Away, In a Country Town, The Kestrys of Cather Castle.
EDUCATIONAL LITERATURE.
TALES of ADVENTURE.
The HISTORY of CANADA.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
PROFESSOR LAND, The DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY, 'The CHAURAPANCHASIKA.'

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Astronomical Literature, The Proposed Jungfrau Railway, Societies, Meetings, Gossip.
FINE ARTS—The Salons at Paris, The Society of Painters in Water Colours, Excavations at El Kab, Sale, Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week, Gossip, Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; Library Table; Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM for MAY 1 contains Articles on

A HISTORY of the ENGLISH NAVY.
EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGES.
PROF. SAINTSBURY on MEDIÆVAL EUROPEAN LITERATURE.
HEROES of the NATIONS—ROBERT BRUCE.
NEW NOVELS—The Pilgrimage of the Ben Beriah, Elementary Jane, Essentially Human, Sweet Irish Eyes, Life Again, Love Again, Cousin Jem: As a Roaring Lion.
MILITARY LITERATURE.
SCOTTISH STORIES.
ANTIQUARIAN LITERATURE.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
'TRAVEL and BIG GAME', TWO PROTHALAMIA; The INTERNATIONAL LITERARY CONGRESS.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Bicycles; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—The Royal Academy; The New Gallery; Vitruvians; Sale; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week.

The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

(EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—Loreto—"No birds in last year's nest"—Graham Family—"S. I."—Eyre—Queen's Waterman—Dowry for Cardiff Girls—Caen Wood—Angels as Supporters—"Motelet"—Cornish Superstition—"Teetotal"—Parallel Passages—Dr. Johnson's Residences—"Ruthn" Drop—Bevis Marks—Easter Riding in Tyrol—Wesleyan Monuments—Newberry Will—Alderman Beckford's Speech.

QUERIES:—"Barley-men"—"Caif"—Escape of Charles I—Hatchments in Churches—Order of the Bath—"A cat may look at a king"—Sergeant Kite—Monkish Chronology—Dewsberry Family—Frozen Music—Cock-throwing—"Your petitioners will ever pray"—Wooden Church—W. Eddis—Oratory and Intoxication—Good Friday Custom—Dolor as a Christian Name—Portrait of Sir J. Gibson—"Clavus griophili"—The Clock saved his Life—Monmouth Rebellion—Cormac—Princess Amelia.

REPLIES:—Byron's Birthplace—Miss Fairbrother—The Weeping Infant—Carnation—"Vine"—Lead Pencil—Hole House—Greatest happiness of the greatest number"—Warts—Mrs. Penelhost—Chelmsford Murder—Memorial to Lord Sherbrooke—Death of Miss Bathurst—Canon Driver on Usury—Hanaster—Sir E. Littleton—Spanish Armada—"Maligna lux"—Tower Buttresses—Swanton—"Rummer"—"Barghest"—"Invultation"—Longest Words in English—"Altar Gates"—"Halifax Shilling"—Chare roof—Bevis de Hampton—Earls of Derwentwater—Author of Fable—Scots Greys at Blenheim—Hand of Glory—George III. Shilling—Lancashire Customs—Authors Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Fea's 'Flight of the King'—Morris's 'Francis Orpen Morris'—Seager's 'Natural History in Shakespeare's Time'—Watkins's 'Natural History of the Ancients'—Fulling's 'Order of the Coif'—Macdonald's 'Chronologies and Calendars.'

Notices to Correspondents.

LAST WEEK'S NUMBER (May 8) contains—

NOTES:—Danteiana—Books on Alchemy—Chapel-snake—Changes in Trades—G. Romney—Ghost Names—"Stand the racket"—Three acres and a cow"—Free-Lance—D. N. B.—M. P.s—"Civis Romanus sum"—History of the Guillotine.

QUERIES:—Scots Greys at Blenheim—Ship Constitution—Veil of the Queen of Scots—"Toad under the harrow"—"Cadock"—Holmby House—Local Areas—Bible of 1650—Tenor Bells—Capt. R. Cole—Evance—"Not worth a rap"—Preservation of Bronze—Binstead—J. Callow—Phillips-Judd Family—Nursery Rhyme—Thompson, Dean of Raphoe—'Chanson de Roland'—Ben Jonson—Motto in Gibbon's 'History'—Irish Costers—Dukes of Aquitaine and Normandy—Rev. M. Williams.

REPLIES:—Browning's Maternal Ancestors—Chaucer and Villani—"Dead rides Sir Morten"—"Rarely"—Eagles Captured at Waterloo—'Old Mortality'—"Fighting for conciliation"—Sir M. Costa—"Wallop"—Wyvill—Author Wanted—Cutting Dairymaids' Hair—'Mally Lee'—London Topography—Dewsbery Family—Bragade Medals for Battle of Nile—"Arse Verse"—Bishops' Wigs—Holly Meadows—Fit—Fought—Tomb of Mahmood—"Feer and Flet"—Skates—British Steamers—Red, White, Blue—J. Clayton—Blanckenhagen—Hanwell Church—Law Stationer—"Pinasced"—Wooden Pitchers—Noblemen's Door plates—Hotham of Dalton—Relics—Par bland.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Sinker's 'Librarians of Trinity College'—'The Queen's Empire'—Magazines and Reviews.

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d*. each, by post, 4½*d*.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

Important Notice.—Mr. E. W. HORNUNG'S New Novel MY LORD DUKE will be published on MONDAY NEXT, May 17, price 6s.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London; and all Booksellers.

THE WARWICK LIBRARY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Under the General Editorship of Prof. C. H. HERFORD, Litt.D.

Crown 8vo. Volumes, in figured cloth, cut edges, or plain cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d. each.

NEW VOLUME, JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH LYRIC POETRY, 1500–1700. With an Introduction by FREDERICK IVES CARPENTER, M.A., Lecturer in English Literature in Chicago University.

PREVIOUSLY PUBLISHED.

ENGLISH PASTORALS. With an Introduction by E. K. Chambers, B.A.

ENGLISH LITERARY CRITICISM. With an Introduction by C. E. VAUGHAN, M.A.

ENGLISH ESSAYS. With an Introduction by J. H. Lobban, M.A.

London: BLACKIE & SON, LIMITED, 50, Old Bailey.

Bound in buckram, 3s. 6d. net.

SENTENTIÆ JURIS: Legal and other Epigram.

By WILLIAM HOLLOWAY.

The Publisher has received permission to print the following from the Author of 'John Inglesant':—

"SIR,—As a rule no class of people are more detestable to me than that of authors who send me their books; as a professed Christian I hope I do not hate anybody more; but in your case, I must in mere fairness say that I have not laughed so much for a very long time as I have over your book, so that your salad (V. 113) has not been altogether a failure, as many salads are. I am your obliged servant, J. HENRY SHORTHOUSE."

"William Holloway, Esq."

GEORGE REDWAY, Hart-street, Bloomsbury.

KEGAN PAUL, TRENCH, TRÜBNER & CO., LTD.

SELECTIONS FROM THE WORKS OF SIR LEWIS MORRIS.

WITH LATEST PORTRAIT.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth plain, 4s. 6d.; watered silk, gilt edges, 5s.

"A high purpose can be discerned in all that he has written.....This volume of selections made by the writer himself and including all, or nearly all, the pieces that are generally conceded to show him at his best will probably make him known to many more readers."—Times.

"The selection is a choice representation. We pity the man, to say nothing of the woman, who could read 'Trafalgar Square' or 'The Organ Boy' without a deep thrill of responsive emotion."

Leeds Mercury.

The FRENCH REVOLUTION and ENGLISH LITERATURE. By EDWARD DOWDEN, LL.D. D.C.L. Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

An IRREGULAR CORPS in MATABELELAND. By Col. H. PLUMER. Post 8vo. 9s.

TWO NEW NOVELS.

The FAULT of ONE. By Effie Adelaide Rowlands. Crown 8vo. 6s. A New Novel by a Writer well known in America.

"The story is excellently written. It has an effective climax and a pleasant ending, and is sure to find many readers."—Scotsman.

The WAY of the WIND. By Charles Kennett Burrow, Author of 'Asteck's Madonna.' Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"The drama is worked out with psychological insight and human pity, and with a profound sense of the genuinely tragical elements in life. We welcome in Mr. Burrow a notable recruit to the ranks of serious writers of fiction."—Academy.

"Infinitely pathetic.....The finale is distinctly original and unexpected."—Pall Mall Gazette.

PATERNOSTER HOUSE, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON, W.C.

Crown 8vo. cloth, Half-a-Crown.

OUTSPOKEN ESSAYS on SOCIAL SUBJECTS. By E BELFORT BAX. Contents:—1. From Phallism to Purism. 2. The Everlasting Female. 3. The Materialistic Doctrine of History. 4. The Futility of Holiness. 5 Early Christianity and Modern Socialism. 6. Century-Ends and Mid-Centuries. 7. The Rule of the Small Middle-Class. 8. Two Questions begging "Saws." 9. Luxury, Ease, and Vice. 10. The Natural History of the Nonconformist Conscience. 11. Value. 12. Voluntaryism v Socialism.

ANNALS of TOIL or LABOUR. HISTORY OUTLINES, ROMAN and BRITISH. By MORRISON DAVIDSON. Two Books, 1s. each.

A CREED for CHRISTIAN SOCIALISTS. By the DEAN of ELY. 1s.; cloth, 2s.

LAWS of ETERNAL LIFE. Studies in the Church Catechism. By Rev. STEWART HEADLAM. 1s.; or cloth, 2s.

London: William Reeves, 185, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

BY PROFESSOR CAMPBELL BLACK, F.R.S.E.

The MEDICAL ENVIRONMENT. 1s. net.

Hugh Hopkins, 17, West Regent-street, Glasgow.

The URINE in HEALTH and DISEASE. 7s. 6d.

Baillière, Tindall & Cox, 20, King William-street, London.

LECTURES on BRIGHT'S DISEASE. 2s. 6d.

The FUNCTIONAL DISEASES of the URINARY and REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS. 5s.

J. & A. Churchill, 7, Great Marlborough-street, London.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS

(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),

EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Established 1849.

Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

MEMORY.

PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM. The last, most complete, and perfect Edition. Arranged for Self-Instruction.

Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading. Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2.50 American, 10s. 6d. English, post free.

Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.

Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.

NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.

A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.

EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—

SUGAR—

TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.

And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

JUBILEE VOLUME OF 'A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.'

To be ready immediately, demy 8vo. cloth, 12*s.*

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES,

FROM 1880 TO THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

 Uniform with the LIBRARY EDITION of the first Four Volumes.

Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED'S New Novel, NULMA, is now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

SIR WALTER BESANT'S New Novel, A FOUNTAIN SEALED, will be ready immediately, with a Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess. Crown 8vo cloth, gilt top, 6s.

CLARK RUSSELL'S New Novel, The LAST ENTRY, with Frontispiece by Max Cowper, is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

JOHN STAFFORD'S New Novel, CARLTON PRIORS, by the Author of 'Doris and I,' is now ready at all Libraries and Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY, by RICHARD DOWLING, Author of 'The Mystery of Killard,' is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A NINETEENTH-CENTURY MIRACLE, by "Z Z" (LOUIS ZANGWILL), will be ready at all Booksellers' on May 20. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A COUNTRY SWEETHEART. By DORA RUSSELL, Author of 'Footprints in the Snow.' Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s.*

OF HIGH DEGREE. By CHARLES GIBBON. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

DAGONET ABROAD. By GEORGE R. SIMS. Cheaper Edition. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s.*; cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.* [May 20.

BEATRICE and BENEDICK. By HAWLEY SMART. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* [May 20.

MARK TWAIN'S CHOICE WORKS. With Portrait, Memoir, and Illustrations. CHEAPER LIBRARY EDITION. Crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* [May 20.

Also, uniform, crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. With 312 Illustrations.
The GILDED AGE. With 212 Illustrations.

OTHERS TO FOLLOW.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

LOVICE. By Mrs. HUNGERFORD, Author of 'Molly Bawn.'

BEYOND the PALE. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' SECOND EDITION now ready.

WITH the RED EAGLE. By WILLIAM WESTALL. THIRD EDITION.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. Illustrated by the Author.

ACADEMY NOTES, 1897. With nearly 200 Illustrations. 1*s.*

ILLUSTRATED GUIDE to the PARIS SALON. With 400 Illustrations. 3*s.*

The RIDDLE RING. By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the RUSSIAN SECRET SERVICE. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ZAMBRA the DETECTIVE. By HEADON HILL. New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* [Shortly.

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugène Rougon). By ÉMILE ZOLA. With Preface by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

MADAME SANS-GENE. (Founded on SARDOU and MOREAU'S Play.) By EDMOND LEPELLETIER. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

The CHARLATAN. By Robert Buchanan and Henry Murray.
The PLUNGER. By Hawley Smart.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.
MR. JERVIS. By B. M. Croker.
The WHITE VIRGIN. By G. Manville Fenn.
The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. Clark Russell.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray.
BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.

RIE'S DIARY. By ANNE COATES. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* [Shortly.

HIS DEAD PAST. By C. J. WILLS. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.* [Shortly.

A MISSING WITNESS. By FRANK BARRETT. With 8 Illustrations by W. H. Margetson. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

CAVALRY LIFE and REGIMENTAL LEGENDS. By JOHN STRANGE WINTER. New Edition, the Two Series in One Volume. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A LEVANTINE FAMILY. By BAYLE ST. JOHN. New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

NEW EDITIONS OF POPULAR NOVELS.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

BY WOMAN'S WIT. By Mrs. Alexander.
The HARDING SCANDAL. By Frank Barrett.
DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn Linton.
YOUNG LOCHINVAR. By J. E. Muddock.
A MINION of the MOON. By T. W. Speight.
MRS. TREGASKISS. By Mrs. Campbell Praed.

DICTIONARY of WORDS, FACTS, and PHRASES. By ELIEZER EDWARDS. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ENGLISH SURNAMES: their Sources and Significations. By CHARLES WAREING BARDSLEY, M.A., Hon. Canon of Carlisle. Fifth Edition, with a New Preface. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 15, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3630. SATURDAY, MAY 22, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6
SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

THE LIBER STUDIORUM of J. M. W. TURNER, R.A.,
And NEW MEZZOTINTS by FRANK SHORT, to complete the Book, ON VIEW at ROBERT DUNTHORNE'S, the REMBRANDT GALLERY, 5, Vigo-street, W. Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

AN EXHIBITION of BOOKBINDING, showing a new method of decoration in hand embossed leather, modelled and coloured, will be OPEN on MAY 26, and few following weeks, at LIBRARY BUREAU, LIMITED, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

SUMMER SCHOOL of the LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.
The FIFTH SESSION will COMMENCE on MONDAY EVENING, May 31, with a Reception at 7.30 P.M., in the Rooms of the Association, at 20, Hanover-square, W., and will be continued during the week. Prizes will be offered for competition. Intending Students should send in their names without delay to the undersigned, from whom further information may be obtained. All communications should be accompanied by a stamped addressed envelope
HENRY D. ROBERTS,
Hon. Sec. of the Summer School Committee.
St. Saviour's Public Library, 44½, Southwark Bridge-road, S.E.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE, 1897.
President—
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.
Hon. Treasurer—
HENRY R. TEDDER, Esq.
Hon. Secretary—
J. Y. W. MACALISTER, Esq.,
20, Hanover-square, W.
The Conference will be held (by the kind permission of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Corporation) in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, GUILDHALL, LONDON, on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Lord Mayor has invited the members of the Conference to a Conversazione in the Mansion House on the evening of July 13.
An Exhibition of Library Appliances will be an important feature of the Conference. Intending exhibitors should communicate with the Hon. Secretary of the Exhibition Committee, THOMAS MASON, Esq., 115 St Martin's-lane, W.C. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to attend all meetings and social gatherings. Applications for membership should be sent at once to the HON. SECRETARY.
N.B.—The Programme of Papers is now complete, and no further offers can be considered.

YOUNG LADY (experienced) wishes post as SECRETARY. Has had sound English education. French and German (acquired abroad). Shorthand, Type-writing, used to reading aloud. Good references.—Address A. L. P., care of Messrs. Reynell & Son, Advertisement Offices, 44, Chancery-lane, W.C.

AS DRAMATIC, MUSICAL, and LITERARY CRITIC.—Advertiser, young, energetic, and competent, with influence, and also capital to invest, desires position on Editorial Staff of good Paper.—Address ALPHA, Watson's, 150, Fleet-street, E.C.

MR. J. N. W. B. ROBERTSON, Editor of 'The Liturgies of SS. Chrysostom and Basil,' a work commended by the Patriarchs and other Authorities of the Eastern Church, is prepared to UNDERTAKE COPYING, or RESEARCH WORK in GREEK, LATIN, or ENGLISH; or would act as Librarian or Curator of an Institution. Has a knowledge of Hebrew and Syriac.—104, St. George's-avenue, Tufnell Park, N.

TRANSLATIONS from French, German, Spanish, Italian into English. Pamphlets, Books, Letters, Documents, Plays, &c. Accuracy, promptitude.—Address TRANSLATOR, 131, Jermyn-street, London, W.

ADVERTISING.—Thoroughly competent Man with good connexion or Agent wanted for a new High-Class Literary Monthly.—Apply Messrs. Service & Paton, 5, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

MALVERN COLLEGE.—The HEAD MASTERSHIP of this College has become VACANT by the resignation of the Rev. A. St John Gray in consequence of ill health, and the Council will proceed at the earliest date possible to elect a successor. Candidates must be Graduates of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin University, and in Priest's orders at the time of election or within three months after appointment.—Applications, accompanied by testimonials, not exceeding six in number, must be sent in on or before Friday, June 11, to the SECRETARY of the College, who will in the mean time supply any further information that may be desired.

HEAD MASTERSHIP, JOHN WATSON'S INSTITUTION, EDINBURGH.
The Directors invite applications for the Post of HEAD MASTER of the above Institution for the Maintenance and Education of One Hundred Children of the better classes, between the ages of seven and fifteen.
Candidates must be Graduates of one of the Universities of the United Kingdom, and not over thirty-five years of age.
The Salary will be 300*l.* a year, with a Furnished Residence, and the duties will begin early in September next. The Head Master is required to attend the Established Church of Scotland.
Applications, stating age and experience, together with twenty copies of testimonials, printed or type-written, must be sent not later than June 1 to SIR JOHN GILLESPIE, 15, South Charlotte-street, Edinburgh.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, 30, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.
WANTED, a LADY as SECRETARY. Salary, without board or lodging, 120*l.*, rising to 150*l.* a year. Preference given to Candidates holding a University Degree or who have been educated at one of the recognized Colleges for Women.—Application, by letter only, to the SECRETARY, from whom further particulars can be obtained, on or before June 8.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL, CANADA.
CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.
The Governors of McGill University are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the newly founded PROFESSORSHIP of ZOOLOGY. Salary $2,500 per annum.—Candidates from Great Britain are requested to forward applications, with any testimonials and references they may desire to submit, on or before June 15, addressed PRINCIPAL, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria-street, Westminster.

CHANGE of ADDRESS.—The Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A. LL.B., Lecturer in Public Reading and Speaking in King's College, London, takes SUNDAY DUTY by permission of the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishop of London, and other Bishops, and receives Private Pupils for Elocution, Voice Training, Speech-making, &c.—24, Warwick-road, Earl's-court, S.W.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination.—DRAUGHTSMAN in the HYDROGRAPHICAL DEPARTMENT in the ADMIRALTY (17–25), JULY 7th. Expertness in Hydrographical Chart Drawing essential. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, in Association with the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn-road.—For Prospectus, Scholarships, &c., apply to THE SECRETARY, at the School, 30, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON, for WOMEN, York-place, Baker-street, W.
Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.
The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGAN on THURSDAY, April 29.
The HALF-TERM BEGINS on MONDAY, May 31.
ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.
ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48*l.*, and ONE CLIFT SCHOLARSHP in ARTS, value Thirty Guineas, each tenable for Three Years, will be awarded on the result of the Examination to be held at the College on JUNE 24 and 25.
Names to be sent in to the Principal not later than June 15.
LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BERNOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

A FIRM of PUBLISHERS can receive a GENTLEMAN as PARTNER who will invest about 1,000*l.* Salary 150*l.* per annum, besides good return on Capital. Particulars can be given at interview only and in confidence.—Address PARTNER, Box 1,364, Sell's Advertising Offices, London.

TRADE JOURNAL FOR SALE, established some years, capable of great development in the hands of the right person. Price 1,500*l.* Terms could be arranged. JOURNAL, Mather & Crowther, Limited, Advertising Offices, New Bridge-street, E.C.

TO LECTURE SOCIETIES.
MR. R. WALLACE, M.P. (Edin.), is now making his Lecturing arrangements for the Season 1897-98. Subjects:—'Cant,' 'House of Commons,' 'Mrs. Grundy,' and 'Shams.' Details on application.—9, Edith-villas, London, W.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations. French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,
WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6890. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879.
Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6*d.*, by HORACE COX, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, LIMITED, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MANUSCRIPTS in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.,
Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

Catalogues.

MESSRS. KARSLAKE'S CATALOGUES are out of print, and as no further ones can be issued at present the stock is being offered at a reduction of 15 per cent. from the marked prices. Illuminated Missals—First Editions—Bindings—Caricatures by Rowlandson, Cruikshank, &c.
Collectors are invited to inspect the stock.
61, Charing Cross road.

COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS, mostly of the English School, printed in Colours, Red and Brown Tint, &c., by Bartolozzi, Hamilton, Morland, Bunbury, Peters, Shelley, Russell, Conway, Romney, J. R. Smith, Buck, Cipriani, Singleton, Stothard, Kauffmann, Wheatley, Westall, &c. Mezzotint Portraits by Sir J. Reynolds, Gainsborough, Sir T. Lawrence, Hoppner, Romney, &c., from the Collection of FREDERICK, EARL of BESSBOROUGH—Modern Etchings by Whistler, Seymour Haden, &c.—Rowlandson, Original Drawings in Colours—Original Drawings by Burne-Jones, Wm. Blake, Sir T. Lawrence, Old Crome, Cruikshank, Downman, Richard Doyle, Sir D. Wilkie, &c.—Speculative Oil Paintings by Early English Masters.
ON SALE AT
E. PARSONS & SONS',
Fine-Art Dealers, Book and Print Sellers,
45, BROMPTON-ROAD, LONDON, S.W.
All Cash Orders carriage free.
 Old Mezzotints, Coloured Prints, Old Drawings, Miniatures, and Books with Illustrations bought for prompt Cash. Gentlemen having the same kindly report. All communications answered by return of post.
Catalogues sent gratis on receipt of Name and Address.
Also SECOND-HAND BOOK CATALOGUE, ready in a few days.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books and Manuscripts
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 9) OF RECENT PURCHASES now ready, post free. Statement
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS.
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, SIXPENCE.—WM. WARE, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO., 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth. Books Illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.
Fine Library Sets—Works Illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3d. post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

NOW READY,
ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, No. 12, of ETHNOGRAPHICAL SPECIMENS, containing 179 Illustrations of Weapons, Utensils, Ornaments, &c. from all parts of the world. Price 1s. post free.—W. D. WESSELS, Bicester, Oxon.

CATALOGUE, No. 227, GENERAL LITERATURE, containing 1,400 items of History, Biography, Travels, Topography, the Fine Arts, a number of Political Pamphlets, Civil War Tracts, and Books relating to the Queen.
Gratis and post free.
FRANCIS EDWARDS, 83, High-street, Marylebone, London, W.

AMERICAN
COLONIAL TRACTS.
MONTHLY.
Number One, MAY, 1897.

A DISCOURSE CONCERNING THE DESIGNED ESTABLISHMENT OF A NEW COLONY TO THE SOUTH OF CAROLINA, IN THE MOST DELIGHTFUL COUNTRY OF THE UNIVERSE, BY SIR ROBERT MOUNTGOMERY, BARONET, LONDON, 1717.

Price 25 Cents. $3.00 a Year.

PUBLISHED BY
GEORGE P. HUMPHREY,
25, EXCHANGE-STREET,
ROCHESTER,
NEW YORK,
U.S.A.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

WHAT D'YE LACK?
Ask Miss MILLARD, of Teddington, Middlesex, for any Book ever issued since the advent of printing (however rare or plentiful) up to the very last work published, also for any curio or object of interest under the canopy of heaven, for she prides herself on being enabled, nine times out of ten, to supply these wants. She has the largest assemblage of Miscellaneous Bijouterie in the world, and is always a ready, willing, and liberal buyer for prompt cash.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,
16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.
(nearly opposite the National Gallery).
Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7l. 10s.
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5l. 5s.

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.
An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.
This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

FAMOUS MASTERS IN FOREIGN GALLERIES,
Including the Masterpieces of the Louvre, Uffizi, Pitti, Dresden, Berlin, and other Collections. The same size and price as the above.

FRAMES specially designed and executed in oak and walnut.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to
THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.
SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.
All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.
CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1s. 6d. each.
Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,
30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.
BRANCH OFFICES:—
241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).
Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

LONDON LIBRARY,
ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3l. a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 2l. 2s., to Members, 16s. C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

FOR SALE.—SHAKSPERE.—A FACSIMILE of the TEXT of the FIRST FOLIO of 1623, illustrated by Sir T. Noël Paton, R.S.A., 9 vols. unbound and uncut, 14l.—A. H., 15, High-street, Wells, Somerset.

FOR SALE, a fine COLLECTION of PRINTS, made during the last thirty years, including Woodcuts, Etchings by the most famous Masters, and Engravings from Sixteenth to Eighteenth Century; also a select Library of Illustrated Books, of same period.
For particulars address care of 33, Wandle-road, Upper Tooting.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.
(The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each; 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

Sales by Auction.

Musical Instruments and Music.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS, comprising Grand and Cottage Pianofortes—Harmonium and Organs, including a Two-Manual Mason & Hamlin American Organ—Double and Single Action Harps—Violins, Violas, Violoncellos and Double Basses, with the Bows, Cases and Fittings—Italian, Spanish, and other Guitars, also a large quantity of American Zither Banjos—Brass and Wood-Wind Instruments—and several small Libraries of Music, both Ancient and Modern.
Catalogues on application.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, and Following Day, at half-past 1 o'clock precisely, RARE BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.
Catalogues on receipt of two stamps.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, May 31, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, including a small Collection of Gold and Silver Coins—Old English, Dresden, Oriental, and other China—Antique and Modern Silver—Sheffield Plate—Enamels—Bronzes—a small Collection of Netsukes and Norwegian Curios; also a few pieces of Antique Furniture.
Catalogues on application.

Miscellaneous Engravings and Paintings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 3 and Following Day at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS ENGRAVINGS, WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS, and PAINTINGS.

Catalogues in preparation.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles, many with Dates and Engravers' Names.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

The Liturgical Library of a well-known Collector, lately deceased.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10 at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LITURGICAL LIBRARY of a well-known COLLECTOR, lately deceased, comprising Sarum and other Missals, Breviaries, Horæ MSS. on vellum, some with Miniatures—Early Printed Works, many with Woodcuts—Books in old morocco bindings, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Library of the late Rev. ROBT. CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 11, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Canon R. C. JENKINS, comprising Theological and Miscellaneous Books, both English and Foreign.

Catalogues in preparation.

Choice Books from the Library of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, choice BOOKS from the LIBRARY of a well-known COLLECTOR, including Cruikshank's Humourist, 4 vols.—Egan's Life in London, First Edition—Ainsworth's Jack Sheppard, First Edition—Cruikshank's Fairy Library, 4 vols., with Double Set of Plates—Grimm's German Popular Stories, 2 vols., First Edition—Maxwell's Irish Rebellion—Poetical Magazine, 4 vols., Plates by Rowlandson—Nimrod's Life of a Sportsman, Coloured Plates by Alken—Real Life in London, 2 vols.—Keats's Endymion, First Edition—Scott's British Field Sports—Lafontaine, Contes et Nouvelles, extra illustrated—Goldsmith's Traveller, First Edition—Vicar of Wakefield, Coloured Plates by Rowlandson—Voltaire, Pucelle, Proof Plates—Barker's Greenwich Hospital, Coloured Plates—Quarles's Emblems and Hieroglyphics, 1639—Swift's Tale of a Tub, First Edition—Defoe's Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols., 1719—MSS. on Vellum, with Miniatures—First Editions of Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, &c., the majority of which are in choice bindings by Riviere, Zaehnsdorf, Bedford, &c.

Catalogues in preparation.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS.

The Valuable and Extensive Collection of Medals commemorative of British History.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Five Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of MEDALS commemorative of British History, the Property of the late HYMAN MONTAGU, Esq., F.S.A., Vice-President of the Numismatic Society.

May be viewed. Catalogues, illustrated with Nine Autotype Plates, may be had, price 3s. each.

The Library of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A. LL.D.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 25, and Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Rev. H. A. HOLDEN, M.A., LL.D., Litt.D., formerly Head Master of Queen Elizabeth's School, Ipswich, Editor of Aristophanes, Plutarch's 'Lives,' &c., consisting of valuable Classical Works—History—Poetry—Critical Treatises—Scientific Periodicals—Educational Books—First Editions of the Writings of A. C. Swinburne, Robert Bridges, Matthew Arnold, Robert Browning, &c.—Firdusi, The Shah Nameh, Manuscript, with Miniatures, Sæc. XVII.—Thackeray's The Snob, the Eleven Numbers complete, 1829; also a SELECTED PORTION of the LIBRARY of the late Rev. W. WALBRAN, of Pendleton, Clitheroe, comprising Theological and Classical Works—Archæological Publications—Dictionaries, &c.; Horæ Beatæ Marie Virginis, Manuscript on Vellum, with finely Painted Miniatures, Sæc. XV.—Rare Books on Gardening, &c.; and other Properties, consisting of Scarce Books relating to America—Chronicles—Voyages, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The GREATER PORTION of the Collection of valuable Artistic Greek Coins, the Property of R. HOBART SMITH, Esq., of New York.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 31 at 1 o'clock precisely the GREATER PORTION of the valuable COLLECTION of ARTISTIC GREEK COINS, the Property of R. HOBART SMITH, Esq., of New York, U.S.A., also a number of ROMAN CONSULAR and IMPERIAL COINS, in Gold, Silver, and Bronze, including some beautifully patinated First and Second Brass.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Modern Books in choice condition, the Library of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 1 and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, Valuable MODERN BOOKS in choice condition, the Library of a GENTLEMAN, including Brownings (Robert and E. B.) Works, Large Paper—Hepworth Dixon's Works, 22 vols.—Emerson's Works, 11 vols. Large Paper—Guizot's Works, 22 vols.—Hook's Lives of the Archbishops, 12 vols.—Collier's Reprints, Collier's Shakespeare, 8 vols., privately printed—Gazette des Beaux Arts, 30 vols.—La Basilica di S. Marco in Venezia—Works illustrated by Gustave Doré in handsome bindings—Pugdale's Monasticon, 8 vols.—La collection Spitzer—Andrew Lang's Publications, chiefly on Large Paper or the Special Issues—G. P. Lewis's Works, 19 vols.—J. S. Mill's Works, 16 vols.—William Morris's Works—J. H. Newman's Works, 16 vols.—Niebuhr's Works, 14 vols.—Oxford English Classics, 26 vols.—The Waverley Novels, Abbotsford and Border Editions, Large Paper—Shakespeare Society's Publications, 18 vols.—Smith's Catalogue Raisonné, 9 vols.—Speeches by Eminent British Statesmen, 77 vols.—Notes and Queries, complete set, with Indexes—Ruskin's Modern Painters, Stones of Venice &c.—Winkles's English and French Cathedrals, Large Paper—Sir Joshua Reynolds's Engraved Works—Vanity Fair Album, 5 vols., &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings and Engravings, the Property of the late GEORGE BEWLEY, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS and ETCHINGS of the late GEORGE BEWLEY, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., comprising Examples of Albert Dürer, Martin Schongauer, Lucas van Leyden, &c.—Etchings by Rembrandt and other Dutch Masters—fine Foreign Portraits—Line Engravings by Wille, Woollett, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of the Works of George Cruikshank, the Property of H. W. BRUTON, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of the WORKS of GEORGE CRUIKSHANK, the Property of H. W. BRUTON, Esq., of Gloucester, comprising a most extensive Series of Books illustrated by him, in the finest condition, and many handsomely bound by celebrated Binders—Proofs before Letters of all his important Works, many being in unique state—Original Drawings, including those intended to illustrate his Autobiography—an almost complete Collection of his Caricatures and Broadsides, forming a Satirical History of the Early Part of the Present Century, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

 Fifty Copies of this Catalogue have been printed on Large and Fine Paper, only twenty-five of which are for sale, price Five Shillings each.

Drawings by Phiz illustrating Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop' and 'Barnaby Rudge.'

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COMPLETE SERIES of ORIGINAL WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS to CHARLES DICKENS'S 'OLD CURIOSITY SHOP' and 'BARNABY RUDGE,' by HABLOT K. BROWNE (PHIZ), together with a fine series of original Drawings and Sketches by George Cruikshank, T. Rowlandson, J. Leech, C. Keene, and R. Caldecott, &c., the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

MESSRS. HODGSON beg to announce that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C. (at 1 o'clock each day):—

On WEDNESDAY, May 26, and Two Following Days, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising MS. De Columpna Historia Trovana, Sæc. XV.—Von Siedlitz, Historiches Portrat-werk, 4 vols.—Anderson's Arts of Japan—Jeypore Portfolio—Log-Books of Arctic Explorations—Knight's Gallery of Portraits—Payne's Arabian Nights, 9 vols.—Shakespere's Works, by Knight, 7 vols.; by Manley Wood, 14 vols.; and by Payne Collier, 8 vols.—Landor's Works, 10 vols.—Lever's Tales of the Trains—Casanova's Memoirs, 12 vols.—Forbes and Hanley's Mollusca, 4 vols.—Baillon's History of Plants, 8 vols.; also a Selection from an old Yorkshire Library—Etchings by Guercino—Prints, &c.

On MONDAY, May 31, and Three Following Days (Wednesday, June 2, excepted), on the Premises, 55, Great Coram-street, Russell-square, W.C., the valuable and extensive LIBRARY of the RUSSELL INSTITUTION; also the Mahogany and other Book-cases—Two Billiard Tables by Thurston—Stone Statues of Antinous, Hercules, and Euphrosyne—Busts of Heroes, Poets, and Statesmen—fine Oil Painting by B. R. Haydon, R.A.—large Board-room Tables—several Card and Occasional Tables—and the usual Fittings.

Catalogues will be forwarded on application to the AUCTIONEERS, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 24, MODERN PICTURES of the late Mrs. E. FISHER, Mrs. ELINOR WAILES, and from other Private Sources.

On MONDAY, May 24, a COLLECTION of CHELSEA GROUPS and FIGURES, and other Porcelain and Decorative Objects, the Property of RICHARD RATCLIFF, Esq., of Stanford Hall, Loughborough.

On TUESDAY, June 1, OLD ENGLISH SILVER, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; beautiful JEWELS, formerly the Property of Lady ANNE ASHBURTON, and other Jewels and Lace.

On WEDNESDAY, June 2, ENGRAVINGS of the late Sir JOHN PENDER, G.C.M.G. K.C.M.G.

On THURSDAY, June 3, the CELLAR of WINES of the late Sir PEREGRINE P. F. ACLAND, Bart., of Fairfield, Bridgwater, choice Champagnes and other fine Wines.

On THURSDAY, June 3, COLLECTION of OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN, and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of a GENTLEMAN; and Old French Furniture, Decorative Objects, and Tapestry from other Sources.

On FRIDAY, June 4, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS from Private Collections and Different Sources.

THE PENDER COLLECTION.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, on SATURDAY, May 29, and MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the very extensive and valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by that well-known Amateur Sir JOHN PENDER, M.P., K.C.M.G., deceased, late of Arlington-street and Footscray-place, comprising upwards of 400 Ancient and Modern Pictures and Water-Colour Drawings, including the Celebrated Engraved Chef-d'Œuvre of J. M. W. Turner of Mercury and Herse, and many other Masterpieces of the British and Continental Schools.

Illustrated Catalogues may now be had, price One Guinea.

MANCHESTER.—Sale of a large and interesting Selection of Books, including the Antiquarian Portion of the Library formed many years ago by Dr. S. HIBBERT WARE, the Historian of Manchester.

CAPES, DUNN & PILCHER have received instructions to SELL, by AUCTION, on TUESDAY NEXT, May 25, at 11 o'clock at the GALLERY, CLARENCE STREET, MANCHESTER, valuable BOOKS the Property of Mrs. HIBBERT WARE, including Scots Discoverie of Witchcraft 1584 and many other curious Works on Witchcraft and Necromancy—Chaucer, b.l., 1561—Speed's Maps 1610—Lancashire and Cheshire Record Society, 20 vols.—the Chetham Society Publications, 137 vols., 1841-96—Original Portraits in pencil, by Jonathan Richardson, of Pope and others, mounted in an Album; also many valuable Illustrated Books the Property of the late Sir J. C. ILE, comprising Le Salon fine Illustrations 14 vols. half-morocco, Edition de Luxe 1889-93—L'Art, 41 vols. folio 1875, &c.—Les Arts Somptuaires, illustrated by Giappori, 4 vols.—and many other valuable Works.

Catalogues forwarded on application to the AUCTIONEERS.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY NEXT.

Important Sale of Curiosities.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY NEXT, May 25 and 26, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely each day, the valuable COLLECTION of AFRICAN NATIVE WORK, WEAPONS, CURIOS, COINS, &c., formed by the late WILLIAM GRAHAM, Esq.; also Carved Tusks and other Trophies from Benin City taken by Naval Officers in the recent Expedition—Native Dress, Implements, Weapons, &c., from New Guinea—Spears and Curiosities from the South Sea Islands—Bronzes—Miniatures—China Engravings—a costly Skin Carpet—Antique Furniture—Carvings—Ivories, &c.

On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, May 28, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, several expensive CHRONOMETERS—a large quantity of Telegraphic Apparatus, from the India Stores—Photographic Cameras, Lenses, Stands, by leading London Makers—Microscope, Telescopes, and other Scientific Instruments—and a general assortment of Miscellaneous Property.

On view the day prior 2 till 5, and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

WEDNESDAY, June 2.

A Choice Collection of British and Exotic Lepidoptera—Butterflies in Papers—Cabinets—Bird Skins—Shells—Minerals—and other Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on WEDNESDAY, June 2, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 10 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Sale of a Library of Books (chiefly illustrating Art); Costly Ornaments; Indian Arms; a Cabinet of Coins and Medals; Antique Silver, and other Objets d'Art; a large Collection of Autotypes; a few Water-Colour Drawings, &c., the Property of the late Dr. T. B. BARRETT, of Welshpool.

MESSRS. WILLIAM HALL, WATERIDGE & OWEN are favoured with instructions to conduct the above important SALE, at the COUNTY MART, SHREWSBURY (where the Property will be removed from Welshpool for convenience of viewing and sale), commencing TUESDAY, May 25, and Two Following Days.

Catalogues forwarded on application.

THE TEMPERANCE HALL, BIRMINGHAM.

The valuable Library of the late OLIVER PEMBERTON, Esq., F.R.C.S., J.P., Her Majesty's Coroner for the City of Birmingham.

WILLIAM FOWLER, PEMBERTON & BEWLAY will SELL by AUCTION, at the TEMPERANCE HALL, BIRMINGHAM, on THURSDAY, June 3, at 11 o'clock precisely, the choice LIBRARY as above, comprising Alken's British Sports, original edition, coloured—Sporting Magazine, a long run—Books illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, Phiz, and others—Punch, 1841-1896—Library Editions of Standard Authors—Books on Fishing, including the First Edition of Cotton's Angler and the Fifth Edition of Walton—Cromwelliana, extra illustrated—Books printed by John Baskerville—Ireland's Warwickshire Avon, unique copy—Books of Emblems (sixteenth and seventeenth centuries)—and Miscellaneous Books in all Branches of Literature, English and Foreign, upwards of 2,000 volumes.

May be viewed Tuesday and Wednesday prior and morning of Sale. Catalogues, post free, to be obtained of the AUCTIONEERS, 69, Temple-row, Birmingham, and 24, High-street, Sutton Coldfield.

THE BLACKWALL TUNNEL; Sculpture at the Royal Academy (with numerous Illustrations); Church and Mission House, Seughenydd; Design for a Mausoleum; Royal Society Conversazione; The Parthenon and the Earthquake of 1894, &c.

See the BUILDER of May 22 Post free, 4½d.

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

THE ROYAL STEWARTS.

THEIR ORIGIN AND RISE.

SEE

THE ISLE of BUTE in the OLDEN TIME.

By JAMES KING HEWISON, M.A. F.S.A. (Scot.), Minister of Rothesay.

With Illustrations, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. crown 4to. 30s. net.

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

J. W. ARROWSMITH'S LIST.

ANTHONY HOPE.

NEW LIBRARY EDITION OF

The INDISCRETION of the DUCHESS. Forming Vol. XXVII. of "Arrowsmith's 3s. 6d. Series." Crown 8vo. cloth. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations by J. Skelton.

"It is amazingly brilliant and adroit, and compels unstinted admiration."—To-day.

"Well worthy of the author of 'The Prisoner of Zenda.'"—Westminster Gazette.

"Exciting incidents crowd one upon the other and hold the reader's attention in the same close way as did those of 'The Prisoner of Zenda.'"—Publishers' Circular.

The COUNTY CRICKET CHAMPIONSHIP. From 1873 to 1896. By Rev. R. S. HOLMES. Price 1s. Forming Vol. LXXIII. of "Arrowsmith's Bristol Library."

ZISKA. By MARIE CORELLI. Gilt top, crown 8vo. 365 pp. 6s.

SECRETS of the COURTS of EUROPE. By ALLEN UPWARD. Crown 8vo. cloth. 388 pp. 6s.

RICHARD WAGNER'S LETTERS to AUGUST ROECKEL. Translated by ELEANOR C. SELLAR. With an Introductory Essay by HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN. Gilt top, crown 8vo. 178 pp. buckram 3s. 6d.

Bristol: J. W. Arrowsmith.

London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

"DIAMOND JUBILEE" VOLUME OF 'A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.'

TO BE READY IMMEDIATELY, demy 8vo. cloth, 12s.

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES,

From 1880 to the Diamond Jubilee.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

 Uniform with the LIBRARY EDITION of the first Four Volumes, which may still be had.

Mrs. CAMPBELL PRAED'S New Novel, NULMA, is now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

"A thoroughly enjoyable story."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SIR WALTER BESANT'S New Novel, A FOUNTAIN SEALED, is now ready, with a Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

LOUIS ZANGWILL'S New Novel, A NINETEENTH-CENTURY MIRACLE, by "Z Z," is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

CLARK RUSSELL'S New Novel, The LAST ENTRY, with Frontispiece by Max Cowper, is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

JOHN STAFFORD'S New Novel, CARLTON PRIORS, by the Author of 'Doris and I,' is now ready at all Libraries and Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY, by RICHARD DOWLING, Author of 'The Mystery of Killard,' is now ready at all Booksellers'. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

Dr. C. J. WILLS'S New Novel, HIS DEAD PAST, will be ready on May 27. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

RIE'S DIARY, by ANNE COATES, will be ready on May 27. Crown 8vo. silk cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d.

New Six-Shilling Novels at all Libraries.

BEYOND the PALE. By B. M. Croker, Author of 'Diana Barrington.' SECOND EDITION.

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn.'

WITH the RED EAGLE. By William WESTALL. THIRD EDITION.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. WALLER. Illustrated by the Author.

DAGONET ABROAD. By George R. SIMS. Cheap Edition. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s; cloth, 2s. 6d.

MARK TWAIN'S CHOICE WORKS. Revised by the Author. With Portrait, Memoir, and Illustrations. Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. Uniform with the other Volumes of the new COLLECTED LIBRARY EDITION, of which a list may be had.

BEATRICE and BENEDICK. By HAWLEY SMART. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The RIDDLE RING. By Justin McCARTHY, M.P. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugène Rougon). By ÉMILE ZOLA. With Preface by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

A COUNTRY SWEETHEART. By DORA RUSSELL, Author of 'Footprints in the Snow.' Post 8vo. picture boards, 2s.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

The First Edition having been exhausted on day of publication, a SECOND EDITION is now ready.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MORRICE BUCKLER.'

THE PHILANDERERS.

By A. E. W. MASON.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE SECRET OF SAINT FLOREL.

By JOHN BERWICK.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

THE FALL OF A STAR.

A NOVEL.

By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

The ANNUAL of the BRITISH SCHOOL at ATHENS. No. II. Session 1895–6. Containing (1) Reports of the Committee and of the Meeting of Subscribers; (2) Papers read at the School or otherwise illustrating its work. Crown 4to. 10s. 6d.

LIST of PAPERS.—ARCHÆOLOGY in GREECE, 1895–6. By Cecil Smith.—EXCAVATIONS in MELOS. By Cecil Smith.—EXCAVATIONS at MELOS: the East Gate. By R. C. Bosanquet.—The CAMPAIGN of ARTEMISIUM and THERMOPYLÆ. By Prof. J. B. Bury.—METEORA. By the Rev. A. H. Cruickshank.—A VISIT to CYRENE in 1895. By Herbert Weld-Blundell.—PREHISTORIC GRAVES in SYRA. By R. C. Bosanquet.—LESBOS. By W. H. D. Rouse.—The CHURCHES of MELOS. By H. M. Fletcher and S. D. Kitson.—GOULAS: the CITY of ZEUS. By Arthur J. Evans.

Now ready, demy 8vo. pp. civ–254, with Plan of Site and Buildings of Barnwell Priory (in duplicate), printed on Dutch Hand-made Paper, 21s. net. Edition limited to 300 copies.

The OBSERVANCES in USE at the AUGUSTINIAN PRIORY of ST. GILES and ST. ANDREW at BARNWELL, CAMBRIDGESHIRE. Edited, with a Translation and Glossary, by JOHN WILLIS CLARK, M.A. F.S.A., Registrary of the University of Cambridge, formerly Fellow of Trinity College.

With Illustrations, 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

A RIDE THROUGH WESTERN ASIA. By Clive Bigham. Part I. ASIA MINOR. Part II. PERSIA, NORTH to SOUTH. Part III. TURKISH ARABIA. Part IV. PERSIA, WEST to EAST. Part V. CENTRAL ASIA.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"An interesting and a promising piece of work.....A series of beautiful full-page photographs add much to the value of the book."

VOLUME II. NOW READY.

A HISTORY of ENGLISH POETRY. By W. J. Courthope, C.B. M.A. D.Litt., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Vol. II. The Renaissance and the Reformation; Influence of the Court and the Universities. 8vo. 10s. net.

SCOTSMAN.—"Careful and accurate in its learning, the work is written with an unusual and a refreshing breadth of view and catholicity of taste."

Globe 8vo. 6s.

POEMS. By Horace Smith.

NEW BOOK BY PROFESSOR J. P. MAHAFFY.

A SURVEY of GREEK CIVILIZATION. By Prof. J. P. Mahaffy, D.D. D.C.L. (Oxon.), Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin. Extra crown 8vo. 6s.

NEW BOOK BY B. BOSANQUET.

PSYCHOLOGY of the MORAL SELF. By B. Bosanquet. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. net.

NEW EDITION, crown 8vo. 6s.

WOOLWICH MATHEMATICAL PAPERS for ADMISSION into the ROYAL MILITARY ACADEMY for the YEARS 1887–1896. Edited by E. J. BROOKSMITH, B.A. LL.M., St. John's College, Cambridge, Instructor of Mathematics at the Royal Military Academy, Woolwich.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

MESSRS. SKEFFINGTONS' NEW LIST.

By LILIAN STREET, Author of 'The Little Plain Woman,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

NELL AND THE ACTOR.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"The weakly sentimental doctor is strongly conceived, and remarkably direct and true. The author seems to penetrate into the inmost recesses of the man."
The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"A fresh and brisk story."
The GLASGOW HERALD says:—"There is plenty of 'go' in the story—incident, brightness of dialogue, and the necessary amount of pathos and tragedy to make it attractive."
The COURT JOURNAL says:—"The story is well written and interesting from first to last."

By RICHARD PENDEREL, Author of 'Wilfrid Waide, Barrister and Novelist,' 'Dick Wylder,' &c.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

AS A ROARING LION.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"This very well-told story flows smoothly and interests one from beginning to end."
The MANCHESTER COURIER says:—"This story is crammed full of the most interesting incidents and the most delightful scenes and situations. Its plot is skilfully handled and the construction cleverly effected."
The NEW SATURDAY says:—"The book is crowded with incidents and the reader's interest never flags."
The ATHENÆUM says:—"The real ingenuity of the plot."

The NEW NOVEL on DIVORCE. By ERNEST G. HENHAM.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

GOD, MAN, AND THE DEVIL.

A most striking Novel dealing with the Marriage Question, Divorce, &c.

The GLASGOW HERALD says:—"Dramatic scenes and striking situations."
The PEN (Belfast) says:—"The book displays vigour as well as earnestness in every chapter and almost every sentence.....The characters are very strongly drawn by a few masterly touches."

By EDITH E. CUTHELL, Author of 'Only a Guardroom Dog,' 'A Baireuth Pilgrimage,' &c.—Crown 8vo. elegant cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

SWEET IRISH EYES: a Charming Story of Society Life.

The ATHENÆUM says:—"We have enjoyed the breezy youth of the bright, loyal, high-spirited heroine and the light-hearted, easy telling of this tale of love and youth."
The GENTLEWOMAN says:—"Characterized by much brightness and vivacity.....Singularly reminiscent of the late Mrs. Hungerford's style."
The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"A bewitching heroine whose love story is spirited and amusing. A very pretty, fresh, well-written, and attractive novel."
The GLOBE says:—"Will find many readers.....The very title is irresistible."

By MARIE CORELLI, Author of 'The Sorrows of Satan,' &c.—Crown 8vo. price 5*s.*, FOURTH EDITION, completing 45th Thousand.

THE MURDER OF DELICIA.

THIS DAY. By C. J. WILLDEY.—Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

Translator of that successful Book OLIVEIRA MARTIN'S 'The ENGLAND of TO-DAY.'

THE BOOK OF HUMBUG; wherein certain Little Images appear just as they are.

The PALL MALL GAZETTE says:—"The author writes with success and caustic humour."
The PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR says:—"The author has abundance of humour, and his book will amuse a large circle of readers."

THIS DAY, crown 8vo. 5*s.*—New and Important Work by the Rev. T. MOORE, M.A., Author of 'The Englishman's Brief.'

Dedicated to the memories of St. Augustine and King Ethelbert.

BEGINNINGS OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH AND KINGDOM,

EXPLAINED TO THE PEOPLE.

This valuable work is written in a thoroughly popular and interesting style, while the utmost care has been taken to ensure strict accuracy in every particular.

This day, Dedicated by special permission to Her Majesty the Queen.

HYMNS FOR THE QUEEN'S COMMEMORATION.

By the most Eminent Authors and Composers. The ROYAL EDITION, complete with Music, printed on superfine paper and bound in cloth, with gold lettering, price 1*s.* net. Cheap Editions for Congregations, Schools, &c., with Music, 2*d.*; the Words separately, ½*d.*

THIS DAY, crown 8vo. cloth, price 2*s.* 6*d.*

ORIGINAL SERMONS FOR THE QUEEN'S COMMEMORATION.

Specially written by the Very Rev. F. W. FARRAR, D.D., Dean of Canterbury. The Rev. CANON HAMMOND, LL.B., Vicar of St. Austell, Author of 'Church or Chapel?' &c.

This volume also contains a TABLE of the CHIEF EVENTS affecting Religion, the Church of England, Education, &c., from 1837 to 1897.

NEARLY READY, demy 8vo. cloth, with many Illustrations, price 10*s.* 6*d.* By Rev. CANON HAMMOND, Author of 'Church or Chapel?' &c.

A CORNISH PARISH: being an Account of St. Austell—Town, Church, District, and People.

By JOSEPH HAMMOND, LL.B., Vicar.

IN PREPARATION, price 10*s.* 6*d.* By GEORGE MORLEY, Author of 'Leafy Warwickshire,' 'In Rustic Livery,' 'Sweet Audrey,' &c.

IN RUSSET MANTLE CLAD. Scenes of Rural Life in Warwickshire.

Dedicated by special permission to the Right Hon. the Countess of Warwick.

London: SKEFFINGTON & SON, 163, Piccadilly, W.

Publishers to H.M. the Queen and to H.R.H. the Prince of Wales.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

NOTICE.

MISS BROUGHTON'S NEW NOVEL,

DEAR FAUSTINA,

Is ready this day at all Booksellers' and Libraries.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

A SOCIAL SATIRE.—NOW READY.

PANTALAS.

By EDWARD JENKINS,
Author of 'Ginx's Baby.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'In a Country Town' is a simple study of a girl's life, and with all its simplicity we can congratulate the author in having, in Brunhild, accomplished a really fine bit of character study. Miss Perceval writes with a single directness and a humorous appreciation of life in provincial places, particularly where interesting curates and romantic maidens are concerned."—Literary World.

NOW READY.

UNTHINKABLES.

Discussed by F. H. BALFOUR,
Author of 'Dr. Mirabel's Theory,' &c.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

NOW READY.

THEN AND NOW.

By JOHN GEORGE WITT, Q.C.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

NOTICE.—The EIGHTEENTH EDITION of The LIFE of LORD ROBERTS, V.C. ('Forty-one Years in India'), is now ready, in 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Portraits, &c., 36s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

TO BE PUBLISHED NEXT WEEK.
In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portrait of Author, 12*s.*

AN OLD SOLDIER'S MEMORIES.

By S. H. JONES-PARRY, J.P. D.L.,
Late Captain Royal Dublin Fusiliers,
Author of 'My Journey round the World,' &c.

NEW EDITION, CONDENSED, REVISED, AND WITH MUCH NEW MATERIAL.

ON FRIDAY NEXT, May 28, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Portrait of Lady Hamilton, gilt top, 6*s.*

LADY HAMILTON AND LORD NELSON.

AN HISTORICAL BIOGRAPHY.

Based on Letters and other Documents in the Morrison Collection.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,
Author of 'The Real Lord Byron,' &c.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure 'The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s.*

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND LIBRARIES.

BROKEN THREADS. By Compton READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The SILENCE BROKEN. By G. M. ROBINS (Mrs. BAILLIE REYNOLDS), Author of 'The Ides of March,' 'Her Point of View,' &c. 1 vol. small crown 8vo. 2*s.*

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c.

WITHOUT ISSUE. By Henry Cresswell, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A well-constructed plot, involved, but never passing the limitations of probability; a very excellent piece of work in every respect."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The writer well understands the value of an interesting opening chapter to a work of fiction, and, having aroused the attention of the reader at the outset, Mr. Cresswell holds him absorbed to the end."—Dundee Advertiser.

COUSIN JEM. By L. Higgin, Author of 'A Cornish Maid,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'Cousin Jem' is an entertaining tale and contains some excellent character studies."—Black and White.

SWORN ALLIES. By M. E. Le CLERC, Author of 'A Rainbow at Night,' 'Mistress Beatrice Cope,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"It is in the background and details, in the incidental sketches of character, in the freshness of the atmosphere, that the chief charm of this story lies."—Globe.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

A NEW WORK BY MR. GLADSTONE.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

LATER GLEANINGS: Theological and Ecclesiastical. A New Series of Gleanings of Past Years. By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

Contents:—The Dawn of Creation and Worship—Proem to Genesis—Robert Elsmere: the Battle of Belief—Ingersoll on Christianity—The Elizabethan Settlement—Queen Elizabeth and the Church of England—The Church under Henry—Professor Huxley and the Swine Miracle—The Place of Heresy and Schism—True and False Conceptions of the Atonement—The Lord's Day—General Introduction to Sheppard's Bible—Soliloquium and Postscript on the Pope and Anglican Orders.

Just published, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The STORY of a GREAT AGRICULTURAL ESTATE: an Account of the Origin and Administration of the "Beds and Bucks" and "Thorney" Estates By the DUKE OF BEDFORD.

"This book constitutes a priceless addition to the materials on the land question."

Daily Chronicle.

With Portrait, crown 8vo. 5*s.*

ALICE, GRAND DUCHESS of HESSE, Princess of Great Britain. Letters to Her Majesty the Queen. With a Memoir by H.R.H. PRINCESS CHRISTIAN. A New and Cheaper Edition, Revised. Containing the Last Letter written by Princess Alice.

With Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

HOW to LISTEN to MUSIC: Hints and Suggestions to Untaught Lovers of the Art. By HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL, Author of 'Studies in the Wagnerian Drama,' &c. With a Preface by Sir GEORGE GROVE.

Contents:—Recognition of Musical Elements—The Content and Kinds of Music—The Modern Orchestra—At an Orchestral Concert—At a Pianoforte Recital—At the Opera—Choirs and Choral Music—Musician, Critic, and Public.

Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.*

MURRAY'S CYCLIST'S ROAD-BOOK, from London through Chichester, Portsmouth, Southampton, to the New Forest, and back by Romsey, Winchester, Dorking, Leatherhead, and Epsom. Illustrated by a Road Atlas at the end of the Book.

With Illustrations, 8vo. 18*s.*

SOME UNRECOGNIZED LAWS of NATURE. An Inquiry into the Causes of Physical Phenomena, with Special Reference to Gravitation. By IGNATIUS SINGER and LEWIS H. BERENS.

This is an entirely new and original work, the result of long study and independent experiment and research. By a close examination of the conditions under which various phenomena are manifested, an attempt has been made to throw light on the Laws of Nature to which such manifestations are due.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

2 vols. demy 8vo. 32*s.*

The LIFE and LETTERS of BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford. By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A., LL.D., and the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D. With Portraits and other Illustrations.

"A most agreeable impression of his own personal character is left upon us by this biography—one to make those who read it realize what a privilege it was to be intimate with him, and to account for the almost religious respect with which he was regarded by successive generations of Balliol men."

Standard.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

SATURDAY, MAY 22, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
MR. YEATS'S SECRET ROSE	671
PROF. RAMSAY ON PHRYGIA	671
A BOOK ON BURMA	673
THE HISTORY OF ANCIENT CHESTER	674
NEW NOVELS (Nulma; Pantalas; The Secret of Saint Florel; False Gods; Uncle Bernac; Jinny Blake; The Great Jekyll Diamond)	675—676
AMERICAN HISTORY	676
SCOTTISH BIOGRAPHY	677
RECENT VERSE	677
AMERICAN FICTION	678
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	678—680
COLERIDGE ON SPINOZA; TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY; NELSON'S 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY'; AN ANGLO-SAXON ENIGMA; SALE	680—683
LITERARY GOSSIP	683
SCIENCE—MR. A. D. BARTLETT; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	684—685
FINE ARTS—THE NEW GALLERY; THE SALONS AT PARIS; GREEK INSCRIPTIONS AT CLANDEBOYE; SALES; GOSSIP	686—689
MUSIC—THE WEEK; THE LATE MR. BEST; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	689—691
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSSIP	691—692

LITERATURE

The Secret Rose. By W. B. Yeats. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

MR. YEATS has the courage of his Celtic imagination if he thinks, at this wrong end of a hardened century, to arouse our slumbering Saxon taste for allegory and symbolism. The fashion of Cynewulf's day is a little outworn; and we have ceased to read Guillaume de Lorris with unaffected exhilaration. Yet here, in an age of all the utilities, is a young writer who invites us, with the frank confidence of youth, to follow him through the mystic byways of a new 'Roman de la Rose.' If a fine enthusiasm for his theme could touch our hearts, the appeal must surely strike home. But the hearts of some of us are not in the right place; and our heads are troubled with an intelligence a shade too analytic. The author's heart is right enough; but he, too, suffers from the latter-day trick of introspection. It is the snare of even the greatest artists who imitate archaic forms or subjects. Dante Rossetti in his ballads does not altogether escape it; still less does Tennyson in his 'Idylls of the King'; Matthew Arnold perhaps least of all in his avowedly Hellenic work. Such a passage as this from Mr. Yeats's book may serve to show how the touch of a too modern spirit may hurt the harmony of old-world sentiment:

"'If you come with evil thoughts and armed men,' said the son of Dermott, flushing, 'no matter how strong your hands to wrestle and to swing the sword, it shall go badly with you, for some of my wife's clan have come out of Mayo, and my three brothers and their servants have come down from the Mountains of the Ox'; and while he spoke he kept his hand inside his coat as though upon the handle of a weapon. 'No,' answered Costello, 'I but come to dance a farewell dance with your daughter.'.....The girl lifted her eyes and gazed at Costello, and in her gaze was that trust of the humble in the proud, the gentle in the violent, which has been the tragedy of woman from the beginning."

The one word "tragedy," quite apart from the sentiment of the conclusion, imparts a disturbing element; it has almost the air of modern literary slang. Again:—

"Costello led her among the dancers, and they were soon drawn into the rhythm of the Pavane.....and while they danced there came over them the unutterable melancholy, the weariness with the world, the poignant and bitter pity for one another, the vague anger against common hopes and fears, which is the exultation of love."

The reflection, though it comes from the author and not from his characters, is still a violation of unity, an anachronism in sentiment.

A fault akin to this, but less easily to be pardoned, is seen in the absence of what, for want of a better phrase, may be called the right local colouring. Let it be granted that Mr. Yeats is sufficiently Irish in his nomenclature and antiquities. We have abundant local feeling in his names—the Steep Place of the Strangers, the Lough of the Little Wood, the Town of the Shelly River; every page is full of them. There are also "boreens" and "garrons" and "bodachs," and other properly unintelligible Celticisms. But for all that we can seldom identify in his pictures the marks either of place or time. We pass over a wide range of seasons from early Christian times to at least the seventeenth century with scarce any sign to mark the change. Characters of all ages and conditions speak in much the same manner; and, if we except a desultory phrase or two, their racial idiosyncrasies are but faintly revealed. On the other hand, it would be ill-natured not to acknowledge our gratitude for being spared the local equivalent of the Kailyard jargon.

But we must revert to the question of symbolism, for these tales pretend to mean more than mere tales of faerie. Mr. Yeats assures his readers in his dedication that they all "have but one subject, the war of spiritual with natural order." And certainly in the broader issues of some of these stories the symbolic intention may be obvious; yet when, after the author's warning, we search for esoteric interpretations in the multifarious details of his images, the process is found to be futile and exhausting. We are forced to give up the task and content ourselves with the human interest of the story itself, which is often far to seek; or with the concrete beauty of his pictures, or with the glow and grace of his eloquence. But unhappily the high qualities of an eloquence which at its best has a conquering charm are not sustained. Had Mr. Yeats brought to bear upon his work a keener sense of negative humour (the absence of positive humour may be excused under the circumstances) he would never have allowed us the shock of certain occasional lapses from the ethereal range of his poetic diction. He would never have told us that "when they came to Dermott's house they saw before the door an unusually large group of the very poor"; or that Margaret Rooney had "some dilapidated remnants of tolerably good looks." The bathos of such phrases can only be appreciated by comparison with Mr. Yeats's exalted manner. Purists, as distinct from humourists, may further complain of the fatal attraction of "and" to the relative in many places in this book.

Finally, after putting trivial blemishes aside, all who know anything of Mr. Yeats's exceptional ability as a poet will feel that in these prose stories he has not chosen the medium most suited to his remarkable powers. Now and again, in a white heat of energy, he "makes the live shape at a jet"; at other times he must himself be conscious that his material compels him to treat his themes too clearly and too explicitly to preserve the illusion of mystery. As a writer of imaginative prose he takes high rank, it is true, among the men of our younger generation; but as a poet of the school of Shelley the author of 'The Wanderings of Usheen' stands alone. Some of the verses scattered about the present book are laboured in accentuation; but he has proved sufficiently his mastery over form as well as matter, and it is in the sphere of poetry rather than of prose that we look for the development of powers which promise a brilliant future. It is to be hoped that there is no personal presage in his comment upon the works of certain authors found by him in the House of the Order of "Rosa Alchemica," where he says:—

"I noted also many poets and prose writers of every age, but only those who were a little weary of life, as indeed the greatest have been everywhere, and who cast their imagination to us, as a something they needed no longer now that they were going up in their fiery chariots."

We know no young Elisha who is quite prepared to assume the mantle of Mr. Yeats.

The Cities and Bishoprics of Phrygia: being an Essay of the Local History of Phrygia, from the Earliest Times to the Turkish Conquest. By W. M. Ramsay, D.C.L., LL.D. —Vol. I. Part II. West and West-Central Phrygia. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)

IN this volume Prof. Ramsay pursues the same method which he followed in the first. He treats of some of the most important cities of Phrygia, such as Eumeneia, Apameia, Akmonia, Pepouza, Hieropolis, and the localities connected with these. "The two parts," he tells us, "do not cover nearly half the territory of Phrygia, but they form probably the larger half of the book."

Prof. Ramsay's plan is to discuss first of all the locality of the cities. Here his opportunities and his wide research constitute him an authority of the first rank. He has seen the places, sometimes oftener than once, and frequently in company with other travellers who could compare notes with him. Mrs. Ramsay also was often beside him, and he has made good use of her picturesque descriptions. He has thus been able to discover the sites of many cities and to add greatly to our information. Then he has bestowed great labour on the history of the various towns, examining on the spot the passages in which they are mentioned by different writers, and judging the value of their testimony by their accordance with the actual facts, now ascertainable from geographical surveys. Here again Prof. Ramsay has cleared up several disputed points, corrected inferences from misunderstood passages of ancient writers, and has sometimes amended ancient texts with signal success. In this work he has also had frequent recourse to the elucidations supplied by inscriptions, many of which he himself has been the first to unearth, and by coins. At the end of his chapter on each town or district he has printed the inscriptions found in it with annotations, and he has devoted sections or chapters to expounding the historical conclusions which can be drawn from these inscriptions. Thus he has explained the mode of government which existed in Apameia in a most interesting manner, and his exposition is a valuable contribution to our knowledge of the way in which cities were organized throughout the Roman Empire in the second and third centuries of the Christian era. There is also a valuable chapter on the Jews in Phrygia, which throws much light on the numbers and condition of that people about the same epoch. The most important, however, of all these contributions is the discussion of the Christian inscriptions in South-Western and Central Phrygia. Prof. Ramsay has brought together a large body of evidence which has not been collected before, and he thinks that he has come upon a clue to the explanation of this evidence which makes clear what was the position of Christians in Phrygia.

Necessarily a considerable proportion of the results attained in a book like this, where the inquiries are not finished, where the evidence is scanty, and where dates are often extremely uncertain, is merely provisional. Conjecture has to be employed to a large extent, and the judgment must often be held in suspense. Prof. Ramsay also has undertaken an exceedingly wide range of inquiry, for he brings his history down from the earliest times to the Turkish conquest. With such a variety and extent of investigation Prof. Ramsay has occasionally to depend entirely on others, and sometimes he is not led to the best sources. Thus his account of the 'Rosalia' is imperfect, and probably when he treats the 'Octavius' of Minucius Felix as later than the 'Apology' of Tertullian he is depending not on investigations of his own, but on some authority whom he has been consulting.

Prof. Ramsay complains bitterly in his preface of the treatment which he has received from critics. "The inadequacies," he says mournfully, "and errors which are found in them [his books] as discovery progresses offend every one; and few will remember more than the faults." And he says further on: "Many blame me for not holding some view, which I advocated six or twelve years ago, and afterwards abandoned owing to the progress of knowledge." We think that Prof. Ramsay on reflection will see that he does not do justice to most of his critics. Critical praise can be bestowed in a single strong epithet, but when the critic differs, he has to set forth the reasons of his difference. Therefore mere praise occupies little space, judicious criticism may occupy much. Then critics do not blame Prof. Ramsay for changing his opinions. On the contrary, they praise him for this and for his love of truth. But they do find fault with him because, dealing with matters where evidence is uncertain and scanty, and where change of opinion may become inevitable, he pronounces the conclusions which he adopts to be absolutely certain. We have a case in point in the subject which Prof. Ramsay deems the most important in his present volume. In the preface he says:—

"If the views stated in ch. xii., xvii., are even approximately correct, the Christian Antiquities of Phrygia will no longer be a field for vague guessing: especially the 'North-Galatian Theory' of St. Paul's travels will be banished from scientific works, and the Christian origin of the 'Grabschrift des Aberkios' will cease to be a matter of controversy."

Prof. Ramsay's expectations are sure to be disappointed. He has really settled nothing finally, but proposed solutions which, owing to the nature of the evidence, can reach only a certain amount of probability, and which therefore leave room for objection and opposition.

The case of the "Grabschrift des Aberkios" has been worked out with great diligence by Prof. Ramsay, and is exceedingly interesting as he presents it. The inscription on the tomb of Abercius contained nothing in it which definitely stated that Abercius was a Christian. Mention is made of "a chaste shepherd" and of fish, bread, and wine, which might suggest Christianity. But there was no declaration of faith such as one would expect from a Christian. As Prof. Ramsay puts it, "The testament of Avircius, then, was intended to bear both an exoteric sense, satisfactory to the ordinary reader, and an esoteric sense for 'him who comprehends.'" And the reason for this was, according to Prof. Ramsay, that "it was not possible to put forth in such a public way a statement that was overtly Christian." Having conjectured that this was the reason for the ambiguous language, Prof. Ramsay searched for confirmation of it in the inscriptions of Phrygia, and he had no difficulty in finding it. Among the inscriptions of the third century A.D. in Phrygia there are almost none that are distinctively Christian. What could be the reason of this? The only explanation must be that the Phrygian Christians did as Abercius did, that is, they expressed their Christian feelings in language which would not attract the attention of pagans. And this conjecture hardens into a certainty with Prof. Ramsay. "In pursuance of this policy," he says, "the Christians put nothing in public documents, such as their epitaphs, which could be quoted as evidence of Christianity." And he adds subsequently: "We are therefore forced to look for meanings hidden beneath the surface in the early Christian epitaphs." Prof. Ramsay finds this hidden meaning in an adjuration which appears on many graves. The commonest form is ἔσται αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸν θεόν, "he shall have to account to God" or "to the god"; but in isolated cases epithets are added, such as "to the living God," "to the immortal God," "to the hand of God" or "of the god," and "to the great name of God" or "of the god." Prof. Ramsay says in regard to this adjuration:

"As to the origin of the formula, it is probably an intentional variation of a pagan form. .....In this case the change was not one to rouse any suspicion. The expression 'the god' was familiar to the pagans, and frequently used by them to designate the local patron deity; and it was a very slight change to substitute for the pagan appeal to a definite deity (Men, Helios, Selene, Leto, &c.), or to the Katachthonian gods or to the dead themselves, the reference in general terms to 'the God' which could be taken by every one in his own sense."

The formula contains nothing distinctively Christian in it. If τὸν θεόν is translated "the god," any pagan could use it. Prof. Ramsay points out that it appears on the tomb of a man who was unquestionably a Jew, and it could certainly be appropriately employed by the Jews. A philosophical pagan might also have adopted it if he thought an adjuration seemly or necessary. How, then, does Prof. Ramsay know that it is Christian? It is here that his proof fails. He adduces no argument that can indicate anything but slight probability. He discusses symbols found on tombs, and he says of them:—

"Probably none of these symbols was exclusively Christian. The fish, the anchor, &c., are found on pagan monuments, though very rarely (Le Blant, II. p. 312); and probably every symbol which was publicly used by the Christians during the third century was selected, because it was also in pagan use and would therefore be less likely to attract special attention."

Names might furnish a clue to the religion of the inscription. But here, again, Prof. Ramsay allows that there are exceedingly few specially Christian names on the tombs in Phrygia, and in the course of generations it is quite possible that a name which was originally Christian might pass over to pagans.

Then an indication of Christianity might be made by the employment of the word κοιμητήριον for a tomb. But this word occurs rarely. It occurs also where there is no adjuration. And the word itself contains no idea in it which a pagan might not approve of, so that in course of time pagans might come to use it, just as Christians employed the more objectionable term ἡρῷον frequently for a place of burial.

In fact, Prof. Ramsay has adduced nothing that makes it certain that the adjuration was employed by Christians or by Christians exclusively. And he appears to us to assume the right attitude when he says:—

"We are therefore forced to look for meanings hidden beneath the surface in early Christian epitaphs. In doing so mistakes are inevitable in the earlier steps; but the material for study will increase, and errors will be corrected. For the present the attempt to explain the Christian inscriptions in the Appendix to this chapter is offered as a tentative step in a difficult path."

Yet in the very next paragraph Prof. Ramsay states his results as if they were certain. He says:—

"To judge from the proportion of epitaphs, the population of Eumeneia in the third century was in great part Christian. Of the 71 epitaphs classed as pagan or doubtful, only 11 are clearly marked as later than A.D. 215, and most of these are suspected of Christianity (No. 380). In the same period we possess 26 epitaphs that are certainly Christian. Three persons are mentioned as senators in the second century, and six in the third; the three are probably pagans, the six are Christian."

Nearly all the twenty-six epitaphs are determined to be Christian solely by the presence of the adjuration in them. And from these epitaphs Prof. Ramsay again states his inference thus: "These facts show that Eumeneia was to a large extent a Christian city in the third century." This inference suggests a difficulty. If the Christians were in the majority, what object could they have in concealing their religion? Their Christianity must have been known to every one in the city. And if they were in the minority, what good could be attained by placing the adjuration on their tombs? Neither pagan nor Christian required to express his faith on his sepulchre. The ordinary inscription told the name of the person who made the tomb and stated for whom it was made. Then often a few lines debarred others from burying in it on pain of having to pay a fine. Pagan and Christian alike could make such inscriptions, and it would be impossible to divine what was the religion of the persons who made them. There was no necessity for an adjuration, and if an adjuration were added, it could influence only those who believed in the god whose vengeance was invoked.

We have not been able to draw attention to more than a few points in Prof. Ramsay's exposition of this subject. Though we differ from him in regard to the certainty of his conclusions, we think that his chapters on the Christian inscriptions are most able and suggestive, that they raise questions of the deepest interest, that they contribute much to their solution, and that they will stimulate in no ordinary degree the investigations of other scholars.

Prof. Ramsay says little about the North Galatian theory. He is of opinion that the facts which he has collected refute it. The principal of these is stated thus:—

"The nearer we approach the Galatian frontier, the later are the traces of Christianity. Only near his [St. Paul's] routes in Lycaonia, Galatic Phrygia, and along the higher lying road from Pisidian Antioch to Ephesos, do we find proof of Christian influence at an early date."

And he says generally of St. Paul that "he was influential only at certain central points, and apparently made no impression on many others." The upholders of the theory will not accept these as conclusive arguments against it. They will affirm that it is impossible to estimate the extent of the influence of Christianity in the first century by the number of Christian inscriptions and other monuments that may accidentally turn up in the third, that traces do not always remain even of the most enthusiastic religious movements, and that account must be taken of the circumstances of the localities and the character of the inhabitants in forming an idea of the permanence of results.

Picturesque Burma, Past and Present. By Mrs. Ernest Hart. (Dent & Co.)

The author made a tour with her husband through Burma in the spring of 1895, and wrote this book, some time after her return, because she found that little is known in England about the beautiful country and interesting people that she had visited. The volume is really a volume for a drawing-room table, for while the pictures are excellent and the binding handsome, the letterpress can lay claim to no special merits save clearness of type and freedom from misprints. The illustrations, on the other hand, comprise ten photogravures and some ninety or a hundred other pictures, among the latter a few pastel sketches by Mrs. Hart, but the bulk of them reproductions of photographs procured in the East. It does not, however, always happen that when a traveller returns with a parcel of photographs and a few sketches in his portmanteau he bestows the care and finish which have been displayed in the present volume on the preparation of the pictures for the public gaze. Of the letterpress it is impossible to speak so favourably. Many books have already been written about Burma, and it was hardly to be expected that the author, after a sojourn in the country which was but short, should have anything new to say about it; in fact, so far as we have been able to discover, she has added nothing to what was known before, and has apparently compiled the pages to accompany her pictures by condensing, at all events in a good many instances, the accounts of other writers. Indeed, she acknowledges in her preface her indebtedness to some writers whom she there names; but whether the indebtedness be acknowledged or ignored, it may still be open to question how far an author is justified in giving what purports to be a quotation from somebody else's book and at the same time mangling the text. Such, however, has been the fate of the hapless Shway Yoe. We place side by side below what Shway Yoe wrote and what Mrs. Hart represents him as having written.

Shway Yoe in 'The Burman, his Life and Notions,' p. 359.

"The noise on the bank is simply deafening. Incoherent shouts of despair and encouragement and delight burst from every throat; old women tear down their scanty hair and work with their arms as if they themselves were in the race; girls rush to the water's edge heedless of the mud and splashing that will ruin their silken skirts for ever; young men and boys rush up to their necks in the water and yell with frenzied eagerness, for it is only a boat's length to the winning post, and Thohn-Kwa leads by a foot. Old Oo Ohn can stand it no longer, for the last minute he has been shaking all over as if he were in a palsy, and his tongue and throat are as parched as if they were choked with slack-lime. He rushes forward with his hands in the air and shrieks Youk-Kya in a key that cuts through the din like a steam-whistle. Youk-Kya—the cry is taken up; Youk-Kya, bah-thah—every mother's son of you—the Doung, the Flower, sway lay lay; row for your lives; row for your unvanquished name; and the two bows fling their paddles from them and rise for the struggle. The wink of an eye too soon and he will miss his grasp, the flick of a finger too late and there will be nothing to seize. A great hush falls on the vast crowd as if they were all stricken dead, and then both men disappear in the water, clutching apparently simultaneously at the rattan. An agonizing five seconds and then Oung Zahn comes to the surface brandishing on high the pan; the Thohn-Kwa bow felt the scratch of it on his palm as it disappeared through the tube. The scene that follows is beyond description. The victorious crew spring up to dance, but the relief is inadequate. They can only escape frenzy by plunging into the river. Oo Ohn tucks up his waistcloth and dances round in mad delight till his stiff old legs will bear him no longer. Pompous old loo-gyees caper and plunge and shout; younger men can only relieve their feelings by flinging themselves in the pools on the bank and rolling about wildly in the mud; girls, who at ordinary times would hardly dare to raise their eyes to look about them, dance and shout in ecstasy, and their married guardians join in the rout. Bands from a dozen villages round about strike up, but the professional dancers who came to perform in honour of the victors are fain to look on while their intended audience go through unpremeditated figures. It always seems marvellous how the people ever get gravity of demeanour again after a great boatrace.

"The contest is technically not over yet. It is a hlay-pyoung loo-pyoung, that is to say the crews have now to change boats. The Thohn-Kwa men take the Doung-sat-pyan, and the home crew man the Three Fair Flowers. But to all intents and purposes the victory has been won, and the home representatives are the conquerors. The two boats paddle up again, and the fishermen go right away and win with the most consummate ease. This sets money-matters on a more comfortable footing, but the Myan-Oung people are not a whit disconcerted. They won the real race, that in which each crew rowed in its own boat, and they receive the arguments of the Thohn-Kwa contingent with the most self-satisfied composure. The record of the champions has been broken, and the veteran Koh Kyah-gyee has at last sat in a losing boat.

"A general adjournment is made back to the town. The country people have all come in their bullock waggons, and these are drawn up in comfortable places under the trees. The victorious crew go in procession up and down the main street, preceded by bands and every one in the place who can dance. Feasting is general, and then all move off to the plays, of which there are three or four, while some unwearied spirits can only find relief for their exultant triumph in yehn dances and irresponsible performances of their own. Till dawn of day the revelry goes on, but there is nothing like drunkenness. It is exceedingly seldom that you see a drunken Burman out of Rangoon, where they claim to be Europeanised. For a couple of days the excitement lasts, and then the strangers wend their way homewards, and the township calms down to its usual quiet. But for years the great event will be talked of at the local feasts, and the Yehn choruses of three or four generations will tell of the gallant struggle when the Doung-sat-pyan beat the Thohn-pan-hla, and broke the long supremacy of the Thohn-Kwa rowers."

Extract from Shway Yoe, according to Mrs. Hart.

"The noise is simply deafening. Incoherent shouts of despair and encouragement and delight burst from every throat; old women tear down their scanty hair and work with their arms as if they were themselves in the race; girls rush to the water's edge heedless of the mud and splashing that will ruin their silken skirts for ever; young men and boys rush up to their necks in the water and yell with frenzied eagerness. Wild cries go up as the two boats near the winning-post, 'Row for your lives!' 'Row for your unvanquished names!' The two bows fling their paddles from them and rise for the struggle. The flash of an eye too soon and he will miss his grasp: the flick of a finger too late, and there will be nothing to seize. A great hush falls on the crowd as if they were all struck dead, and then both men disappear in the water, clutching simultaneously at the rattan. An agonizing five seconds, and then Oung Zahn comes to the surface brandishing on high the pan. The scene that follows beggars description. The victorious crew spring up to dance, but the relief is inadequate. They can only escape frenzy by plunging into the river. Ohn tucks up his waistcoat [sic] and dances round in mad delight, till his stiff old legs will bear him no longer. Pompous old poo-gyees [sic] caper and plunge and shout; younger men can only relieve their feelings by flinging themselves into the pools on the bank and rolling wildly in the mud; girls, who at ordinary times would hardly dare to raise their eyes to look about them, dance and shout in ecstasy, and their married guardians join in the rout. A general adjournment is then made back to the town. The country people have all come up in their bullock waggons, and these are drawn up in comfortable spots under the trees. The victorious crew go in procession up and down the main street, preceded by bands and by everybody in the place who can dance. Feasting is general, and afterwards all move off to the plays, of which there are three or four going on. The revelry goes on till dawn of day, but there is nothing like drunkenness. For two days the excitement lasts, and then the strangers wend their way homewards, and the town comes down to its usual quiet. But for years the great event will be talked [sic] at the local feasts, and the Yehn choruses of three or four generations will tell of the gallant struggle when the Doung-sat-pyan beat the Thohn-pan-hla, and broke the long supremacy of the Thohn-Kwa rowers."

In the foregoing extract Mrs. Hart has afforded no intimation that omissions have been made and words misplaced.

Many specimens of compilation might also be given, but there is space left only for a reference to one or two. In describing the annual ceremonial opening of the agricultural season by the king, who goes outside the city and takes a formal turn at the plough, the author seems to depend wholly on a condensation of Shway Yoe's account:—

"The ceremony took place in the beginning of June, about the time when the south-west monsoon usually breaks in Mandalay."

This reappears in the book before us as:—

"It was in June, about the time of the breaking of the south-west monsoon, that the pageant took place."

Shway Yoe further tells his readers that

"the royal plough is thickly covered with gold leaf; the part on which His Majesty stands.....is gold, roughened with pearls and emeralds. The milk white oxen that draw it rival the Lord White Elephant in the splendour of their harness. Crimson and gold bands hook them on; the reins are stuff with rubies and diamonds: heavy gold tassels hang from gilded horns. The gold tipped ox goad His Majesty wields is covered with jewels and flashes like a rod of fire in the sun."

With which passage may be compared the account given by Mrs. Hart, who says:—

"Arrived at the field which was to be ploughed by the king, he dismounted from the white elephant, and took his place on a gilded plough, set with jewels, to which a pair of milk-white oxen, with gilded horns, were attached by bands of crimson and gold. Taking the jewelled gold goad in one hand, and the reins studded with diamonds and rubies in the other, His Majesty steadily ploughed," &c.

It should be borne in mind in this connexion that as there is now no King of Burma, Mrs. Hart herself can have witnessed no royal ploughing. Again, the description which the author furnishes of monastic daily routine in her twenty-eighth chapter is a condensation of what is to be learnt in the pages of Shway Yoe—for example, where the latter says,

"Then comes the first meal of the day, a light refection usually preceded by a homily or grace," &c., in the volume before us we are told that "a light meal is then taken, preceded by a short homily."

Sometimes the information supplied is rather superfluous; for instance, it was hardly necessary to inform the reader that Burma is rich in palms, the most common being the cocoa-nut, the areca, and the palmyra; whereas it might, perhaps, have been usefully pointed out, where the natural indolence of the Burman is dwelt on, that wherever a people are crushed by a grinding tyranny, wherever the covetous superior is on the watch to squeeze the smaller man, the motives for work are undermined, a bare subsistence is held sufficient; there is no use in labouring for wealth which some more powerful neighbour will appropriate. Occasionally we have noticed that information is furnished twice over; for instance, on p. 209 wood-oil is described as the sap obtained from the stem of a forest tree, and on the next page the reader's memory is refreshed, and he learns that "wood-oil is now obtained from a tree which grows wild in the jungle."

Buddhism, it is stated, prevails "in countries where self-indulgence is a temptation." We fear that geographical exploration has not yet revealed the country in which man is not tempted to be self-indulgent. Mrs. Hart has also something to say about the circumstances which led to the annexation of Upper Burma; but in noticing the intrigue with France—and it was that intrigue which ultimately forced the hand of the British Government—sufficient stress has not been laid on the proposed agreement that King Theebaw should be allowed to purchase arms and munitions of war from the French. In taking leave of the author we may, at any rate, commend her for having supplied her readers with some convenient maps and an index.

A History of the Ancient City of Chester. By George Lee Fenwick. (Chester, Phillipson & Golder.)

This history of Chester is so evidently the result of many years of ardent labour, and labour undertaken for the simple joy of the work and not with any hope of reward, that it is cause for sincere regret to be obliged to pass an adverse judgment on it; but in a book that takes up the position of a work of reference, to which many will turn for information, it is essential that error should not be allowed to pass unchallenged.

The author has attempted far too much, and has undertaken a work for which he is evidently not qualified—a work indeed which would require a deeply read scholar to accomplish successfully; and he has entered on a task from which men of vastly wider attainments would have shrunk. In the fulfilment of a scheme as comprehensive as that which Mr. Fenwick has sketched out in his preface it was only to be expected there would be numerous shortcomings and omissions, and with this no fault could be found, as no man can hope to collect within one volume all that has been said about the ancient city of Chester; but the reader has serious reason for complaint against what can only be called carelessness in the matter which does appear. The book is, in fact, crowded with errors, many of them of a serious character.

One great blemish is that there are practically no references to authorities, and when it is considered that a large part of the book consists of extracts or adaptations from former writers the magnitude of this blemish must be obvious. Mr. Fenwick also certainly misleads, though no doubt unintentionally, in the way that he refers to ancient records. For instance, one would gather from p. 446 that he had exhaustively examined the magnificent collection of city records now lying at the town hall, yet the reader of this volume must be more than doubtful whether Mr. Fenwick has so much as looked at one of them; the list which he prints of the charters and documents is taken bodily from Mr. Jeaffreson's catalogue in the Appendix to the Eighth Report of the Historical Manuscripts Commission, even including the curious blunder in the first charter (an error which has long since been exposed), making the licence from Henry II. to the burgesses of Chester to buy and sell at Durham instead of Dublin.

At the very outset, in the second line of the first page, the reader meets with the "county palatine of Cheshire." Surely Mr. Fenwick in his official capacity must frequently have seen on documents employed in Her Majesty's service the words "county of Chester." The old mistakes with reference to Ptolemy's geography again appear, in spite of Mr. Glazebrook Rylands's learned 'Elucidation.' As to the treatment of the Roman period, it is only necessary to say that the matter contained in the seventy-five pages relating to this epoch might quite well have been condensed into fifteen. The history of the Roman Empire may be an enthralling study, but it has been epitomized in volumes readily accessible. The suggestion that Boadicea's tombstone possibly still stands at Caerwys is comic.

Though one can overlook many omissions, it is really unpardonable that Domesday should not have been laid under contribution for this work, especially as such a large and interesting reference to Chester occurs in it. It was, perhaps, too much to expect that Mr. Fenwick should not confuse the Angles and Saxons, though most students of history know that the Northumbrians who swept down on Chester in 613 were Angles and not Saxons; but there is no excuse for his repeatedly referring to the Danish settlement in Wirral. This error has been amply exposed by recent writers.

To come down to later times, Mr. Fenwick seems to be rather confused in the matter of Edward I.'s conquest of Wales. If he had consulted Rymer's 'Fœdera' and the Appendix to the Forty-sixth Report of the Deputy-Keeper of the Public Records, he would have found particulars there which would have saved him from falling into sundry mistakes. The chantries were suppressed not in 1537, but ten years later. On p. 171 we have the "Blue Post" myth again in full detail in spite of its frequent exposure. The Duke of Monmouth visited Chester not in August, 1683 (p. 230), but on September 9th, 1682; and it might have been well if Mr. Fenwick had referred to the late Mr. Earwaker's 'Progress of the Duke of Monmouth through Cheshire in 1682' in this connexion. William III. embarked for Ireland at Hoylake, not at Parkgate.

In ecclesiastical matters Mr. Fenwick's knowledge is especially deficient. It is difficult to see how the prebends could well "cease to have a voice in the election of the bishops" (p. 264); Mr. Fenwick might as well have told his readers that the deanery did not often preach in the cathedral. The abbey was dissolved not in July, 1541, but on the 20th of January, 1539. Thomas, Lord Cromwell, was not "Vice Regent" (p. 293), though he was for some time Vicegerent. The new diocese of Chester was not taken from that of Lichfield in 1544, and was not assigned to the province of York; it was formed from portions of the dioceses of Lichfield and York in 1541, and not until 1542, when a special Act was passed, was it placed within the province of York. Bishop Morton was Rector not of Stafford, but of Stockport (p. 278). The Grey Friars were not Friars Preachers, but Friars Minor.

In the lives of the bishops of Chester several of the customary errors are repeated from earlier writers, and occasionally additional ones are supplied by the author. A reference to Stubbs's 'Registrum Sacrum' would have prevented Mr. Fenwick making some slips in his dates; for example, Sir William Dawes was consecrated in 1708, not 1707, and was translated to York in 1714, not 1713; and worse than this, the author has no clear conception of what is meant by Old and New Style. Bishop Gastrell was born in Northamptonshire, not Berkshire, and Bishops Porteus and Cosin did not spell their names Porteous and Cosins. A more serious blunder, however, occurs in the life of Bishop Cartwright, where James II.'s sycophantic bishop is confused with his grandfather, Thomas Cartwright, the sturdy Puritan of Elizabeth's time.

Mr. Fenwick tells us that Randle Holmes's 'Academy of Armoury' is still in the Heralds' College; it will be news to him, perhaps, that copies of the book are also still in most of our local free libraries besides appearing among the collections of not a few Cheshire antiquaries. Can it be that Mr. Fenwick has never heard of the Record Society of Lancashire and Cheshire, or of Mr. Christie's edition of the 'Annales Cestrienses,' that he speaks (p. 451) as if these annals were still only in manuscript?

One of the most curious sections of this history is the bibliography of Chester. In the first place the names of Camden and Drayton are included, though why, if these are mentioned, the various histories and gazetteers of England which appear from time to time should not also be catalogued, it is difficult to see; why, also, a Latin manuscript of the thirteenth century in the Bodleian should be placed under the date of 1721, or why Calamy's 'Memorials' should be put under the date of 1802, is far from clear. This bibliography is not only incomplete, several of the best-known and most highly valued books dealing with Chester being ignored, but such entries as the following have simply no meaning: "1827, The Chester Charters; 1828, The Chester Guide; 1836, The Chester Hive; 1838, Russell on the Dee; 1852, The King's School, Chester"; and so on.

The lists of clergy printed as being complete records of the various incumbents in the different parish churches in Chester are likewise signally incomplete. It would surely have been better for Mr. Fenwick to go straight to Helsby's Ormerod, where by far the fullest lists are to be found, instead of printing these manifestly insufficient ones. For instance, in St. Oswald's parish 27 names appear, while Ormerod mentions 35; under St. Peter's 14 names are given, Ormerod mentions 29; under Holy Trinity Mr. Fenwick mentions 31, Ormerod supplies 45; and so on. In each case the lists are not only incomplete, but often inaccurate. To show also that the author has not even mastered his own material, it may be pointed out that on p. 428 he furnishes a short sketch of the life of Henry Prescot, and mentions that he was registrar of the diocese; but on p. 297 this name as well as several other well-known ones are omitted altogether from the list of registrars.

Finally, the few passages of Latin which appear in the volume are so full of errors that one is driven to the conclusion that this blemish is due more to an imperfect knowledge of Latin than to carelessness, for in many cases as they stand at present they are unintelligible. Mr. Fenwick describes the Latin charter, an abstract of which he prints on p. 317, as a "curious instrument"; we entirely agree with him. Almost more remarkable is the charter on p. 325, and such a sentence as the following is at least slovenly: "The King grants to the Dean and Chapter.....Manors, &c..... habend to them and their successors in puram et perpetuam elymosynam."

For the attractive manner in which this volume is printed and illustrated we have nothing but praise, and so far as the appearance goes the publishers are to be congratulated.

NEW NOVELS.

Nùlma. By Mrs. Campbell Praed. (Chatto & Windus.)

Nùlma is an Australian maiden, charming in her innocence and beauty, and strenuous and loyal in her spirit. To her in her opening spring of youth come, from the old country and the old conventional society, a group of people, truly antipodean, whose contact ripens her to womanhood. The battered old professional Governor; his nephew and secretary; the nephew's wife, Lady Arthur Keefe; and the intellectually keen and forceful, but morally lymphatic Kenward, who comes with them, almost in their suite, to take up the Chief Justiceship of "Leichart's Land," are vividly thrown into relief by their colonial surroundings. In an evil hour the gaieties which herald the new Governor's accession bring Nùlma into the constant society of a man who can appreciate her freshness and animation none the less for the contrast these afford to the qualities of the mature Lady Arthur, with whom he shares a secret as discreditable as it has hitherto been engrossing. The growing love, which must inevitably end cruelly for the innocent and inexperienced, is naturally traced to its climax in disillusion, when Nùlma breaks away with strong repulsion from the man who has her heart, to fortify herself against him by marriage with the patient old friend who has had her daughterly esteem. The process by which Van Vechten teaches her to love him is assisted by a fortunate development of events, otherwise his task would have seemed hopeless. But the story is more mercifully tempered to the strength of the heroine than is altogether probable. The relations between Kenward and Lady Arthur, which run sombrely through the fabric of the story, seem to promise, or threaten, resuscitation in a sequel. The Australian elements of the present tale are more to our taste than these decadent representatives of Britain.

Pantalas. By Edward Jenkins. (Bentley & Son.)

The author of 'Ginx's Baby' is not seen at his best in his latest publication. Substituting a physical for an intellectual deformity of a man, he brings to bear on it the diverse opinions of numerous typical persons interested in the improvement (or the reverse) of the submerged tenth. In the course of numerous witty but desultory conversations between the deformed Pantalas and his visitors, Mr. Jenkins traverses the views of the Socialist, the politician, the philosopher, the vestryman, the Salvation Army "general," the parson, and others. In effect, he considers from all possible points of view the position of those of the poor who are said to be "not worth their keep." We do not find the result either interesting or attractive as literature, though the book may have its uses in drawing attention to one of the many unsolved problems of society. With some hesitation the volume may be classed as a novel, in preference to any other branch of literature. We gather that the volume was written some years ago, though it is now published for the first time.

The Secret of Saint Florel. By John Berwick. (Macmillan & Co.)

A fairly interesting story of modern life, suitable as literature for any into whose hands it may fall, is usually welcome. 'The Secret of Saint Florel' is decidedly readable. It leads up to a somewhat violent climax, where a lunatic with a pistol in one hand and a fiddle-bow in the other makes a husband and wife dance up and down the room while he strums the violin as it lies flat on the table. The wife tires and the husband is shot. The story itself is, however, better than its climax; the scenes in Madagascar are distinctly superior to those in England; the writing is nearly always careful and accurate, and the reader's interest in the persons of the drama is readily aroused. There is a curious misprint on p. 32, which will puzzle some readers until they realize that it is a misprint. In places there are suggestions of a lady's hand in the narrative.

False Gods. By Mrs. Albert S. Bradshaw. (Henry & Co.)

It needs no prefatory note to say that Mrs. Bradshaw's story has been dramatized; probably it existed as drama before it became a novel. It is divided into four parts which exactly represent acts in a play. To us it seems better calculated to make a play than a novel. The story is fairly good, and depends for its interest on the complications which arise when a married woman deserts her husband, and goes to her grandfather's house on the false pretence that she is unmarried. We do not see any signs of remarkable literary skill in the volume; but it is written with much taste and feeling, and well repays the reader who turns over its pages.

Uncle Bernac: a Memory of the Empire. By A. Conan Doyle. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

Dr. Conan Doyle in 'Uncle Bernac' produces a powerful sketch of Napoleon in the days when from his camp at Boulogne he looked across the Channel and dreamed of destroying us. The plot is slight. Louis de Laval, the hero, who tells his own tale, is an émigré whose ardent love for his country overcomes his inherited hatred of the usurper. He returns to France, and takes service under the Emperor, but much happens to him before his fortune is established. His uncle Bernac is not only a treacherous villain who has usurped the estates of the family, he is also a Government spy, and is mixed up in dark and slippery doings. Laval plunges head first into a nest of intrigue, and only his good star brings him out safe. We hear enough and to spare of mad adventure, we have too much of murder and sudden death, and we have more than one pretty love story, so it will be seen that Dr. Conan Doyle caters for various tastes in 'Uncle Bernac,' which is written with the author's accustomed vivacity.

Jinny Blake. By Hannah Lynch. (Dent & Co.)

In spite of a few incoherences 'Jinny Blake' is a very fair specimen of the modern novel. The reader becomes interested in the young Irish girl who is the heroine, and in the anxieties she occasions to her father, "the eminent popular tragedian," and to her numerous suitors. There are moments, no doubt, when it would have been better had the girl received what Montesquieu calls "la punition d'enfance," instead of being alternately petted and lectured; and there are passages which render the book suitable rather for adults than for children. It is a story of to-day. The scene changes from London to Paris, and from France to Spain, and then back to London, with pleasure to the reader. There is a passage on p. 197 (which will not bear quotation as it stands) which must, we think, have suffered mutilation or unintentional change. It is neither sense nor grammar. On the whole, we must add that though we have read better literature from the same pen, Jinny Blake is a girl of considerable attractions, and one whose prototype probably lives to-day.

The Great Jekyll Diamond. By J. L. Owen. (Roxburghe Press.)

There are so many faults in J. L. Owen's melodrama that it would require a lengthy notice to detail them. An effort is made to produce effect by contrasts of scene and character, and the effort is well intentioned. The story is, however, unsatisfactory as literature, and will hardly (as the writer seems to hope) "interest those who still care for the tales of twenty years ago." Not the least noticeable feature in the book is the frequent misprinting of the hero's name.

AMERICAN HISTORY.

The last additions to the series of "Women of Colonial and Revolutionary Times in America," which Mr. Murray publishes in this country, are Eliza Pinckney, by Harriott Horry Ravenel, and Mercy Warren, by Alice Brown. These two colonial women better deserved to have their lives written than others in this series, being both noteworthy for other reasons than as the wives of famous men. The first is, moreover, an excellent representative of her sisters in the Southern States, and the second, of her sisters in New England. Mrs. Pinckney was the daughter of Lieut.-Col. Lucas, who, being stationed at Antigua, found that the climate did not agree with his wife's health, and visited South Carolina, which pleased him so well that he bought land on the Ashley river, seventeen miles from Charles Town, with the intention of settling there. Being appointed Governor of Antigua, he had to return there, and leave his ailing wife and daughter of sixteen to manage his property. Miss Lucas did her part to perfection, the introduction of indigo among the commercial products of South Carolina being largely due to her foresight and perseverance. After marriage to Col. Pinckney in 1744, when twenty-one, she renewed the attempts which others had abandoned to make the colony a silk-producing one. Out of the silk which she prepared, three dresses were woven, one of them, "a lustrous gold-coloured brocade," being now the property of her descendants; one of the others was presented to the Princess of Wales, and one to Lord Chesterfield. Her husband died in 1758. She had two sons, both of whom were educated in England, and both distinguished themselves during the revolutionary war. Thomas represented the United States at the Courts of Madrid and St. James's; Charles was entrusted by Jefferson with a mission to the French Directory, and, when he was asked what sum his country would pay for a pacific arrangement, he nobly exclaimed, "Millions for defence, but not one cent for tribute." Mrs. Pinckney died on May 26th, 1793. This little book will help to keep green the memory of a noteworthy woman and of a very excellent family.

While Mrs. Pinckney was a woman of action, Mrs. Warren was a woman of letters. Mrs. Warren was the sister of James Otis, whose denunciations of Great Britain in New England were as eloquent and misleading as those of Patrick Henry in Virginia. Before the independence of the colonies was recognized by the motherland, James Otis's mind was gone; after that acknowledgment, and when the present constitution of the United States was framed, Patrick Henry denounced Washington and his associates in terms as strong and foolish as those which he had employed when depicting what he styled the tyranny of George III. In 1755 Mercy Otis became the wife of James Warren, a Plymouth merchant, she being twenty-six. Her husband took an active part in the revolutionary struggle. He lived till 1808; she survived him, dying in 1814, both having passed the age of eighty. Mrs. Warren wrote patriotic verses and a history of the War for Independence which none but uncompromising and uncritical American patriots can read with entire satisfaction. She was the friend and correspondent of John Adams, and she quarrelled with him because she dreaded that he was not a genuine Republican. Monarchy was to her what the Papacy has always been to some zealous, but not very sensible persons. Republican simplicity seemed to her to be the only thing worth living for or admiring. She could not understand how little the name of a government has in common with its action. She was a well-meaning and narrow-minded woman, a good wife, and a mother whose affection was not requited by the son who was her idol. She was one of the conscientious, illiberal, hard, and somewhat unfeminine women who enabled her contemporaries, when Washington was President, to understand the women who exercised baneful influence when John Winthrop was Governor of Massachusetts.

The United States of America, 1765–1865 (Cambridge, University Press), is a condensed account of American history by Dr. Edward Channing, who gives a fair picture of it on a small scale. Dr. Channing is accurate, on the whole, and he is quite as impartial as we have a right to expect an assistant professor of history in Harvard University to be. The points open to question are few and simple. The first American colonists made great sacrifices to establish new homes. When they had achieved their object, their desire was to have their own way in all things. Their prosperity, however, was largely, if not entirely due to the protection upon which they could count upon receiving from the land of their birth. If England had chosen to stay her hand and intimated that France and Spain might do their worst when the colonies declared their independence, then these new States, from Virginia to Massachusetts, would have easily and speedily fallen a prey to Spain or France. Dr. Channing puts his finger on the grossest blunder made by the Home Government when dealing with the rising in America. If the Royal forces had followed, as he indicates, the Congressional army from place to place, the result would have been different from that obtained by the occupation of towns and territory. Boston, for instance, should never have been held when it was found that the insurgent colonists were prepared to attack it. He remarks with equal truth that "the aid afforded by France decided the conflict." But he is not so fair when he says that Burgoyne did not faithfully carry out the stipulations of his surrender, and that the Congressional Congress were legally in the right when refusing to fulfil the conditions under which the capitulation at Saratoga was made. Congress was wrong, both legally and morally, as American writers, whose patriotism is beyond question, have admitted and deplored.

The Contest over the Ratification of the Federal Constitution in the State of Massachusetts, by Mr. Samuel Bannister Harding (Longmans & Co.), will surprise those who are unversed in American history. Virginia and Massachusetts were the two colonies which led the way to independence; yet, when the goal was reached, the men who had been foremost in pulling down the old structure were the most fiercely opposed to building on its foundation a structure which should meet the altered conditions. Patrick Henry in Virginia and Samuel Adams in Massachusetts did their utmost to prevent the ratification of the existing Federal Constitution. They doubtless feared that under it their influence would wane, and their suspicions were justified by events. The citizens of the United States were the gainers, and they had no inducement to set personal ambition and advancement against rational aims and benefits. When the colonies became sovereign states, each of them was as jealous of interference as George III. had been of American independence. The decision of Massachusetts about the new constitution was awaited with anxiety, as Mr. Harding makes quite clear. John Hancock, whose name heads those of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and whose financial position had been affected by the enforcement of the laws sanctioned by Parliament, was afflicted, at the decisive moment, with a convenient illness. Inducements were held out to him which had the desired effect. He is not the first patriot who has displayed alacrity in serving his country when he has been convinced that he will serve himself by his self-sacrifice. The story as told by Mr. Harding is a useful contribution to the history of a great crisis in the North American republic.

The Puritan in England and New England, by the Rev. Dr. Byington (Sampson Low & Co.), has an introduction by the Rev. Dr. McKenzie. In olden days the work would have been styled an "apology." The author labours to show, and he does so with a measure of success, that the Puritans were more admirable than they have been represented. At p. 283 the purport of the work is fairly condensed in these words: "The Puritans were, first of all, Protestants.....their Protestantism was of that intense and aggressive type, which generations of conflict with the Church of Rome had developed." They were good people; but they were over-conscious of their goodness. They were brave and tenacious in maintaining the right of private judgment; they made many sacrifices for conscience' sake; yet when they were supreme in Massachusetts they hanged Quakers for exercising the right to practise religion according to their lights. Dr. Byington points out that the Blue Laws of Connecticut are forgeries; but he may be reminded that some of the greatest absurdities in these laws were enforced by the Puritans during their predominance in England. It is indisputable, moreover, that the inhabitants of Massachusetts and Connecticut were forbidden, under penalties, to possess cards, dice, or other instruments of gaming, and to dance. Dr. Byington sees nothing objectionable in this, for he writes, "It is possible for the right sort of people to lead a pleasant social life without gaming or dancing." It is equally possible for such people "to lead a pleasant social life" without being able to read or write. The tendency of Puritanism was to render life unhappy. It may be true, to quote Dr. Byington's words, "that the Puritans enjoyed their religion"; it is certainly true that they dealt harshly with those who had no liking for this form of enjoyment. The second generation in New England was gloomier than the first settlers, who had brought with them from their native land a liking for sports and pastimes which they never wholly lost.

Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. publish The First Battle: a Story of the Campaign of 1896, by Mr. William J. Bryan, a large illustrated volume on the presidential fight in the United States by the unsuccessful candidate, the prettiest things in which are the portraits of his daughters. The issues presented are somewhat confused, and the speeches reprinted a little turgid. The candidate improved as he went on, but at first classed Justinian as an eminent lawyer who had stood in the thickest of the fight, "met every temptation peculiar to our profession, and yet maintained" his integrity. In his first silver speech his argument "was, in substance, that we needed more money rather than less, and that the use of both metals for standard money would give more money than the use of one alone." The volume is of no general interest, but doubtless persons who are unfortunate enough to have to study American developments of bimetallism must peruse it for themselves.

"Mayflower" Essays on the Story of the Pilgrim Fathers (Ward & Downey) is a small work in which the Rev. G. Cuthbert Blaxland writes much that is familiar to the readers of Governor Bradford's 'History of the Plimoth Plantation'; but he raises a doubt as to the Mayflower, which some New Englanders will consider impious. The Pilgrim Fathers, who left England in 1620 and founded New Plymouth in America, have left many descendants who possess relics which are supposed to have been brought to America in the Mayflower. Mr. Blaxland, when chaplain to the Bishop of London, was the custodian of the manuscript of Governor Bradford, and he has written the notes upon that interesting document which now appear in print. His comments upon Bradford are shrewd and in good taste. He cannot forgive Bradford's objections to the Church of England as it was in his day, nor does he perceive how greatly the meddlesomeness of Laud and his underlings made the Church and its ritual offensive to those who, though sincerely religious, would not tolerate dictation in matters of conscience. But he rightly praises Bradford for having had the gift of humour, and he says with equal truth and justice that the colony of New Plymouth is Bradford's "lasting monument." Whether the founder of this colony crossed the Atlantic in the Mayflower is, however, a moot point in Mr. Blaxland's opinion. A vessel bearing that name carried Higginson's company to Salem in 1629, and one of the same name carried the Puritans who followed John Winthrop to New England in 1630; but he thinks it is open to doubt whether the proof is conclusive that either ship, or one bearing the same name, did carry the one hundred and twenty Pilgrims who embarked to cross the Atlantic with Bradford in 1620. The solution of the problem has more interest for New Englanders than for ourselves.

Colonial Days in Old New York, by Alice Morse Earle (Nutt), is filled with interesting particulars about the past, and leaves the impression on the reader that life in the New Netherlands had many enjoyments which are unknown to the citizens of the North American republic. When English rule displaced that of Holland the laws became as severe and irrational as they were throughout New England during its darkest days; one was that children above sixteen who struck father or mother, unless they proved danger of death, should suffer death for the crime. When speaking English in school was made compulsory on little Dutch children in New York, a master devised a plan, to use the strange phrase of the author, "to crowd out the use of Dutch in school." He gave a metal token to the first boy who spoke Dutch, and this boy handed it to the comrade who was next guilty of the like offence, and the token was passed from boy to boy till the school was closed, and then the last holder received a sound flogging. In the happy old colonial days there was not what the author styles a "tiresome, tedious wedding journey" after marriage. The people were so healthy under Dutch rule that doctors petitioned the Directors of the New Netherlands Company "that none but surgeons should be allowed to shave people." The doctors who did practise had heroic remedies at their command: "They made pills, and a terrible dose of rhubarb, senna, and port wine, called 'Vienna Drink.'" The most curious statement in this little book is that "the well-known Kiersted Ointment, manufactured and sold in New York to-day, is made from a receipt of old Dr. Hans Kiersted's, the best colonial physician of his day, who came to New York in 1638. The manufacture of this ointment is a closely guarded family secret."

SCOTTISH BIOGRAPHY.

The Life and Legend of Michael Scot, by the Rev. J. Wood Brown (Edinburgh, Douglas), is a work that one would wish to praise, and that at first sight it might seem easy to praise. Dante, Boccaccio, Sir Walter Scott, and Rossetti have made the name of Michael Scot a familiar one; but how little, indeed almost nil, has been known about him may be seen from a glance at the article on him in any encyclopædia. Here, however, we get a consecutive and lucid account of his career. He was born, it seems, about 1175, somewhere in the Scottish valley of the Tweed, and was educated at Roxburgh, Durham, Oxford, Paris, and Bologna. He became tutor and astrologer at Palermo to the young King of Sicily, Frederick II. (1194-1250), for whom he wrote three works on astrology, astronomy, and physiognomy, and on whose marriage in 1209 to Queen Constantia he proceeded to Spain. He settled at Toledo; engaged in translating Arabic versions of Aristotle's works on natural history, the astronomical 'Sphere' of Alpetrongi (1217), and the commentaries of Averroës; and set up a complete alchemical laboratory. In 1220, wearing the garb of an Arabian sage, he returned from Spain to the imperial Court (for Frederick was emperor now), and there pursued the study both of algebra and of medicine. He was a Churchman, anxious for preferment, and though in 1223 he refused the proffered archbishopric of Cashel on the ground that he could not speak Irish, Stephen Langton's indifference to the earnest appeals on his behalf of Popes Honorius III. and Gregory IX. threw him into "a brooding and despondent mood, a morbid depression of temper"—he took to prophesying coming woes. In 1229, however, his prohibited version of Averroës was given to the learned world, and Scot set out with an imperial circular announcing its nature and origin. He had visited the universities of Naples, Bologna, Paris, and Oxford, when about 1230 he died and was buried in his native borderland. It sounds well, but much, perhaps most of it, is based on the vaguest conjecture. Page after page offers some such phrase as "we may venture to fancy," "it is quite possible," "At this point we may surely hazard a further conjecture," "there is every reason to think," "on every account, there being no positive evidence to the contrary, we may conjecture," "we may take it for granted," and "Scot had probably written or translated a treatise on algebra." These conjectures, which on subsequent pages are apt to grow into facts, themselves are often based on the loosest and vaguest authorities—Anderson's 'Scottish Nation,' Dempster, a "work by Leland the antiquary published in 1549" (there is no such work), Grimm's 'Deutsche Mythologie,' Bacon's 'Opus Majus,' &c. James Grant's 'History of the Burgh Schools of Scotland' (1876)—not Sir James Dalrymple or Chalmers—is the authority for Scottish grammar schools; the 'Dictionary of National Biography' would have corrected the misstatement that "Dr. Dee spent some time at Prague at the beginning of the seventeenth century" (1583-89); and for Oakwood Tower Mr. Brown should have gone to Mr. Craig-Brown's 'History of Selkirkshire,' ii. 327-31. There he would have learnt that a Michael Scott did in 1517 obtain Oakwood by royal charter, and that the existing tower, "Jingler's Room" and all, was probably built in 1602. But what has shaken our confidence in Mr. Brown more than anything else is his remark on fifty-six "curious" lines of "certain prophecies of Michael Scot," which he quotes from the chronicler Salimbene. A few, a very few, may pass muster as elegiacs of the mediæval type, e.g., 43-46:—

> Roma diu titubans, longis terroribus acta
> Corruet, et mundi desinet esse caput.
> Fata monent, stellæque docent, aviumque volatus,
> Quod Fridericus malleus orbis erit.

But what is one to make of

> Mediolanum territum cruore fervido necis,
> Resuscitabit viso cruore mortis.
> In numeris errantes erunt atque silvestres.....

or of

> Mantua, væ tibi, tanto dolore plena,
> Cur ne vacillas nam tui pars ruet?
> Ferraria fallax, fides falsa nil tibi prodiat [sic],
> Subire te cunctis cum tua facta ruent
> Peregre missura quos tua mala parant
> Faventia inict [sic] tecum, videns tentoria pacem?

To us these seem absolute balderdash — not even good nonsense verses; but Mr. Brown's remark on them is this:—

"It would be difficult to determine how much of the original composition of Scot these verses preserve and how much they owe to later hands. We cannot be mistaken, however, in remarking their uniform tone of melancholy and apprehension, with the burden of its constantly recurring 'corruet,' or in taking this as a true index to the state of the author's mind."

If these lines were really written by Michael Scot, and if they are to be seriously taken as "a true index to the state of his mind," we should rather infer that he had been dining very freely before he composed them; nay, that, living as he then was in the land of the sunny grape, he may, "for aught known to the contrary," have been a confirmed dipsomaniac.

Fletcher of Saltoun, by G. W. T. Omond, in the "Famous Scots Series" (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier), is much less a biography than a sketch of the Scottish Union. There are only 155 pages, but page after page of these (e.g., 102-8, 109-13, 115-21) contains no allusion to Fletcher. Mr. Omond may say there are no materials for a life of Fletcher; why, then, has he written one? Otherwise the work is able and accurate. One single point only we are inclined to question: whether Defoe was really with Monmouth's, and not with Argyll's expedition, of which he gives a particular account in his 'Life of Duncan Campbell.'

RECENT VERSE.

Edward Cracroft Lefroy: his Life and Poems. By Wilfred Austin Gill. (Lane.)—One or two discriminating critics, notably Mr. Andrew Lang and the late Mr. Addington Symonds, have taken pains before now to point out the unusual merit of many of Edward Cracroft Lefroy's sonnets. It is probable, however, that to most, even of those fairly conversant with modern minor poetry, the personality of the young clergyman who died of heart disease in 1891 is but the shadowiest of shades. Most of Lefroy's poems were published locally in slight pamphlet form in 1883 and 1884, and reprinted in 1885 in a volume called 'Echoes from Theocritus,' which found some appreciative readers. These are contained in the present volume, together with some thirty additional sonnets, a few lyrics, a biographical sketch by an intimate friend of Lefroy, and a critical estimate by Mr. Symonds. The book will confirm the belief that in Lefroy the world of letters lost a genuine poet of remarkable promise and no inconsiderable achievement. Lefroy first became known by his 'Echoes from Theocritus,' and though the direct transcripts from the idyls are by no means his best work, yet they are the key to one very notable side of his poetic temperament. Without adopting the pastoral convention, he catches the pastoral mood, finding something akin to his own spirit in its languor, its sensuousness, its vision of a world sleeping in golden haze. His dreams are of Greece or of Sicily:—

> My heart's Ideal, that somewhere out of sight
> Art beautiful and gracious and alone,—
> Haply where blue Saronic waves are blown
> On shores that keep some touch of old delight.

So far as a Christian priest may be, he is nympholept, the vowed worshipper of natural, and, above all, of physical beauty. Beauty of youth, of perfect maidenhood, of the poised athlete: these inspire his most characteristic strains:—

If I could paint you, friend, as you stand there,
Guard of the goal, determined, open eyed,
Watching the tortured bladder side and glide
Under the twinkling feet, arms bare, head bare,
The breeze a tremble through crow tufts of hair;
Red-brown in face, and ruddier having spied
A wily tackman breaking from the side;
Aware of him, of all else unaware.
If I could limn you, as you leap and fling
Your weight against his passage, like a wall;
Clutch him, and collar him, and rudely cling
For one brief moment till he falls—you fall:
My sketch would have what Art could never give—
Sinew and breath and body—it would live.

It is through this sympathy with the young pulsing life that Lefroy enters into the secret of the classical manner. He has the sculptor's eye. His best sonnets are thoroughly Greek in their purity of outline, in their sunniness and their serenity. The artist has accomplished the mastery of his medium: the harmony of form and matter is complete. One gathers from Mr. Gill's interesting biographical sketch that Lefroy felt some incompatibility between his æsthetic ideals and his profession. He had not quite learnt the gaiety of St. Francis. One finds him deploring the frequency of his "lapses into Hellenism," and begging not to be associated with certain professors of Neo-paganism. The problem of reconciling Hellenism and Hebraism is very much with him, and in practice he goes some way to the solution of what we are sure is not ultimately insoluble, by the union of a certain delicacy of sensuous perception with an equally delicate spiritual insight. This is the dominant note of such fine sonnets as those which follow:—

QUEM DI DILIGUNT.

O kiss the almond-blossom on the rod!
A thing has gone from us that could not stay.
At least our sad eyes shall not see one day
All baseness treading where all beauty trod.
O kiss the almond-blossom on the rod!
For this our budding Hope is caught away
From growth that is not other than decay
To bloom eternal in the halls of God.
And though of subtler grace we saw no sign,
No glimmer from the yet unrisen star,—
Full-orbed he broke upon the choir divine,
Saint among saints beyond the golden bar,
Round whose pale brows new lights of glory shine—
The aureoles that were not and that are.

SAINTS.

O Saints, dear Saints, so present, yet so far!
I cannot touch you with my hand, or trace
The aspect of your strength, your faith, your grace;
Between us lie the years,—the gulf, the bar.
But as one tracks the starlight to the star,
And finds no dark nor flame-forsaken space
To fret the beauty of its burning face,
Because the splendour swallows blot and scar:
So Time has framed you with an aureole
More circle-rounded than your age foreknew;
No frailty now can quench that fire of soul!
The things ye willed and did not, those ye do;
The gifts ye strove for, in my sight are true;
Your perfect parts have made perfection whole.

There is no mere sensuous sensitivity here, but ethical fervour, and full measure of that "fundamental brain-work" which Rossetti, who so well knew, declared to be the first essential of a sonnet.

Certain sentiments in The Flowering of the Almond Tree, by Christian Burke (Blackwood & Sons), attract and charm so strongly that the critic's heart sinks within him as he realizes how far away the expression of them is from anything that approaches poetry; for it is ungracious to quarrel with milk and water because it is not wine, or to reproach a candle for not being a star. Yet the truth must be told. These are pretty verses, no doubt excellently suited for the magazines in which many of them have appeared; they show an earnest love of nature, a passionate devotion to the things of the spirit; but they are not poems. Why should they have been republished? They had graced the pages of the Argosy; why not have left them there, not trusted them to this wider sphere, which they are too weak and colourless to adorn? The habit of collecting fugitive pieces is one that grows upon the age. Already we have more minor poetry than we care to read. If the friends of the minor-verse writer desire a bound memorial of him, why not print his poems for private circulation after the good old-fashioned modest way? To publish a book of this kind is an insult to the world of readers and a challenge to the world of critics. Alas that the critics should be too tenderhearted to take up the gauntlet!

Mr. J. S. Fletcher's revolt is against orthodox Christianity, and his Ballads of Revolt (Lane) voice little that is not to be found in an incomparably finer setting in the celebrated chorus from 'Atalanta in Calydon.' Perhaps the best of the poems is 'The Last Sacrament'; but even this has little originality. We remember seeing the situation and the sentiment treated a few years ago with far more terseness and beauty in a magazine poem called, if we remember aright, 'Unrepentant.' Recollecting 'The Wonderful Wapentake' and 'God's Failures,' we are inclined to the belief that Mr. Fletcher's natural medium is prose, though even in that he is a little inclined to be blasphemous. In his 'Ballads of Revolt' he seems to have been a little frightened, when all was said and done, at his own profanities, and slips in a soothing sonnet, explaining to God and man that after all he means nothing personal, since he is only attacking a god in whom he does not believe. To consider this mental attitude as a revelation in psychology might be interesting; to consider the book as poetry is impossible.

AMERICAN FICTION.

The rather depressing effect of Mr. Howells's penultimate volume is effaced by The Landlord at Lion's Head (Edinburgh, Douglas). This is a capital piece of workmanship; story, scenery, portraiture, analysis of character, all are good, and the writer's accomplished skill weaves the whole together, keeps the due proportions, and succeeds in holding the reader's interest. It is not possible to say that 'The Landlord at Lion's Head' takes its place among Mr. Howells's best novels. He has had happier inspiration, but he has seldom done a better piece of work. The central character is not attractive, and the author is too strong a partisan against him. The reader feels that he is not so interesting as he is meant to be, and not so black as he is painted. Nor is enough made of the brilliant, smart girl whose portrait is so cleverly sketched. The author treats her from the mixed points of view of the creative artist and the severe censor, and unfortunately allows his views as censor to prevail. But the fairest judgment that can be passed upon the book is indicated by saying that one can read it almost to the end with pleasure. The details of college life at Harvard are an attraction to English readers. It is particularly noticeable that the distinctions of class or caste as represented in this book are more rigid than in English society.

As we began to read Mr. S. Crane's novel The Third Violet (Heinemann) we thought it was outside the list of his works of genius, and an attempt at a new departure into which less brain-power had been put. It makes little demand upon the reader, and flows almost as smoothly as the 'Dolly Dialogues.' But before the middle of this American love story was reached we found reason to change our view, and to recognize a vividness of portraiture which puts 'The Third Violet' on a high level—higher, we think, than Mr. Crane's very different 'Maggie,' though perhaps lower than 'The Little Regiment,' which is also very different. In his present book Mr. Crane is more the rival of Mr. Henry James than of Mr. Rudyard Kipling. But he is intensely American, which can hardly be said of Mr. Henry James, and it is possible that if he continues in his present line of writing he may be the author who will introduce the United States to the ordinary English world. We have never come across a book that brought certain sections of American society so perfectly before the reader as does 'The Third Violet,' which introduces us to a farming family, to the boarders at a summer hotel, and to the young artists of New York. The picture is an extremely pleasant one, and its truth appeals to the English reader, so that the effect of the book is to draw him nearer to his American cousins. 'The Third Violet' incidentally contains the best dog that we have come across in modern fiction. Mr. Crane's dialogue is excellent, and it is dialogue of a type for which neither 'The Red Badge of Courage' nor his later books had prepared us. For example, a reference to China, before an artist hero, produces the reflection: "There are innumerable tobacco jars in China. .....Moreover, there is no perspective. You don't have to walk two miles to see a friend." Some understanding will really have to be come to between us and the Americans, and our colonists in Australia and elsewhere, as to the English language. If they are going to produce writers who are so certain to be read throughout the English world as Mr. Stephen Crane, our people will have to learn the meaning of many American phrases. There are passages in the present book which will be spoilt for many English readers by the fact that they may be unaware that, across the Atlantic, "bug" means a flying insect. "Snickered" we suppose means sniggered. "So long" of course we know to be a salutation on departure; but in England that fact is not generally understood, though it is known in parts and among certain classes. There is one phrase which, with all our admiration for Mr. Crane, we find simply horrible: "mucilaged to their seats," for glued.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Were the results of "Whig jobs" superior to those of open competition and those of "promotion by merit"? This is one question raised by The Inner Life of the House of Commons, by Mr. William White, edited, with a preface, by Mr. Justin McCarthy, M.P., and published in two volumes by Mr. Fisher Unwin. Mr. White had been a bookseller at Bedford, and was hoisted into the place of assistant, and later of principal doorkeeper by the influence of the Whitbreads. Nowadays, doorkeepers are servants of the House, such as those who have presided over the teas of the ladies in their grated gallery, and arrive by promotion at the highest post within their reach. Mr. White used to have that gossiping acquaintance with members which doorkeepers, if men of cultivation, can easily acquire, and he used also to do that which subsequent doorkeepers have not done, namely, listen to the debates from the Bar of the House, an advantage shared in the present day by one of the messengers of the House, who, however, is not supposed to keep a diary. Mr. White used to contribute to an illustrated paper impressions of the House, and was the first regular contributor of personal gossip about orators and their ways to the columns of the press. The thanks of Mr. White's son and of those who have prepared the present volume are given in it to the proprietors of the Illustrated London News for their permission to reprint. This may possibly give rise afterwards to some slight confusion. The articles of Mr. White appeared in the Illustrated Times, the copyright of which probably belongs to the proprietors of the Illustrated London News, and this explains the thanks accorded to them. The articles of "The Silent Member," which appeared in the Illustrated London News for many years, came from another pen, and we believe that Mr. John Latey, now connected with another illustrated journal, which uses the name of the Illustrated Times as a second title, for many years contributed these articles to the Illustrated London News. Mr. White was, in fact, succeeded in the same form of Parliamentary journalism by Mr. Latey, and they may be looked upon as the forerunners of that Parliamentary journalism which is pursued with such conspicuous merit by "H. W. L.," "Toby," and "T. P." Mr. White's judgments have been confirmed by history, and he evidently was a most accurate and even philosophic observer. He has been posthumously lucky in his editor, for nothing can be in better taste than Mr. McCarthy's preface. It is interesting to notice in Mr. White's pages how common was the failure of literary men in the House of Commons. We have lately been reminded of Gibbon's membership of the House of Commons, and of the fact that he avoided the risk of a fiasco by being a silent member; but Mr. White recalls the almost-forgotten fact that the great "Sam Slick" (Judge Haliburton)—not only an admirable writer of humorous books and of serious historical works, but also a great lawyer and an excellent after-dinner speaker—was a complete failure in the House of Commons. Mr. White speaks of him as "in appearance" a "sturdy old gentleman-farmer," who made speeches such "as any country gentleman might have made." Mr. White also recounts the failure of two other men who had reached success in the world of letters, though success and failure of two different kinds—A. W. Kinglake and Samuel Warren. The cover of the book bears the inscription "1860–1870," but the book deals with a longer period.

Mr. William Heinemann publishes Rhodesia Past and Present, by Mr. Du Toit, a volume which possesses some interest. The writer is Afrikander in certain of his opinions, but in some matters he is on the other side. The only comparatively new point in the book, or new to us, is the account of the great ancient aqueducts in the neighbourhood of the gold workings in Rhodesia. Mr. Du Toit is convinced that the Phœnicians or whoever these persons were—possibly the slave-owning Portuguese of the time just after the 'Lusiads'—had grain fields, gardens, and orchards in South Africa. He points out, however, that no burial-places have been discovered, a fact which is more consistent with a Portuguese ascription of these works than with the Phœnician. The style of Mr. Du Toit is extraordinary; as, for instance, in calling a town "she," when he says of Mafeking, "She is a twin city." A few lines further on he speaks of "the 'Freebooters' of Land Gosen, as the English called them."

Sir George Clarke, in what apparently is the first volume of the "Imperial Library," published by the Imperial Press, deals with Imperial Defence, as he had done in one of his essays lately reprinted in the volume bearing the names of Mr. Thursfield and himself; but he writes on this occasion more popularly and less for experts. He does not attempt to supply very recent figures of military or naval expenditure, and nothing is more difficult than to give them accurately; but in the statistics for 1895 which he quotes we notice that India figures for nearly a million of annual naval expenditure, and does so on the strength of an Admiralty return. There has been an immense diminution in the Indian naval expenditure since the return of 1895, and the whole marine expenditure of India, including that on internal navigation not military, is, we believe, now only about one-third of the sum named.

The French Revolution and English Literature. By E. Dowden. (Kegan Paul.)—In this volume Prof. Dowden has printed some lectures which were originally delivered in this country and afterwards in America. Occasionally brilliant, they contain far too many scraps quoted from authorities of very varying merit, from Buckle to Mr. Birrell, to make a good book. Many of the works most affected by the French Revolution are quite dead in the literary world; for instance, we do not believe that 'Caleb Williams' "can be said to survive" in any sense. Nor can we pretend a great enthusiasm for Wordsworth's pieces inspired by the Napoleonic wars "as pure literature." Viewed in this light, others have done better. Heine's 'Two Grenadiers,' for instance, beat 'The Happy Warrior' off the field.

The Romance of Isabel, Lady Burton: the Story of her Life, 2 vols. (Hutchinson & Co.), cannot be told, either by herself or Mr. W. H. Wilkins, without Richard Burton proving the principal figure of the tale. This is not Mr. Wilkins's fault, but arises from the nature of things. From the time they first met, Burton seems to have occupied his wife's thoughts (vol. i. pp. 53-4), and to the close of her life he was the object of her idolatry. The consequence is that the book has throughout an air of incompleteness. It reads like a supplement to Lady Burton's biography of her husband, and an incomplete supplement into the bargain. The publication of Miss Stisted's ill-advised life of Sir Richard Burton has led Mr. Wilkins to repel the charges made in it against Lady Burton. He clearly shows that Burton was recalled from the Consulate at Damascus because of his own lack of tact and his habit of offending people, not from any special fault of his wife's, although she did horsewhip a Greek. But in defending her strange proceeding in having extreme unction administered to her husband when, if not actually dead, he was quite unconscious, Mr. Wilkins makes a mistake in saying that "Burton gave his wife reason to believe that he had become a Catholic." The fact is that the way in which Burton used to ridicule the Papal religion in his wife's presence often jarred on his friends, who thought that, however unenlightened her creed, it ought to have been respected. He did not loathe the Roman Catholic Church, but he despised it, and the paper Mr. Wilkins prints is not in the least inconsistent with sentiments of which Burton's friends were well aware. Mr. Wilkins's attempt to throw doubt on Burton's religious views is the more to be regretted as the rest of his task is performed with excellent tact and discretion.

In the introduction to the "Gadshill Edition" of Martin Chuzzlewit Mr. Lang hardly does justice to the American scenes, which, as Mr. Stephen says, "are perhaps the most surprising proof of his [Dickens's] power of seizing characteristics at a glance." 'Martin Chuzzlewit' appears to us to be Dickens's greatest achievement; but Mr. Lang obviously prefers 'Nicholas Nickleby' and 'David Copperfield.' The notes in these two volumes consist of one solitary effort of the editor's.

Mr. G. T. Bagguley, of Newcastle-under-Lyme, has shown us some pretty bindings, with hand-toolings in various colours, executed by the "Sunderland" process, for which he has taken out a patent. The fine effects attained by the use of inlaid leathers by Le Gascon and his successors in France and by Samuel Mearne in England are well known, but the application of colour by individual tools has not hitherto been practised. However, Mr. Bagguley has only partially solved the problem, as his process at present appears to be chiefly applicable to vellum. Even on this it is not very suitable for the exteriors of books, as though his colours are quite permanent, they depend very much for their effect on the absolute freshness of the white leather with which they are in contrast. The process, however, makes a real addition to the possibilities of ornamentation in inner covers or doublures, and some of the designs for these already executed in delicate blues and greens, tooled with great fineness and precision, are as pretty as they are new.

A most excellent and useful reprint, published by Messrs. Kegan Paul & Co., is Political Pamphlets, selected and arranged by Mr. A. F. Pollard. In the introduction, by the way, Mr. Pollard assumes it to be proved that Francis was "Junius": a statement to which we take strong exception. The pamphlets reprinted are well selected, and contain 'Killing no Murder,' the 'Draft of a New Model at Sea,' the 'Art of Political Lying,' Steele's 'Crisis,' Swift's 'Thoughts on the Present State of Affairs,' Bolingbroke's 'State of Parties,' one of Swift's "Drapier's Letters," Junius's Letter No. 1, and his letters to the Duke of Bedford and to the king, Burke's 'Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents,' and one of his letters on a Regicide Peace. The most interesting, perhaps, of all the pamphlets to read with an eye to present events is that by Halifax entitled 'Some Cautions for Choice of Members of Parliament,' which is perfectly expressed, and, almost in its entirety, applicable to our day.

The second volume of The Political Life of the Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, illustrated with Cartoons and Sketches from 'Punch,' is published by Messrs. Bradbury, Agnew & Co., and carries us from 1876 to 1886. We presume that a third volume will ultimately complete the work. The Eastern Question, the conflicts between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Disraeli over the Treaty of Berlin, and the Home Rule question are, of course, fully covered. The book is excellently brought out, and will be found extremely interesting; and the only hint of criticism that we have to offer is that the reproductions of the work of Mr. Furniss are occasionally not entirely satisfactory, and that the representations of Lord Randolph Churchill chosen among the little sketches are not perhaps the best of those of the leader of the Fourth Party which appeared in Punch.

Messrs. Kelly & Co. have considerably improved the Clergy List by recording the various preferments that have been held by each individual named in the alphabetical list of the clergy, and also including the clergy of Ireland, Scotland, and the colonies. This has led to a considerable increase in the size of the volume.

Pioneer Women in Victoria's Reign (Newnes), by Mr. E. Pratt, is an unpretentious volume, giving an account of the work done by women in various directions, such as promoting nursing, poor-law reform, education, &c. No mention, we observe, seems to be made of Mrs. Crawshay and her lady-helps.

Harry Richmond fills the eleventh and twelfth volumes of Messrs. Constable's splendid reprint of Mr. Meredith's novels. It was originally published in the Cornhill, and appeared in the orthodox three volumes in the autumn of 1871. Not very warmly welcomed at first, it is now probably the most popular of Mr. Meredith's romances, and should in its new and handsome guise win the admiration of many more readers.

We have on our table Essays, by George John Romanes, edited by C. Lloyd-Morgan (Longmans),—A Higher French Reader, by E. Weekley (Clive),—Useful Extracts of Everyday French, by E. M. Spicer (Simpkin),—Selections from Malory's 'Le Morte d'Arthur,' edited by A. T. Martin (Macmillan),—This Wonderful Universe, by Agnes Giberne (S.P.C.K.),—The Story of Forest and Stream, by J. Rodway (Newnes),—Historic Bubbles, by F. Leake (Suckling & Galloway),—Is Natural Selection the Creator of Species? by D. Graham (Digby & Long),—Topography made Easy, compiled by J. Corballis (Gale & Polden),—Popular Bulb Culture, by W. D. Drury (L. Upcott Gill),—Photograms of '96 (Dawbarn & Ward),—St. Nicholas, edited by Mary Mapes Dodge, Vol. XXIII. (Macmillan),—A Boy all Over, by H. Avery (Low),—Anthony Jasper, by Ben Bolt (Fisher Unwin),—Doctor Forenti, by H. Grimshawe (Digby & Long),—By a Way They Knew Not, by G. Trobridge (Speirs),—Caoba, the Guerilla Chief, by P. H. Emerson (Nutt),—A Comedy of Three, by N. Sanders (Fisher Unwin),—The Land of the Living Dead, by N. Fyne (Drane),—The Angel Princess, by E. W. Darby (Sonnenschein),—The Forcing of the Khaibar Pass, with other Poems, by I. Paton (Greenock, Hutchison),—"He Suffered," and other Poems, by A. B. Nicholls (Bournemouth, Mate),—Lyrics of the White City, by H. Powell (Simpkin),—Village Sermons, by the late F. J. A. Hort (Macmillan),—The Ambassador of Christ, by James Cardinal Gibbons (Washbourne),—On the Millennium, by C. Wordsworth, D.D. (Stock),—A Goodly Heritage, by J. H. Skrine (Constable),—Krieg und Sieg, 1870–71, edited by Dr. J. v. Pflugk-Harttung (Berlin, Schall & Grund),—Pages Choisies des Auteurs Contemporains: Tolstoi, by R. Candiani (Paris, Colin),—Iduna, by Dr. K. Dammann (Williams & Norgate),—Le Roi David, by M. Dieulafoy (Hachette),—and Études sur la Tragédie, by C. Dejob (Paris, Colin). Among New Editions we have The Creed Explained, by the Rev. A. Devine (Washbourne),—The Atonement, selected by E. R. Ransome (14, Bishopsgate Street Without),—Verne's The Giant Raft: Part II., The Cryptogram (Low),—and Our Clearing System and Clearing Houses, by W. Howarth (Wilson).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Boddy's (Rev. A.) Christ in the Holy Land, cr. 8vo. 4/ cl.
Bradford's (A. H.) The Growing Revelation, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Buxton (Rev. H. J. W.) and others' Harvest and Flower Festival Sermons, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Mission of St. Augustine to England according to the Original Documents, edited by A. J. Mason, cr. 8vo. 5/
Moore's (T.) Beginnings of the English Church and Kingdom explained to the People, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Pearson's (J. B.) Words of Counsel, selected as Helps to Thought and Life, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wilken's (C. A.) Spanish Protestants in the Sixteenth Century, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net, cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Annual of the British School at Athens, Session 1895–6, 10/6
Bower's (H. M.) The Elevation and Procession of the Ceri at Gubbio, an Account of the Ceremonies, &c., 8vo. 7/6 net.
English Portraits, a Series of Lithographed Drawings, by W. Rothenstein, Part 1, 2/6 net.
Munro's (R.) Prehistoric Problems, 8vo. 10/ net, cl.
Pictorial England and Wales, 4to. 9/ cl.
Stacpoole's (W. H.) The Victorian Picture Book, folio, 5/ cl.
Woodbury's (J. C.) Echoes, decorated by E. Pope, 12/6 cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Dunbar's (P. L.) Lyrics of Lowly Life, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Hay's (J.) Poems, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net, cl.
Keddell's (E. A.) Gleanings from Ibsen, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Lyric Poems of Beaumont and Fletcher, edited by E. Rhys, 18mo. 2/6 net, cl.
Mirror of the Sinful Soul, Prose Translation by Princess Elizabeth of a Poem by Margaret of Navarre, 8vo. 10/6
Theatrical World of 1896, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Philosophy.

Blows's (S.) The Elements of Psychology, cr. 8vo. 2/ net, cl.

History and Biography.

Crowe's (E.) Thackeray's Haunts and Homes, cr. 8vo. 6/ net.
Ford's (P. L.) The True George Washington, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Hilton, Marie, her Life and Work, 1821–1896, by her Son, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Isabella the Catholic, Queen of Spain, her Life, Reign, and Times, by Baron de Nervo, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Plumer's (Lieut.-Col. H.) An Irregular Corps in Matabeleland, cr. 8vo. 9/ cl.
Tyler's (M. C.) The Literary History of the American Revolution, Vol. 1, 8vo. 12/6 cl.
Walrond's (Col. H.) Historical Records of the 1st Devon Militia, 8vo. 42/ net, cl.

Geography and Travel.

Boore's (E.) Wrekin Sketches, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Hay's (J.) Castilian Days, cr. 8vo. 4/6 net, cl.
Sommerville's (M.) Siam on the Meinam, with Three Romances illustrative of Siamese Life and Customs, 14/

Philology.

Morfill's (W. R.) A Short Grammar of the Bulgarian Language, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.

Science.

Baker's (H. F.) An Introduction to Abel's Theorem, &c., royal 8vo 25/ net, cl.
Coffin's (F. C.) The Graphical Solution of Hydraulic Problems, 12mo. 10/6 net, half-morocco.
Crelle's (Dr. A. L.) Calculating Tables, folio, 21/ cl.
Higginson's (T. W.) The Procession of the Flowers, 5/ cl.
Osler's (W.) Lectures on Angina Pectoris and Allied States, 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
Rose's (N. J.) Lawns and Gardens, How to Plant, &c., 15/ cl.
Russell's (B.) The Foundations of Geometry, 8vo. 7/6 cl.

General Literature.

Adcock's (A. St. J.) East-End Idylls, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Baldwin's (J.) School Management and School Methods, 6/
Bateman's (Rev. G. C.) The Vivarium, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Besant's (W.) A Fountain Sealed, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Canton's (W.) The Invisible Playmate and W. V. her Book, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Cassidy's (J.) The Gift of Love, a Romance, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Cleeve's (L.) Lazarus, a Tale of the Earth's Great Miracle, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Deland's (M.) The Wisdom of Fools, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Doudney's (S.) Pilgrims of the Night, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Egerton's (G.) Symphonies, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Forbes's (Mrs W. R. D.) Blight, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gastrell's (W. S. H.) Our Trade in the World in relation to Foreign Competition, royal 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gibbs's (H.) A Long Probation, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Gladstone's (W. E.) Later Gleanings, 16mo. 3/6 cl.
Godfrey's (H.) The Rejuvenation of Miss Semaphore, 3/6 cl.
Gribble's (F.) Only an Angel, a Story of Two Kreutzer Sonatas, cr. 8vo. 2 boards, half-parchment, 7
Hope's (A.) The Indiscretion of the Duchess, illus. 3/6 cl.
Horning's (E. W.) My Lord Duke, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hughes's (J. L.) Froebel's Educational Laws for all Teachers, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hurst's (J. H.) Stephen Lescombe, Bachelor of Arts, 5/ cl.
Jephson's (A. J. M.) The Story of a Billiard Ball, a Tale of Barbarism and Civilization, 4to. 2/6 cl.
Jorrocks, The, Birthday Book, Selections from 'Handley Cross,' 16mo. 3/6 net, cl.
Kaye's (L.) A Drawing-Room Cynic, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
King's (Capt. C.) Trials of a Staff Officer, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Knight's (G.) The Winds of March, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Lee's (C.) The Widow Woman, a Cornish Tale, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Louis's (A. B.) Mallerton, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Lynch's (H.) An Odd Experiment, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
McCarthy's (J.) A History of Our Own Time, Vol. 5, 12/ cl.
Mackay's (G. A.) Where the Heather Grows, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Mason's (A. E. W.) The Philanderers, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Meade's (L. T.) The Way of a Woman, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Merrick's (L.) One Man's View, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mondego's (I.) Impossibilities, Fantasias, royal 16mo. 4/ cl.
Rees's (E.) The Chronicles of Christopher, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Scully's (W. C.) The White Hecatomb, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Spring-Time, the Only Pretty Ring Time, edited by C. Peters, 4to. 7/6 cl.
Victorian Birthday Book, 16mo. 3/ French morocco.
Withrow's (W. H.) Barbara Heck, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Yellow Book, Vol. 13, 4to. 5/ net, cl.
Zangwill's (L.) A Nineteenth Century Miracle, cr. 8vo. 3/6

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Hinschius (P.): Das Kirchenrecht der Katholiken u. Protestanten in Deutschland, Vol. 6, Part 1, 14m.
Holtzmann (H. J.): Lehrbuch der neutestamentlichen Theologie, 2 vols. 20m.
Simon (T.): Die Pyschologie des Apostels Paulus, 2m. 80.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Baye (Baron de): Souvenirs d'un Couronnement Impérial, Moscou, Mai, 1896, 5fr.
Hildebrand (H.): Der Tempel Ta-chüeh-sy bei Peking, 10m.
Imbert (H.): Profils d'Artistes Contemporains, 6fr.
Kaemmerer (L.): Chodowiecki, 3m.
Pottier (E.): Vases Antiques du Louvre, Salles A-E, 30fr.

Philosophy.

Beaunis (H.) et Binet (A.): L'Année Psychologique, 15fr.
Chabot (Ch.): Nature et Moralité, 5fr.
Funck-Brentano (Th.): La Science Sociale, 7fr. 50.
Pillon (F.): L'Année Philosophique, 5fr.
Regnaud (P.): Précis de Logique Évolutionniste, 2fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Biré (E.): Honoré de Balzac, 6fr.
Bourlier (J.): Les Tchèques et la Bohème Contemporaine, 3fr. 50.
Leyen (F. v.): Kleine Beiträge zur deutschen Litteraturgeschichte im 11 u. 12 Jahrh., 2m. 40.

Geography and Travel.

Bérard (V.): La Macédoine, 3fr. 50.

Philology.

Erman (A.): Bruchstücke koptischer Volkslitteratur, 3m. 50.
Gassner (A.): Das altspanische Verbum, 5m.

General Literature.

Bayard (G.): Vainqueurs et Vaincus du Métier Militaire, 3fr. 50.
Bertheroy (J.): Le Double Joug, 3fr. 50.
Buet (C.): Grands Hommes en Robe de Chambre, 3fr. 50.
Caters (L. de): L'Amour d'Aimer, 3fr. 50.
Dodillon (É.): La Grande, 3fr. 50.
Donos (Ch.): Le Ladies' Club, 3fr. 50.
Ducret (É.): Les Vendeuses d'Amour, 3fr. 50.
Guillemot (M.): Villégiatures d'Artistes, 3fr. 50.
Homsy (G.): Les Baisers Restent, 3fr. 50.
Lafagette (R.): Symphonies Pyrénéennes, 3fr. 50.
Le Braz (A.): Vieilles Histoires du Pays Breton, 5fr.
Legrand (L.): L'Idée de Patrie, 7fr. 50.
Leroy-Beaulieu (P.): Les Nouvelles Sociétés Anglo-Saxonnes, 4fr.
Ohnet (G.): Le Curé de Favières, 3fr. 50.
Souillac (M. de): La Générale, 3fr. 50.
Theuriet (A.): Boisfleury, 3fr. 50.
Tinseau (L. de): Dans la Brume, 3fr. 50.

COLERIDGE ON SPINOZA.

In the library of Manchester College at Oxford there is a copy of Spinoza's works (Paulus's edition, 1802–3) which formerly belonged to Crabb Robinson. It contains notes by Coleridge which are partially quoted in Robinson's 'Diary' (vol. i. p. 399, second edition). Prof. Brandl, in his 'Samuel Taylor Coleridge und die englische Romantik' (pp. 354–6), comments on them, but does not reproduce them. In Lady Eastlake's translation of the professor's work the whole of this commentary is omitted without a word of warning to the reader. The notes are instructive; for if they do not elucidate Spinoza, whom I venture to think Coleridge did not entirely understand, they show great admiration of the man, and the criticism on Letter xxxv. from Blyenbergh is universal in its application and very suggestive. They are also a good example of Coleridge's continual struggle to make believe that the conclusions of his later theology were those of his earlier metaphysics, which he never could abandon.

Dr. Drummond has kindly permitted me to obtain a copy of these notes, and they are now for the first time printed verbatim. There is nothing to fix their precise date. Dr. Toulin, who is called "the present Bishop of Lincoln," was bishop from 1787 to 1820. Robinson first saw Coleridge on November 10th, 1810, and all we can say is that they were written between 1810 and 1820. I have added a translation of the passages in Spinoza to which they refer, and a few remarks of my own. It will, of course, be remembered that in the 'Principia' it is not Spinoza who speaks, but Descartes.

'Principia Philosophiæ Cartesianæ,' Part I. Prop. xi.—There is but one God.

"Demonstr. If you deny this proposition, conceive, if it be possible, that there are more Gods than one—for example, A and B; then necessarily (Prop. ix.) A, as well as B, will possess complete knowledge, that is to say, A will understand everything, both himself and B, and B will understand himself and A. But since A and B necessarily exist (Prop. v.), the cause of the truth and of the necessity of the idea of B himself which is in A is B himself, and the cause of the truth and of the necessity of the idea of A himself which is in B is A himself. Therefore there is some perfection in A which is not derived from A, and there is some perfection in B which is not derived from B; and therefore, by the preceding proposition, neither A nor B will be Gods. Therefore there is but one God. Q.E.D."

Coleridge.

"There is a confusion between self-originate and necessary. There cannot be two self-originate beings, as this Prop. demonstrates; but it does not follow, that there may not be two necessary Beings—A: and B, the necessary product of B [sic: evidently should be A]: and these may be equal in all but self-origination."

Coleridge has overlooked Note i., Lemma i., Prop. vii., which expressly meets this objection. It is as follows: "Although many things may be said necessarily to exist, for this reason only, that there is a determinate cause for their production, we do not here speak of these things, but only of that necessity and possibility which follows from the consideration alone of the nature or essence of the thing, without any reference to a cause."

Letter ii. Spinoza to Oldenburg.

[The other causes of error assigned by Bacon] "may all be reduced to that one of Descartes, that the human will is free, and extends beyond the intellect, or, as Bacon himself (aph. 49) more confusedly puts it, because the understanding is no dry light, but receives an infusion from the will. (It is to be noted here that Bacon often takes the understanding for the mind, differing therein from Descartes.) This cause, therefore, passing by others of no moment, I will show to be false, as anybody may see, if he will but consider that the will differs from this or that volition in the same way as whiteness differs from this or that white thing, or humanity from this or that man: therefore it is as impossible to conceive that the will is the cause of this and that volition as that humanity is the cause of Peter and Paul. Since therefore the will is nothing but an entity of the reason and can in no way be said to be the cause of this and that volition, and particular volitions, since they need for their existence a cause, cannot be called free, but are necessarily such as they are determined to be by their causes, and lastly, since according to Descartes these very same errors are particular volitions, it necessarily follows that errors, that is to say, particular volitions, are not free, but are determined by external causes and in no way by the will. This is what I promised to demonstrate."

Coleridge.

"Et, me judice, male differt" inserted against the remark concerning Bacon and Descartes].

"But still causation is assumed as a universal Law: tho' its very definition implies a contradiction. For 'to cause' is to originate a state: therefore infinite Causation would be Origination without an Origin. Causa vera et ipsissima must be superior to causation as its ground. Spinoza's system, as far as it is dogmatic and peculiar, is in fact no system, but a Theory assuming as a Fact, what his adversaries with better right deny. True, that Bacon (who did not mean to form a system of metaphysics but to lay down the law of experimenting) begins e suâ naturâ, out of which an unbelievable and insufficing idealism would follow; but Spinoza begins with the Phantom of a Thing in itself, i.e. an Object. But an Object implies a Subject, as much as a S. an O.; therefore that only can have a chance of grounding knowledge, which assumes the actual fact, namely X=Subject-Object=Object-Subject, Ideal-real, real-ideal! the Absolute eternally foliating the Dual, as this the Triad. Being + the Word =the Spirit, and then the mystery or Love=God all in all, when he hath finally submitted himself to whom all things had been submitted."

At the end of this note the words "Lunes! Lunes!" are written, apparently in Crabb Robinson's hand. Down to the word "Dual" the passage is a reflection from Schelling (see 'Biog. Lit.,' ed. 1847, vol. i. part ii. p. 276). "The Absolute," says Schelling, "of itself is cause and effect—subject and object." Robinson's ejaculation probably applies to the close of the note from the word "Dual."

It is not necessary to quote Letter xxxv., Blyenbergh to Spinoza, as the purport of it is sufficiently evident from Coleridge's note :—

"The great defect in Blyenbergh's letters (the usual petulance of an incipient self-instructor allowed for) is the obstinate Urging of Difficulties in the Result; instead of examining the Demonstration itself, by the full understanding of which it can alone be ascertained, whether such really are the necessary Results, and by which alone the Results, whatever they should prove to be, can be explained. This, however, is the sort of attack, by which every original Philosopher is sure to be harassed, by 9 out of 10 of his antagonists. And why? Because even of those who devote their Time to philosophical, especially if to metaphysical subjects not one in ten has the Spirit of true Philosophy dwelling in him. The rest are rather Psilosophists, Philocyphers, and Meta'pothecaries" [or it may be "Metipothecaries"].

Letter xxxvi. Spinoza to Blyenbergh.

"I affirm in the first place that God is absolutely and in truth the cause of all things which have essence, whatever those things may be. If you now can demonstrate that evil, error, crimes, &c., are anything which expresses essence, I grant you, without reserve, that God is the cause of crimes, evil, error, &c. I think I have sufficiently shown that that which makes the form of evil, error, crime, does not consist in anything which expresses essence, and therefore it cannot be said that God is its cause. For example, the murder of his mother by Nero, in so far as it included anything positive, was not a crime: for Orestes did the same outward villainy, and also intended to slay his mother, and yet he is not blamed, or, at least, not so much as Nero. What then was the crime of Nero? It was simply that he showed himself by this wickedness to be ungrateful, pitiless, and disobedient. But it is certain that these qualities do not express essence, and therefore that God was not their cause, although he was the cause of Nero's act and intention."

Coleridge.

"Tho' this appears to me as hollow, as if having made a round Bullet I should deny that I was the cause of its Roundness, because Roundness is a mere negation of Angles: or that God did not create a Worm, quatenus Worm, but only that which the Worm was in common with Adam or the highest Archangel, because all the difference consisted in negation: and tho' I perceive a plain confusion of Negation with Privation, of the + O with O; yet I can see no reason for railing at Spinoza, who if in error has herein erred with Luther, Calvin, and the most eminent of the earliest Reformers. The very same Theses supported by the very same reasoning are maintained by Jonathan Edwards, and still more recently by Dr. Williams ('On the Divine Equity and Sovereignty,' &c., and in his 'Defence of Modern Calvinism' in reply to Dr. Tomlin alias Prettiman, the present Bishop of Lincoln). Neither is Spinoza without authority of Christian Divines, nay, Fathers, in preferring Mens, and Sapientia, as predicated De Deo, to 'Intellectus': or in classing the latter inter naturas naturatas instead of making it an attribute entis absoluti, vel naturæ naturantis. The Truth is, Spinoza in common with all the metaphysicians before him (Böhmen perhaps excepted) began at the wrong end—commencing with God as an Object. Had he, even tho' still dogmatizing objectively, begun with the Natura naturans in its simplest forms he must have proceeded on per intelligentiam to the subjective—and having reached the other Pole=Idealism, or the 'I,' he would have then reprogressed to the Equatorial Point, or the Identity of Subject and Object: and would thus have arrived finally not only at the clear Idea of God, as absolute Being, the Ground of all Existents (for so far he did reach, and to charge him with Atheism is a gross Calumny) but likewise at the Faith in the Living God, who hath the Ground of his own Existence in Himself. That this would have been the Result, had he lived a few years longer, I think his Epist. 72 authorizes us to believe, and of so pure a soul, so righteous a Spirit as Spinoza, I dare not doubt, that this Potential Fact is received by the Eternal as Actual."

There is nothing in Spinoza's letter to which the latter part of this note applies. For a similar reflection from Schelling see second note. Coleridge scarcely apprehends Spinoza, who repeats here a familiar doctrine of the 'Ethic' which cannot be fully discussed here. He describes Nero's crime by negatives: "Quodnam ergo Neronis scelus? Non aliud, quam quod hoc facinore ostenderet se ingratum, immisericordem, ac inobedientem esse." The crime was a want, like the want of life in a stone.

'Ethic,' Part I. Prop. xxviii.

"An individual thing, or a thing which is finite and which has a determinate existence, cannot exist nor be determined to action, unless it be determined to existence and action by another cause which is also finite and has a determinate existence; and again, this cause cannot exist nor be determined to action unless by another cause which is also finite and determined to existence and action, and so on ad infinitum."

Coleridge.

"This is the Proposition on the full insight into which depends at once the correction and the confirmation of Spinosism. If these finite causes can be said to act at all, then that on which they act has an equal power of action: and even as tho' all in God essentially, we are yet each existentially individual, so must we have freedom in God in exact proportion to our Individuality. It is most necessary to distinguish Spinosism from Spinosa—i.e. the consequences of the immanence in God as the one only necessary Being whose essence involves existence, with the deductions from Spinosa's own mechanic realistic view of the world. Even in the latter I cannot accord with Jacobi's assertion, that Spinosism, as taught by Spinosa, is atheism, for though he will not consent to call things essentially disparate by the same name, and therefore denies human intelligence to the Deity, yet he adores his Wisdom, and expressly declares the identity of Love, i.e., perfect Virtue, or concentric Will, in the human Being, and that with which the Supreme loves himself, as all in all. It is true, he contends for Necessity; but then he makes two disparate classes of Necessity, the one identical with Liberty (even as the Christian Doctrine 'whose service is perfect Freedom'), the other Compulsion=Slavery. If Necessity and Freedom are not different points of view of the same thing; the one the Form, the other the Substance, farewell to all Philosophy and to all Ethics. It is easy to see, that Freedom without necessity would preclude all Science, and as easy to see that necessity without Freedom would subvert all morals; but tho' not so obvious, it is yet equally true, that the latter would deprive science of its main spring, its last ground and impulse; and that the Former would bewilder and atheize all morality. But never has a great man been so hardly and inequitably treated by Posterity, as Spinosa. No allowances made for the prevalence, nay, universality of Dogmatism and the mechanic system in his age. No trial, except in Germany, to accept the glorious Truths into the family of Life and Power! What if we treated Bacon with the same harshness?"

'Ethic,' Part I. Prop. xxxii.—Conclusion of Demonstration.

"In whatever way, therefore, the will be conceived, whether as finite or infinite, it requires a cause by which it may be determined to existence and action, and therefore (Def. 7) it cannot be called a free cause, but only necessary or compelled. Q.E.D. (adeoque, per Defin. 7, non potest dici causa libera, sed tantum necessaria, vel coacta. Q.E.D.)."

Coleridge.

"Utinam in hoc loco disjunctivum 'Vel' interpolare licuisset vel necessaria, id est, de Principio suo=ab intra, vel coacta, id est, a causâ ab extra.

"But what entitles Spinoza to divide the consequence from the ground? A cogitatione infinitâ intellectus infinitus debet sequi, imo et voluntas infinita—ex his vero omnia alia—quod et sacrosancta Trinitas innuit. Elsewhere Spinoza himself speaks of the intellectus infinitus Dei—p. 87. But if Spinoza affirm only, that God is not, as the ὁ ἐπὶ πᾶσι Θεός, but ὡς ὁ πατήρ, eternally begets or produces it [sic], he does not essentially differ from the Catholic Church. Nay, even his denial of the Incarnation of God may be charitably interpreted as a denial of the Heresy of the Sabellians and Patri-passionists. Spinoza's great defect is that by commencing with two attributes exclusively, tho' he admits infinite* (in the sense of innumerable, which I once without reason doubted) he gives no explication of Life, or the Phenomena of Life, as Pleasure, Pain, &c., and doubtless nothing can be more arbitrary than to make the Will a mode of Intellect, when it had been far more philosophical to have reversed the position, and made the Will the absolute ground—and thus indeed Spinosa may be interpreted. There are several passages that would allow us to consider substantia not dogmaticè, i.e. as a Thing, Ur-sache, but as an eternal Act; causa sua, and thus we should have a —— substans [two or three words cut away] and cogitatio and extensio (the latter being only Imaginatio objectiva et realis, the eternal act of manifestation) as its two attributes."

W. Hale White.

TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Part I.—Contributions to Periodical Literature, &c.

57.

The Youth's Companion, Boston, U.S.A., 1884.

Early Spring.

Once more the Heavenly Power
Makes all things new.

Reprinted in the Pall Mall Gazette and other London and provincial newspapers. Afterwards included in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 181-184.

58.

'Ros Rosarum: Dew of the Ever-living Rose, Gathered from the Poets' Gardens of Many Lands,' by E. V. B. (the Hon. Mrs. Boyle) (London: Elliot Stock, 1885), p. 230; also second edition, 1897, p. 232.

A Fragment.

The night with sudden odour reel'd,
The southern stars a music peal'd,
Warm beams across the meadow stole;
For Love flew over grove and field,
Said "Open, Rosebud, open, yield
Thy fragrant soul."

These verses have not been included in any of Lord Tennyson's authorized collected volumes.

59.

The Times, No. 31,428, April 23rd, 1885, p. 8.

The Fleet. ("You, you, if you shall fail to understand.")

Reprinted in 'Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, &c.,' 1886, pp. 39-41.

60.

The Times, No. 31,440, May 7, 1885, p. 6.

Epitaph on General Gordon. (Contained in a letter from Lord Tennyson to Mr. Whittier, the American poet.)

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885 p. 192.

In the Times version the first line ran :—

Warrior of God, man's friend, not here below.

It was suggested in Punch, May 16th, 1885 (under the heading 'Laurels and Logic'), that this line should be reconsidered by the Poet Laureate; it was accordingly, on its reappearance in the 'Tiresias' volume, amended as follows :—

Warrior of God, man's friend, not laid below.

In later editions it was again revised, and now reads :—

Warrior of God, man's friend, and tyrants' foe.

61.

The Times, No. 31,506, July 23rd, 1885, p. 8.

To H.R.H. Princess Beatrice. ("Two Suns of Love make day of human life.")

Also printed privately upon a single quarto sheet, printed upon one side only. The sole copy of this separate issue known to have been preserved is now in the British Museum. It bears a signed autograph inscription from the poet to Sir Francis Turner Palgrave, by whose generosity it became the property of the nation. The sheet is headed "To H.R.H. Princess Beatrice"; is signed (in print) "Tennyson," and is dated "July, 1885."

Reprinted in 'Tiresias, and other Poems,' 1885, pp. 202-203.

---

* Robinson writes at the bottom of the preface, vol. ii. p. vi, "I cannot believe that by infinita he meant innumerabilia." Coleridge adds "this is a mistake of mine," contradicting apparently what he says in the comment on Prop. xxxii. We do not know, however, which of the two notes was first written. That Spinoza intended innumerabilia to form a part of the meaning of infinita as applied to the Attributes there can be no doubt.

62.
Macmillan's Magazine, vol. liii. No. 313, November, 1885, pp. 1-4.

Vastness. ("Many a hearth upon our dark globe sighs after many a vanish'd face.")

Reprinted in 'Demeter, and other Poems,' 1889, pp. 41-47.

63.
'Colonial and Indian Exhibition Opening Ceremonial, Tuesday, May 4th, 1886,' pp. 10-11.

Ode on the Opening of the Exhibition. ("Welcome, welcome with one voice!")

Reprinted in 'Locksley Hall Sixty Years After,' 1886, pp. 43-45.

64.
Macmillan's Magazine, vol. lv. No. 330, April, 1887, pp. 401-406.

Carmen Saeculare. An Ode in honour of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria. ("Fifty times the rose has flower'd and faded.")

Reprinted (under the title of 'On the Jubilee of Queen Victoria') in 'Demeter, and other Poems,' 1889, pp. 6-11.

65.
The New Review, vol. i. No. 5, October, 1889, p. 409.

The Throstle. ("Summer is coming, summer is coming.")

Published simultaneously in the Scotsman and also in a syndicate of American newspapers. Printed, and technically published, for copyright purposes, in separate form, as follows: "The Throstle | By | Alfred | Lord Tennyson | London | Macmillan and Co. | 1889." Post 8vo. pp. 4. Afterwards included in 'Demeter, and other Poems,' 1889, pp. 169-170.

The original manuscript of 'The Throstle' is in the possession of Mr. Edmund Gosse, and is duly described in the delightful 'Catalogue' of his library. It is bound up with a copy of the pamphlet—which is in itself a rarity. Mr. Gosse added a facsimile reproduction of the manuscript as an illustration to his 'Catalogue.'

66.
The New Review, vol. iv. No. 22, March, 1891, p. 193.

A Song. ("To sleep! to sleep! The long bright day is done.")

Afterwards incorporated into the play of 'The Foresters,' and printed at p. 34 of the edition of 1892.

67.
The Daily Telegraph, No. 11,298, Tuesday, August 4th, 1891.

Have we Forgotten Gordon?

A letter (signed "Tennyson," and dated "Aldworth, Haslemere, Surrey, Aug. 3") appealing for subscriptions to the Gordon Boys' Home at Woking.

68.
'Pearl. An English Poem of the Fourteenth Century,' edited, with a modern rendering, by Israel Gollancz, M.A. (London: David Nutt, 1891).

Introductory Lines. (Signed "Tennyson.")

We lost you—for how long a time—
True pearl of our poetic prime!
We found you, and you gleam re-set
In Britain's Lyric Coronet.

Printed in the centre of a blank leaf following the title-page.

These lines have not been reprinted in any of the authorized collected editions of Tennyson's works.

69.
The Daily Telegraph, October 14th, 1891.

The Russian Persecutions.

A letter (signed "Tennyson," and dated "Oct. 1, 1891") regarding the Russian persecutions:—".....If that be true I can only say that Russia has disgraced her Church and her nationality. I once met the Czar. He seemed a kind and good natured man. I can scarcely believe that he is fully aware of the barbarities perpetrated with his apparent sanction," &c.

70.
The Nineteenth Century, vol. xxxi. No. 180, February, 1892, pp. 181-182.

The Death of the Duke of Clarence and Avondale. To the Mourners. ("The bridal garland falls upon the bier.")

Reprinted in 'The Death of Œnone, Akbar's Dream, and other Poems,' 1892, pp. 110-111.

71.
'Order of Service at Westminster Abbey; Funeral of Lord Tennyson, October 12th, 1892.'

Silent Voices. ("When the dumb Hour, clothed in black.")

Printed, and technically published, for copyright purposes, in separate form as follows: "The Silent Voices | By | Alfred | Lord Tennyson | London | Macmillan and Co., And New York | 1892 | All rights reserved." Post 8vo pp. 4. Afterwards included in 'The Death of Œnone, Akbar's Dream, and other Poems,' 1892, p. 107.

NOTES.

1.
The Examiner, No. 2298, February 14th, 1852, p. 99.

Lines. ("How much I love this writer's manly style.")

These 'Lines' (fifteen stanzas of four lines each), though stated by Mr. Herne Shepherd to be by Tennyson, are not the work of the late Laureate. They are merely a parody of Tennyson's "Merlin" verses, and are prefaced by the following note:—

SIR,—I have read with much interest the poems by "Merlin." The enclosed is longer than either of these, and certainly not so good; yet as I flatter myself that it has a smack of Merlin's style in it, and as I feel that it expresses forcibly enough some of the feelings of our time, perhaps you may be induced to admit it. TALIESSIN.

2.
At p. 63 of the posthumous (1896) edition of Mr. R. H. Shepherd's 'Bibliography of Tennyson,' among a series of "Poems and Fragments of later date," is included a poem printed in the Pall Mall Gazette under the title of 'Compromise,' and commencing:—

Statesman, be not precipitate in thine act.

This poem was not the work of the late Lord Tennyson. It was contributed to the Pall Mall Gazette by John York Adams.

3.
Many of the poems mentioned in the earlier portion of this list, and described as "never having been included in any of the authorized editions of Tennyson's collected works," were reprinted in the pirated volumes of Lord Tennyson's suppressed poetry issued by Richard Herne Shepherd in 1875 and under other dates. These piracies will all be described together in a later division of the present 'Bibliography.'

THOMAS J. WISE.

NELSON'S 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY.'

As was mentioned some weeks ago, a manuscript of some importance will be offered for sale by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge during next month, namely, the autobiography of Lord Nelson. This document, which was drawn up specially for John McArthur, was published verbatim in the edition of 'The Life and Services of Horatio, Viscount Nelson,' by McArthur and Clarke, in 1809; but the last three pages are missing, and constant inquiries have failed to elicit their whereabouts. The 'Autobiography' was sent from Port Mahon, October 15th, 1799, with a very interesting letter, the original of which accompanies the MS., and in which the great commander writes:—

"I send you a sketch of my life, which I am sensible wants your pruning-knife, before it is fit to meet the public eye.....I did not even know that such a book as yours was contemplated, therefore I beg you will send me the two volumes, and consider me as a sincere friend to the undertaking."

John McArthur, who entered the navy in 1778, was secretary to Admiral Lord Hood in 1791 and in 1793, and was a distinguished writer on naval matters. In 1803, when Nelson was going to the Mediterranean, he offered to take McArthur as his secretary; but the office was not accepted. He appears to have been on intimate terms with the great admiral, with whom he frequently corresponded. The earliest letter in this collection from Nelson, who was simply Sir Horatio then, is dated from the Irresistible off Lagos Bay, March 16th, 1797; it is in acknowledgment of one addressed to him on November 30th. The second letter is dated from the Captain off Cadiz, April 10th of the same year, and in it he thanks McArthur for the "most kind congratulations on our late success, but I hope soon the good people of England will have something else to talk about—more recent victories, for if our own ships are but carried close by the officers, I will answer for a British fleet being always successful."

In a foot-note to a letter written from the Theseus, June 1st, 1797, Nelson remarked: "Sam Hood is gone, I hope to get riches, sure to get honours." The originals of all these letters, along with a great quantity of other material in reference to Nelson and the compilation of the 'Life,' accompany the 'Autobiography.'

There are many points in the history of McArthur and Clarke's big volumes which have never been made public. It was well known that the book was in active preparation, for McArthur had every possible source under contribution, and it was in a fairly forward state of preparation at Nelson's death in October, 1805. Early in 1806 Earl Nelson, the admiral's brother, issued an advertisement in which he announced that he had placed the materials in his possession in the hands of a gentleman for the purpose of an official biography. This elicited from McArthur a long letter to Earl Nelson, dated February 10th, 1806, in which he claimed that his own biography was not only drawn up with the approval of Lord Nelson, but with his active co-operation, and that he aimed at producing a "full, genuine, and authentic detail of his life." The Earl replied on the following day, disclaiming any intention to reflect on McArthur's 'Life,' but claiming the right to place his own material in the hands of his own nominee. The feasibility of collaboration was hinted at; this suggestion appears to have borne fruit, and resulted in an amicable arrangement.

Another difficulty cropped up in connexion with the question as to which of the two authors should have precedence on the title-page. There can be no question that the brunt of the compilation was borne by McArthur, whose out-of-pocket expenses amounted to 1,500 guineas. Earl Nelson insisted on Clarke's name being placed first. Clarke was librarian and chaplain to the Prince of Wales, and Earl Nelson contended that the respect due to H.R.H. (to whom the work was to be dedicated) rendered this precedence highly desirable, and, after some further correspondence, McArthur, evidently much against his will, gave way. It is quite certain that McArthur was not a persona grata to Earl Nelson, for when the work was on the eve of publication Clarke (probably backed by the Earl) had the audacity to suggest that his own name should appear on the title-page alone, and that McArthur should figure as his assistant in the undertaking; that, in fact, the work should be advertised as having been "written and prepared for the press by Mr. Clarke, revised and corrected by Mr. McArthur." To this arrangement the latter flatly refused to consent, with the result that the 'Life' appeared with the two names on the title-pages.

All these documents are bound up with the Nelson autobiography, and among them are several letters from Viscountess Nelson, who took the keenest interest in the publication, and supplied many valuable and interesting details, as may be seen acknowledged in the "advertisement" to the original edition. The existence of the volume, originally in the possession of McArthur, appears to have been quite forgotten, and it was not included among the exhibits in the Royal Naval Exhibition of 1891. Its interest is none the less great, and it is perhaps no exaggeration to describe it as the most important literary relic of Nelson in existence—far too valuable to be in the hands of a private individual. For this reason, if for no other, I trust that the volume will eventually find its way into the national collection. W. R.

AN ANGLO-SAXON ENIGMA.

Clarendon Press, Oxford.

THE composition which Prof. Skeat (Athenæum, April 24th) designates by this title is, I believe, not really an enigma, but a translation of an alphabetically arranged series of Latin sentences intended to be used as sortes. Whether the original is in existence I do not know; a somewhat similar collection of oracles, but not alphabetical, is printed in the 'Codex Canonum' (Paris, 1687), pp. 370–373, with the title of 'Sortes Apostolorum.' If my view be correct, the letters prefixed to the lines are those with which the Latin sentences begin, except in five instances (C, F, X, Y, Z), where the compiler of the original sortes seems to have contented himself with stating the ominous significance conventionally attached to the letters, not having been able to embody it in a sentence with the right initial. The following attempt at retranslation into Latin may not in all points hit the mark, but I think it will in most cases come fairly near to the truth. The form which I have given to the sentences is usually suggested by something similar in the 'Sortes Apostolorum':—

Ambulabit, et salvum erit iter ejus.
Bonum invenies, si hoc incipias, et tibi bene erit.
C significat felicitatem non esse in hoc mundo.
Desiderium tuum non obtinebis, neque unquam illud invenies.
Eveniet tibi feliciter, et semper salvus eris.
F significat mortem. De morte in hoc anno Deum roga bonum.
Gaudium habebis [read gefeon for geþeon?] de ista cogitatione.
Hoc tibi non dabitur; cogita aliud.
Incipe quod velis finitum esse.
Kave ne in periculum eas.
Lauda Deum in omni tempore vitæ tuæ.
Magnificabit te Deus, ut quod facere vis tibi prospere fiat.
Noli [read nyle?] hoc facere; factis tuis non dabitur.
Omnes protegit Deus in omnibus virtutibus suis.
Probitatem si cupias, noli mulieri blandiri [read wife swæsan?].
Quoniam magnus Dominus, et laudabilis nimis [Ps. xcv. 4, Vulgate]
Relinque omne peccatum, et invenies felicitatem. [The last clause has been displaced.]
Salvus eris, si ad Deum converteris, qui sedet salvus et potens.
Terrebit [read he for ne?] viventes in peccato et malum cogitantes.
Vide quanta felicitas dabitur in potestatem tuam.
X significat felicitatem et viam et vitam æternam.
Y significat pacem et salutem.
Z. Gloria Patri, &c.

The sentences which simply express devout sentiments may have been intended to be interpreted as favourable omens, or perhaps as equivalent to the refusal of an answer. In the latter case, we may compare one of the sentences in the 'Sortes Apostolorum': "Tu hac hora recede a nobis, quia sortes meæ non dant responsa: alia die venies, et observa conditionem tuam."

Since the above was in type I have found that a Latin set of sortes, arranged under the letters of the alphabet, was printed by Prof. Sievers in the Z. f. d. A., vol. xviii. (1875), p. 297. The first sors is "A significat prosperum iter et viam felicem," which agrees with the import assigned to this letter in the Anglo-Saxon sortes; but there is no similar agreement in the oracles appropriated to the other letters.

Henry Bradley.

SALE.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold on Wednesday, the 12th inst., and three following days, a collection of valuable and interesting books and MSS. The following high prices were realized for the more important articles: Lescarbot, La Nouvelle France, 1618, 24*l.* 6*s.* Anacréon, &c., en Français, Paris, 1773, 19*l.* 5*s.* R. Baron, The Cyprian Academy, presentation copy, 1648, 12*l.* 5*s.* Crébillon, Œuvres, 1812, on vellum, with additional plates, 29*l.* Defoe, Robinson Crusoe, Part I., first edition, 1719, 45*l.* 10*s.* Badminton Library, on large paper, 28 vols., 92*l.* J. de Burgo, Pupilla Oculi, London, 1510, 18*l.* Recueil d'Estampes de la Guerre d'Indépendance d'Amérique, Paris, 1780, 24*l.* Apuleius, editio princeps, Roma, 1469, 40*l.* Aulus Gellius, editio princeps, Roma, 1469, 30*l.* Blake's Designs to Young's Night Thoughts, coloured by the artist himself, 1797, 32*l.* Horæ, on vellum, Sæc. XV., illuminated (French), 100*l.*; another (French), 62*l.*; another (Italian), 59*l.* Evangeliarium, MS. on vellum, Sæc. XV., 49*l.* Heures de Romme, printed on vellum, S. Vostre, 1498, 78*l.* Another Horæ, richly illuminated MS., Sæc. XV., 104*l.* Heures à Chartres, 1508, 26*l.* Jacobus Bergomensis de Mulieribus, Ferraria, 1497, 33*l.* Pontificale Romanum, illuminated MS. on vellum, Sæc. XV., 90*l.* Almanach Iconologique, complete set in old morocco, 56*l.* Horæ, MS. on vellum, Sæc. XV., with miniatures 1¾ in. by 1¼ in., 131*l.*; another (French), 42*l.* Fénelon, Télémaque, Louis XV.'s copy, Paris, 1730, 15*l.* 15*s.* Goldsmith's Traveller, first edition, 1765, 10*l.* 10*s.* Rolle de Hampole, Speculum Spiritualium, Lond., 1510, 22*l.* 10*s.* Manuel Diaz, Treatise on Horsemanship (in the Basque dialect), Barcelona, 1523, 18*l.* Christine de Pisan, Livre des Faits d'Armes, MS. with miniatures, XV. Siècle, 115*l.* Granger's Biographical History, extra illustrated, 90*l.* Burns's Poems, Kilmarnock edition, 1786, 86*l.* Herrick's Hesperides, first edition, 1648, 27*l.* John Heywood, Fourth Hundred of Epygrams, first edition, 1560, 15*l.* 10*s.* John Keats, Lamia, first edition, boards, uncut, 1820, 12*l.* 10*s.* Tennyson, Poems by Two Brothers, 1827, 22*l.* 10*s.* Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, first edition, Oxford, 1621, 20*l.* Th. Churchyard, First Part of Chippes, first edition, 1575, 22*l.* Geo. Gascoigne, Pleasauntest Workes, 1587, 15*l.* Milton, Paradise Lost, first edition (seventh title), 1669, 10*l.* More's Utopia (Latin), first edition, Lovan., 1516, 11*l.* 10*s.* Shakspeare, Merchant of Venice, first edition, 4to., 1600, 315*l.* First Part of the History of Sir John Oldcastle, 1600, 37*l.* Edmund Spenser, Complaintes, &c., first edition, 1591, 20*l.* Coverdale Bible, imperfect, 1535, 93*l.* Capgrave, Nova Legenda Angliæ, Wynkyn de Worde, 1516, imperfect, 41*l.* Vitæ Patrum, Wynkyn de Worde, 1495. Chronicle of St. Alban's, first edition (half the work only), 1483, 49*l.* Chronicle of St. Alban's, imperfect, Wynkyn de Worde, 1502, 30*l.* Morant's Essex, extra illustrated, 1768, 34*l.* 10*s.* Voragine, Legenda Aurea, Wynkyn de Worde, imperfect, 1527, 26*l.* George Meredith's Poems, first edition, 1851, 12*l.* 15*s.* John Milton, Poems, 1645, 20*l.* Molière, Œuvres, first collected edition, 2 vols., 1666, 61*l.*; Molière, 7 vols., red morocco, 1674, 61*l.* Racine, Mithridate, first edition, uncut, Paris, 1673, 20*l.* 10*s.* John Ruskin, Poems by J. R., 1850, 12*l.* 10*s.* Sterne's Tristram Shandy, 9 vols., 1765-67, uncut, 20*l.* 10*s.*; Sterne's Sentimental Journey, first edition, 2 vols., uncut, 1768, 22*l.* Edinburgh University Magazine, 4 numbers (with some of R. L. Stevenson's earliest literary efforts), 1871, 11*l.* 5*s.* R. L. Stevenson, On the Thermal Influence of Forests, Edin., 1873, 14*l.* Tyndale's Testament (wanting all the preliminaries), 1548, 16*l.* Rosset de l'Agriculture, Paris, 1774, 26*l.* 10*s.* Politian, editio princeps, Aldus, 1498, 18*l.* 5*s.* Collection of Pieces relating to the South Sea Bubble, 240*l.* Sydrach, La Fontaine de toutes Sciences, Paris, Verard, 1486, 81*l.* Terentius, c. 1470, 21*l.* R. L. Stevenson's The Pentland Rising, 1866, 13*l.* The English Spy, 2 vols., 18*l.*

Literary Gossip.

In his new 'Book of Dreams and Ghosts,' which Messrs. Longman are to publish, Mr. Lang complains that previous writers on ghostly themes have been remarkably lax in the matter of evidence, while he has, on the contrary, sought out the original sources. One celebrated Australian story of 'Fisher's Ghost' he tells from the judge's notes at the trial and from the newspaper report of the day. A manuscript by Mr. Wyndham, who knew the seer of the Duke of Buckingham's father's ghost, and was in his society at the time, Mr. Lang reproduces. All contemporary evidence for Lord Lyttelton's ghost is analyzed by Mr. Lang, and Williams's dream of Mr. Perceval's murder is told in the dreamer's own words. The Ricketts and Wesley ghosts are similarly treated. A number of modern stories at first hand are produced, some by permission of the Society for Psychical Research. Icelandic, Chinese, and Highland ghosts receive due notice.

The second volume of the 'Calendar of Harley Papers' belonging to the Duke of Portland, prepared under the direction of the Royal Manuscripts Commission, will shortly be issued. This volume will cover the important period between Harley's first election to the Speakership and his creation to the Earldom of Oxford in 1701. The special feature of the contents of the new instalment is a remarkable series of newsletters, written by Daniel Defoe to Robert Harley under an assumed name. These letters, which are very numerous, will throw much new light on the character and career of the famous author. The volume will be edited by Mr. J. J. Cartwright, the learned editor of the Wentworth Papers and the Secretary to the Commission.

The Hon. Edward Lyttelton, head master of Haileybury College, has written a pamphlet entitled 'Are We to go on with Latin Verses?' which Messrs. Longman will publish.

The Fortnightly Review next month will contain an article on the inner history of the Nizam's state of Hyderabad since the death of the great Sir Salar Jung in 1883. The writer is Mr. Joseph Rock, whose official connexion with Hyderabad covers a period of nearly thirty years. In the double capacity of State agent in London, and trusted and confidential friend of the first Sir Salar Jung and his family, Mr. Rock has, perhaps, had more opportunities of seeing the inside working of this interesting state than any one else.

The June number of Macmillan's Magazine will include a paper by Mr. David Hannay on 'Nelson and his Biographers'; a review of Mr. Palgrave's 'Landscape in Poetry,' by Prof. Tyrrell; and an account of a recent visit to the West Indies by Mr. John Dasent, with some remarks on the prospects of the sugar and other industries of the islands, concerning which the commissioners may now be expected to issue their report at no very distant date.

Prominence is given in the June number of the Cornhill to a paper of reminiscences on the childhood and marriage of the Queen, from the pen of Lady Jane Ellice, who was one of the bridesmaids at Her Majesty's wedding. The 'Anniversary Study,' by Mr. Laird Clowes, is devoted to the battle of Sluis; and Mr. Owen Seaman contributes, under the heading 'Quis pro Dominâ?' a set of vers de société on women's degrees at Cambridge. A further instalment of 'Duels of all Nations,' by Mr. Pemberton-Grund, treats of those of Italy, Spain, and Russia; and a series of 'Tales from the Dramatists,' much on the lines of Lamb's 'Tales from

Shakspeare,' is begun with 'The Witch of Edmonton.'

Blackwood's Magazine for June will contain an article on 'Retrievers and how to Break Them,' by Lieut.-Col. Henry Smith, C.B. Mr. Andrew Lang will write on 'Marlborough's Unconscious Treason,' and Sir Herbert Maxwell on 'The Real Monsieur d'Artagnan.'

A volume of 'Poems,' by the late Mr. J. Lucas Tupper, selected and edited by Mr. W. M. Rossetti, is to be issued by Messrs. Longman. Tupper, who was a sculptor and afterwards art instructor in Rugby School, contributed in verse and prose to the Germ in 1850. He is not to be confounded with the author of 'Proverbial Philosophy.'

The report presented to the members of the London Library last Saturday was satisfactory. The gift of 500*l.* from an anonymous donor has enabled the Committee to buy Migne's 'Patrologia,' Rivadeneyra's 'Biblioteca de Autores Españoles,' and the 'Archæologia Cambrensis,' all of them books the library should have acquired long ago. The librarian has of late purchased a good many Spanish books, and the consequence has been an increased demand for Spanish literature among the subscribers. The library, however, is still greatly deficient in the literature of the Romance languages; for instance, we believe it does not possess the series of volumes issued by the Italian "Commissione pei Testi della Lingua." The rebuilding of the house in St. James's Square will be begun in a couple of months.

The 'Note-book of Tristram Risdon (1608-1628)' has long been preserved in the library of Exeter Cathedral. It is a companion to the well-known 'Chronographical Description; or, Survey of the County of Devon,' published in 1714, and contains much information which concerns Devonshire genealogists. Mr. James Dallas, of the Exeter Museum, has transcribed the MS., and it is about to be published by Mr. Elliot Stock.

Among the MSS. possessed by Lord Crawford is a finely illuminated copy of the Passover Haggada, dating at latest from the fourteenth century. With the owner's permission, Messrs. Frank Haes and Israel Abrahams are about to issue photographic reproductions of the MS. The MS. was shown at the Anglo-Jewish, the Spanish, and the Italian Exhibitions, and attracted considerable notice.

Sir John R. Robinson presided at the anniversary dinner of the Newspaper Press Fund on Saturday last. The subscriptions, which amounted to the large sum of 3,625*l.*, included 1,000*l.* from Lord Glenesk, 1,000*l.* from Mr. J. A. Willox, M.P., and 100*l.* from the chairman. Following the plan of the Newsvendors, the Newspaper Press Fund is devoting the subscriptions this year to the founding of Victoria Pensions.

Messrs. Methuen will publish later in the year a translation by Dr. H. de B. Gibbins of 'Der Anarchismus,' by Dr. E. V. Zenker, of Vienna.

The decease is announced of Dr. Wilson, the Warden of Keble (and previously head master of Radley), one of the editors of Liddon's 'Life of Pusey.'

Johann Georg Fischer, who was born in 1816, has just died at Stuttgart. His first poems, published in 1856, attracted considerable attention by their originality of conception, sturdy manliness, and depth of genuine feeling. Like all Suabian poets, he was fond of depicting nature, and in his poems entitled 'Für unsere Zeit' he gave vent to his liberal political sentiments, which filled him with the ardent wish for an "eisern harte Faust" that would unite the whole of Germany—a wish that was fulfilled in 1870. His dramas were less successful than his lyrics; they lacked dramatic life and unity, and they failed to produce any deep impression.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include a Code of Regulations for Evening Continuation Schools, England and Wales, with Schedule, &c. (4*d.*); Statutes made by the Governing Body of Queen's College, Oxford (1*d.*); Circular of the Education Department to Managers of Voluntary Schools relative to the Provisions of the Voluntary Schools Act (1*d.*); and a Report on Admiralty Surveys for the Year 1896 (2*d.*).

SCIENCE

MR. A. D. BARTLETT.

By the death of Mr. A. D. Bartlett, at the age of eighty-five, the Fellows of the Zoological Society have lost a faithful and trustworthy servant, and the animals in the Gardens a kind and sagacious friend. Devoted all his life to natural history in some form, it was not till 1859 that he became resident Superintendent of the Society's Gardens; his appointment was one of the first acts of Mr. Sclater's successful management of the affairs of the Zoological Society.

Mr. Bartlett's contributions to science dealt, as may be supposed, chiefly with the habits of animals, with observations on the best means of breeding and rearing them. Perhaps his greatest success was with the hippopotamus in 1872, and his services on that occasion were rewarded with the Society's silver medal.

Devoted to his work and the animals, human and other, that were under his care, Bartlett was a superintendent whom it will be difficult, if not impossible, to replace. Gifted with a keen sense of humour, he had among his many merits that of being an excellent raconteur.

SOCIETIES.

Royal.—May 13.—The President in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'An Attempt to cause Helium, or Argon, to pass through Red-hot Palladium, Platinum, or Iron,' by Prof. Ramsay and Mr. M. W. Travers,—'On the Negative After-images following Brief Retinal Excitation,' by Mr. S. Bidwell,—'A Dynamical Theory of the Electric and Luminiferous Medium: Part III., Relations with Material Media,' by Dr. J. Larmor.—'On a New Method of determining the Vapour Pressures of Solutions,' by Mr. E. B. H. Wade,—'On the Passage of Heat between Metal Surfaces and Liquids in contact with Them,' by Mr. T. E. Stanton.—and 'On the Magnetization Limit of Wrought Iron,' by Mr. H. Wilde.

Geographical.—May 17.—Anniversary Meeting.—Sir Clements R. Markham, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Capt. H. R. Gale, Capt. E. Le Mesurier Lieut. R. A. E. Benn, Lieut. R. R. Hubbard, Lieut. D. G. Seagrim, Lieut. F. C. Webb Ware, Rev. W. Vivian, Messrs. G. B. Blades, S. V. Coote, H. Cox, J. E. Dawson, E. W. Greg, D. M. Hall, W. S. Hill, J. A. Ludlow, G. B. Macpherson-Grant, G. J. Poulton, D. C. Stapleton, and H. M. Upcher.—The following were elected as Council and officers for the session 1897-98: President, Sir Clements R. Markham; Vice-Presidents, Right Hon. G. N. Curzon, Sir G. D. Taubman Goldie, Sir Rawson W. Rawson, General R. Strachey, Admiral W. J. L. Wharton, General Sir C. W. Wilson; Treasurer, Edward L. Somers Cocks; Trustees Right Hon. Sir J. Lubbock and C. E. Peek; Hon. Secretaries, Major L. Darwin and J. F. Hughes; Foreign Secretary, Sir J. Kirk; Councillors, W. M. Beaufort, Lord Belhaven and Stenton, W. T. Blanford, Hon. G. C. Brodrick, Col. G. E. Church, N. Elias, Col. W. Everett, Col. J. Farquharson, Admiral Sir A. H. Hoskins, Right Hon. Lord Loch, Rear-Admiral A. H. Markham, A. P. Maudslay, J. Murray, General Sir H. W. Norman, Surgeon-Major Sir G. S. Robertson, Earl of Scarborough, P. L. Sclater, Lord Stanmore, Major Hon. M. G. Talbot, Col. Sir H. R. Thuillier, and Admiral Hon. W. J. Ward.—The President delivered the Annual Address.—During the meeting the Royal Medals for the encouragement of geographical science and discovery were presented: The Founder's Medal to M. Semenoff, Vice-President of the Russian Geographical Society, who for a quarter of a century has been the inspirer of all the Russian expeditions into Central Asia.—The Patron's Medal to Dr. George M. Dawson, Director of the Geological Survey of Canada, for many years an active worker in connexion with the Dominion Survey, during which much of the work he carried out, in the North-West Territories, in Alaska, and in other parts of Canada, was largely of a geographical as well as geological character. Under him geographical exploration has been greatly encouraged among the survey officers, not only in Alaska, but in the regions to the west and south of Hudson's Bay.—The following other awards were also declared: The Murchison Grant for 1897 to Lieut. Seymour Vandeleur for his journey of 900 miles in Somaliland and along the Abyssinian frontier in 1893-94, during which he made an excellent route survey; for making surveys of 2,073 miles of routes in Uganda, Unyoro, and on the Upper Nile, nearly the whole of it during active service and in a hostile country in 1894-95, when he made numerous astronomical and meteorological observations, and constructed maps; and for astronomically surveying 200 miles of practically unknown country in the Niger region during Sir George Goldie's first expedition, surveying the new road to Bida in the second, and Illorin from Jebba in the third expedition in 1897, careful observations being taken throughout.—The Back Grant for 1897 to Lieut. Ryder (of the Danish Navy) for his explorations in East Greenland in 1891 and subsequent years, during which he made important rectifications on the coast, discovered a new series of fjörds, and made valuable meteorological observations.—The Gill Memorial for 1897 to Mr. C. E. Douglas for persistent explorations on the western slopes of the New Zealand Alps, extending over twenty-one years (1874-95), and embracing the chief valleys up to the glaciers, a region where progress was most difficult, owing to the dense forests and rough ground and to endless gorges. Mr. Douglas began as a naturalist, but has for several years worked as a surveyor to the New Zealand Government. His reports and maps will be found in the New Zealand Survey Reports.—The Cuthbert Peek Grant for 1897 to Dr. Thorvald Thoroddsen. Since 1882 Dr. Thoroddsen has been continuously exploring Iceland, having at various times covered nearly the whole island. His contributions to the physical geography and geology of the island are of the first rank.

Geological.—May 12.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Messrs. W. R. C. Beadon, G. N. Brown, and W. E. Hidden were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'On the Gravels and Associated Deposits at Newbury, Berks,' by Mr. E. P. Richards.—and 'The Mollusca of the Chalk Rock: Part II.,' by Mr. H. Woods.

Archæological Institute.—May 5.—Mr. J. Hilton, Hon. Treasurer, in the chair.—Mr. Talfourd Ely read a paper 'On Wreaths and Garlands,' with especial reference to Greek and Roman usages. He pointed out that the modern English limit the use of wreaths to funeral purposes, whereas among the ancients the wreath was a sign of feasting and joy. In classic times the dead were, indeed, crowned, but crowned as still partaking of the pleasures of this world, bodily pleasures being held in no wise incompatible with religion. Religion originally prompted the use of the garland, which may have been connected with the widespread belief in the supernatural powers of trees and plants. Wreaths were employed as bandages to assuage headache resulting from debauch; and certain plants, as the myrtle and the rose, were believed to exercise a prophylactic power against the effects of wine. The Greeks, too, were fully sensible of the beauty of flowers, and floral decoration plays a great part in Greek poetry, from Sappho downwards. Among the early Romans, on the contrary, the use of wreaths in public was strictly limited to religious functions and marks of distinction connected with services performed to the State, such marks of distinction being largely derived from the Etruscans, who made great use of wreaths. In Greece the simple wreath of olive, &c., as a reward for athletes, superseded the prizes of intrinsic value offered in heroic times. In the fifth, and still more in the fourth century, crowns, usually of gold, were awarded to successful statesmen or warriors. Wreaths of laurel, myrtle, vine leaves, or flowers were commonly worn at symposia, and are thus represented on vases. For the most part, of course, these wreaths have perished; but some have been preserved in Egypt. The manufacture of garlands gave employment to many, and its processes may be seen depicted in several Pompeian pictures. The gold crowns were frequently modelled in the form of leaves, as ivy, &c. Other materials for wreaths were wool and artificial leaves and flowers of horn or silk. Though the origin of the use of wreaths is lost in antiquity, its primary purpose was probably religious; and the practice of crowning the dead may have arisen from the deification of ancestors. Most of the numerous ancient treatises on wreaths are lost; but we learn much from Theophrastus, Plutarch, Pliny, Athenæus, and Gellius, and also from inscriptions, especially temple records.—Mr. Ely exhibited photographs of paintings and casts of coins in illustration of his paper.—Prof. T. McKenny Hughes read a paper 'On a Comparison of Flint Implements of Palæolithic and Neolithic Age.' He exhibited a series of flints in illustration of the view that in their earlier stages of manufacture the palæolithic and neolithic implements passed through the very same stages—that is to say, that a block of flint was first roughdressed by both palæolithic and neolithic people into the same general form, and that the neolithic men merely proceeded further on the same lines, afterwards finding out the way to grind the edge, and finally the whole implement. He pointed out that, with few exceptions, all neolithic worked flints were found on the surface or in artificial excavations; whereas, as a rule, palæolithic implements were found in deposits which seemed to be due to the sweeping down into hollows or river terraces of surface soils in or on which the implements and other stones lay. In the river gravels the flints did not owe their shape to the action of running water, but had that variety of character and colour which showed that they were due to subaërial weathering, and the amount of subsequent attrition that they had undergone was very small. Fracture was the rule, not the exception, in all river gravels, so that the flints were subangular and quite unlike the symmetrical flint pebbles of a sea beach. All the irregular fractures produced by accident on surface flints may be referred to two principal groups—the fractures produced by blows, and those due to unequal expansion and contraction from changes of temperature and amount of moisture. They are found, as might be expected, in the flints of the terrace and plateau gravels, and if a flint got wedged in, these fractures would be commonly repeated along the exposed edge in a manner suggestive of design or use. In this way he explained the so-called palæotaliths.

Linnean.—May 6.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—Prof. L. Radlkofer, of Munich, was elected a Foreign Member.—Mr. O. Salvin and Prof. Farmer were elected Auditors on behalf of the Council, and Messrs. E. M. Holmes and H. Druce on behalf of the Fellows.—Prof. Stewart exhibited and made remarks on anatomical preparations showing the different modes of attachment of the ligamentum nuchæ in herbivorous and carnivorous mammals, as exemplified in the sheep and dog, and of the ligamenta subflava. The analogous ligaments of birds were dealt with, and special attention was drawn to a preparation of the vertebral column of the python, showing vertebra-costal fibro-cartilaginous plates of which he could find no description, and which he believed to be peculiar to the Ophidia.—The Secretary read the abstract of a paper by Messrs. W. and G. S. West 'On Desmids from Singapore,' discovered in a collection of Algæ forwarded by Mr. H. N. Ridley from Singapore, and, in addition to seven species previously known from Sumatra, containing several which were new, and now described and figured.—Prof. Newton communicated a paper by Capt. F. W. Hutton, Curator of the Canterbury Museum, Christchurch, N.Z., entitled 'The Problem of Utility,' in which the views of Dr. A. R. Wallace 'On the Utility of Specific Characters' (Journ. Linn. Soc., Zool., xxv. pp. 181-196) were criticized, chiefly as tested by the study of the fruit-pigeons (Ptilopus).—The Secretary gave an account of a paper by the Rev. R. B. Watson 'On some New Species of Mollusca from the Island of Madeira,' prefacing his remarks with a résumé of the researches previously made in the same direction by Messrs. Lowe, Wollaston, and other conchologists.

Entomological.—May 5.—Mr. R. Trimen, President, in the chair.—Mr. C. H. Peers was elected a Fellow.—Mr. J. J. Walker exhibited an earwig, Apterygida arachidis, Yersin, new to Britain, and recently found in large numbers in chemical works at Queenborough. It had been probably imported among bones.—Mr. Burr also showed a complete series of the British species of Forficulidæ.—Mr. Enock showed eggs of Stenopsocus cruciatus, L., containing parasitic larvæ of Alaptus fusculus, Hal., the male of which would probably prove to be Alaptus minimus, Hal.—Mr. Merrifield exhibited the results of temperature experiments on the pupæ of Pieris daplidice, Melitæa didyma, and other species. He thought that changes produced by abnormal temperatures might be classed as follows: 1, enhancement or diminution of intensity of colour without alteration in the form of the markings; 2, substitution of scales of a different colour, scattered or in groups; 3, imperfection in the development of scales or their pigment.—Mr. Tutt showed a series of insects collected at Cannes in March, and remarkable for their early emergence.—Dr. Dixey read a paper 'On Mimetic Attraction,' in which he dealt with the steps by which a wing-pattern, as in South American Pierinæ, could be modified in various directions so as to secure a mimetic result, and with the theories of mimicry put forward by Bates and Fritz Müller.—Mr. Blandford also exhibited and discussed series of homœochromatic and mimetic neotropical species of butterflies, chiefly of Heliconiidæ and Heliconioid Danaidæ.—The discussion was continued by Prof. Poulton, who showed similar groups of several genera, remarkable as having been collected and sent to England as examples of a single species, and by the President, and it was ultimately adjourned to June 2nd.

Meteorological.—May 19.—Mr. E. Mawley, President, in the chair.—Mr. F. Gaster, of the Meteorological Office, read a paper by himself and Mr. R. H. Scott 'On the Mean Monthly Temperatures of the British Isles.' The authors dealt with the means of the daily minimum, average, and maximum temperatures for the various months of the year in the twenty-five years 1871-95. They pointed out that there is a great difference between the amount of range of temperature at the coast stations and that recorded inland. The range between January and July amounts to about 16° at coast stations, but to more than 23° degrees at the inland stations. The contrast between the temperature of the air at inland and at coast stations at different times of the year is due to the following causes: (1) The constant tendency of the sun to heat the surface of the earth; (2) the equally constant tendency of the earth to radiate its heat into space, both of these being modified greatly by the aqueous vapour and the cloud suspended in the atmosphere; (3) the fact that the solid portions of the earth absorb and reflect heat much more rapidly than the water; and (4) that while the ocean to the westward is of enormous size and great depth, the sea to the eastward is, comparatively speaking, limited in area and shallow, and separates the eastern shores of the British Islands from those of continental Europe by a small distance.—A paper 'On the Rainfall of Dominica, West Indies,' by Mr. C. V. Bellamy, was also read.

Mathematical.—May 13.—Prof. Elliott, President, in the chair.—Mr. S. Roberts read a paper 'On Cubic Curves as connected with Certain Triangles in Perspective,' and Mr. F. W. Lawrence made a communication 'On the Determination of Certain Primes.'—The following papers were briefly communicated: 'An Analogue of Anharmonic Ratio,' by Mr. J. Brill,—'An Essay on the Geometrical Calculus' (continuation), by Herr E. Lasker,—'On the Partition of Numbers,' by Mr. G. B. Mathews,—and 'Notes on Synthetic Geometry,' by Mr. W. Esson.

Aristotelian.—May 10.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. W. H. Fairbrother 'On Aristotle's Theory of Incontinence: a Contribution to Practical Ethics.' The main contention of the paper was that Aristotle found his explanation of the possibility of "sinning against knowledge" in his psychological theory of the nature of reason as opposed to feeling, not in any logical process of mental deception or intellectual juggling. Reason points out the way to go, but is powerless to move the agent (or rather patient). This kinetic effect, on the other hand, feeling possesses as its special characteristic. If then any object be present which is capable of arousing feeling, the struggle in the mind is no longer between two intellectual judgments or general propositions, but between the rational judgment, which can, ex ipso, only assert, and a physical attraction which literally draws. The issue of such a struggle can only be that yielding to temptation known as incontinence.—The paper was followed by a discussion.

Physical.—May 14.—Mr. S. Bidwell, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. Watson described 'An Instrument for comparing Thermometers with a Standard.'—Prof. Carey Foster read a paper by Mr. D. K. Morris, of Zurich, 'On the Effect of Temperature upon the Magnetic and Electric Properties of Iron.'—Mr. R. Appleyard read a paper 'On the Formation of Mercury Films by an Electrical Process.'

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon.	Society of Arts, 8.—'Design in Lettering,' Lecture IV., Mr. L. F. Day (Cantor Lecture)
—	Linnean, 8.—Anniversary Meeting.
—	Aristotelian, 8.—Symposium: 'The Meaning and Value of Pantheism,' Messrs. J. E. McTaggart, G. D. Hicks, and C. C. J. Webb
Tues.	Royal Institution, 3.—'The Heart and its Work,' Dr. E. H. Starling
—	United Service Institution, 3.—'A Royal Marine Reserve,' Major A. F. Gatliff
—	Statistical, 5½.—'The Movements for the Inclosure and Preservation of Open Lands,' Sir R. Hunter.
Wed.	Society of Arts, 8.—'Silver and Prices: the Economic Drain of Debtor Nations,' Mr. M. Frewen.
—	Geological, 8.—'Augite-Diorites with Micro-Pegmatite in Southern India,' Mr. T. H. Holland; 'The Laccolites of Cutch and their Relation to the other Igneous Masses of the District,' Rev. J. F. Blake.
Thurs.	Royal Institution, 3.—'The French Revolution and English Literature,' Mr. C. Collins
—	Electrical Engineers, 8.—Annual General Meeting.
Fri.	United Service Institution, 3.—'The Training of Men with the Colours in Relation to their Subsequent Employment in Civil Life,' Capt. F. N. Maude
—	Royal Institution, 9.—'The Isolation of Fluorine,' Prof. H. Moissan
Sat.	Royal Institution, 3.—'Music in England during the Reign of Queen Victoria,' Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland.

Science Gossip.

The Gold Medal of the Linnean Society has this year been awarded to Dr. Jakob Georg Agardh, Emeritus Professor of Botany in the University of Lund, whose algological researches, extending over more than half a century, are so widely known and appreciated. Owing to his advanced age (eighty-three years), Dr. Agardh will not be able to attend personally to be presented with the medal at the anniversary meeting of the Society, which will be held at Burlington House on Monday, but his Excellency the Swedish and Norwegian Minister has signified his intention of being present to receive it on his behalf.

Lord Kelvin has recently communicated a fresh paper to the Royal Society on that popular subject—'Röntgen Rays.' This last addition was due to Mr. Campbell Swinton. The paper shows that when cathode rays, i.e., electric rays from the cathode of a Crookes vacuum tube, fall on a carbon screen they render it luminous. This luminosity can be made to appear as a bright circle, making the cone or sheaf of rays apparently hollow. It is well known that what we call the Röntgen rays used in photographing bones, &c., are excited by the cathode rays striking on the glass of the Crookes tube; and Mr. Swinton finds that apparently these rays are only produced when the cathode rays strike on solid matter.

A monograph, 'Birds in London,' by Mr. W. H. Hudson, author of 'British Birds,' is announced by Messrs. Longman. The first seven chapters contain an account of the wild bird life of London. Those that follow will contain a descriptive account with reference to the wild bird life of the open spaces on the borders of the metropolis—Hampstead Heath, Hackney Marsh, Wanstead Old Park, Bostall Woods and Heath, Wimbledon Common, Richmond Park, and Kew Gardens. In the concluding chapters such questions as the protection of birds in the open spaces, the restoring of some of the species that have been lost or are greatly diminished, and the introduction of others will be dealt with.

FINE ARTS

THE NEW GALLERY.

(Second and Concluding Notice.)

We may go on with our remarks on such of the pictures as have enough merit to deserve more attention than the mass of the works in this exhibition. Our readers are, no doubt, familiar with Miss M. L. Gow's mode of treating groups of ladies and children in a graceful and animated fashion by employing various whites in harmony with backgrounds and accessories of the same hues, most delicately differentiated, so that the whole is in keeping with the pinks, roses, and auburns, or whatever colours the artist has chosen in each case. L'Accord Parfait (No. 70) is one of the finest specimens of this method of hers, and its choicely graded varieties of white, delightful pinks, rosy carnations, and the brownish auburn of the hair of the fair matron and her daughters are all of them excellent points. An almost equally fine whole-length is Mrs. Alma Tadema (64). In fact, it is quite an ideal portrait of one accomplished artist by another. On the pearly, ivory-like, and snowy whites of the dress is concentrated the brilliance of a very tender exercise in that chiaroscuro of delicate and light hues which without a touch as choice and subtle as Miss Gow's could never be secured in a picture; a very few specks of blue, like dark sapphires set in snow, are the complementary accents in this charming scheme of colour. Conceived in a similar spirit, and hardly less happy in its realization, is the Portrait of Mrs. C. J. Patrick and Son (184), which might almost be compared with 'L'Accord Parfait.'

A Ring at the Door (83), by Mrs. Alma Tadema, is an exercise in white with concomitants of black in positive degrees and finely balanced warm ivory tints—a picture which in subtlety and strength is a worthy example of this class of work. Exercises of this nature occupied the attention and exhausted the science of some of the most accomplished Dutchmen of the seventeenth century. Although much less complex and ambitious than 'A Pledge,' now in the Academy, No. 83 is, in our opinion, a more complete and scientific picture. Its simplicity is greatly in its favour and did not make it at all less difficult.

Mr. A. Macgregor proved himself one of the most ambitious artists of the age when he sent that huge canvas The Hour-Glass (95) to the New Gallery. The young painter has grasped his subject boldly, and depicted the Angel of Time standing on the world and holding up an hour-glass while, among a cloud-like host of fiery spirits, the colossal spirit and his pedestal are descending through space. Being a Scotchman, it is more than probable that by this time Mr. Macgregor has seen the humorous side of his anticlimax, and resolved never again to enter upon Mr. Watts's allegorical realm, nor to attempt to paint in the mood and manner of the venerable Academician. He is well enough equipped to have a mood and a manner of his own, and allegories are such ticklish things that their interpretation as often as not depends upon the stupidity or perspicacity of the observer.—Having already described Sir E. Burne-Jones's apologue The Pilgrim of Love (134), we may now consider it critically. The first point to be noted is that the painter has adopted a much later phase of that Renaissance to which he has always been partial than attracted him when there was a large infusion of the Gothic inspiration in his art, which, despite its characteristic ruggedness and some quaint affectations, gave splendour to its coloration and virility to the exuberant fancy of the painter. In the work before us the Pilgrim is somewhat attenuated and too pale; his weariness is manifest, and his sufferings are so obvious as to detract from our satisfaction in his victory, should it come to pass. The personified Love of Sir Edward's picture, strenuous, beautiful, even nobly cruel in his sympathy for the acolyte he leads by the hand, is very much a being out of Spenser's fairy world, and, physically, of the somewhat feminine type we often find in our artist's work. Whether the result is desirable or not is another question, but it is beyond a doubt an indication of a considerable change in the artist's conceptions.

The Primavera (4) of Mrs. M. Stokes is an effort of a fancy rather fantastic than powerful, and is somewhat over-sweet. A quasi-Italian girl sits in a meadow, clad in green, embroidered in gold, as becomes her name, and is playing on a lute; but this is an idea which is not particularly novel, while the girl's figure and the general treatment of the picture remind us of that Italianized school of Flemish miniature painters of whom Giulio Clovio is the best-known representative. The technique is much less rough than is usual with Mrs. Stokes; but no part of it is stronger. There is a charm in the colour of the work which will in a little while increase. On the whole, however, 'Primavera' is flat, thin, and archaistic, and it has more of sweetness than of force.—Mrs. Swynnerton's Summertide (5), an almost too vigorous and robust example of a mind which recognizes none of the delicacies and finesse of her neighbour's art, is far less demonstrative and self-asserting than other works of hers; it is, too, much improved in point of taste, and more refined in style and touch, without, we are glad to say, losing its strength. No. 151, by the same artist, depicts a girl in a sunlit orchard, and concerned with a ring which, in itself, is concerned with love. The firm touch and the brilliant, though not quite clear tonality are injured by the rough surface and lack of softness.—M. F. Khnopff often propounds enigmas to those who recognize the intense passion and poetry to be detected in the simplest of his pictorial puzzles, but he never went nearer the bottom of the abyss than in Sleeping Medusa (7). It appears to represent the back of a grey vulture which is perched upon a rock, while close by is a mass of woman's tresses, amid which it is possible to suspect the head of Medusa lies. The meaning of all this is difficult to unravel, but the technical qualities of the work, though not easily definable, are distinctly remarkable. The breadth and subtle appositions of tone and chromatic harmonies are indeed noteworthy, the latter being produced within a very limited scale of colour. Sous les Sapins (252), in the North Room, marks a new departure on the part of this artist, for in it he descends to the prose of nature while, it may be, meaning unutterable things. It is not a contradiction in terms to say that these pictures may be very good art without being good sense.

Mr. H. Glazebrook's life-size, half-length figure (19) of a lady with some pretensions to beauty, but a woe-begone expression, whose back hair hangs down, while she seems about to tear some of it out by the roots, may be admired for the good painting of the face, as well as for a Chinese robe magnificently embroidered in golden dragons upon blue. Excellent in colouring, this picture is probably a portrait made poetical, and, as is usually the case, does not quite succeed in either respect. It is, nevertheless, a noteworthy example and must not be overlooked, although there is not much good sense in it.—Winter (65), by Miss F. Small, is a neatly painted head in profile.—Mr. J. E. Southall perpetrates an anachronism in painting in an archaistic manner, imitating the tentative imperfections and limitations of the early Florentines, the portrait of a living artist. Mr. Southall has placed a red cap on his sitter's head, posed him against a purple curtain, and put in his hand a long sable brush, the stick of which is preternaturally red. From the last-named circumstance the picture is called Man with a Sable Pencil (72). There is so much admirable draughtsmanship, such bright and pure colouring, and such fine and solid finish that Mr. Southall's whims and affectations are really to be deplored. The red stick actually cuts the figure in two parts, and the masses of brilliant colours are detached from each other.—There is a great deal that is sweet and tender about Mr. Hallé's Refuge (118), a fair damsel, of a type to which the painter is too partial, pressing a frightened dove to her breast; and it is some time since we have had from this artist so spontaneous and unaffected a piece, and it is, besides, thoroughly carried out. The Lady Alice Ashley (103), a life-size portrait in stone white, is good, solid, and so full of character that it must be an excellent likeness. At Vespers (128) is a little too pathetic and ostentatiously tender, the expression of the large eyes being exaggerated; but there is skilful painting in it. We care less for Mr. Hallé's A Fountain (143), which is not a landscape pure and simple, and not at all for his very sentimental Chagrins d'Amour (146).

The best of Mr. La Thangue's contributions is No. 155, which, because it represents a countrywoman breaking sticks across her knee, he calls An Autumn Morning. She stands, as most of Mr. La Thangue's figures stand, in a dark shadow flecked with bright sunlight, or what he intends for bright sunlight. Almost invariably too painty and too technically rough, crude in style, and heavy of touch, it is not wonderful that there is, to critical eyes at least, more to offend than please in this picture, which, however, is one of the artist's best works, and one that betrays his wish to do better. A course of year-long studies in genuine Constables, or, better still, in Rosa Bonheurs and Troyons, would mean salvation for Mr. La Thangue, who, so far as we can see, desires to take the illustrious French lady for his pattern. Besides, David Cox's passion for nature might be commended to the painter of 'An Autumn Morning,' especially as it expressed itself in most strenuous studies, and revolted against such a slovenly patchwork of pigments as that before us.—Mr. W. Britten's Dancing (183) includes several spirited and graceful women, and is excellent decoration.—Mr. C. N. Hemy has gone out of his usual path to paint A Flemish Calvary, A.D. 1550 (159), a capital devotional subject in rather dingy sunlight, and evincing a somewhat too heavy touch.—A la Petite Chinoise (188), by Mr. C. Smithers, is an extremely clever and vivacious sketch which deserves finishing.—But near it hangs a very different work, Mr. T. C. Gotch's learned and laborious combination of the spirit of Fra Angelico with Flemish technique, a combination well known in certain pictures of the school of Cologne during the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, Jubilate Deo! (191) children in red dresses placed before a red curtain, which possesses a rare charm of its own. Magnificat (263), which is a sort of companion to 'Jubilate Deo!' is in the Balcony, where many terrible things find a refuge.—A capitally painted head in profile is Mr. C. R. Burnett's Study (207).—Sympathetically treated are the grace and beauty of the nude figures of a lover and his mistress in Les Illusions Perdues (228), the Frenchness of which suits the French title. It is by Mr. D. McGill.—Mr. F. D. Millet's An Old Melody (243), a lady in a purple dress and holding a lute, is worthy of Metsu or Van der Meer, and excels in strength, solidity, homogeneity, and finish, without being over polished.

Of the portraits more might be said than these narrow columns will admit of our saying. Mr. Shannon's Mrs. C. Buxton (27), showing an elderly lady in black, whose earnest and thoughtful expression attracts the visitor, is worthy of notice. The sentiment of this portrait is of the first class; the painting per se is almost in the artist's best manner. But the painter's tour de force of the season is the half-length, life-size figure, en face, of the Marchioness of Granby (33) drawing before an oval mirror. All except the lady's features is lost in a cloud of semi-diaphanous tissues, the ruling colours of which are pearl, silver, and pale blue. A striking and somewhat mysterious costume; the delicate ivory-like flesh-tints, which are almost pallid; and the eyes, which are like star-sapphires in their colour and abstracted in their expression, give to the picture the look of a sad pythoness compelled to prophesy "of the death of kings." This second instance of Mr. Shannon's endeavour to make poems of his portraits is a novelty delightful enough at first, but not without its perils. Sir E. Burne-Jones was Mr. Shannon's precursor in this path, but even he never succeeded more completely. One of the Marchioness's children appears in the capital figure of Lord Ross (240), dressed in blue and with a black dog near him.—Mr. Boughton has indulged in an unsound sort of execution in Esmé (29), a picture with an unpleasant surface, but possessed of fresh and original colour, much sincere sentiment and character. So far as we know this is one of the Academician's best works.

Mr. Alma Tadema's two portraits are, as usual, conspicuous by their brightness, thoroughness, and verisimilitude. The better is the small, whole-length figure in black of Maurice Sons, Esq. (80). Nothing in its way could be firmer or better than this, whether as a likeness or as a picture. On the other hand, though admirable in many respects, T. M. Jarifi, Esq (75), is not nearly Mr. Tadema's best portrait.—The Hon. J. Collier's Mrs. Mackeson (96) in strong red is too ambitious, and the painter has fallen into crudities of colouring and draughtsmanship which, struggling to be strong, is somewhat coarse. For all this, the picture is far indeed from being without considerable merits. In this case second thoughts will, it is obvious, do much to improve the portrait. The same remark applies to Mr. Collier's representation of Queen Guenevere's Maying (202), even though second thoughts of it may be fatal.—Mr. H. S. Tuke's Miss Kitson (107), seated in a puce-coloured dress, has a well-painted face.—One of the most effective of the tours de force he is accustomed to produce, Mr. J. S. Sargent's Mrs. G. Batten Singing (175), a study by lamplight, is very fine and energetic in its way, and, above all things, furnishes a strong and vivid impression of the subject and circumstances. It is noteworthy, too, on account of that exceptionally forthright and firm touch of the artist which has made of his work a study in the highest sense of that term. Almost as good is his Mr. G. Swinton (245), a life-size, whole-length figure standing by a chair: an excellent exercise in white.—Mr. W. R. Symonds's Children of G. F. Chance, Esq. (3), are tasteful but dry studies in a good style.

Upon the whole, the landscapes are about the average in number and merit; they are certainly not superior to those seen at previous exhibitions. Mr. J. MacWhirter is at his best in On the Coast of Sicily (49), a fine study of colour and light.—Carting (56) is Mr. C. W. Wyllie's contribution, possesses much delicacy, and is an excellent view from a lofty field, whence we look over a blue champaign and a pale blue river winding through it. The airiness of these elements, the rich and tender colours of the sky, and the extreme distance are graded with singular care and skill, while the foreground, studded as it is with red, blue, and white blossoms set in the warm silver of the flowering grass, and the mid-distance, where labourers load a huge wain with hay, are of the best quality.—Mr. A. Stokes's landscape entitled In South Tyrol (57) is an especially brilliant representation of snow-clad mountain peaks. Their grand forms are finely drawn, and their intensely blue translucent shadows are true to nature.—There is much that is charming, signal purity of colour, and breadth and delicacy of treatment about Mr. A. Parsons's In a Devonshire Rose-Grower's Garden (68), nor should the excellent drawing and solidity of Plantain Lilies and Japanese Iris (87) be overlooked, and least of all would it be fair to omit praising his most ambitious picture, the large panorama-like Allotments (210). The loftiness of the sky of pale turquoise and soft green, in which huge clouds draw together in prodigious masses, is a noble element of the last-named work, the more acceptable because the learned drawing and sound modelling of the clouds lend dignity and solidity to the subject. Nor is the treatment of the vast plateau, ending in dim blue hills of no great height, less admirable or less artistic. The grand simplicity of the whole picture adds much to the pleasure it affords. The angular outlines of the allotments are against it, but the figures of the diggers and ploughmen are well designed, well drawn, and expressive.

Mrs. Ridley Corbet's In Tuscany (74) is treated with the taste, skill, and artistic feeling she shares with her husband and Signor Costa. This is peculiarly an artistic landscape. Her Almond Blossom (136) also deserves to be admired.—Signor Costa himself is at his best in The First Dawn of 1897 on the Shore of the Tyrrhene Sea (99), which has all the charms of his eclectic style and refined cast of thought; but his Autumn Moonrise in the Pisan Mountains (82), choice and solemnly beautiful though it is, is not so attractive.—Mr. L. Thomson's Blue and Silver and Gold (102) is not unworthy of being called Titianesque, so much do the strong tints named resemble those of lapis lazuli in their brilliance and harmony. The nymphs bathing in the azure stream are graceful figures cleverly sketched and well placed.—Mr. C. N. Hemy's Off for the Night (110) is a sympathetic picture of Cornish fishermen leaving their harbour; but it is injured by an excess of paint and a touch extremely heavy for Mr. Hemy, which fails in an attempt to reproduce the depth, wealth, and force of natural colours during twilight in the West.—On the other hand, Mr. E. Parton's An October Morning after Heavy Rain (113) is somewhat deficient in tonality and colour, and his touch is rather over-delicate. Still, there is capital painting in the road, and the figure of the sportsman at the stile is really excellent.

The Thames at Wargrave (1), by Mrs. K. Hastings, an artist who seldom gives us the pleasure of praising her works of any sort, is slightly painted, but pretty, and full of sympathy for nature.—Mr. F. Hall's picture of cows trooping to The Drinking Pool (10), where sunset light and moonlight contend, deserves a word of recognition for its good colour and a carefully and ably studied effect, marred to some extent by the badness of the surface of the work.—Lord Carlisle's Scene in India (21) is more than usually pathetic, and possesses some of that poetry without which landscape painting becomes mechanical. A certain over-definition which spoils many of his lordship's efforts is not obvious here.—Mr. Adrian Stokes's Untrodden Peaks (28) is rather disappointing, because it has so little sentiment, except what nature gave. The grandeur of the snow-clad summits raised high in the clear blue air, the fine and firm drawing, the choiceness of the colours and tones, make a picture of it, but are not sufficient to give the picture the touch of imagination which Mr. Stokes's work at the Academy can lay claim to.—Mr. M. Lindner's Storm Cloud, Christchurch Harbour (36), though but a choice sketch, is luminous and broad.

Miss A. Alma Tadema generally chooses novel subjects for her delightful little pictures, and treats them with exquisite delicacy and finish. Indeed, her Sunshine in the Highlands (124) is a wonderful representation of a flying gleam upon a mist-laden moor. She has depicted the opalescence, iridescence, and softness of the subject in a most fascinating manner; and the whole work is as broad, simple, and harmonious as possible.—The twilight effect Mr. E. Stott represents in The Village Inn (139) is true, and the picture's colour is capital.—The effect of late twilight and bluish mists is justly and firmly portrayed in Mr. A. Hartley's View on the Tees (229).—Mr. H. J. Ford's The Harbour, Sark (235), is strong and brilliant, though a little painty.—Mr. A. East's Idyll of Spring (239), a combination of meadows, flowering trees, calm blue water, swans, and naked nymphs, is a departure from his usual line, but it is technically charming as well as rightly named.

Of the sculptures the Jeanne d'Arc (428) of Mr. J. A. Simpson is praiseworthy, and Mr. G. Simonds's The late C. Mitchell (433) in bronze is quite admirable. We described this bust some time ago.—Miss A. M. Chaplin is happy as ever as a modeller of dogs, see Oswald (450).—There are, too, some good works by Mr. A. Toft, Mr. W. R. Colton, Mr. E. R. Mullins, Mr. G. Frampton, and Mr. R. S. Stanhope.

THE SALONS AT PARIS.

(Third Notice.)

On one of the shoulders of Mount Taygetus, at the entrance of the valley of the Eurotas, still rise the ruins of the town of Mistra, built in the thirteenth century by the barons of Champagne during their settlement in the Morea. Numerous churches placed on the flanks of the hill and castles which command it show that under its Byzantine masters, who soon took the place of the French lords, the town enjoyed great prosperity and ranked as the capital of the Peloponnese. Upon the walls of these churches (the Pantanassa, the Metropolitan Church, the Peribleptos) a former student of the École de France at Athens has discovered a series of frescoes of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries. Of these a painter attached to the service of the Commission of Historical Monuments, M. Yperman, has executed some admirable water-colour copies, which he shows in the architectural section (3843) at the Champs Élysées. These are documents of great interest for the historian, which provoke many questions that cannot be entered into here, and have not, indeed, all been settled elsewhere. Here Byzantine art, at a point of contact with Occidental art, reaches a justness of expression and an elevation of style which are quite unusual. The Annunciation, The Ascension, The Entry into Jerusalem, The Transfiguration, The Holy Women at the Tomb, introduce figures, some of which belong to the fairest traditions of Greek art, whilst the others —for instance, the angel of the Annunciation and the Virgin seated in an attitude of meditation — suggest in their elegance of design Florentine works of the first half of the fifteenth century. The arrangement of the Lord's Supper recalls besides very closely the manual of painting of the monk Denis, though displaying here and there modifications or additions in which one recognizes the influence of the more anecdotic and more bizarre art of the East. Of all the religious paintings exhibited this year these are really the most interesting, and, if compared with those of modern artists, would provide matter for instructive study. Nothing could, indeed, be more interesting or more fertile in suggestion than to follow across the centuries the historic evolution of a type or theme in imagery; but we may not linger over such studies as these, and can hardly mention briefly one or two. Among the frescoes of the Pantanassa copied by M. Yperman is a Resurrection of Lazarus. It is in entire accordance with the data of the manual of the monk Denis:—

"Mountain with two peaks, behind the precincts of a town of no great size. Jews in tears go out of the gates, and move towards the middle of the mountain behind. Before it is a tomb. The stone which covered it up is lifted by a man. Lazarus stands upright in the middle of the tomb; another man disencumbers him of his grave clothes. Christ blesses him with one hand; in the other He holds a scroll and says: 'Lazarus, arise and come hither.' Behind him the apostles, Martha, and Mary prostrate themselves at the feet of Jesus in adoration."

This is very nearly the theme which was adopted but simplified by Giotto in one of the most moving frescoes of the Madonna dell' Arena at Padua. Before his time this first triumph of the Man who was God over death, so well calculated to touch the hearts and strengthen the hopes of the first Christians, had already been often represented on the walls of the catacombs and the sarcophagus. The Renaissance, in proportion as it sought more pretexts for painting beautiful forms and, adopting Benvenuto Cellini's predilection, nude forms of men and women, lost interest in a subject where death and sorrow occupied too much place. However, Sebastiano del Piombo found in it the theme for his great picture in the National Gallery, which remains his finest work. Rembrandt, on the contrary, and the masters of the Northern schools, laid hold of the subject, and it would be difficult indeed to find one where the expressive powers of colour could be better employed, or all the most poignant and dramatic varieties of human movement better put into action. The tradition of Rembrandt has inspired M. Tanner in the Resurrection of Lazarus, which he exhibits at the Champs Élysées (1608). He has sought to characterize his picture by an attentive study of movement and a parti pris given by light which is artificial, but well arranged. His scene is a grotto crowded with the witnesses of the miracle, curious, moved, or struck down. A lamp, placed at the edge of the tomb (hidden by one of the persons, but assigning by its clear and reflected light various values to the different actors, which agree with their moral and picturesque importance), is the source of light in and centre of the composition. There is only lacking in all this the indefinable something from which great emotion bursts forth. M. Tanner would not thank me for comparing him to Rembrandt; it would be fairer to simply suggest here a less crushing recollection of Munkacsy. It would be unfair in any case to treat with contempt or pass without notice this interesting picture.

Since M. Gustave Moreau was appointed professor at the École des Beaux-Arts, an increasing number of pictures can be seen in which affectations of the archaism of the quattrocento, an opulence and melancholy of painting at once sumptuous and sad, of a dream-like beauty, betray what one may call a new edition of the master's manner. Unhappily, if he can communicate to his disciples his methods of work, and teach them the secret of that precious painting which suggests the enameller and jeweller, and constitutes the strange charm of his works, he cannot give them the learned and eager imagination, the subtle and intense feeling, which have enabled him to put new life into old stories, and clothe them afresh with a form and even a meaning which are quite new and modern. M. René Piot at the Champ de Mars and M. Desvallières at the Champs Élysées are the two most notable representatives of this style, whose tendencies shock or disquiet some good people. The Journey to the Sepulchre of M. Piot (Champ de Mars, 1014) shows in the unfolding of its sad, slow procession an invention which is, no doubt, a little laboured, but sufficiently elevated. And, again, in the Rape of Europa (1015), and the water colours of The Judgment of Paris (1683), The Solitude of Orpheus (1685), and The Adoration of the Magi (1687), one feels at once the endeavour to detach from the master's tuition an interpretation which remains sufficiently personal, and the predominance of admiring recollections which still form too heavy a weight for the originality of the disciple. The Annunciation of M. Desvallières (Champs Élysées, 527) also indicates by its excessive mannerism its source, but compels attention. We have not here the naïve and joyful Annunciation which Fra Angelico delighted to paint in so many forms, inventing each time a new and delicious variant, nor, again, the Annunciation, more solemn, but still joyful, which the unknown painter of the Peribleptos painted at Mistra. In M. Desvallières's picture the heavenly messengers bring to Mary a multiple and tragic message. Whilst one places on her young shoulders the heavy royal mantle, another declares to her the choice which the Father has made of her, and two, kneeling at her feet, present to her the sceptre and the crown; a fifth, wrapped in long mourning robes, lifts with a mournful gesture above her head the bleeding cross on which the Son announced to her will endure His agony. The scenery, with its masses of brownish green, the sad glory of its sky, the blue mountains which stand up and animate it, the great pool which reflects all the light of the sky, and where the doves go to drink, is doubtless made up of many combined reminiscences, but shows at least a volition and a poetical bias which preserve it from the commonplace.

The Vierge au Chasseur of M. Hébert (Champs Élysées, 825) recalls in the conception and sentiment of the figure of Mary the beautiful bas-relief of painted and gilded terra-cotta in the Louvre, of which M. Burney exhibits an excellent lithograph in the section of engraving (3913). It is the work of a Florentine of the middle of the fifteenth century, one of those forerunners of Michael Angelo who continued in Italian art, whilst the natural and more earthly vein of men like Mino da Fiesole, Rossellino, and Benedetto da Mayano was expanding its charms, the great mediæval tradition which passed from the schools of Giotto and Pisa, and was destined to be handed on by Jacopo della Quercia and to culminate in Michael Angelo. The haunting expression, proud and sad, dreamy and tragic, of this Mother, who seems to read in the future and see already above the head of her little child the terrible Golgotha, possesses great beauty. It is a pity that M. Hébert has consulted besides this admirable model others not so sound. He has read in a mediocre poet, M. Jean Rameau, a sentimental and insipid story, which represents the little child Jesus refusing a bird which a young shepherd has killed to offer to Him, for, says Jean Rameau, "Jesus, who died for men, would not have one bird killed for a God." For the facts of Christian art it is decidedly the better plan to keep to the text of the Gospels. M. Jean Rameau has inspired M. Hébert with nothing but an insipid and pomaded Jesus, more worthy of the clerical building fronts of the Rue St. Sulpice than of the studio of a master who was at all times a poet. — M. Gérôme was never a poet. His is a precise spirit, alert, but rather dry; he composes cleverly, but his colours have often offended the eyes of his contemporaries. He has tried in his Flight into Egypt (Champs Élysées, 730) to call up the mystery and sweetness of the blue-tinted night in the desert. And in The Entry of Jesus into Jerusalem on the Day of Palms (731) he has put together again, somewhat in the style of James Tissot, a picturesque scene which is ingenious enough, but unfortunately painted with too dry a brush. — One cannot reproach M. Eugène Carrière with dryness. More than once I have had occasion to speak here of his methods, and it can no longer be hoped that he will ever change them; we must take him as he is. He envelopes form and colour in a kind of wash or haze, here and there half cleared, just enough to allow the grace, caressing or mournful, of a gesture or the note of a colour always thin, but always expressive, to emerge, only to sink immediately in the mystery of the profound canvas, where pale moving lights animate with rough-sketched visions and distant reflections the systematic obscurity which the plastic and sentimental imagination of M. Carriere seems to have selected. The theme of Christ on the Cross (Champ de Mars, 251), chosen this year by him, is well suited to his manner. The Man of Sorrows is expiring on the cross. After having a glimpse of the horrible possibility that His sacrifice was perhaps fruitless, and letting fall that cry of tragic anguish, "Why hast Thou forsaken Me?" He has accepted desolation and death, He has committed His spirit into the hands of His Father, and His last breath is about to be drawn. M. Carriere has decided to show us Him alone, already far from men, with the Death which He had not yet conquered as his only companion. The impression of solitude is rendered with a singular intensity by the nocturnal background, where in the depths of a wan opening a remnant of light is expiring—that of grief by the two arms desperately lifted, and, above all, by the bust, whose execution is decidedly beautiful in its mystery, and pervaded with suffering and compassion. Near the cross the Mother stands, wrapped in a large mantle, whose purple tints come out in long trains of mourning against the mingled greys of the horizon. And these small clasped hands, admirable in their desolate tenderness, gather up in a dramatic yet simple gesture eternal prayer and eternal pity. And all this—vibrations of veiled colours in low tone, sad and as it were complaining harmonies, the calling up of forms which, if summarized, are always just, whose very under-meanings, if one may use the term, here become expressive—all this renders so well the sentiment of the painter and of the scene that the objections one had started to make against him are stopped halfway.

By the side of this 'Christ' of M. Carrière that of M. Bouguereau (Champs Élysées, 228) seems of an Arctic coldness in its correctness and academic elegance; one prefers to stop before the picture of a Belgian painter, M. Struijs (Champs Élysées, 1593), To Comfort the Afflicted. In the corner of a humble room a woman weeps, her face hidden in her apron. An old priest seated beside her places his hand affectionately on her knee, and tells her the words of hope and pity whose secret he knows. All is seen, felt, and expressed in such sort that there can be no possible hesitation that here is a painter, an artist, and a man. M. Struijs has now for some years attracted attention by pictures which are always strong in painting, sober and expressive in sentiment. All the predilections of his heart and spirit are for the observation of that reality in moderation which has always possessed attractions for his Flemish fellow countrymen; and in the beauty of the humble existences which he has taken upon himself to record he prefers to bring before us hours of sadness rather than of pleasure or joy. Never, to my taste, has he done a more complete thing than the present picture. There is in it a depth of conviction, a kind of candour which goes further than the most subtle art. It is life itself reflected in the mirror of a truly human heart; and if, to make the eye sensible of this, the most profound knowledge of design and the most just feeling for colour were needed, one sees this without doubt, and rejoices in it, but only after having gone through the bountiful evidence of the moral which the volition, sympathy, and thought of a man have put there. "Now, to that, give thy presence with all the looks of thy soul," writes St. Bonaventura in one of his 'Meditations' on the life of Christ; the advice is good also for painters.

André Michel.

GREEK INSCRIPTIONS AT CLANDEBOYE.

Among the many treasures which the Marquis of Dufferin and Ava has acquired during his long and varied experiences throughout the world, and which now surround him in his seat in the Co. Down, are a goodly number of Greek texts on stone. These he has set against the left wall of the entrance hall. He obtained them forty-six years ago when cruising along the coast of Asia Minor in his yacht, armed with a firman authorizing him to take such things when he found them. The great majority of these texts represent two groups from Teos and Iasos, the former on black stone slabs, which must have been set in the wall of a temple or other public building, the latter on a tall white stele of which three sides are covered with inscriptions.

I took the pains to copy these texts with care in March, 1897, hoping that some of them were as yet unpublished. But I have since found them almost all in Le Bas and Waddington's 'Voyage Archéologique,' and suppose that even those which I have not yet found in that book (it seems to have no index) are there also. Le Bas made his careful search in 1842–3, a few years before Lord Dufferin's cruise.

The group from Teos came from the public baths of the modern village near the site. These are all concerned with the right of asylum claimed by the Dionysiac artists of Teos (then representing the whole polity) from the cities of Greece, and more particularly from those of Crete; for these latter were notorious pirates, and the artists desired to travel the seas constantly on their provincial tours. A few of these texts had already appeared in the 'C. I. G.' from the copies of earlier travellers; but Le Bas's copies and squeezes are far more complete. The texts now at Clandeboye from Teos which appear in his collection are there numbered 61–65, 69–78. These texts are, on the whole, in very good preservation; a few variants in my readings from those of Le Bas—they are very unimportant—must be kept for another place.

The second group relates altogether to gifts of private individuals to the theatre or for the theatrical performances at Iasos, and the tall stele seems to have been set up at the entrance of the parodos. The Clandeboye texts correspond to the following numbers in Le Bas's collection: 252–68, 270–2. There are many points of interest in these lists of gifts, and in the recurring formulæ with which they are expressed. Thus, e.g., some twenty times, after recording that some benevolent citizen had engaged a famous foreign artist to perform at Iasos for one or two days, there follows: καὶ ἡ πάροδος εὗρεν δραχμὴν ἡ δὲ θέα ἐγένετο δωρεάν. Le Bas did not venture to translate this phrase. At present I am disposed to translate it, "And [in consequence of the foreign "star"] the entrance money rose to a drachma (per head), so that the performance paid its own expenses and did not burden the public funds." But there are difficulties in this rendering. The dates of both groups of texts are determinable; they belong to the earlier half of the second century B.C.

Though the pleasure of publishing these texts has been forestalled by Le Bas, it is yet a matter of great interest that their present home should be known. New travellers may otherwise waste their time in searching for them at Teos or Iasos, and, in any case, any new edition of the 'Corpus' ought to contain a note as to the whereabouts of the originals, by which any doubts regarding Le Bas's readings may be settled by an appeal to the present most courteous owner. Hæc hactenus.

J. P. Mahaffy.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 10th, 11th, and 12th inst. the following engravings: "He Sleeps," by and after P. W. Tomkins, 51*l.* Louisa Mildmay, by Prattent, 40*l.* Louisa, by and after W. Ward, 26*l.*; Hesitation, ditto, 37*l.*; Alinda, ditto, 39*l.* Thoughts on Matrimony, after J. R. Smith, by W. Ward, 28*l.* Narcissa, and Flirtilla, by and after J. R. Smith, 141*l.* Almeria, after J. Opie, by J. R. Smith, 46*l.* The Seasons: Spring, Summer, Autumn, and Winter, after F. Wheatley and R. Westall, by F. Bartolozzi, 27*l.* Black, Brown, and Fair, by and after J. R. Smith, 26*l.* Peasants with Fruit and Flowers, after Rev. W. Peters, by J. B. Michael, 30*l.* Venus attired by the Graces, after A. Kauffman, by F. Bartolozzi, 26*l.* Jane, Countess of Harrington, with her Children, after Sir J. Reynolds, by F. Bartolozzi, 36*l.*; Lady Smyth and her Children, ditto, 34*l.* Bowzebeus and Cicely, Hobnelia and Lubberkin, after J. Northcote, 26*l.* Mrs. Billington, after J. Downman, by R. Dunkarton, 26*l.* Alope (Lady Hamilton), after G. Romney, by R. Earlom, 54*l.* After Sir J. Reynolds, Hon. Miss Bingham, by F. Bartolozzi, 111*l.*; Lady Elizabeth Foster, ditto, 55*l.*; Georgiana, Duchess of Devonshire, and Lady Georgiana Cavendish, by G. Keating, 115*l.*; Miss Emily Pott as Thais, by F. Bartolozzi, 94*l.* After R. Cosway, Mrs. Fitzherbert, by J. Condé, 31*l.*; ditto, 52*l.*; Lady Anne Maria Stanhope as Hebe, by A. Cardon, 28*l.*; Mrs. Jackson, by J. Condé, 52*l.*; Mrs. Tickell, by J. Condé, 63*l.*; Hon. Lady Sinclair, by M. Bovi, 32*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 15th inst. the following, from various collections. Drawings: T. S. Cooper, Summer, five cows and sheep on the bank of a river, evening, 92*l.* S. Prout, View of the East End of the Church of St. Étienne, Caen, 236*l.* F. Tayler, Captured Covenanters, 115*l.* Pictures: J. Linnell, A Hilly Landscape, with flock of sheep and figures, 346*l.* C. Stanfield, Near Castellamare, Bay of Naples, 210*l.* R. Ansdell, Sheep Gathering, Isle of Skye, 123*l.* Cjolzlof, Piedimonte d'Alife, presso di Napoli, 192*l.* T. S. Cooper, Summer in Canterbury Meadows, 325*l.*; A Bull and Seven Cows on the Bank of a River, 131*l.*; Five Cows standing in a Stream, 110*l.* T. Creswick, The Evening Hour, a river scene, with cottages, and cows watering, 220*l.* Sir E. Landseer, The Best Run of the Season, 325*l.* F. R. Lee and T. S. Cooper, Summer Evening, a river scene, with cows watering, 430*l.* G. Morland, Squire Thornhill's Assignation in a Wood, 178*l.* W. Müller, A Road Scene, with a market-woman carrying a basket of chickens on her head, 126*l.* P. Nasmyth, A Landscape, with a shallow stream, 141*l.* G. Vincent, A View near Thetford, Norfolk, 102*l.* E. M. Ward, Charlotte Corday going to Execution, 210*l.* A. Cuyp, The Ford, a gentleman mounted on a grey horse, 189*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

Mr. Dunthorne has on view at 5, Vigo Street a number of mezzotints by Mr. Frank Short from unpublished drawings of Turner's 'Liber Studiorum.' The whole work, as everybody ought to know, was intended to consist of one hundred plates; seventy-one of them were engraved and published, twenty were carried to various stages of completion, but the drawings for the remaining examples were never engraved. It is these Mr. Short has now engraved.

At the sitting of the Select Committee of the House of Commons on Government Offices Appropriation of Sites, on Wednesday, evidence was given on behalf of the Institute of Architects in the sense indicated by us last year as representing sound architectural opinion, namely, in favour of continuing Parliament Street in the line of the Treasury and Home Office to St. Stephen's Square, instead of sloping away the angle from the Charles Street corner of the Home Office to the fountain in Great George Street.

Messrs. Cassell & Co.'s fifteenth annual Exhibition of Drawings in Black and White will be held at the Cutlers' Hall (by the kind permission of the Court of the Cutlers' Company) from June 1st to June 14th, inclusive.

Until July 4th the Burlington Fine-Arts Club's exhibition of European enamels will be open to holders of members' tickets daily, Sundays included.

The Committee of the Jordan Art Gallery, Boston, U.S., propose to celebrate Her Majesty's Diamond Jubilee by an exhibition of representative English painters' works, and they invite loans of pictures for the purpose. Messrs. T. Agnew & Sons are the agents in this country, and the support has been promised of the President of the Royal Academy, Sir J. D. Linton, and Messrs. Alma Tadema, Luke Fildes, H. Herkomer, A. C. Gow, and D. Murray.

Messrs. Constable tell us that

"through a regrettable oversight they neglected to acknowledge in the recent number of the Artist dealing with the work of Mr. Frederick Sandys, on the plate representing the artist's great picture of 'Judith' (although their indebtedness was acknowledged in the text), the courtesy of Sir Henry Doulton in lending the picture for reproduction. They also regret that in 'English Illustration' the same plate was used to illustrate Mr. Sandys's picture without any acknowledgment being made to the owner of the original. The publishers welcome this opportunity of expressing their regret and of expiating their transgression by subscribing the sum of 10*l.* 10*s.* to the St. Thomas's Hospital Convalescent Home."

Collectors of works of antique art will hear with regret of the death of M. Hoffman. They will of course know that he left the Quai Voltaire a few years ago, and since had been living in his modest house in the Champs Élysées suburb, where he died.

In excavations made last week at Cologne, Dr. Otto von Falke, the Director of the Cologne Kunstgewerbe Museum, discovered the remains of an ancient stoneware furnace, with a number of richly decorated examples of the ware. They date mostly about 1540.

The current issue of the Gazette des Beaux-Arts contains the first portion of a valuable review of some of the leading works in the Salon of this year from the pen of M. Albert Maignan, himself one of the ablest living artists of the French School, and one of the Perpetual Secretaries of the Société des Artistes Français. It is extremely interesting, concise, and practical. In the same number will be found an excellent etching by M. C. Waltner after M. Benjamin-Constant's whole-length, life-size portrait of the late Duc d'Aumale, and a reproduction in colours after 'Jésus engage les Apôtres à se reposer,' by M. James Tissot, which is an example of the series of transcripts by M. Alfred Mame, of Tours, from that wonderful "Life of Christ" which is now exhibiting in New Bond Street. It is a successful reproduction.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Royal Opera, Covent Garden.—'Aida'; 'Les Huguenots'; 'Faust'; 'Carmen'
Queen's Hall.—Symphony Concerts. Mottl Concerts. Miss Clara Butt's Concert.

Few better performances of Verdi's masterpiece 'Aida' since its first presentation in London in 1876 have been given than that of Thursday last week. For the first and only time during the week the Italian tongue was used; but there were only two Italian artists in the principal parts. Signor Ceppi created a very favourable impression as Radames, thanks to a well-trained voice naturally pleasant in quality. No special merit was discoverable in his acting. Signor Ancona as Amonasro and M. Plançon as Ramfis were, of course, splendid, and Miss Marie Brema sang and acted with exceptional power as Amneris. The titular character was impersonated by Miss Susan Strong, for whom an apology was made on the ground of a cold; but it was not needed, for her voice seemed in perfect order, and the only fault that could be found was that her appearance was not sufficiently African.

Very little praise can be awarded to the rendering of the mutilated version of 'Les Huguenots' on Friday. We have to be content with Meyerbeer's score shorn of its full proportions; but what remains should be done in a worthy manner. That Mlle. Pacary was extremely unwell was quickly obvious, and there was something like a fiasco in the duet between Valentine and Marcel in the third act, but in the fourth she was much more at her ease. There was scarcely anything to commend in the Urbain of Madame Brazzi, and another new tenor, M. Dupeyron, who appeared as Raoul, failed to make much impression. On the other hand, Miss Marie Engle was charming as the Queen, M. Plançon perfect as St. Bris, and M. Noté as De Nevers and M. Journet as Marcel were passable. The orchestra under M. Flon did its work well.

'Faust' was repeated on Saturday, with M. Van Dyck in the titular part. He is perhaps the best representative of Goethe's hero on the operatic stage, for he makes Faust typically German, and avoids Italian methods and costumes. The rest of the cast was too familiar to require comment. The Walpurgis ballet scene was not given.

The performance of 'Carmen' on Wednesday this week had several features worthy of commendation. Nothing need be said concerning Mlle. Zélie de Lussan's impersonation of the gipsy except to record that it has, if possible, improved. Another new tenor, M. Salignac, displayed a light and agreeable voice as Don José, and acted with considerable power towards the close. Miss Marie Engle's Michaela was, as on previous occasions, very charming, and Signor Ancona sang to perfection as the Toreador. The principal artists sang in French, but the chorus, so far as the ear could be trusted, in Italian.

Tschaïkowsky's music seems to be still growing in popularity, for there was a large audience at the Queen's Hall Symphony Concert last Saturday afternoon. The programme included two works by the deceased Russian composer new to London, the first being the Overture to his early opera 'Voivoda,' produced at Moscow in 1869. It failed, chiefly owing to the badness of the libretto, and Tschaïkowsky burnt most of the score. The overture, however, remains, and proves to be a characteristic work, almost as irregular in form as that of Rossini to 'William Tell.' As usual, the themes are striking and the orchestration piquant, but perhaps too noisy. A more important example of the modern Russian school is the Suite in G, Op. 55, an elaborate work in four movements, all bright and fresh in thematic material, and quite unconventional in structure. The final tema con variazioni displays the master's genius at its best, and, admirably played as it was by Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra, the suite was enthusiastically received. Similar remarks may apply to the stirring Symphony in F minor, No. 4, and its performance. This work was rendered under the composer's direction at a Philharmonic Concert on June 1st, 1893 (Athen. No. 3424), and it improves greatly on acquaintance, though it is not equal to the beautiful No. 5, in E minor, nor to the incomparable 'Symphonie Pathétique,' No. 6. The lively 'Capriccio Italien,' Op. 45, brought the programme to a conclusion.

The audience at the Mottl Concert at the Queen's Hall on Tuesday evening completely filled the building, and many people could not obtain admission. One of the finest performances on record was given of Berlioz's curious symphony 'Harold en Italie,' Mr. Michael Balling taking the viola solo part. He played it to perfection on the new instrument, the viola alta, to which the music is well suited. Liszt's article on the work, translated and condensed from the 'Gesammelte Schriften,' was printed in the book of words. It was the lengthy excerpt from 'Parsifal,' however, that was the principal attraction. This comprised the whole of the third act, with the exception of the introduction and the few bars between Gurnemanz and Kundry. Herr Heinrich Vogl again distinguished himself as the Knight of the Grail, Herr Wachter sang effectively as the aged Gurnemanz, and Mr. David Bispham imparted the utmost impressiveness to the agonized utterances of Amfortas. The chorus from the Royal College of Music had been well rehearsed, and the orchestra was magnificent. To those who intend visiting Bayreuth this year for the first time the performance was a good lesson.

Miss Clara Butt had been away from London for a considerable period when she reappeared at her concert in the Queen's Hall on Wednesday afternoon, her absence having been due partly to considerations of health and also to a desire for further study. This is well, and it may further be said that the well-known contralto has much improved by her continental experiences. Her rich voice still gains in strength and beauty of tone and her style in general intelligence. Miss Butt was heard in Gluck's 'Divinités du Styx,' Schubert's 'Der Tod und das Mädchen,' and other items, including Murger's 'Ballade du Désespéré,' in which she was assisted by Messrs. Beaumont, Wolff, and Hollman. Beside the artists named, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Norman Salmond, and others took part in the concert, and recitations delivered by Miss Lily Hanbury and Mr. Beerbohm Tree won cordial approval.

THE LATE MR. BEST.

By common consent the late organist of St. George's Hall, Liverpool, was the most accomplished executant of his day on the organ, and as such was engaged at every Handel Festival to play the concerto on the "Selection Day," and this was all, I believe, that many London critics knew of him. But he was far more than a brilliant executant.

In regard to mere versatility, no one who was not in the habit, as I was, of attending his Liverpool organ recitals week after week for a good many years, could fully appreciate his range. His répertoire included all music that had been written for the organ or could be arranged for it, of all dates and schools, from Couperin down to the latest novelty in French or German organ music. A remarkable point in his treatment of the music was his unfailing perception as to æsthetic in the choice of stops, which were selected and combined so as to give always the special timbre which suited the character of the music.

As an interpreter of Bach's organ compositions Best was unequalled, not only for his firmness of execution, but for the finish and contrast of effect which he gave to them. No competent listener who heard his performance of Bach's 'Passacaglia' could ever forget it; it was the perfection of æsthetic finish. He was constantly studying Bach's works with a view of getting at all their possibilities of expression. Of the pathetic composition known as "the little E minor" fugue he said to me, "You know, that is not an ordinary fugue, it is an adagio in fugue form," and he treated it so. He was the only professional organist whom I ever heard play Bach's Preludes on Chorales in public. I remember his playing the grand three-verse one on "O Lamm Gottes unschuldig," and the tremendous effect he made with the last verse, with the canto fermo on the pedals. But after the recital he said, reflectively, "I think next time I will treat the coda differently, and end it pianissimo; it would have a beautiful effect." To some of Bach's minor compositions he gave quite a new interest by his treatment of them; for instance, the little fugue in C minor, book iv. No. 5 of Griepenkerl's edition, where the pedal is not introduced till near the end. He gave this a kind of half-humorous baroque treatment, commencing very soft and giving each entry of the theme on a new stop, till at last a short crescendo on the swell organ led to the introduction of the theme thundered out on the pedal, fortissimo, with almost startling effect.

One of the most remarkable things was to hear him accompany an oratorio when the organ had to supply the place of the band. I remember the late John Hullah expressing his astonishment and admiration to me, on one of these occasions, at hearing, as he said, "every instrument in the orchestra represented." After accompanying the 'Elijah' on one occasion in this way he said to me, "Getting up those accompaniments was the hardest day's work I ever had." Now, I am certain he could have gone to the organ on the shortest notice and accompanied the 'Elijah' through with perfect satisfaction to audience and singers; but that would not have satisfied himself; he always wanted perfection.

Best had not genius as a composer, but he had very high talent. His series of 'Organ Pieces for Church Use' contains some very striking and original things; they are mostly in the French school, which is not the purest, but they are a great deal stronger work than most French organ music. He composed a very good Wedding March and Funeral March for the organ, because, he said, there ought to be such compositions written specially for the organ, instead of depending only on arrangements. The numerous arrangements he did make for the organ, however, are masterly, and have always appeared to me to stand quite apart from all other "arrangements" in their precise and detailed knowledge of organ effect, even down to the mere distribution of the notes in a chord.

Apart from his music Best had a great deal of individuality of character, and in his sarcastic criticisms and his attitude of ironical contempt for things in general he reminded one a good deal of what one hears of Rossini. He declined the offer of knighthood, I am convinced from sheer pride; other people might want that kind of honour, he could do without it. He had an original way of putting things. After an oratorio at which a once eminent, but rather passée vocalist had struggled hard with her embellishments, I said, "Madame —— was determined to show us she could still make a shake." "Ah, yes," he said (quoting the Psalms), "she 'roared by reason of the very disquietness of her heart.'" At the opening of the Albert Hall organ some eminent German organists were invited to assist in the function. To a question as to what they made of it, he replied, "Well, they pulled out every stop in the organ and then just wallowed in it." Among other characteristics I may mention his beautiful handwriting, which was quite a picture; his passion for orderly arrangement in everything—his music was kept and classified with most scrupulous neatness, and every programme he had ever played was preserved in a huge album, with the place and date appended; his beautifully shaped hands (of which he was very proud); and his quiet manner in playing. Nothing seemed to move but the fingers, which were held quite straight, and struck from the knuckles with the precision of mechanical levers.

Best's caustic speech no doubt made him enemies, and those who only knew him on the wrong side had no idea how charming his manner could be when in good humour and in congenial society. At the Art Congress at Liverpool a few years ago I had the pleasure of introducing him and J. D. Sedding, the late eminent architect, to each other. Sedding said the next day, "I was delighted with that man; he is a real artist."

H. Heathcote Statham.

Musical Gossip.

The Queen's Hall Choral Society shone to conspicuous advantage in the performance of 'St. Paul' on Thursday last week. Mendelssohn's choruses could not have been attacked with more verve and vigour than they were under Mr. Randegger's direction, and good work was done by the soloists, Madame Clara Samuell, Miss Ada Crossley, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Louis Fröhlich, and Mr. John Sandbrook, a young vocalist who appeared in the principal part in place of Mr. Andrew Black, who was unable to sing.

The indulgence of the audience was requested on behalf of Madame Marchesi at her recital in St. James's Hall on Friday afternoon last week, on the justifiable grounds that she had suffered bereavement in the recent Paris catastrophe, and was feeling far from well. But no apology was needed, for she sang quite as artistically as usual various items by Handel, Schubert, Schumann, Brahms, Liszt, Godard, and other composers. Herr Henry Bramsen played some violoncello solos with much technical skill.

The programme of the Royal Amateur Orchestral Society on Wednesday evening included Mr. Edward German's 'Gipsy Suite,' Wagner's 'Siegfried Idyll,' and the concert-room version of 'King Robert of Sicily,' the recitation in which was impressively delivered by Mr. Charles Fry. Of Mr. George Mount's new overture 'Diamond Jubilee' we must speak on another occasion.

Mr. Manns is said to have been very pleased with the London contingent of the Handel Festival Choir this year at the first rehearsal, which was held last week. The seats for the celebration are selling rapidly.

On Wednesday next, in St. James's Hall, the South Hampstead Orchestra, with Mrs. Julian Marshall as conductor, will give their twelfth annual concert. This year they are performing a Brahms symphony, a suite by Tschaikowsky from the ballet 'Casse-Noisette,' and various other items, both vocal and instrumental.

Madame Dory Burmeister-Petersen will give an orchestral concert at St. James's Hall on Friday next week. The programme will include an overture by Dvořák; a Concerto in D, by R. Burmeister; Andante and Gavotte from the Suite in E, for strings, by Arthur Foote; and the Concerto in E flat, by Liszt. Mr. Henschel will be the conductor.

The "Société des Instruments Anciens"—MM. Diémer, Von Waefelghem, Delsart, and Grillet—will give invitation recitals of ancient French music on the clavecin, viol d'amore, viol da gamba, and vielle, at the Salle Erard, on the afternoons of May 31st and June 4th, assisted by Mrs. Helen Trust.

Mention of many interesting concerts must again be omitted, and the fixtures for next week look equally numerous, but afterwards performances will probably fall off somewhat earlier than usual.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sun.	National Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
Mon.	Mr Carl Armbruster's 'Parsifal' Lecture, 3, King's College.
—	Bohemian String Quartet Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. W. H. Brereton's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Miss Georgina Ganz's Matinée Musicale, 3, No. 12, Belgrave Square.
—	Mlle. Elsa Ruegger's Recital, 3, Salle Erard.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Aida.'
—	Mr. Walter Grace's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Florence Shee's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Richter Concert, 8.30, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Ethel Verrall and Miss Ethel Bonavia's Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
Tues.	Miss Daisy Richardson's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr. Hayden Coffin's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. W. G. Elliot's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Mlle. Kleeberg's Pianoforte Recital, 3.30, Salle Erard.
—	Mlle. Irma Sethe's Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Grainger Kerr's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	M. Emile Sauret's Orchestral Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8.30, 'La Traviata.'
Wed.	Madame Albani's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mrs. Trafford Taunton's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr. G. W. Fergusson's Vocal Recital, 3.30, Salle Erard.
—	South Hampstead Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss N. Vivéash's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
Thurs.	Queen's Hall Choral Society, 3, 'Elijah.'
—	Miss Townshend's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Bohemian String Quartet Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Trinity College Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Postmen's Seaside Home Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Mr. Hermann Heydrik's Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
Fri.	London Academy of Music Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Sichel and Mr. Streatfield's Vocal Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Miss Helena Dacre's Recital, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr. George A. Clinton's Chamber Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	M. E. Jaques Dalcroze's Chamber Concert, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
—	Madame Burmeister-Petersen's Concert, 8.30, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
Sat.	Queen's Hall Symphony Concert, 3.
—	Kneisel Quartet Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Mrs. Owen Lewis's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

Adelphi.—'Secret Service: a Romance of the Southern Confederacy,' in Four Acts. By William Gillette.
Court.—Revival of 'The Hobby Horse.' By A. W. Pinero.

'Secret Service,' by means of which Mr. Frohman has brought before the English public a new American company, is, when not too closely scrutinized, a competent piece of workmanship. It furnishes the London playgoer with a very acceptable entertainment, and it tends happily to familiarize us with the theatre which, though different in some not unimportant respects, is nearest our own. So much in the theme is fresh and original that we close for a while our eyes to the fact that the central figures are treacherous and unworthy, and that a good deal of the business is wholly conventional. We have had, indeed, a raking up in favour of the play of the old views as to the unities, and are told that the mimic action takes up exactly the time during which the audience remains seated in the house. For or against this we have nothing to say, and we point out only to pardon the manner in which, on a wholly futile pretence of seeing his dead brother, which involves a complete confession of guilt, the hero is brought back to the very spot at which he should not be and is captured. Not only is this defensible on the part of the author—it is clever. So realistic are, however, the pictures of life in a beleaguered city that we hesitate to believe in the mitigation of sentence which Southern chivalry extends to the most dangerous enemy it has ever captured. An action such as this, introduced only in order to avoid too gloomy a termination, may fairly be criticized in the words reported to have been used of a famous charge, "C'est magnifique, mais ce n'est pas la guerre." For the rest, the play has good characterization and abounds in thrilling and theatrical situations. One scene of hurried suicide on the part of one of two brothers—both of them spies—is very ingenious and telling. Mr. Gillette is, moreover, not more daring than successful. He keeps the stage some minutes without a word spoken while an old negro extracts the bullets from the muskets by means of which the hero is to be shot—an expedient previously employed in 'Don César de Bazan' and in other plays. He furnishes us, however, with no adequate motive for the exemplary fidelity of the negro in question to one with whom he can have had no previous intimacy. What is most remarkable of all, Mr. Gillette demands and forces our sympathy for treachery, and holds up loyal and constant service to ridicule, if he does not present it as positive villainy. His hero is a colonel in the Federal army who disguises himself in a Confederate uniform, and by means of forged papers succeeds in entering Richmond, then closely invested, and obtaining shelter and protection in the house of a Confederate general absent on active service. His aim is to get employment on the War Department telegraph staff, and, by means of false telegrams, remove the troops from the point at which the Federals seek to force an entry. Against the execution of this scheme two things militate. He has had time on this dangerous mission to fall in love with the daughter of his host and inspire her with an ardent devotion to himself, and he has been detected by an agent of the Confederate secret service. This man, who displays marvellous courage, enterprise, and zeal, is exhibited as a comic villain. When he summons up guards to arrest a man at that moment sending off the false despatches it is he himself who is seized, and, in spite of protest, carried away to prison. The heroine, meanwhile, secures from Jefferson Davis a genuine commission as major for the scheming ruffian, and departs, leaving him to carry out alone and in security a plot which means the ruin of her country, and the probable death of her father and brothers, fighting in the Confederate ranks. That Mr. Gillette contrives to interest us in the proceedings of this precious pair shows how well he judges the pulse of the public. No difficulty whatever seemed to attend this species of dramatic topsyturvydom, and the only fault found with the play was that it was a little obscure. This charge is just. The obscurity is, however, principally due to the incapacity of the audience to believe in a hero who is also a spy, and to accept a heroine who will betray her country for so pitiful a bribe. An excellent company has been brought over, and the parts, one and all, are well played. Mr. Gillette is an admirable actor, and conveyed in the part of the hero an idea of indomitable courage and resolution.

Mr. Hare has reappeared in Mr. Pinero's comedy of 'The Hobby Horse,' and has repeated before an enthusiastic audience his fine performance of Spencer Jermyn. The part of the generous and rather muddle-headed old sportsman and philanthropist is played in the ripest and cheeriest fashion, and carries away the public. Miss May Harvey succeeds Mrs. Kendal as Mrs. Jermyn, and Mr. George Groves reappears as Shaddock. Miss Mona Oram, Miss S. Vaughan, Mr. Gilbert Hare, Mr. F. Kerr, and Mr. F. Gillmore take part in a thoroughly competent performance.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE performance by the Independent Theatre of Ibsen's 'Wild Duck' at the Globe was creditable all round. Mr. Lawrence Irving has done nothing so good as Hialmar Ekdal; the Hedvig of Miss Winifred Fraser retains its former charm; and the Werle of Mr. Outram, the Gina of Miss Kate Phillips, and the Gregers Werle of Mr. Courtenay Thorpe are all excellent. The play exercised its full influence over a large section of the public, who received it with applause and tears. Its message, however, is far from being universally intelligible.

'CHAND D'HABITS' has now been transferred from the close to the opening of Her Majesty's Theatre, and its performance prefaces that of 'The Seats of the Mighty.' The initial difficulties have been surmounted, and the supernatural effects are now successful. In our notice of this play we neglected to state that this was not the first piece in which M. Catulle Mendès has exhibited Pierrot as a murderer. In 'Le Docteur Blanc,' a "mimographe fantastique" in twelve tableaux, produced at the Menus Plaisirs on April 5th, 1893, M. Mendès presented Pierrot as the murderer of his wife.

'A COURT OF HONOUR,' by Messrs. John Lart and Charles Dickinson, produced on Tuesday at the Royalty, is a gloomy and artificial piece, with some strong theatrical situations. It furnished opportunity for some quite admirable acting by Miss Eleanor Calhoun, Mr. Fred Terry, Mr. W. L. Abingdon, and Mr. Charles Fuller. To the merit of the separate performances rather than to the presence of any strong dramatic fibre in the play must be attributed the very favourable reception which it obtained.

FOR her opening performance on Monday afternoon at the Royalty Mlle. Jane May played as Fadette in a two-act adaptation of George Sand's novel. The part is entirely suited to her, and her impersonation abounds with traits tender and imaginative. In a burlesque entitled 'A ce Soir' she parodied cleverly the speech, appearance, and action of Madame Sarah Bernhardt, and sang a few songs of no great merit. On Thursday she appeared in 'Le Monde où l'on s'ennuie.'

THIS evening at the Lyric 'Virginius' gives way to 'Othello,' with Mr. Wilson Barrett as the Moor, and Miss Maud Jeffries as Desdemona.

'COLLIER DE SAPHIRES,' a pantomime play of serious interest by the author and composer of ''Chand d'Habits,' has been secured by Mr. Tree for Her Majesty's Theatre.

MR. AND MRS. KENDAL appeared on Monday at the Grand Theatre, Islington, in Mr. Herman Merivale's drama 'All for Her.'

THE first appearance of Madame Sarah Bernhardt will take place at the Adelphi on June 21st in the revised version of Musset's 'Lorenzaccio.'

THE production of Mr. Grundy's new play at the Haymarket will, it is anticipated, take place on June 5th.

THE appearance in London this year of Daly's company will be confined to the Grand Theatre at Islington.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—S. G.—J. & H. C.—J. G. H.—H. H. L.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

PEN AND PENCIL IN PARLIAMENT.

By HARRY FURNISS.

Profusely Illustrated by the Author. Crown 4to. cloth, 5s.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

PUNCH says:—"Ouida's latest novel, 'The Massarenes,' is from every point of view excellent."

TRUTH says:—"So interesting that in spite of its exceptional length will seem to most readers tantalizingly short."

The ST. JAMES'S GAZETTE says:—"'The Massarenes' is a capital story.....One of the best things she has done.....Will be extremely popular at the libraries."

"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."
National Observer.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

A Tale of the Australian Bush. By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

The SCOTSMAN says:—"Captain Midnight is an Australian Captain Moonlight, and in 'The Track of Midnight' Mr. Firth Scott tells a capital story of as remarkable a band of bushrangers as ever plagued the early settlers of our great southern colonies."

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.'

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

HIGHLAND COUSINS. By WILLIAM BLACK. Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON

The Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain.

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics.....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

"A great biography, and one to be read by all men."
Spectator.

VOLUME I. NOW READY, AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

THE ROYAL NAVY

A History from the Earliest Times to the Present.

By WM. LAIRD CLOWES,
Fellow of King's College, London.

Assisted by Sir C. R. MARKHAM, K.C.B. P.R.G.S.; Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.; Mr. H. W. WILSON, &c.

5 vols. with numerous Illustrations, royal 8vo. cloth extra, 25s. each, net.

The First Volume of the History brings the narrative to the reign of Queen Elizabeth.

"He has produced an indispensable and standard work."
Standard.

"This initial instalment of a new history of the Royal Navy is worthy of its magnificent subject."—Daily Telegraph.

HOW to GROW BEGONIAS.

By G. A. FARINI, F.R.H.S., Author of 'Through the Kalahari Desert.' With numerous Diagrams. Post 8vo. boards, 2s.; cloth, 2s. 6d.

TALES from CANTERBURY

CATHEDRAL, told to Children. By Mrs. FREWEN LORD, Author of 'Tales from Westminster Abbey,' &c. With Plan and View of the Cathedral. Crown 8vo. boards, 1s.

SIXTIETH YEAR OF ISSUE.

UNDER THE EXPRESS SANCTION OF HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.

LOW'S HANDBOOK to the CHARITIES of LONDON. Edition 1897. Edited by H. R. DUMVILLE, B.A. Containing particulars of nearly 1,200 Metropolitan Institutions, Revised according to the latest Reports. Paper, 1s.; cloth, 1s. 6d.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

8vo. 18s.

THE ANNUAL REGISTER:

A Review of Public Events at Home and Abroad for the Year 1896.

 Volumes of the ANNUAL REGISTER for the Years 1863–1895 can still be had, 18s. each.*

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

LECTURES IN THE LYCEUM;

Or, Aristotle's Ethics for English Readers.

Edited by ST. GEORGE STOCK.

Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

CROMWELL'S PLACE IN HISTORY.

Founded on Six Lectures delivered at Oxford.

By SAMUEL RAWSON GARDINER, D.C.L.,
Ford's Lecturer, 1896.

Crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

THE WILL TO BELIEVE,

And other Essays in Popular Philosophy.

By WILLIAM JAMES, LL.D.,
Professor of Psychology in Harvard University.

Contents:—The Will to Believe—Is Life Worth Living?—The Sentiment of Rationality—Reflex Action and Theism—The Dilemma of Determinism—The Moral Philosopher and the Moral Life—Great Men and their Environment—The Importance of Individuals—On Some Hegelisms—What Psychical Research has Accomplished—Index.

Fcap. 8vo. 5s.

THE PROCESSION OF THE FLOWERS.

By THOMAS WENTWORTH HIGGINSON.

With Photogravure Frontispiece and an Index of Plants and Animals mentioned.

[On Monday next.

Contents:—1. The Procession of the Flowers. 2. April Days. 3. Water-lilies. 4. My Outdoor Life. 5. The Life of Birds. 6. A Moonglade.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

SKETCHES IN LAVENDER:

Blue and Green.

A Collection of Short Stories.

By JEROME K. JEROME.

Crown 8vo. 5s.

THE WISDOM OF FOOLS.

Short Stories.

By MARGARET DELAND,
Author of 'John Ward, Preacher.'

[On Monday next.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

JUNE, 1897. Price 6d.

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.' (Continued.)

The U. E. LOYALISTS. By Clive Phillipps-Wolley.

The LOVE LETTERS of a LADY of QUALITY. Selected and Arranged by Miss Gabrielle Festing.

"The 'ORSE." By Mary L. Pendered.

A DREAM of ELK. By Fred Whishaw.

An ATTACK on a TELEGRAPH STATION in PERSIA. By Basil Williams.

LOVE and SPORT. By Mabel Murray Hickson.

AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

GEORGE ALLEN.

MODERN PAINTERS.

By JOHN RUSKIN.

A NEW SMALL EDITION.

Uniform in size (crown 8vo.) with the Small Editions of 'Sesame and Lilies,' &c.

With all the Woodcuts, the One Lithograph, and the Eighty-nine Full-Page Illustrations reproduced in Photogravure and Half-tone.

The TEXT is that of the Complete Edition of 1889, and includes the 'Epilogue' written by Mr. Ruskin in 1888.

The Binding will be of cloth with a special design.

The dates of publication are as follows:—

Volumes I. and II., simultaneously, early in JULY, price 11*s.*
Volume III., with 17 Full-Page Plates, SEPTEMBER, price 8*s.*
Volume IV., with 35 Full-Page Plates, OCTOBER, price 9*s.*
Volume V., with 38 Full-Page Plates, NOVEMBER, price 9*s.*

The INDEX VOLUME, containing a complete Index, Collation, and Bibliography of the different Editions of the Work, will be issued simultaneously with Volume V., price 5*s.*

NEXT WEEK.

BOERS AND LITTLE ENGLANDERS:

THE STORY OF THE CONVENTIONS.

By JOHN PROCTER, Barrister-at-Law.

Contents: Introduction—Origin of the South African Republic—The Annexation of the Transvaal—The Events Prior to the Convention (1881)—The Convention—The Surrender of 1884—Boer Treatment of the Kaffir—The Hollander—The Situation To-day—Appendices. Index.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 250 pages, 3*s.* 6*d.*

EVENTS OF THE REIGN, 1837–1897.

By FREDERICK RYLAND.

Giving, in tabulated form, a complete Account for each year under the following Heads:—HOME POLITICS—FOREIGN and COLONIAL POLITICS—LITERATURE—The ARTS and SPORT—INVENTIONS and DISCOVERIES—MISCELLANEOUS. INDEX.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 180 pages, 3*s.* 6*d.*

HANDY GUIDE-BOOK TO ENGLAND AND WALES,

FOR THE USE OF VISITORS TO THIS COUNTRY.

By EDWARD SMITH.

With numerous Tours and Itineraries, the whole in Alphabetical Order.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 400 pages, 7*s.* 6*d.*

JUST COMPLETED.

SPENSER'S FAERIE QUEENE.

With 98 Full-Page Designs, 133 Headings and Tailpieces by WALTER CRANE, and other Illustrations.

A Limited Edition on Arnold hand-made paper, large post 4to. in Nineteen Parts, 10*s.* 6*d.* net, each.

The Text (which has been Collated from Four Editions, including that of 1590) is Edited by

THOMAS J. WISE.

BOOKS I. to V., cloth, 1*l.* 14*s.* each, net. BOOK VI. (containing Part XIX.), cloth, 2*l.* 4*s.* 6*d.*

PART XIX., completing the Work, now ready, contains the Editor's Notes; seven Full-Page Designs, two Canto Headings, and one Tailpiece, by Walter Crane; together with Facsimiles of the Title-pages and other designs from the Editions of 1590, 1596, 1609, and 1611.

BY JOHN RUSKIN.

NEW EDITIONS.

LOVE'S MEINIE: Lectures on Greek and English Birds: The Robin—the Swallow—the Dabchicks. A New Edition (uniform with the Small Edition of 'Sesame and Lilies,' &c.), with Preface, Appendix, and Index. Crown 8vo. cloth, 250 pp. 5*s.* net.

FORS CLAVIGERA: Letters to the Labourers and Workmen of Great Britain. A New Edition, with all the Illustrations. 4 vols. each with an Index, crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.* each, net; roan gilt, 8*s.* 6*d.* each, net.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s 6d. each net; roan, gilt edges, 10s. each, net; half-parchment, gilt top, 9s. each, net, with all the Plates.

The SEVEN LAMPS of ARCHI- TECTURE. The 14 Plates for this Edition have been specially prepared from the larger work. Sixth Edition.

ARATRA PENTELICI. Seven Lectures on the Elements of Sculpture. With 1 Engraving on Steel and 20 Autotype Plates.

VAL D'ARNO. Ten Lectures on the Art of the Thirteenth Century in Pisa and Florence. With 1 Steel Engraving and 12 Autotype Plates.

ARIADNE FLORENTINA. Six Lectures on Wood and Metal Engraving, and Appendix. With 4 Full-Page Facsimiles from Holbein's 'Dance of Death,' and 12 Autotype Plates.

LECTURES on ARCHITECTURE and PAINTING. Delivered at Edinburgh in November, 1853. With 15 Full-Page Illustrations by the Author.

The HARBOURS of ENGLAND. With the 12 Illustrations made expressly for the Work by the late J. M. W. Turner, reproduced in Photogravure; and an Introduction by T. J. WISE.

UNTO this LAST: Four Essays on the First Principles of Political Economy. Tenth Edition. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* net; roan, gilt edges, 4*s.* net.

FRONDES AGRESTES: Readings in 'Modern Painters.' Fifteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* net; roan, gilt edges, 4*s.* net.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. each net; roan, gilt edges, 7s. 6d. each, net; half-parchment, gilt top, 6s. 6d. each, net.

SESAME and LILIES. A Small Complete Edition, containing the Three Lectures, 'King's Treasures,' 'Queen's Gardens,' and 'The Mystery of Life.' With long Preface and Index.

MUNERA PULVERIS. Six Essays on the Elements of Political Economy.

The EAGLE'S NEST. Ten Lectures on the Relation of Natural Science to Art.

TIME and TIDE, by WEARE and TYNE. Twenty-five Letters to a Working Man of Sunderland on the Laws of Work.

The CROWN of WILD OLIVE. Four Essays on Work, Traffic, War, and the Future of England. With Articles on the Economy of the Kings of Prussia. Ninth Edition.

QUEEN of the AIR. A Study of the Greek Myths of Cloud and Storm. Sixth Edition.

The TWO PATHS. Lectures on Art and its Application to Decoration and Manufacture, delivered 1858-9. With New Preface and added Note. Third Edition.

A JOY for EVER (and its Price in the Market): the Substance of Two Lectures on the Political Economy of Art. With New Preface and added Articles. Third Edition.

LECTURES on ART. Delivered at Oxford in 1870. Revised by the Author, with New Preface. Seventh Edition.

The ETHICS of the DUST. Ten Lectures to Little Housewives on the Elements of Crystallisation. Crown 8vo. Eighth Edition.

The ELEMENTS of DRAWING. In Three Letters to Beginners. Illustrated.

The STONES of VENICE. Selections for the Use of Travellers. 2 vols. cloth, 5*s.* each. Sixth Edition.

RUSKIN HOUSE, 156, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, W.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

Vol. I. just published, 3s. 6d.

The PROSE WORKS of SWIFT. A New Edition, with an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. In about 10 vols. 3s. 6d. each.

Vol. I. A TALE of a TUB, The BATTLE of the BOOKS, and other early works. Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT. With Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. With Portrait and Facsimile. [Bohn's Standard Library.

Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 25s. net.

MEMORIALS of CHRISTIE'S. By W. ROBERTS, Author of 'The Book-Hunter in London,' 'Printers' Marks,' &c. With 75 Collotype and other Illustrations, and a full Index.

4 vols. pott 4to. 36s. net.

VASARI'S LIVES. A Selection of Seventy of the Lives. Edited and Annotated in the light of Modern Discoveries by E. H. and E. W. BLASHFIELD and A. A. HOPKINS. Illustrated.

This Edition, issued in conjunction with Messrs. Scribner of New York, is entirely distinct from the new complete translation of Vasari's Lives which Mr. Horatio Brown is preparing for Messrs. Bell to issue later. It is an ample selection of seventy of the most important and popular biographies, supplemented with much information of value both to the student and traveller. Vasari has long stood in need of systematic editing in English, and it is believed that the present edition will be received as favourably here as it was on its first appearance in America. The translation used is that of Mrs. Foster. [Next week.

EDITION LIMITED to 350 COPIES. Crown 8vo. 5s. net.
PRINTED ON VAN GELDER PAPER AT THE CHISWICK PRESS.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY of the WORKS of WILLIAM MORRIS. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

Contents: — Original Poems — Romances — Art — Social Writings—Translations—Contributions to Periodicals, Magazines, &c., (1) Poems, (2) Prose, (3) Translations, (4) Contributions to "Justice," (5) Contributions to "Commonweal" —Mr. William Morris: Articles on the Man and his Work—Mr. Morris's Writings: Reviews and Criticisms upon—Publications of the Kelmscott Press—Addenda—Chronological Summary. [Next week.

Pott 4to. 15s. net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Index and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15s. net, each.

"In bulk, in paper and type, and in general thoroughness it strikes us equally favourably."—Academy.

"A veritable mine of valuable information for the lover of books, and as the items are obtained at first hand, the figures are trustworthy—in fact they may be called official." Publishers' Circular.

Pott 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The SILVER CROSS. A Selection of Poems for the Sick and Suffering. Edited by HELEN DOUGLAS, with an Introduction by the LORD BISHOP OF ST ANDREWS. Pott 8vo. printed in red and black on antique paper at the Chiswick Press.

"The selection has been judiciously made, and to many the volume will be welcome and useful."—Glasgow Herald.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3s. 6d.

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

"The book has been considered the standard work on the subject for many years."—Glasgow Herald.

Post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY. By General Sir EVELYN WOOD, V.C. G.C.B. G.C.M.G., Quartermaster-General. With 20 Maps.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

Edited by GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.
Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1s. 6d. each.

CANTERBURY. Second Edition. By HARTLEY WITHERS. 142 pages. 36 Illustrations.

SALISBURY. By Gleeson White. 125 pages. 35 Illustrations.

CHESTER. By Charles Hiatt. 110 pages. 25 Illustrations.

ROCHESTER. By G. H. Palmer, B.A. 142 pages. 38 Illustrations.

OXFORD. By the Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A., Christchurch. 144 pages. 34 Illustrations.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York-street, Covent-garden.

FROM WALTER SCOTT'S LIST.

UNIFORM WITH PREVIOUS YEARS' ISSUES
READY IN A FEW DAYS. Crown 8vo. paper boards 2s. 6d.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1896. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction on 'The Need for an Endowed Theatre' and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

Copies may still be had, uniform with the above, of

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1895. With an Epistle Dedicatory to Mr Robert W. Lowe. By WILLIAM ARCHER.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1894. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction by GEORGE BERNARD SHAW and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1895. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With a Prefatory Letter by ARTHUR W. PINERO and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

IBSEN.

EDITIONS OF SEPARATE PLAYS.
Crown 8vo. paper covers, 1s. each.

The WILD DUCK [1884]. Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

The LADY from the SEA [1888]. Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

GHOSTS [1881]. Translated by William ARCHER.

ROSMERSHOLM [1886]. Translated by CHARLES ARCHER.

An ENEMY of the PEOPLE [1882]. Translated by Mrs. ELEANOR MARX AVELING.

Paper covers, 2s.

A DOLL'S HOUSE. With a number of Photographic Illustrations.

COUNT TOLSTOY AS THE DELINEATOR OF WAR.
HIS LONGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT WORK.
ISSUE IN TWO DOUBLE VOLUMES, 7s. the Set.

WAR and PEACE. By Count Tolstoy. Contains 1600 pages, printed in very clear type.

THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

Edited by HAVELOCK ELLIS.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each; some volumes at 6s.
NEW EDITIONS.
Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. with numerous Illustrations. SECOND EDITION.

MAN and WOMAN. A Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters. By HAVELOCK ELLIS.

"Mr. Havelock Ellis belongs, in some measure, to the continental school of anthropologists, but while equally methodical in the collection of facts, he is far more cautious in the invention of theories, and he has the further distinction of being not only able to think, but able to write. His book is a sane and impartial consideration, from a psychological and anthropological point of view, of a subject which is certainly of primary interest."—Athenæum.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.
FOURTH EDITION, COMPLETELY REVISED.

HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll.

The new edition of this work—which is the most authoritative on the subject—has been revised throughout, and a considerable quantity of new and important matter added.

Previous Volumes of the Series.

EVOLUTION of SEX. By Prof. Geddes and Thomson.
ELECTRICITY in MODERN LIFE. By G. W. de Tunzelmann.
The ORIGIN of the ARYANS. By Dr. Isaac Taylor.
PHYSIOGNOMY and EXPRESSION. By P. Mantegazza.
EVOLUTION and DISEASE. By J. B. Sutton.
The VILLAGE COMMUNITY. By G. L. Gomme.
The CRIMINAL. By Havelock Ellis.
SANITY and INSANITY. By Dr. C. Mercier.
HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll (Berlin).
MANUAL TRAINING. By Dr. Woodward (St. Louis).
SCIENCE of FAIRY TALES. By E. S. Hartland.
PRIMITIVE FOLK. By Elie Reclus.
EVOLUTION of MARRIAGE. By Prof. Ch. Letourneau.
BACTERIA and their PRODUCTS. By Dr. Woodhead.
EDUCATION and HEREDITY. By J. M. Guyau.
The MAN of GENIUS. By Prof. Lombroso.
The GRAMMAR of SCIENCE. By Prof. Pearson.
PROPERTY: its Origin. By Prof. Ch. Letourneau.
VOLCANOES, PAST and PRESENT. By Prof. Hull.
PUBLIC HEALTH PROBLEMS. By Dr. J. F. Sykes.
MODERN METEOROLOGY. By Frank Waldo, Ph.D.
The GERM-PLASM. By Prof. Weismann. 6s.
The INDUSTRIES of ANIMALS. By F. Houssay.
MAN and WOMAN. By Havelock Ellis. 6s.
MODERN CAPITALISM. By John A. Hobson, M.A.
THOUGHT-TRANSFERENCE. By F. Podmore, M.A.
COMPARATIVE PSYCHOLOGY. By Prof. C. L. Morgan. 6s.
The ORIGINS of INVENTION. By O. T. Mason.
The GROWTH of the BRAIN. By Henry Herbert Donaldson.
EVOLUTION in ART. By Prof. A. C. Haddon. 6s.

THE TWO CYCLING BOOKS OF THE SEASON.

Fcap 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2s. 6d.

LADY CYCLING. By Miss F. J. ERSKINE.

Deals with the Health and Social Aspects of Cycling, Cycling Dress for Town and Country, with Makes of Machines, Correct and Incorrect Methods of Riding, with Riding in Towns, Touring, Hill-Climbing, with Bicycle Gymkhanas, with the Care of Machine, &c.

"Her (Miss Erskine's) remarks and suggestions are lucid, direct, thoroughly sensible, and invariably worthy of serious consideration." Daily Mail.

Fcap 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2s. 6d.

ALL-ROUND CYCLING. By Sir B. W. RICHARDSON, G. LACY HILLIER, EVELYN EVERETT GREEN, J. RIVERS VINE, JOHN WATSON, F.L.S., and P. A. THOMAS, B.A.

London:
WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED, Paternoster-square.

NOW READY.

THE JUNE ISSUE
OF THE

PALL MALL MAGAZINE.

Price ONE SHILLING net.

The JUNE NUMBER contains—

The Head of a Girl. After Greuze. FRONTISPIECE
Sleep. CLIVE PHILLIPPS-WOLLEY
Illustrated by Abbey Altson
Lyme, Cheshire. LADY NEWTON
Illustrated by the Author
To Phœbe in Tears. LEONARD GREENWOOD
A Love Story. A. J. DAWSON
With Illustrations by E. F. Skinner
Kaffir Music. NORA and WM. C. SCULLY
With Specimens of War Songs, &c.
June. WILL B. ROBINSON
Sport of the Month: Golf. Hon. I. W. LEGH, M.P.
With Full-Page Illustrations by George Roller
Victor. JAMES MEW
Orwell Hall. E. A. NEWTON
With Illustrations by Arthur J. Buckland.
"With Pipe and Tabor." G. B. STUART
With Illustrations by Frank Craig.
British Army Types.—I. A Subaltern Grenadier Guards
Drawn from Life by Arthur Jule Goodman
The Story of 1812. Parts VI.-VIII. (Conclusion.) Colonel H. D. HUTCHINSON
(Director of Military Education in India)
St. Ives. Chaps. 22-24. The late ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON
With Illustrations by G. Grenville Manton
Women of Shakespeare: I. Viola. ARTHUR GOODMAN
Hyde Park in Days Gone By. A. W. JARVIS
Illustrated from Old Prints.
Ah, Memory! LEOLINE GRIFFITH
Pearls. FRANCIS PREVOST
With Illustrations by J. Williamson
A Secret. Monologue. PHŒBE HART
Facially illustrated by Marshal P. Wilder
A Promise. HILDA NEWMAN
With Illustrations by A. Ludovici.
A Student's Duel in Germany. ROBERT LLOYD
From a Cornish Window. A. T. QUILLER COUCH
With Thumbnail Sketches by Mark Zangwill.
The Humours of the Month.

EXQUISITELY ILLUSTRATED BY THE LEADING ARTISTS.

Offices:
18, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON, W.C.

JUST PUBLISHED, PRICE TWO SHILLINGS.
Demy 8vo. stiff boards.

IS THE EARTH A PLANET?
A STUDY IN PHYSICAL AND MATHEMATICAL GEOGRAPHY.

By C. ROBERTSON, M.D. M.R.S.G.S.

Edinburgh: St. Giles' Printing Co. London: Elliot Stock, Paternoster row.

Just published, post 8vo. 6s.

A DRAMA in DREGS: a Life Study. By the Hon. CORALIE GLYN, Author of 'A Woman of To-morrow.'
London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co.

FOURTEENTH MEMOIR of the EGYPT EXPLORATION FUND.—DEIR EL BAHARI. Part II. By ÉDOUARD NAVILLE. Plates XXV.-LV., with Description (Two Coloured), royal folio, price 30s.

Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited; Bernard Quaritch, Asher & Co., and Office of Egypt Exploration Fund, 37, Great Russell-street, W.C.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose." Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON'S LIST OF GUIDE-BOOKS AND ATLASES FOR TOURISTS.

The TOURIST'S ATLAS GUIDE to the CONTINENT of EUROPE. 168 pages of Maps, consisting of 42 coloured and 65 uncoloured Plates, with Notes. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 3s. 6d.; French morocco, gilt edges, price 6s.

The ART GUIDE to EUROPE. By NANCY BELL (N. D'ANVERS), Authoress of 'The Elementary History of Art.' In attractive cloth cover, with numerous Illustrations. Rounded corners, small 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION NOW READY.

The TEMPLE CHURCH and CHAPEL of ST. ANN. By HENRY T. BAYLIS, Q.C. An Historical Record and Guide. With 17 Illustrations. Stiff boards, canvas back, price 2s. 6d. net.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

RUSTIC WALKING ROUTES in the LONDON VICINITY. Contains Field-path Maps of the District, Geographical Description, numerous Charts, with ample Directions and a copious Index. Price, in strong leatherette cover, 1s.

1. FIRST SERIES—WEST to NORTH DISTRICT.
2. SECOND SERIES—NORTH to EAST DISTRICT.
3. THIRD SERIES—WEST to SOUTH DISTRICT.
4. FOURTH SERIES—EAST to SOUTH DISTRICT.

SPECIALLY SURVEYED ROADS in SCOTLAND. A Handbook for Cyclists, Pedestrians, and Sportsmen. With Maps By G. R. BRAYSHAY, C.C. C.T.C. Strongly bound in cloth, with rounded corners, crown 8vo. price 5s.

FIFTH EDITION.

The TOURIST'S POCKET-BOOK in Eleven European and Three other Languages. By G. F. CHAMBERS, F.R.A.S. Revised and much Enlarged. 18mo. stiff cover, price 1s.

TWENTY-FOURTH EDITION.

A HANDBOOK for EASTBOURNE, SEAFORD, and EAST SUSSEX; including Beachy Head, Pevensey Castle, Hurstmonceaux Castle, and other important Places in the County. By G. F. CHAMBERS, J.P. F.R.A.S. Containing numerous Illustrations. Crown 8vo. stiff cover, price 1s.

PHILIPS' HANDY COUNTY ATLASES.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION,
Showing every Railway Station in England and Wales.

1. PHILIPS' HANDY ATLAS of the COUNTIES of ENGLAND. Including Maps of the County of London, North and South Wales, Channel Islands, The Isle of Man, and Plans on an Enlarged Scale of the Environs of Six Important Towns, with Consulting Index. Crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s. TOURIST EDITION, limp cloth, rounded edges, price 5s.

The Athenæum says: "Is deservedly popular as a travelling companion. The railways are marked with great distinctness. ..... The index defies adverse criticism."

2. HANDY ATLAS of the COUNTIES of WALES. Crown 8vo. neatly bound in cloth, price 2s. 6d. TOURIST EDITION, limp cloth, rounded corners, price 2s. 6d.

3. HANDY ATLAS of the COUNTIES of SCOTLAND. Crown 8vo. neatly bound in cloth, price 3s. 6d. TOURIST EDITION, limp cloth, rounded edges, price 3s. 6d.

4. HANDY ATLAS of the COUNTIES of IRELAND, with Consulting Index. Edited by P. W. JOYCE, LL.D. Crown 8vo. neatly bound in cloth, price 3s. 6d. TOURIST EDITION, limp cloth, rounded corners, 3s. 6d.

Any of the above may be obtained in French morocco, with gilt edges, for 2s. 6d. extra.

Uniform with the Above.

NEW AND REVISED EDITION.

PHILIPS' HANDY-VOLUME ATLAS of LONDON. On a scale of 3 inches to a mile. With Index. 63 Coloured Maps and 2 Plans and 130 Pages of Letterpress. Cloth, price 5s.; French morocco, in box, 7s. 6d.

The Saturday Review says: "It is impossible to speak too handsomely of Messrs. Philips' 'Handy-Volume Atlas of London.'"

TOURIST SEASON, 1897.

The following Lists will be forwarded gratis on application:

1. A SELECTION of the best GUIDES, DICTIONARIES, and PHRASE BOOKS for TRAVELLERS.
2. A CATALOGUE of ROAD, RAILWAY, CANAL, and RIVER MAPS, especially adapted for Cycling, Pedestrian, Boating, and Tourists purposes.

GEORGE PHILIP & SON, 32, Fleet-street, London.
Liverpool:
PHILIP, SON & NEPHEW, 45 51, South Castle-street.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

THE WORK IS AN ATTEMPT TO STEER A COURSE BETWEEN THE LINE TAKEN BY THE DETRACTOR OF IBSEN'S DRAMATIC WORK AND THE IBSEN FANATIC.

IBSEN ON HIS MERITS.

By Sir EDWARD RUSSELL and PERCY CROSS STANDING.

Crown 8vo. 5s. [Ready.

MR. L. F. AUSTIN in SKETCH says:—"Sir Edward Russell's estimate of Ibsen is not idolatrous, but dispassionately appreciative. It is a clear and forcible statement of the views of moderate Ibsenites who cannot be blinded to the faults of this great dramatist."

OUR TRADE IN THE WORLD IN RELATION TO FOREIGN COMPETITION.

WITH STATISTICAL TABLES, &c.

By WILLIAM S. H. GASTRELL, Commercial Attaché to H.M.'s Embassy at Berlin, &c.

Royal 8vo. 6s. [This day.

LYRICS OF LOWLY LIFE.

By PAUL LAURENCE DUNBAR.

With an Introduction by W. D. HOWELLS.

And Photogravure Portrait of Author.

Small crown 8vo. 5s. [This day.

MR. W. D. HOWELLS, the American novelist, says:—"Paul Dunbar's brilliant and unique achievement is to have studied the American negro objectively, and to have represented him with humour, with sympathy, and with truthfulness."

THE SULTAN AND HIS SUBJECTS.

By RICHARD DAVEY.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 21s.

The SPECTATOR says:—"We have seldom taken up a book of a like weight and importance which we have found it so difficult to lay down."

The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"It deserves not only to be read, but to find a permanent place upon the bookshelf."

The SATURDAY REVIEW says:—"Mr. Davey has compiled one of the best books ever written on Turkey."

SEVENTH THOUSAND.

CECIL RHODES:

A Biography and an Appreciation.

By IMPERIALIST and Dr. JAMESON.

Large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

CAPTAIN KID'S MILLIONS. By ALAN OSCAR. [Ready.

SYBIL FOSTER'S LOVE STORY. By LADY WATKIN WILLIAMS. [Ready.

The GIFT of LIFE. By James Cassidy. [This day.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVEL.

A TALE of TWO TUNNELS. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. [Next week.

NEW EDITIONS of SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

The STORY of ALINE. By Lady RIDLEY. Fourth Edition.

The WAY of MARRIAGE. By Violet HUNT. Third Edition.

NEW VOLUMES OF THE

GADSHILL EDITION OF CHARLES DICKENS'S WORKS.

THE LIFE AND ADVENTURES OF MARTIN CHUZZLEWIT.

With 40 Steel Plates and an Introduction and Notes by ANDREW LANG.

2 vols. large crown 8vo. price 6s. each.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

JARROLD & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

A SHORT POPULAR HISTORY OF

CRETE.

By J. H. FREESE, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

With Introduction by P. W. CLAYDEN.

Maps of Crete and Seat of War.

MR. GLADSTONE writes:—"I hope this book may tend to enhance the public interest in the condition of Crete, which at present threatens to bring serious disgrace upon this country."

The Daily Chronicle says:—"A useful piece of work....A singularly clear account of the origin of the present crisis in the island."

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom Under the Snow. By MAURUS JOKAI. SIXTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"In its panoramic width of outlook, its inexhaustible fertility of invention and barbaric splendour of colouring, Maurus Jókai's great novel challenges comparison with Tolstoi's 'War and Peace.' There is a succession of brilliant tableaux. To read this remarkable book is like witnessing a magnificent Oriental pageant. It is of enthralling interest, and takes rank with the great novels of the century."—Spectator.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. By MAURUS JOKAI. SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5s

"Will enthral all English lovers of romance, and gratify the natural curiosity now general concerning the work of the Hungarian novelist." Saturday Review.

LADY JEAN'S SON. By Sarah Tytler SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"The glimpses of Edinburgh society while the Northern Athens was still the seat of fashion are lifelike and clever. 'Lady Jean's Son' is from first to last a delightful story."—Pall Mall Gazette

The WINDS of MARCH. By George KNIGHT, Author of 'Dust in the Balance,' 'Sapphira of the Stage,' 'Circle of the Earth.' Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

The REJUVENATION of MISS SEMAPHORE: a Farcical Novel. By HAL GODFREY. Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, 3s. 6d.

BLIND LARRY: Irish Idylls. By LEWIS MACNAMARA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

London:
JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C.
Of all Booksellers and at the Libraries.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading. Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10s. 6d. English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
NOT SOLD ELSEWHERE.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS.

"DR. CONAN DOYLE'S FASCINATING STORY."—DAILY NEWS.

Just published, with 12 Full-Page Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6s.

UNCLE BERNAC: a Memory of the Empire.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

AUTHOR OF 'THE WHITE COMPANY,' 'RODNEY STONE,' &c.

"'Uncle Bernac' is for a truth Dr. Doyle's Napoleon. Viewed as a picture of the little man in the grey coat, it must take rank before anything he has written. The fascination of it is extraordinary. It reaches everywhere a high literary level."—Daily Chronicle.

"'Uncle Bernac' has the vitality, the power, and the true human touch which we have learned to expect from this master of his craft."—Daily Mail.

"A fine healthy romance."—Scotsman.

Cheap Editions of Standard Works.

Handy Volumes, printed in clear, bold type, on good paper.

Each work complete in One Volume.

Fcap. 8vo. picture boards, 2s. each; or limp red cloth, 2s. 6d. each.

By HENRY SETON MERRIMAN.

WITH EDGED TOOLS. | FROM ONE GENERATION to ANOTHER.
The SLAVE of the LAMP.

By the Author of 'MOLLY BAWN.'

MOLLY BAWN. | PHYLLIS.
MRS GEOFFREY. | FORTIA.
AIRY FAIRY LILIAN. | ROSSMOYNE.
DORIS. | BEAUTY'S DAUGHTERS.
GREEN PLEASURE and GREY GRIEF.
FAITH and UNFAITH | LADY BRANKSMERE.
LOYS, LORD BERRESFORD, and other Tales.
UNDERCURRENTS.

By GEORGE GISSING.

DEMOS: a Story of Socialist Life in England.
A LIFE'S MORNING. | THYRZA.
The NETHER WORLD. | NEW GRUB STREET.

By the Author of 'MEHALAH.'

MEHALAH: a Story of the Salt Marshes.
COURT ROYAL. | The GAVEROCKS.
JOHN HERRING. | RICHARD CABLE.

By W. E. NORRIS.

HEAPS of MONEY. | MATRIMONY.
MADEMOISELLE DE MERSAC.
NO NEW THING. | ADRIAN VIDAL.

By HAMILTON AIDÉ.

IN THAT STATE of LIFE. | PENRUDDOCKE.
MORALS and MYSTERIES.
MR. and MRS. FAULCONBRIDGE.

By the Author of 'JOHN HALIFAX, GENTLEMAN.'

ROMANTIC TALES. | DOMESTIC STORIES.

By HOLME LEE.

AGAINST WIND and TIDE.
SYLVAN HOLT'S DAUGHTER.
KATHIE BRANDE. | WARP and WOOF.
ANNIS WARLEIGH'S FORTUNES.
The WORTLEBANK DIARY.
BASIL GODFREY'S CAPRICE.
MAUDE TALBOT. | COUNTRY STORIES.
KATHERINE'S TRIAL. | MR. WYNYARD'S WARD.
The BEAUTIFUL MISS BARRINGTON.
BEN MILNER'S WOOING.

Also a large number of Volumes uniform with the above. List on application.

Now ready, with Portraits, demy 8vo. 12s. 6d.

ISABELLA the CATHOLIC, QUEEN of SPAIN: her Life, Reign, and Times, 1451-1504. By M. LE BARON DE NERVO. Translated from the Original French by Lieut.-Colonel TEMPLE-WEST (Retired).

Immediately, with Illustrations from Sketches by the Author, crown 8vo. 6s. net.

THACKERAY'S HAUNTS and HOMES. By Eyre CROWE, A.R.A.
NOTE.—The Edition of the work for Sale in this country is limited to 260 copies.

BENGAL DURING THE GREAT FAMINE OF 1770, DESCRIBED BY EYE-WITNESSES.

Shortly, NEW, REVISED and CHEAPER EDITION (the Seventh), crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.

The ANNALS of RURAL BENGAL. From Official Records and the Archives of Native Families. By Sir W. W. HUNTER, K.C.S.I. C.I.E. LL.D., &c.

On May 26, with Portraits and a Preface by Sir EDWARD B. MALET, G.C.B. G.C.M.G., &c., demy 8vo. 16s.

GABRIELE VON BULOW, Daughter of Wilhelm von Humboldt. A Memoir compiled from the Family Papers of Wilhelm von Humboldt and his Children, 1791-1887. Translated by CLARA NORDLINGER.

The REVIVAL of LEARNING. By the late John ADDINGTON SYMONDS. Large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d.
 This is Volume II. of a NEW and CHEAPER EDITION of "The RENAISSANCE in ITALY," in 7 vols. large crown 8vo. 7s. 6d. each. The remaining volumes will be published at intervals.

NEW VOLUMES OF SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S POPULAR 2s. 6d. SERIES.

CROWN 8vo. LIMP RED CLOTH, 2s. 6d. EACH.

The MARTYRED FOOL. By D. Christie Murray, Author of 'Rainbow Gold,' 'Joseph's Coat,' &c.

GRANIA: the Story of an Island. By the Hon. Emily LAWLESS, Author of 'Hurrish,' 'With Essex in Ireland,' &c.

The DISAPPEARANCE of GEORGE DRIFFELL. By JAMES PAYN, Author of 'By Proxy,' &c.

SOME MEMORIES of the QUEEN'S CHILDHOOD and MARRIAGE. By LADY JANE ELLICE (one of the surviving Bridesmaids to the Queen).

SEE THE JUNE NUMBER OF

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

READY NEXT TUESDAY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Which also contains:—

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (June).
The BATTLE of SLUIS: an Anniversary Study. By W. Laird Clowes.
SIAM and the KING'S VISIT. By Percy Cross Standing.
PARIS in JUNE, 1871. By A. J. Butler.
ST. PAUL'S. By Arthur Patchett Martin.
The PARSON'S REVELS. By Mrs. Stephen Batson.
DUELS of ALL NATIONS. IV. The Duels of Italy, Spain, and Russia. By James Pemberton Grund.
The MODERN PENTATHLUM. By Horace G. Hutchinson.
"MISSING": a Story of the South Pacific. By John Arthur Barry.
The BATTLE of SPINGES. By William Westall.
TALES from the DRAMATISTS. I. The Witch of Edmonton.
FREEMASONRY and the ROMAN CHURCH. By Fred. J. W. Crowe.
QUIS PRO DOMINA? By Owen Seaman.
PAGES from a PRIVATE DIARY.
IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chaps. 16-18. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

Cheap Editions of Standard Works.

Handy Volumes, printed in clear, bold type, on good paper.

Each Work complete in One Volume.

Fcap. 8vo. limp green cloth, or cloth boards, gilt top, 2s. 6d. each.

By the SISTERS BRONTË.

JANE EYRE. By CHARLOTTE BRONTË.
SHIRLEY. By CHARLOTTE BRONTË.
WUTHERING HEIGHTS. By EMILY BRONTË. AGNES GREY. By ANNE BRONTË. With Preface and Memoir of the Sisters by CHARLOTTE BRONTË.
The PROFESSOR. By CHARLOTTE BRONTË. To which are added the Poems of Charlotte, Emily, and Anne Brontë.
VILLETTE. By CHARLOTTE BRONTË.
The TENANT of WILDFELL HALL. By ANNE BRONTË.

By Mrs. GASKELL.

WIVES and DAUGHTERS.
NORTH and SOUTH.
SYLVIA'S LOVERS.
CRANFORD, and other Tales.
MARY BARTON, and other Tales.
RUTH, and other Tales.
LIZZIE LEIGH, and other Tales.
LIFE of CHARLOTTE BRONTË.

By LEIGH HUNT.

IMAGINATION and FANCY; or, Selections from the English Poets.
The TOWN: its Memorable Characters and Events. Illustrated.
AUTOBIOGRAPHY of LEIGH HUNT.
WIT and HUMOUR. Selected from the English Poets.
MEN, WOMEN, and BOOKS: a Selection of Sketches, Essays, and Critical Memoirs.
A JAR of HONEY from MOUNT HYBLA; or, Sweets from Sicily in Particular, and Pastoral Poetry in General.
TABLE TALK. To which are added Imaginary Conversations of Pope and Swift.

Also a large number of Volumes uniform with the above. List on application.

NEW VOLUME BY MRS. OLIPHANT.

With a Preface entitled 'ON THE EBB TIDE.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

The WAYS of LIFE. Two Stories:—1. Mr. Sandford. 2. The WONDERFUL HISTORY of MR. ROBERT DALYELL. By Mrs. OLIPHANT.

NEW NOVEL BY ALEXANDER INNES SHAND.

The LADY GRANGE. By Alexander Innes Shand, Author of 'Kilcarra: a Novel,' 'Half a Century; or, Changes in Men and Manners.' Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Taking the book as a whole, it is doubtful if anything better of the kind has been done since Robert Louis Stevenson laid down his pen."—Scotsman.

POPULAR NOVELS.—Each Work complete in One Volume, crown 8vo. 6s.

RODNEY STONE. With 8 Full-Page Illustrations. By A. CONAN DOYLE, Author of 'The White Company,' &c.

The WHITE COMPANY. By A. Conan Doyle. Seventeenth Edition.

CLEG KELLY, Arab of the City. By S. R. Crockett, Author of 'The Raiders,' &c. Thirty-second Thousand.

The SOWERS. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'With Edged Tools,' &c. Fourteenth Edition.

SIR GEORGE TRESSADY. By Mrs. Humphry Ward. Third Edition.

MARCELLA. By Mrs. Humphry Ward. Sixteenth Edition.

The YOUNG CLANROY: a Romance of the '45. By the Rev. COSMO GORDON LANG.

CAPTAIN CASTLE: a Tale of the China Seas. By CARLTON DAWE, Author of 'Kakemonos,' &c. With a Frontispiece.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 22, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3631. SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—The LAST MEETING of the SESSION will be held at 32, Sackville-street, Piccadilly, on JUNE 2, at 8 P.M. Antiquities will be exhibited, and B NATHAN, Esq., will exhibit a Collection of rare Miniatures, &c. The following Paper will be read:—'Notes on North Lancashire,' by T. CANN HUGHES, Esq., M.A.
GEO. PATRICK, A.R.I.B.A., Honorary Secretary.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6.
SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

THE LIBER STUDIORUM of J. M. W. TURNER, R.A.,
And NEW MEZZOTINTS by FRANK SHORT, to complete the Book, ON VIEW at ROBERT DUNTHORNE'S, the REMBRANDT GALLERY, 5, Vigo-street, W. Admission, including Catalogue, 1s.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

THE SECOND INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY CONFERENCE, 1897.
President—
The Right Hon. Sir JOHN LUBBOCK, Bart. M.P. F.R.S.
Hon. Treasurer—
HENRY R. TEDDER, Esq.
Hon. Secretary—
J. Y. W. MACALISTER, Esq.,
20, Hanover-square, W.

The Conference will be held (by the kind permission of the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor and Corporation) in the COUNCIL CHAMBER, GUILDHALL, LONDON, on JULY 13, 14, 15, and 16, 1897, and will be attended by the representatives of the principal libraries throughout the world. Papers will be read on appropriate subjects, and some time will be devoted to open Discussions. All persons interested in the extension of the library movement or in the management of libraries are cordially invited to join the Conference. The Lord Mayor has invited the members of the Conference to a Conversazione in the Mansion House on the evening of July 13.
An Exhibition of Library Appliances will be an important feature of the Conference. Intending exhibitors should communicate with the Hon. Secretary of the Exhibition Committee, THOMAS MASON, Esq., 115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C. The Subscription, One Guinea, entitles Members to receive the Transactions and other Publications gratis, and to attend all meetings and social gatherings. Applications for membership should be sent at once to the HON. SECRETARY.
N.B.—The Programme of Papers is now complete, and no further offers can be considered.

A JOURNALIST of experience, University man, with capital at his command, wishes for a LITERARY PARTNERSHIP in an established COUNTRY NEWSPAPER.—Apply EDITOR, care of Messrs. C. Mitchell & Co., 12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

MATHEMATICS.—COACHING REQUIRED by Certificated Student of Girton College (Honours, Mathematical Tripos, Part I. and Part II.). Holiday engagement or otherwise.—Apply, by letter, E. A., 207, King's-road, Chelsea.

THE COUNCIL of the INSTITUTE of CHARTERED ACCOUNTANTS in ENGLAND and WALES are prepared to receive applications for the Office of LIBRARIAN.—Particulars can be obtained from the SECRETARY, Institute of Chartered Accountants in England and Wales, Moorgate-place, London, E.C.

MALVERN COLLEGE.—The HEAD MASTERSHIP of this College has become VACANT by the resignation of the Rev. A. St. John Gray in consequence of ill health, and the Council will proceed at the earliest date possible to elect a successor. Candidates must be Graduates of Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin University, and in Priest's orders at the time of election or within three months after appointment.—Applications, accompanied by testimonials, not exceeding six in number, must be sent in on or before Friday, June 11, to the SECRETARY of the College, who will in the mean time supply any further information that may be desired.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL, CANADA.
CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.
The Governors of McGill University are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the newly founded PROFESSORSHIP of ZOOLOGY. Salary $2,500 per annum.—Candidates from Great Britain are requested to forward applications, with any testimonials and references they may desire to submit, on or before June 15, addressed PRINCIPAL, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria-street, Westminster.

ARTIST, residing in a village in South Yorkshire, has VACANCY for TWO or THREE RESIDENT PUPILS during the Summer.—Address TRYTHALL ROWE, Wickersley, near Rotherham.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination.—DRAUGHTSMAN in the HYDROGRAPHICAL DEPARTMENT in the ADMIRALTY (17s. 6d.), JULY 7th. Expertness in Hydrographical Chart Drawing essential. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

ELOCUTION, VOICE TRAINING, &c.—Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., LL.B., Lecturer in Public Reading and Speaking in King's College, London. PRIVATE PUPILS at 24, Warwick-road, Earl's Court, S.W.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

LONDON SCHOOL of MEDICINE for WOMEN, in Association with the Royal Free Hospital, Gray's Inn-road.—For Prospectus, Scholarships, &c., apply to THE SECRETARY, at the School, 30, Handel-street, Brunswick-square, W.C.

THE FROEBEL EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTE, Talgarth-road, West Kensington, London, W.
Chairman of the Committee—Mr. W. MATHER.
Treasurer—Mr. C. G. MONTEFIORE.
Secretary—Mr. ARTHUR G. SYMONDS, M.A.
TRAINING COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS.
Principal—Madame MICHAELIS.
Who is assisted by a Staff of competent Trainers and Teachers.
KINDERGARTEN AND SCHOOL.
Head Mistress—Miss LAWRENCE.
Further particulars may be obtained on application to the PRINCIPAL.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON, for WOMEN, York-place, Baker-street, W.
Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.
The EASTER TERM, 1897, BEGAN on THURSDAY, April 29.
The HALF-TERM BEGINS on MONDAY, May 31.
ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.
ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48*l.*, and ONE CLIFT SCHOLARSHIP in ARTS, value Thirty Guineas, each tenable for Three Years, will be awarded on the result of the Examination to be held at the College on JUNE 24 and 25.
Names to be sent in to the Principal not later than June 15.
LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

ENGINEERING AND CHEMISTRY.
CITY and GUILDS of LONDON INSTITUTE.
SESSION 1897–1898
The Courses of Instruction at the Institute's CENTRAL TECHNICAL COLLEGE (Exhibition-road) are for Students not under Sixteen years of age; those at the Institute's TECHNICAL COLLEGE, FINSBURY, are of an Intermediate Grade for Students not under Fourteen years of age. The ENTRANCE EXAMINATIONS to both Colleges are held in SEPTEMBER, and the SESSIONS COMMENCE in OCTOBER. Particulars of the Entrance Examinations, Scholarships, Fees, and Courses of Study may be obtained from the respective Colleges, or from the Head Office of the Institute, Gresham College, Basinghall-street, E.C.
CITY AND GUILDS CENTRAL TECHNICAL COLLEGE, Exhibition-road, S.W.
A College for Higher Technical Instruction for Students not under Sixteen preparing to become Civil, Mechanical, or Electrical Engineers, Chemical and other Manufacturers, and Teachers. Fees for a full Diploma Course, 25*l.* per annum. Professors:—
Civil and Mechanical Engineering—W. C. UNWIN, F.R.S. M.Inst.C.E.
Physics and Electrical Engineering—W. E. AYRTON, F.R.S. Past Pres. Inst.E.E.
Chemistry—H. E. ARMSTRONG, Ph.D. LL.D. F.R.S.
Mechanics and Mathematics—O. HENRICI, Ph.D. LL.D. F.R.S.
CITY AND GUILDS TECHNICAL COLLEGE, FINSBURY, Leonard-street, City-road, E.C.
Provides Courses of Intermediate Instruction for Day Students not under Fourteen years of age preparing to enter Engineering and Chemical Industries. Fees, 15*l.* per annum. Professors:—
Physics and Electrical Engineering—S. P. THOMPSON, D.Sc. F.R.S.
Mechanical Engineering and Mathematics—W. E. DALBY, M.A. B.Sc. M.I.M.E.
Chemistry—R. MELDOLA, F.R.S. F.I.C.
JOHN WATNEY, Hon. Secretary.
City and Guilds of London Institute,
Gresham College, Basinghall-street, E.C.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

A FIRM of PUBLISHERS can receive a GENTLEMAN as PARTNER who will invest about 1,000*l.* Salary 150*l.* per annum, besides good return on Capital. Particulars can be given at interview only and in confidence.—Address PARTNER, Box 1,364, Sell's Advertising Offices, London.

COPYRIGHT FOR SALE.—The COPYRIGHT of a PENNY WEEKLY MAGAZINE of HIGH-CLASS LITERATURE. The Paper has been in existence for six months and satisfactory reasons will be given for the desired sale.—Correspondence invited by EDITOR, care of John Haddon & Co., Salisbury-square, E.C.

TRADE JOURNAL FOR SALE, established some years, capable of great development in the hands of the right person. Price 1,250*l.* Terms could be arranged.—JOURNAL, Mather & Crowther, Limited, Advertising Offices, New Bridge-street, E.C.

NEWSPAPER and PRINTING BUSINESS TO SELL, within twenty miles of London. Main line of railway. Large and growing population. Nine years' lease. Turnover 2,500*l.* Profits 700*l.* per annum and increasing. About 2,250*l.* required.—Apply to C. MITCHELL & Co., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, 12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

WANTED, ORIGINAL, pure, healthy STORIES of from 5,000 to 20,000 words each.—Send MSS., stating price, to STORIES, 12, St. Bride-street, E.C.

WANTED, good PLOT for a BOY'S STORY.—State full particulars, price, &c., to PLOT, care of Advertising Offices, 10, High Holborn, W.C.

TWO GUINEAS EACH FORTNIGHT for a SHORT ESSAY.—For particulars write THE EDITOR, the Librarian, 152, Fleet-street, E.C.

MR. EDWARD WHYMPER will accept engagements to LECTURE on MOUNTAINEERING and MOUNTAIN TRAVEL during the Season 1897-8.—For full particulars apply to THE LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, London.

TO LECTURE SOCIETIES.
MR. R. WALLACE, M.P. (Edin.), is now making his Lecturing arrangements for the Season 1897–98. Subjects:—'Cant,' 'House of Commons,' 'Mrs. Grundy,' and 'Shams.' Details on application.—9, Edith-villas, London, W.

MR. WHITWORTH WALLIS has a FEW DATES OPEN, Season 1897–8, for his LECTURES on 'The English Pre-Raphaelites: Holman Hunt, Millais, and Rossetti.' Illustrated with Reproductions of the Artists' Principal Pictures by special permission of the owners of the copyrights.
All communications to the LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, W.C.

MISS MARY KINGSLEY will LECTURE on her TRAVELS in WEST AFRICA at the ST. MARTIN'S TOWN HALL (Charing Cross), in aid of the Building Fund of the Working Men's College, on the Afternoon of JUNE 10, at 3.30.
SIR JOHN LUBBOCK will preside.
Reserved Seats, 5*s.*; Unreserved, 2*s.* 6*d.*, from Tree's, St. James's Hall; the Secretary of the College; or at the Hall.

TYPE-WRITING UNDERTAKEN PRIVATELY.—Translations—French, German, Italian—from 9*d.* per 100 words. Copying of all kinds. Moderate charges.—MISS FANCOURT, 51, Thornbill-road, Barnsbury, N.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1*s.* per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

SCHOLARLY TYPE-WRITING.—Foreign and Classical MSS. and others requiring special care, undertaken by a Graduate. English at usual rates.—TYPOGRAPHIC AGENCY, Dan, Beeches-road, West Bromwich.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process. Authors' references.—MISS SIKES, West Kensington Type writing Agency, 13, Wolverton-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free. Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

9, HARE-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.
MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

TO NEWSPAPER PROPRIETORS.—MATHERS & MERRY [illegible] are prepared to TENDER at lowest prices for the PRINTING of established NEWSPAPERS and MAGAZINES.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, [illegible] 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MANUSCRIPTS in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every Facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W. Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

Now ready,
CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY.
DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.
Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE (100 pp.) just published, 3d. post free.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books and Manuscripts.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 86) of RECENT PURCHASES now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

OLD MEZZOTINT PORTRAITS.—FIRST PART of a CATALOGUE of ENGRAVERS, A to H, including Engravings by Beckett, Blooteling, Browne, Clint, Corbutt, Cousins, Dawe, Dickinson, Dunkarton, Earlom, Faber, Frye, Green, Hodges, Haid, and many others, after celebrated Painters, with prices, post free of JAMES RIMELL & SON, 91, Oxford-street, London, W.
Old Engravings and Books Bought.

AMERICAN
COLONIAL TRACTS.
MONTHLY.

Number Two, JUNE, 1897.

A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COLONY OF GEORGIA, UNDER GENERAL JAMES OGLETHORPE, FEBRUARY 1, 1733.

Price 25 Cents. $3.00 a Year.

PUBLISHED BY
GEORGE P. HUMPHREY,
ROCHESTER, N.Y.,
U.S.A.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.
71, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.
An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.
This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

FAMOUS MASTERS IN FOREIGN GALLERIES,
Including the Masterpieces of the Louvre, Uffizi, Pitti, Dresden, Berlin, and other Collections. The same size and price as the above.
FRAMES specially designed and executed in oak and walnut.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to
THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,
74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,
16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.
(nearly opposite the National Gallery).
Inspection invited.
REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*
[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.
FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST
ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.
COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.
LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.
N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.
Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.
Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS
NOW OFFERED AT
GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST
(100 PAGES)
Sent gratis and post free to any address.
The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.
Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.
Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,
30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;
241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;
48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at
BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

WHAT D'YE LACK?
Ask Miss MILLARD, of Teddington, Middlesex, for any Book ever issued since the advent of printing (however rare or plentiful) up to the very last work published; also for any curio or object of interest under the canopy of heaven, for she prides herself on being enabled, nine times out of ten, to supply these wants. She has the largest assemblage of Miscellaneous Bijouterie in the world, and is always a ready, willing, and liberal buyer for prompt cash.

THE "SUTHERLAND" BINDING.
A NEW COLOUR PROCESS (PATENTED).
Beautiful Tooling in any Colour. Colours absolutely permanent.
Mr BAGGULEY will be glad to supply particulars as to where the specimens referred to in the Athenæum of May 22 (p. 679) can be seen in Town.
High-street, Newcastle-under-Lyme.

DIAMOND JUBILEE POSTCARDS can be obtained from all Stationers or from A. E. MALLANDAIN 51, Cheapside, London, E.C. Twelve, post free, 1*s.* These Cards show two excellent Portraits of Her Majesty, having been reproduced by special licence.

FOR DISPOSAL, a large and increasing BUSINESS in an important PROVINCIAL TOWN, consisting of a very large CIRCULATING LIBRARY, BOOKSELLING, STATIONERY, and INSURANCE AGENCY, also a very old-established House and Estate Agency, together forming a profitable and unique Business. Two or Three Gentlemen having some knowledge of the chief branches (Library and House Agency) would find in this first-class Business pleasant and profitable occupation. This Business has changed hands but once during sixty-five years. The present owner is relinquishing on account of ill health.—For further particulars apply to Messrs H. & C. COLLINS, Solicitors, 172, Friar-street, Reading, and Messrs PEACOCK & GODDARD, Solicitors, 3, South-square, Gray's Inn, London.

FIFTEEN INDIAN PICTURES (Paintings), 2,000 years old (thought to be), of the HINDU MYTHOLOGY. Of great value. FOR SALE by offer.—Can be seen at MR PRINCE'S Office, 37, Cursitor-street, Chancery-lane.

FOR SALE, a fine COLLECTION of PRINTS, made during the last thirty years, including Woodcuts, Etchings by the most famous Masters, and Engravings, from Sixteenth to Eighteenth Century, also a select Library of Illustrated Books of same period.
For particulars address care of 33, Wandle-road, Upper Tooting.

THE BALUSTRADE of the BRIDGE which was blown up by the French on their retreat after the great battle of Leipzig, IS TO BE SOLD. The Balustrade is of beautiful workmanship, perfectly preserved, and would be an ornament for a garden or park bridge. Genuineness proved by official document.
Offers solicited by the CAROLA APOTHEKE, Leipzig.

FOR SALE, Chippendale's Furniture, 1755, large folio, 10*l.*—Museum of Painting and Sculpture, 18[illegible], rare Set, 10 vols. 5*l.*—Rogers's Poems, and Italy, 1830, 1834, full morocco, presentation copy, proofs before letters, rare, 8*l.*—Bewick's Æsop and Select Fables, 1818, 1820, Largest Paper, full calf, 14*s.*—Campbell's Poems, 1837, full calf, proof engravings by Turner, 3*l.* 3*s.*—Pickering's Walton and Cotton's Angler, imperial 8vo, half-morocco, 1836, 6*l.*—LEX, Chronicle Office, High-street, Doncaster.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD.
(The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5s. per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 6, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

Valuable Modern Books in choice condition, the Library of a Gentleman.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 1, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, Valuable MODERN BOOKS in choice condition, the Library of a GENTLEMAN, including Brownings' (Robert and E. B.) Works, Large Paper—Hepworth Dixon's Works, 22 vols.—Emerson's Works, 11 vols. Large Paper—Guizot's Works, 32 vols.—Hook's Lives of the Archbishops, 12 vols.—Collier's Reprints—Collier's Shakespeare, 8 vols., privately printed—Gazette des Beaux Arts, 30 vols.—La Basilica di S. Marco in Venezia—Works illustrated by Gustave Doré, in handsome bindings—Dugdale's Monasticon, 8 vols.—La Collection Spitzer—Andrew Lang's Publications, chiefly on Large Paper or the Special Issues—G. C. Lewis's Works, 16 vols.—J. S. Mill's Works, 16 vols.—William Morris's Works—J. H. Newman's Works, 16 vols.—Niebuhr's Works, 14 vols.—Oxford English Classics, 36 vols.—The Waverley Novels, Abbotsford and Border Editions, Large Paper—Shakespeare Society's Publications, 18 vols—Smith's Catalogue Raisonné, 9 vols.—Speeches by Eminent British Statesmen, 77 vols.—Notes and Queries, complete set, with Indexes—Ruskin's Modern Painters, Stones of Venice, &c.—Winkles's English and French Cathedrals, Large Paper—Sir Joshua Reynolds's Engraved Works—Vanity Fair Album, 26 vols., &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings and Water-Colour Drawings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 4, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, WATER-COLOUR and other DRAWINGS, and OIL PAINTINGS, comprising Theatrical Portraits—Sporting Prints—Engravings after J. M. W. Turner from the 'Liber Studiorum,' &c.—Engravings by Old Masters, &c.—Water-Colour Drawings, Framed and in the Portfolio—Oil Paintings of Sporting Subjects, Mail Coaches, &c., by Pollard, Sartorius, and others.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Antiquities and Curiosities of the late Rev. JAMES BECK, M.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the Extensive COLLECTION of ANTIQUITIES and CURIOSITIES, the Property of the late Rev. JAMES BECK, M.A. F.S.A., of Bilderston Rectory, Suffolk.

May be viewed on Saturday, June 5, and Tuesday, June 8. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings and Engravings, the Property of the late GEORGE BEWLEY, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS and ETCHINGS of the late GEORGE BEWLEY, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A. comprising Examples of Albert Dürer, Martin Schongauer, Lucas van Leyden, &c.—Etchings by Rembrandt and other Dutch Masters—fine Foreign Portraits—Line Engravings by Wille, Woollett, &c.

May be viewed on Saturday, June 5, and Tuesday, June 8. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of the Works of George Cruikshank, the Property of H. W. BRUTON, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of the WORKS of GEORGE CRUIKSHANK, comprising a most extensive Series of Books illustrated by him, and many handsomely bound by celebrated Binders—Proofs before Letters of all his important Works, many being in unique state—Original Drawings, including those intended to illustrate his Autobiography—an almost complete Collection of his Caricatures and Broadsides, forming a Satirical History of the Early Part of the Present Century, &c., the Property of H. W. BRUTON, Esq., of Gloucester.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

 Fifty Copies of this Catalogue have been printed on Large and Fine Paper, only twenty-five of which are for sale, price Five Shillings each

Drawings by Phiz illustrating Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop' and 'Barnaby Rudge.'

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COMPLETE SERIES of ORIGINAL WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS to CHARLES DICKENS'S 'OLD CURIOSITY SHOP' and 'BARNABY RUDGE,' by HABLOT K. BROWNE ('PHIZ'), together with a fine series of original Drawings and Sketches by George Cruikshank, T. Rowlandson, J. Leech, C. Keene, and R. Caldecott, &c., the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising, amongst the Manuscripts, Illuminated Horæ and other Devotional Works and Oriental MSS., Holograph MSS. of Algernon Charles Swinburne. The Books comprise rare and valuable First Editions of Modern Authors—fine Illustrated French Books—Collection of Engravings by Israel Silvestre—a fine Second Folio Shakespeare—Postage Stamps—Books in fine Bindings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had

The Original Manuscript of Nelson's Autobiography.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House No 13, Wellington-street, Strand W.C. on TUESDAY, June 15 the interesting and valuable MANUSCRIPT MEMOIR of LORD NELSON'S EARLY LIFE, WRITTEN ENTIRELY IN HIS OWN HANDWRITING, also a number of most important Letters connected with his Naval Career and a volume of Twenty-three Letters addressed to his friend Admiral Sir Thos. Trowbridge in the Year 1801

May be viewed two days prior Catalogues may be had

Manuscripts of Sir Walter Scott's Novels.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, the ORIGINAL AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS of Sir WALTER SCOTT'S 'Lady of the Lake,' 'Tales of a Grandfather,' 'Essay on Popular and Ballad Poetry,' 'Halidon Hill,' 'Doom of Devorgoil,' 'Old Mortality,' &c.; also ROBERT BURNS'S EDINBURGH COMMONPLACE BOOK, 1787, a magnificent relic of the Poet.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

A Portion of the Library of H. SPENCER SMITH, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 17 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. SPENCER SMITH, Esq., comprising scarce Works relating to America—a large Collection of Books on Angling—Works illustrated by Bewick, Cruikshank, Caldecott, Leech, Rowlandson, and others—First Editions of the Writings of Sir E. Arnold, A. Austin, R. D. Blackmore, Miss Burney, S. T. Coleridge, Defoe, Charles Dickens, B. Disraeli, H. Fielding, Oliver Goldsmith, Sir A. Helps, Dr. Johnson, T. Hood, Leigh Hunt, Charles Lamb, S. Richardson, T. Smollett, R. L. Stevenson, W. M. Thackeray, &c.—Works relating to Kent, Poetry, and Theology—Brown's Religio Medici, First Edition—Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, First Edition, 1621—Goldsmith's The Traveller and The Deserted Village, First Editions—Lamb's John Woodvil, a Tragedy, First Edition—Quarles's Enchiridion, First Edition—Extra Illustrated Works—Modern Illustrated Publications.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Collection of Book-Plates of Colonel ACTON HAVELOCK.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the Valuable COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES (EX-LIBRIS) of Colonel ACTON HAVELOCK.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE ASHBURNHAM LIBRARY OF PRINTED BOOKS.
FIRST PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 25, and Seven Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the FIRST PORTION of the Magnificent LIBRARY of excessively Valuable and Rare PRINTED BOOKS, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of ASHBURNHAM. This Portion comprises the Letters A—J only, and includes a Large Number of Books, both English and Foreign, of the highest degree of rarity and interest, amongst which may be mentioned the First Ten Editions of Dame Juliana Barnes's Book of Hawking, Hunting, &c., from 1486 to 1595—Ten Books printed by William Caxton—Thirty-eight Books printed upon Vellum, including the First Latin Aristotle (beautifully decorated), the Gutenburg and 1462 Bibles, and the Durandus of 1459—a splendid Series of the Rarest Bibles in various Languages, but chiefly English—Rare Editions of Ariosto, Boccaccio, and Dante—the Earliest Editions of Chaucer to the End of the Sixteenth Century—the Chronicles of St. Albans, Arnold, Caxton, Froissart, and Fabyan—Fine and Rare Special Breviaries—First Editions of the Writings of Ascham, Lord Bacon, John Bule, Hugh Broughton, Cocker, Cranmer, Defoe, Gawin, Douglas, Drayton, Fielding, Fletcher, John Foxe, Fuller, &c.—some excessively Rare Books by the First Printers in the City of London, St. Albans, Ipswich, Oxford, Cambridge, and other Localites—a Fine Series of Bible Illustrations, and Books with Engravings and Woodcuts—some Rare Books on America—and other Remarkable Items too numerous to particularize. Many of the Books have additional interest and value attached to them from the fact of their being either Presentation Copies from the Authors or from having belonged formerly to Celebrated Families, and some are in Splendid Bindings done for Royal, Noble, and Famous Personages.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-Crown each. Copies, illustrated with Nine Facsimiles in Gold and Colours of some of the remarkable Bindings, may be had, price 5s. each.

WEDNESDAY NEXT.

The Select Collections of British and Exotic Lepidoptera and Coleoptera formed by C. BROAD, Esq.; also the Cabinets in which they are contained—Heads and Horns of Animals—Minerals — Birds' Eggs and Skins — and other Natural History Specimens.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on WEDNESDAY NEXT, June 2, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 12 till 4 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

400 Lots of Photographic, Electrical, and other Apparatus, Scientific Instruments, and Miscellaneous Property, from Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, June 4, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had

N.B.—Goods intended for the above Sales, which take place every Friday throughout the year, can be received at any time.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 31, and Following Day, the PENDER COLLECTION of PICTURES and WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS.

On TUESDAY, June 1, OLD ENGLISH SILVER, the Property of C. F. MASSINGBERD-MUNDY, Esq.; beautiful JEWELS, formerly the Property of Lady ANNE ASHBURTON, and other Jewels and Lace.

On WEDNESDAY, June 2, ENGRAVINGS of the late Sir JOHN PENDER, G.C.M.G. K.C.M.G.

On THURSDAY, June 3, COLLECTION of OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN, and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and Old French Furniture, Decorative Objects, and Tapestry from other Sources.

On THURSDAY, June 3, the CELLARS of WINES of the late Sir PEREGRINE P. F. ACLAND, Bart., of Fairfield, Bridgwater, and of the late W. G. CARTWRIGHT, Esq., of Fairwater, Cardiff, and other fine Wines.

On FRIDAY, June 4, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS from Private Collections and different Sources

On THURSDAY, June 10, PORCELAIN, the Property of C. F. MASSINGBERD-MUNDY, Esq., and Porcelain and Decorative Objects from various Sources

On FRIDAY, June 11, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART of R. M. BURRELL, Esq.

On SATURDAY, June 12, ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES, formerly in the Collection of the late Sir W. W. BURRELL, Bart., and PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, the Property of LORD WATERPARK

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

To Noblemen, Gentlemen, Club Proprietors, Syndicates, and the Trade generally.—Without Reserve.—Nearly 350,000 choice Havana Cigars (in bond and duty paid), being the whole of the remaining Stock of the well-known Brand "Das Cabanas," shipped by L. Carvayal & Co., of Havana, now in the hands of the London Agents, who are giving up the business owing to the unsatisfactory state of affairs in Cuba.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, as above, on MONDAY, May 31, at 2 o'clock precisely, the whole of the above valuable Stock of choice HAVANA CIGARS, arranged in twenty-one different sizes and assorted colours.

Samples may be viewed and obtained (on payment of 6d. each, returnable to buyers) and Catalogues had.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

230 dozens of Claret and 350 dozens of Scotch Whiskey.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will include in their SALE, as above, CLARET and SCOTCH WHISKEY, being 350 dozens of Château Talbot Claret and 350 dozens of Strathnavar Scotch Whiskey, seven years old, duty paid.

May be sampled and Catalogues had.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

1,000 dozens of Champagne, Henri Abelé, specially selected for the Jubilee Year by Messrs. Hub, Hurter & Son.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER, will SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on TUESDAY, June 1, at 3 o'clock precisely, 1,000 dozens of choice CHAMPAGNE, Henri Abelé, 1889, Grand Cremant Naturel, extra dry, specially selected by Messrs. Hub, Hurter & Son, the well-known wine merchants, Army and Navy Mansions, Victoria-street.

Sample bottles may be had on payment, or may be tasted the day prior and time of Sale.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

A Collection of Engravings, the Property of a Gentleman, removed from Piccadilly, and several small Collections of fine Mezzotints, &c., from various Private Sources.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER are instructed to SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on TUESDAY and THURSDAY, June 1 and 3, at 1 o'clock precisely each day, the above Collection of Coloured and other ENGRAVINGS, including many rare and fine impressions engraved by Turner, Woollett, Finden, Laurie, Dayes, W. Say, J. Watson, Jones, Marchi, J. R. Smith, Ryland, W. Ward, Tomkins, Schiavonetti, &c., after Bartolozzi, Cipriani, Bunbury, Sir J. Reynolds, G. Morland, Hamilton, R.A., G. Romney, Rosa Bonheur, Wheatley, Rowlandson, Haig, Meissonier, Rembrandt, Munkaczy, Macbeth, David Law, Pollard, A. Kauffman, Sir E. Landseer, Sir J. E. Millais, Turner, R.A., Northcote, Hoppner, Sir T. Lawrence, &c.

May be viewed the day prior, and Catalogues had.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

An interesting Collection of Theatrical Portraits, formed by the owner for many years past, including fine Mezzotints, many printed in Colours, the Property of a Lady, removed from the West of England.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER will SELL, at their Rooms, as above, on THURSDAY, June 3, at 1 o'clock precisely, the above interesting Collection of nearly 150 THEATRICAL PORTRAITS, including Mrs. Siddons, Mrs. Oldfield, Madame Sontag, Mr. and Mrs. Garrick, Mrs. Robinson, Mrs. Montague, Miss Booth, Mrs. Billington, Peg Woffington, Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. Yates, Mrs. Abingdon, Lady Hamilton, Miss Farren, Miss Duncan, and other Celebrities.

May be viewed three days prior, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Property.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C. on MONDAY, May 31, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS PROPERTY, comprising a small Collection of Gold, Silver, and Copper Coins, including George IV. Two-Pound Piece, 1823—George II. Five-Guinea Piece, 1729—Victoria Gothic Crown, 1847, &c.; also Silver—Sheffield and other Plate—Antique China—a Collection of Ivory Carvings—Arms—Bronzes—Miniatures—Jewellery, &c.—Norwegian Curios—and Antique Furniture.

On view the Saturday prior. Catalogues on application.

Engravings and Paintings.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 4, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ANCIENT and MODERN ENGRAVINGS, both framed and in the Portfolio, comprising Fancy Subjects, after Kauffman, Cipriani, Wheatley, Morland, Bigg, &c.—scarce Mezzotint and other Portraits—Topographical and Historical Subjects—Modern Prints after Dendy, Sadler, Butler, Yeend King, Waller, Alma Tadema, &c.—also a few Water-Colour Drawings, and a large quantity of Oil Paintings.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues on application.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles, many with Dates and Engravers' Names.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

The Liturgical Library of a well-known Collector, lately deceased.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LITURGICAL LIBRARY of a well-known COLLECTOR, lately deceased, comprising Sarum and other Missals, Breviaries, Horæ MSS. on vellum, some with Miniatures—Early Printed Works, many with Woodcuts—Books in old morocco bindings, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Library of the late Rev. ROBT. CHARLES JENKINS, Honorary Canon of Canterbury Cathedral.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 11, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Canon R. C. JENKINS, comprising Theological and Miscellaneous Books, both English and Foreign

Catalogues on application

Choice Books from the Library of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, choice BOOKS from the LIBRARY of a well-known COLLECTOR, comprising numerous Works illustrated by Cruikshank and Rowlandson, many with Coloured Plates—First Editions of Modern Authors—valuable French Books of the Last Century, with Plates by Eisen, Moreau, &c.—Theatrical Biographies, extra illustrated with Portraits and Views, the majority of which are in fine bindings by Zachnsdorf, F. Bedford, and Riviere

Catalogues on application

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON beg to announce that their special SALE of GUARANTEED VIOLINS will take place on THURSDAY, June 17. The Catalogue is now in course of preparation.

38, Great Coram-street, Russell-square. 20,000 vols. of Books, fine Oil Painting by B. R. Haydon, Two Billiard Tables, Mahogany and other Bookcases, and the usual Fittings.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, on MONDAY May 31 and Three following Days (Wednesday excepted), at 1 o'clock precisely, on the Premises of the Russell Institution, 38, Great Coram-street, Russell-square, W.C., the above valuable and extensive LIBRARY; also a fine Oil Painting by B. R. Haydon, the Mahogany and other Bookcases, Two capital Billiard Tables by Thurston, Statues and Busts, Board Room Tables, Card and Occasional Tables, and the usual Fittings.

May be viewed on the Premises where Catalogues may be had; also of the Auctioneers, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.
No. 980. JUNE, 1897. 2s. 6d.

RETRIEVERS, and HOW TO BREAK THEM. By Lieut.-Col. Henry Smith, C.B.
"A GENTLEMAN of FRANCE": the REAL MONSIEUR D'ARTAGNAN. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P.
DARIEL: a Romance of Surrey. By R. D. Blackmore.
MARLBOROUGH'S UNCONSCIOUS TREASON. By Andrew Lang.
A DOUBTFUL ACQUISITION. By C. Grant Robertson.
ELRICK WALKS. By E. V. B.
JOHN CABOT: an Anniversary Story.
An INDIAN ROMANCE: a Lesson of the Famine.
A CLOSE-TIME for TROUT in SCOTLAND. By Sir James Forrest, Bart., of Coniston.
HARCOURT and CANNING.
23rd JUNE.

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.
Contents for JUNE

VICTORIA, PRINCESS and QUEEN. By Emily Crawford.
The GERMANS and their KAISER. By Germanicus.
OUR FINANCIAL RELATIONS with IRELAND: a Reply to Mr. Courtney. By Thomas Lough, M.P.
EATEN with HONOUR. By W. M. Flinders Petrie.
OXFORD and JOWETT. By A. M. Fairbairn, D.D.
TWENTY-FOUR MILLIONS on the NAVY. By Sir A. B. Forwood, M.P.
OUTDOOR LIFE in HOLLAND. By C. J. Cornish.
DARWINISM and DESIGN. By Professor F. C. S. Schiller.
The KING of SIAM. By B. A. Smith.
CYPRUS, ACTUAL and POSSIBLE: a Study in the Eastern Question. By Patrick Geddes.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
No. 244. JUNE, 1897.

BRITISH MONARCHY and MODERN DEMOCRACY. By W. S. Lilly.
INDIA UNDER QUEEN VICTORIA. By Sir Alfred Lyall, K.C.B., G.C.I.E.
The FORTHCOMING NAVAL REVIEW. By H. W. Wilson, Author of 'Ironclads in Action.'
NELSON. By Lieut.-Col. Sir George Sydenham Clarke, K.C.M.G.
The NEW ASTRONOMY: a Personal Retrospect. By William Huggins.
ROSES of JERICHO: a Day in Provincial France. By Rowland E. Prothero.
The LIMITS of FRENCH ARMAMENT. By Lieut.-Col. Adye.
The SIGNIFICANCE of the SIAMESE VISIT. By Percy Cross Standing.
WOMAN'S PLACE in the WORLD of LETTERS. By Mrs. J. R. Green.
The ISLAND of SOCOTRA. By the late J. Theodore Bent.
DO FOREIGN ANNEXATIONS INJURE BRITISH TRADE? By Henry Birchenough, Vice-President of the Macclesfield Chamber of Commerce.
CHANTILLY and the DUC D'AUMALE. By the Count de Calonne.
The NEW IRISH POLICY. By the Right Hon. Lord Monteagle.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

THE AMERICAN HISTORICAL REVIEW.
Vol. II. No. 3, APRIL, 1897. Issued Quarterly. 3s. 6d. net.
Contents.

POLITICAL SCIENCE and HISTORY. By John W. Burgess.—MARSIGLIO of PADUA and WILLIAM of OCKAM. I. By James Sullivan.—DIPLOMATIC MISSIONS to the COURT of CHINA: the Kotow Question. I. By William W. Rockhill.—The AUTHORSHIP of the FEDERALIST. By Edward G. Bourne.—REPRESENTATION in the NATIONAL CONGRESS from the SECEDING STATES. II. By Frederick W. Moore.—DOCUMENTS.—REVIEWS of BOOKS.—NOTES and NEWS.

Macmillan & Co., Limited, London.

Price 2d.; by post, 2½d. Yearly Subscription (including Supplements), 2s. 8d.

THE LITERARY GUIDE: a Rationalist Review.
Devoted mainly to Books and Publications which deal with Religion, Philosophy, Science, and Ethics from a Rationalist standpoint.
No. 12, JUNE, 1897, contains:—

DEAN FARRAR'S NEW BIBLE.
MILL and the ETHICS of NATURALISM.
PROFESSOR KARL PEARSON'S STUDIES in EVOLUTION.
CHARITABLE DARWINISM.
The GENIUS of the WORLD: Dr. J. B. Crozier's New Book.
The FREETHOUGHT VALHALLA.
LIFE AMONG the ARYANS.
PSYCHOLOGICAL CONCEPTIONS and ETHICAL PROBLEMS.
A CHRISTIAN MANUAL.
RANDOM JOTTINGS.
OUR LIBRARY SHELVES: Mr. John Morley's 'On Compromise.'
SIGNS and WARNINGS: gleaned from the Religious Press.
RATIONALISM in the MAGAZINES.

London: Watts & Co., 17, Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

FIREPROOF BUILDINGS; The Question of Novelty in Patents, Architecture at the Royal Academy (III.), Central Building, Stockholm Exhibition; Plumbing and Sanitary Work, &c. See the BUILDER of May 29: post free, 7½d.

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW BOOKS AND NEW EDITIONS.

The NATURALIST in AUSTRALIA. By W. SAVILLE KENT, F.L.S., F.Z.S., &c., Past President Royal Society of Queensland, Author of 'The Great Barrier Reef of Australia,' &c. Illustrated by 48 Full-Page Collotypes, 7 Coloured Plates by Keulemans and other Artists, and numerous smaller Illustrations in the Text. Royal quarto, 3*l.* 3*s.* net. [In a few days.

The SONG BOOK of BETHIA HARDACRE. By ELLA FULLER MAITLAND, Author of 'Pages from the Day Book of Bethia Hardacre.' Large crown 8vo. uniform with the Author's other books, 6*s.* [Next week.

LYRICS of LOWLY LIFE. By Paul LAURENCE DUNBAR. With an Introduction by W. D. HOWELLS, and Photogravure Portrait of the Author. Small crown 8vo. 5*s.* [Ready.

MR. W. D. HOWELLS, the American Novelist, says:—"Paul Dunbar's brilliant and unique achievement is to have studied the American negro objectively, and to have represented him with humour, with sympathy, and with truthfulness."

THE WORK IS AN ATTEMPT TO STEER A COURSE BETWEEN THE LINE TAKEN BY THE DETRACTOR OF IBSEN'S DRAMATIC WORK AND THE IBSEN FANATIC.

IBSEN ON HIS MERITS. By Sir EDWARD RUSSELL and PERCY CROSS STANDING. Crown 8vo. 5*s.* [Ready.

MR. L. F. AUSTIN in SKETCH says:—"Sir Edward Russell's estimate of Ibsen is not idolatrous, but dispassionately appreciative. It is a clear and forcible statement of the views of moderate Ibsenites who cannot be blinded to the faults of this great dramatist."

OUR TRADE in the WORLD in RELATION to FOREIGN COMPETITION, with Statistical Tables, &c. By WILLIAM S. H. GASTRELL, Commercial Attaché to H.M.'s Embassy at Berlin, &c. Royal 8vo. 6*s.* [This day.

The SULTAN and HIS SUBJECTS. By RICHARD DAVEY. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 24*s.*

The SPECTATOR says:—"We have seldom taken up a book of a like weight and importance which we have found it so difficult to lay down."

SEVENTH THOUSAND.

CECIL RHODES: a Biography and an Appreciation. By "IMPERIALIST" and Dr. JAMESON. Large crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN KID'S MILLIONS. By ALAN OSCAR. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [Ready.

SYBIL FOSTER'S LOVE STORY. By Lady WATKIN WILLIAMS. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [Ready.

The GIFT of LIFE. By James CASSIDY. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* [Ready.

A TALE of TWO TUNNELS. By W. CLARK RUSSELL. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* [This week.

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

Edited by W. L. COURTNEY.
JUNE.

A PLOT against BRITISH INTERESTS in the LEVANT. By Vindex.
The QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE.
1. Literature in the Victorian Era. By H. D. Traill.
2. Postal and Telegraphic Progress under Queen Victoria. By J. Henniker Heaton, M.P.
3. Agriculture during the Queen's Reign. By W. E. Bear.
4. The Colonial Empire of 1837. By E. Salmon, F.R.C.I.
The MODERN FRENCH DRAMA. I. By A. Filon.
CORSICAN BANDITS. By Hamilton Aide.
CAPTAIN MAHAN'S 'NELSON.' By Judge O'Connor Morris.
The NEW ERA in HYDERABAD. By Joseph Rock.
NAVAL and COLONIAL POLICY of GERMANY. By H. W. Wilson.
IMPERIAL FREE TRADE. By Sir G. Baden-Powell, M.P.
The PARIS SALONS. By H. H. Statham.
The THESSALIAN WAR of 1897. By Charles Williams.

CHAPMAN'S MAGAZINE.

Edited by OSWALD CRAWFURD.
Price Sixpence.
JUNE.

VIOLET HUNT.—'Unkist, Unkind' (Serial).
ADA CAMBRIDGE.—A Painful Interview.
ESTHER POLAND.—"Copy."
WILLIAM BEAUMONT.—Rhonda's Revenge.
MYRA SWAN.—In Bliss and Ignorance.
F. BAYFORD HARRISON.—Humdrum.
LADY RIDLEY.—A Tempered Wind.
EDWIN PUGH.—Consolation.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London.

JARROLD & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*
A SHORT POPULAR HISTORY OF
CRETE.
By J. H. FREESE, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.
With Introduction by P. W. CLAYDEN.
Maps of Crete and Seat of War.

MR. GLADSTONE writes:—"I hope this book may tend to enhance the public interest in the condition of Crete, which at present threatens to bring serious disgrace upon this country."
The Daily Chronicle says:—"A useful piece of work. A singularly clear account of the origin of the present crisis in the island."

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom Under the Snow. By MAURUS JOKAI. SIXTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

"Altogether a great book and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."—Pall Mall Gazette.
"In its panoramic width of outlook, its inexhaustible fertility of invention and barbaric splendour of colouring, Maurus Jokai's great novel challenges comparison with Tolstoi's War and Peace. There is a succession of brilliant tableaux. To read this remarkable book is like witnessing a magnificent Oriental pageant. It is of enthralling interest and takes rank with the great novels of the century."—Spectator.

'MIDST the WILD CARPATHIANS. By MAURUS JOKAI. SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 5*s.*

"Will enthral all English lovers of romance and gratify the natural curiosity now general concerning the work of the Hungarian novelist."—Saturday Review.

LADY JEAN'S SON. By Sarah Tytler. SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

"The glimpses of Edinburgh society while the Northern Athens was still the seat of fashion are lifelike and clever. 'Lady Jean's Son' is from first to last a delightful story."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The WINDS of MARCH. By George KNIGHT, Author of 'Dust in the Balance,' 'Sapphira of the Stage,' 'Circle of the Earth.' Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6*s.*

The REJUVENATION of MISS SEMAPHORE: a Farcical Novel. By HAL GODFREY. Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, 3*s.* 6*d.*

BLIND LARRY: Irish Idylls. By LEWIS MACNAMARA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

London:
JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C.
Of all Booksellers and at the Libraries.

ARMAND COLIN ET CIE.,

ÉDITEURS,
5, RUE DE MÉZIÈRES, PARIS.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

HISTOIRE de la LANGUE et de la LITTÉRATURE FRANÇAISE des ORIGINES à 1900. Publiée sous la direction de M. PETIT DE JULLEVILLE, Professeur à la Faculté des Lettres de l'Université de Paris.

Tome III. SEIZIÈME SIECLE. In-8, broché, 15 fr.; relié amateur, 20 fr.

L'HISTOIRE de la LANGUE et de la LITTÉRATURE FRANÇAISE formera 8 volumes grand in-8 raisin, illustrés de reproductions et de facsimilés en noir et en couleur. Cet ouvrage paraît par fascicules grand in-8 raisin, comme l'HISTOIRE GÉNÉRALE de MM. LAVISSE et RAMBAUD, à raison de un fascicule par quinzaine le 5 et le 20 de chaque mois. Chaque fascicule, 1 fr. 50.

Le prix de chaque volume, broché, sera porté à 16 fr., soit, pour l'ouvrage complet, 128 fr.

Prix de l'ouvrage en souscription: On peut souscrire dès maintenant à l'ouvrage entier en adressant soit à un Libraire, soit à MM. ARMAND COLIN et CIE., éditeurs, 5, rue de Mézières, Paris, la somme de 110 fr.

Les souscripteurs qui auront versé la somme de 110 fr. recevront les fascicules au fur et à mesure de leur apparition.

HISTOIRE GÉNÉRALE du IVe. SIÈCLE à nos JOURS. Publiée sous la direction de MM. ERNEST LAVISSE, de l'Académie française, et ALFRED RAMBAUD, Professeurs à l'Université de Paris.

Tome IX. NAPOLÉON (1800-1815). In-8, broché, 12 fr.; relié amateur, 16 fr.

Previously published.

Tome I. Les ORIGINES (395-1095).
Tome II. L'EUROPE FÉODALE; Les CROISADES (1095-1270).
Tome III. FORMATION des GRANDS ÉTATS (1270-1492).
Tome IV. RENAISSANCE et RÉFORME; Les NOUVEAUX MONDES (1492-1559).
Tome V. Les GUERRES de RELIGION (1559-1648).
Tome VI. LOUIS XIV. (1648-1715).
Tome VII. Le XVIIIe. SIÈCLE (1715-1788).
Tome VIII. La RÉVOLUTION FRANÇAISE (1788-1799).
Le Tome X., Les MONARCHIES CONSTITUTIONNELLES (1815-1847), paraîtra en fascicules à 1 fr., à partir du 5 Juin 1897.

Les NOUVELLES SOCIÉTÉS ANGLO-SAXONNES. Australie et Nouvelle Zelande, Afrique Australe. Par M. PIERRE LEROY-BEAULIEU. Un volume in 18 jesus, broché, 4 fr.

Contents:—La ville et la colonie du Cap.—M. Cecil Rhodes.—Les mines de diamant.—La ville de l'or. Johannesburg.—La population du Rand.—L'insurrection de Johannesburg.—L'industrie aurifère.—La colonie de Natal.—Les territoires de la compagnie à charte.—Les perspectives de l'Afrique australe.—La fédération impériale, &c.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

"DIAMOND JUBILEE" VOLUME OF 'A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.'
Now ready, demy 8vo. cloth, 12*s.*

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES,
FROM 1880 TO THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

 Uniform with the LIBRARY EDITION of the first Four Volumes, copies of which may still be had.

C. J. WILLS'S New Novel, HIS DEAD PAST, is now ready. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

THE NEW "GIRLS' BOOK."

ANNE COATES'S bright book, RIE'S DIARY, is now ready. Crown 8vo. silk cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d.

SIR WALTER BESANT'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By Sir Walter Besant, Author of 'All Sorts and Conditions of Men' With a Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess.

MRS. CAMPBELL PRAED'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

NULMA: an Anglo-Australian Romance. By Mrs. Campbell Praed, Author of 'Mrs. Tregaskiss,' &c.

"We can recommend 'Nulma' as a thoroughly enjoyable story. Mrs. Praed, possibly as the result of her collaboration with Mr. Justin McCarthy, has learned to give a very pretty flavouring of actuality to her stories by introducing a semi-political background into her romance."
Pall Mall Gazette

CLARK RUSSELL'S NEW NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The LAST ENTRY. By W. Clark Russell. With a Frontispiece by Max Cowper.

"'The Last Entry' is a rattling good salt-water yarn; told in the author's usual breezy, exhilarating style."—Daily Mail.

Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

CARLTON PRIORS. By John Stafford, Author of 'Doris and I.'

"Mr. Stafford has come on very much since his early effort 'Doris and I,' and 'Carlton Priors' should do much for his reputation."—Bookman.

MRS. HUNGERFORD'S LAST NOVEL.—Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c.

MRS. CROKER'S NEW NOVEL. SECOND EDITION.—Crown 8vo. buckram, 6*s.*

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. Croker, Author of 'A Family Likeness,' &c.

WILLIAM WESTALL'S NEW NOVEL. THIRD EDITION.—Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By William Westall.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A NINETEENTH-CENTURY MIRACLE. By "Z Z" (Louis Zangwill).

DICK DONOVAN'S NEW DETECTIVE BOOK.—Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY. By Richard Dowling, Author of 'The Mystery of Killard.'

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, gilt top, 6*s.*

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. With 9 Full-Page Illustrations by the Author.

POPULAR EDITION OF MARK TWAIN'S WORKS.

Crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

MARK TWAIN'S CHOICE WORKS. With Life, Portrait, and Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT; and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. With 312 Illustrations.
The GILDED AGE. With 212 Illustrations.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3*s.* 6*d.*

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugene Rougon). By Emile Zola. Authorized Version With a Preface by ERNEST A. VIZETELLY.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.

AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
*BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
The CHARLATAN. By Robert Buchanan and Henry Murray.
*MR. JERVIS. By Mrs. Croker.
The WHITE VIRGIN. By George Manville Fenn.
*LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray.
SAINT ANN'S. By W. E. Norris.
A COUNTRY SWEETHEART. By Dora Russell.
*The PHANTOM DEATH. By W. Clark Russell.
IN the FACE of the WORLD. By Alan St. Aubyn.
*DAGONET ABROAD. By George R. Sims.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.

 Marked * may also be had in limp cloth, at 2*s.* 6*d.*

A NEW EDITION. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A LEVANTINE FAMILY. By Bayle St. John.

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. Lynn Linton.
The RIDDLE RING. By Justin McCarthy.
OF HIGH DEGREE. By Charles Gibbon.
BEATRICE and BENEDICK. By Hawley Smart.
ZAMBRA the DETECTIVE. By Headon Hill.

FOUNDED ON SARDOU'S PLAY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

MADAME SANS-GENE. By Edmond Lepelletier. Translated by John DE VILLIERS.

The GENTLEMAN'S MAGAZINE. One Shilling Monthly. Contents for JUNE:—"VINCTI SED NON VICTI." By C. Sorel Strong.—IN KING CHULALONGKORN'S DOMINIONS. By P. Cross Standing.—VILLAGE CLUBS and MEDIÆVAL GILDS. By H. C. T. SAINTE-BEUVE. By C. E. Meetkerke.—MISS TWINCH and HER PIGS. By Penley Reyd.—A COUNTRY READER. By Elsa d'Esterre-Keeling.—VICTIMS of CIRCUMSTANCES. By Donald N. Reid.—SIDE LIGHTS on CHINESE RELIGIOUS IDEAS. By E. H. Parker.—WINE in its RELATION to HEALTH. By Dr. Yorke-Davies.—GOING to SCHOOL. By Edward Carpenter.—A YORKSHIRE NATURALIST. By Sylvanus Urban.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

MESSRS. LONGMANS & CO.'S LIST.

COMPLETION OF THE "EDINBURGH" EDITION OF LORD MACAULAY'S LIFE AND WORKS.

THE LIFE AND WORKS OF LORD MACAULAY.

"Edinburgh" Edition. 10 vols. 8vo. 6*s.* each.
(Works, 8 vols.; Life, 2 vols.)

Vols. I.–IV. HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Vols V.–VII. ESSAYS; BIOGRAPHIES; INDIAN PENAL CODE; CONTRIBUTIONS to KNIGHT'S QUARTERLY MAGAZINE.

Vol. VIII. SPEECHES; LAYS of ANCIENT ROME; MISCELLANEOUS POEMS.

Vols. IX. and X. The LIFE and LETTERS of LORD MACAULAY. By the Right Hon. Sir G. O. TREVELYAN, Bart., M.P.

8vo. 18*s.*

THE ANNUAL REGISTER:

A Review of Public Events at Home and Abroad for the Year 1896.

 Volumes of the ANNUAL REGISTER for the Years 1863–1895 can still be had, 18s. each.

4to. 10*s.* 6*d.*

A DESCRIPTION OF THE WORDSWORTH AND COLERIDGE MANUSCRIPTS

IN THE POSSESSION OF MR. T. NORTON LONGMAN.
Edited, with Notes, by W. HALE WHITE.

Facsimile Reproductions:—'The Brothers,' and Letter from W. Wordsworth to Humphry Davy.—Coleridge's 'Love.'—'The Ode to Immortality.'

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

CROMWELL'S PLACE IN HISTORY.

Founded on Six Lectures delivered at Oxford.
By SAMUEL RAWSON GARDINER, D.C.L.,
Ford's Lecturer, 1896.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

RAMEAU'S NEPHEW.

A Translation from Diderot's Autographic Text.
By SYLVIA MARGARET HILL.

In the 'Miscellaneous Essays,' Vol. V., "Diderot," Carlyle says:—"'Rameau's Nephew'.....may pass for decidedly the best of all Diderot's compositions. It looks like a sibylline utterance from a heart all in fusion; no ephemeral thing (for it was written as a satire on Palissot) was ever more perennially treated. One day it must also be translated into English; but it will require to be done by 'head'; the common steam machinery will not properly suffice for it."

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

SKETCHES IN LAVENDER:

Blue and Green.
A Collection of Short Stories.
By JEROME K. JEROME.

Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

THE WISDOM OF FOOLS.

Short Stories.
By MARGARET DELAND,
Author of 'John Ward, Preacher.'

 This is a collection of four stories, the characters and scenes of which are those of a provincial town in the New England States. Each story is of the nature of a problem in some department of ethics or morals, but the author does not do more than enunciate and illustrate the problem.

LONGMAN'S MAGAZINE.

JUNE, 1897. Price 6*d.*

The CHEVALIER D'AURIAC. By S. Levett Yeats, Author of 'The Honour of Savelli.' (Continued.)
The U. E. LOYALISTS. By Clive Phillipps-Wolley.
The LOVE LETTERS of a LADY of QUALITY. Selected and Arranged by Miss Gabrielle Festing.
"The 'ORSE." By Mary L. Pendered.
A DREAM of ELK. By Fred Whishaw.
An ATTACK on a TELEGRAPH STATION in PERSIA. By Basil Williams.
LOVE and SPORT. By Mabel Murray Hickson.
AT the SIGN of the SHIP. By Andrew Lang.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
London, New York, and Bombay.

MR. EDWARD ARNOLD'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

NEW BOOK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'WILD SPAIN.'

WILD NORWAY:

With Chapters on the Swedish Highlands, Spitzbergen, and Denmark.

By ABEL CHAPMAN,

Author of 'Wild Spain,' &c.

Fully Illustrated by the Author and Charles Whymper.

Demy 8vo. 16*s.*

SPECTATOR.—"There is not a chapter in this book which would not be missed."

ILLUSTRATED SPORTING and DRAMATIC NEWS.—"A very good, very accurate, and deeply interesting book of wild life and natural history."

SCOTSMAN.—"Will be read with keen interest by the angler, the hunter of wild game, and the student of bird life."

PROF. KARL PEARSON'S NEW WORK.

The CHANCES of DEATH, and other Studies in Evolution. By KARL PEARSON, F.R.S., Author of 'The Ethic of Free Thought,' &c. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 25*s.* net.

Contents of Vol. I.—The Chances of Death—The Scientific Aspect of Monte Carlo Roulette—Reproductive Selection—Socialism and Natural Selection—Politics and Science—Reaction—Woman and Labour—Variation in Man and Woman.

Contents of Vol. II.—Woman as Witch—Ashiepattle; or, Hans seeks his Luck—Kindred Group Marriage—The German Passion Play—Index.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"We have pleasure in welcoming a new work of extreme scientific value and of deep popular interest."

SIR HERBERT MAXWELL'S NEW BOOK.

MEMORIES of the MONTHS. By Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P., Editor of 'The Sportsman's Library,' &c. With Photogravure Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

THE SPORTSMAN'S LIBRARY.

Edited by Sir HERBERT MAXWELL, Bart., M.P.

VOLUME III. NOW READY.

The SPORTSMAN in IRELAND. By a COSMOPOLITE. Illustrated by 6 Coloured Plates and numerous other Illustrations by P. Chenevix Trench. Large 8vo. handsomely bound, 15*s.* Also a limited Large-Paper Edition, with Plates on Japanese vellum, 2*l.* 2*s.* net.

Volumes already issued.

Vol. I. The LIFE of a FOX and the DIARY of a HUNTSMAN. By THOMAS SMITH.

Vol. II. COL. THORNTON'S SPORTING TOUR in the NORTH.

A SUNSHINE TRIP: Glimpses of the Orient. Extracts from Letters written by MARGARET BOTTOME. With Portrait. Handsomely bound, 4*s.* 6*d.*

The TREATMENT of NATURE in DANTE'S 'DIVINA COMMEDIA.' By L. OSCAR KUHNS, Professor in Wesleyan University, U.S.A. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.*

The GOSPEL the POWER of GOD. By the Rev. CHARLES D. BELL, D.D., Hon. Canon of Carlisle. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

THIRD EDITION, with Portrait.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Master of Balliol: a Personal Memoir. By the Hon. LIONEL TOLLEMACHE, Author of 'Safe Studies,' &c. Third Edition, with Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

MR. H. D. TRAILL in the GRAPHIC.—"Jowett has been Boswellized once for all in Mr. Tollemache's fascinating pages."

CHEAPER EDITION.

TOMMY ATKINS: a Tale of the RANKS. By ROBERT BLATCHFORD, Author of 'A Son of the Forge,' &c. Cheaper Edition. Cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ARNOLD'S PRACTICAL SCIENCE MANUALS.

The CALCULUS for ENGINEERS. By Prof. JOHN PERRY, F.R.S. 380 pp. crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

London: EDWARD ARNOLD, 37, Bedford-street.
New York: 70, Fifth Avenue.

L. REEVE & CO.'S NEW WORKS.

RESPIRATORY PROTEIDS, Researches in Biological Chemistry. By A. B. GRIFFITHS, Ph.D. F.R.S.E. Crown 8vo. 6*s.* net.

Complete in 1 vol. royal 4to. cloth 6*l.* 6*s.* net, half-morocco, 7*l.*

FOREIGN FINCHES in CAPTIVITY. By ARTHUR G. BUTLER, Ph.D. F.L.S. F.Z.S. F.E.S. With 60 Plates beautifully Coloured by hand.

The HYMENOPTERA ACULEATA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete, with 3 Plates, 16*s.*; Large Edition, with 49 Coloured Plates, 63*s.* net.

The HEMIPTERA HETEROPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By EDWARD SAUNDERS, F.L.S. Complete, with a Structural Plate, 14*s.*; Large Edition, with 31 Coloured Plates, 42*s.* net.

The HEMIPTERA HOMOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By JAMES EDWARDS. With 2 Plates, 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 28 Coloured Plates, 42*s.* net.

Part XL. with 4 Coloured Plates, 5*s.*

The LEPIDOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By CHARLES G. BARRETT, F.E.S. Vol. I. (RHOPALOCERA), 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 40 Coloured Plates, 53*s.* Vol. II. 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 46 Coloured Plates, 63*s.* Vol. III. 12*s.*; Large Edition, with 50 Coloured Plates, 63*s.*

The BUTTERFLIES of EUROPE. Described and Figured by H. C. LANG, M.D. F.L.S. With 82 Coloured Plates, containing upwards of 900 Figures. 2 vols. 3*l.* 18*s.*

Part XXVII. with 8 Coloured Plates, 15*s.*

LEPIDOPTERA INDICA. By F. MOORE, F.Z.S. F.E.S. Vol. I., with 94 Coloured Plates. Vol. II., with 96 Coloured Plates, each 9*l.* 5*s.* cloth, 9*l.* 15*s.* half-morocco.

The LARVÆ of the BRITISH LEPI- DOPTERA, and their FOOD PLANTS. By OWEN S. WILSON. With Life-sized Figures drawn and coloured from Nature by Eleanora Wilson. 40 Coloured Plates, 63*s.* net.

The COLEOPTERA of the BRITISH ISLANDS. By the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Complete in 5 vols. with 2 Structural Plates, 4*l.* Large Edition, with 180 Coloured Plates, 14*l.*

CATALOGUE of BRITISH COLE- OPTERA. By D. SHARP, M.A. F.R.S., and Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. Price 1*s.* 6*d.*; or printed on one side only, for labels, 2*s.* 6*d.*

The STRUCTURE and LIFE- HISTORY of the COCKROACH. An Introduction to the Study of Insects. By Profs. L. C. MIALL, F.R.S., and ALFRED DENNY. 125 Woodcuts, 7*s.* 6*d.*

HANDBOOK of the BRITISH FLORA. By G. BENTHAM, F.R.S. Sixth Edition. Revised by Sir J. D. HOOKER, C.E. K.C.S.I. F.R.S. 10*s.* 6*d.*

ILLUSTRATIONS of the BRITISH FLORA. Drawn by W. H. Fitch, F.L.S., and W. G. Smith, F.L.S. 1,315 Wood Engravings. Fourth Edition. 10*s.* 6*d.*

HANDBOOK of BRITISH MOSSES. By the Rev. M. J. BERKELEY, M.A. F.L.S. Second Edition. 24 Coloured Plates. 21*s.*

A MANUAL of BRITISH ARCHÆO- LOGY. By CHARLES BOUTELL, M.A. Second Edition. 20 Coloured Plates, 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH WILD FLOWERS, Familiarly described in the Four Seasons. By THOMAS MOORE, F.L.S. 24 Coloured Plates. 16*s.*

BRITISH INSECTS. By E. F. Staveley. 16 Coloured Plates. 14*s.*

BRITISH BEETLES. By E. C. Rye. New Edition, Revised and in part Rewritten by the Rev. Canon FOWLER, M.A. F.L.S. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH BUTTERFLIES and MOTHS. By H. T. STAINTON. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH BEES. By W. E. Shuckard. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH SPIDERS. By E. F. Staveley. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH ZOOPHYTES. By A. S. PENNINGTON, F.L.S. 24 Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH GRASSES. By M. Plues. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH FERNS. By M. Plues. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

BRITISH SEAWEEDS. By S. O. Gray. 16 Coloured Plates. 10*s.* 6*d.*

SYNOPSIS of BRITISH MOSSES. By C. P. HOBKIRK, F.L.S. Revised Edition. 7*s.* 6*d.*

No. 630. JUNE. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The BOTANICAL MAGAZINE: Figures and Descriptions of New and Rare Plants. By Sir J. D. HOOKER, F.R.S., &c. Third Series. Vols. I. to LII., each 42*s.* Published Monthly, with 6 Plates, 3*s.* 6*d.* Coloured. Annual Subscription, 42*s.*

L. REEVE & CO.,
Publishers to the Home, Colonial, and Indian Governments,
6, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, W.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

Complete Catalogue post free on application.

EDITION LIMITED to 350 COPIES. Crown 8vo. 5*s.* net.
PRINTED ON VAN GELDER PAPER AT THE CHISWICK PRESS.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY of the WORKS of WILLIAM MORRIS. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

Contents:—Original Poems—Romances—Art—Social Writings—Translations—Contributions to Periodicals, Magazines, &c., (1) Poems, (2) Prose, (3) Translations, (4) Contributions to "Justice," (5) Contributions to "Commonweal"—Mr. William Morris: Articles on the Man and his Work—Mr. Morris's Writings: Reviews and Criticisms upon—Publications of the Kelmscott Press—Addenda—Chronological Summary.

4 vols. pott 4to. 34*s.* net.

VASARI'S LIVES. A Selection of Seventy of the Lives. Edited and Annotated in the light of Modern Discoveries by E. H. and H. W. BLASHFIELD and A. A. HOPKINS. With 35 Illustrations.

This Edition, issued in conjunction with Messrs. Scribner of New York, is entirely distinct from the new complete translation of Vasari's Lives which Mr. Horatio Brown is preparing for Messrs. Bell to issue later. It is an ample selection of seventy of the most important and popular biographies, supplemented with much information of value both to the student and traveller. Vasari has long stood in need of systematic editing in English, and it is believed that the present edition will be received as favourably here as it was on its first appearance in America. The translation used is that of Mrs. Foster.

Vol. I. just published, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The PROSE WORKS of SWIFT. A New Edition, with an Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. In about 10 vols. 3*s.* 6*d.* each.

Vol. I. A TALE of a TUB. The BATTLE of the BOOKS, and other early Works. Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT. With Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. LECKY, M.P. With Portrait and Facsimile. [Bohn's Standard Library.

Royal 8vo. 2 vols. 25*s.* net.

MEMORIALS of CHRISTIE'S. By W. ROBERTS, Author of 'The Book-Hunter in London,' 'Printers' Marks,' &c. With 75 Collotype and other Illustrations, and a full Index.

"The manner in which he has performed the difficult task of selection is worthy of the highest praise, and his book is one which should be of the utmost interest to collectors and other lovers of art."—Scotsman.

HANDBOOKS OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Edited by Professor J. W. HALES, M.A.

NEW VOLUME. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The AGE of MILTON. By the Rev. J. H. B. MASTERMAN, M.A., late Lecturer of St. John's College, Cambridge. With an Introduction, &c., by J. BASS MULLINGER, M.A., University Lecturer in History. [Next week.

Pott 4to. 15*s.* net.

BOOK SALES of the YEAR 1896: containing a Detailed Description of all the most important Books Sold at Auction, with the Names of the Purchasers and the Prices realized. With complete Index and General Introduction and Notes. By TEMPLE SCOTT.

A few copies of the volume for 1895 are still on hand, and may be had for 15*s.* net, each.

"In bulk, in paper and type, and in general thoroughness it strikes us equally favourably."—Academy.

Crown 8vo. 600 pages, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ELOCUTION and the DRAMATIC ART. By DAVID J. SMITHSON. New Edition, Revised by the Rev. C. R. TAYLOR, M.A., Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, Professor of Elocution at King's College, London.

"The book has been considered the standard work on the subject for many years."—Glasgow Herald.

BELL'S CATHEDRAL SERIES.

Edited by GLEESON WHITE and E. F. STRANGE.

Fully illustrated, in specially designed green cloth cover, crown 8vo. 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

CANTERBURY. By Hartley Withers. Second Edition. 142 pages. 36 Illustrations.

SALISBURY. By Gleeson White. 125 pages. 35 Illustrations.

CHESTER. By Charles Hiatt. 110 pages. 25 Illustrations.

ROCHESTER. By G. H. Palmer, B.A. 142 pages. 38 Illustrations.

OXFORD. By the Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A., Christchurch. 144 pages. 34 Illustrations.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York-street, Covent garden.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

The First Edition having been exhausted on day of publication, a SECOND EDITION is now ready.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MORRICE BUCKLER.'

THE PHILANDERERS.

By A. E. W. MASON.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

DAILY MAIL.—"The three pages of the prologue are the most stirring three pages of any sort of fiction that we have read for some months past.....There is no weakness here, no shallowness, no compromise. Built up with strength and sincerity, and finely written, the story braces the mind as much as it captivates the taste."

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ROBBERY UNDER ARMS.'

MY RUN HOME.

By ROLF BOLDREWOOD.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

THE SECRET OF SAINT FLOREL.

By JOHN BERWICK.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

SCOTSMAN.—"A thoroughly healthy and well-told story, with plenty of stirring incident and variety of scene and situation, and it is not wanting in study of character and knowledge of life, savage, semi-savage, and civilized."

THE FALL OF A STAR: a Novel.

By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart.

Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

DAILY MAIL.—"A brightly written story, in which high life, mystery, tragedy, and science are cunningly blended."

With Illustrations, 8vo. 8*s*. 6*d*. net.

A RIDE THROUGH WESTERN ASIA. By CLIVE BIGHAM. Part I. ASIA MINOR; Part II. PERSIA, NORTH to SOUTH; Part III. TURKISH ARABIA; Part IV. PERSIA, WEST to EAST; Part V. CENTRAL ASIA.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"It is told in simple and straightforward language, with sufficient detail as to the machinery of travel to be useful to other travellers who may be following the same route, but without any tedious insistence on the incidents of each day's routine."

CLASSICAL SERIES.—New Volume.

The FOURTH VERRINE of CICERO. Edited for Schools by F. W. HALL, M.A., Trinity College, Oxford, Assistant Master at Westminster. Fcap. 8vo. 3*s*. 6*d*.

With Illustrations, crown 8vo. 4*s*. 6*d*.

The INDUCTION COIL in PRACTICAL WORK, including Röntgen X Rays. By LEWIS WRIGHT, Author of 'Light: a Course of Experimental Optics,' &c.

Globe 8vo. 4*s*. 6*d*.

LESSONS in ELEMENTARY PRACTICAL PHYSICS. Stewart and Gee Series. By C. L. BARNES, M.A. F.C.S., late Scholar of Balliol College, Oxford. Vol. III. Part I. PRACTICAL ACOUSTICS.

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.

NEW VOLUME.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3*s*. 6*d*. "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5*s*.

SNARLEYYOW. By Captain MARRYAT. Illustrated by H. R. MILLAR. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY.

Now ready, demy 8vo. pp. civ-254, with Plan of Site and Buildings of Barnwell Priory (in duplicate), printed on Dutch Hand-made Paper, 21*s*. net.

Edition limited to 300 copies.

The OBSERVANCES in USE at the AUGUSTINIAN PRIORY of ST. GILES and ST. ANDREW at BARNWELL, CAMBRIDGESHIRE. Edited, with a Translation and Glossary, by JOHN WILLIS CLARK, M.A. F.S.A., Registrary of the University of Cambridge, formerly Fellow of Trinity College.

Globe 8vo. 6*s*.

POEMS. By Horace Smith.

Crown 8vo. 4*s*. 6*d*.

NOTES on POLITICAL ECONOMY from the COLONIAL POINT of VIEW. By a NEW ZEALAND COLONIST.

JUNE NUMBER, price 1*s*.

MACMILLAN'S MAGAZINE.

Contents.

1. The HOUSE by the HOWFF. By W. L. Watson. Chapters 5–7.
2. NELSON and HIS BIOGRAPHERS. By David Hannay.
3. AMERICANS at PLAY.
4. IN and ABOUT the WEST INDIES. By John R. Dasent, C.B.
5. JACK and JILL.
6. ON the ABUSE of DIALECT.
7. A CHAPTER of ACCIDENTS. By Mrs. Fraser. Chapters 6–8.
8. LANDSCAPE in POETRY. By Professor Tyrrell.

JUNE NUMBER NOW READY.

CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated, price 1*s*. 4*d*.

Contains, besides, many Stories and Articles—

QUEEN VICTORIA. By the Hon. T. F. Bayard.
QUEEN VICTORIA'S "CORONATION ROLL." By Florence Hayward. With Portraits and Facsimiles.
HOME LIFE AMONG the INDIANS. Records of Personal Experience. By Alice C. Fletcher.
The LAST FIGHT. By L. Frank Tooker.

Illustrated, price 1*s*.

ST. NICHOLAS MAGAZINE FOR JUNE.

Contains, besides many Stories and Articles—

The RISKS of a FIREMAN'S LIFE. By C. T. Hill.
A CITY in a VOLCANO. By A. H. Verrill.
WHAT is TOLD by the BELL. By Lieut. John M. Ellicott, U.S.N.
A HOUSE-MOVING HOLIDAY. By W. S. Harwood.

MACMILLAN & CO., Limited, London.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

"Dr. Conan Doyle's fascinating story."
Daily News.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6*s*.

UNCLE BERNAC:

A Memory of the Empire.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of 'The White Company,' 'Rodney Stone,' &c.

PRESS OPINIONS.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"'Uncle Bernac' is for a truth Dr. Doyle's Napoleon. Viewed as a picture of the little man in the grey coat, it must take rank before anything he has written. The fascination of it is extraordinary. It reaches everywhere a high literary level."

SPEAKER.—"A most vivid and convincing portrait of a man whose personality will long continue to occupy the curious interest of mankind. Mr. Conan Doyle, in short, has succeeded in realizing Napoleon, and he makes him known to us as he really was."

OBSERVER.—"Dr. Conan Doyle has won yet another success.....From the opening pages the clear and energetic telling of the story never falters and our attention never flags."

DAILY MAIL.—"'Uncle Bernac' has the vitality, the power, and the true human touch which we have learned to expect from this master of his craft."

With Illustrations from Sketches by the Author, crown 8vo. 6*s*. net.

THACKERAY'S HAUNTS and HOMES. By EYRE CROWE, A.R.A.

NOTE.—The Edition of the work for Sale in this country is limited to 260 copies.

With Portraits and a Preface by Sir EDWARD B. MALET, G.C.B. G.C.M.G., &c., demy 8vo. 16*s*.

GABRIELE VON BULOW, Daughter of Wilhelm von Humboldt. A Memoir compiled from the Family Papers of Wilhelm von Humboldt and his Children, 1791–1887. Translated by CLARA NORDLINGER.

With Portraits, demy 8vo. 12*s*. 6*d*.

ISABELLA the CATHOLIC, QUEEN of SPAIN: her Life, Reign, and Times, 1451–1504. By M. LE BARON DE NERVO. Translated from the Original French by Lieut.-Colonel TEMPLE-WEST (Retired).

*NEW VOLUME OF SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S POPULAR 2*s*. 6*d*. SERIES.*

Crown 8vo. limp red cloth, 2*s*. 6*d*.

The DISAPPEARANCE of GEORGE DRIFFELL. By JAMES PAYN, Author of 'By Proxy,' &c.

SOME MEMORIES OF THE QUEEN'S CHILDHOOD AND MARRIAGE.

By LADY JANE ELLICE

(One of the surviving Bridesmaids to the Queen).

SEE THE JUNE NUMBER OF

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

Which also contains:—

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (June).
The BATTLE of SLUIS: an Anniversary Study. By W. Laird Clowes.
SIAM and the KING'S VISIT. By Percy Cross Standing.
PARIS in JUNE, 1871. By A. J. Butler.
ST. PAUL'S. By Arthur Patchett Martin.
The PARSON'S REVELS. By Mrs. Stephen Batson.
DUELS of ALL NATIONS. IV. The Duels of Italy, Spain, and Russia. By James Pemberton Grund.
The MODERN PENTATHLUM. By Horace Hutchinson.
"MISSING": a Story of the South Pacific. By John Arthur Barry.
The BATTLE of SPINGES. By William Westall.
TALES from the DRAMATISTS. I. The Witch of Edmonton.
FREEMASONRY and the CHURCH of ROME. By Fred J. W. Crowe.
QUIS PRO DOMINA? By Owen Seaman.
PAGES from a PRIVATE DIARY.
IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chaps. 16–18. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

London:
SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

NEW MAGAZINE OF GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY,

Published Monthly, price ONE SHILLING.

In handsome imperial 8vo. tastefully printed in old-face type, and illustrated.

No 2. NOW READY.

THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE.

A Journal of Family History, Heraldry, and Pedigrees.

The GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE combines interesting illustrated family histories with those accurate and detailed evidences which are the real value of genealogical writing.

Contents of No. 2 for JUNE.

GRAHAM, EARL of MONTEITH. By Walter M. Graham Easton.

SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part II. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.

The EVOLUTION of the MEDIEVAL HELMET. Part II. By F. R. Earles.

WELSH PEDIGREES. By John Hobson Matthews.

BOOK-PLATES and their VALUE. By W. H. K. Wright.

NELSON and his ENCHANTRESS. (Continued.)

A LIST of STRANGERS. (Continued.) By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.

MR. HALL'S REPLY to MR. HORACE ROUND.

QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.

A GAZETTE of the MONTH: being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.

BY THE WAY.

"An excellent design admirably carried out. The typographical arrangements are all that can be desired."
Literary World.

"A welcome is due to the first number of the Genealogical Magazine, which promises well both as to contents and general 'get up.'"—Guardian.

"A section of the magazine which is bound to be useful is a chronicle of all matters pertaining to the devotion and creation of titles and honours, changes of names, appointments, &c., and in addition to family histories and historical pedigrees, a feature is to be made of the serial publication of heraldic works."—Daily Chronicle.

A Specimen Copy sent post free for One Shilling.

Annual Subscription, 12s.

In demy 8vo. cloth, price 8s. 6d.

The HOUSE of CROMWELL.

A Genealogical History of the Family and Descendants of the Protector. By JAMES WAYLEN, sometime Secretary to Thomas Carlyle. A New Edition, revised by JOHN GABRIEL CROMWELL, M.A. Oxon., Hon. Canon of Durham.

"To those who are interested in such quaint lore Mr. Waylen's book will yield a world of satisfaction."
Morning Leader.

In large demy 8vo. appropriately bound in art linen boards, price 6s.

GEORGE MORLAND'S PICTURES.

Their Present Possessors, with Details of the Collections, by RALPH RICHARDSON, F.R.S.E. F.S.A.Scot., Author of 'George Morland, Painter, 1763–1804.'

In crown 8vo. tastefully printed, and bound in parchment, price 5s.

GLEANINGS from IBSEN (the Best and Choicest in Ibsen).

Selected and Edited, by permission, by EMMIE AVERY KEDDELL and PERCY CROSS STANDING. With a Preface on Ibsenism.

"Its novelty ought to commend it to the general public. The compilers have also collaborated in a smart introduction in which they refer to the beauty of Ibsen's poetical expression. This note of purely poetic quality is what they have been at pains to discover in compiling the Birthday Book."
Liverpool Daily Post.

In crown 4to. cloth, gilt edges, price 6s.

HUGO of AVENDON. A Drama

in Four Acts. By E. L. M.

"The work reads well, and should be enjoyed by those who patronize the drama without leaving their own firesides."—Scotsman.

"There is good material in the play, and the climax is skilfully planned."—Dundee Advertiser.

In crown 8vo. cloth, illustrated, price 7s. 6d.

WREKIN SKETCHES. By EMMA BOORE.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

FROM WALTER SCOTT'S LIST.

UNIFORM WITH PREVIOUS YEARS' ISSUES

NOW READY Crown 8vo. paper boards, 2s. 6d.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1896.

By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction on The Need for an Endowed Theatre, and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

Copies may still be had, uniform with the above, of

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1895. With an Epistle Dedicatory to Mr Robert W. Lowe. By WILLIAM ARCHER.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1894. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction by GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1893. By WILLIAM ARCHER. With a Prefatory Letter by ARTHUR W. PINERO, and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

Edited by HAVELOCK ELLIS

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. each; some volumes at 6s.

TWO NEW VOLUMES

READY SHORTLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

HALLUCINATIONS and ILLUSIONS.

A Study of the Fallacies of Perception. By EDMUND PARISH.

This work deals not only with the pathology of the subject, but with the occurrence of the phenomena among normal persons, bringing together the international statistics of the matter. It discusses fully the causation of hallucinations and the various theories that have been put forward, and, further, it examines and adversely criticizes the evidence which has been brought forward in favour of telepathy.

READY SHORTLY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

The PSYCHOLOGY of the EMOTIONS.

By Prof. TH. RIBOT.

The latest and most important work of Prof. Ribot, editor of La Revue Philosophique, and the chief living French psychologist. The work contains a very full exposition and defence of the physiological theory of the emotions, which has lately caused much discussion. This theory regards all emotions, from the most elementary to the most exalted and refined, from—to quote one of the author's examples—the pain of a corn to the grief of unattained ideals of Michael Angelo's sonnets, as of identical nature, in the sense that they are the effect and not the cause of bodily changes, and that it is, therefore, incorrect to speak of the "expression of the emotions," the emotion itself being the consciousness of what we call its expression. In the course of his wide ranging exposition the author deals with the social and moral feelings, the sexual instinct, religion, art, the psychology of laughter, the morbid emotions, the classification of characters and temperaments, &c.

NEW EDITIONS RECENTLY ISSUED.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. with numerous Illustrations. SECOND EDITION.

MAN and WOMAN. A Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters.

By HAVELOCK ELLIS.

"Mr. Havelock Ellis belongs, in some measure, to the continental school of anthropologists; but while equally methodical in the collection of facts, he is far more cautious in the invention of theories, and he has the further distinction of being not only able to think, but able to write. His book is a sane and impartial consideration, from a psychological and anthropological point of view, of a subject which is certainly of primary interest."—Athenæum.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

FOURTH EDITION, COMPLETELY REVISED.

HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll.

The new edition of this work—which is the most authoritative on the subject—has been revised throughout, and a considerable quantity of new and important matter added.

IBSEN.

CHEAP EDITIONS OF SEPARATE PLAYS.

Crown 8vo. paper covers, 1s. each.

The WILD DUCK [1884]. Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

The LADY from the SEA [1888]. Translated by Mrs. F. E. ARCHER.

GHOSTS [1881]. Translated by William ARCHER.

ROSMERSHOLM [1886]. Translated by CHARLES ARCHER.

An ENEMY of the PEOPLE [1882]. Translated by Mrs. ELEANOR MARX AVELING.

Paper covers, 2s.

A DOLL'S HOUSE. With a number of Photographic Illustrations.

COUNT TOLSTOY AS THE DELINEATOR OF WAR.

HIS LONGEST AND MOST MAGNIFICENT WORK.

ISSUE IN TWO DOUBLE VOLUMES, 7s. the Set.

WAR and PEACE. By Count Tolstoy.

Contains 1600 pages, printed in very clear type.

THE TWO CYCLING BOOKS OF THE SEASON.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2s. 6d.

LADY CYCLING. By Miss F. J. ERSKINE.

"Should be useful to many a novice, and, indeed, if they would only act on the advice it gives, to many who are not novices."—Times.

Fcap. 8vo. cloth gilt, elegant, 2s. 6d.

ALL-ROUND CYCLING. By Sir

R. W. RICHARDSON, G. LACY HILLIER, EVELYN EVERETT GREEN, C. RIVERS VINE, JOHN WATSON, F.C.S., and P. A. THOMAS, B.A.

"Bound to interest all cyclists."—Black and White.

London:

WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED, Paternoster-square.

DOWNEY & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

LIMITED EDITION OF THE NOVELS OF CHARLES LEVER.

Edited by his DAUGHTER.

With all the Original Illustrations on Steel and Wood by PHIZ, CRUIKSHANK, LUKE FILDES, and other Artists.

"Here is a new edition of Lever which it is a positive pleasure to read and handle.... The printing and get-up are superb."—Westminster Gazette.

"Nothing has been left undone to make this edition as complete and satisfactory as possible."—Scotsman.

"If good paper, clear print, excellent binding, and last, but not least, Phiz's inimitable illustrations count for anything, the latest edition of the novels of Charles Lever will be speedily exhausted."—Pall Mall Gazette.

Crown 8vo. 6s.

A DOCTOR'S IDLE HOURS. [This day.

MISS EMILY SOLDENE'S RECOLLECTIONS.

MY THEATRICAL and MUSICAL RECOLLECTIONS.

Second Edition. Demy 8vo. with 7 Portraits, 10s. 6d.

"I hear everybody is buying the book."
Illustrated London News.

"A veritable mine of anecdote."—Newcastle Leader.

"One of the most diverting and readable autobiographies of recent years."—World.

FITZGERALD MOLLOY'S HISTORICAL AND BIOGRAPHICAL STUDIES.

Each Volume in crown 8vo. cloth gilt, with a Frontispiece, price 5s.

The MOST GORGEOUS LADY BLESSINGTON.

The LIFE and ADVENTURES of EDMUND KEAN.

ROYALTY RESTORED; or, London under Charles II.

COURT LIFE BELOW STAIRS; or, London under the First Georges.

COURT LIFE BELOW STAIRS; or, London under the Last Georges.

PEG WOFFINGTON: with Pictures of the Period in which she lived. [In the press.

Large crown 8vo. with a Photogravure Portrait, 6s.

The MEMOIRS of LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD.

By THOMAS MOORE. With a Preface and many Supplementary Particulars by MARTIN MAC DERMOTT. [This day.

NEW NOVELS.

TWO SINNERS. By Lily Thicknesse, Author of 'Egeria.' 6s. [This day.

A ROGUE'S CONSCIENCE. By DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY. 3s. 6d.

"Thoroughly enjoyable.....Full of sound workmanship and memorable adventure."—Pall Mall Gazette.

DID HE DESERVE IT? By Mrs. RIDDELL. 6s.

"We welcome without fear or favour a story which is worthy of the author of 'George Geith.'"—World.

A JUSTIFIED SINNER. By Fitzgerald Molloy. 6s.

"Thoroughly interesting."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"Here, in a story of intense interest, is traced the life of a man who makes a mistake in essaying matrimony.....The story holds the reader's closest attention."—Lloyd's.

DINAH FLEET. By John Hill and G. F. BACON. 6s.

"We must congratulate the collaborators on 'Dinah Fleet.' .....There are nearly a dozen characters, and not one of them ever says a dull or stupid thing. Their dialogue is all as smart as smart can be.....The book is very lively reading."
Daily Chronicle.

The DUNTHORPES of WESTLEIGH. By CHRISTIAN LYS. 6s.

"Even a jaded reviewer found 'The Dunthorpes' kept him awake until long after midnight."—New Saturday.

A BIT of a FOOL. By Sir Robert PEEL. Second Edition. 6s.

"A delightful volume ....' A Bit of a Fool' indeed, though it wears the form of a novel, may safely be said, from the moralist's point of view, to have no equal in literature more recent than 'The Confessions of St. Augustine.'"
British Review.

LOVE in OLD CLOATHES. By H. C. BUNNER. Illustrated. 5s.

"Graceful humour from which the pathetic is never absent."—Scotsman.

12, York-street, Covent-garden, London.

DAVID NUTT, 270–271, Strand.

JUST PUBLISHED.

DICTIONARY of the TEBELE and SHUNA LANGUAGES. With Illustrative Examples and some Grammatical Notes. Compiled and prepared by W. A. ELLIOTT, London Missionary Society. 16mo. xxxviii–441 pages, cloth, 10*s.* net.

 The English - Tebele - Shuna Vocabulary occupies 179 pages; the Tebele-English Vocabulary 78 pages; the Shuna - English Vocabulary 180 pages.

This is the first vocabulary of the language of the Matabele, the northernmost branch of the Zulu race; and the first work in which the language of the Mashona has been reduced to writing and studied grammatically and lexicographically. It thus makes an important contribution to South African philology, and is of practical importance for emigrants to Rhodesia.

The LITURGY of the NILE. The Palestinian Syriac Text. Edited from a Unique MS. in the British Museum, with a Translation, Introduction, Vocabulary, and 2 Photo-lithographic Plates, by G. MARGOLIOUTH, M.A. Reprinted from the Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society. 5*s.* net.

MASSILIA-CARTHAGO SACRIFICE TABLETS of the WORSHIP of BAAL. Reproduced in Facsimile, Edited, Translated, and compared with the Levitical Code by the Rev. J. M. MACDONALD, Houghton Syriac Prizeman, Oxford. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

The APOCRYPHAL GOSPELS and other DOCUMENTS relating to the HISTORY of CHRIST. Translated from the Originals in Greek, Syriac, Latin, &c. With Notes, Scriptural References, and Prolegomena, by B. HARRIS COWPER. Sixth Edition. Crown 8vo. cxii–456 pages, cloth, 5*s.*

The JEWISH LAW of DIVORCE according to BIBLE and TALMUD, with some References to its Development in Post-Talmudic Times. By DAVID WERNER AMRAM, M.A., Member of the Philadelphia Bar. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

The LOGICAL COPULA and the QUANTIFICATION of the PREDICATE. By E. ADAMSON. Demy 8vo. 1*s.* net.

THE FIRST ENGLISH EDITION OF

DR. A. L. CRELLE'S CALCULATING TABLES. Giving the Products of every Two Numbers from 1 to 1,000, and their application to the Multiplication and Division of all Numbers above 1,000. Revised by C. BREMIKER. A handsome 4to. Volume of over 1,000 pages, cloth, 1*l.* 1*s.*

READY JUNE 1.

LIFE in EARLY BRITAIN. Being an Account of the Early Inhabitants of this Island and the Memorials which they have left behind them. By BERTRAM C. A. WINDLE, Dean of the Medical Faculty, Mason College, Birmingham. Crown 8vo. viii–234 pages, with Map of Early Britain, showing Roads and Places of Importance, and 67 Illustrations, many Full Page, cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

 American orders for Prof. Windle's Book should be sent to Messrs. PUTNAM'S SONS, New York.

READY JUNE 5.

A NEW AND CHEAP EDITION OF

CAOBA, the GUERILLA CHIEF. A Real Romance of the Cuban Rebellion. By P. H. EMERSON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

Some Press Notices.

Spectator.—"This striking romance."

British Review.—"Full of highly coloured incident and adventure."

European Mail.—"Exciting and vividly interesting from beginning to finish."

Morning Leader.—"Written with spirit and intimate knowledge of the life on the unhappy island."

Leeds Mercury.—"A vivid and startling romance of war and adventure."

Daily Chronicle.—"An admirable description of life on a large sugar plantation."

Scotsman.—"Will be read with profit and interest by all who are concerned in the present war between the Spanish rulers and the people."

Manchester Courier.—"Interesting and exciting."

Irish Daily Independent.—"The writer possessing the narrative power in its happiest strain."

Observer.—"An interesting, though necessarily somewhat bloodthirsty account of the Cuban rebellion."

Glasgow Herald.—"Vivid description of the atrocities of which both Cubans and Peninsulares are capable."

Daily Telegraph.—"A trustworthy record of the principal incidents of the uprising which convulsed the Pearl of the Antilles a quarter of a century ago."

Dundee Courier.—"Full of stirring adventure and thrilling incidents."

East Anglian Times.—"The description of the gorgeous tropical scenery of the island is admirably done."

Aberdeen Free Press.—"Marked by keen observation and genuine poetic feeling."

Photographic News.—"Glows with vivid descriptions and word-pictures."

Manchester Guardian.—"Mr. Emerson succeeds in creating an atmosphere redolent of the sweet, drowsy fragrance of a luxuriant tropical island."

British Journal of Photography.—"Many dramatic themes, handled with rare skill and firmness."

Western Morning News.—"Nearly every page is marked by fidelity to reality, so lifelike are the scenes presented to the reader."

Birmingham Gazette.—"A most interesting, though at times—perhaps of necessity—blood-curdling romance."

OTHER WORKS BY DR. EMERSON.

ON ENGLISH LAGOONS. A Year's Yachting, Fishing, and Shooting on the Norfolk and Suffolk Broads. Cheap Edition. 3*s.*

TALES from WELSH WALES. Cheap Edition. 2*s.*

BIRDS, BEASTS, and FISHES of the NORFOLK BROADLAND. Demy 8vo. profusely illustrated, 12*s.* 6*d.*

MARSH LEAVES. Royal 8vo. illus- trated with Photo-Etchings from the Author's Photographs, 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

[Nearly out of print.

RECENT PUBLICATIONS.

STORIES of EVERYDAY LIFE in MODERN CHINA. By T. WATTERS. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The CELTIC CHURCH of WALES. By J. W. WILLIS BUND. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

ELEMENTS of HEBREW GRAMMAR. By the Rev. H. M. ADLER. 1*s.* net.

MAORI TALES and LEGENDS. By E. M'COSH CLARK. 6*s.*

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

The ANCIENT HEBREW TRADI- TION as ILLUSTRATED by the MONUMENTS. A Protest against the Modern School of Old Testament Criticism. By Dr. FRITZ HOMMEL, Professor of the Semitic Languages in the University of Munich. Translated from the German by EDMUND McCLURE, M.A., and LEONARD CROSSLE. With Map. Large post 8vo. buckram boards, 5*s.*

Deals from an entirely new point of view with the Graf-Wellhausen position, and shows that it is utterly untenable.

OUTLINES of the HISTORY of the THEOLOGICAL LITERATURE of the CHURCH of ENGLAND from the REFORMATION to the CLOSE of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. The Bishop Paddock Lectures. By JOHN DOWDEN, D.D., Bishop of Edinburgh. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 3*s.*

DIOCESAN HISTORIES.—LIN- COLN. By the late Rev. Canon E. VENABLES and the late Ven. Archdeacon PERRY. With Map. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4*s.*

DIOCESAN HISTORIES.— ROCHESTER. By the Rev. A. J. PEARMAN, M.A. With Map. Fcap. 8vo. cloth boards, 4*s.*

CHRIST in HIS HOLY LAND. A Life of our Lord, written during and after a Journey through the Holy Land. By the Rev. ALEXANDER A. BODDY, F.R.G.S. With Map and several Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth boards, 4*s.*

ADDRESSES to LADS. By the Rev. Prof. H. C. SHUTTLEWORTH. Small post 8vo. cloth boards, 1*s.* 6*d.*

CHURCH CATECHISM, with Notes. Illustrated by 12 Coloured Plates and 36 Cuts in the Text, with Notes. By E. M. New Edition. Small post 8vo. paper boards, 1*s.*

The DESOLATE SOUL. Poems by MARIA MONICA. Fcap. 8vo. limp cloth, 1*s.*

"In such poetry as this the religious world has a possession of which it cannot long be unaware."—Academy.

The QUEEN, HER EMPIRE, and the ENGLISH-SPEAKING WORLD. The "Diamond" Jubilee, 1837–1897.

This volume, specially prepared for the approaching celebration of the "Record Reign," consists of:—

1. A LIFE of QUEEN VICTORIA. By Mrs. ISLA SITWELL. A short but comprehensive sketch of Her Majesty's life, illustrated by a recent Portrait of the Queen.
2. The BRITISH EMPIRE. Selected Views of the Colonies and Dependencies of the Crown, including the following countries:—India, Australasia, Africa, Egypt, Canada, Bermuda, Jamaica, Bahamas, &c.
3. The ENGLISH-SPEAKING WORLD. Fifty Views selected from those of the most interesting places in America.

Over 130 Illustrations carefully reproduced from Copyright Photographs, constituting the most complete set of views on the subject ever published. Large portfolio size, cloth boards, 5*s.*

LIFE of HER MAJESTY the QUEEN. With Sketches of the Royal Family. A "Diamond" Jubilee Memoir. Copiously illustrated. Fcap. 4to. cloth boards, 2*s.* 6*d.*

THE CHURCH HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

These Publications are issued under the auspices of the Church Historical Society, of which the President is the Right Rev. M. CREIGHTON, D.D., Bishop of London.

XXII. The ELIZABETHAN BISHOPS and the CIVIL POWER. Statute 8 Eliz. c. 1 (A.D. 1565–66). Small post 8vo. paper cover, 2*d.*

 A Complete List of the Church Historical Society's Publications may be had on application.

London: Northumberland-avenue, W.C.; 43, Queen Victoria-street, E.C.

Brighton: 129, North-street.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for JUNE, 1897.

1. DEAR FAUSTINA. (Conclusion.)
2. The GIRLHOOD of a POLISH PRINCESS.
3. FRIDAY'S CHURCH.
4. The STORY of the NEW SOUTH WALES CONTINGENT, 1885.
5. A DAY of HUMILIATION.
6. ANGEL O.
7. A VILLAGE DISCUSSION FORUM.
8. MISS FLOOKS' FEELINGS.
9. OUR MEN of LETTERS and OUR EMPIRE.
10. IN a VISIBLE FORM.
11. A PLEA for the STUDY of SONNETS.
12. REDPOLL'S MARRIAGE. (Conclusion.)

ON JUNE 1 WILL BE PUBLISHED,

LETTERS FROM THE BLACK SEA

During the Crimean War, 1854-55.

By Admiral SIR LEOPOLD HEATH, K.C.B.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Illustrations and Plans, 7*s.* 6*d.*

A NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NANCY,' &c.

DEAR FAUSTINA.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Red as a Rose is She.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"The dénoûment brings to an artistic and natural close a study of contemporary manners which will certainly enhance the author's reputation as an alert and penetrating observer of her sex."
World.

A SOCIAL SATIRE.—NOW READY.

PANTALAS.

By EDWARD JENKINS,
Author of 'Ginx's Baby.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

"It is difficult to know whether most to admire the humour and force of the picture of men and life which it presents or the profundity of its teaching as a lesson in sociology. It is in its way a brilliant little study in a great subject, full of sound common sense and quiet humour."—Scotsman.

"A very clever satire. Mr. Jenkins has a virile caustic wit, and plies the lash with airy cultured skill."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW NOVEL.—JUST READY.

A TRICK OF FAME.

By H. HAMILTON FYFE,
Author of 'A Player's Tragedy.'

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s.*

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'In a Country Town' is a simple study of a girl's life, and with all its simplicity we can congratulate the author in having, in Brunhild, accomplished a really fine bit of character study. Miss Perceval writes with a single directness and a humorous appreciation of life in provincial places, particularly where interesting curates and romantic maidens are concerned."—Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

TO BE PUBLISHED IN A FEW DAYS.
In 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portrait of Author, 12*s.*

AN OLD SOLDIER'S MEMORIES.

By S. H. JONES-PARRY, J.P. D.L.,
Late Captain Royal Dublin Fusiliers,
Author of 'My Journey round the World,' &c.

NEW EDITION, CONDENSED, REVISED, AND WITH MUCH NEW MATERIAL.

Now ready at all Booksellers', in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Portrait of Lady Hamilton, gilt top, 6*s.*

LADY HAMILTON AND LORD NELSON.

AN HISTORICAL BIOGRAPHY.

Based on Letters and other Documents in the Morrison Collection.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,
Author of 'The Real Lord Byron,' &c.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

NOW READY, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The TAME FOX, and other Sketches.

By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure 'The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6*s.*

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR SHIPS and their COMMANDERS.

By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."
ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.
Ready on Tuesday next, June 1, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6*s.*

SALTED with FIRE.

By George MAC DONALD, LL.D., Author of 'Robert Falconer,' 'Sir Gibbie,' &c.

A FLAME of FIRE.

By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"'A Flame of Fire' deserves commendation for a certain picturesqueness and vigour of writing, for strongly-conceived incident, and for the bold incisiveness of its descriptive passages."—Globe.

BROKEN THREADS.

By Compton READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"There is bright comedy all through Mr. Compton Reade's story, with just so much serious interest as is necessary to keep the book from being frivolous or trifling."
Scotsman.

The SILENCE BROKEN.

By G. M. ROBINS (Mrs. BAILLIE REYNOLDS), Author of 'The Ides of March,' 'Her Point of View,' &c. 1 vol. small crown 8vo. 2*s.*

"An interesting little character-sketch, involving a ghost story of real charm and pathos. Mrs Robins's style has distinction and force, nor does she lay her colours on too thickly."—Pall Mall Gazette.

WITHOUT ISSUE.

By Henry CRESSWELL, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A well-constructed plot, involved, but never passing the limitations of probability; a very excellent piece of work in every respect."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The writer well understands the value of an interesting opening chapter to a work of fiction, and, having aroused the attention of the reader at the outset, Mr. Cresswell holds him absorbed to the end."—Dundee Advertiser.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

SIAM;

ON THE MEINAM FROM THE GULF OF AYUTHIA.

By MAXWELL SOMMERVILLE,
Professor of Pennsylvania University.

Together with Three Romances illustrative of Siamese Life and Customs.

With 50 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. cloth, 14*s.*

PEN and PENCIL in PARLIAMENT.

By HARRY FURNISS. Profusely illustrated by the Author. Crown 4to. cloth, 5*s.*

READY EARLY IN JUNE.

POPULAR ROYALTY.

By ARTHUR H. BEAVAN, Author of 'Marlborough House and its Occupants.' Demy 8vo. cloth, 10*s.* 6*d.*

This book contains life-sketches of Her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Family, besides four chapters reviewing the national advance and changes during the last seventy or eighty years. A special feature will be the numerous full-page illustrations, which appear by the special permission of Her Majesty the Queen, the Empress Frederick, and the members of the Royal Family, some of whom have contributed the photographs themselves. The frontispiece will consist of a photogravure reproduction of the original jewelled miniature of the Queen, presented by Her Majesty to the Emperor of China.

READY EARLY IN JUNE.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATIONS,

1827-1892. The Experiences of Sixty-five Years from the Accession of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence as Lord High Admiral to the End of the Naval Administration of Lord George Hamilton. By the late Sir JOHN HENRY BRIGGS, Reader to the Lords and Chief Clerk to the Admiralty. Edited by Lady BRIGGS. Illustrated with 10 Photogravure Portraits. Demy 8vo. cloth, ONE GUINEA.

 Prospectus sent on application.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND THE LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

THE LIFE OF NELSON

The Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain.

By Capt. A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N.,
Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c.

2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics.....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6*s.*

PUNCH says:—"Ouida's latest novel, 'The Massarenes,' is from every point of view excellent."

TRUTH says:—"So interesting that in spite of its exceptional length it will seem to most readers tantalizingly short."

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

A Tale of the Australian Bush. By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

"Strikingly original and ingenious, animating, interesting, and puzzling.....Deserves grateful recognition by lovers of tales well told."—World.

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED. T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.'

"The development of events is extremely interesting; it is invested at various stages with fine touches of tenderness, and the racy dialogue is a constant source of enjoyment."
Scotsman.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

BRISEIS.

By William Black.

Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

JUNE NUMBER.

FULL OF INTERESTING ARTICLES AND CHARMING ILLUSTRATIONS.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

SATURDAY, MAY 29, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
SIR EVELYN WOOD'S ACHIEVEMENTS OF CAVALRY ...	707
A BOOK ON SOCIAL LIFE IN THE VICTORIAN AGE ...	708
SCOTTISH POETRY OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY ...	70
A BOOK ON BOOK COLLECTING AND STORING	710
A DUTCH ACCOUNT OF THE LOMBOCK EXPEDITION ...	710
NEW NOVELS (Mr. Peters; A Long Probation; Carlton Priors; Adoptée)	711
JAMES'S PHILOSOPHICAL ESSAYS	711
SHORT STORIES	712
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	713—714
THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY'; SALE OF THE PHILLIPPS MSS.; TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY	714—715
LITERARY GOSSIP	715
SCIENCE—THE DAWN OF MODERN GEOGRAPHY; THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S PROJECTED CATALOGUE; MYTHIC SINGING CROCODILES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	715—718
FINE ARTS—FOREIGN BOOKBINDING; LIBRARY TABLE; THE SALONS AT PARIS; SIR A. W. FRANKS, P.S.A.; THE SILCHESTER EXCAVATIONS; SALES; GOSSIP	718—722
MUSIC—THE WEEK; THE FEIS CEOIL; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	722—724
DRAMA—THE WEEK; LIBRARY TABLE; GOSSIP ...	724
MISCELLANEA	724

LITERATURE

Achievements of Cavalry. By General Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., G.C.B., G.C.M.G. (Bell & Sons.)

SIR EVELYN WOOD is an eminently suitable person to write about cavalry, for having once served in that arm he possesses practical knowledge, and his later employments have enabled him to take a comprehensive and dispassionate view of the subject. In his preface, indeed, he tells us that

"when commanding the Aldershot District I came to the conclusion that our cavalry officers were being discouraged at field-days by the system of umpiring, which was faulty in that it did not represent the probable results of war. This was so because it was assumed that the effect of rifle fire on service nearly equalled that obtained on the range, and also because we over-estimated the value of Artillery practise when guns were laid on moving objects."

In short, the umpire's rules were too theoretical and did not make allowance for the human element, i. e., for the moral effect of a cavalry charge. Sir Evelyn goes on to say that cavalry is as important as it ever was, but that it requires great skill to handle it. This view of the matter we have ourselves always taken.

For the benefit of young cavalry officers Sir Evelyn has given accounts of twelve actions in which cavalry have distinguished themselves. One of the most striking and impressive instances of what determined cavalry skilfully led can do was seen at Villers-en-Cauchies. Early in the wars of the Revolution two squadrons of Austrian Hussars (Leopold) and two squadrons of the British 15th Light Dragoons were acting as the advanced guard of a cavalry division. This advanced guard was commanded by Baron Sentheresky. The French had some 25,000 men about Cambray and Bouchain, and, having with their advanced troops driven the Hessian outposts across the Sellé, were on April 24th, 1792, advancing in three columns to raise the siege of Landrecies, and there was, too, some chance of their capturing the Emperor of Germany on his way from Brussels to the army. Starting at daybreak on the same day before communication had been established with the cavalry division in their rear, the four squadrons, about 7 A.M., discovered a body of French cavalry seven or eight hundred strong, who retired on a body of troops of all arms near Villers-en-Cauchies. The four allied squadrons, seeing that they were largely outnumbered and that their own supporting division was not in view, hesitated for an instant:—

"The officers, however, pointed out to their men that they had advanced too far to be able to retreat with security, and that victory was essential for the safety of the Emperor. It was agreed an attack should be made. The Austrian and English squadron leaders having first sworn on crossed swords to ride home, which agreement the men ratified by their cheers, the order to advance was given."

After this dramatic scene the Austrian Hussars manœuvred so as to fall on the enemy's left flank, while the Light Dragoons under Major Aylett made straight for the foe. Advancing first at a trot, which was changed into a gallop when 150 yards from the enemy, they saw the French cavalry wheel outward while 60 yards yet separated them. This movement was the result of calculation, not of fear, for the French, in clearing the front, uncovered a battery of artillery, which opened fire too quickly, injuring their own troopers more than their opponents. In rear of the guns was a large oblong square of six battalions, in rear of which again were some more horsemen, on whom the retreating cavalry rallied. The square fired a volley, and the artillery poured in an oblique fire from both flanks. The 15th Light Dragoons, having no second line to fall back on, wavered at first under the fire to which they were subjected.

"This hesitation, however, was but momentary, for presently, encouraged and led on by their officers, the squadrons dashed into the square, Major Aylett being bayoneted through the body as he entered it, and three other officers having their horses wounded. Half the square now dispersed; the other half fired another volley, and remained firm until the Light Dragoons turned on them, when the whole mass broke up. The French cavalry fled before the Hussars, abandoning the infantry, which was pursued for half a mile, the fugitives being cut down in all directions."

Leaving then the Austrian Hussars to continue the pursuit, the English squadrons proceeded rapidly on towards Bouchain, dispersing a line of fifty guns and ammunition waggons which were retiring towards the fortress. After six miles of audacious advance they came under the fire of the guns of Bouchain, from which issued a body of French troops. The rally having been sounded, and the disordered squadrons formed up, the bold horsemen retired at a steady trot, threading their way between hostile forces, who, fortunately, mistook them for friends. On nearing Villers-en-Cauchies, they found the causeway which led across a valley barred by a body of French infantry and guns. Emboldened by seeing the supporting division (which had at length come up) on the south side of the village, the 15th first changed front to rear to check their pursuers, then reversed their front, and dashing at the enemy, who lay between them and safety, cut their way through under a heavy, but not particularly effective fire of musketry and artillery. It is not mentioned where the Austrians were during the latter part of the affair; probably they had fallen back on the cavalry division. The loss of the Austrians was 20 of all ranks and 22 horses killed, wounded, and missing out of 240 mounted men; and of the 15th, out of 187, 31 of all ranks and 37 horses killed and wounded. None of the 15th fell into the hands of the enemy. The French left 800 dead on the field, and carried off in waggons between 300 and 400 wounded men. To explain the almost incredible feat of the four allied squadrons at Villers-en-Cauchies, we may observe that the French were raw levies, badly armed, badly mounted, and imperfectly disciplined. Still, in spite of these favourable circumstances, the success of the allies was due to the fact that well-horsed, well-trained cavalry were led by officers not only warlike, but skilful. Every officer of the 15th present on the occasion—Sir Robert Wilson was one of them—received first a gold medal from the grateful Emperor, and afterwards the coveted Cross of Maria Theresa.

We have dwelt at some length on this splendid achievement because, although it is seldom that cavalry have so distinguished themselves, yet they have often, as Sir Evelyn Wood shows in the book before us, changed the fortune of the day. The battle of Marengo is a striking instance. On the evening of that fierce contest the younger Kellermann, seeing a French battalion in his front waver, dashed to the place with 400 sabres in column of quarter squadrons, wheeled into line, charged the flank of the leading Austrian brigade, seemingly on the point of victory, and caused 2,000 infantry to throw down their arms and surrender, with six colours and four guns. The charge was skilful and opportune, but it was not a desperate act of courage. It, however, decided the day.

Among more recent instances of the way in which cavalry have upset a greatly superior force of infantry may be mentioned two of which the scene was the battle of Custozza. In one instance a single Austrian squadron attacked an Italian brigade of five battalions, and, catching it in column of route, drove it back in confusion, capturing two guns. The squadron—or, to be strictly accurate, three out of the four troops of a squadron — belonged to the Austrian regiment of Sicilian Lancers, numbered 101 of all ranks, and at the end of the day their commander could only muster 17 men in the saddle. On the opposite side of the field two brigades of Austrian cavalry attacked two divisions, and, though repulsed, arrested all day the advance of thirty-six battalions of Italian infantry.

In his description of the affair of Garcia Hernandez, on July 23rd, 1812, where five squadrons of the German Legion broke two squares, and captured a general and 1,000 men, Sir Evelyn strives to set the reader right as to the effect of modern rifles on charging cavalry. He says:—

"Some soldiers, especially those who have not seen hard fighting, believe that efficient well-trained infantry can always stop by volleys the advance of cavalry, while it is still far distant. They argue from the range practises of our musketry courses, that modern rifles render past experience of little value, and to a certain extent this is so when the ground offers a perfect view of troops advancing to the attack; but then such ground is seldom available in war.... Those who read Achievement No. 11 will observe that the position of the dead men and horses in the undulating ground near Mars la Tour..... shows that the only serious loss in squadron occurred just as they closed on the infantry. That infantry had as good a rifle (for this argument) as any now in use, and the Regimental Records prove clearly that while some men fell under distant rifle fire during the advance, yet the formation was not seriously deranged till the last volley struck the squadrons just as they closed on the foe."

In fact, the cavalry were practically beaten off at Mars la Tour as they were at Waterloo, and smooth-bore muskets would have been as effective as rifles. As Sir Evelyn Wood justly remarks, the human heart is no firmer than it was seventy years ago, and, as the late Capt. Nolan used to argue, cavalry, if determined to ride home, have a good chance of success provided that the only serious loss is incurred within the last twenty or thirty yards; but then how often are cavalry determined to ride home? and how often do they carry out their resolve?

Social Transformations of the Victorian Age. By T. H. S. Escott. (Seeley & Co.)

Mr. Escott has brought up to date in a single volume, and in lighter form, his successful 'England, its People, Polity, and Pursuits'; but 'Social Transformations' is essentially a new book, and its chatty gossip, marked by a genial optimism, will not supersede the heavier work of twenty years ago.

Optimism is characteristic of the writer. It is also appropriate to the occasion of publication in this year of Jubilee. Moreover, the subject is one which undoubtedly lends itself to such treatment. But, as an example of the length to which Mr. Escott's optimism goes, we may take gaming and betting. Supposing it to be true that cards and wagers are less general or usual than they were among the rich, is it not certain that betting on horse races and on football has enormously increased among the humbler classes? and is it not also certain that the evil, considered not as a class evil, but as a national evil, is extending every day? Mr. Escott congratulates us on the improvement in London society, and is silent on the opposite tendency in the mass of the people.

Mr. Escott claims for Prince Albert credit for having suggested "Palmerston's Folly," or in other words the expenditure of eleven millions on fortification. It is usual now to blame this proposal. If the command of the Channel were lost a combination of powers might strike at London, but would hardly sit down to besiege Portsmouth from the land side.

The following passages form a good specimen of Mr. Escott's book:—

"Macready was in his day almost as much a favourite with the clergy of the Established Church as, since his 'The Sign of the Cross,' Mr. Wilson Barrett has become in ours. If the Etonian Keate inspired respect by the consciousness of his having birched future generations of statesmen, the Etonian [sic] Macready reflected the prestige of respectability upon his profession from the fact that during his retirement at Sherborne in Dorsetshire, most of the Anglican clergy noticeable for their elocution had received lessons from him in the art of reading. Charles Kean's acting life covered the period between 1820 and 1868. Like Macready, he was a favourite in the provinces before he made his mark on the London boards. With him there began, or was fairly established, the improvement of stage, scenery, costume, and in all incidental accessories that has been brought to so high a point of perfection by the genius, industry, and well-judged lavishness of Henry Irving. Byron's enthusiasm still glows in the words of his famous eulogy on the acting of Charles Kean's father, Edmund Kean.....The energy, passion and fire of the Keans marked a reaction from, and were to some extent a protest against the stately and frigid classicism of the school of Kemble. They thus appropriately coincided in point of time with that romantic movement in English poetry which in his satire Byron ridiculed, but which in his practice he did so much to promote."

"From the personal life, character and wide social acceptance both of Macready first and of Charles Kean afterwards, the English drama directly, as well as indirectly, was a gainer. In those days the social fusion was not nearly so complete as it has since become; but Macready and the younger Kean had both been popular in their school days. In after life Rugby and Eton respectively rallied round them. The amalgamating agency of the Garrick Club, practically so familiar at rather a later day, was not then an operative force. But of the Athenæum and similar institutions Macready and in his turn Kean must have been free; their private acquaintances and visiting lists were as large and as representative as those of their successors during the present decade of the Queen's reign. It is not, however, under a dynasty of high tragedians that the full development, as a social and intellectual force, of the Victorian drama was to be attained. Long after the theatre became respectable, it remained dull. The audience seldom dwindled to the point of invisibility which a little time before was in some theatres habitual, and not infrequent in all. Before the period now spoken of, Lord Lytton, of whose place in letters more will be said elsewhere, had gone some way towards repeating the dual successes in Parliament and at the playhouse achieved by Sheridan in an earlier day. 'Money' was produced in 1840. Exactly a quarter of a century afterwards a dramatic hit not less palpable and destined to have results more considerable was made by an author till then little known on the London stage. The year in which 'Society' was played at the Prince of Wales's, till then the Queen's Theatre, in a street off the Tottenham Court Road, will be remembered by the theatre-goer as that in which Henry J. Byron's last burlesque was produced on the same boards and in which one of the actors in that extravaganza, 'Don Giovanni,' Mr. John Hare, took, for the first and only time in his life, a woman's part on the stage, wearing the petticoats of Zerlina, the simple peasant girl. The real significance of this occasion lay in its marking a new era in the fortunes of the nineteenth century drama. The germ of Anthony Trollope's novels of domestic life, may be seen in Bulwer-Lytton's fictions of 'The Caxtons' school. The part performed by the author of 'Society' and its dramatic sequels for the English play resembled the performances of Anthony Trollope with regard to the English novel. Like Bulwer, Robertson fashioned his dialogue on the model of Sheridan. The writer of 'Money' laboured to reproduce the antithetic polish of his original. The author of 'Society' and the series that followed it was attracted rather by the caustic repartee in which the author of 'The School for Scandal' excelled. The change thus introduced at a theatre of which till then few had ever heard, was the substitution of the realities of contemporary life in drawing room, club, shooting field or camp for the threadbare traditions, stilted sentiment, and fustian talk of conventional melodrama. Whether the original were, or were not, too trivial for reproduction, it is at least human nature to which the mirror was now for the first time during recent years held up. The contrast between Robertson and most of his immediate predecessors who were nearly his contemporaries was not less marked than that between those masterpieces of the Laura Matilda school, which delighted Mrs. Whitterly, and the works of Miss Edgeworth, or that between the 'Great Cyrus' and the author of 'Waverley.' The dramatis personæ of Robertson were the men and women, the youths and maidens, the old bucks and young officers, the pretty servant girls, their ogling followers, the dapper apprentices, the seasoned topers whom the English public had long known from Leech's drawings in the 'London Charivari,' but who had not often been met with recently on the London stage. Now, for the first time within the experience of many, the theatre became the fashion..... Even then, however, the first night of a new drama, though at the most popular playhouse fell very short of reproducing the personal distinctions of a première at the Comédie Française or the Palais Royal. That was to follow in due time. Early in the sixties an impresario, with judgment sharpened by American experience, became the lessee of the same theatre, the Lyceum, which twenty years earlier had been managed by Charles Mathews and Madame Vestris. The first great feature in Mr. Bateman's management was the powerful and picturesque acting of his accomplished daughter in 'Leah' first and in some Shakespearian parts afterwards. About the same time an actor with whose name in coming years the Lyceum was to be more widely associated had given the public specimens of an art surprisingly vigorous and picturesque. Henry Irving first played before a London audience in 1859. In 1866 he had the good fortune to be cast with Miss Herbert (Mrs. Crabbe) in one of those character parts in which he has had few equals, the worthless, persecuting husband in 'Hunted Down.'..... The most accomplished dramatic critic whom in England the century has produced, George Henry Lewes, and the lady who bore his name, but is best known to the public as George Eliot, author of 'Adam Bede,' both witnessed the début. 'Ten or fifteen years hence,' said the gentleman, 'that young man will be where Kean once was, at the head of the English stage.' 'In my opinion,' faintly murmured the lady, 'he is there already.'"

"The theatre with us was firmly established as an honourable and lucrative institution directly men of intellectual power and of competent education began to throw their energies into it as they might have done into the law, the legislature or any other of the liberal professions. Samuel Phelps was born some ten years later than Macready; he was trained in Macready's company; under him Sadler's Wells became once more the prosperous school of classical drama. Some years junior to Phelps, Walter Montgomery laboured in the same line. Both of those men unconsciously were preparing the way for Henry Irving; they were each endowed with high gifts of mind as well as with shrewd common sense. Their detractors of course were not wanting. Neither Montgomery nor Phelps, on the score of public appreciation, had more reason to complain than Henry Irving himself. If, therefore, the reason is asked for the revived popularity of the play in all grades of English life, the answer must be not so much the exceptional brilliance of individual successes as the qualifications of industry not less than aptitude which a succession of actors has brought to the vocation. Sir Henry Irving, as a stage artist may have his mannerisms or defects. Whatever career he might have embraced, he would have made his mark in it, because, besides being a great actor, he is a remarkably clever and far-seeing man. He is therefore in this way historically true to the best associations of his art.....In accounting for the approximation as to popularity of a London to a Paris première which to-day so much impresses the foreign visitor, other circumstances must be remembered. During the last decade or two, especially since the collapse of the second French Empire, the English capital has been, to an entirely new extent, the pleasure ground of the world, and at all seasons of the year contains a large floating population of strangers, Anglo-American or European, as well as of British subjects visiting for a few days from other parts of the Kingdom, the capital on the Thames. These birds of passage seldom possess a large social acquaintance in the capital; the men among them do not always belong to clubs; the ladies are too busy shopping to invite, or to make, calls; the theatre is thus for a constantly increasing proportion.....the easiest and the most attractive form of pleasure. Hence as might be expected, the far more amusing repertory of the Victorian theatre at the end of this century than at any previous epoch. With a Pinero, or a Grundy, to mention only two typical names; with pieces so diverting as 'Charley's Aunt,' or 'Bootles' Baby,' to mention only one or two representative plays, the Englishman whose chief pastime the play has become finds laughter-moving relaxation as effectually, more economically, and to himself a great deal more intelligibly within the roar of his own Strand, than by travelling to a Paris boulevard. The integral part now occupied by the play in the life of the most respectable portion of the middle class is shown by the spacious theatres that have lately risen in such decorous suburbs of the metropolis as Brixton."

A few errors will need to be corrected in the next edition.

Scottish Poetry of the Eighteenth Century. 2 vols. Edited by George Eyre-Todd. (Glasgow, Hodge & Co.)

The two concluding volumes of the useful "Abbotsford Series" bear testimony to the care and judgment of their editor to a degree which was not so noteworthy in the earlier parts. To some extent no doubt this is due to the sense of his subject growing upon the writer, an experience familiar enough to those who have grappled with a congenial and important task. Still more may it be referable to the greater wealth of material in text and criticism which belongs to what is not inaptly called the period "fullest in emotional charm of all the epochs of the national muse."

For the stream of Scottish poetry, hitherto intermittent, after the glorious period which contrasted with the dearth in English literature from Chaucer to Surrey, had but a subterranean flow during the polemical age of the seventeenth century, and came to light afresh in its native vigour with Francis Semple and his followers, Lord Yester and Lady Grizel Baillie. "Were na my heart licht I wad dee" can never be forgotten by those who remember Burns's pathetic application of its stanzas. Thenceforward, in the hands of Ramsay and Fergusson, the Hamiltons, Jean Elliot, and Alison Rutherford, the vernacular song gathered force until it reached its culmination in Burns; while Thomson and his school, adhering to classical models, reanimated our verse by the return to nature, and left their mark upon Cowper and Wordsworth, and all English singers since. With this vigorous time Mr. Eyre-Todd has dealt, on the whole, in a scholarly and wise fashion. He is aware of its far-reaching effects, and of the parallel current—for which he awards the much castigated Macpherson some not undeserved credit—which prolonged the influence of old romance to its rich renascence in the hands of Scott. He has omitted, we think, no name of note, and has selected his examples happily. From the prefatory notes in the first volume we gather that he has no doubt that that extremely lawless member of the proscribed Clan Gregor, David Mallet, was the author, by a curious irony of history, of 'Rule Britannia.' That Mallet claimed the sole authorship unfortunately lends the theory no additional probability; but modern opinion seems divided on the subject. Less satisfactory is the ascription in the second volume to "Tibbie" Pagan of that beautiful song "Ca' the yowes to the knowes"; and we should have liked a better authority than Peter Buchan for attributing to George Halket the Jacobite song "Whirry, Whigs, awa'." While we speak of Jacobitism, might not that admirably virulent lilt 'Lady Keith's Lament' have been included in the present period?

> Though lyart be my locks and grey,
> And eild hae crooked me down, what matter?
> I 'll dance and sing ae other day,
> The day our king comes ower the water.

Mr. Todd corrects Stenhouse's error in assigning to Mrs. Scott of Dumbarton the 'Wooed and Married and A'' of that spirited North-Countryman, Alexander Ross. The texts on the whole are satisfactory, though sometimes, as in 'The Kailbrose of Old Scotland,' not those with which we are most familiar. Occasionally a variation dictated by "modern delicacy" is not an improvement. It is "the wooer that 's thowless and cauld," not "thoughtless," who is "unfit for the widow" in Allan Ramsay's song.

Among the best pieces in the first volume are Skinner's well-known 'Ewie wi' the Crookit Horn,' Mickle's 'Sailor's Wife,' the remarkable anonymous poem 'Albania,' and Tobias Smollett's last patriotic stanza, added, as we are reminded, to 'The Tears of Scotland' when a visitor suggested the danger of expressing his feelings:—

> While the warm blood bedews my veins,
> And unimpaired remembrance reigns,
> Resentment of my country's fate
> Within my filial heart shall beat;
> And spite of her insulting foe
> My sympathizing verse shall flow.
> Mourn, hapless Caledonia, mourn
> Thy banished peace, thy laurels torn!

The second and more important volume contains a representative selection from Burns. The editor's prefatory note is moderate and sane in tone, and it is agreeable to mark his recognition of the fact, now thoroughly accepted by the best authorities, that no writer ever made more use of models than the poet; that he is, in fact, the supreme efflorescence of centuries of Scottish song, and his glory, like Shakspeare's, lies in having transmuted into gold the well-worn themes which made the staple of his art. Next in importance to the extracts from Burns may be placed the poetic gems from Lady Nairne, whose 'Laird of Cockpen' and 'Caller Herrin'' deserve an equal immortality. Of other less-known writers there are some fine examples. Nothing in the humorous mood is more vivacious than 'The Siller Gun' of Mayne. The volunteers of Dumfries appear to have been a little to seek in the matter of discipline, like some modern Scottish warriors who lately moved the mirth of Parliament. Their drill instructor's ideal is hardly satisfied.

> "Ohon!" says George, and gae a grane,
> "The age o' chivalry is gane!"
> Syne, having ower and ower again
> The hale surveyed,
> Their route and a' things else made plain,
> He snuffed, and said:
>
> "Now, gentlemen! now mind the motion,
> And dinna this time mak a' botion;
> Shouther your arms!—O, haud them tosh on,
> And not athraw!
> Wheel wi' your left hands to the ocean,
> An' march awa'!"

The last command reminds us of the City colonel who gave "Up Basinghall Street" as the word to his myrmidons.

The "convener of the trades" is delightfully sketched:—

> Attended by his body guard,
> He stepped in gracefulness unpaired,
> Straught as the poplar on the swaird
> And strong as Samson;
> Nae e'e could look without regard
> On Robin Tamson.

To the unknown author of the 'Hars't Rig' we are indebted for an animated picture of Highland and Lowland harvesters in the olden time. The characteristics, gentle enough, of the "trout-shows" (tromhad so=come here) are especially well treated.

William Beattie's 'Winter's Night' depicts to the life the habits and manners of an Aberdeenshire Lowland farm. The fairly numerous extracts from Fergusson may direct attention to an author somewhat unduly neglected, to whom Burns owed several of his choicest themes.

The notes deal, among other matters, with the unhappy piracies of Logan upon his ill-used friend Michael Bruce. Mr. Todd sums up not too severely against the claims of Logan to the 'Ode to the Cuckoo' and certain paraphrases or "Gospel sonnets." It is certain that Logan claimed Dr. Doddridge's well-known piece 'O God of Bethel,' and imported bodily into his 'Braes of Yarrow' four lines from the ancient ballad 'Willie drowned in Yarrow.' In another instance there is less temptation to adopt the editor's judgment. To our thinking, Mrs. Grant (who lived at Carron, on Speyside, and must not be confounded with her celebrated namesake at Laggan) most certainly referred in 'Roy's Wife' to Aldivalloch in the neighbouring Cabrach, and the "Glacks of Balloch" adjoining. It is the universal tradition of the neighbourhood, and the whole turn of the verse, its rhyme of "mine" with "quean" (or "quine," Aberdonicè), bespeaks a Northern subject. The Tayside reference is too remote. We looked to the glossary in vain for new light on the "daimen-icker in a thrave," of which Mr. Jacks, in his late work 'Burns in other Tongues,' gave an unusual interpretation, not since substantiated. But the glossary has never been the point in which the editor of this collection has shown to advantage. In this volume we have the extraordinary rendering of "Broom besoms," per obscurius, "Gorse brooms." Did any one ever use gorse for sweeping purposes? And does not Mr.

Todd know gorse from broom? With this perhaps Philistine criticism we will lay down a book which we can assure him has given us much pleasure, and of which the merits far exceed the defects.

The Private Library. By Arthur L. Humphreys. (Hatchard.)

Supposing that, in answer to some qualm of conscience, one of the eight hundred to a thousand millionaires who, we are told, are at the present day to be found in England alone, should determine to replace by a handsome and well-furnished library the few shelves of books that may be found in an average country house, and supposing, again, he did not, as has been done, charge some bookseller to furnish it with books at so much a yard, the would-be book-owner might be commended to Mr. Humphreys's volume. With a good many thousands to spend and a little information, which Mr. Humphreys does not supply, as to the class of books to order, a very handsome and comfortable room might be provided, in which, in the absence of other occupants, the millionaire might take an agreeable siesta. Valuable hints are thrown out by Mr. Humphreys as to the manner in which books are to be arranged and rendered easily accessible, and the best advice possible is supplied about the ways of guarding the volumes from the manifold dangers to which they are subject.

In addition to his own eminently sage and judicious counsels, moreover, Mr. Humphreys repeats for the advantage of his pupil the best things that have been said by book-lovers of established reputation. From most standpoints the new work is excellent, and from all it is entitled to consideration. There are those, however, and we are of them, to whom its counsels of perfection scarcely appeal. Like the advice of a fashionable doctor to the hard worker to winter in the south of France or take a trip in a sailing ship to Australia and back, they beget a lurking suspicion of ironical intent.

Does a man determine all at once to have a fine library and set to work to collect it? If so, he is greatly to be pitied. It will be when gained as joyless a possession as a gallery of pictures to a blind man. The true book-lover collects, as the poet sings, "because he must." One understands how in Renaissance times, when the passion of learning spread over the world, and books and MSS. were few, Dukes of Florence or Urbino sent round the world to collect treasures, just as the senate of Venice, with a kindred passion for architecture, exacted a toll of marbles from ships that entered the port. That is a princely fashion by which the world has hugely profited. These are days in which splendid private libraries are dispersed rather than accumulated, and the noble collections that were once the pride of our "great houses" are now dispersed over England and America. Big collectors, ordinarily of a slightly inferior social station, still exist, and have their lives written by Mr. Quaritch. We understand, for instance, how, like another Turner, to avoid the mention of names of living men, a book-buyer commissions the greatest dealers of the world to send him or report to him any choice or unique specimen that comes within their ken. Unless he waits with anxiety for its arrival, unless he —yes, unless he assists at opening it out and himself turns over feverishly its pages, he is not a book-lover. Book-loving "may have clapped him o' the shoulder," but with Rosalind we'll "warrant him heart-whole." A library may be a man's joy or, pace Mr. Ruskin, his mania, or it may be an appanage, a part of his state.

Your real collector begins young and pinches himself, let it be hoped, in gathering together his first hundred volumes. If he does not continue so doing, if that first edition of Herrick's 'Hesperides' or Wither's 'Emblems' is paid for as easily as he pays for a new saddle, the joy of collecting is over. Yet the millionaire is not excluded from the ranks of the bibliophiles. What more heroic picture is there than that of the fight over the Valdarfer Boccaccio, now diminished in lustre, but still scarce and prized? That fight shows the true spirit of the collector.

Books increase quickly, and where to put them becomes the question—a question on which Mr. Humphreys does not greatly enlighten us. There are a few palatial houses "to let" in London, that of the late Sir John Millais, for instance. Take that and fit it up with bookcases and the problem is solved, but "Non cuivis homini contingit adire Corinthum." Given space enough and all is easy. It injures valuable books to put them upon upper shelves. While the temperature of a floor is 65° Fahr., that of an upper gallery is 142°. "Such a temperature dries up the oil of the leather and burns out its life." "The surest way," says Mr. Blades, quoted by our author, "to preserve your books is to tend them as you would your own children, who are sure to sicken if confined in an atmosphere which is impure, too hot, too cold, too damp, or too dry." Sadly we assent. Do not, if possible, use steps, have no shelves the tops of which are not within the reach of the hand, advises Mr. Humphreys. Yes, but how under these conditions house five, ten, twenty thousand volumes? "Sell some," says the outsider; but which? Will the father of the largest family part with one? All that Mr. Humphreys says is right. The average collector, however, must use high shelves. Under such conditions he should place thereon books in paper or cardboard covers only—never books in leather. The former will take comparatively little harm. So princely in his imaginings is Mr. Humphreys that he discusses the question of binding the latest Pepys, and whether it should be done as volume after volume appears, or when—when?—it is completed. In its present cloth a book such as that is at its best, and he is not a genuine book-lover who would put it in morocco until by use the cloth cover is impaired. Unhesitatingly we say that covers such as those of Pepys and the Cambridge Shakspeare, both of which Mr. Humphreys mentions, and we will add Prof. Skeat's Chaucer, Walpole's 'Letters,' Messrs. Henley and Henderson's Burns, Mr. Ellis's Rossetti, and innumerable others, look more picturesque and lovely on the shelves while the cloth covers are fresh than the most gorgeously attired works. This is perhaps rather a confession of faith than a review. It is the faith of one who has collected almost from the cradle. For such as he Mr. Humphreys's well-written and interesting volume has no special message.

With the Dutch in the East: an Outline of the Military Operations in Lombock, 1894, &c. By Capt. W. Cool, Dutch Engineers. Translated by E. J. Taylor. (Luzac & Co.)

There are, it is to be feared, but few books published in this country from which English readers can obtain information as to the doings of the Dutch in their Eastern colonies and their methods of dealing with protected native states. For this reason we are glad that Capt. Cool's account of the Lombock expedition has been translated. Primarily, the book represents a critical account by a military expert of a six months' campaign which ended in the extinction of the Balinese dynasty that for several generations had been misgoverning the country; but as leading up to the catastrophe the author has inserted also what he describes as "a popular account of the native characteristics, architecture, methods of irrigation, agricultural pursuits, folk-lore, religious customs, and a history of the introduction of Islamism and Hinduism into the island." These inserted chapters will probably be regarded as the least satisfactory part of the volume. Firstly, they grievously interrupt the main story; secondly, the details as to native folk-lore, usages, and institutions represent, not first-hand information, but compilations from the works of other authorities; and finally, the chapter on the early connexions of the Dutch with Bali and Lombock—a chapter which the translator describes as, in the original, exceedingly lengthy and verbose, and which has therefore been abbreviated in the English edition—though it may prove the right of the Netherlands Government to intervene when petitioned for help against misgovernment and oppression, proves something also to which its author can hardly have intended to give prominence: it proves responsibilities and neglect of responsibilities. The Government at Batavia ought to have intervened years before they did, and to have long ago given to this unfortunate dependency the benefits of civilized administration. It is not unlikely that the reader will skip a good many pages in the third and fourth chapters; and yet in the little here told us about the flight of the Hindu princes, before Mohammedan rebels, from Java to Bali—where Brahminism still holds the upper hand and Kawi literature is still studied—there is something of more lasting interest than in the "pugnas exactosque tyrannos" described further on in the book. In Kashmir Hindu rulers hold sway over Mohammedan peasants; and this strange condition of affairs prevailed till the close of 1894 in Lombock also, for when once they had consolidated their authority in Bali those refugees from Java gradually extended their power over the Sassaks of Lombock, who had already become followers of the Prophet. It may reasonably be conjectured that the zeal of the Mussulman emissaries would not have been long in putting an end to this state of things but for the appearance of Europeans in the Malay Archipelago at the critical period. It has been put an end to now; the dynasty has perished either on the field of battle or in captivity, and its capital has been razed.

What the immediate causes were which led the Dutch to deal so drastically with the case, and how the operations were conducted — their initial failures and their final triumphs—Capt. Cool has here set out; but the Englishman who takes the book in hand, endeavouring from its contents to estimate the merits and the shortcomings of the Netherlands - Indian system, would do well to bear in mind that Dutch colonial policy is greatly hampered by public opinion in Holland. Parliamentary majorities there are extremely narrow, so that the Minister for the Colonies has always a very uncertain tenure of office. Secondly, the East Indian possessions are administered with a view to pecuniary profit. The balance on the budget goes to the mother country. This balance has of late years, indeed, been largely, if not wholly absorbed by the Acheen war; but the necessity of having a balance to remit if possible obliges the Council of Netherlands India to postpone or avoid any enterprises entailing unforeseen expenditure, and cripples the energies of those who have to carry out an undertaking when once begun. These underlying evils may be discerned affecting the Lombock episode: there was the usual Dutch carefulness and attention in matters of detail; but the expedition was probably not sufficiently strong when it started, and when the Balinese princes made their treacherous overtures they led their opponents completely into a trap, and consequently many valuable lives were sacrificed. There could, however, be but one end to this really unequal struggle, and the following extract represents the last spasm of expiring resistance. A column

"marched to Sasari, which they reached at 9 A.M. and surrounded. The members of the prince's family were summoned to surrender, and, as the parleying led to nothing, the artillery opened fire on their residence at 11.30 A.M. The place was soon in flames, and at the same time a terrible noise was heard; from the border of the kampong (village) a brisk fire was directed on our advancing troops on the east side. The reserve were ordered to go to their relief, but by the time they had reached the fighting line a terrible drama had taken place. Whilst the 6th Battalion were encircling the kampong more closely, suddenly, and amidst the wildest yells and cries, a whole band of Balinese rushed forth from the burning pile on Capt. Schreiner's column. These were all the remaining members of the reigning family with their suite.....men, women, and children; they were ready to seek death, and had arrayed themselves in their most elegant dresses, adorned themselves with jewellery, armed themselves with the sacred kris, or spear, and, thus prepared, they hurried themselves with all their strength on our soldiers. This was the famous 'poepotan'"— a frenzy that rushes on death. All were either shot down summarily or bayoneted, or else took their own lives. "Twelve men occupying the highest positions and fifty of the most noted women died like heroes."

On the whole, the translation has been well executed; at any rate, we have not noticed more than one or two cases where there has presumably been some misapprehension of the Dutch text; but "the disposition of the troops was such that they are completely at the mercy of the people," &c., is a sentence which might have been revised. "Two 12 c. M.A. siege-guns" ought to have been printed "two 12 c.m. breech-loading siege-guns"; and it does not appear why on p. 346 "rijksdaalders" is used instead of dollars, the plainer English equivalent. That the letterpress was actually printed in Holland is apparent, but it is a pity that before publication the work was not revised by a competent English proof-reader. As matters stand, there are countless misprints. The illustrations are suitable, and for the most part good; but a few, unfortunately, have been rather blurred in the printing.

NEW NOVELS.

Mr. Peters. By Riccardo Stephens. (Bliss, Sands & Co.)

There is a very conscious exertion in reading the novel entitled 'Mr. Peters'; the style is singularly dry and staccato, and details of little interest or importance are worked out on the same scale as those of more prominence. These characteristics are to be regretted, for the story is good and often amusing, the plot supplies ample motive, and there is no little ingenuity in its construction. It is, however, a very long and substantial meal for the reader; but when the difficulty of manner is surmounted it will be found an interesting story of life of to-day in Edinburgh, and one that the reader comes to appreciate both for its moral and literary qualities. We should have liked to give at greater length our reasons for appreciating this volume.

A Long Probation. By Henry Gibbs. (Burns & Oates.)

The author of 'A Long Probation' should not have taxed his readers at such inordinate length. Seven hundred and thirty pages averaging three hundred and fifty words each are more than the public are accustomed to find in a single volume of fiction. The story is exceedingly discursive. Quiet valleys, simple peasants, unambitious scholars, and village priests are the staple themes, and these are rudely contrasted with the horrors of the battle-field of Sedan, many of the details of which are quoted, with due acknowledgment, from the Times correspondent. The mystery attaching to the birth of a foundling is ultimately cleared up, and a long novel comes to a weak termination. The book is dedicated to Cardinal Vaughan, who will hardly be gratified by an unkind reference in the text of the story to an Archbishop of Canterbury. The first name of the early Venetian oil painter Marco Basaiti is incorrectly given as Mario.

Carlton Priors. By John Stafford. (Chatto & Windus.)

The technique of 'Carlton Priors' is curious. Commencing with narrative in the third person, the story breaks at intervals into autobiography; and the result is by no means unsatisfactory. The novel is one of contemporary country life; and the method of writing is obviously framed on a model which Mr. Thomas Hardy's more recent writings have made familiar, if not popular. This feature in John Stafford's writing was noticeable in a volume of collected stories of recent publication; but there is no reason why it should involve the frequent use of bad grammar. The volume before us is overburdened with passages of conversation; in other respects it contains a very pleasing and interesting story, and one that promises better things from the same pen.

Adoptée. Par Mary Floran. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

'Adoptée' is as excellent a book for girls as is the author's 'La Faim et la Soif.' The story of the adoption by a great family of one of the many children of a middle-class household, and of the spoiling of the girl's character by the conditions of her existence, is admirably told. The happy conclusion is not, perhaps, true to life.

The Will to Believe, and other Essays in Popular Philosophy. By William James. (Longmans & Co.)

A considerable time ago Prof. James was described as one of the few writers on metaphysics who are not lugubrious. This description remains as true as ever. The present volume has all his accustomed liveliness of style, and, though composed of collected addresses, it really does, as he imagines, "express a tolerably definite philosophic attitude in a very untechnical way." The doctrine propounded is defined as "radical empiricism," because it renounces on principle the attempt to construct a complete theory in which every fact would stand in some rational relation to every other. For this philosophy there remain facts that are unrelated. Among these are affirmations of "free will," which may appear at any time in the future history of the world, and overthrow everything that could have been inferred from existing causes by any possible intelligence. Prof. James entertains no objection to bringing such occurrences under the head of "chance" or pure haphazard. Similarly, as regards present occurrences, he has no d priori objection to the investigation of assertions coming from any quarter, provided only that they promise to derange the world of uniform law or speculative reason set up by men of science or monistic philosophers. Would he object to our suggesting "casualism" as an alternative name for the general doctrine?

Upon the formation of beliefs the thesis Prof. James defends is this:—

"Our passional nature not only lawfully may, but must, decide an option between propositions, whenever it is a genuine option that cannot by its nature be decided on intellectual grounds; for to say, under such circumstances, 'Do not decide, but leave the question open,' is itself a passional decision—just like deciding yes or no—and is attended with the same risk of losing the truth."

Or, as it is put in another place:—

"Of two conceptions equally fit to satisfy the logical demand, that one which awakens the active impulses, or satisfies other æsthetic demands better than the other, will be accounted the more rational conception, and will deservedly prevail."

This seems to him involved in the abandonment of scholastic "objective certainty." Unless philosophic propositions, say about the inner nature or the origin and destiny of things, are absolutely forced on the mind, so that assent to them cannot be refused, the only proper way of forming beliefs is to give play to our whole complex nature and let that decide what it is practically best for us to believe. We cannot be certain that we are right, but we can at least adopt the belief that will make us act most strenuously. As it is certain that all men will not select the same belief, the truth, Prof. James seems to say, must be decided by the respective degrees of success of the various hypotheses when put into practice socially. Thus in religion that which remains in the end the most practically successful faith may be taken to be the truest. In the mean time, as we must run some speculative risk, we need not in aiming at truth follow simply our pure speculative reason. No scientific agnostic or monistic philosopher has the right to forbid us to run the risk of being wrong, and we show our courage in running it, impelled by the desire that the world should be in truth such as to offer an adequate field of exercise for our practical nature.

This is Prof. James's drift. Positions very like that from which he sets out are not unfamiliar in recent thought. It may be said of him, as of others who have taken the same general direction, that although interesting he is not convincing. Indeed, his own pupils, he candidly admits, find a difficulty in accepting the notion that they have a right to believe without intellectual evidence. That too much has been made of the intellect and too little of the will in recent thought it is difficult to see. The air of late has been thick with doctrines of "the primacy of the will" in one form or another. And in spite of that we do not think it will be possible, so long as the genuine philosophic impulse endures, to get rid of ideals, such as those of Aristotle and Spinoza, which conceive of the speculative life as having a value even out of all relation to practical needs. It would be decidedly a paradox if at the present day, and especially in America, the predominant tendency were, as Prof. James says it is, to recognize too little "how entirely the intellect is built up of practical interests." On the contrary, the position that "perception and thinking are only there for behaviour's sake" seems exactly adapted to become a rallying cry for the world of material interests against all genuine philosophy. That world would no doubt be extremely glad to have on the one side a physical science existing only for the sake of applications to the useful arts, and on the other side a philosophy ready to justify all private or public unreason by theoretical scepticism.

Such a result Prof. James would repudiate as much as any one, though it seems to us that which would naturally follow from the use of his method. With much of what he says in detail we fully agree. Scientific agnosticism is not entitled to the last word on the problem of belief, which is a philosophical and not a purely scientific question. And in what he says of the importance of individuals in the process of historical evolution Prof. James is quite convincing against those who think everything is explained when they have said that both the individual and the race are products of the environment, and therefore secondary objects of study. If, as he puts it, we can explain the Greek mind by the stimulating influence of commerce encouraged by the geographical features of Greece, it remains inexplicable why the Phœnicians did not equal or surpass the Greeks in art and thought. This, as he sees, is an entirely different question from that of metaphysical indeterminism. There is nothing to prevent a determinist holding the same view about the relations between the individual and the environment as Prof. James. And, in fact, with regard to the function of men of genius in history, Mill took up exactly the same position.

SHORT STORIES.

The wise and gentle prefatory words with which Mrs. Oliphant introduces her two stories of "the ebb of life," published by Messrs. Smith & Elder under the title The Ways of Life, need not the half-apology she makes for them. How to grow old with dignity is a problem which presents itself with more natural force to elderly people than the difficulties arising from the early complications of passion, so frequently set before us as "the chief object of interest in the world." It is not, however, the physical decline of life, but the disconcerting moment when a man discovers that his powers, professional, artistic, or other, no longer command the acceptance necessary for holding his place in the competition for existence, which is the "ower true" subject-matter of the brace of parables before us. In these the author declines to cater for the "monotonous demand for a love story which crushes out of court all the rest of life—so infinite in variety, so full of complication, so humorous, so mysterious, so natural and true." Love is in them, of the staid and married sort, and indeed the final interview between "Mr. Sandford" and his wife is full of the pathos of deep affection; but the interest lies in the attitude of two men in advanced life to the sudden and bewildering shock of the cessation of their means—means whereby they had up to the fatal point provided for the circle dependent on them. Mr. Sandford's is the hard case of an artist whose genre has gone out of fashion. 'The Black Prince at Limoges' is no worse in technical skill than the historical canvases which have long since made his name; but a generation which looks back with scorn on "those ridiculous old days when the subject was everything," even if it will not "laugh at faith so naïf," is clearly not likely to give the painter his price. And Mr. Sandford at sixty finds "a stop in the wheels of his life." The pathos of the situation is heightened by the total unconsciousness of the bright, unpractical boys and girls just grown up to happy adolescence, and of the faithful and confiding mother of the family. Mrs. Oliphant has done full justice to her theme on all its sides, but the touch of ruth to which she confesses leads her to provide an outlet for the despairing husband and father—something which he prays for, but dares not anticipate, a solution "by the grace of God." This slight story is marked by the penetrating insight into average human nature, the humorous detail, the clean workmanship which Mrs. Oliphant's readers have often enjoyed on a larger scale. As of old, the writer's art is none the worse for an occasional idiomatic Scotticism, as remote from the kailyard as it is characteristic. How forcible is the latent Celticism of the sentence, "It is you that should not say that, Mary," in the closing scene! This familiar trait is, of course, more noticeable in the second tale, of which the scene is laid near Edinburgh. Susie Dalyell—or D'yell, as she prefers to call it, "in the true antiquous way"—is one of Mrs. Oliphant's own charming little girls, a very Malaprop in her use of long words, and full of innocent palpitations, hopes, and fears. The story, indeed, though much more full of humour, is less impressive in the development of its theme than the first, though in it, too, the moral annihilation of a man who has just passed the climax of his practical life is "mysterious, natural, and true." But in both cases the full piteousness of the position is only suggested.

Cottage Folk, by Mrs. Comyns Carr (Heinemann), is a collection of nine stories, four of considerable length and five of a shorter description. All are well written, and but for the sadness of their subjects they might be called pleasing. In the last two of the collection there is an effort to paint the picture in brighter colours, and both of these are excellent. The lives of cottage folk are, however, too often involved in sadness. Mrs. Comyns Carr has an artist's eye for "effects." The figures in the foreground and the landscape in the middle distance and background are always carefully sketched. Details of dress are not omitted, and the whole mise-en-scène is invariably well thought out. "Hoppers" from the metropolis are among the many cottage folk who figure in these pages, and they appear to have been frequently studied by the writer. As a whole, the volume is very much above the average of collected short stories.

It is impossible not to be sincerely sorry for Mr. Vincent O'Sullivan, the author of A Book of Bargains (Smithers). Possibly it is not his fault that he has disagreeable ideas, and it is certainly his misfortune that he writes so badly as he does. One must regret, too, that Mr. Aubrey Beardsley should have furnished the unfortunate little volume with a peculiarly unpleasant frontispiece. The seven sketches contained in the book are all nasty stories of murder or violent death, with details constructed to make one's flesh creep or, if possible, to make one sick; but the manner of telling is so ineffective that one is more inclined to laugh than to be horrified, though certainly some of the ideas are very fairly disgusting.

Paul's Stepmother. By Lady Troubridge. (Richards.)—Lady Troubridge shows more skill in her writing than in her choice of subject; and there is little doubt that the writer is capable of far better work than appears in either 'Paul's Stepmother' or 'Poor Roderick.' Both of them involve unfortunate elements. In one the hero is in love with his father's second wife, in the other with the wife of his colonel; and in both the ladies share, though they do not indulge the affection. Of the two stories we prefer the second.

Litanies of Life. By Kathleen Watson. (Bowden.)—A little volume of five stories is issued under this title, and includes some graceful and clever narratives. The title sufficiently indicates the sadness which pervades the volume. The best piece in the collection is that entitled 'Off Arran's Isle.' One seems to be an American story; but all are Lenten litanies.

Miss Arabella Kenealy has a very decided inclination for the horrible, in which she indulges freely in Belinda's Beaux, &c. (Bliss, Sands & Co.). As might be expected, there is considerable display of a vague medical lore, which sometimes degenerates to nastiness when allied with the horrible, as it is in 'A Human Vivisection.' The effect of this tale seems to us not to be the legitimate effect of a tale of horror, merely to produce a momentary sensation of terror, but rather to disgust, as does the sight of a filthy object. Further, it is not creative; anybody can imagine the horror of being vivisected; nothing is added to that idea in this story. Some of Lord Syfret's experiences are better work; the gruesome story of the man imprisoned in the dentist's chair is more imaginative in its description of the patient's agony and more suggestive of truth. The "Frivolities and Sentimentalities" which begin the book are in a lighter vein, and the first two are amusing. Miss Kenealy, however, seems to go on the principle in all her light tales that in love-making the chief advances should come from the girl.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Mr. H. D. Traill publishes, through Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Co., Lord Cromer: a Biography. It is well illustrated, and contains an admirable photograph of Lord Cromer himself. We fear, however, that Mr. Traill has undertaken—indeed, he knows that he has undertaken—a task impossible of accomplishment. The youth of Lord Cromer was extremely undistinguished. He is an example of the truth of the famous statement that any English gentleman is fit for any post to which the favour of the sovereign may call him. As a schoolboy he made no impression upon his masters or his companions; as a soldier he was not thought remarkable; and, while he was a respectable finance minister in India, it was not until he assumed his task in Egypt, in the course of his second employment in that country, that he became the considerable personage that he is. As soon as he arrived in Egypt he became mixed up in events of extraordinary difficulty connected with that grave of reputations—the Soudan; and he can only be cleared from the charge of considerable inconsistency by throwing on to others responsibility which is probably theirs, but which cannot, definitely and finally, be proved to be theirs in the lifetime of living people. Mr. Traill, of course, explains that Lord Cromer himself, being a trustworthy servant of the Foreign Office, cannot denounce his masters, and denunciation of his masters may be necessary to an historical defence. Many books have appeared, beginning with Gordon's diaries, which have caused controversy, in which the names of Lord Wolseley, of Sir E. Malet, of Sir E. Baring, of Mr. Gladstone, and of Lord Granville are mixed up. But all these rest either upon Blue-books or upon rumour; and Blue-books admittedly do not tell the whole case, while rumour is untrustworthy. Mr. Boulger's recent book made some such publication as the present probable, but cannot make it complete or final. Mr. Traill is somewhat inclined, by his politics, to throw blame on British administrations, and mainly upon that of Mr. Gladstone; but his careful examination of the Blue-books has led him to see that a great deal is to be said upon the other side, and his final censure of Mr. Gladstone's Government rests mainly upon the feebleness or vacillation of their military policy. It is clear, however, that he thinks that Gordon was too mad to be employed; and that will probably be the verdict of history upon his employment. The side issue of the refusal of Zebehr to Gordon is a difficult question for our author, because Sir Evelyn Baring's view upon this question underwent a sharp change. The crucial point at last became "public opinion in England," but Sir Evelyn Baring in the despatch quoted was evidently not in possession of the facts, which indeed only became clear after its receipt. The Zebehr policy may have been the best, and Lord Cromer may be justified now in thinking that his final advice in favour of Zebehr's employment ought to have been taken. But "public opinion in England" did not mean a mere vague feeling. It was an opinion which would have prevented the actual step being taken. Mr. W. E. Forster gave private notice of a vote of censure, and privately assured the Government that he could count for it on the support of the Conservative party, which made it certain that the House of Commons would have passed a resolution declining to sanction the employment of Zebehr Pasha; so that while this was very probably the wisest policy, it was as a matter of fact impossible to adopt it. Mr. Traill's strictures upon the military policy of Mr. Gladstone's Government are deserved. It is known that Sir Evelyn Wood, as Mr. Traill states, advised a Suakim expedition to Berber, as did General Stephenson. It is also known that Lord Roberts was willing to have carried it out with an Indian force, and that Lord Wolseley, who at first inclined to the same view, finally pronounced in favour of the Nile route, the adoption of which involved that waiting for high water which was fatal to the chance of arriving in time. The execution of the book, considering the difficulties of the subject, is good.

The Annual Register for 1896 is published by Messrs. Longman & Co., and is upon the ordinary lines and of the usual merit. In other words, it continues to be necessary, and contains the full obituary notices and those accounts of events in various countries which we look for in it, and never fail to find. The weak points of the volume remain, and concern chiefly the imperfection or want of fulness of the index, to which we have always been inclined to take exception. The value of 'The Annual Register' for reference is great in cases where one has a clue which, owing to the regular arrangement of the book, replaces the necessity for an index; but in the common case where the clue is very slight the index is the only resource to save waste of time, and we have always thought that 'The Annual Register' would be more useful if there were a full and clear index of all names referred to in it. There is no clue for rapid reference equal to a name. If one wants to look out an event concerning Germany, which one thinks occurred in a particular year, one turns naturally to the name of the minister or statesman involved, and not to the heading of a subject such as "Germany," or whatever it may be. Now 'The Annual Register' index has never been a full one of names, and although such an index is in fact much easier to make than the scientifically constructed index which does figure in the 'Register,' yet we believe that the former would be more effective for the purpose in view. Otherwise we have nothing but praise for this publication.

British Golf Links, edited by Mr. Horace Hutchinson (Virtue & Co.), is a book that no publisher would have ventured upon a dozen years ago; but no doubt the present craze for golf will induce a sufficient number of people to buy a folio containing views of clubhouses, greens, players, and medals derived from photographs not always particularly good. Mr. Hutchinson contributes the letterpress, and writes in a sensible and straightforward style; indeed, he has more literary skill than any other of those who write on golf, but it is impossible to make a description of links interesting.

Messrs. Gowans & Son have brought out a handsome volume containing some early writings of Carlyle's under the title of Montaigne and other Essays. Whether, however, it was a wise thing to disinter biographies written as hack-work for Sir David Brewster is more than doubtful. Carlyle certainly would not have reprinted them nor turned Lady M. W. Montagu into "Lady Montagu." Mr. Crockett contributes an egotistical and affected preface.

The Hon. W. Warren Vernon has published a second edition of his Readings on the Purgatorio of Dante (Macmillan & Co.), in which he has enlarged his notes and remodelled his translation and running commentary. The text of Dr. Moore has been followed instead of that of Scartazzini.

The handsome edition of Harold, the Last of the Saxon Kings, which Messrs. A. Constable & Co. publish, has been edited, with elaborate prolegomena, facsimiles, and notes, by Mr. Laurence Gomme, as if Bulwer Lytton's romance were a classic. As we are unable to regard it in that light, we cannot help thinking that Mr. Gomme has wasted his pains, although there is no doubt that he has done his work well. It may be remarked that on the debated question of the palisade at Hastings he adopts Mr. Round's views.—Messrs. Bliss, Sands & Co. have reprinted in one portly volume Boswell's Life of Johnson and the Tour to the Hebrides. The type is good, and the price is wonderfully moderate. Mr. Percy Fitzgerald is the editor.

Mr. Smith sends us the new issue of Dickens's useful Dictionary of the Thames; it is printed on rather poor paper.—The insertion of a better map would improve Cassell's Guide to London, and make it an excellent sixpennyworth. Some discriminating hints on restaurants would be an advantage to the stranger.—Along the Medway (Taylor & Son) is a useful little manual for the pedestrian by Mr. W. Miles.

We have on our table England in the Days of Old, by W. Andrews (Andrews),—Mayville: an Anglo-French Pleasaunce (Fisher Unwin),—The Heritage of Burns, by W. R. Turnbull (Haddington, Sinclair),—Shakespeare an Archer, by W. L. Rushton (Liverpool, Lee & Nightingale),—Pope's Essay on Criticism, edited by J. C. Collins (Macmillan),—Pope's Essay on Criticism, edited by the Rev. H. Evans (Blackie),—Pitt Press Series: The Anabasis of Xenophon, Book II., edited by G. M. Edwards (Cambridge, University Press),—Blackie's Modern French Texts: Gustave Aimard's Les Trappeurs de l'Arkansas, edited by M. Ninet (Blackie),—English Visible Speech in Twelve Lessons, by A. M. Bell (Washington, the Volta Bureau),—English and French and French and English Explanatory Dictionary of Terms and Phrases relating to Finance, by M. A. Méliot (Wilson),—Catalogue of the Coins of the Indian Museum, by Charles J. Rodgers, Parts III. and IV. (Calcutta, Trustees of the Indian Museum),—The Journal of Experimental Medicine, edited by W. H. Welch, M.D., Vol. I. Nos. II. and III. (Appleton),—Model of a Horizontal Steam Engine, by C. Volkert, edited by A. Philip (Philip & Son),—Out-of-the-Way Pets, by the Rev. T. Wood (Sherlock),—The Physiocrats, by H. Higgs (Macmillan),—Lectures on Ecclesiastical History, by the Rev. F. W. Farrar, D.D., and others (Nisbet),—The Action of Light in Photography, by Capt. Abney (Low),—Crystal-Gazing and the Wonders of Clairvoyance, by J. Melville (Nichols),—The Railway Map of South Africa, 1897 (Office of 'South Africa'),—Francesca Halstead, by R. St. Barbe (Digby & Long),—Ferdinand Lassalle and Helene von Dönniges, by E. E. Evans (Sonnenschein),—Toby's Promise, by A. M. Hopkinson (Arnold),—Old Dorset, by R. C. Rogers (Putnam),—Three Daughters of the United Kingdom, by Mrs. Innes Browne (Burns & Oates),—Animal Episodes and Studies in Sensation, by G. H. Powell (Redway),—The Haunted Looking-Glass, by G. Darrell (Digby & Long),—The Ideals of a Parish, by John Gott, Bishop of Truro (S.P.C.K.),—Studies in Theology, by Guy Sylvester (J. Heywood),—Saint Benedict, by the Rev. Abbot Tosti, translated from the Italian by the Rev. W. R. Canon Woods (Kegan Paul),—Parsons and Weavers, by the Rev. F. B. Smith (Skeffington),—Christian Men of Science, by Various Authors (R.T.S.),—The Prophecies of Jesus Christ, by Dr. Paul Schwartzkopff, translated by Rev. Neil Buchanan (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Life of Christ, by the Rev. J. Duggan (Kegan Paul),—Quesnay et la Physiocratie, by Y. Guyot (Paris, Guillaumin),—De Ectypis Quibusdam Æneis, by A. de Ridder (Paris, Fontemoing),—Le Collier de Chevreux, by L. Letang (Paris, Lévy),—L'Anti-sémitisme, by A. Leroy-Beaulieu (Paris, Lévy),—Geschichte der isländischen Geographie, by A. Gebhardt, Vol. I. (Leipzig, Teubner),—Kiev la Mère des Villes Russes, by the Baron de Baye (Paris, Nilsson),—and L'Islande avant le Christianisme, by A. Geffroy (Paris, Leroux). Among New Editions we have Appearance and Reality, by F. H. Bradley (Sonnenschein),—and Dickens's David Copperfield (Croome & Co.).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Aveling's (F. W.) Who was Jesus Christ? and other Questions, cr. 8vo. 6 cl.
Baring Gould's (Rev. S.) Lives of the Saints, Vol. 3, 5 net.
Griffith-Jones's (C. G.) Helps towards Belief in the Christian Faith, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Tymm (T. V.) and others' The Ancient Faith in Modern Light, 8vo. 10/6 cl.

Law.

Stallard's (C. F.) The Law of Sales of Stocks and Shares, 2/6

Fine Art.

Blake's (W.) The Book of Thel, Songs of Innocence, &c., designed by C. Ricketts, cr. 8vo. 12/6 net, bds.
Field's (M.) Fair Rosamund, a Play, designed by C. Ricketts, 8vo. 12/6 net, bds.
Grasset's (E.) Plants and their Application to Ornament, 12 parts in portfolio, 10/ net
Queen, The, and Mr. Punch, the Story of a Reign told by Toby, M.P., 4to. 2/6 swd.
Vasari's (G.) Lives of Seventy Painters, Sculptors, &c., ed. by Blashfield and Hopkins, 4 vols. 4to. 36/ net, cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Maitland's (E. F.) The Song-Book of Bethia Hardacre, 6 cl.
Molloy's (J. F.) The Life and Adventures of Edmund Kean, Tragedian, 1787–1833, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Savile's (W. H.) Poems, 12mo. 2/6 cl.

Bibliography.

Allen's (C. D.) Ex-Libris, Essays of a Collector, 14/ net, cl.
Description of the Wordsworth and Coleridge MSS in possession of Mr. T. N. Longman, ed. by White, 4to. 10/6
Scott's (T.) A Bibliography of the Works of Wm. Morris, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.

Political Economy.

Greene's (T. L.) Corporation Finance, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Notes on Political Economy from the Colonial Point of View, by a New Zealand Colonist, cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.

History and Biography.

Anderson, William and Louisa, a Record of their Life, &c., by W. Marwick, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Bülow, Gabriele von, a Memoir, 8vo. 16/ cl.
Bygones: Somerset, edited by C. Walters, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
De Salis's (H. R.) A Chronology of Inland Navigation in Great Britain, &c., cr. 8vo. 4/6 cl.
Fitzgerald, Lord Edward, The Memoirs of, by T. Moore, 6/
Gough's (General S. H.) Old Memories, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Macaulay's Life and Works, Edinburgh Ed., Vol. 10, 6/ cl.
Victoria, Queen, The Life of, a Book for Young People, 2/ cl.
Vivian, Richard H., First Baron Vivian, a Memoir, by Hon. C. Vivian, 8vo. 10/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

McConnochie's (A. I.) Queen Victoria's Highland Home and Vicinity, illustrated, 4to. 6/ net, cl.
Taylor's (H. C. C.) The Land of the Castanet, Spanish Sketches, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Tweedie's (Mrs. A.) Through Finland in Carts, 8vo. 15/ cl.

Philology.

Baumann's (H.) A Second German Course, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Ciceronis, M. Tulli, in Verrem, Act. II. Lib. IV. de Signis, Fourth Verrine of Cicero, edited by F. W. Hall, 3/6 cl.
Duriaux's (A. E. E. and H. E.) The Study of French according to the Best and Newest Systems, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mariette's (A.) French and English Idioms and Proverbs, Vol. 3, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Science.

Barnes's (C. L.) Lessons in Elementary Practical Physics: Vol. 3, Part 1, Practical Acoustics, 4/6 cl.
Clark's (A. C.) Clinical Manual of Mental Diseases, 16/6 cl.
Elementary Algebra, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Haldane's (J. W. C.) Railway Engineering, Mechanical and Electrical, 8vo. 15/ cl.
Harrison's (W. J.) A Text-Book of Geology, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Heaton's (J.) Tables of Simple Interest, 8vo. 7/6 half bound.
Jones's (E. L.) Chlorosis, the Special Anæmia of Young Women, cr. 8vo. 2/6
Kent's (W. S.) The Naturalist in Australia, 4to. 63/ net, cl.
Morgan's (T. H.) The Development of the Frog's Egg, 7/ net.
Poore's (G. V.) Nervous Affections of the Hand, and other Clinical Papers, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Redwood's (J. J.) A Practical Treatise on Mineral Oils, 15/
Step's (E.) Favourite Flowers of Garden and Greenhouse, Vol. 3, 15/ net, cl.
Walsh's (D.) Excretory Irritation and the Action of Certain Internal Remedies of the Skin, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Wright's (L.) The Induction Coil in Practical Work, 4/6 cl.

General Literature.

Anuario del Comercio de la Industria, Commercial Directory for Spain and Portugal, 2 vols. royal 8vo. 25/ net, bds.
Barlow's (G.) The Daughters of Minerva, a Novel of Social Life, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Becke's (L.) Pacific Tales, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Boldrewood's (R.) My Run Home, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Coates's (A.) Rie's Diary, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Daughters of the City, by Author of 'The Spirit of Love,' 3/6
Davis's (R. H.) Soldiers of Fortune, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Essays from the Chap-Book, 12mo. 3/6 net, cl.
Fernandez Reciter, The, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Fitzgerald's (G. B.) A Fleeting Show, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Foll's (H.) Major Carlile, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hannan's (C.) The Wooing of Avis Grayle, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Kennedy's (B.) Darab's Wine-Cup, and other Tales, 5/ cl.
Litchfield's (G. D.) In the Crucible, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Little's (L. N.) Wild Myrtle, 12mo. 3/6 net, cl.
Lylse's (P.) A Frisky Matron, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Marryat's (Capt.) Snarleyyow, illustrated by H. R. Millar, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mistress of Elmshurst, a Novel, by Con, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Mulholland's (R.) The Wicked Woods, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Post's (W. K.) Harvard Stories, Sketches of the Undergraduate, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Prince's (H. C.) A Transatlantic Chatelaine, cr. 8vo. 6 cl.
Rameau's Nephew, a Translation from Diderot's Autographic Text by S. M. Hill, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Russell's (W. C.) A Tale of Two Tunnels, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
St. Aubyn's (A.) The Wooing of May, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Savage's (Col. R. H.) An Exile from London, cr. 8vo. 2 bds.
Stockton's (F. R.) A Storyteller's Pack, illustrated, cr. cl.
Turgenev's (I.) Dream Tales and Prose Poems, translated by C. Garnett, 12mo. 3/ net, cl.
Victorian Era of Sixty Years of Progress, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Wesley's (V.) Grains of Sense, 12mo. 2/ net, cl.
Wills's (C. J.) His Dead Past, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Bludau (A.): Die alexandrinische Übersetzung des Buches Daniel u. ihr Verhältniss zum massorethischen Text, 4m. 50.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Nogaret (F.): L'Aristénète Français, 2 vols. 120fr.
Richard (Capitaine): La Garde, 1854-70, 50fr.
Sizeranne (R. de la): Ruskin et la Religion de la Beauté, 3fr. 50.

Poetry.

Schönbach (A. E.): Das Christentum in der altdeutschen Heldendichtung, 6m.

Philosophy.

Güttler (C.): Eduard, Lord Herbert v. Cherbury, ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des Psychologismus u. der Religionsphilosophie, 6m.
Vaihinger (H.): Kantstudien, Part 2, 12m.

Political Economy.

Grave (J.): L'Individu et la Société, 3fr. 50.
Nieuwenhuis (D.): Le Socialisme en Danger, 3fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Brosch (M.): Geschichte v. England: Vol. 10, Von 1816 bis zum Abschluss der Peelschen Reformen, 11m.
Monod (G.): Portraits et Souvenirs, 3fr. 50.
Schlumberger (G.): L'Épopée Byzantine à la Fin du Dixième Siècle, 30fr.

Science.

Lœwy et Puiseux (P.): Atlas Photographique de la Lune, Part 1, 30fr.
Neuburger (M.): Die historische Entwicklung der Gehirn- u. Rückenmarksphysiologie vor Flourens, 10m.
Wallentin (I. G.): Lehrbuch der Elektricität u. des Magnetismus, 8m.

General Literature.

Ardel (H.): Renée Orlis, 3fr. 50.
Bigeon (A.): Daniel, 3fr. 50.
Cahu (T.): L'Enfant Martyr, 3fr. 50.
Castellane (Marquis de): Histoire d'un Imbécile et d'un Homme d'Esprit, 3fr. 50.
Champsaur (F.): La Glaneuse, 3fr. 50.
Chaperon (P.): L'Aumône Suprême, 3fr. 50.
Forain: Doux Pays, 3fr. 50.
Monniot (A.): Coqs et Corbeaux, 3fr. 50.
Ouvré (H.): Sur les Marches du Temple, 3fr. 50.
Pert (C.): La Camarade, 3fr. 50.
Spectateur (Un): La Catastrophe du Bazar de la Charité, 2fr.

THE 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

THE 'Dictionary of National Biography' is now rapidly approaching completion. Below we publish the final list of names which it is proposed to insert. Cross-references are excluded. When one date is given, it is the date of death, unless otherwise stated. An asterisk is affixed to a date when it is only approximate. The editor of the 'Dictionary' will be obliged by any notice of omissions addressed to him at Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co.'s, 15, Waterloo Place, S.W. He particularly requests that when new names are suggested, an indication may be given of the source from which they are derived.

Yalden or Youlding, Thomas, divine and poet, 1670-1736
Yale, Elihu, Governor of Fort St. George, 1649-1721
Yale, Thomas, divine and author, 1577
Yarranton or Yarrenton, Andrew, economic writer, 1616-1685*
Yarrell, William, naturalist, 1784-1856
Yarrington, Robert, playwright, fl. 1600
Yates, Edmund, journalist and author, 1831-1894
Yates, Mrs. Elizabeth, actress, b. 1799
Yates, Frederick Henry, actor, 1798-1842
Yates, James, 'The Castell of Courtesie,' fl. 1582
Yates, James, antiquary, 1789-1871
Yates, John, divine, fl. 1625
Yates, Joseph, judge, 1770
Yates, Joseph Brooks, antiquary, 1780-1855
Yates, Mrs. Mary, actress, 1737-1787
Yates, Richard, actor, 1736-1783
Yates, Richard, historian of Bury St. Edmunds, 1769-1834
Yates, William, Oriental scholar, 1792-1845
Yea, Walter Giles, lieutenant-colonel, 1808*-1855
Yeamans, Sir John, Governor of South Carolina, 1605*-1676*
Yeamans, Robert, Sheriff of Bristol, 1643
Yeardley, Sir George, Governor of Virginia, 1580*-1627
Yeardley, John, Quaker missionary, 1786-1858
Yearsley, Mrs. Anne, "Lactilla," poet, 1756-1806
Yeates, Thomas, Oriental scholar, 1768-1839
Yeats, Grant David, F.R.S., medical writer, 1774-1836
Yeldart, Arthur, divine, 1599
Yellowly, John, physician, 1774-1842
Yelverton, Barry, Viscount Avonmore, 1736-1805
Yelverton, Sir Christopher, Speaker of the House of Commons, 1607
Yelverton, Sir Henry, judge, 1566-1630
Yelverton, William, judge, fl. 1460
Yelverton, William Charles, 4th Viscount Avonmore, 1824-1883
Yeo, Sir James Lucas, commodore, 1782-1818
Yeowell, James, compiler, 1868
Yevele, Henry de, mason, 1400
Yolland, Col. William, F.R.S., scientific writer, 1819-1885
Young, Bartholomew, translator, fl. 1585
Yonge, Charles Duke, Professor of English Literature, Belfast, 1812-1891
Yonge, Sir George, admiral, 1732-1819
Yonge, James, physician, 1646-1721
Yonge, John, judge, 1546
Yonge or Young, Nicholas, 'Musica Transalpina,' 1619
Yonge, Thomas, judge, 1476
Yonge, Sir William, politician, 1692-1755
York, Laurence, Catholic prelate, 1687-1779
York, Sir Rowland, soldier, 1587
Yorke, Charles, Lord Chancellor, 1722-1770
Yorke, Sir Charles, field marshal, 1764-1830
Yorke, Charles Philip, politician, 1764-1834
Yorke, Charles Philip, 4th Earl of Hardwicke, 1799-1873
Yorke, Henry Redhead, political pamphleteer, 1772-1813
Yorke, James, writer on heraldry, fl. 1640
Yorke, Sir Joseph, Baron Dover, 1762
Yorke, Sir Joseph Sydney, admiral, 1768-1831
Yorke, Philip, 1st Earl of Hardwicke, 1690-1764
Yorke, Philip, 2nd Earl of Hardwicke, 1720-1790
Yorke, Philip, politician and author, 1804
Yorke, Philip, 3rd Earl of Hardwicke, 1757-1834
Youatt, William, veterinary surgeon, 1776-1847
Young, Andrew, "There is a happy land," 1807-1889
Young, Sir Arthas William, soldier and colonial governor, 1778-1835
Young, Arthur, prebendary of Canterbury, 1759
Young, Arthur, agriculturist and traveller, 1741-1820
Young, Sir Charles George, Garter King-of-Arms, 1795-1869
Young, Charles Mayne, actor, 1777-1856
Young, Edward, author of the 'Night Thoughts,' 1684-1765
Young, Sir Henry Edward Fox, Governor of South Australia, 1810-1870
Young, James, admiral, 1789
Young, James, originator of the paraffin industry, 1811-1883
Young, John, author, fl. 1420
Young, John, Master of Pembroke College, Cambridge, 1580
Young, John, Bishop of Rochester, 1605
Young, John, Professor of Greek at Glasgow, 1820
Young, John, engraver, 1755-1825
Young, John, Baron Lisgar, 1807-1876
Young, John Radford, mathematician, 1799-1885
Young, Matthew, Bishop of Clonfert, 1750-1800
Young, Patrick, Biblical critic, 1584-1652
Young, Sir Peter, tutor to James VI., 1544-1628
Young, Robert, informer, 1700
Young, Robert, Orientalist, 1823-1888
Young or Yong, Thomas, Archbishop of York, 1568
Young, Thomas, Milton's tutor and Master of Jesus College, Cambridge, 1650*
Young, Thomas, F.R.S., scholar and philosopher, 1773-1829
Young, Thomas, vocalist, 1809-1872
Young, Sir William, publicist, 1750-1815
Young, Sir William, admiral, 1751-1821
Young, Sir William, Chief Justice of Newfoundland, 1799-1887
Younger, Mrs., actress, fl. 1720
Yule, Sir Henry, soldier and author, 1820-1889
Zerffi, George Gustavus, writer on art, 1821-1892
Zincke, Christian Frederick, miniature painter, 1684-1767
Zincke, Foster Barham, political parson, 1817-1893
Zoffany, John, painter, 1723*-1810
Zouch, Alan de, judge, 1270
Zouch, Edward, Baron Zouch, 1625
Zouch, Thomas, divine and biographer, 1737-1815
Zouch, William de, Archbishop of York, 1352
Zouche, Richard, judge, 1590-1661
Zuccarelli, Francesco, R.A., landscape painter, 1788
Zucchero, Frederigo, portrait painter, 1543-1609*
Zucchi, Antonio, A.R.A., landscape painter, 1726-1795
Zukertort, John Hermann, chess player, 1842–1888
Zulestein de Nassau, William Henry, 1st Earl of Rochford, 1645-1709
Zulestein de Nassau, William Henry, 4th Earl of Rochford, 1717-1781

SALE OF THE PHILLIPPS MANUSCRIPTS.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE sold a further portion of the collection of manuscripts of the late Sir Thomas Phillipps on May 17th and three following days. Many high prices were realized, some of which follow: Cathegoriæ Aristotelis cum Prologo Alcuini, on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 16*l.* Registrum Brevium, on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 20*l.* Aristotelis Physica, on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 20*l.* Arithmetica Jordani, Sæc. XIV., 16*l.* Macrobius in Somnium Scipionis, &c., on vellum, A.D. 1406, 18*l.* Beda Super Tobiam, &c., on vellum, Sæc. XII., from the Priory of Kirkham, 24*l.* 10*s.* Apocalypsis, on vellum, Sæc. X.–XI., 26*l.* The Booke of Comfort, translated from Boethius by John Walton, on vellum, Sæc. XV., 27*l.* Philobiblon Richardi de Bure, &c., on vellum, Sæc. XV., 26*l.* Julius Cæsar, on vellum, Sæc. XV., 22*l.* 10*s.* Diplomatic Correspondence and State Papers, Charles II. to Queen Anne (Southwell Collection), 369*l.* Chronique d'Angleterre, in old French, on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 14*l.* 10*s.* Ciceronis in Antonium Orationes, on vellum, Sæc. XV., 19*l.* 5*s.* Borlase's Cornwall Collections, 1730–33, 24*l.* 5*s.* Vita et Miracula Beati Cuthberti Lindisfarnensis Episcopi, &c. (an unprinted MS.), on vellum, Sæc. XII., 117*l.* Original Wardrobe Book of King Edward II., on vellum, A.D. 1323–4, 41*l.* The Same of Thomas, Duke of Gloucester, and Edmond, Duke of York, sons of Edward III., 1359–60, 15*l.* 10*s.* Original Proclamation in MS. against Excess in Apparel, signed by Queen Elizabeth, 1565, 13*l.* 10*s.* Beda in Laudem Etheldridæ Reginæ, on vellum, Sæc. XII., 25*l.* Euclidis Geometria cum Campani Commentario, &c., Sæc. XIII.-XIV., 41*l.* Evangelium S. Joannis, on vellum, Sæc. XII., 16*l.* 5*s.* Galfridus Monumetensis, on vellum, Sæc. XIII., 40*l.* Household Book of Henry, Prince of Wales, son of James I., 13*l.* 10*s.* Epistolæ S. Hieronymi, on vellum, Sæc. XV., 30*l.* Higden, Polychronicon, Sæc. XIV., 80*l.* Sir Roger Bradshaigh's Original Entry Book of Letters, &c., 1662–76, 49*l.* Anothomy of Mayster Langfranke of Meleyn, on vellum, Sæc. XV., 20*l.* 10*s.* Mandeville de Itineracione Terre Promissionis et Visiones S. Patricii, on vellum, Sæc. XV., 49*l.* Mariani Scoti Chronicon, &c., on vellum, Sæc. XII., 40*l.* Original Document, on vellum, signed by Mary, Queen of Scots, May 2nd, 1585, 25*l.* 10*s.* Jo. de Muris de Musica, &c., on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 48*l.* Nicodemi Evangelium, &c., on vellum, Sæc. IX., 122*l.* Ovidii Opuscula, Sæc. XV., 31*l.* Ant. à Wood's Genealogical History of his Own Family, autograph on vellum, 19*l.* 5*s.* Palladius de Agricultura, on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 20*l.* Promptorium Parvulorum, Sæc. XV., 46*l.* Psalterium de Wherwell, co. Southants, on vellum, Sæc. XIV., 44*l.* 10*s.* Psalterium Latine cum Versione Scotica et Paraphrasi, on vellum, Sæc. XIV.–XV., 105*l.* Original Wardrobe Book of Richard II., on vellum, 50*l.* Barons' Book of England, Arms of the Kings of Scotland, &c., Sæc. XVI., 52*l.* Sedulii Carmina, on vellum, Sæc. XII., 35*l.* A volume containing eight original quarto Plays of Shakspeare (all imperfect), 170*l.* Chronicle of Henry V., 1608, 36*l.* Life and Death of Thomas, Lord Cromwell, 1613, 36*l.* Shropshire MSS. collected by Rev. G. Williams, &c., 124*l.* Sidonii Apollinaris Epistolæ, &c., on vellum, Sæc. XII., 61*l.* Vincentii Belvacensis Speculum Historiale et Naturale, on vellum, 4 vols., Sæc. XIII., 47*l.* Vitæ Sanctorum, on vellum, Sæc. XI.–XII., 105*l.* Joseph Hunter's Yorkshire Collections, 17*l.* Pedigrees of Gentry of the West Riding, 14*l.* 15*s.* Total realized by the four days' sale, 4,194*l.* 14*s.* 6*d.*

TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

In the Athenæum for May 11th, 1889, will be found some "In Memoriam" lines prefixed by Lord Tennyson to the life of the late Dr. W. G. Ward by his son, which was then on the eve of publication by Messrs. Macmillan. These lines were reprinted in 'Demeter, and other Poems,' which was issued in December, 1889, but their original publication was in the Athenæum, although the fact is not stated by Mr. R. H. Shepherd in his 'Bibliography of Tennyson.'

W. F. P.

Literary Gossip.

The veteran and esteemed writer Dr. Smiles has recovered so completely from the serious accident with which he met a year ago as to have been able to prepare another work for publication, which will be similar in character to the 'Self-help' series that has made him famous.

It is understood that the leading advocates of degrees for qualified women are not disposed to accept the vote of May 21st as final, and still less to abandon the position held by women students at Cambridge during the last generation. It is not considered that any proposal to withdraw the privileges hitherto accorded to such students would be supported by a majority in the Senate.

Sir Edward Maunde Thompson deserves congratulation for succeeding in securing for the nation the two quarto volumes of Sheridan manuscripts from the collection of Sir Thomas Phillipps, which were sold at Sotheby's on the 20th of this month. If these volumes had not found a home in the British Museum, they would have followed others of a like kind to New York. The letters of Sheridan's son Tom are of special interest, while many of the letters addressed to Sheridan are most instructive.

Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co. propose to publish early in October a 'Sketch of the History of the National or "Coptic" Church of Egypt,' written by Mrs. Charles Butcher, wife of Dean Butcher, the English Chaplain at Cairo. Mrs. Butcher has made the history and antiquities of Egyptian Christianity her study for many years, and the book will probably throw much new light on the subject. Since the publication of Mr. A. J. Butler's book on the 'Coptic Churches of Egypt,' intermittent attention has been drawn to this venerable Church, but much of the ground traversed by Mrs. Butcher is completely new to the general reader, and, indeed, is far from familiar to most students of ecclesiastical history.

Much satisfaction has been given to the secondary organizations by the Duke of Devonshire's undertaking to introduce the Secondary Education Bill this session. This step will provide ample opportunity for discussing the Bill out of doors, though it will not be read a second time until next year.

As a prelude to legislation, the Secretary of the Education Department is sending to all secondary schools whose addresses he can find a circular asking for information as to the number of pupils, the number and character of the staff, &c. It is impossible to do more than conjecture the number of secondary schools in England, for no approximately complete list has ever been drawn up.

The finances of Oxford and Cambridge will be once more, but indirectly, inquired into by a departmental committee of the Board of Agriculture, which has been appointed to consider the working of the Universities and College Estates Acts.

Mrs. Thomas Macquoid, who was at work on an historical novel, has been obliged, we are sorry to say, to lay it aside on account of the serious illness of Mr. Macquoid. Of course, the series of articles the veteran artist was writing for the Architectural Review has perforce been suspended.

Mr. Owen writes, in reply to our review of 'The Great Jekyll Diamond' last week:

"May I be allowed to point out a palpable error on the part of the reviewer? He says: 'Not the least noticeable feature in the book is the frequent misprinting of the hero's name.' There is no such blunder either on the part of the printer or myself. The name Lionel is correctly printed throughout, but has evidently been connected by your critic with that of Lemuel—quite a distinct character."

Jekyll is repeatedly printed "Jeykll," and the surmise of the author that we were confusing two characters is wrong.—Another author, Mr. Herbert Clarke, informs us that the volume of verse by him we recently reviewed was not his latest, as we supposed, but that he has since published another. The activity of our bards is astonishing.

Mr. C. Smith writes from Faversham:—

"I note with satisfaction in the Athenæum of the 15th inst. the coming issue of the last volume of the 'Roxburghe Ballads' under the direction of the Rev. J. W. Ebsworth, who, without fee or reward, has for nineteen years carried on his shoulders the whole burden, not only of editing, but of copying, engraving, and revising the various issues for the press. Surely, now that such a great work is so near its end, would it not be a suitable time for students of our ballad literature and well-wishers of our indefatigable friend to raise some testimonial which will evidence our regard for him personally, and the high opinion we have of his labours? Among the numerous authors who have given their life-work ungrudgingly for the benefit of others the Rev. J. W. Ebsworth stands pre-eminent, and relieved as he was a short time back of his vicarage at Molash without superannuation or compensation of any kind, I do think that some recognition of his claims to our regard would be at the present time a graceful mark of attention. If you would be kind enough to ventilate the matter in your columns, I feel sure that it would be taken up in a spirit worthy of the occasion."

The Modern Language Teachers' Guide, edited by Mr. Walter Rippmann, has been incorporated in the Modern Language Quarterly, and those who have paid for No. 3 of the Guide will receive instead a copy of the first number of the Quarterly, which will be published on July 1st, under the general editorship of Dr. H. Frank Heath.

Owing to the observance of the Diamond Jubilee, the directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution have decided to postpone the proposed garden party at Abbots Langley till next year. It is suggested that members wishing to visit the Retreat during the summer should form themselves into parties of from twelve to twenty, and that arrangements should be made to supply such parties with tea, &c., at moderate charges. All information can be had from Mr. George Larner at 48, Paternoster Row.

The decease is announced of Dr. Pulsford, the author of 'Quiet Hours' and other religious works of a semi-mystical kind which have enjoyed considerable popularity; also that of Canon Churton, of King's College, Cambridge, who was known by his contributions to the criticism of the Old Testament.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include Abstracts of Accounts of the Universities of Glasgow and St. Andrews (3*d.* each); Warrant approving of Alterations in the Statutes of the Royal University of Ireland (1*d.*); Report of the Committee of Council on Education, Scotland (3*d.*); and Educational Reports for the North-Eastern and North Central Divisions of England (2*d.* each).

SCIENCE

The Dawn of Modern Geography. By C. R. Beazley. (Murray.)

Nothing is more characteristic of the present state of scholarship than the interest attaching to geographical research. It concentrates the interest of curiosity, of adventure, of historic sentiment, not to mention political and commercial aggrandizement, in a way which no other study can do. In particular the historian now regards the scenes of the deeds he relates as so many pièces justificatives, a full description of which has to be included in his account. Hence the large amount of attention that is being paid to historical geography throughout the world. In the last edition of the 'Encyclopædia Britannica' it was noticeable how the names of the foremost scholars were attached to the geographical articles. It is, therefore, natural that the progress of the science of geography itself should form the subject of specialist investigation. For ancient geography we have Sir E. H. Bunbury's very full account, and now there comes from the same publisher Mr. Beazley's book, which is obviously intended, though not expressly stated, to be the first volume of a continuation of Bunbury which is to cover at least the progress of the science up to the discovery of the New World.

There was ample room for such a book. Cooley's three volumes, which appeared in "Lardner's Cyclopædia," formed a really good piece of work for its time; but vast accessions to our knowledge have appeared since its publication, and at the best it was only a sketch. The publications of the Société de l'Orient Latin and of the Palestine Pilgrims' Text Society have rendered accessible almost all the whole material for the period which Mr. Beazley has under review, which may be roughly defined as from 300 to 900 A.D. At the same time our idea of the Arabic geographers and travellers has been largely increased by the work of De Goeje and other Orientalists, but Mr. Beazley has not made much use of them in his seventh and concluding chapter, which is accordingly only slightly in advance of Cooley.

After an introductory chapter on the divisions of modern geography Mr. Beazley allots three chapters to the pilgrims, among whom the Bordeaux pilgrim, Arculf, and Willibald engage his chief attention. He next deals in a significant chapter with commercial and missionary travel. Neither of these branches of his subject is dealt with at all adequately. As regards the former he has by no means made sufficient use of Heyd's researches; as regards the latter he does not furnish a general view, but devotes his attention mainly to the Nestorian Church and to the legend of St. Brandan, which last he regards as a Christianized version of the Sindbad stories, seemingly unaware that it is the culmination of a whole series of "Imranas" in early Irish literature.

The chapter on "Geographical Theories" which follows is the longest and most important, and in several ways the most satisfactory of Mr. Beazley's work. After a full account of Solinus—based, of course, on Mommsen's excellent edition—he gives for the first time a full account of the remarkable geographical vagaries of Cosmas Indicopleustes, who may be said to be the hero of Mr. Beazley's book. Cosmas has, of course, been known to curious inquirers. Charton gives a tolerably full account of him, but Mr. Beazley brings out in a striking way the typical significance of his 'Christian Topography.' In him we have one of the earliest examples of the so-called conflict between religion and science. The book is one long tirade against the sphericists, or those who hold that the earth is round. Cosmas has no patience with such heretics. What is it that sustains that infallible axis of theirs? How has it been driven through the earth for it to revolve on? What is it made of? How much simpler to explain day and night by the assumption of a great mountain in the north behind which the sun hides itself! Does not Scripture rightly tell us that the earth is twice as long as it is broad? Finally, if the earth were round, imagine four men standing upon it at the cardinal points. Surely three out of the four would have to drop off; and Cosmas draws an ironic picture of four men in this impossible position.

Mr. Beazley has added to his analysis of Cosmas a number of photographic reproductions from the Florentine manuscript of him, which he seems inclined to trace back to Cosmas himself. They are extremely curious and interesting; but unfortunately the photographic reproductions are by no means satisfactory. It is rather stretching a point to call them the earliest Christian maps. Christian they may be, though that is doubtful, but they are certainly not maps.

The remainder of this chapter deals in less detail with the Ravennese geographer and with Dicuil, the Irish geographer who tells of the first discovery of Iceland, and the geographical views of the Greek and Latin Fathers. There are short excursuses on the terrestrial Paradise, on Gog and Magog (on which Mr. Beazley has missed Arturo Graf's admirable essay), and on the conception of Jerusalem as the middle point of the earth which animates most of the mediæval maps. This section of Mr. Beazley's book is concluded with an account of the maps of the period. Mr. Beazley furnishes a tolerably complete list of the few maps falling within his period, and reproduces almost all he notices. Several of these appear reproduced in this volume for the first time, and it is especially to be regretted, therefore, that the reproductions are unsatisfactory.

Mr. Beazley concludes the present instalment of his work with an account of non-Christian geography, which he deals with in a very summary way. He is aware of the inadequate character of his treatment, and apologizes for it on the plea that his immediate subject is Christian geography of the Middle Ages. But even so he might have trusted to later work than that of Reinaud, who is practically his sole source. He has, however, an interesting discussion of 'The Voyages of Sindbad,' which he is inclined to regard as only slightly idealized. With an account of the Chinese pilgrimages to India this highly interesting volume closes.

Mr. Beazley is only at the threshold of his great subject, and the manner in which he has dealt with the obscurest part of his theme causes us to look forward with pleasant anticipations to its continuation. It is gratifying to think that the best extant account of the dawn of geography should emanate from an Englishman.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S PROJECTED CATALOGUE.

Oxford, May 15, 1897.

In to-day's Athenæum I read that "the Royal Society propose to form in London an office of scientific bibliography in 1900, and to carry it on under their own auspices for ten years, making in the mean time all the arrangements necessary for so huge an undertaking as an author and subject catalogue of science in the widest sense of the word."

According, however, to the Library of last August, the catalogue is to include only the mathematical, physical, and natural sciences, and is to exclude the so-called "applied" sciences. As regards such sciences as the science of language, the science of history, the science of economics, they would, of course, find no place in it as such; though isolated branches of them might be included—the production of speech-sounds, for instance, as being part of human physiology, the language of monkeys and the song of birds as sections of zoology.

Nor do I imagine that the catalogue is to include past literature, but only that of the future, issued in annual or other periodical instalments.

Even this, however, is an undertaking justly to be described as "huge," and that word by no means exhausts the difficulty of carrying it out. It needs the permanent co-operation of many countries, each providing the money and the men to catalogue its own annual contribution to the literature of the subjects included before the materials can be periodically arranged and edited. And unless the cataloguing follows a single code of rules, and is done by persons properly trained for such work (of whom at present very few are likely to exist outside the walls of large libraries), the execution will inevitably be faulty—to what degree it is impossible to forecast. It would consequently be interesting to know whether the Royal Society propose to take any steps, and if so what steps, to obtain the experience and suggestions of those who are professionally and perennially engaged in directing the preparation of author and subject catalogues. For such a catalogue to be organized solely by scientific men without any knowledge of librarianship might be almost as unfortunate as for it to be organized solely by librarians without any knowledge of science.

E. W. B. Nicholson.

MYTHIC SINGING CROCODILES.

Reading Dr. James's introduction to his 'Apocrypha Inedita,' ii., in the Cambridge "Texts and Studies," vol. v., No. 1, I was interested to see that he illustrates the strange flying creatures called Chalkadri, with the feet and tails of lions and the heads of crocodiles and wings like those of angels (a description which also applies to the phœnixes), by Vishnu's bird Garuda. Long ago this same mythical bird was introduced into discussions on the Hebrew cherub, on which Jehovah is said to ride (Ps. xviii. 10), since it is Garuda's chief function to act as the animated chariot of Vishnu. It was new to me that Garuda is also said to have carried Aruna (Vishnu's charioteer) on his back, and placed him in front of the sun to prevent it from consuming the world by heat. This gives an interesting parallel to the use of the wings of the phœnix and the Chalkadri, but suggests that Aruna, and not Garuda, is a parallel to these two mythic birds. Garuda still seems to me a distant relative of the cherub. As to the name Chalkadri, I cannot agree with my friend Mr. Charles that it is a transliteration of χαλκύδραι, brazen hydras or serpents. The serpents of Num. xxi. 6 have no solar connexion whatever: neither did the old writers attribute any to the brazen serpent. It seems to me that one of the two French scholars to whom Dr. James's volume is dedicated has given the most reasonable view of the name Chalkadri. I will not take up space with recapitulating M. Berger's interesting analogies and arguments, for which see a recent number of the French journal of folk-lore called Melusine. His conclusion is that Chalkadri is a corruption of "crocodile," the letters being mixed up, as so often happens in corruptions. I know that the description only speaks of the head as being that of a crocodile. But the name preceded this description. The only thing which M. Berger has not cleared up is the combination of the phœnix and (ex hyp.) the crocodile as attendants on the sun. Can this arise from the fact that the sun-god was identified (among other symbolic animals) with the bennu or phœnix and the crocodile (see Brugsch, 'Religion und Mythologie der alten Aegypter,' pp. 24, 105)? How animals with crocodiles' heads were supposed to sing, I do not know. I presume that the phœnix (which was confused apparently with the swan) sang before it had the misfortune to get a crocodile's head, and that the crocodile learned the secret of the phœnix!

The references in the introduction to the dragon are also very interesting. Has Dr. James intentionally omitted mentioning the old Babylonian dragon-myth? It is true this has become sadly distorted.

In the act of closing this letter I find in the Palestine Fund Quarterly Statement for July, 1888, a note by Col. Conder on crocodiles in Palestine, in which he points out that these animals are mentioned as 'corcodrils" by Sir John Maundeville; this is very near Chalkadri. He also quotes from a tract of the thirteenth century, showing that crocodiles were then called "cocatrices." T. K. Cheyne.

SOCIETIES.

Society of Antiquaries.—May 13.—Sir J. Evans, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. M. Williams exhibited a Viking sword, with silver-plated hilt inlaid with gold, and Mr. E. Barry a plain sword, both found in the Thames.—Mr. Read expressed his opinion that both were of the same date, circa 1000, despite the difference in the shapes of the guards.—Mr. S. Klein exhibited three specimens of some curious hollow earthenware vessels dug up at Stanmore, probably of mediæval date.—The Benchers of Lincoln's Inn exhibited a much mutilated alabaster carving of the Annunciation, found at Lincoln's Inn, which Mr. Hope claimed to be the work of one of the Nottingham "alablastermen" during the latter part of the fifteenth century.—Mr. J. A. Clark exhibited a good mediæval jug of green glazed pottery, also found at Lincoln's Inn.—On both objects some notes were read by Mr. Baildon.—Mr. E. Green communicated a note 'On the Insignia of an Archbishopric,' in which he urged that the cross and pall usually claimed as the armorial ensigns of the sees of Canterbury, York, Dublin, and Armagh were not the arms of the see at all, but simply the insignia of an archbishopric, and as such impaled with the arms of the archbishop for the time being. In support of this theory Mr. Green quoted instances of the impalement of the cross and pall with the cross and monogram of Christ, which he contended were the real arms of the see of Canterbury, by Archbishop Cranmer and Cardinal Pole, and of the concurrent use by some of the Archbishops of York of their own arms impaled with the cross and pall, and of the arms of the see (the crossed keys and Papal mitre of St. Peter).—Prof. Windle read a note on the discovery of several pottery kilns, presumably of Roman date, near Mancetter.

May 20.—Viscount Dillon, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Romilly Allen exhibited a stone ball, with curious markings, found at Lumphanan, Aberdeenshire, and some Roman remains found at Carmarthen.—Mr. Peacock exhibited an engine-turned wooden bowl mounted in silver, of late seventeenth century date.—Mr. P. G. Stone read a note on the discovery, within the keep of Carisbrooke Castle, of the walls of a series of chambers of the thirteenth century.—Mr. R. H. Warren exhibited and communicated a note on a safe-conduct of the year 1406 by the bailiffs and burgesses of Portland on behalf of William Pires.—The Rev. H. Gee read a paper on the domus inferior, or frary, of our oldest Charterhouses. There were in England nine Charterhouses. Of these the two oldest, Witham and Henton, were situated in Somersetshire. A special point of interest attaches to them from the fact that they both possessed a domus inferior, which differentiated them in plan and life from all other English Charterhouses. The Grande Chartreuse, the mother house of the order, still possesses, in what is called the Currière, her ancient domus inferior. For perhaps two hundred years each Charterhouse was built in two distinct parts. The upper house, with its cloisters, church, &c., was the monastery of the monks proper of the order. At some distance below was built the lower house for the lay brethren. In this went on all the noisy work, such as carpentering, milling, &c., whilst the fathers served God on the mountain above in silence. On stated occasions the lay brethren with the procurator ascended to the upper house for festival services and so forth, but most of the life of these conversi was passed below. The domus inferior also served as a hospital to which sick monks might be remitted, and as a guest-house to intercept the guests whom it was not thought necessary to send on to the father prior above. The 'Magna Vita' of St. Hugh of Lincoln, third prior, but real founder of Witham, proves that the two houses existed there. The present Witham Friary, with its beautiful church, represents the site of the old lower house, but the upper house has not been identified. In 1458 the lower house was converted into a grange at Witham, and the church of the lay brothers practically became a parish church. At Henton the chief remains are those of the monastery of the fathers, but the site of the lower house, half a mile distant, can easily be traced, with its mills, reservoirs, &c. There is reason for believing that at Henton also the lower house was changed into a grange in the fifteenth century. This alteration was due to the great difficulty of obtaining conversi in sufficient numbers to do the ordinary work of the lower house. It was a difficulty which apparently operated very widely in the order after the ravages of the Black Death. The difference in plan occasioned by the change may be seen in the Charterhouses in London and at Mount Grace, which were built on one level, and never possessed a lower house. The Carthusians themselves say that the alteration was a good one, because all the monks, both clerical and lay, were thus placed more immediately under the eye of the prior. When there was a domus inferior he went to it for one week in five, and cannot have known the lay brothers well.

Numismatic.—May 20.—Sir J. Evans, President, in the chair.—Lord Grantley exhibited a medal commemorating the foundation of the French Society of Bibliophiles in 1820. It has on the obverse a portrait of Jacque Auguste de Thou, and on the reverse a view of the interior of a library.—Mr. R. Day exhibited a gold badge of the Jamaica Royal Military Club, founded on August 21st, 1788, the anniversary of the birthday of its patron William, Duke of Clarence, afterwards William IV.—Dr. F. P. Weber exhibited three medals with portraits of Priam, Alexander the Great, and Octavius, which, though unsigned, he attributed to the Italian medalist Alessandro Cesati, called "Il Grechetto."—Mr. L. A. Lawrence showed a rare penny of William I, and others of Æthelstan and Eadmund of East Anglia in very fine condition.—Mr. Ready exhibited a rare penny of Henry I., and Mr. A. E. Copp a medalet with the portrait of James Blomfield Rush, who was executed at Norwich for murder in 1849.—Mr. E. J. Seltmann contributed a paper on the type known as "the Demos" on coins of Rhegium. After describing the representations of the figure of Demos on coins of late date, and also citing the earliest representations of this divinity in sculpture and painting, the author was of opinion that the seated figure found on the reverse of the early coins of Rhegium was that not of the Demos, but of Aristæus, the protector of flocks and shepherds, of vines and olive plantations, the instructor in the art of cultivating bees, the averter of the burning heat of the Dog-star, &c. The various symbols and figures which are to be found below the chair on which the figure is seated appeared to Mr. Seltmann also to be connected with the nature and functions of Aristæus in their various phases.

Statistical.—May 25.—Mr. A. E. Bateman, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Sir R. Hunter 'On the Movements for the Inclosure and for the Preservation of Open Lands.'

Zoological.—May 18.—Prof. G. B. Howes in the chair.—Mr. Sclater exhibited a plan of the new zoological garden attached to the Pará Museum, Brazil, and the skin of a penguin which he had received in exchange from the Musée d'Histoire Naturelle as a specimen of Microdiptes serresianus (Oust.); and read a note from Mr. Ogilvie-Grant, according to which it was only an immature example of the rock-hopper penguin (Eudyptes chrysocome).—Mr. R. E. Holding exhibited a skull of a Theban goat (Capra hircus, var. thebaica), and made remarks on the shortening of the skull in this and other domesticated animals.—Mr. G. A. Boulenger read a paper entitled 'A Revision of the Lizards of the Genus Sceloporus.' From a study of the large mass of material in the British Museum, the author had come to the conclusion that the difficult genus Sceloporus, so far as was at present known, consisted of thirty-two species. Nearly all the specimens examined, with the exception of very young ones, had been measured, and their dimensions and the number of scales and femoral pores possessed by each of them were recorded in the paper. One new species (Sceloporus asper) was described.—Dr. G. H. Fowler read the second of a series of papers 'On the Plankton of the Faeroe Channel,' which dealt with the distribution of Conchœcia maxima (a midwater or mesoplankton form), with the European species of Tomopteris, and with the distribution of Tracheloteuthis riisei.—Mr. M. Jacoby contributed the second part of a paper 'On the Phytophagous Coleoptera of Africa and Madagascar.' Nine new genera and eighty new species of the families Eumolpinæ, Halticinæ, and Galerucinæ were described.—Mr. W. G. Ridewood read a paper 'On the Structure and Development of the Hyobranchial Skeleton of Pelodytes punctatus,' in which he showed that the dismemberment of the hyoidean cornua, the formation of the lateral foramina, and the almost complete enclosure of the hyoglossal sinus — features which render the hyobranchial skeleton of the adult Pelodytes so remarkable—are peculiarities which arise quite late, when the metamorphosis is nearly complete. Allusion was made to the fact that the persistent inner boundary of the thyroid foramen developes into the thyrohyal of the adult, and the suggestion was thrown out that this might prove to be the normal mode of development for the thyrohyal in the Anura generally. The author also discussed the morphological value of the branchial spicula of the larva, and the mode of development of the antero-lateral and postero-lateral processes of the adult hyobranchial skeleton.—Messrs. O. Thomas and R. Lydekker contributed a paper on the number of grinding-teeth possessed by the manatee. From an examination of several specimens of this animal it had been ascertained that the number of its grinding-teeth was not a fixed one, but that it developed a continuous and indefinite number to replace those which had become worn away by the sand which was necessarily present in somewhat large quantities in its food of water-weeds.

Chemical.—May 20.—Prof. Dewar, President, in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'The Theory of Osmotic Pressure and the Hypothesis of Electrolytic Dissociation,' 'Molecular Rotation of Optically Active Salts,' and 'Heats of Neutralization of Acids and Bases in Dilute Aqueous Solution,' by Mr. H. Crompton,—'A Comparative Crystallographical Study of the Normal Selenates of Potassium, Rubidium, and Cæsium,' by Mr. A. E. Tutton,—'The Platinum-Silver Alloys, their Solubility in Nitric Acid,' by Mr. J. Spiller,—and 'Dalton's Law in Solutions,' by Dr. M. Wilderman.

Historical.—May 20.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff, President, in the chair.—The following were elected Fellows: Capt. G. G. Traherne, Rev. W. B. R. Caley, and Mr. W. Camidge.—The ordinary members of the Camden Society were individually nominated and elected Fellows of the Royal Historical Society in accordance with the terms of amalgamation arranged between the two societies.—A communication was made by Mr. F. Palmer on the subject of an order of battle during Marlborough's campaign of 1710 before Villers-Brulein, the original of which was exhibited.—A discussion followed, in which Mr. O. Browning criticized the suggested explanation of this draft order.—A paper was read by the Rev. J. N. Figgis 'On some Political Theories of the Early Jesuits.'—A discussion followed, in which Father Gerard spoke at some length in opposition to certain theories expressed in the paper.—Prof. W. E. Collins also spoke, and the President congratulated the Society upon the important contribution which had been made to the study of the history of the Jesuit movement.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Surveyors' Institution, 3.—Annual General Meeting
— Geographical, 8½.—'Nupe and Ilorin (Nigeria),' Lieut. S. Vandeleur
Tues Royal Institution, 3.—'The Heart and its Work,' Dr. E. H. Starling
— Biblical Archæology, 8.—'Abraham and the Land of his Nativity,' Mr H. Rassam
— Zoological, 8.—'Structure of the Skull in the Paraguayan Lepidosiren,' Prof T. W. Bridge; 'Classification of the Thyrididæ, a Family of the Lepidoptera Phalænæ,' Sir G. F. Hampson; 'Collection of Lepidoptera obtained at Shoa in 1894 by Mr. F. Gillett,' Dr A. G. Butler
Wed. Archæological Institute, 4.—'Inventory of Arms and Armour belonging to Thomas, Duke of Gloucester, in 1399,' Viscount Dillon and Mr. W. H. St. John Hope; 'The Coronation Stone at Westminster,' Mr J. Hilton — Victoria Institute, 4½.—Annual Meeting
— Entomological, 8
— British Archæological Association, 8.—'Notes on North Lancashire,' Mr T. Cann Hughes
Thurs Royal Institution, 3.—'The French Revolution and English Literature,' Mr C. Collins
— Royal, 4.—Election of Fellows
— Linnean, 8.—'Observations on Termites,' Dr G. D. Haviland; 'On the Genus Ramulina,' Prof. T. Rupert Jones and Mr. F. Chapman
— Chemical, 8.—'On the Thermo-Chemistry of Carbohydrate Hydrolysis,' Messrs H. T. Brown and S. Pickering, and five other Papers
Fri Physical, 5.—'Perception of the Difference of Phase by the Two Ears,' Dr A. A. Gray; 'The Isothermals of Isopentane,' Mr Rose-Innes
— Philological, 8.—'The Uses of the Subjunctive Mood in Early Irish,' Prof J. Strachan
— Geologists' Association, 8.—'The Origin of the High Level Gravel with Triassic Débris adjoining the Valley of the Upper Thames,' Mr H. J. Osborne White

1. Royal Institution, 3. Signalling through Space without Wires. Mr. W. H. Preece.
8. Royal Institution, 3. Music in England during the Reign of Queen Victoria. Mr. J. A. Fuller Maitland.

Science Gossip.

Mr. Rollo Appleyard recently showed some interesting experiments at the Physical Society in the course of a paper 'On Liquid Coherers and Mobile Conductors.' From these experiments it appears that the passage of an electric spark or current from a battery of a thousand volts has the effect of accelerating the separation of oil from water. On becoming electrified, the water particles suspended in the oil cohere, thus forming enlarged drops. The result is that the frictional resistance to falling is materially diminished, the water being in consequence precipitated through the oil; indeed, the water may sometimes be seen descending in a rapid succession of globules, precisely as large raindrops are after thunder.

Mr. Appleyard finds that about equal parts of oil and water are good proportions for this experiment. It was again more recently exhibited at the Royal Institution, when Lord Rayleigh took occasion to say a few words on the subject.

The planet Mercury will be at greatest western elongation from the sun on the 16th prox., and will, therefore, be visible for a short time before sunrise in the constellation Taurus. Venus will be at her greatest brilliancy as a morning star on the 3rd, and near the horned waning moon on the 26th; in the course of the month she will move from the constellation Aries into Taurus. Mars is still visible in the first part of the night, situated in the constellation Cancer; by the end of next month he will have moved into the western part of Leo, and set before 11 o'clock in the evening. Jupiter is in Leo, and will set at midnight on the 13th prox., afterwards earlier. Saturn is nearly on the boundary of the constellations Libra and Scorpio; he will be due south at 10 o'clock in the evening on the 14th prox. and at 9 o'clock on the 29th.

The completion of the great Yerkes telescope deprives that at the Lick Observatory on Mount Hamilton of its pre-eminent position as the largest in the world, which it has occupied during the last twelve years. The effective aperture of the former is 41½ in., whilst that of the latter is 36 in.; those of the largest two in Europe are the 30 in. of the Imperial Observatory at Pulkowa and the 29·9 in. of the Bischoffsheim Observatory at Nice, so that the area of the Yerkes glass is very nearly twice that of the last.

The German scientific and medical societies have collected a considerable sum towards the erection of a monument to Johannes Müller, the physiologist, at Coblence, where he was born in 1801. Several contributions have been sent by foreign scholars, including one lately made at a session of the Paris Academy of Sciences.

The next meeting of the German Zoological Society will take place at Kiel from the 9th to the 11th of June.

FINE ARTS

Foreign Bookbindings in the British Museum. Illustrations of Sixty-three Examples selected on Account of their Beauty or Historical Interest. With Introduction and Descriptions by W. Y. Fletcher. The Plates printed in Facsimile by W. Griggs. (Kegan Paul & Co.)

The best criticism and highest praise which we can bestow on Mr. Fletcher's new book is to say that it is in every way worthy of the magnificent volume on 'English Bookbindings in the British Museum' issued a year ago, to which it is the complement. That this should be the case was by no means a matter of course, for whereas the transference of the old Royal Library to the Museum in 1757 placed the national collection, from the outset, beyond the reach of competition in respect to the massive and dignified English bindings of the Tudors and early Stuarts, no such splendid benefaction has suddenly enriched it to the same extent with specimens of the work of foreign binders. It has always, however, been the boast of the British Museum that while the pre-eminence of its English collections is undisputed, in its foreign collections it is only second to the national libraries of the countries which they represent, and it will be interesting to note how far in the case of foreign bookbindings this boast can be sustained, and the manner in which the collection has been brought together. Mr. Fletcher does not say very much in his two books as to the sources of the Museum treasures, but with a single accidental omission (a binding with the arms of Thomas Wotton, No. 29 of vol. i.) he mentions the manner in which each of the 126 examples he describes has been acquired, and we have had the curiosity to tabulate and analyze this information. So much has been written of late years as to the historical development of binding that it will perhaps be interesting if, with the help of these notes, we glance through his book from the standpoint of the history of book-collecting instead of following the strict chronological order of the plates.

The difference in the origin of the English and foreign collections will be at once apparent when we note that a hundred years ago the Museum possessed no fewer than twenty-five of the English bindings selected by Mr. Fletcher, as against only four of his foreign examples. All these came from the old Royal Library given to the Museum by George II. in 1757, and three of the foreign books are presentation copies: a Venetian panel binding with the arms of Queen Elizabeth, a most richly tooled and inlaid French binding (possibly an early example of the work of Le Gascon) with the arms of James I., and, lastly, a copy of the first volume of De Thou's 'Historiæ sui Temporis.' This bears the arms of Henri IV. of France, but as the historian presented the book to James through the French ambassador, and, according to his statement, with the express permission of his own king, the French arms probably only emphasized the official character of the present. All three bindings are fine examples, and the brilliancy and elaborate decoration of the first two are admirably reproduced in Mr. Griggs's plates.

The bequest of the library of the Rev. Clayton Mordaunt Cracherode in 1799 brought the Museum several fine examples of the work of Roger Payne and two brilliant specimens of the bindings of John Day, the Elizabethan printer, which have hardly obtained from historians of the art as much attention as they deserve. For the foreign collection it did much more than this. This generous bequest furnishes Mr. Fletcher with as many as fourteen of his sixty-three selected examples, among them being all the four specimens of books bound for Grolier; both the bindings for his contemporary Maioli: the sunk medallion binding of the 'Anthologia Græca' of 1494; one of the three Henri II. books; a Katharine de' Medici; a splendid specimen of one of the books bound for De Thou in the style attributed to Nicolas Eve; an example of the style ascribed to Clovis Eve; a little Greek Testament (Amsterdam, 1633) in the daintiest and most perfect manner of Le Gascon; one of the much overrated bindings, with the stamp of the golden fleece, executed for the Baron de Longepierre; and a good specimen of the work of Derome. If these fourteen books were taken away the gap in the Museum collection would be irreparable. Not only numerically, but in artistic interest, Mr. Cracherode's bequest is its most important constituent.

In describing and illustrating these fine books both Mr. Fletcher and Mr. Griggs rise to the height of the occasion. Mr. Fletcher's discussions of the problems as to the French or Italian origin of the later Grolier bindings, the personality of Maioli, the connexion between the ciphers of Diane de Poitiers and Henri II., and the degree of positiveness with which we can connect with the Eves and Le Gascon the styles usually attributed to them, are models of careful statement. Mr. Griggs makes the Katharine de' Medici binding a little too garish, and does scant justice to the beauty of the leather in the Greek anthology and the Longepierre; but his Groliers and Maiolis are excellent, and the examples of the work of Nicolas and Clovis Eve and of Le Gascon are beyond all praise.

The acquisition of the library of George III. in 1822 brought to the Museum nine important English bindings, chiefly of the end of the seventeenth century and the beginning of its successor. Two, however, were royal bindings of an earlier date, the first being a fine, but rather worn binding executed for Mary, Queen of Scots; the other, the little velvet and enamel binding of a 'Libellus Precationum' which had belonged to Queen Elizabeth, and must be reckoned as among the gems of the Museum collection. As against these the only foreign binding received at this time was that enclosing a 'Historia Utriusque Belli Dacici,' the tooling of which shows it to be the work of Le Gascon. It is a large and magnificently decorated specimen of his skill, the groundwork of red morocco being inlaid with olive, citron, and brown. In such profusely ornamented examples Mr. Griggs's skill is seen at its best, and the plate (No. 48) is one of the most successful in the book. As a work of art we greatly prefer the little Greek Testament in the Cracherode Library.

During the first seventy or eighty years of the existence of the British Museum the Parliamentary grants it received were both fitful and niggardly. It is, therefore, not surprising to find that, until the beginning of the present reign, only one of Mr. Fletcher's selected examples (a rather poor Italian binding with the arms of Clement XIII., hardly worthy to be included in his volume) entered the Museum by purchase. But the Commission which reported in 1836 resulted in a large increase of the annual grant, and the appointment of Panizzi to the Keepership of Printed Books in the following year seems to have been hardly less conducive to the purchase of fine bindings. Other causes, notably the great increase of prices during the last thirty years, have doubtless to be reckoned with; but the testimony of figures is certainly eloquent as to Panizzi's enthusiasm for this class of purchases. Between 1837 and his resignation in 1867 eighteen of Mr. Fletcher's selected specimens of English work were purchased, as against four acquired in the last thirty years; while of the foreign bindings, one, as we have seen, was bought in 1834, twenty-two during Panizzi's rule as Keeper or Principal Librarian, and only one since his retirement, a Byzantine silver-gilt binding enclosing a Greek manuscript of the New Testament, purchased from Lord Wimborne in 1871. A few of the bindings acquired before Panizzi became Principal Librarian were of manuscripts, and their purchase, therefore, cannot be laid to his credit; but it is evident that the examples bought under his auspices amount to upwards of one-fourth of the whole collection. Among the earlier of these acquisitions may be mentioned a fine Spanish binding of the seventeenth century; an Italian painted binding of a French Horæ, dated 1549; a book of devotion bound for Mary de' Medici; a Le Gascon binding for Dominique Séguier, Bishop of Meaux; and the splendid German stamped binding by Johann Hagmayer, of Ulm, some of the designs on which are copied from the playing-cards of the master E. S. of 1466—altogether a sufficiently catholic selection.

The library bequeathed to the Museum by Mr. Grenville in 1846 apparently only contained one English binding of the first class, a book bound for Leicester, Earl of Dudley; but it will surprise many people to learn that ten of the foreign bindings here illustrated are from Mr. Grenville's collection. Their former owner's well-known dislike to a shabby binding, no matter how venerable its age, and his preference for his own coat of arms over those of earlier collectors, have given rise to a legend that he was a sort of vandal among collectors, and took a special delight in destroying fine bindings. As a matter of fact, Mr. Grenville even spared a little Francis I. binding with the badge of the salamander, though it was dilapidated enough to have to be inlaid; and among the other treasures from his collection here illustrated we find the copy of Celsus (Venice, 1497), with painted medallions of Curtius and Horatius Cocles, which once belonged to Grolier; a fine Henri II. book; an unusually fresh Canevari; a Marcus Laurinus; and specimens of the work of both Nicolas and Clovis Eve and of Padeloup.

From the books acquired by purchase during the next twenty years Mr. Fletcher has selected twelve of his specimens, among them being the jewelled cover of an eleventh century Evangeliarium; the Byzantine ivory binding of a twelfth century Psalter (both well reproduced by Mr. Griggs, though slightly darkened); a binding with the "pot cassé" of Geoffroy Tory; some good examples of anonymous French, German, and Italian work; and one by Magnus of Amsterdam. Finally, he has included six bindings, justly described as of great beauty and interest, which reached the Museum in 1868 as a bequest from Mr. Felix Slade, the most noteworthy of these being the exceptionally fine French stamped binding by Jehan Norins, and the mosaic binding of red morocco, ornamented with flowers formed by inlaid leather of various colours, in which Le Monnier enclosed a small French Bible printed at Cologne in 1739.

As we have already noted, only one binding here illustrated was acquired after the date of Mr. Slade's bequest, and this, with three books respectively presented by the Earl of Home ('Le Chappellet de Jesus,' bound for Anna, wife of the Emperor Ferdinand), by Lady Banks (the very important binding by Nicolas Eve of 'Le Livre des Statuts de lordre du Sainct Esprit,' for which his bill is extant), and by Sir R. C. Hoare (a good seventeenth century Italian fan-pattern binding), completes our tale. In the way in which the collection has been built up good fortune has certainly played no small part, for the removal of the examples bequeathed by Mr. Cracherode, Mr. Grenville, or even by Mr. Slade would cause a most serious breach in its completeness; but we have compared the plates in Mr. Fletcher's volume with the sober collotype illustrations in M. Henri Bouchot's 'Les Reliures à la Bibliothèque Nationale,' and the gaps which the comparison reveals are remarkably few. A binding for Louis XII., a better example of work done for Francis I., a more showy binding for Henri II. or Diane de Poitiers (the two here given are admirable, but both in the same sober style), and one for Francis II., would bring the Museum collection within a very little of the representative completeness at which it may reasonably aim, though the lavish profusion of French royal bindings at the Bibliothèque Nationale can, of course, never be rivalled. But with, perhaps, half a dozen exceptions, the examples brought together in Mr. Fletcher's fine book represent the work of every noted foreign binder and the library of every noted foreign collector, and they are illustrated with a brilliancy and faithfulness which, except in a mere handful of plates in two or three French books, have never been approached. Of Mr. Fletcher's own share in these two books we have already spoken incidentally. Save for two slight misprints we have not been able to discover a flaw in his introduction and descriptions, and he writes with as much judgment as enthusiasm. With the help of Mr. Griggs he has done a great work in making the Museum collection of bindings, both English and foreign, serviceable for purposes of study and comparison to students in every part of the world, and he is himself among the best and pleasantest of instructors.

The Bengal Government has done good service to the cause of Indian art and archæology by the publication of The Revised List of Ancient Monuments in Bengal. The volume does much more than give a mere list of these antiquities. Its careful classification of monuments according to their historical and archæological value, and the practical suggestions it gives for the preservation of those of greater importance and interest, should lead, it is to be hoped, to speedy measures being taken for their protection from decay and the many adverse influences which tend to their destruction. In India archæological remains have a peculiar value, in that we depend so largely upon them for accurate information as to the past history of the country. Every effort, therefore, to preserve them should be encouraged. The present list is revised from that drawn up in the year 1887, which was itself a development of the first list published by the Government in 1879. Care has evidently been taken to make the present compilation as complete as possible. The classification is clear and comprehensive, while the information embodied under the head of local history or tradition is interesting, and may prove valuable for purposes of research. Scarcely less useful for this end are the references to already existing sources of information on the various antiquities. Literature dealing with such subjects tends to increase so rapidly that references of this kind are indispensable to all engaged in this branch of work. The volume includes maps of the different divisions of the Bengal Presidency, containing the names of the districts and villages in or near which the antiquities are found, and a carefully compiled index.

Academy Notes, No. 23 (Chatto & Windus); Pictures of 1897 ('Art Journal' Office), and The Royal Academy and New Gallery ('Black and White') are competing series of illustrated guides to the art exhibitions to which they refer. On the whole, although not the dearest, but chiefly because its cuts are larger, Black and White's venture seems to us the most worth having. Many of the cuts in it are very good; those of the 'Notes' comprise a considerable proportion of outlines, which, though clever, hardly suffice to represent more than the designs of the pictures, but this issue is most conveniently arranged, being in the order of the catalogue. 'Pictures,' for reasons it is not hard to guess at, proclaims loudly that it contains only works that are "hung in the exhibitions." This is a sly hit at a rival which was once weak enough, as we pointed out at the time, to publish cuts of rejected pictures.

The Report of the Committee appointed to inquire into the Distribution of Science and Art Grants, with a Revised Edition of the Science and Art Directory (Stationery Office), has been published, and, being one of the most complicated documents ever issued by a department, defies any sort of analysis that could be given within our limits. It would, indeed, be necessary to enter upon fundamental questions, in respect to some of which we are at direct issue with this department, if we attempted to deal with the report. We may say, however, that the public has not the slightest notion of what is being done at its expense.

THE SALONS AT PARIS.

(Fourth Notice.)

The painters who exhibit at the Champs Élysées have proceeded, as they do each year, to vote the awards. The Médaille d'Honneur, which is bestowed on the vote of all the exhibitors, after having obtained at least an honourable mention, has been conferred on M. Harpignies. The old landscape master shows this year Solitude and On the Banks of the Rhone (Nos. 817 and 818), in which he presents, one may almost say, a résumé of all his previous work. After having studied nature much, lived in intimacy with her, and painted with feet in wet grass, and head sub Jove crudo, he has arrived at that peaceful time of life in which the artist is fain to turn over the sheets of portfolios full of old studies and fond memories. And as he knows all that can be known of his handicraft, he puts together in beautiful pages of a decorative cast what he once analyzed with a more minute attention to a literal rendering of a copy "after nature." He is as enamoured as ever of beautiful robust forms, of vigorous trees sturdily fixed in the deep earth; but he shows himself more alive than he was in the past to the problems of envelopment; he generalizes more, he paints in the open air. His style, always powerful, has now become less rough. Of his two landscapes, one, 'Solitude,' represents a setting sun on the Rhone, at one of the defiles where the river penetrates between Vienne and Avignon before issuing forth into the plain; the other, 'On the Banks of the Rhone,' renders a morning effect. It is the first of these two pictures which has especially attracted public notice by the opulence of its colour. But its admirable firmness and the breadth of its design no less than the exquisite fineness of its transparent atmosphere make me prefer the second. Something of the charming soul of Corot is diffused, one would say, through this beautiful landscape and mingles its tenderness with the robust vigour of secular oaks.

The list of landscapes—and good landscapes too—in the two Salons is so long that I cannot here enter on the study of them. Indeed, this genre of landscape—of which the academic critics of the school of David wrote, in their superstitious respect for "history" and "style," that it ought not to exist—has encroached on everything. It has joined hands with decorative art, portrait painting, religious and historic subjects. The modern man has perceived the profound relationship of primitive nature—has seen that "a landscape is the groundwork of human life," as a great poet wrote; and it is as much by the various states of the nature that surrounds us, her smiles, her caresses, the melancholy moods of light and sky, as by the expression of human movement that painters endeavour to convey the impression, picturesque or moral, of the historical or religious subjects they have chosen to illustrate. I have already had occasion in a previous article to speak of some pictures in which landscape, especially landscape in twilight, plays an effective part. I ought to speak, if there were time and place here, of the delicious landscapes of M. Cazin (Champ de Mars, 261–267); above all, The Bell, souvenir of the Zuyder Zee, A Village of Artois, The Wanderers, and Stormy Weather are full of a penetrating poetry. What is a poetic landscape if it is not that in which—by careful observation of all the characteristic forms, and all the connexions of tones and values which are to be seen between the bright heaven and the earth—the great law of harmony and love in nature, and the very order of creation, are revealed once again to our eyes and our heart? Every artist brings to the observation of these everlasting laws, ever new in their effects, the peculiar shades of his own feeling, which cannot be reduced to rules. The bent of M. Cazin is always a little towards melancholy; but it is a melancholy with nothing morbid in it; it always expresses itself discreetly, although it is penetrating. M. René Billotte (Champ de Mars, 93–98) has found in the suburbs of Paris a region previously but little explored, where he has made real discoveries. In the quarries of Nanterre or Soisy, at the gate of Courcelles, on the slopes of fortifications, he has painted landscapes which are at once portraits of the country in the scrupulous and precise observation he has put into them, and poetical reproductions of certain states of nature in the delicacy of the feelings with which the artist has approached and endowed them.

To feel finely—this is everything, and in a general way to feel—to mingle with all that one sees and copies the confidence of one's emotions and dreams. Some are more sensible to the inexhaustible force of nature; they prefer solitary forests, where giant trees stand like the sole masters of the earth (M. Emile Michel, The Edge of the Forest, Champs Elysées, 1179); others go to study in cultivated fields the human form in action in the ever-renewed beauty of various seasons and hours (M. Lhermitte, Haymaking, Field with Geese, The End of the Day, 817–819, Champ de Mars, or M. Jules Breton, the Harvest of Poppies, 249, Champs Elysées); but be they solitudes or fields of human labour, it is always nature, and the quality of the representations of her depends chiefly on the quality of emotion in the painter. The introduction of photography into the studios is from this point of view a danger against which young artists cannot be too much warned. Our day has seen the creation of an industry of landscape photographers who offer painters documents after nature which are too often made use of. The only thing wanting in these documents is life, and it would be as idle to attempt to make a persuasive work from them as to put together a living human body from anatomical sections. Leonardo da Vinci, insisting in his treatise 'On Painting' on the details of form and construction which must be especially observed by the portrait painter, "bone and the cartilages which make up the nose, eyes, brow, chin, &c.," adds: "You will find also some particular points in the smaller parts which you must observe more than you naturally would, in order to fill your imagination with them."

To fill one's imagination; it is only when one has reached this point that the work of art begins. This is also the reason why a portrait discovers to our gaze as much of the sensibility of the painter as of the likeness of the sitter. This principle is evident at the exhibition of portraits of women and children which has for some time been attracting all Paris to the Ecole des Beaux-Arts; evident, also, in examples of lesser value at the two Salons. There was much talk, before varnishing, about the portrait of His Royal Highness the Duke d'Aumale, by M. Benjamin-Constant (Champs Élysées, 120). There was nothing in the gossip of the journals of the Boulevards but points of exclamation, indiscretions, and sayings of the prince or the painter about the colour of the eyes, "bleu de France," or the beauty, towards the close of afternoon on a fine autumnal day, of the park of Chantilly, in the middle of which M. Benjamin-Constant decided to paint his royal model. And as nothing, as everybody knows, is usually more veracious, more disinterested, and more spontaneous than this reporters' gossip, we expected a masterpiece. Now or never was indeed the time to make one. What nobler model, what finer motive could be suggested to a portrait painter? One was reminded of a small work in which Prud'hon painted the Count of Somariva at the end of his life in the walk of a park which the setting sun filled to the horizon with its sadness and its serious splendour; and one pictured to oneself, in the eyes of the mind, in "the walk of the Constable" or "the wood of Sylvia," in that historic and truly royal land of Chantilly which Bossuet celebrated and Théophile de Viau sang in charming verses near the ponds and under the great trees where walked "Monsieur le Prince," the victor of Rocroy—one pictured to oneself the last magnanimous heir of the Condés screening in the retirement, the majesty and poetry of nature, his remembrances, his dreams, his regrets, and unavailing glory. Why in M. Constant's picture do we feel more of ambition, or, let us say, pretension, than of realization of all this? Why does the prince's figure, seated in the foreground, in a riding dress, on a bench, in the shadow of a tree already touched by autumn brown, appear lost, and, as it were, drowned in the landscape, instead of being, as it ought to have been, accompanied, supported, and completed by it? Why do those features, which were so expressive and so fine, express—I will not say, fatigue and weariness (which the invisible presence even then of the death so near would explain too well), but a kind of ill humour and ennui which assuredly was not usual with him, as if the prince had lent himself with but an ill grace to the fantasy of his painter! Why does the landscape itself seem indifferent! Why, in fine, does this great picture impress one as superficial and mediocre! This is a question M. Constant must not be asked, for he is satisfied that he has painted a masterpiece. The future will decide the question. The portrait of M. Chauchard (121), who owns the great magasins du Louvre, is simpler and better.

I read recently in a study by Eugène Delacroix on the portrait of Pope Pius VII. by Sir Thomas Lawrence:—

"The artists of old times would have been afraid to enliven their portraits by rapid passionate movements; nothing could be wiser than this reservation. They used to paint serious figures in restful attitudes. No more of those insupportable inspired airs or of those smiles which follow us in those ridiculous portraits, of which the originals have slept in their tombs for centuries, and are 'grave men,' I think, to use Mercutio's phrase."

There is a school of portrait painters of to-day which does not share the views of Delacroix. M. de La Gandara (Champ de Mars, 724–727), M. Alexander (9–11), M. Boldini (127–129), prefer grimacing faces or agitated attitudes. There has been much talk about the portrait of Count Robert of Montesquiou (129). M. de Montesquiou, who is an æsthete of the very young school, has already been painted by Mr. Whistler, a serpentine figure flying into the depth of the canvas like a transitory shadow, and trying with complicated movements to get into a glove of Barbey d'Aurévilly. In M. Boldini's portrait he is seated in a bright dress on a bright background, sunk in the contemplation of an enamelled riding whip. When our descendants comment on these works, they will say with astonishment, "This was how they dressed in those days; this was how they admired beauty and looked at themselves. Under very complicated forms these æsthetes, perhaps, concealed souls at bottom very simple; but the fear of being like common humanity tortured them, as their semblances prove, which are as full of contortions as their prose and verse pieces. It is known that some of them, to avoid speaking the language of all the world, wrote, like Joseph Prudhomme, in delirium; and the painters appeared at the proper moment to take the portraits of these childishly disquieted souls, some with malice like M. Boldini, others with candour like M. Aman Jean."

Before these specimens of a humanity decidedly too superior, good people feel their inferiority and look instinctively for semblances more simple and reassuring, with which, as Montesquieu said, "on pourrait se tirer d'affaire avec son esprit de tous les jours." There is no lack of this sort of thing at the two Salons. At the Champ de Mars M. James Guthrie (605, 606), Mlle. Louise Breslau (185–187), M. Dagnan-Bouveret (361–364), M. Meslé (899), M. Burnand (210), M. René Ménard (891, 892), M. Lucien Simon (1139), M. Jacques Blanche (117–121), M. Louis Picard (991–995), exhibit excellent portraits no less simple in arrangement than persuasive in expression. At the Champs Élysées those of MM. Paul Dubois, Bonnat, Humbert, Loeb, Bordes, Seymour, Thomas, Marcel Baschet, Henner, and Wencker also deserve notice. But it will be enough to mention their names.

In a last article I shall pass in rapid review the most interesting exhibits in the sections of sculpture and objets d'art. ANDRÉ MICHEL.

SIR AUGUSTUS WOLLASTON FRANKS, P.S.A.

THIS distinguished archæologist, the elder son of Capt. F. Franks, R.N., was born at Geneva in 1826, and, his family removing to Rome, his schooling began in that city; it was continued at Eton, and, finally, he graduated at Trinity College, Cambridge, in his twenty-third year, and took his M.A. degree in 1852. The artistic side of mediæval archæology attracted him while he was still a B.A., and so long ago as 1846 he published through the Cambridge Antiquarian Society an excellent essay on palimpsest monumental brasses, a recondite subject; but he was fond of out-of-the-way subjects, as his other monographs show. He wrote, too, 'On the Bosses of Roman Shields' and 'A Book of Ornamental Glazing Quarries,' 1849, which, though a mere selection of examples, remains an authority in its way, so far as it goes, which is not, of course, very far. 'A Treatise on Vitreous Art at Manchester in 1857' was a more serious and scientific example of that power of patient study and acute logical surmise to which he owed his well-deserved reputation. In 1863 he re-edited Kemble's 'Horæ Ferales' with remarkable success, and, before and since, contributed profusely to Archæologia and to the 'Journals' and 'Collections' of several societies.

In 1850 he acted as Secretary to the Society of Arts' Mediæval Exhibition, with the late Sir Henry Cole as his coadjutor. In 1851, under the auspices of Edward Hawkins, one of the best antiquaries of his time, Franks became an Assistant in the Department of Antiquities in the British Museum, and helped materially in enlarging, systematizing, and enriching it. Subsequently, when it was divided into three sections, Franks took charge of one of them, and, possessing greater opportunities as well as concentrating his energies more than Hawkins had done, he succeeded in developing it in an extraordinary manner, not only himself presenting costly and well-selected gifts of various kinds, but being one of those (not, however, as has been said, the only one) by whom Mr. John Henderson and Mr. Felix Slade were confirmed in the intention they long entertained to bequeath their rich collections of glass, ceramics, and other antiquities to the British Museum. William Burges, too, consulted Franks as to that bequest of armour which is now the staple of the fine, though small body of such relics in Bloomsbury. Burges, one of the best judges of armour in Europe, gathered these specimens with exemplary care, and the collection, so far as it goes, is perfect. Franks took a still larger part in securing for the nation the valuable Christy collection of prehistoric antiquities, and he had no share in the discredit of that unfortunate bungle which let slip at an almost nominal price the great, though mixed and unequal, Cesnola collection of Cypriote antiquities. It was, in fact, reported at the time that Franks, whose good taste was as sound as his learning, was in this affair strongly opposed to the late Sir Charles Newton, the official chiefly responsible. As soon as Franks attained an independent position in the Museum he not only devoted his energies to research, but procured from the Government the means for several important and costly purchases, and in more than one instance bought choice examples with his own money, risking the repudiation of his bargains on the part of the Treasury, which is seldom too liberal. In this way he made himself responsible for the purchase of the gold cup which is one of the great treasures of mediæval art now in the national possession. Of course, being in the position that he was, Franks was frequently consulted as to purchases by the authorities, but more frequently it was he who appealed to them to back his judgment and good taste. When he reached his sixty-fifth year the wisdom of a grateful Government proposed that he should be compelled to retire, though still in the plenitude of his powers. Common gratitude, to say nothing of common sense, revolted against the letter of the law, and Franks was requested to continue in the post he had filled so long and well. Accepting this invitation, he remained in office till the inevitable day arrived, and he gave way to his present accomplished successor. He was, nevertheless, invited to become a member of the Standing Committee of the Museum, and he continued to be one till his death. Besides these public services he became Director, and subsequently President, of the Society of Antiquaries. He discovered, and almost succeeded in securing universal belief in, that curious revival of art which is recognized as the expression of what he called "the late Celtic phase of decoration." He was an ideal cataloguer, and prepared several masterpieces in that line of work, treating of ceramics of all sorts; his knowledge of the decorative arts of the Extreme East, especially those of China and Japan, was of the first class, and probably superior to that of any other Englishman. He excelled in a laborious sort of insight, and his ingenuity and intuition sometimes enabled him to throw quite unexpected light on the dark corners of artistic archæology, several of his successes which seemed like guesses being really due to untiring study and a rare acumen, backed by a wonderful memory. The records of the British Museum bear no more distinguished name than that of the learned antiquary who was buried at Kensal Green on Thursday last.

THE SILCHESTER EXCAVATIONS OF 1896.

The exhibition of the results of the excavations at Silchester during the year 1896, which has been on view during the present week at Burlington House, is in many ways just as interesting and instructive as its predecessors. The work is probably being done after a far more effective manner than if any endeavour had been made to accomplish it in two or three years. Last year was the seventh successive season during which these patient operations have been in progress, under the superintendence of the Society of Antiquaries.

The area selected for excavation in 1896 was on the west side of the city, immediately to the south of the portion examined in 1895. It contained two squares or insulæ, which are numbered 15 and 16 on the plan, and cover about three and a half acres.

Insula 15 was bounded by streets on the north, east, and south, and on the west by the city wall. In common with five of the adjacent insulæ, examined in 1894 and 1895, it appears to have been given up to the dyeing industry, which was obviously one of the most important trades of Silchester. It contained four blocks of buildings, in addition to two separate houses, as well as the remains of various hearths and furnaces. A large extent of this insula was free from remains of buildings or pits, and it is conjectured, with much probability, that this open area was used as a bleaching ground. Two wells were opened, one with a wooden framing at the bottom and lined with flints. The other well, which had also a lining of flint, terminated in a large tub. This tub, after considerable trouble, was brought to the surface, and has been again pieced together. The upper ends of the staves have perished through decay, but it now stands four feet high, with a diameter of three and a half feet. The staves are twenty-six in number, and were banded together with wooden hoops; in several places they are lightly branded with the letters HERM, the meaning of which has so far eluded any satisfactory explanation. The tub rested on a massive frame of four pieces of oak, which were also brought to the surface. The use of a circular wooden frame, generally termed a "well-curb," in sinking wells, is still common in many parts of the country where the soil or strata are loose, the object being to prevent the falling in of the sides. A similar plan, though on a larger scale, is frequently used in sinking colliery shafts, the curb in this case being of iron. The well-sinkers of Silchester seem to have been content to leave the tub (an ordinary one, not specially made for the purpose) at the bottom when they had reached the water, their confidence in the lasting powers of wood when constantly saturated having been abundantly justified by its present remarkable condition. The statement made to us at Burlington House, that this is the oldest tub in the world, may very well be correct.

Insula 16 contained an important house of the courtyard type in the north-west angle, and two other houses of the corridor type. There was also an isolated square building, as well as traces of various timber structures. A large number of pits in this insula yielded a variety of minor antiquities. In a pit of unusual size at the south-east angle were found a large quantity of blade-bones of sheep. This was a discovery of special interest, for all of them were perforated with many circular holes, showing that they had been used in the manufacture of counters or discs as well as of bone rings. The holes are cut with great accuracy, and were evidently made by a centre-bit or some such tool. The rings were cut by an instrument capable of making the two circles at the same time, as is shown by the unfinished or imperfect rings left in some of the specimens.

A curious cutting was disclosed at the south-east angle of this insula, about six and a half feet from the surface. This cutting or trench was followed for a considerable distance, the remains of a series of iron bands or collars being found about seven feet apart. These bands had formed the joints of a series of wooden pipes laid in the trench. The tracing of this pipe led to the unexpected discovery of a hitherto unknown gate in the city wall, which had an original single opening twelve feet wide, though subsequently reduced to seven feet by blocking with masonry. A cutting across the wide ditch outside showed that this gate had been approached by a wooden bridge, resting midway on a gravel bank left for the purpose. In the gateway two interesting relics were found. One was a cylinder of iron, four inches in diameter and the same in depth; inside the iron ring were traces of wood, showing that it was one of the pivots on which the doors of the gate turned. The second relic is a massive strap of iron bent round so as to embrace both sides of the gate, to which it was fastened by stout nails. The woodwork of the gate was four and a half inches thick.

Here, too, were found a number of fragments of worked stone, of some architectural value and significance. They do not appear to have had any connexion with the gate, but seem to have been fragments from the more important earlier buildings, used up for masonry when the gateway was narrowed in the last period of the city's occupation. It is no exaggeration to say that if the future excavations yield no more worked stone, there will already have been placed in the Reading Museum a far larger collection of Romano-British architectural fragments pertaining to one site than can be seen anywhere else.

The minor yields from the pits and trenches are about as varied and interesting as those of the preceding years. A good many perfect or nearly perfect vessels of pottery have been recovered, but they call for no special comment. Among the bronze objects the most noteworthy are a portion of a delicately-made strainer with the perforations arranged in a set pattern; a bronze jug of considerable size with a comic mask at the handle; a flattened boss inlaid with niello; the mounts of a casket, one portion showing the key-hole; two small bells; and a charm against the evil eye in the form of a bull's head. The yield of bronze brooches of various patterns, pins, spoons, tweezers, and ligulæ is as large and varied as usual. There are also four small oval brooches, slightly gilt, two of which retain their imitation glass gems, one blue and the other red, which were probably the delight of the Silchester servant-girls.

A special feature of this year's exhibition was the complete series of excellent coloured drawings and plans of the various buildings, pavements, and other details that have been brought to light since the Society first undertook this important work. These are all the work of Mr. G. E. Fox, F.S.A., whose artistic powers are of such value to the Silchester committee.

Although more than half of the area (100 acres) within the walls of Silchester has now been systematically excavated, with the most important and interesting results, there is still several years' work to be done before the complete nature of this Romano-British city is disclosed. It is hoped that the subscriptions will permit of the work of this year being carried out on at least the same scale as in the past seven seasons. Subscriptions and donations can be sent to Mr. F. G. Hilton Price, 17, Collingham Gardens, South Kensington; or to Mr. W. H. St. John Hope, Burlington House.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 18th inst. the following engravings after the works of Meissonier, collected by Mr. J. H. Birch: A. Blanchard, The Chess Players, 26*l.*; Les Bons Amis, 27*l.* A. Boulard, Solferino, and Partie Piquet, 27*l.* F. Bracquemond, La Rixe, 110*l.*; La Partie Perdue, 28*l.* J. Jacquet, The Sergeant's Portrait, 36*l.*; '1806' (Jena), 40*l.*; '1807' (Friedland), 68*l.*; '1814,' 110*l.*

The same auctioneers sold on the 22nd inst. the following from various collections. Drawings: É. Detaille, Mounted Infantry Skirmishing, 173*l.* J. L. E. Meissonier, The National Guard, 73*l.* Pictures: Rosa Bonheur, A Royal Stag in Fontainebleau Forest, 535*l.* J. Constable, Salisbury Cathedral, 141*l.* T. Creswick, Folkestone, with group of figures on the cliffs by Frith, 131*l.* L. Deutch, The Arab Guard, 157*l.* B. W. Leader, The Carnarvonshire Coast, from near Llandudno, 168*l.*; Stonehill Common, Worcestershire, 299*l.*; An April Day, 651*l.*; A Welsh Landscape, 173*l.* J. L. E. Meissonier, A French Hussar, temp. Napoleon, 210*l.* J. Stark, Postwick Grove, near Norwich, 120*l.* P. Wouwerman, A Sandy Road, with a cottage on the left, 189*l.* C. Bargue, The Algerian Guard, 651*l.* H. W. B. Davis, In the Highlands, 201*l.* J. L. Gérôme, The Dispute, 420*l.* F. Goodall, The Doveseller, 105*l.* P. Graham, A Highland Spate, with cattle, 441*l.* E. Grutzner, Blessing the Vintage, 178*l.* K. Heffner, Twilight, a river scene, with boat and figures, 210*l.*; Misty Morn, 189*l.*; Sunny Eve, 336*l.* A. Holmberg, A Music Study, 149*l.*; The Council of Peace, 252*l.* P. Joanowitch, The Indian Snake-Charmer, 178*l.* H. Kauffmann, Chaffing, 162*l.* Lord Leighton, Solitude, 997*l.* Munkacsy, The Two Families, 997*l.*; A la Promenade, 199*l.*; My Old Mother's Song, 493*l.* C. Seiler, The Reconciliation, Sir Joshua Reynolds's last visit to Gainsborough, 220*l.*; Tracing the Route, 178*l.* R. Ansdell, Deerstalkers having Refreshment, 283*l.*; Waiting for the Ferry, Isle of Mull, 210*l.* Sam Bough, Dutch Fishermen, sunrise, 168*l.* T. S. Cooper, March, Lambing Season, 152*l.* Birket Foster, Fording the Stream, 231*l.* J. Linnell, The Sheep Drove, 451*l.* J. T. Linnell, "A-top of the Hill," 294*l.* G. Morland, The Woodcutter, 131*l.* J. Phillip, "O Nanny, wilt thou gang wi' me?" 236*l.* P. F. Poole, Lighting the Beacon, 194*l.* W. Bouguereau, The Little Sulker, 493*l.* A. Calame, On a Swiss Stream, sunset, 246*l.* J. H. L. de Haas, The Impending Storm, 315*l.* Emile Lambinet, View on the River Orge, Seine et Oise, 152*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE Church Congress, which meets at Nottingham in October, is making rather a new departure in its subjects. One session is to be given up to the discussion of painting, sculpture, and architecture as they respectively affect the Christian Church. Mr. Richmond, R.A., will introduce the question of painting, and Dr. Cox that of architecture. The selection for sculpture has not yet been made.

THE Royal Archæological Institute holds its annual meeting this year at Dorchester in the beginning of August. Dr. Cox has accepted the position of President of the Architectural Section, and proposes to take as the subject of his address 'The Treatment of the Cathedral Churches of England during the Victorian Age.'

WE spoke last week of the proposals of Prof. Aitchison and the Institute of British Architects regarding the Government offices. We may add that they advocate the formation of two roadways in Parliament Street, separated by a grass plot; the placing of the buildings of the new War Office opposite to the Horse Guards; the preservation of the official residence of the First Lord of the Treasury, which Mr. Mitford wants to demolish; and the widening of the opening of Whitehall into Charing Cross, which would involve the setting back of Drummonds' Bank. Twenty years ago the Treasury could have acquired the site of the bank for a comparatively small sum, but it did not, and the difficulty of widening on the west side has been increased by the rebuilding of the bank.

THE decease is announced of Mr. C. J. Phipps, F.S.A., who had a large practice as a theatrical architect.

THE exhibition of portraits of women and children, which we have already mentioned as held in the hall of the École des Beaux-Arts, Paris, and which has been a great success, especially as regards the attention it has ensured for specimens of English art by Reynolds, Lawrence, Gainsborough, Hoppner, and Romney, was at length closed yesterday (Friday).

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.—'Manon'; 'Lohengrin'; 'Roméo et Juliette.'
QUEEN'S HALL.—Philharmonic Concerts. Symphony Concerts.
ST JAMES'S HALL.—Richter Concerts.

AGAIN there is a preponderance of opera in French at Covent Garden, and of further performances in Italian we have none to chronicle this week. Massenet's 'Manon,' a charming work that for some mysterious reason has not gained the favour in London that it deserves, was received by a poor house on Friday last week, many being probably disappointed by the non-appearance of M. Van Dyck as the Chevalier des Grieux. The illness of the Belgian artist gave a chance to M. Bonnard, who sang and acted with all needful care, though not, perhaps, with much power. Madame Saville was a piquant Manon Lescaut in all respects, M. Plançon sang irreproachably as the Comte des Grieux, the smaller parts were commendably represented, and M. Flon conducted in a manner giving ample evidence that he thoroughly understood the requirements of the score.

The reappearance of MM. Jean and Édouard de Reszké, of course, gave prominence to the performance of 'Lohengrin' in German on the following evening, and the interest of the occasion was enhanced by the circumstance that Mr. Anton Seidl, who had not conducted in London since the memorable performances of 'Der Ring des Nibelungen' in 1882 at Her Majesty's Theatre, was to direct Wagner's earlier music-drama. With full remembrance of many commendable performances of the work in London, we do not think it has ever been more effectively given than on the present occasion. To begin with, M. Jean de Reszké was in full possession of his vocal powers, and acted with his usual distinction of manner. Madame Emma Eames continues to improve as Elsa, and infused much passion into her share of the bridal duet. Earnest as ever, Mr. David Bispham was unsurpassable as Telramund, and Miss Marie Brema sang and acted superbly as Ortrud. Of course M. Édouard de Reszké was again impressive as King Henry the Fowler; and Mr. Lempriere Pringle did fair justice to the part of the Herald. The chorus showed further improvement, though if the ear may be trusted they sang in Italian, while all the principal artists adopted the original text. Several matters in the stage arrangements showed much taste, and the orchestra, under Mr. Seidl, cannot be overpraised. Every detail in Wagner's score—or such of it as remained, for the "cuts" were as cruel as ever—was brought out in fullest relief, and the band was never permitted to overrule the voices.

The repetition of 'Roméo et Juliette' on Tuesday should be chronicled, for M. Jean de Reszké made his first appearance this season in his assumption of Shakspeare's ill-starred hero. No one can approach the Polish tenor in this part, and he has never rendered it more delightfully than on this occasion. M. Édouard de Reszké also resumed his impressive embodiment of the Friar, and the general performance was as good as could be desired. It should be noted that M. Van Dyck, having recovered from his illness, appeared in 'Manon' on Wednesday, and his voice showed no sign of deterioration.

The fourth Philharmonic Concert on Thursday last week was on the whole successful. Mr. Hamish MacCunn's clever and effective little suite in three movements, 'Highland Memories,' recently produced at the Crystal Palace, was placed at the head of the programme, and was conducted by the composer. Another musician of Scottish birth, Mr. Eugen d'Albert, played in his most brilliant manner the solo part in his Pianoforte Concerto in E, No. 2, a striking work, in which the influence of Liszt is perceptible. Subsequently the gifted artist was heard in Weber's 'Concertstück,' in which he was on perfectly safe ground, for Weber's music, though showy, is not difficult. Beethoven's Symphony in F, No. 8, played, of course, under the direction of Sir Alexander Mackenzie, concluded the concert. Madame Albani, who was in excellent voice, sang "Non mi dir," from 'Don Giovanni,' and "Ombra mai fù," from Handel's 'Serse,' better known to English amateurs as a largo for violin solo and orchestra.

The penultimate Symphony Concert at the Queen's Hall last Saturday afternoon did not contain a symphony, for it was a tribute to the memory of Richard Wagner, who was born on May 22nd, 1813, at Leipzig. There is no need to go into details concerning the familiar selections from 'Der Fliegende Holländer,' 'Tannhäuser,' 'Die Meistersinger,' 'Die Walküre,' 'Tristan und Isolde,' and 'Götterdämmerung.' It is enough to say that every one of the ems was interpreted with rare intelligence nd delicacy by Mr. Henry Wood's orchestra. Volfram's two airs, "Blick' ich umher" and O du mein holder Abendstern," from Tannhäuser,' were exceedingly well ren- ered by Mr. Louis Fröhlich, a young bari- one who has a voice of agreeable quality, nd evidently the making of an accom- lished artist.

There seems to be a great desire on the art of the public for orchestral music at resent, for there was an immense audience t the first of the summer Richter Concerts n Monday evening. Concerning Beet- oven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 3, Wag- er's to 'Die Meistersinger,' and Tschaï- owsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique,' the last ord has been said. Record, however, hould be made of the fact that in the econd movement of the symphony, ve-four measure in D, Herr Richter id not conduct, but let his forces o their own way. It was a hazardous xperiment, but it was entirely successful, or there was not the slightest faltering in he phrasing, the observance of the nuances, r in the varying tempi. Brahms's pic- uresque Variations on a Theme by Haydn n B flat were, of course, splendidly played ; nd all that remains to be mentioned is Herr Richard Strauss's tone poem 'Don Juan,' based on Nicolaus Lenau's romance. It vould be unfair to speak too critically con- erning this rhapsodical piece after a first earing, and it may suffice for the present o say that, however strange in form, it is ichly scored, and leads to the hope that vhen the composer abandons his eccen- ricities, and determines to pen music that vill speak for itself, he will give to the vorld something which deserves to live.

THE FEIS CEOIL.

The object of this musical festival, which occupied the whole of last week in Dublin, was o revive the old Feis Ceoil (Faysh Keeōle), or national musical festival, held periodically at Tara and elsewhere before the English invasion. At that early date the art of music had reached a higher degree of perfection in Ireland than in any other country. Indeed, for many centuries afterwards the Irish was the leading school of harp music, and a great store of original airs, instrumental and vocal, were composed and handed down orally to later generations. Not many of these had been musically recorded before the close of last century ; but at the Belfast Harp Meeting in 1790 the few surviving great harpers were brought together, and the ancient airs they played were noted down by Edward Bunting. Thus originated his famous collection of Irish music, from which store Moore drew most of his 'Irish Melodies.' Then followed Dr. Petrie, who justly relied upon the vocalists rather than on the instrumentalists (as Bunting had done) for recording the old Irish airs in their purity. Just as Petrie in his youth assisted Bunting before forming his own famous collection, so he, too, found in Dr. Joyce an enthusiastic helper, who has since published a fine selection of Irish folk music on his own account. Other gleaners were in the field, including Holden, also a contributor to Dr. Petrie's volume, and notably Surenne, whose fine collection, now out of print, con- tains a valuable introduction by Farquharson Graham. These and Levy's collections of Irish dance music and Hoffman's selection from the hitherto unpublished portion of the Petrie collection have given such distinguished musicians as Dr. Stanford and Madame Holmes, the French Irish composer, ample materials for their Irish works.

To bring into general notice these treasures of old song ; to revive the interest in the charming works of Field, Rooke, Tom Cooke, Lord Mornington, and other Irish musical worthies of the last generation or two ; to present worthily recent Irish compositions of high repute ; to produce, if possible, fresh music of note ; and generally to stimulate musical taste throughout Ireland were the objects which the projectors of the Feis set before them.

By their judicious action party spirit was kept out of the movement, and Irishmen of every class and creed came forward to guarantee its success. The local musical composers, solo and part singers, choirs, instrumentalists, and bands were stirred to fresh life by promises of a hearing in the capital. The Irish orchestras and choirs, who are not too strong, were put upon their mettle by the opportunity, and the Gaelic societies were interested in the programme by a con- siderable introduction into it of purely Irish music to Irish words. Encouraged by this, they after- wards led up to the festival by a combined literary and musical gathering in the Rotunda, somewhat on the lines of the Eisteddfod. This was largely attended, and proved extremely successful. Again, the taste of the Anglo-Irish music lover was consulted by giving a judicious preponder- ance in the concerts to works by modern Irish composers, while the education of young musi- cians and vocalists was promoted by laying stress in the competitions upon works by the great world-masters of music without unduly neglecting Irish work. The result of the festival, whilst indicating weakness in one or two directions, has been on the whole en- couraging. The Feis orchestra proved itself even more promising than when recently com- plimented for its achievements by Sir Arthur Sullivan. The Feis choir, if somewhat weak in its tenors, was pure and rich in tone generally, and showed a firm and spirited attack and a deli- cate appreciation of light and shade ; indeed, both orchestra and choir reflect much credit on the skill of their clever conductor, Dr. Joseph Smith. Of the principal soloists Madame Duma was a refined and spirited prima donna, Mr. Iver McKay sang with intelligence, and Mr. Ludwig's dramatic power and noble voice were impressive ; indeed, the audience was com- pletely carried away by the performance of these three singers and the verve of orchestra and chorus in the prize cantata 'Deirdre,' to Mr. T. W. Rolleston's fine libretto, brilliantly con- ducted by its author, Signor Esposito. Of the local singers Mrs. Scott Ffennell, Miss Alex Elsner, Miss Shellard, Miss Rose-Byrne, Miss Treacy, Mr. Melfort D'Alton, and Mr. Charles Kelly won the chief honours ; and Dr. Lawrence Walker, of Belfast, at the piano, and Mr. Owen Lloyd on the harp proved themselves capable instrumentalists. Last, but not least, pipers from each of the four provinces gave notable evidence of their skill, performing amongst many other ancient melodies four fine ones which had never been noted down until played into the Feis phonograph.

The financial success of the festival is en- couraging its promoters to make it an annual event. Its organization evoked sympathy in Wales, so much so, indeed, that the Eisteddfod authorities sent over a herald bard with a con- gratulatory address to represent them at the Feis. He received a thoroughly Irish welcome, and was asked to distribute the musical prizes at the close of the festival. A. P. G.

Musical Gossip.

A very favourable impression was created by Mlle. Ella Pancera, a young pianist who gave a recital at St. James's Hall on Thursday after- noon last week. She has a crisp, firm touch, much intelligence, and, generally speaking, per- fect command over her instrument, as was proved by her interpretation of such works as Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, Op. 31, No. 3, Chopin's Scherzo in C sharp minor, and Brahms's Variations on a Theme by Handel. Mlle. Pancera announces two more recitals in June.

On Friday afternoon last week Mr. Eugen d'Albert was heard at another pianoforte recital in St. James's Hall, his programme, which was for the most part brilliantly interpreted, includ- ing Beethoven's Sonatas in A flat, Op. 110, and C minor, Op. 111 ; also various items by Chopin, among which were the Ballade in G minor and the Polonaise in A flat.

The music of Sir Arthur Sullivan written for the national ballet 'Victoria and Merrie England,' produced at the Alhambra on Tuesday evening, deserves notice, for it is the first time that a composer of such eminence has devoted his genius to the service of a variety theatre. The idea of Signor Carlo Coppi, the author of the scenario, has been to present the history of England from the time of the Druids to the present year in miniature, and Sir Arthur Sullivan has carried out the idea to perfection. His own original music is thoroughly English in phraseology, and his adaptations of familiar British tunes are singularly happy, the hand of a true musician being displayed in the manner in which they are welded in the finale. When the ballet has run its course at the Alhambra, the score may be cut up, so to speak, in suites suitable for the concert-room.

Concerts given for charitable purposes do not, as a rule, call for criticism, but attention should certainly be drawn to the admirable entertain- ment at Stafford House on Tuesday afternoon, given by the Magpie Madrigal Society in behalf of the Hospital for Women in Soho Square. Since the demise of the Henry Leslie Choir we have never heard more effective unaccompanied part- singing, and the glorious old madrigals and part-songs by Orlando di Lasso, Gibbons, and Morley, with modern examples by Dvoràk, Brahms, Dr. Hubert Parry, and other com- posers, could not have been more beautifully rendered than they were on this occasion with Mr. Lionel S. Benson as conductor. The Magpie Society already boasts nearly two hun- dred members, and we cordially recommend it to give a concert at one of the large halls, after the manner of Bristol, one of the few centres where the art of madrigal singing is still culti- vated to perfection.

As already stated, the Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace will take place on June 11th, 14th, 16th, and 18th, and the selection pro- gramme on the penultimate day is now announced. It will, of course, include the Overture to the Occasional Oratorio ; the magnificent choruses, "Immortal Lord," from 'Deborah' ; "Your harps and cymbals sound," from 'Solomon' ; "Envy, eldest born of hell," from 'Saul' ; "Wretched lovers," from 'Acis and Galatea' ; and "As from the power," from the 'Ode on St. Cecilia's Day.' The programme generally looks attractive, though most of the items are familiar not only to Handelian amateurs, but to the ordinary public.

The work on 'British Musical Biography' which Mr. J. D. Brown, of the Clerkenwell Public Library, has had in preparation for some years past, in conjunction with Mr. S. S. Stratton, of Birmingham, is announced for immediate publication. It contains over four thousand notices of British and colonial musi- cians, and covers every period, from the earliest to the present. The publication has been delayed owing to the large mass of material which had to be sifted and selected. This is believed to be the largest work ever devoted to the biography of any single nation on the subject of music.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK

SUN. National Sunday League Concert 7 Queen's Hall
MON. Mr Carl Armbruster's Parsifal Lecture 3 King's College
— Miss Flair Hall's Concert 3 Steinway Hall
— Misses Sutro's Recital of Pianoforte Ensemble Music 3 St James's Hall
— Mrs Leonora Bailey's Concert 3 Queen's Small Hall
— Royal Opera, Covent Garden 7 30 Die Meistersinger
— Mr Edwin Samson's Concert 8 Queen's Small Hall
— Richter Concert 8 30 St James's Hall
— Concert by La Société des Instruments Anciens 4 Salle Erard
TUES. Cologne Gurzenich Quartet 3 Queen's Small Hall
— M Sevadjian's Recital 3 St James's Hall
— North Eastern Hospital Concert 3 Queen's Hall
— Patti Concert 3 Albert Hall
— Regina Vocal Trio Concert 4 Queen's Small Hall
— Mlle Klingberg's Pianoforte Recital 3 30 Salle Erard
— Herr Kruse's Orchestral Concert 8 St James's Hall
— Miss Ada Giles's Concert 8 Queen's Small Hall
— Mr Isidor Cohn's Trio Concert 8 Steinway Hall
— Miss Clinton Fynes's Concert in Aid of the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund 8 Portman Rooms
— Royal Opera, Covent Garden 8 'Aida'
WED. Fitzner Quartet Concert 3 Queen's Small Hall
— Mr Julian Clifford's Pianoforte Recital 3 Steinway Hall
— Westminster Orchestral Society's Concert 8 Westminster Town Hall
— Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Faust.'
THURS. Herr Fritz Masbach's Recital 3 Queen's Hall
— Mlle Ella Pancera's Recital 3 St James's Hall
— Aptommas's Harp Recital 3 Queen's Small Hall
— Patti Concert 8 Albert Hall
— Philharmonic Concert 8 Queen's Hall
— Senor Zerega's Mandoline and Guitar Recital 8 30 St James's Hall
— Royal Opera, Covent Garden
FRI. Miss Katie Goodson's Recital 3 St James's Hall.
— Miss Rosa Green's Vocal Recital 3 Queen's Small Hall.
— Mrs Clarinda Webster and Mr Julian Pascal's Chopin Recital 3 Steinway Hall
— Miss Adela Verne's Orchestral Concert 8 Queen's Hall
— Concert by La Société des Instruments Anciens 4 Salle Erard.
— Royal Opera, Covent Garden
SAT. MM Fauré and Wolff's Concert 3 St James's Hall.
— Royal Opera, Covent Garden.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

LYRIC.—'Othello.'

OLYMPIC.—Afternoon Performances: 'Antony and Cleopatra'; 'The Merchant of Venice.'

A STRANGE and unexpected outbreak of Shakspearean drama comes to vary the frivolity of the season's entertainment. No fewer than three plays of Shakspeare have been given within a week. It is true that in no instance has the play been mounted or produced with a view to a run in London. The three pieces come with the seal of a country success to get what added reputation may attend a temporary acceptance "in town." If there is one thing that stands out plainly, it is that what is good enough for the country is not in every case, or even in many cases, good enough for London. London is sapped by frivolities, and shot through with heresies. Criticism finds little to say concerning any of these performances.

Wholly incapable of giving an adequate rendering of 'Othello' is the company at the Lyric. Mr. Wilson Barrett is himself the possessor of expository gifts which, once and again when rightly applied, have brought him fame and fortune. These are lost in his revival of 'Othello,' which, as regards collective performance and separate impersonations, only shows us how it ought not to be done. In the character of Othello Mr. Barrett himself poses heroically, and declaims in approved style. He is in turns vehement, angered, passionate, what not. The tragic note is, however, not once sounded; there is no informing spirit within, the passions are donned or doffed at a moment's notice. After the performance was over we read the play, and found the old magic still exercised, but during it we remained unmoved and even uninterested. Desdemona, in spite of her sweetness and beauty, got no nearer us than the Moor. Far more tenderness and passion than Miss Maud Jeffries has yet shown are necessary to give full value to the sorrows of Desdemona. The very significance of the character was not grasped. There is no temptation to dwell upon the shortcomings of actors who have had few opportunities of practising the line of parts they are called upon to essay. It is a subject of regret, however, to see an actor of Mr. Barrett's intelligence directing a performance of Shakspeare from which intelligence is absent. In earlier days tradition kept men to some extent in the right grooves. A man made the points that his predecessor had made, or perhaps sought to vary them. Even these influences seem to have vanished, and the entire representation was spiritless and uninspired.

'Antony and Cleopatra' has never proved remunerative as an acting play, and not a single actor has won a name as Antony. Garrick and Macready head the list of those who lost reputation in the part. Nor is the hold on the public which Macready could not command likely to be won by the company from Manchester which has been seen this week at the Olympic. In the case of Miss Janet Achurch conception and performance were fantastic; in most other cases they were unintelligent. As the performances are already over and qualified for oblivion there is no need to dwell upon shortcomings. It is enough to say that Shakspeare's verse was delivered after the rhetorical fashion now common on our stage.

Though the least pretentious, the revival of 'The Merchant of Venice' is the best and most interesting of the three Shakspearean performances. Mr. Nutcombe Gould's Shylock reveals the possession of gifts with which previously we had not credited this actor. Miss Hanbury's Portia is conceived and carried out in the right spirit, and is both romantic and beautiful. Most of the parts are agreeably played, and the entire performance raises the drooping spirits of those whom recent experiments in tragedy have depressed.

Hugo of Avendon. In Four Acts. By E. L. M. (Stock.)—As much obscurity as can be produced by disarrangement and dislocation of words has been accomplished by E. L. M. in his, or her, romantic play of 'Hugo of Avendon.' Having come into the title and estates of Avendon and fallen in love with the fair Stella, Count Hugo disturbs the plans of two Jesuit priests who have looked upon his wealth as the inheritance of their order. They plot wickedly to sow dissensions between husband and wife, and all but succeed in their task. The more active priest, however, while in pursuit of his designs, dresses as a young cavalier, of whom Hugo is to be made jealous, and in so doing encounters death, and re-establishes harmony between the couple he sought to divorce. So involved in phrase and so turgid is the dialogue that the task of perusal becomes a weariness. Count Hugo is guilty of lines such as I judged your judgment, ere you came to judge.

His wife, friends, associates, and enemies follow and emulate his diction until the whole becomes a carnival of wild and disjointed phrase. When E. L. M. learns to be simple and direct, and dismisses his flowers of rhetoric, he will repent of his early effort, and may even—who knows?—do respectable work.

Dramatic Gossip.

So whimsical is the dialogue written by Mr. Lumley for his new four-act farce of 'Belle Belair,' which now holds possession of the Avenue Theatre, and so well fitted are the principal members of a clever company, that the piece triumphs over inherent silliness of plot. Some invention is, indeed, shown, and some mirthful scenes are reached. The whole, however, is slight and inconsiderable. Upon her reappearance on the stage Mrs. John Wood was warmly applauded. Miss Irene Vanbrugh, Mr. Weedon Grossmith, and Mr. Gilbert Farquhar contributed to the favourable reception of the whole.

'LE FIACRE 117' of MM. Émile de Najac and Albert Millaud has, we are told, been rejected by the reader of plays; nor have all the supplications of Mlle. Jane May been able to obtain a removal of the interdict. With this decision we are not disposed to quarrel. The piece, first produced at the Variétés on the 23rd of February, 1886, is included in the repertory of Madame Chaumont, which repertory is now declining into the hands of Mlle. Jane May. It is, in some respects, a sequel to 'Divorçons,' dealing with the same theme, and employing like it a sonnerie électrique. In very fact it is not too cleanly, and the pictures of Parisian life it supplies are sufficiently dishonouring. That, however, is a matter on which Parisians may speak for themselves.

THE performance by Mlle. Jane May at the Royalty of Suzanne in 'Le Monde où l'on s'ennuie' had much grace and beauty, and shows that her powers extend beyond farce into comedy. The Duchesse of Madame Devoyod, a familiar impersonation, has conspicuous merits. In other respects the performance of this sparkling comedy left much to be desired.

'M. ET MADAME PIERROT,' in which Mlle. Jane May has also been seen, both parts being played by her, shows the discovery by Madame in the pocket of her husband of a portrait of another woman, and gives rise to some moderately amusing scenes accompanied by some rapid changes of costume.

THE season of Madame Réjane at the Lyric will begin on June 26th with 'Madame Sans-Gêne.' It will last three weeks, and will, it is expected, include performances of 'La Douloureuse,' 'L'Amoureuse,' and 'Lolotte.'

MISCELLANEA

The 'Atys.'—Line 54 of the 'Atys' of Catullus runs thus in the vulgate:—

Et earum omnia adirem furibunda latibula.

This of course is not a strict Galliambic line, so that it is usual to read: "Et earum ad omnia irem." But "omnia" is extremely weak. May I venture, without any possibility of verification, a very rash emendation? "Et earum homæna adirem" would make excellent sense, and would lessen the harshness of "furibunda" and the other feminines in the poem. "Homæna" would be to "homo" as "leæna" to "leo," and would, indeed, be a most appropriate word under the special circumstances. Moreover in the MSS. it would be written "omena," so that "omena adirem" would be much nearer the vulgate than "ad omnia irem" is. However, I feel that I am making a suggestion of an unusually temerarious character.

R. J. WALKER.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—C. M. P.—H. H. F.—J. D. B.—C. H.—G. G. A.—J. L. O.—A. L.—S. & Son—E. L. P.—J. G. H.—E. O. S.—W. M. R.—received.

G. W. T. O.—Please send fuller address.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Erratum.—No. 3630, p. 679, col. 2, line 25 from bottom, for "Sunderland" read Sutherland.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

	s.	d.
For Twelve Months...	15	3
For Six Months	7	8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months	9	0

J. M. DENT & CO.

THE TEMPLE CLASSICS.

Under the General Editorship of ISRAEL GOLLANCZ.

A Series of Volumes containing the Masterpieces of English Literature in Prose and Poetry, and other Books acknowledged as Universal Classics. Post 8vo. with an Etched or Photogravure Frontispiece, limp cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.* net; limp lambskin leather, 2*s.* net.

LATEST VOLUMES.

FLORIO'S MONTAIGNE. Edited by A. R. WALLER. In Six Vols. Vols. I., II., and III. ready.

MALORY'S MORTE D'ARTHUR. Edited by I. GOLLANCZ. In Four Vols.

CARLYLE'S FRENCH REVOLUTION. Edited by G. LOWES DICKINSON. In Three Vols. Vols. I. and II. ready.

"The series.....is the daintiest, handsomest, and handiest ever as yet issued by any publishing house. Portable gems every one of them."—Punch.

"Unsurpassed as a cheap, artistic, and, what is more, scholarly edition."—Daily Telegraph.

"They contain really trustworthy and complete texts."
New Saturday.

"This delightful little edition."—Athenæum.

"It would be difficult to speak too highly of this edition."
Graphic.

The following Volumes have already appeared:—

WORDSWORTH'S PRELUDE. With Notes, &c., by Prof. G. C. MOORE-SMITH.

SOUTHEY'S LIFE of NELSON. With Table of Dates, &c., by Miss E. GOLLANCZ.

SWIFT'S GULLIVER'S TRAVELS. With an Appendix by G. A. AITKEN.

BROWNE'S RELIGIO MEDICI and URN-BURIAL. With a Glossary by Miss URSULA HOLME, B.A.

LAMB'S ESSAYS of ELIA. With Notes by W. J. CRAIG.

LAMB'S LAST ESSAYS of ELIA. With Notes by W. J. CRAIG.

BACON'S ESSAYS. With Index of Quotations and Glossary by W. WORRALL.

THE TEMPLE DRAMATISTS.

A Series of the best Tragedies and Comedies of the English Dramatists. Edited by well-known and competent Scholars, and produced in a similar size and style to that of the Temple Shakespeare. One Play is published per month. Limp olive cloth, 1*s.* net; olive paste-grain roan, 1*s.* 6*d.* net per Volume.

LATEST VOLUMES.

HEYWOOD'S WOMAN KILLED with KINDNESS. Edited by Prof. A. W. WARD.

SHAKESPEARE'S and FLETCHER'S The TWO NOBLE KINSMEN. Edited by Prof. C. H. HERFORD.

MARLOWE'S DR. FAUSTUS. Edited by ISRAEL GOLLANCZ.

"The new edition should be welcome to all interested in the older dramatists."—St. James's Budget.

"We know of no pleasanter and prettier reprints."
Spectator.

"The edition has been carried out with a due regard to conciseness; the introduction does not contain a superfluous word."—New Saturday.

The following Volumes have already appeared:—

WEBSTER'S DUCHESS of MALFI. Edited by Prof. C. VAUGHAN.

MARLOWE'S EDWARD II. Edited by A. WILSON VERITY.

JONSON'S EVERY MAN in his HUMOUR. Edited by Prof W. MACNEILE DIXON.

ARDEN of FAVERSHAM (pseudo-Shakespearean). Edited by the Rev. RONALD BAYNE.

"THIS UNFAILINGLY INTERESTING VOLUME."
"MAPS AND ILLUSTRATIONS EXCELLENT."

THE FIRST CROSSING OF SPITSBERGEN.

By Sir WILLIAM MARTIN CONWAY, M.A. F.S.A. F.R.G.S.

With Contributions by J. W. GREGORY, D.Sc., A. TREVOR-BATTYE, and E. J. GARWOOD.

Together with 8 Coloured Plates, reproduced in Facsimile from Sketches by H. E. Conway, Two Maps, and about 100 Full-Page and Text Illustrations from Photographs and Sketches.

Medium 8vo. 30*s.* net.

"We have already summarized the results of this brilliant enterprise.....Sir William Conway writes with that unfailingly light pen which commands the attention of the most superficial reader. His power of discipline needs no eulogy at this day; it is seen here at its best.....Mr. H. E. Conway's sketches more than justify his place in the expedition."
Daily Chronicle.

"Sir Martin Conway is to be congratulated on a volume worthy to take its place by the side of his 'Climbing in the Karakoram Himalayas.'"—Standard.

"Lovers of Arctic travel and adventure should make haste and read 'The First Crossing of Spitsbergen' by Sir William Martin Conway."—Daily Telegraph.

BY MRS. ERNEST HART.

PICTURESQUE BURMA: Past and Present.

By Mrs. ERNEST HART.

Illustrated with about 10 Photogravures, and about 70 to 80 Reproductions from original Photographs and Drawings, Maps, &c.

Royal 8vo. 21*s.* net.

"This handsome volume deals exhaustively with the past history and the social life of the Burmese, touching also upon their resources and probable future, and giving as well a vivid series of travel sketches, supplemented by a large number of beautiful photographs, reproduced with great care and excellent effect."—Times.

"The most useful and interesting description of Burma that has yet appeared.....Besides its interesting matter, Mrs. Hart's book contains three excellent things in a book of travel—good maps, fine illustrations, and a careful index."
Pall Mall.

"As a thoroughgoing account of one of the newest and most important additions to the British Empire, Mrs. Ernest Hart's 'Picturesque Burma' may be warmly commended."—Daily Telegraph.

GRAINS of SENSE. By V. Welby. Square fcap. limp cloth, gilt top, 2*s.* 6*d.* net. [Just ready.

The CROWN of ST. AUDREY. A Handbook to Ely Cathedral. By the Very Rev. the Dean, Dr. STUBBS. Illustrated by 3 Photogravures and Drawings by Miss James. Fcap. 4to. 4*s.* 6*d.* net. [Just ready.

NEW NOVEL BY HANNAH LYNCH.

JINNY BLAKE. By Hannah Lynch, Author of 'Dr. Vermont's Fantasy,' &c. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

"Miss Hannah Lynch weaves in 'Jinny Blake' a charming romance, and strengthens her position as a writer of more than ordinary talent.....There is a great deal of clever writing in the volume, and while Miss Lynch is very successful in character-sketching, she is not a bit less happy in dialogue; her figures act and speak like real persons."—Scotsman.

NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'CAPTAIN JACOBUS.'

The MASTER BEGGARS: a Story of the Wars of the Beggars. By L. COPE CORNFORD. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

"Compared with the general run of historical novels 'The Master Beggars' shines as a triumph."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"An excellent historical novel.....The story abounds in stirring incidents."—World.

TALES of the ISLES of GREECE. Sketches of Modern Greek Life. By ARGYRIS EPHTALIOTIS. Translated from Modern Greek by W. H. D. ROUSE. Crown 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

"Simply and eloquently are these tales told, often with considerable dramatic power."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"'The book of the week.' May it stir many hearts to the prayer that before many years no Christian man or woman on the face of the earth will live under a ruler where such atrocities are possible."—T. P. O'CONNOR in the Weekly Sun.

JOAN SEATON. By Mary Beaumont, Author of 'A Ringby Lass.' Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

"A clever and brilliant sketch."—British Review.

QUO VADIS. A Narrative of Rome in the Time of Nero. By HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ. Translated from the Polish by JEREMIAH CURTIN. Crown 8vo. 4*s.* 6*d.* net.

"An exceptionally good novel."—Times.

"This is emphatically a great book. We do not merely read, we live through the scenes which are conjured up before us."—Daily Chronicle.

A Special Prospectus of both the Dramatists and Classics and the new General Catalogue will be sent to any address on receipt of a postcard.

ALDINE HOUSE, E.C., AND 67, ST. JAMES'S-STREET, S.W.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24*s*.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Demy 8vo. half-calf, price 10*s*. 6*d*. net.

THE MIRROR OF THE SINFUL SOUL.

A Prose Translation from the French of a Poem by Queen Margaret of Navarre, made in 1544 by the

PRINCESS (AFTERWARDS QUEEN) ELIZABETH,

THEN ELEVEN YEARS OF AGE

Reproduced in Facsimile, with Portrait, for the

ROYAL SOCIETY OF LITERATURE OF THE UNITED KINGDOM.

And Edited, with an Introduction and Notes,

By PERCY W. AMES, F.S.A.,
Librarian and Secretary, R.S.L.

The Book consists of the reproduction in facsimile by collotype (132 pp.) of a translation of 'Le Miroir de l'âme pécheresse,' made by Queen Elizabeth when a child, and presented as a New Year's gift to her stepmother, Queen Katherine Parr. The presentation volume, now at Bodley's Library, from which this facsimile is made, was written with her own hand, and is traditionally said to have been bound also by the princess.

Among other interesting contents of this publication is a Prayer for the Navy composed by Queen Elizabeth in 1597, and which has been copied into the volume at the Bodleian by some other hand. There will also be a facsimile reproduction of a letter from the Princess Elizabeth to her brother, King Edward the Sixth, and a photogravure frontispiece of a very interesting portrait of Elizabeth at about fourteen years of age. The introduction will contain a short account of her childhood, with illustrations of her character and disposition at this attractive period of her personal history.

ASHER & CO.
13, Bedford-street, Covent-garden, London, W.C.

BY PROFESSOR CAMPBELL BLACK, F.R.S.E.

The MEDICAL ENVIRONMENT. 1*s*. net.
Hugh Hopkins, 17, West Regent-street, Glasgow.

The URINE in HEALTH and DISEASE. 7*s*. 6*d*.
Baillière, Tindall & Cox, 20, King William-street, London.

LECTURES on BRIGHT'S DISEASE. 2*s*. 6*d*.

The FUNCTIONAL DISEASES of the URINARY and REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS. 5*s*.
J. & A. Churchill, 7, Great Marlborough-street, London.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2*s*.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post.—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News.—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser.—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull.—"Very successful."
Metropolitan.—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News.—"Right well done."
News of the World.—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror.—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."
Echo.—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains:—

NOTES:—Lord Byron's Remains—Unicorn—Dog latin—St Cyneburga—Literary Women—Bredon Stone—Immaculate Conception—Returns—Reversing Postage Stamps—Pantile—Irregular Consent—Letters of a Country Vicar—Give him beans—Misquotation—Work by T. Short.

QUERIES:—"Burvil"—W. B. Stevenson—Nelson's Breeches—Tolliams—Stained Glass—Bradenell—Threatened Invasion of England—Arthurian Legends—Harry Carey—Deanery—Arthur Flowers on Graves—C. Packe—Publichouses—Mr. Lee's Songs on Sports—Mortuary Observance—Vestal—Private Auction—Waddington—Titus Wanted—South of Chichester—Early Headstones—Peter Harrison—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—Sitting Bodkin—Local Areas in Danish and Norman Times—'La maisie hierlekin'—'Bordet'—Umbrella Fortunes—Sharpe's Bishoprick Garland—J. G. Whittier—A. Brayney—"Harpy"—St. Patrick's Purgatory—Cupples Street Inscription—"Cascorne"—'Dispatch'—Poughkeepsie—Three acres and a cow—Changes in Trades—Age of Yew Trees—Parish of Stepney—Dukes of Aquitaine—Wallop—Veil of Mary Queen of Scots—Graham Family—Lundy—Shakespeare and Holinshed—Surname Eyre—Dog Row—Date of First Easter—All-hallows—Good notions—Hasedien—Lucifer Matches—Suffix "well"—Wooden Pitchers—'Urn'—Bacon's 'Promus'—The Siege of Colombo.

NOTES on BOOKS:—'Early Printed Books in the British Museum'—Munro's 'Prehistoric Problems'—Bonser's 'Modern English Biography'—Eeles's 'Bells of Kincardineshire.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d*., by post 4½*d*.

Published by John C. Francis, Breams-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

NOW READY.

BURKE'S FAMILY RECORDS: a Genealogical and Heraldic History of the Gentlemen of England, Ireland, and Scotland, with Illustrations of their Armorial Bearings. A Companion Volume to the 'Peerage and Baronetage' and the 'Landed Gentry.' Edited by ASHWORTH P. BURKE. Super-royal 8vo. cloth gilt, net, 21*s*.

Harrison & Sons, Publishers, 59, Pall Mall, London, S.W., Booksellers and Stationers to Her Majesty.

JAMIESON'S SCOTTISH DICTIONARY. The NEW EDITION, in 5 demy 4to volumes containing upwards of 3000 pages, price 8*l*. 17*s*. 6*d*. The Publisher begs to intimate that the above important work is now nearly out of print, about 36 sets only remaining. Librarians and others should secure copies at once as the Edition is likely to be soon exhausted. It is not stereotyped.

Alex. Gardner, 26 Paternoster-square, London, and Paisley, Publisher and Bookseller by appointment to Her Majesty.

MOLIÈRE and his MEDICAL ASSOCIATIONS.

GLIMPSES OF THE COURT AND STAGE, THE FACULTIES AND PHYSICIANS OF THE GRAND SIÈCLE.

By A. M. BROWN, M.D.

Demy 8vo. printed on antique paper, 200 pages, cloth, 6*s*.

The Cotton Press, Granville House, Arundel-street, London, W.C.

CARLYLE (THOMAS).—MONTAIGNE and other ESSAYS, chiefly BIOGRAPHICAL.

Now first issued in book form, with Foreword by S. R. CROCKETT, and fine Photogravure Frontispiece of Sir J. E. Boehm's Bust of Carlyle.

8vo. cloth, gilt top, 8*s*. 6*d*. net.

May also be had in bindings similar to those of the Library and Ashburton Editions.

LARGE-PAPER EDITION, 75 copies on Hand-made Paper, royal 8vo. half-vellum, uncut, 15*s*. net.

Contents:—Montaigne—Lady Mary Wortley Montagu—Montesquieu—Nelson—Necker—The Netherlands—Newfoundland—Northumberland—The Pitts.

SECRET MEMOIRS OF NAPOLEON.

By One who never quitted him for Fifteen Years (CHARLES DORIS, one of his Valets).

With Photogravure Portrait of Napoleon.

8vo. 367 pages, cloth extra, gilt top, 7*s*. 6*d*. net.

JAMES GOWANS & SON,
13, High-street, St. John's Wood, London, N.W.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

THE ROYAL STEWARTS.
THEIR ORIGIN AND RISE.
SEE
THE ISLE of BUTE in the OLDEN TIME.
By JAMES KING HEWISON, M.A. F.S.A. (Scot.),
Minister of Rothesay.
With Illustrations, Maps, and Plans. 2 vols. crown 4to. 30s. net.
William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

REPRINT of 'A DESCRIPTION of a MACHINE for FINDING the NUMERICAL ROOTS of EQUATIONS and TRACING a VARIETY of USEFUL CURVES.' By F. BASHFORTH, B.A. Communicated to the British Association in 1845. Price 1s.
This Machine was re-invented in 1872, named the Tide Predicter, and constructed for the B.A. Committee on Tides.
Cambridge: Metcalfe & Co., Limited.

THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE.
Monthly, price 1s.
Contents of No. 2, for JUNE.
GRAHAM, EARL of MENTEITH. By Walter M. Graham Easton.
SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part II. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.
The EVOLUTION of the MEDIÆVAL HELMET. Part I. By F. R. Earles.
WELSH PEDIGREES. By John Hobson Matthews.
BOOK-PLATES and their VALUE. By W. H. K. Wright.
NELSON and his ENCHANTRESS. (Continued.)
A LIST of STRANGERS. (Continued.) By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
MR. HALL'S REPLY to MR HORACE ROUND.
QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.
A GAZETTE of the MONTH: being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.
BY THE WAY.
Elliot Stock, 62, Paternoster-row, E.C.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.
MESSRS. ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. beg to announce that NEW POEMS, by FRANCIS THOMPSON, is now ready at all Booksellers', price 6s. net.
2, WHITEHALL-GARDENS, WESTMINSTER.

THE "QUEEN" CARTOONS FROM 'PUNCH.'
WILL BE PUBLISHED ON TUESDAY, JUNE 1,
THE QUEEN AND MR. PUNCH.
The Story of a Reign as Told in MR. PUNCH'S "QUEEN" CARTOONS, with Historical Notes by TOBY, M.P.
Making a handsome Quarto Volume of 128 pages, printed on Fine Paper and stitched in a wrapper —in Gold and Colours—specially designed by LINLEY SAMBOURNE.
Price HALF-A-CROWN.
London: BRADBURY, AGNEW & CO., LIMITED, 8, 9, 10, Bouverie-street, E.C.

SEELEY & CO.'S BOOKS.
SOCIAL TRANSFORMATIONS of the VICTORIAN ERA. By T. H. S. ESCOTT, Author of 'England: its People, Polity, and Pursuits.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.
"A very excellent and comprehensive survey. It would be hardly possible to point to any social movement which has not been touched upon in Mr. Escott's graphic and eloquent pages."—Daily Mail.
"Eminently readable and racy."—Leeds Mercury.
"A most admirable handbook."—Newsagent.
"May be accepted as being as trustworthy as it is undoubtedly readable."—Manchester Guardian.
LIFE at the ZOO. By C. J. Cornish. With Illustrations by Gambier Bolton. Cheap Edition (the Fifth). 6s.
"Without a single dull page."—World.
"In short compass the result of long and patient observation."—Standard.
THE PORTFOLIO for APRIL. 3s. 6d. net.
CROME and COTMAN. By Laurence Binyon.
"Extremely interesting."—World.
"The number is admirably illustrated."—Manchester Guardian.
The MOUNT. Narrative of a Visit to the Site of a Gaulish City on Mount Beuvray. With a Description of the Neighbouring City of Autun. By the late P. G. HAMERTON. 3s. 6d.
"Nothing more delightfully genial and informing ever fell from the pen of that accomplished artist and man of letters."—Manchester Guardian.
"Some delightful chapters from the pen of one who knew every inch of the country and understood the art of imparting its charm to others."—Athenæum.
CASTLE MEADOW. A Story of Norwich a Hundred Years Ago. By Mrs. MARSHALL. 3s. 6d.
"The story is admirably planned and admirably related."—Scotsman.
"A charming volume."—Eastern Daily Press.
London: SEELEY & CO., LIMITED, 38, Great Russell-street.

THE ATHENÆUM
Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.
Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on
MR. YEATS'S SECRET ROSE.
PROF. RAMSAY on PHRYGIA.
A BOOK on BURMA.
The HISTORY of ANCIENT CHESTER
NEW NOVELS—Nûlma; Pantalas; The Secret of Saint Florel; False Gods; Uncle Bernac; Jinny Blake; The Great Jekyll Diamond.
AMERICAN HISTORY.
SCOTTISH BIOGRAPHY.
RECENT VERSE
AMERICAN FICTION.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
COLERIDGE on SPINOZA; TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY; NELSON'S 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY'; An ANGLO-SAXON ENIGMA: SALE.
ALSO—
LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Mr. A. D. Bartlett; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS. The New Gallery; The Salons at Paris; Greek Inscriptions at Clandeboye; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; The Late Mr. Best; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; Gossip.
The ATHENÆUM, every SATURDAY, price THREEPENCE, of John C. Francis, Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.
NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'
Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.
NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.
Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s 6d.
John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10s. 6d. English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
SOLD ONLY BY THE PUBLISHER.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms use EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES. In contact with the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, the glycerine in these agreeable confections becomes actively healing.
EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES.
THROAT IRRITATION and COUGH.—EPPS'S GLYCERINE JUJUBES are sold in Tins, 7½d. and 1s 1½d., labelled "James Epps & Co., Limited, Homœopathic Chemists, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street, London."

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

MURRAY'S HANDBOOKS.

MR. MURRAY begs to call attention to the "INDEX and DIRECTORY" with which the newer Editions of his Handbooks are supplied. These contain all information as to Hotels, Conveyances, &c., and are constantly kept up to date, so that purchasers of his Guide-Books are always supplied with the very latest information.

EUROPEAN HANDBOOKS FOR SPRING TRAVEL.

FRANCE, Part I.: Normandy, Brittany, The Seine and Loire, Bordeaux, The Pyrenees, &c. 36 Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

FRANCE, Part II.: Central France, Auvergne, The Cevennes, Burgundy, The Rhone and Saone, Provence, Marseilles, Alsace-Lorraine, Champagne, &c. 25 Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

HOLLAND and BELGIUM. 18 Maps and Plans. 6s.

DENMARK and ICELAND, Schleswig, Holstein, Copen- hagen, Jutland, and Iceland. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

SWEDEN, Stockholm, Upsala, Gothenburg, The Shores of the Baltic, &c. Maps and Plans. 6s.

NORWAY, Christiania, Bergen, Trondhjem, The Fjelds and Fjords. With Special Information for Fishermen and Cyclists. By T. MICHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 7s. 6d.

RUSSIA, St. Petersburg, Moscow, Finland, Crimea, Caucasus, &c. Edited by T. MICHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 18s.

The RHINE and NORTH GERMANY, The Black Forest, The Hartz, Saxon Switzerland, The Giant Mountains, Elsass, and Lothringen. 82 Maps and Plans. 10s.

SOUTH GERMANY, AUSTRIA, Tyrol, Wurtemberg, Bavaria, Salzburg, Styria, Hungary, and the Danube, from Ulm to the Black Sea. Two Parts, 34 Maps and Plans. Part I. 7s. 6d.; Part II. 6s.

SWITZERLAND, Alps of Savoy and Piedmont, Italian Lakes, and Part of Dauphiné. Maps. Two Parts.

Part I. The Bernese Oberland, Geneva, Lucerne, Engadine, &c. 6s.
Part II. The Alps of Savoy and Piedmont, Italian Lakes, and Part of Dauphiné. 6s.

NORTH ITALY and VENICE, Turin, Milan, The Italian Lakes, Verona, Padua, Venice, Genoa, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A., Author of 'Dame Europa's School.' With 34 Maps and Plans. 10s.

CENTRAL ITALY and FLORENCE, Tuscany, Umbria, The Marches, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 24 Maps and Plans. 6s.

HANDBOOK for INDIA, CEYLON, and BURMA: including the Provinces of Bengal, Bombay, and Madras (The Punjab, North-West Provinces, Rajputana, The Central Provinces, Mysore, &c.), The Native States, and Assam. With 55 Maps and Plans of Towns and Buildings, and a New Chapter on Cashmere. Post 8vo. 20s.

HANDBOOK for JAPAN. Fourth Edition. By Basil Hall Chamberlain and W. B. Mason. With Maps and Plans. 15s. net.

HANDBOOK for NEW ZEALAND, Auckland, Wellington, The Hot Lakes District, Wanganui, Christ Church, Dunedin, The West Coast Road, The Cold Lakes, The Sounds, &c. By F. W. PENNEFATHER, LL.D. Maps and Plans. Post 8vo. 7s. 6d.

ENGLISH HANDBOOKS.

"The general quality of Murray, the scientific character of the information, the accuracy and interest of the historical particulars, to say nothing of the lowness of the price, place his Guides far ahead of any competitors."—Saturday Review.

HANDBOOK for ENGLAND and WALES. Arranged alphabetically, with List of Railway Stations, Hotels, and all Places and Objects worth seeing. 1 vol. Maps, 12s.

HANDBOOK for SCOTLAND. Thoroughly Revised, with Special Detailed Information for Pedestrians, and entirely New Maps. Printed on specially thin and light paper. 9s.

HANDBOOK for IRELAND. New and Thoroughly Revised Edition. With entirely New Set of Maps and Plans. Printed on specially light and thin paper. 9s.

EASTERN COUNTIES: Norfolk, Suffolk, Essex, and Cambridge. 12s.
KENT. 7s. 6d.
SUSSEX. 6s.
SURREY, HANTS, and the ISLE of WIGHT.
HERTS, BEDS, and HUNTS. 7s. 6d.
OXFORDSHIRE. Oxford with its Colleges. 6s.
WILTS, DORSET, and SOMERSET. 12s.
CORNWALL, PENZANCE, FALMOUTH, &c. 6s.
DEVON. 7s. 6d.
GLOUCESTER. 6s.
WORCESTER and HEREFORD. 5s.
NORTH WALES. 6s.
SOUTH WALES. 6s.
NORTHAMPTON and RUTLAND. 7s. 6d.
DERBY, NOTTS, LEICESTER, and STAFFORD.
SHROPSHIRE and CHESHIRE. 6s.
LANCASHIRE. 6s.
YORKSHIRE. 12s.
LINCOLNSHIRE. 7s. 6d.
DURHAM and NORTHUMBERLAND. 10s.
The LAKE DISTRICT of WESTMORELAND and CUMBERLAND. 6s.

CYCLIST'S ROAD BOOKS.

CYCLIST'S ROAD BOOK, from London through Chichester, Portsmouth, Southampton, to the New Forest, and back by Romsey, Winchester, Dorking, Leatherhead, and Epsom. Illustrated by a Road Atlas at the end of the book. Fcap. 8vo. 2s.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 29, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3632. SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6.
SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

WANTED SHORTLY, PROFESSOR of CHEMISTRY, good Lecturer, to give whole time to Day and Evening Classes. Up to London B.Sc. Honours level. Salary 250*l.*—Apply, stating degree, age, experience, with testimonials, to PRINCIPAL, Birkbeck Institution, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL, CANADA.

CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.

The Governors of McGill University are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the newly founded PROFESSORSHIP of ZOOLOGY. Salary $2,500 per annum.—Candidates from Great Britain are requested to forward applications, with any testimonials and references they may desire to submit, on or before June 15, addressed PRINCIPAL, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria-street, Westminster.

BISHOPSGATE FOUNDATION.

Appointment of LIBRARIAN and ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN of the BISHOPSGATE INSTITUTE. The Governors are prepared to receive applications for the above appointments. Candidates will be required to satisfy the Governors of their experience in the management of Public Libraries, Lectures, Concerts, &c. Good business capacity and knowledge of Modern Languages and Literature. Salaries: Librarian, 250*l.*; Assistant Librarian, 100*l.* per annum. No personal canvassing allowed. Testimonials are not required to be sent in the first instance. List of duties, and other terms of employment, can be seen at the Institute.—Apply, by letter only, stating age, qualifications, and other details, not later than June 19, 1897, addressed to F. G. FITCH, Esq., Clerk to the Governors, Bishopsgate Institute, London, E.C.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination.—DRAUGHTSMAN in the HYDROGRAPHICAL DEPARTMENT in the ADMIRALTY (17-25), JULY 7th. Expertness in Hydrographical Chart Drawing essential. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

SWITZERLAND.—HOME SCHOOL for limited number of GIRLS. Special advantages for the Study of Languages, Music and Art. Visiting Professors. University Lectures. Bracing climate; beautiful situation; and large grounds. Special attention to health and exercise.—MLLE. HEISS, Waldheim, Berne.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

THE FROEBEL EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTE,
Talgarth-road, West Kensington, London, W.

Chairman of the Committee—Mr W. MATHER.
Treasurer—Mr C. G MONTEFIORE.
Secretary—Mr. ARTHUR G. SYMONDS, M.A.

TRAINING COLLEGE FOR TEACHERS.
Principal—Madame MICHAELIS.
Who is assisted by a Staff of competent Trainers and Teachers.

KINDERGARTEN AND SCHOOL.
Head Mistress—Miss LAWRENCE.

Further particulars may be obtained on application to the PRINCIPAL.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON, for WOMEN,
York-place, Baker-street, W.

Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.

The EASTER HALF-TERM BEGAN on MONDAY, May 31. Lectures on Bacteriology form part of the Course of Scientific Instruction in Hygiene during this Term.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48*l.*, and ONE CLIFT SCHOLARSHIP in ARTS, value Thirty Guineas, each tenable for Three Years, will be awarded on the result of the Examination to be held at the College on JUNE 24 and 25.

Names to be sent in to the Principal not later than June 15

LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

SCHOLASTIC AGENCY WORK is undertaken by the MEN'S REGISTRY DEPARTMENT of the TEACHERS' GUILD on the lowest terms to cover necessary expenses. Registrar—W. H. FRICKER, M.A. (Oxon.). Personal interviews 3 to 5 Daily, except Thursdays.—Office, 74, Gower-street, W.C.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—Hon. Sec., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

ASSISTANT SCHOOLMISTRESSES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can recommend University Graduates, Trained and Certificated High School Teachers, Foreign Teachers, Kindergarten Mistresses, &c.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

GREEK PLAY at UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, LONDON.—The IPHIGENIA IN AULIS will be given in the Original Greek on THURSDAY, June 10, and FRIDAY, June 11, at 8.30 P.M., and on SATURDAY, June 12, at 3 P.M.

For Tickets and particulars apply to the SECRETARY, University College, Gower-street, W.C.

J. M. HORSBURGH, M.A., Secretary.

TRADE JOURNAL FOR SALE, established some years, capable of great development in the hands of the right person. Price 1,500*l.* Terms could be arranged.—JOURNAL, Mather & Crowther, Limited, Advertising Offices, New Bridge-street, E.C.

PARTNERSHIP.—Excellent opportunity of acquiring well-established PUBLISHING BUSINESS. Gentleman wanted with 2,000*l.* as Partner, sleeping or otherwise.—Write A. L. C., care of H. A. Moncrieff, 19, Ludgate-hill, E.C.

FOR DISPOSAL, a large and increasing BUSINESS in an important PROVINCIAL TOWN, consisting of a very large CIRCULATING LIBRARY, BOOKSELLING, STATIONERY, and INSURANCE AGENCY, also a very old-established House and Estate Agency, together forming a profitable and unique Business. Two or Three Gentlemen having some knowledge of the chief branches (Library and House Agency) would find in this first-class Business pleasant and profitable occupation. This Business has changed hands but once during sixty-five years. The present owner is relinquishing on account of ill health.—For further particulars apply to Messrs H. & C. COLLINS, Solicitors, 172, Friar-street, Reading; and Messrs. PEACOCK & GODDARD, Solicitors, 3, South-square, Gray's Inn, London.

MR. WHITWORTH WALLIS has a FEW DATES OPEN, Season 1897-8, for his LECTURES on 'The English Pre-Raphaelites: Holman Hunt, Millais, and Rossetti. Illustrated with Reproductions of the Artists' Principal Pictures by special permission of the owners of the copyrights.

All communications to the LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, W.C.

MISS MARY KINGSLEY will LECTURE on her TRAVELS in WEST AFRICA at the ST. MARTIN'S TOWN HALL (Charing Cross), in aid of the Building Fund of the Working Men's College, on the Afternoon of JUNE 10 at 3.30.

SIR JOHN LUBBOCK will preside.

Reserved Seats, 5*s.*; Unreserved, 2*s.* 6*d.*, from Tree's, St. James's Hall; the Secretary of the College; or at the Hall.

TYPE-WRITING, in best style, 1*d.* per folio of 72 words. References to Authors.—Miss GLADDING, 23, Lansdowne-gardens, South Lambeth, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—Over 5,000 words 1*s.* per 1,000. Special terms for larger quantities. MSS. carefully Revised. Testimonials, Reports, &c., duplicated. Translations.—E. GRAHAM, Surrey Chambers, 172, Strand, W.C.

SCHOLARLY TYPE-WRITING.—Foreign and Classical MSS., and others requiring special care, undertaken by a Graduate. English at usual rates.—TYPOGRAPHIC AGENCY, Dan, Beeches-road, West Bromwich.

TYPE-WRITING.—1*s.* per 1,000 words. Large quantities by arrangement. Dramatic and confidential work a speciality. Reduplicating.—FAUCIT DARLISON, 88, Iverson-road, West Hampstead, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING UNDERTAKEN PRIVATELY.—Translations—French, German, Italian—from 9*d.* per 100 words. Copying of all kinds. Moderate charges.—MISS FANCOURT, 51, Thornhill-road, Barnsbury, N.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions. Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. R. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,

49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,

WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.

SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretaries (Miss PETHERBRIDGE, Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters, Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued. Pupils trained for Indexing and Secretarial Work.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS., without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order, G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6*d.*, by HORACE COX, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879.
Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, LIMITED, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MANUSCRIPTS in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W.,
Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

Catalogues.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE,
IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.

CATALOGUE, just published, of Works on English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh Topography, Heraldry, and Family History free on application.

MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

ELLIS & ELVEY,
Dealers in Old and Rare Books and Manuscripts.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 86) of RECENT PURCHASE now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

OLD MEZZOTINT PORTRAITS.—FIRST PART of a CATALOGUE of ENGRAVERS, A to H, including Engravings by Beckett, Blooteling, Browne, Clint, Corbutt, Cousins, Dawe, Dickinson, Dunkarton, Earlom, Faber, Fitler, Green, Hodges, Haid, and many others, after celebrated Painters, with prices, post free of JAMES RIMELL & SON, 91, Oxford-street, London, W.

Old Engravings and Books Bought.

SOTHERAN'S PRICE CURRENT of LITERATURE No. 565, Double Number, just published, contains a large and very varied Selection of Books in both Literature and Science, including many important Sets and Special Collections.

Post free from H. SOTHERAN & Co., Booksellers, 140, Strand, W.C., or 37, Piccadilly, W.

AMERICAN

COLONIAL TRACTS.

MONTHLY.

Number Two, JUNE, 1897.

A BRIEF ACCOUNT OF THE ESTABLISHMENT OF THE COLONY OF GEORGIA, UNDER GENERAL JAMES OGLETHORPE, FEBRUARY 1, 1733.

Price 25 Cents. $3.00 a Year.

PUBLISHED BY

GEORGE P. HUMPHREY,

ROCHESTER, N.Y.,

U.S.A.

LONDON LIBRARY,
ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.
Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.
President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.
Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.
Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.
The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature in various Languages. Subscription, 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.

All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—

241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.* [Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., SIR E. BURNE-JONES, D. G. ROSSETTI.

An extensive selection of the Works of these Masters at prices ranging from Three Shillings and Sixpence to Three Guineas.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON.

This important Series of over Four Hundred Permanent Carbon Reproductions of the chief Pictures in this magnificent Collection includes representative selections from the Italian, Flemish, Dutch, Spanish, French, and English Schools. By the aid of the most recent improvements in photographic science, absolutely faithful and permanent copies have been secured, on a scale which adequately represents the original paintings. These are printed in rich brown pigments on specially prepared paper, size 18 by 15 inches, and are sold at a uniform price of Twelve Shillings each.

FAMOUS MASTERS IN FOREIGN GALLERIES,

Including the Masterpieces of the Louvre, Uffizi, Pitti, Dresden, Berlin, and other Collections. The same size and price as the above.

FRAMES specially designed and executed in oak and walnut.

Full particulars of Autotype Permanent Reproductions from the Old and Modern Masters sent post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books. Libraries Purchased and Annual Subscriptions received. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free. GRANT & FARAH, 57 Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

WHAT D'YE LACK?

Ask Miss MILLARD, of Tunbridge Middlesex, for any Book ever issued since the advent of printing, however rare or precious, up to the very last work published, also for any portion or original of Address under the sanction of heaven, for the private use of herself and her friends only, to supply these wants. She has the largest assortment of Miscellaneous Remnants in the world, and is always a ready willing, and liberal buyer for prompt cash.

THE "SUTHERLAND" BINDING.

A NEW COLOUR PROCESS PATENTED.
Beautiful Tooling in any Colour. Colours absolutely permanent.
Mr. BAGGULEY will be glad to supply particulars as to where the Specimens referred to in the Athenæum of May 29 p. 670 can be seen in Town.
High-street, Newcastle-under-Lyme.

TO ARTISTS and others.—FOR SALE, an old FLEMISH CABINET handsomely carved in oak of Columns with Corinthian capitals. Price Eighty Guineas.—To be seen at Mr. Sotheby's, 34 Foley-street, Great Portland-street, W.

THE BALUSTRADE of the BRIDGE which was blown up by the French on their retreat after the great battle of Leipzig IS TO BE SOLD. The Balustrade is of beautiful workmanship perfectly preserved and would be an ornament for a garden or park bridge. Good likeness proved by official document.
Offers solicited by the Council of the City of Leipzig.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each; 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c. Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. SIGGERS, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

CHELSEA.—LADY, residing with Brother, can receive a BOARDER. Student or Literary Lady or Gentleman. Two Private Rooms.—27, Margaretta terrace, Oakley-street, S.W.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

The Collection of Antiquities and Curiosities of the late Rev. JAMES BECK, M.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, and Two following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the extensive COLLECTION of ANTIQUITIES and CURIOSITIES, the Property of the late Rev. JAMES BECK, M.A., F.S.A., of Bilderston Rectory, Suffolk.

May be viewed on Saturday, June 5, and Tuesday, June 8. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings and Engravings, the Property of the late GEORGE BEWLEY, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COLLECTION of ENGRAVINGS and ETCHINGS of the late GEORGE BEWLEY, Esq., of Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A., comprising Examples of Albert Durer, Martin Schongauer, Lucas van Leyden, &c.—Etchings by Rembrandt and other Dutch Masters—fine Foreign Portraits—Line Engravings by Wille, Woollett, &c.

May be viewed on Saturday, June 5, and Tuesday, June 8. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of the Works of George Cruikshank, the Property of H. W. BRUTON, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10, and Two following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of the WORKS of GEORGE CRUIKSHANK, comprising a most extensive Series of Books illustrated by him and many handsomely bound by celebrated binders—Proofs before Letters of all his important Works, many being in unique state—Original Drawings, including those intended to illustrate his Autobiography—an almost complete Collection of his Caricatures and Broadsides, forming a Satirical History of the Early Part of the Present Century, &c., the Property of H. W. BRUTON, Esq., of Gloucester.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

 Fifty Copies of this Catalogue have been printed on Large and Fine Paper, only twenty-five of which are for sale, price Five Shillings each.

Drawings by Phiz illustrating Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop' and 'Barnaby Rudge.'

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COMPLETE SERIES of ORIGINAL WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS to CHARLES DICKENS'S 'OLD CURIOSITY SHOP' and 'BARNABY RUDGE' by HABLOT K. BROWNE ('PHIZ'), together with a fine series of original Drawings and Sketches by George Cruikshank, T. Rowlandson, J. Leech, C. Keene, and R. Caldecott, &c., the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising, amongst the Manuscripts, Illuminated Horæ and other Devotional Works and Oriental MSS.; Holograph MSS. of Algernon Charles Swinburne. The Books comprise rare and valuable First Editions of Modern Authors, fine Illustrated French Books—Collection of Engravings by Israel Silvestre—a fine Second Folio Shakespeare—Postage Stamps, Books in fine Bindings, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Original Manuscript of Nelson's Autobiography.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, the interesting and valuable MANUSCRIPT MEMOIR of LORD NELSON'S EARLY LIFE, WRITTEN ENTIRELY IN HIS OWN HANDWRITING; also a number of most important Letters connected with his Naval Career; and a volume of Twenty-three Letters addressed to his friend Admiral Sir Thos. Trowbridge in the Year 1801.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Manuscripts of Sir Walter Scott's Novels.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, the ORIGINAL AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS of Sir WALTER SCOTT'S 'Lady of the Lake,' 'Tales of a Grandfather,' 'Essay on Popular and Ballad Poetry,' 'Halidon Hill,' 'Doom of Devoirgoil,' 'Old Mortality,' &c.; also ROBERT BURNS'S EDINBURGH COMMONPLACE BOOK, 1787, a magnificent relic of the Poet.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

A Portion of the Library of H. SPENCER SMITH, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 17 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. SPENCER SMITH, Esq., comprising scarce Works relating to America—a large Collection of Books on Angling—Works illustrated by Bewick, Cruikshank, Caldecott, Leech, Rowlandson, and others—First Editions of the Writings of Sir E. Arnold, A. Austin, R. D. Blackmore, Miss Burney, S. T. Coleridge, Defoe, Charles Dickens, B. Disraeli, H. Fielding, Oliver Goldsmith, Sir A. Helps, Dr. Johnson, T. Hood, Leigh Hunt, Charles Lamb, S. Richardson, T. Smollett, R. L. Stevenson, W. M. Thackeray, &c.—Works relating to Kent, Poetry, and Theology—Brown's Religio Medici, First Edition—Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, First Edition, 1621—Goldsmith's The Traveller and The Deserted Village, First Editions—Lamb's John Woodvil, a Tragedy, First Edition—Quarles's Enchiridion, First Edition—Extra Illustrated Works—Modern Illustrated Publications.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Collection of Book-Plates of Colonel ACTON HAVELOCK.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the Valuable COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES (EX-LIBRIS) of Colonel ACTON HAVELOCK.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE ASHBURNHAM LIBRARY OF PRINTED BOOKS. FIRST PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 25, and Seven Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the FIRST PORTION of the Magnificent LIBRARY of excessively Valuable and Rare PRINTED BOOKS, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of ASHBURNHAM. This Portion comprises the Letters A—J only, and includes a Large Number of Books, both English and Foreign, of the highest degree of rarity and interest, amongst which may be mentioned the First Ten Editions of Dame Juliana Barnes's Book of Hawking, Hunting, &c., from 1486 to 1595—Ten Books printed by William Caxton—Thirty-eight Books printed upon Vellum, including the First Latin Aristotle (beautifully decorated), the Gutenburg and 1462 Bibles, and the Durandus of 1459—a splendid Series of the Rarest Bibles in various Languages, but chiefly English—Rare Editions of Ariosto, Boccaccio, and Dante—the Earliest Editions of Chaucer to the End of the Sixteenth Century—the Chronicles of St. Albans, Arnold, Caxton, Froissart, and Fabyan—Fine and Rare Special Breviaries—First Editions of the Writings of Ascham, Lord Bacon, John Bale, Hugh Broughton, Cocker, Cranmer, Defoe, Gawin, Douglas, Drayton, Fielding, Fletcher, John Foxe, Fuller, &c.—some excessively Rare Books by the First Printers in the City of London, St. Albans, Ipswich, Oxford, Cambridge, and other Localities—a Fine Series of Bible Illustrations, and Books with Engravings and Woodcuts—some Rare Books on America—and other Remarkable Items too numerous to particularize. Many of the Books have additional interest and value attached to them from the fact of their being either Presentation Copies from the Authors or from having belonged formerly to Celebrated Families, and some are in Splendid Bindings done for Royal, Noble, and Famous Personages.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-Crown each. Copies, illustrated with Nine Facsimiles in Gold and Colours of some of the remarkable Bindings, may be had, price 5*s.* each.

Ex-Libris.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of EX-LIBRIS, including Specimens of the Jacobean, Chippendale, Wreath and Ribbon, and other styles, many with Dates and Engravers' Names.

Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Liturgical Libraries of the late Rev. ROBT. CHAS. JENKINS, Hon. Canon of Canterbury Cathedral, and of a well-known Collector, recently deceased.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10 and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LITURGICAL LIBRARIES of the late Canon JENKINS and of a well-known COLLECTOR, recently deceased, including Heures à l'usage de Rome, printed on vellum—Digby's Mores Catholici, 3 vols. Large Paper—Missale ad Usum Sarisburiensis—Missale Romanum, 1561—Psalterium Secundum Ordinis Carthusiensis—Breviarium Monasticum, 1573—Bute's Roman Breviary—MANUSCRIPTS on VELLUM—Horæ B.V.M., with 13 Full-Page Miniatures, Graduale Cantuum, Regula Ordinis S. Clara, Biblia Sacra Latina, Epistolæ Canonicæ, Antiphonarium, Liber Choralis, Horæ Flemish MS.—a Collection of scarce Tracts and Pamphlets of the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries—Brodrick's Falconer's Favourites—Neville's Isle of Pines—Coleridge's Works, 21 vols. calf gilt—Barker's Greenwich Hospital, Coloured Plates, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Choice Books from the Library of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, choice BOOKS from the LIBRARY of a well-known COLLECTOR, including Cruikshank's Humourist, 4 vols.—Egan's Life in London, First Edition—Ainsworth's Jack Sheppard, First Edition—Cruikshank's Fairy Library, 4 vols. with double set of plates—Grimm's German Popular Stories, 2 vols. First Edition—Maxwell's Irish Rebellion, Poetical Magazine, 4 vols. plates by Rowlandson—Nimrod's Life of a Sportsman, Coloured Plates by Alken—Real Life in London, 2 vols.—Keats's Endymion, First Edition—Scott's British Field Sports—Lafontaine, Contes et Nouvelles, extra illustrated—Goldsmith's Traveller, First Edition—Vicar of Wakefield, Coloured Plates by Rowlandson—Voltaire Pucelle, Proof Plates—Barker's Greenwich Hospital, Coloured Plates—Quarles's Emblems and Hieroglyphics, 1639—Swift's Tale of a Tub, First Edition—Defoe's Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols. 1719—MSS. on Vellum, with Miniatures—First Editions of Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, &c., the majority of which are in choice bindings by Rivière, Zachnsdorf, Bedford, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

THURSDAY NEXT.—Select Wines.

MR. J. C. STEVENS has received instructions from Messrs. H. HURTER & SON (who have removed their Cellars and Offices to Victoria-street, S.W.) to SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on THURSDAY NEXT, June 10, at half-past 1 o'clock precisely, a FURTHER PORTION of the CELLAR of CHOICE WINES, including Red and White Burgundies, Moselle and Sauternes, Still and Sparkling Hocks, Champagnes, Clarets, Ports, Sherry, Brandy, and Whiskey, &c.—2,000 Cigars, &c.

Sample Bottles can now be obtained, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.—Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, June 11, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely, 400 Lots of SCIENTIFIC INSTRUMENTS, Photographic and Electrical Apparatus, and a general assortment of Miscellaneous Property, from various Private Sources.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

PALL MALL.—The Carleton Hall Heirlooms; Pictures.—In the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, Mr. Justice Kekewich, 1894, C. No. 1,694.

MESSRS. FOSTER respectfully announce for SALE by AUCTION, by direction of Mr. Justice Kekewich, at the Gallery, 54, Pall Mall, on WEDNESDAY, June 16, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely each day, the Valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by the late JOHN COWPER, Esq., of Carleton Hall, Penrith, Cumberland, including a Chef-d'Œuvre by George Romney, Life-size Portraits of Two Beautiful Children, believed to be the Artist's Daughters; also a number of Early English, Dutch, and French Pictures, including Works ascribed to

Barry, R.A.	Peters	Teniers
Breughel	Pynaker	Van Loo.
De Loutherbourg	Sir J. Reynolds	Van Worrell
Gainsborough	Ryckaert	Wilson
Luny	Stephenoff	Zoffany.
Ostade

Also a number of Landscapes by Knox, and some Water-Colour Drawings.

May be viewed two days prior to the Auction. Catalogues may be had.

NOTE.—The George Romney Picture will be on view until the Sale at 54, Pall Mall.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On THURSDAY, June 10, PORCELAIN, the Property of C. F. MASSINGBERD-MUNDY, Esq., and Porcelain and Decorative Objects from various sources.

On FRIDAY, June 11, OLD PICTURES of the late K. R. MURCHISON, Esq., the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and from other sources.

On FRIDAY, June 11, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART of R. M. BURRELL, Esq.

On SATURDAY, June 12, ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES, formerly in the Collection of the late Sir W. W. BURRELL, Bart.; and PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, the Property of LORD WATERPARK.

On MONDAY, June 14, valuable COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, the Property of His Highness PRINCE VICTOR DULEEP SINGH.

On TUESDAY, June 15, the COLLECTION of REYNOLDS'S MEZZOTINTS of the late Mr. H. TOOTAL BROADHURST.

On FRIDAY, June 18, ORIENTAL PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On FRIDAY, June 18, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late H. HICKS, Esq., A. CRONMIRE, Esq., PEARSON COX, Esq., and others.

On SATURDAY, June 19, the choice COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late JAMES LETHART, Esq., of Gateshead-on-Tyne; and the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late Sir HENRY EDWARDS.

BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE.
No. 980. JUNE, 1897. 2*s.* 6*d.*

RETRIEVERS, and HOW TO BREAK THEM. By Lieut.-Col. Henry Smith, C.B.

"A GENTLEMAN of FRANCE": the REAL MONSIEUR D'ARTAGNAN. By Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart., M.P.

DARIEL: a Romance of Surrey. By R. D. Blackmore.

MARLBOROUGH'S UNCONSCIOUS TREASON. By Andrew Lang.

A DOUBTFUL ACQUISITION. By C. Grant Robertson.

ELRICK WALKS. By E. V. B.

JOHN CABOT: an Anniversary Story.

An INDIAN ROMANCE: a Lesson of the Famine.

A CLOSE-TIME for TROUT in SCOTLAND. By Sir James Forrest, Bart., of Coniston.

HARCOURT and CANNING.

22ND JUNE.

William Blackwood & Sons, Edinburgh and London.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY.
No. 244. JUNE, 1897.

BRITISH MONARCHY and MODERN DEMOCRACY. By W. S. Lilly.

INDIA UNDER QUEEN VICTORIA. By Sir Alfred Lyall, K.C.B., G.C.I.E.

The FORTHCOMING NAVAL REVIEW. By H. W. Wilson, Author of 'Ironclads in Action.'

NELSON. By Lieut.-Col. Sir George Sydenham Clarke, K.C.M.G.

The NEW ASTRONOMY: a Personal Retrospect. By William Huggins.

ROSES of JERICHO: a Day in Provincial France. By Rowland E. Prothero.

The LIMITS of FRENCH ARMAMENT. By Lieut.-Col. Adye.

The SIGNIFICANCE of the SIAMESE VISIT. By Percy Cross Standing.

WOMAN'S PLACE in the WORLD of LETTERS. By Mrs. J. R. Green.

The ISLAND of SOCOTRA. By the late J. Theodore Bent.

DO FOREIGN ANNEXATIONS INJURE BRITISH TRADE? By Henry Birchenough, Vice-President of the Macclesfield Chamber of Commerce.

CHANTILLY and the DUC D'AUMALE. By the Count de Calonne.

The NEW IRISH POLICY. By the Right Hon. Lord Monteagle.

London: Sampson Low, Marston & Co., Ltd.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

A NEW WORK BY DR. ROBSON ROOSE.

Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

WASTE and REPAIR in MODERN LIFE. A Series of Essays on the Maintenance of Health under Conditions which Prevail at the Present Time. By ROBSON ROOSE, M.D.

Wear and Tear of Modern Life—Rest and Repair in London Life—The Art of Prolonging Life—Health Resorts and their Uses—Infection and Disinfection—Clothing as a Preventive against Cold—A Contribution to the Alcohol Question—The Physiology of Fasting—The Spread of Diphtheria—The Metropolitan Water Supply—The Propagation and Prevention of Cholera.

Just published, crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

LATER GLEANINGS: Theological and Ecclesiastical. A New Series of Gleanings of Past Years. By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

Contents.—The Dawn of Creation and Worship—Proem to Genesis—Robert Elsmere: the Battle of Belief—Ingersoll on Christianity—The Elizabethan Settlement—Queen Elizabeth and the Church of England—The Church under Henry—Professor Huxley and the Swine Miracle—The Place of Heresy and Schism—True and False Conceptions of the Atonement—The Lord's Day—General Introduction to Sheppard's Bible—Soliloquium and Postscript on the Pope and Anglican Orders.

Second Edition, just ready, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The STORY of a GREAT AGRICULTURAL ESTATE: an Account of the Origin and Administration of the "Beds and Bucks" and "Thorney" Estates. By the DUKE of BEDFORD.

"This book constitutes a priceless addition to the materials on the land question."—Daily Chronicle.

With Portrait, crown 8vo. 5*s.*

ALICE, GRAND DUCHESS of HESSE, Princess of Great Britain. Letters to Her Majesty the Queen. With a Memoir by H.R.H. PRINCESS CHRISTIAN. A New and Cheaper Edition, Revised. Containing the Last Letter written by Princess Alice.

With Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

HOW to LISTEN to MUSIC: Hints and Suggestions to Untaught Lovers of the Art. By HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL, Author of 'Studies in the Wagnerian Drama,' &c. With a Preface by Sir GEORGE GROVE.

Contents.—Recognition of Musical Elements—The Content and Kinds of Music—The Modern Orchestra—At an Orchestral Concert—At a Pianoforte Recital—At the Opera—Choirs and Choral Music—Musician, Critic, and Public.

Fcap. 8vo. 2*s.*

MURRAY'S CYCLIST'S ROAD-BOOK, from London through Chichester, Portsmouth, Southampton, to the New Forest, and back by Romsey, Winchester, Dorking, Leatherhead, and Epsom. Illustrated by a Road Atlas at the End of the Book.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

2 vols. 8vo. 32*s.*

The LIFE and LETTERS of BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford. By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., and the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D. With Portraits and other Illustrations.

"A most agreeable impression of his own personal character is left upon us by this biography, one to make those who read it realize what a privilege it was to be intimate with him, and to account for the almost religious respect with which he was regarded by successive generations of Balliol men."—Standard.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portrait of Author, 12s.

AN OLD SOLDIER'S MEMORIES.

By S. H. JONES-PARRY, J.P. D.L., Late Captain Royal Dublin Fusiliers, Author of 'My Journey round the World,' &c.

NEW EDITION, CONDENSED, REVISED, AND WITH MUCH NEW MATERIAL.

Now ready at all Booksellers', in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Portrait of Lady Hamilton, gilt top, 6s.

LADY HAMILTON AND LORD NELSON.

AN HISTORICAL BIOGRAPHY.

Based on Letters and other Documents in the Morrison Collection.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON, Author of 'The Real Lord Byron,' &c.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

Now ready, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7s. 6d.

The TAME FOX, and other

Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure 'The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW WORK BY WALTER WOOD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Frontispiece, gilt top, price 6s.

FAMOUS BRITISH WAR

SHIPS and their COMMANDERS. By WALTER WOOD, Author of 'Barrack and Battlefield,' &c.

"The author has been minutely careful about what he tells us, so that the three hundred pages are crammed with facts to which any one may refer with confidence. The book is a capital and stirring one, and reflection upon it fills us with hope in our naval future."

ADMIRAL COLOMB in the Saturday Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

SALTED with FIRE. By George

MAC DONALD, LL.D., Author of 'Robert Falconer,' 'Sir Gibbie,' &c.

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R.

HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'A Flame of Fire' deserves commendation for a certain picturesqueness and vigour of writing, for strongly-conceived incident, and for the bold incisiveness of its descriptive passages."—Globe.

BROKEN THREADS. By Compton

READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"There is bright comedy all through Mr. Compton Reade's story, with just so much serious interest as is necessary to keep the book from being frivolous or trifling."

Scotsman.

The SILENCE BROKEN. By G. M.

ROBINS (Mrs. BAILLIE REYNOLDS), Author of 'The Ides of March,' 'Her Point of View,' &c. 1 vol. small crown 8vo. 2s.

"An interesting little character-sketch, involving a ghost story of real charm and pathos. Mrs. Robins's style has distinction and force, nor does she lay her colours on too thickly."—Pall Mall Gazette.

WITHOUT ISSUE. By Henry Cress-

WELL, Author of 'A Modern Greek Heroine,' 'A Wily Widow,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"A well-constructed plot, involved, but never passing the limitations of probability; a very excellent piece of work in every respect."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"The writer well understands the value of an interesting opening chapter to a work of fiction, and, having aroused the attention of the reader at the outset, Mr. Cresswell holds him absorbed to the end."—Dundee Advertiser.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED, 13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN'S LIST.

COSMOPOLIS:

An International and Tri-Lingual Monthly Review.

Edited by F. ORTMANS.

Contents for JUNE. Price 2s. 6d.

AN OUTPOST of PROGRESS Joseph Conrad
The REIGN of QUEEN VICTORIA Right Hon Sir Richard Temple, G C S I
CURRENT FRENCH LITERATURE Edmund Gosse.
GIUSEPPE MAZZINI Felix Moscheles
The SALONS D S MacColl
ENGLISH and AMERICAN SPORTS Theodore Andrea Cook.
The GLOBE and the ISLAND. Henry Norman

VOYAGEUSES VI Cyprès toscans Paul Bourget
LA LEÇON de la MORT Jean Ajcard
EN GRÈCE Jean Moréas
LES IDÉES de SERVICE du WAGNÉRISME A. de Bertha.
UNE VISITE AUX SALONS ANGLAIS Gabriel Mourey
L'ANARCHISME DANS L'ART Eugene Muntz
LE JUBILÉ de la REINE VICTORIA. Francis de Pressensé.

POLLY. Ludwig Gabillon.
DAS REGIERUNGS-JUBILAUM DER KONIGIN VICTORIA. Theodore Barth.
HEINRICH VON STEPHAN P D. Fischer.
KAISER WILHELM I Max Lenz
WAS DER CHINESE GLAUBT M von Brandt
POLITISCHES in DEUTSCHER BELEUCHTUNG. "Ignotus."

LOUIS BECKE'S NEW VOLUME.

PACIFIC TALES. By Louis Becke,

Author of 'His Native Wife,' 'By Reef and Palm,' &c. With Portrait of the Author. Cloth, gilt top, 6s.

THE PARLIAMENT OF GLADSTONE AND DISRAELI.

The INNER LIFE of the HOUSE of COMMONS From the Writings of WILLIAM WHITE. Introduction by JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P. 2 vols. cloth, 16s

"We have here preserved precious photographs of historic scenes and memorable persons Having spent his days and nights with Addison and other classics in the old book-shop, the Doorkeeper brought to his new task an excellent literary style, with a pleasant dash of the old fashion.... His records have the inestimable advantage of being edited by Mr Justin McCarthy, who, with long experience and close sympathy with the House of Commons and its history, was the very man for the task of dealing with a mass of memoranda extending over ten years. I do not know what he may have left out, he has certainly known what to preserve."—H. W. Lucy in the Daily News.

A COMPANION VOLUME TO 'TWELVE BAD MEN.'

TWELVE BAD WOMEN. Edited

by ARTHUR VINCENT. Illustrated. Cloth, 16s.

"The book has a distinct value, both to the student of history and the student of character; and the writers must be congratulated, not only upon their selection of types, but also upon their clear, incisive, and vigorous style, and the care and research which they have bestowed in order to the elucidation of dubious points and the presentation of fair and well-balanced narratives The interest and worth of the handsome volume are greatly enhanced by a series of excellent portraits and an admirable index."—Aberdeen Free Press.

"FROM PAUPER TO PREMIER."

LIFE of SIR HENRY PARKES,

G C M G By CHARLES E LYNE, formerly Editor of the Sydney Morning Herald, &c. Demy 8vo. cloth, 16s.

"Mr. Lyne has done his work with judgment, restraint, and evident capacity....The biography gives a trustworthy portrait of an exceptionally able and interesting politician."—Standard.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'NAME THIS CHILD.'

A GREAT LIE. By Wilfrid Hugh

CHESSON, Author of 'Name this Child,' &c. Cloth, 6s.

"There are some very fine things in the fanciful legend which Mr. Wilfrid Hugh Chesson has denominated 'A Great Lie.'....Written with admirable clearness and precision, now cynical, now tender, 'A Great Lie' is evidently the production of a more than usually powerful mind."

World.

FOURTH EDITION, REVISED, ENLARGED, AND BROUGHT UP TO DATE.

SOUTH AFRICA. By Geo. M. Theal,

Author of 'The Portuguese in South Africa,' &c. Maps and Illustrations. Cloth, 5s.

"A thoroughly workmanlike and readable volume."

Daily Telegraph on First Edition.

EDITED BY DR. SIGERSON.

BARDS of the GAEL and GALL: a

Volume of Verse Collected and Edited by Dr GEORGE SIGERSON. With Photogravure Portrait of the Blind Irish Bard Carolan. Cloth, 10s. 6d.

DR. NEWMAN SMYTHE'S NEW VOLUME.

The PLACE of DEATH in EVOLU-

TION. By NEWMAN SMYTHE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

[Next week.

JUST READY.

FROM the FOUR WINDS. By John

SINJOHN. Crown 8vo cloth, 6s.

These are the strong, sturdy stories of a man of action, who has been in out-of-the-way corners of the globe, and seen a good deal of life at first hand.

NEW EDITION, WITH A NEW PREFACE.

MRS. KEITH'S CRIME: a Record.

By Mrs W K CLIFFORD, Author of 'Aunt Anne,' &c. With Front. by the Hon. J. Collier. Green cloth, gilt top, 6s.

Mr. T. FISHER UNWIN'S ILLUSTRATED SPRING LIST will be sent post free to any address on application.

London: T. FISHER UNWIN, Paternoster-square, E.C.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY G. BERESFORD FITZGERALD.

A FLEETING SHOW. By the Author of 'An Odd Career,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [This day.

NEW NOVEL BY HATTIL FOLL.

MAJOR CARLILE. Crown

8vo. cloth, 6s. [This day.

NEW NOVEL BY ROBEY F. ELDRIDGE.

The KESTYNS of CATHER

CASTLE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Second Edition.

"Very beautiful and interesting. The Kestyns will doubtless find a large and appreciative audience."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVEL BY JOHN BRIDGE.

DINNER for THIRTEEN.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [This day.

JEAN DE LA BRÈTE'S FAMOUS NOVEL.

FATE'S FETTERS (Un

Vaincu). Translated from the French by Mrs. F. HOPER-DIXON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. (Eleventh Edition in the original.)

"Distinctly a novel worth reading."

Glasgow Herald.

"The book will be popular."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVEL BY CLEMENT A. MENDHAM.

A TROTH of TEARS. Crown

8vo. cloth, 6s. With a Frontispiece. [This day.

NEW NOVEL BY H. J. CHAYTOR.

The LIGHT of the EYE. Crown

8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [This day.

NEW DETECTIVE STORY BY J. H. SWINGLER.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVI-

DENCE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The author has considerable literary ability, and knows how to write for the general reader."

Dundee Advertiser.

FLORENCE MARRYAT'S LATEST.

IN the NAME of LIBERTY.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Third Edition.

ALICE M. DIEHL'S LATEST.

A LAST THROW. Crown 8vo.

cloth, 6s. [Second Edition.

NEW WORK ON ORNITHOLOGY.

The BIRDS of OUR COUNTRY.

By H. E. STEWART, B.A. Illustrated throughout. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d. Over 400 pages.

 Illustrated Prospectus post free.

AUTHORS may now send their MSS., suitable for Volume Publication, to DIGBY, LONG & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

THE NEW "DIAMOND JUBILEE" VOLUME.

FIFTH THOUSAND now ready, demy 8vo. cloth, 12*s.*

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES,

FROM 1880 TO THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

"It deals with events in the author's old inimitable way. His hand has lost nothing of its cunning.....The touch is still as light and as sure as ever.....Nothing can surpass the ease of Mr. McCarthy's narrative style—his way of winding into his subject, and taking the reader with him in sustained interest to its close."—Daily News.

"One of the books distinctly called for by time and the hour was a continuation and completion up to date of Mr. McCarthy's popular history.....Like the preceding volumes, the supreme value of the book lies in its readableness.....Mr. McCarthy's pen has lost little, if anything, of its deftness and grace, as his spirit has lost nothing of its sweetness and geniality."—Scotsman.

"That he has produced a brilliant and interesting record none will deny."—Manchester Courier.

"The new volume has most of the merits which have made the preceding volumes a standard work. The interest never flags."—Westminster Gazette.

"Mr. McCarthy's work is full of anecdotes and bits of information, which, to the majority of us, are half forgotten."—Christian World.

"We anticipate that this volume will be the book of the season.....Everybody who begins to read it will wish to finish it."—Daily Chronicle.

THE NEW "JUBILEE" STORY.—Immediately, crown 8vo. decorated cover, 1*s.*

"GOD SAVE the QUEEN!" a Tale of '37. By Allen Upward, Author of 'A Crown of Straw,' &c.

A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By Sir Walter Besant, Author of 'All Sorts and Conditions of Men' With a Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

"It is one of the most delightful love stories which we have read this year The grace of the minuet is in its stateiy and yet gay and easy style. Dainty and sweet in itself, the tale is also daintily and sweetly told....It is altogether a beautiful story."—Daily Mail.

"The idyllic story is put into the mouth of the Quakeress who was almost a Queen It is told with all the wealth of picturesqueness and quaintness which Sir Walter Besant can infuse into a period of history he is fond of utilizing for his novels."—Scotsman.

NULMA: an Anglo-Australian Romance. By Mrs. Campbell Praed, Author of 'Mrs. Tregaskiss,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

"We can recommend 'Nûlma' as a thoroughly enjoyable story. Mrs. Praed, possibly as the result of her collaboration with Mr. Justin McCarthy, has learned to give a very pretty flavouring of actuality to her stories by introducing a semi-political background into her romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"'Nûlma' is simply delightful....Nûlma, totally different from Mrs. Tregaskiss in character, circumstances, and destiny, is as living and as interesting as she....The incidental people are admirable, and the book abounds in good things, most, too, when the girlish heroine is talking—surely a triumph for a novelist"—World.

"After all, the charm in her books is that they are bits of real life. You can always picture the characters, and they always behave like human beings—very charming human beings for the most part....There is plenty of room for any number of pretty, wholesome, picturesque stories like 'Nûlma.'"—Literary World.

CARLTON PRIORS. By John Stafford, Author of 'Doris and I.' Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6*s.*

"Mr. Stafford has come on very much since his early effort 'Doris and I,' and 'Carlton Priors' should do much for his reputation."—Bookman.

"It contains a very pleasing and interesting story, and one that promises better things from the same pen."—Athenæum.

"The whole thing is distinctly pleasing in tone, and the author writes excellent English"—Black and White.

"The materials of the story are old and familiar, but they are woven with unusual taste and skill, and with a literary touch marked by great delicacy and refinement."—Scotsman.

HIS DEAD PAST. By C. J. Wills, Author of 'An Easy-going Fellow,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

RECENT SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

SEBASTIANI'S SECRET. By S. E. Waller. With 9 Full-Page Illus-trations by the Author.

LOVICE. By Mrs. Hungerford, Author of 'Molly Bawn,' &c.

BEYOND the PALE: an Irish Romance. By B. M. Croker, Author of 'A Family Likeness,' &c. SECOND EDITION.

WITH the RED EAGLE: a Romance of the Tyrol. By William Westall. THIRD EDITION.

RIE'S DIARY. By Anne Coates. Crown 8vo. silk cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

The INNOCENTS ABROAD. By Mark Twain. With 234 Illustrations. (Uniform with the other Volumes of the new CHEAP UNIFORM EDITION.) Crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

ZAMBRA the DETECTIVE. By Headon Hill. A New Edition. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The LAST ENTRY. By W. Clark Russell. With a Frontispiece by Max Cowper. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"'The Last Entry' is a rattling good salt-water yarn told in the author's usual breezy, exhilarating style."—Daily Mail.

"In this new novel Mr Russell has cleverly thrown its events into the year 1837, and there are one or two ingenious passages which add to the Diamond Jubilee interest which that date suggests... 'The Last Entry' is as certain of general popularity as any of Mr. Russell's former tales of the marvels of the sea."—Glasgow Herald

The MYSTERY of JAMAICA TERRACE. By Dick Donovan. Post 8vo. picture boards, 2*s.*; cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*

The CHRONICLES of MICHAEL DANEVITCH, of the Russian Secret Service. By DICK DONOVAN, Author of 'A Detective's Triumphs.' Crown 8vo cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"Dick Donovan has produced a much better detective story than any that we have previously had from his pen....Some excellent puzzles and mysteries....As a sequel to the Danevitch tale he gives us a longer story, 'The Clue of the Dead Hand,' which is exceptionally strong"—Speaker.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY. By Richard Dowling, Author of 'The Mystery of Killard.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

A NINETEENTH-CENTURY MIRACLE. By "Z Z" (Louis Zangwill). Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

HIS EXCELLENCY (Eugene Rougon). By Emile Zola. Preface by E. A. VIZETELLY. Crown 8vo. cloth extra, 3*s.* 6*d.*

"While its human interest is absorbing from first to last, it has also much of the importance of an historical document"—Scotsman

NEW THREE-AND-SIXPENNY NOVELS.

DULCIE EVERTON. By E. LYNN LINTON.
The RIDDLE RING. By JUSTIN McCARTHY.
MADAME SANS-GENE. By E. LEPELLETIER.
BEATRICE and BENEDICK. By HAWLEY SMART.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

"Dr. Conan Doyle's fascinating story."—DAILY NEWS.

With 12 Full-Page Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

UNCLE BERNAC:

A Memory of the Empire.

By A. CONAN DOYLE,

Author of 'The White Company,' 'Rodney Stone,' &c.

PRESS OPINIONS.

SPEAKER.—"It is not a small thing that we should have found amongst ourselves a writer who can thus interpret history for us, and revive the faded memories of the past in the spirit, and with something of the genius of Scott himself."

SPECTATOR.—"A very readable book, written in that vivid, virile style which is to us one of his chief attractions."

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"It would be difficult to say which among all the books that have been recently composed about Napoleon Bonaparte Dr. Doyle has not read and made use of. But he carefully keeps the scaffolding out of the complete building; he will not distract your attention by superfluous detail. In 'Uncle Bernac' Napoleon, or let us say one side of Napoleon, lives veritably before our eyes."

OBSERVER.—"Dr. Conan Doyle has won yet another success.....From the opening pages the clear and energetic telling of the story never falters and our attention never flags."

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"'Uncle Bernac' is for a truth Dr. Doyle's Napoleon. Viewed as a picture of the little man in the grey coat, it must take rank before anything he has written. The fascination of it is extraordinary. It reaches everywhere a high literary level."

BY LORD ARMSTRONG, C.B. F.R.S. LL.D.

With Autotype Plates, imperial 4to. 1*l.* 10*s.* net.

ELECTRIC MOVEMENTS in AIR and WATER. With Theoretical Inferences. By LORD ARMSTRONG, C.B. F.R.S. LL D., &c.

With Portraits and a Preface by Sir EDWARD B. MALET, G.C.B. G.C.M.G., &c., demy 8vo. 16*s.*

GABRIELE VON BULOW, Daughter of Wilhelm von Humboldt. A Memoir compiled from the Family Papers of Wilhelm von Humboldt and his Children, 1791-1887. Translated by CLARA NORDLINGER.

With Portraits, demy 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.*

ISABELLA the CATHOLIC, QUEEN of SPAIN: her Life, Reign, and Times, 1451-1504. By M. LE BARON DE NERVO. Translated from the Original French by Lieut.-Colonel TEMPLE-WEST (Retired).

POT-POURRI from a SURREY GARDEN. By Mrs. C. W. EARLE. With an Appendix by LADY CONSTANCE LYTTON. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

NEW VOLUME OF 'THE DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.'

On June 26, 15*s.* net in cloth; or in half-morocco, marbled edges, 20*s.* net.

Volume LI. (SCOFFIN—SHEARES) of the DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIO-GRAPHY. Edited by SIDNEY LEE.

Volume 1. was published on January 1, 1885, and a further Volume will be issued Quarterly until the completion of the Work.

NEW VOLUME OF SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S POPULAR 2s. 6d. SERIES.

Crown 8vo. limp red cloth, 2*s.* 6*d.*

The DISAPPEARANCE of GEORGE DRIFFELL. By JAMES PAYN, Author of 'By Proxy,' &c.

London:
SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo-place, S.W.

A SELECTION FROM

BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

Uniformly bound, each in One Volume, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

THE LATEST ADDITION TO THE SERIES.

DEAR FAUSTINA.

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

By ROSA N. CAREY.

The Mistress of Brae Farm.
Sir Godfrey's Grand-daughters.
Basil Lyndhurst. | Lover or Friend?
Mary St. John. | Wooed and Married.
Nellie's Memories.
Barbara Heathcote's Trial.
Heriot's Choice.
Not Like other Girls.
Only the Governess.
Queenie's Whim.
Robert Ord's Atonement.
Uncle Max. | Wee Wifie.
For Lilias.

By MAARTEN MAARTENS.

My Lady Nobody. | God's Fool.
The Sin of Joost Avelingh.
An Old Maid's Love.
The Greater Glory.

By MARY CHOLMONDELEY.

Diana Tempest.
Sir Charles Danvers.

By MARY LINSKILL.

Between the Heather and the Northern Sea.
The Haven under the Hill.
In Exchange for a Soul.
Tales of the North Riding.
Cleveden.

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

Scylla or Charybdis?
A Beginner. | Mrs. Bligh.
Cometh up as a Flower.
Good-bye, Sweetheart!
Nancy. | Joan.
Not Wisely, but Too Well.
Red as a Rose is She.
Second Thoughts. | Belinda.
"Doctor Cupid." | Alas!

By JESSIE FOTHERGILL.

From Moor Isles.
Aldyth. | The "First Violin."
Borderland.
Kith and Kin. | Probation.

By FLORENCE MONTGOMERY.

Misunderstood.
Thrown Together. | Seaforth.

By L. DOUGALL.

The Madonna of a Day.

Each in One Volume, crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. at all Booksellers' and Railway Bookstalls in Town or Country.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

IN ONE VOLUME,

Small 4to. extra cloth, gilt top,

PRICE HALF-A-GUINEA.

WOMEN NOVELISTS

OF

QUEEN VICTORIA'S REIGN.

A BOOK OF APPRECIATIONS.

THE SISTERS BRONTE.
By MRS. OLIPHANT.

GEORGE ELIOT.
By MRS. LYNN LINTON.

MRS. GASKELL.
By EDNA LYALL.

LADY GEORGIANA FULLERTON.
By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

THE AUTHOR OF 'THE VALLEY OF A HUNDRED FIRES.'
By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

THE AUTHOR OF 'MARY POWELL.'
By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

MRS. CATHERINE CROWE.
By ADELINE SERGEANT.

MRS. ARCHER CLIVE.
By ADELINE SERGEANT.

MRS. HENRY WOOD.
By ADELINE SERGEANT.

MRS. CRAIK (MISS MULOCK).
By MRS. PARR.

AMELIA B. EDWARDS.
By MRS. MACQUOID.

JULIA KAVANAGH.
By MRS. MACQUOID.

MRS. NORTON.
By MRS. ALEXANDER.

"A. L. O. E." (MISS TUCKER).
By MRS. MARSHALL.

MRS. EWING.
By MRS. MARSHALL.

HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, London, W.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

Royal 8vo. 42s. net.

THE KLERKSDORP GOLD FIELDS.

Being a Description of the Geologic and of the Economic Conditions obtaining in the Klerksdorp District, South African Republic.

By G. A. DENNY (M.E. and Geologist).

Fully illustrated with Plans, Sections, a Complete Map of the Klerksdorp District, and a Geological Map of the same area. Containing History, Topography, Geology, Reefs and Companies, Systems of Reduction and Mining, Sampling Ore, Sorting, Variations, Working, Coal and Water Supply, Diamond Drilling.

THE ROMANES LECTURE, 1897.

MACHIAVELLI. The Romanes Lecture delivered in the Sheldonian Theatre, June 2, 1897. By the Right Hon. JOHN MORLEY, M.P., Hon. D.C.L. Oxon., Hon. LL.D. Camb. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MORRICE BUCKLER.'

The PHILANDERERS. By A. E. W. MASON. Crown 8vo. 6s.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The charm of the story lies in the clear, sharp outlines and delicate shading with which the chief characters are limned and the grace and ease of the style and of the dialogues.....All Mr. Mason's 'Philanderers' are convincing—'neither childen nor gods,' but men and women in a world of afternoon teas—and thoroughly entertaining."

BY F. MARION CRAWFORD.

A ROSE of YESTERDAY. Crown 8vo. 6s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ROBBERY UNDER ARMS.'

MY RUN HOME. By Rolf Boldre- WOOD. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The SECRET of SAINT FLOREL. By JOHN BERWICK. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SCOTSMAN.—"A thoroughly healthy and well-told story, with plenty of stirring incident and variety of scene and situation, and it is not wanting in study of character and knowledge of life, savage, semi-savage, and civilized."

The FALL of a STAR. A Novel. By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart. Crown 8vo. 6s.

DAILY MAIL.—"A brightly written story, in which high life, mystery, tragedy, and science are cunningly blended."

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.

NEW VOLUME.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3s. 6d. "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5s.

SNARLEYYOW. By Captain MARRYAT. Illustrated by H. R. MILLAR. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY.

With Illustrations, 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

A RIDE through WESTERN ASIA. By CLIVE BIGHAM. Part I. ASIA MINOR. Part II. PERSIA, North to South. Part III. TURKISH ARABIA. Part IV. PERSIA, West to East. Part V. CENTRAL ASIA.

DAILY MAIL.—"By reason of his mental alertness and his keen perception of little things, he has contrived to make this record of a bold journey through difficult and perturbed countries unusually vigorous and entertaining."

12mo. 3s. 6d.

The PORT of MISSING SHIPS, and other Stories of the Sea. By JOHN R. SPEARS.

THE MODERN READER'S BIBLE.

NEW VOLUME.

Pott 8vo. 2s. 6d. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by RICHARD G. MOULTON, M.A. (Cantab.). The Text is that of the Revised Version. It is used by special permission of the University Presses of Oxford and Cambridge.

EZEKIEL.

Globe 8vo. 3s. 6d.

The STUDY of FRENCH according to the NEWEST and BEST SYSTEMS. By ALFRED F. EUGÈNE, Professeur Officiel de l'Enseignement Secondaire (Université de France), and H. E. DURIAUX.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

SATURDAY, JUNE 5, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
MR. MCCARTHY'S HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES FROM 1880	735
TWO LATIN CLASSICS IN ENGLISH VERSE	736
A FRENCH WRITER ON JOAN OF ARC	737
HISTORY OF MORAY AND NAIRN	738
NEW NOVELS (Mrs. Crichton's Creditor; Old Corcoran's Money; Only a Flirt; Ripple and Flood; Bright; The Lady Grange; A Princess of Islam; Pilgrims of the Night; The Winds of March; A Full Confession; Le Double Joug)	739—740
THE LITERATURE OF IRISH SPORT	740
RECENT VERSE	741
ECONOMIC LITERATURE	741
STORIES OF ADVENTURE	742
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	743
LORD LYTTON'S 'HAROLD'; AN ALLEGED ERROR OF VENERABLE BEDE'S; GIBBON'S LIBRARY; DEFOE THE REBEL; THE DATE OF MINUCIUS FELIX	744—745
LITERARY GOSSIP	746
SCIENCE—DR JAMES CROLL; ANNUALS; ZOOLOGICAL LITERATURE; A SINGING CROCODILE; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	746—748
FINE ARTS—VENUS AND APOLLO; ENGLISH AND WELSH CATHEDRALS; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; M. FRANÇAIS; ANCIENT ALEXANDRIA; THE PENDER SALE; GOSSIP	749—753
MUSIC—KARL VON DITTERSDORF; THE WEEK; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	753—755
DRAMA—THE ELIZABETHAN DRAMA; LIBRARY TABLE; GOSSIP	755—756

LITERATURE

A History of our own Times from 1880 to the Diamond Jubilee. By Justin McCarthy, M.P. (Chatto & Windus.)

MR. MCCARTHY doubtless had reasons satisfactory to himself for writing this supplement to the readable and highly successful work which he issued some years ago. But there was less call for the present volume, except as a piece of book-making, than for its predecessors, and it was inevitable that it should be, even as a piece of book-making, inferior to them. Mr. McCarthy honestly tries to be impartial, and sometimes goes out of his way to speak kindly of political opponents. It was not possible for him, however, to view as an outsider movements in which he has taken part. Nor was it possible for him to know enough about the inner workings of proceedings that he merely watched or glanced at from the surface, or of the motives and hindrances of those principally engaged in them, for his report to be of much value. "A history of our own times," if it is to be accurate and lucid, can only be written hereafter, when a sufficient store of "mémoires pour servir" is available for use by a student and critic who has not himself been a partisan in the events he discusses and describes. Mr. McCarthy is so "up-to-date"—"to use a vile slang phrase of the present day," which he is himself fond of using, along with some others—that, not content with passing judgment on such unfinished incidents as the Greek war, he assumes prescience of occurrences between the moment of going to press and the "Diamond Jubilee," which is still more than a fortnight off. This may be smart journalism, but it is outside the historian's range.

Mr. McCarthy writes most fully and most instructively about Irish affairs, or rather about English dealings with them. Here his intimate acquaintance with the subject is serviceable. If he reveals no secrets and is discreetly reticent at times, he traces clearly the developments and ramifications of the Home Rule question since 1880, when Mr. Parnell came to the front. In particular he tells nearly everything that there is need to tell about the public career of the great Nationalist leader, who, he is anxious to explain, was not an Irishman:—

"On his father's side he came of an old English family who had moved at a comparatively recent period from Congleton, in Cheshire, and had set up their home in the county Wicklow. One of the family was Thomas Parnell, the poet, whose name figures so often in the letters and in the verse of Swift, and whom Pope describes as 'with softest manners, gentlest arts adorned, blest in each science, blest in every strain.' The praises of Parnell the poet by most of his great contemporaries would fall rather flat on the ears of the present generation, by whom, indeed, his name would be almost altogether forgotten had not the political career of Charles Stewart Parnell revived a faint, reflected interest in the author of 'The Hermit.' Sir John Parnell, Mr. Parnell's great-grandfather, was for many years Chancellor of the Exchequer in the Irish Parliament, and resigned his office because he would not and could not vote for the Act of Union. Sir Henry Parnell, Mr. Parnell's grand-uncle, held high office in the English Ministry, and was raised to the peerage as Lord Congleton in 1841. His end was a tragedy: his brain was overwrought; he lost his reason, and died by his own hand. Mr. Parnell's mother was an American, a daughter of Admiral Charles Stewart, a famous American naval officer, who fought against the English in the war of 1814, and who was affectionately termed by his sailors and his friends, 'Old Ironsides.' So far as we know there was not a drop of Irish blood in Charles Parnell's veins, although his whole public career absorbed itself into the Irish question. During all his earliest years he had had no interest whatever in politics of any kind. He was sent to various private schools in England, and afterwards went to Magdalene College, Cambridge. Here it was, so far as we can learn, his curious fate to make no impression whatever on his teachers or his comrades. He did not distinguish himself in any way, and although he had at all times a great love for science, especially for applied science, he did not make his mark in any branch of study. While he was at Cambridge the Fenian movement broke out in Ireland. His mother was then in his ancestral house at Avondale, in the county of Wicklow. She was supposed to have some sympathy with the movement, and to have sheltered Fenians in the house. Avondale was searched by the police, and even Mrs. Parnell's bedroom was not allowed to be sacred from the investigation. When young Parnell heard of this indignity offered to his mother, he became suddenly filled with a passion of hatred for English government in Ireland. That was the first time that he ever thought anything about an Irish national movement, and from that moment forth he became the inveterate enemy of English rule in Ireland."

The apology for Mr. Parnell's policy of obstruction is well put:—

"He was not a lover of England; he was not in feeling much of a democrat. But he was thoroughly convinced that if the attention of the English people, and more especially of the English democracy, could be really aroused to the Irish national claim, the conscience of the majority of Englishmen would be compelled to recognise its justice, and the cause of Home Rule would be gained. Now that and nothing else was the meaning of Mr. Parnell's policy of obstruction—the policy which he carried on, for example, after Mr. Gladstone had come into office in 1880, and when Parnell was made leader of the Irish party. Many people set him down merely as a man who, out of some sort of sinister purpose or malignity, wished to interfere with and harass, obstruct, and irritate every English Government and the whole House of Commons. Mr. Parnell had no feeling of the kind. His was a deliberate purpose, and it was even by the process of exasperation that he tried to fix the attention of the House and the country on the fact that there was an Irish national demand, which it would be necessary to listen to and to take into consideration. Parnell's creed was that the House of Commons was the one great public platform of the country. From that platform he was determined to appeal to and arouse the English people. Therefore he said in substance to the House of Commons: 'If you will not listen to our Irish national claim, then we will not allow you to discuss any other question whatever of which we can prevent the discussion.' He acted on the inspiration of the woman in the Eastern story—of which woman he had probably never heard—who, having tried in vain to get a petition delivered to the Sultan, took her place with her little children in the public street, and waited until the Sultan rode that way, and then flung herself and her babes in front of his horse's hoofs, and declared that she would not move from that spot until he had listened to her appeal or had trampled her and hers to death. That was the real meaning of the later policy of obstruction. It had its effect."

Mr. McCarthy's surmises as to the process of Mr. Gladstone's conversion to Home Rule are open to dispute; but few readers, to whatever party they belong, will object to his account of its results. There is less bias in it than might be expected. He is tolerant of the defection of Mr. John Bright and others. He finds excuses even for Mr. W. E. Forster:—

"He was sometimes actually accused, and in good faith, by his accusers of taking a delight in the sufferings of the Irish evicted tenant. Of course this was outrageously and grotesquely unjust and absurd, and it is only mentioned here as a sign of the times and an illustration of the distorting passion of hatred which had grown up amongst many men in Ireland towards some of the Liberal statesmen. Those who knew Mr. Forster, knew well that he was a humane, single-minded, and Christian man. But the truth is that he was not what most people believed him to be—a strong man. His whole appearance, his huge frame, his massive head, his energetic movements, all seemed to proclaim the strong man. But he was not strong in the best meaning of the word; certainly he was not strong enough for the difficulties by which he found himself surrounded. He had enough of personal courage. Where it came to be a question of meeting danger he never took heed of the risk. But, to put it in familiar language, he lost his head when he found himself confronted with the terrible troubles of the Chief Secretary's office in Ireland. He became completely and, if I may use the expression, sentimentally disappointed with the Irish people. He believed that they had failed to appreciate him, that they had not given him enough of their confidence, that they had shown themselves distrustful of him and impatient with him, and so he allowed his heart to turn against them. They were to him the ungrateful people, who would make no allowance for the difficulties with which he was beset, and who turned against him because he could not give them all they asked for at once. Mr. Forster apparently idealised the Irish people, and regarded it as one ungrateful man."

Mr. McCarthy is at his best perhaps in the obituary notices, which fill several chapters, and are sprinkled about in others. In some he is over-fanciful, as when he likens Disraeli to Faust; but his estimate of Disraeli is enriched by a very characteristic anecdote:—

"He cannot be regarded as a great statesman, as statesmanship ought to be considered. He was rather what Carlyle might have called a 'Swiss of Heaven,' and fought for many a cause with which neither his brain nor his heart had any particular sympathy. He had a boundless ambition, and he followed his own star. Men of thorough sincerity, and who had nothing but public purpose to inspire them—men like Gladstone and Cobden and Bright—felt shocked now and then by what seemed to them his lack of earnestness. Not many years before Lord Beaconsfield's death, Bright had spoken of Disraeli's 'sated ambition.' Bright and Disraeli talked one night privately in the House of Commons, and Disraeli suddenly said, 'You know what you and I come here for. We come here for fame.' Bright could not succeed in persuading him that he, Bright, at least did not go to the House of Commons for fame. Disraeli smiled blandly, and almost pityingly, and declined discussion."

Many of the notable men and women who have died within the past seventeen years were Mr. McCarthy's personal friends, and, though he says little that is new about them, there is refreshing geniality in his mention of George Eliot, Carlyle, Browning, Tennyson, R. L. Stevenson, Du Maurier, Ford Madox Brown, Dean Stanley, Cardinal Manning, Henry Fawcett, Lord Randolph Churchill, Charles Bradlaugh, and others. In some cases there is a lack of proportion. While Darwin is disposed of in a page and a half and Sir John Millais in two sentences, five pages are devoted to Sir Isaac Pitman and four to Blondin; and while there are nine sentences about one foreign dancer, Taglioni, eleven are found sufficient for three English men of letters—William Morris, Coventry Patmore, and "Tom" Hughes.

There is a like disproportion in Mr. McCarthy's references to public affairs. He has been content to write about matters in which he is interested, or of which he claims to know something, or which he remembered at the time of writing; others he slurs over or ignores. Filling nearly a fourth or a fifth of his volume with Irish questions, he barely mentions Scotland—indeed, the word only appears once in the index, where the entry is "Scotland Yard, dynamite explosion in." Minute and diffuse on some subjects of minor importance, he is silent concerning much about which instruction would be useful. Of the proceedings in Parliament throughout several sessions he says practically nothing, but as compensation some items of information are impressed upon the memory by repetition. Thus Speaker Peel's retirement in 1895 provokes the same reflections as Speaker Brand's retirement in 1884, and the reader is asked thrice in almost the same words—twice in one paragraph—to condole with the occupant of the chair because he has to sit in it "on an ordinary day, when the House is not in committee, from three o'clock until half-past twelve, midnight, or thereabouts, with one single interval of about twenty minutes for food of some kind."

"It would be hard," says Mr. McCarthy, "to expect that the ordinary British householder should take the trouble to make himself acquainted with our policy in foreign countries." That, if the assumption is correct, would seem to be a reason for the historian taking some trouble to inform him. Mr. McCarthy does not do so here. When he says anything at all about foreign and colonial affairs his remarks are apt to be unintelligible or misleading to the reader who is not already cognizant of the facts. In one short chapter, for instance, sympathy is bespoken for Arabi Pasha, but no attempt is made to explain or criticize British policy in Egypt. In another we are told that "Gordon was still shut up in Khartoum," but there is no account of the circumstances that took him there, and next to none of the sequel. The references to last year's operations are yet more disjointed. "We have already spoken," writes Mr. McCarthy, "of the advance that was made along the Nile southward to Dongola, and the skill and the success of the expedition." But where? The passage is not in this volume.

Mr. McCarthy's concluding chapters will scarcely rank as "history" a year or two hence. One, given up to the recent expedition to Benin, which he localizes "in northern or almost in Equatorial Africa," was evidently compiled in great haste from one or two newspaper articles written before the facts were known. Another chronicles the proceedings of the South Africa Committee which is now sitting, and passes judgment in favour of Mr. Rhodes, in terms which might lead the reader to suppose that the business had been already finished were it not for this closing sentence—due, it would seem, to an afterthought: "The question, however, is still, and is likely to be for a long time, a matter of public inquiry, and this writer at least can only patiently await the result."

The shortcomings of this volume may be in part attributed to the severe illness from which Mr. McCarthy is fortunately recovering, and which has aroused for him widespread and hearty sympathy. But it is a pity that he did not delay its issue till he was able to make it worthier of his well-earned reputation, especially as it purports to "review all that has happened in the affairs of the Empire" up to a date which has not yet been reached.

The Eclogues of Virgil. Translated into English Hexameter Verse by the Right Hon. Sir George Osborne Morgan, Bart., Q.C., M.P. (Frowde.)

The Pharsalia of Lucan. Translated into Blank Verse by Edward Ridley, Q.C. (Longmans & Co.)

To those who have known Sir George Osborne Morgan only as a politician his volume will come as something of a surprise; but a former Craven Scholar and Newdigate Prizeman must possess qualifications which justify him in lightening the arid toils of Parliamentary life by the "elegant exercise" of classical translation. Sir George tells his reader that his original purpose was to translate the whole of Virgil; but, less fortunate than the great leader to whom he dedicates his volume, he has been unable, as yet at least, to complete his task, and has confined himself to that part of the Roman poet's work which has been least frequently handled by translators. His preface makes a claim which requires a brief notice, namely that, in translating Virgil into his own metre, he is undertaking a task which has never been attempted before; to which is added the avowal that "of course a writer who ventures on so novel and bold an experiment can expect but scant mercy from the critics." Sir George, however, is not so revolutionary as he supposes, having been anticipated by a trifle of three centuries, and by no less notable a person than one of the first translators of Virgil into English verse, Richard Stanyhurst, whose version of the first four books of the Æneid in hexameters was published in 1582. No doubt it will be a disappointment to Sir G. Osborne Morgan to find that, instead of being a radical reformer, he is in fact a pronounced reactionary; but so far as the critics are concerned, his alarm is unnecessary. A critic would be glad to welcome a good translation into English hexameters; and the very rarity of the experiment is the more likely to attract his attention and interest.

Sir George's version, it may be said at once, attains a fair measure of success; at the same time it illustrates once again the difficulty of writing musical hexameters in English. That this can be done, at any rate in short passages, has been shown by Kingsley; that it must be done, if the version is to represent the rhythms of Virgil, will be obvious to all who can read Latin. It does not quite follow that, because Virgil wrote in Latin hexameters, therefore English hexameters will faithfully reproduce his style. The Virgilian hexameter is essentially musical; the English hexameter is almost inevitably harsh. Even when it is well written, its character is nearer to the hexameter of Homer or of Lucretius than to that of Virgil; and it would need a really great artist in verse to make the English hexameter faithfully represent the musical charm of Virgil's measures.

An example or two will show how far Sir G. Osborne Morgan has achieved success:

Vagabonds we! Some fly to the thirsty regions of Afric,
Some to Scythia, and some to the rushing Cretan Oaxes,
Some to the Britons, from us by the whole of the Universe severed.
And shall I ever again in the far-off years of the future
Gaze on the turf-crowned roof of yonder poor little cabin?
Gaze on the straggling corn, the remains of what once was my kingdom?
Fallow-lands trim, such as these, shall a godless soldier inherit?
Barbarous hands reap these crops? Ah! where has disunion hurled you?
Citizens, children of woe! see for whom we have planted our acres!

It may be objected that "universe" is not a correct translation of orbe, and that neither "Britons, from," nor "woe! see for," nor "hands reap these" is a good dactyl; but the whole passage is readable and not ineffective. The following, from the tenth Eclogue, is better:—

Naiads! what were the glades or what were the forests that held you,
When, of unworthy love, the gentle swain lay a-dying?
Surely not Helicon's heights, nor yet the ridges of Pindus,
Hindered your onward flight, nor Aonia's fount Aganippe.
Him, too, the laurel wept, and the lowly tamarisk also:
Him, as he lay forlorn in the jaws of the desolate mountain,
Pine-crowned Mænalus wept, and the rocks of the icy Lycæus.
Round him his sheep stand still; they turn not away from their shepherd.

There is no abstract reason why the hexameter should not be an effective English measure. No doubt we scan by accent and the ancients by quantity; but the same might be said of iambic verse, and yet our blank verse is as fine an instrument of poetry as the Greek iambic trimeter. Some day, perhaps, a great artist in verse will arise and teach us how hexameters should be written, just as Virgil taught his countrymen, and as Pope taught his contemporaries how the heroic couplet should be written, or as Milton and Tennyson set standards for blank verse. But it has not been done yet, in spite of some fine passages by Kingsley, and the effective, but quite peculiar hexameters of Clough. And when it is done the hexameters of Sir G. Osborne Morgan, really good though many of them are, will, no less than those of Stanyhurst, rank in the pre-artistic age, like the heroics of Jonson and Donne.

No verse translation of Lucan has been published in England during the present century, and to the reviewer, satiated with versions of Virgil and Horace, of Homer and Æschylus, this fact alone commends Mr. Justice Ridley's volume to his favourable notice. A further interest has been added to it since its publication through the elevation of Mr. Ridley to the Bench—a promotion which brings his work into the same category as the late Lord Bowen's translation of Virgil. It is satisfactory to have the proof which this volume affords that the latest occupant of the Bench is both a scholar and a man of letters.

There is another consideration, besides that of novelty, which makes Lucan a promising subject for a translator. With the greatest poets of the ancient world success is impossible; and the reader who is acquainted with Homer and Virgil has nothing to do but to note how far each fresh competitor has come short in his efforts. Especially is this the case in dealing with the great artists in language. It is hopeless for any except a poet of the first rank and of kindred gifts to try to reproduce the verbal music, the felicities of phrase, which characterize Virgil or Sophocles. The sense may be transferred from one language to another, but the charm is gone. It is different when the poet to be translated is of lesser rank; it is especially different when, as is the case with Lucan, his merit lies in the vigour of his rhetoric rather than in any delicate workmanship of style. Rhetoric is within the reach of many writers who have never trained themselves in the minute artifices of verbal music, and the rhetoric of the original rouses a corresponding fire in those who read it.

At the same time it is not every one who could produce a version of the 'Pharsalia' which could be read as a work of literature in itself, and in which the style is kept fresh and vigorous throughout. It is no light praise to be able to say that Mr. Justice Ridley has succeeded in realizing this ideal. His blank verse is strong and dignified, and his vocabulary is effective and poetical. The poem moves with a firm step and in thoroughly idiomatic style. The translator rarely flags in his task, though there are parts of Lucan's poem which it is impossible to render interesting. The first book strikes us as particularly well translated, though there are many striking passages in the later books as well. Two extracts may be given as examples of Mr. Justice Ridley's style. The first (from the first book) describes the abandonment of Gaul by Cæsar's legions as he gathers his forces for the march on Rome:—

The tents are vacant by Lake Leman's side;
The camps upon the beetling crags of Vosges
No longer hold the warlike Lingon down,
Fierce in his painted arms; Isère is left,
Who past his shallows gliding, flows at last
Into the current of more famous Rhone,
To reach the ocean in another name.
The fair-haired people of Cevennes are free:
Soft Aude rejoicing bears no Roman keel,
Nor pleasant Var, since then Italia's bound;
The harbour sacred to Alcides' name,
Where hollow crags encroach upon the sea,
Is left in freedom; there nor Zephyr gains
Nor Caurus access, but the Circian blast
Forbids the roadstead by Monœcus' hold.

It is one of the passages which illustrate the effectiveness of proper names in poetry, if rightly handled; and the translator has been equal to it. The other example shall be from the dream of Pompeius before Pharsalia, at the beginning of the seventh book:—

Pompeius on that morn,
To him the latest day of happy life,
In troubled sleep an empty dream conceived.
For in the watches of the night he heard
Innumerable Romans shout his name
Within his theatre; the benches vied
To raise his fame and place him with the gods;
As once in youth, when victory was won
O'er conquered tribes where swift Iberus flows.
And where Sertorius' armies fought and fled,
The west subdued, with no less majesty
Than if the purple toga graced the car,
He sat triumphant in his pure white gown,
A Roman knight, and heard the Senate's cheer.
Perhaps, as ills drew near, his anxious soul
Shunning the future wooed the happy past;
Or, as is wont, prophetic slumber showed
That which was not to be, by doubtful forms
Misleading; or as envious Fate forbade
Return to Italy, this glimpse of Rome
Kind Fortune gave. Break not his latest sleep,
Ye sentinels; let not the trumpet call
Strike on his ear: for on the morrow's night
Shapes of the battle lost, of death and war
Shall crowd his rest with terrors. Whence shalt thou
The poor man's happiness of sleep regain?

On the whole, Lucan, as well as his translator, comes out of the ordeal with credit, and the volume will be found thoroughly readable on its own merits. It is easy to pick holes in Lucan. His faults are many and manifest—the florid rhetoric, the exaggeration, the ostentation of knowledge, the almost Zolaesque delight in exhaustive catalogues of details (as in the list of serpents in the ninth book or the performances of the Thessalian witches in the sixth). But it has been truly said that the man who never makes mistakes will never make anything, and Lucan has many of the qualities of his defects. He has vigour and rhetorical power; above all, he has an individuality. After Virgil he is the only epic poet among his countrymen who possesses an interesting personality or shows any originality in his versification. The rest are mere echoes of Virgil. What he might have done with matured years it is impossible to say, but it should be equally impossible to be blind to the fact that the 'Pharsalia,' as the unfinished work of a youth who died at twenty-six, holds a very remarkable place in the ranks of Roman literature.

La Vraie Jeanne d'Arc. Par J. B. J. Ayroles, S.J. Vol. III. (Paris, Gaume & Cie.)

FATHER AYROLES has now published the third volume of his monumental work, 'La Vraie Jeanne d'Arc.' This tome deals with the Maid in action as "La Libératrice." Father Ayroles first sketches France as she was before the Maid came in the spring of 1429. He introduces the characters in the ensuing drama, the Dauphin, the princes, Trémoille, Gilles de Rais, La Hire, D'Aulon, and he gives an estimate of the military forces of the national party, native militia or foreign auxiliaries. A Gascon himself, the learned father supplies a fuller roll call of Gascon than of Scottish comrades of the Pucelle; and we do not recognize "le comte de Bucland, fils du regent Albany," or "le duc de Darnley." "Bucland" is, obviously, Buchan (p 12). The condition, and the leading men, of the English and Burgundian factions are then described; the state of the art of war, of artillery, of fortification, of Orleans, and the early days of the siege, are made intelligible. The rest of the volume contains all known contemporary accounts of the Maid's campaigns, in chronicles, letters, and so forth, with elaborate criticisms of the value of all these sources. This is a laborious and disinterested piece of work, and is still necessary, even after the toils of Quicherat. Thus Quicherat had not a high opinion of the 'Chronique de la Pucelle,' which he regarded as a compilation made out of the 'Journal du Siège,' the 'Chronique' of Jean Chartier, and the 'Gestes des Nobles Français,' the whole being later than the rehabilitation of the Maid in 1456. As this 'Chronique' contains, for example, Jeanne's feat of second sight in beholding, from Vaucouleurs, the rout of the Scots and French at Rouvray, this portent would vanish into legend if Quicherat is right. Vallet de Visiville, however, has argued for, and is thought to have demonstrated, the contemporary and original character of the 'Chronique de la Pucelle' except where it borrows from the 'Geste,' both 'Geste' and 'Chronique' being, as it seems, the work of a father and a son. These were Guillaume Cousinot, Chancellor of Charles d'Orléans, and his son, Cousinot de Montreuil. As the son lived till 1484 he must have been young in 1429. In any case, the pair are contemporaries, and Father Ayroles thinks that their testimony to the Maid's marvels biassed Quicherat towards the opinion that the 'Chronique de la Pucelle' was late. Quicherat, however, frankly accepted as historical three sets of the Maid's prodigies which he did not profess to explain or to explain away.

The history of Jeanne's campaign is next given in the language of her 'Chronique,' whence we pass to a similar critical and exegetical treatment of the 'Journal du Siège,' the old French being modernized for the readers of to-day. The 'Journal' was apparently written some thirty-five years after the events, doubtless by aid of civic records at Orleans. In this manner Father Ayroles treats all the known texts, French, Burgundian, English, friendly or unfriendly, weighing their value as evidence by their dates and sources, and adding a full, often a textual, citation of their contents. With Jean Chartier's 'Chronique' he has compared a copy of the Latin version now in the Phillipps collection at Cheltenham: the variants between the French and Latin forms are occasionally curious, and the comparison of texts had never been made before. The Latin version avers that Jeanne's wound under the walls of Paris was severe ("atrocissime in crure cum sagitta vulnerata"). It is impossible to follow all this work in detail, but we may note that Father Ayroles does not accept the statement of the greffier of La Rochelle, that Jeanne first reached Chinon on February 23rd, 1429 (accidentally printed "le xxxiii jour de février"). She probably arrived on March 6th, which gives time for the confirmation of her clairvoyance about the Battle of the Herrings to reach Vaucouleurs. A useful source is 'La Chronique dite des Cordeliers,' by a writer of Burgundian sympathies and official position. To him we owe the certainty that Charles VII. practically betrayed the assault on Paris, in which the Maid was, for the first time, defeated. Ten days earlier, as a document given at full length in this chronicle shows, Charles had signed a truce with the Duke of Burgundy (at Compiègne, August 28th) permitting Burgundy "to defend Paris against all assailants," that is, against Jeanne d'Arc. For this reason Charles could scarcely be dragged to St. Denis, and for this reason, too, he declined to let D'Alençon and Jeanne repeat their attack on the city. The policy of intriguing with Burgundy for its possession later, and hampering and delaying the Maid's assault, had the inevitable result. Paris must have fallen, as Bedford and Jeanne both declared, had Charles been loyal. This chronicler says that Jeanne tried to escape from prison by letting herself down with a rope which broke, not by leaping from the castle roof. Her own words at her trial show that she herself regarded the adventure as desperate.

The chief trouvaille of the learned father is the set of Venetian reports given as 'La Chronique de Morosini.' It consists of letters written chiefly by a Venetian gentleman to his father during the brief and brilliant career of the Pucelle. In 1893 Father Ayroles learned, rather vaguely, from a review of a book by Mlle. Butti, that there existed copies of these letters at Venice and at Vienna. His earlier applications for a transcript were unsuccessful. At the request, however, of M. Léopold Delisle, M. Castellani, of the Marcian Library, had a transcript made of the Morosini letters. The Viennese MS. (the original) has been entrusted to the Bibliothèque Nationale. Father Ayroles's version of the part of the Morosini MSS. bearing on Jeanne d'Arc has been collated with both the Venetian and Viennese documents. The writer of the best of the letters, "Our Foreign Correspondent" of 1429–31, was one Justiniani, residing in Bruges. He is not an eye-witness, he only records rumours which arrive from France and Burgundy. His first letter was begun on May 10th, 1429, two days after the raising of the siege of Orleans. The letter reached Venice on June 18th. At Bruges he knew, on or soon after May 10th, of the fall of Les Tourelles on May 7th, but his story is exaggerated. Talbot was not really taken prisoner. He says that Jeanne has promised to bring Charles into Paris by St. John's day, which is not more correct. He adds that, by aid of the Pucelle, "Charles has had a vision," and she said the same at her trial. This is curious, as we have no other reference to a vision beheld by the Dauphin. The report, from an English source, that "several who mocked at the Maid have died an ill death," must refer to Glasdale, and, perhaps, to the French soldier who insulted her at Chinon, according to her almoner Pasquerel. "She reasons so well that one would think her another St. Catherine." "They say that she shall accomplish two other great feats—and then die!"

All this is picturesque. Jeanne was not wont to speak of her saints, and the comparison with St. Catherine drawn by Justiniani must be an accidental coincidence. Already her doom hangs over the Maid: "fo dito da può, die far la dita damixela do altry gran fati, e quela da può die morir." She won Patay, she crowned the king, and she died. The popular presentiment is strange; we know from D'Alençon that Jeanne often said "she should last a year, or little more." The other letters often contain news wholly false, as that Charles took Rouen and Paris in the summer of 1429! The story that Jeanne had promised to recover the Holy Land is possibly true; her idea was first to free France and then to settle the Eastern Question. The story that she detected an unconsecrated Host is given here alone in a long letter of July 9th, 1429, a collection of information from many witnesses. No mention is made of her early visions of saints, which tends to confirm the opinion that she never spoke publicly of them till compelled to do so at her trial. Her prophecy of her arrow-wound at Orleans is reported, as by Pasquerel, but, indeed, this prediction was on written record three weeks before the event. On the whole, save for some minor inaccuracies, this letter (from Burgundian sources) confirms all that is known of the saintliness of the Pucelle and of her efforts to reform the morality of the nation and the army. We hear nothing of the manner of the capture of Jeanne, but it is said that St. Catherine promised her a home in Paradise.

Fragmentary as these notices are, they are full of interest, especially as the news came to Justiniani from the hostile Burgundians. The devoted industry of Father Ayroles has been rewarded by the discovery of the Morosini letters. We wish it were possible to hope for fresh English documents, or for the lost fragment of the 'Liber Pluscardensis.'

The last of the letters in the Morosini collection (June, 1431) says that the French burned the Maid. "Lisez: Anglais, les faux Français," writes Father Ayroles. But "les vrais Français" did very little to help or ransom the Pucelle, if they did anything.

A History of Moray and Nairn. By Charles Rampini, LL.D. [Blackwood & Sons.]

Sheriff Rampini might very well write an excellent volume of local chit-chat, but he was quite unqualified to undertake a county history. The task is no light one. Archæology, ethnology, etymology, geology, architecture, and history, both natural and national—a knowledge of all these subjects is desirable; Sheriff Rampini seems familiar with not one. To mere carelessness may fairly be ascribed such statements as that "Episcopacy was re-established for the last time in 1641," that "in 1662 came the Restoration," or that Archibald Douglas was killed both at Arkinholm (p. 147) and at Darnaway (p. 219). But what can one make of the following?—

"The fifteen years during which John Guthrie held the see of Moray (1623-1638) were years of trouble and confusion. James VI. was dead. The Covenanters were in arms against their king, Charles I., and their cause was distinctly prospering."

This, if it means anything, should mean that James VI. was dead by 1623, and that the Covenanters were in arms throughout the next fifteen years; as a matter of fact there were, of course, no Covenanters until 1638, and not a blow had been struck when Guthrie was deposed. Again:—

"In 1681 the Duke of York came to Scotland as Lord High Commissioner, and presided over the sittings of that important parliament which declared the National Covenant and the Solemn League and Covenant to be unlawful.....The abolition of the Covenant and the imposition of the Test were almost immediately followed by the adoption of stringent measures."

Does Sheriff Rampini seriously believe that the Covenant was first abolished in 1681? has he never heard (say) of the battle of Rullion Green? If so, we may safely pass by his extraordinary opinion, which it would take over long to confute—chap. viii. of Mr. S. R. Gardiner's 'History' triumphantly confutes it—that Presbyterianism in 1606 "was as yet a plant of too young and weakly a growth to be able to withstand the efforts of a king backed by all the bishops and clergy of the Church of England, and in due time it yielded to their united efforts. Episcopacy was restored."

It is the same throughout. Sheriff Rampini writes with some fulness of the priory of Pluscarden and the abbey of Kinloss, and casually remarks that "the Blackfriars were Benedictines"; of Elgin Cathedral, and tells us that "the chapter-house occupies its proper place in the north-west of the building," that "the transept consisted of a single aisle supported by four massive pillars," and that "the choir, 100 feet long, was divided into three aisles for five bays (or 80 feet) of its length; the remaining portion of 80 feet was one-aisled only." Under Kinloss he mentions the "celebrated painter" Andrew Bairhum, without saying who he was; the "distinguished abbot" Robert Reid, but not that he became Bishop of Orkney; and the "celebrated Piedmontese scholar" Joannes Ferrerius, but never a word of his Latin history of the Abbots of Kinloss, which was printed by the Bannatyne Club in 1839. The Wolf of Badenoch, who was no Celt at all, is designated "a Celtic Attila," and "resembles one of those half-human, halfbestial barons depicted in Erckmann-Chatrian's romances"! Frendraught is misplaced in Banffshire; Inverlochy is "now Fort William"; and Lord James Stuart was born in 1533, and was "created Earl of Moray by the queen at Aberdeen on 1st June, 1566." For the antiquities of Burghead Sheriff Rampini has rightly gone to Dr. James Macdonald, but we doubt if on one point he has owned his full obligation. Surely the baptistery theory of the "Roman Well" is Dr. Macdonald's, and not the Sheriff's own. To describe the Castle of Lochindorb, and not to say that it was built upon a crannog; to rely for etymologies on Lachlan Shaw; to give pre-Ordnance altitudes of hills, and statistics for 1881, when statistics for 1896 are equally available; to cite Patrick Duff's 'Sketch of the Geology of Moray' (1842) as an authority, instead of Mr. Peach's masterly monograph (1883); and utterly to ignore the writings of Dr. Joseph Anderson, Prof. Rhys, and Messrs. Macgibbon and Ross—it is not in this way county histories should be written.

The annals of Moray are none too rich, but Sheriff Rampini has far from exhausted them. Thus he might have recorded that the Catholic victory of Glenlivet (1594) was celebrated by the last Mass sung in Elgin Cathedral; he might have told something of Richard Franck's, Dr. Johnson's, and Henry Mackenzie's visits to the district, with something more of Burns's and the Water-poet's; he might have glanced at the marvellous career of an Elgin unworthy, Dr. Robert Watson; the drainage of the old Loch of Spynie between 1609 and 1860 demanded fuller treatment; and the Sobieski Stuarts might well have received a word. They lived for a dozen years in Alves and Edinkillie parishes, where the Earl of Moray gave them the run of Darnaway Forest; and their 'Lays of the Deer Forest' (1848) is one of the best works on sport and much else in Moray. On the other hand, we note an immense amount of irrelevant matter which had much better been left out. The murder of the "Bonnie Earl" at Donibristle has already been fully told by Sheriff Mackay in his 'History of Fife,' which so admirably opened this series; and the writer of the forthcoming volume on Inverness-shire will surely regard the narrative of Culloden as a poaching on his domain. Both events, however, do belong in a way to the history of Moray, but not so the siege of Dunbar, the caging of the Countess of Buchan, the careers of Wallace and Balliol, the battles of Stirling and Falkirk, the long note on Colkitto, or the minute accounts of the travels of Gordon-Cumming and Grant.

The one part of the book that is good, and really good, is the fifty or so pages devoted to the folk-lore of the district. The account of the fisher-folks of Mavistoun, those Gothamites of the North, adds a new chapter to the 'Book of Noodles.' Then there is the strange system of tabu among Moray fishermen generally by which salmon must always be mentioned on board a boat only as "Spey codling," or a horse as the "four-footed beast," or a well-known landmark, the Tam o' Ron, as the "bank o' red yird." And there is a curious story how "fifty years ago and less" (we could have wished a preciser date) "a clay image, or corps creagh, nearly life-size, was found under a dripping bank of the river near the town of Nairn. It was so placed that the water dropped over its heart. When broken open it was found full of needles and pins. It had been placed there by a notorious witch of the day, who had been hired by a girl to compass the death of a man who had slighted her. When the clay dissolved the man would certainly die. He was only saved from that fate by the accidental discovery of the image."

NEW NOVELS.

Mrs. Crichton's Creditor. By Mrs. Alexander. (White & Co.)

THE rather vulgar old Scotswoman, Norman Adair's mother, will certainly be forgiven by most readers for her interference in the rapid intimacy between her son and the charming Gwendoline Crichton. A young married woman with an ill-conditioned husband and a young old friend of the opposite sex is in a perilous position. Yet Mrs. Alexander does her best to assure us that so disinterested and excellent a pair are safe in their platonic devotion. We probably owe the accident which removes the churlish stockbroker to a land where speculation is at rest to some misgiving on her part in the absolute security of the position. So far as it lasts, we are bound to say Norman is the pink of discretion and respectful allegiance, and Gwendoline as reticent as it is possible for a wife so ill appreciated to be. But we cannot affect much interest in the story, which is only successful in showing how a book may be filled with fluent narrative and perfectly just descriptions of the incidents of common life, and yet leave no impression and suggest no inference.

Old Corcoran's Money. By Richard Dowling. (Chatto & Windus.)

"DON'T be talkin', but you 're a wonderful masther of languige." Mr. Prendergast's compliment to McDonnell, who certainly talks much "like a book," may be transferred to the author in acknowledgment of the assiduity with which he maintains the brogue in the mouths of all his characters. In other respects the surroundings of a country town in the south of Ireland are faithfully presented. And there can be no question that the complications which involve the lost money are intricate to a degree which may well have puzzled even so efficient an officer as Head Constable Cassidy. But it cannot be said that there is much relief to the general squalor, meanness, and ferocity which are the characteristics of nearly every inhabitant of Ballymore with whom we make acquaintance. Corcoran the miser himself, only saved from imbecility by the precarious generosity of his affection for the boy he has advanced in the world; Butler, the gentleman farmer, who is willing to sacrifice his daughter's happiness if the aged usurer will take her hand as the equivalent of his mortgage-money; the treacherous Prendergast, who would promote McDonnell's marriage with Mary Butler because he is confident the young man will be convicted of the robbery from Corcoran; the bully O'Gorman, dumb Slattery the maniac, and O'Hoollaghan the fool, are about as detestable a set of personages as we have met in fiction. The hero McDonnell and one or two of the women have redeeming qualities; but the story, strong in incident throughout, and not infrequently picturesque in description, is too uniformly pessimistic in its view of character.

Only a Flirt. By Mrs. Robert Jocelyn. (White & Co.)

MRS. JOCELYN tells her last story with sufficient sincerity to make the reader resentful of the undeserved good fortune which attends the commonplace and not too well-bred Capt. Darrington. To make love to a friend's daughter, not sixteen and not out of the schoolroom, and to secure her affections without alarming her relations, and without the faintest notion of ultimate marriage, is a poor performance for a man of the world of nearly double her age. Darrington has the grace occasionally to see the meanness of his proceedings; but the mischief is done, and Sibyl Desmond, in spite of the native intelligence which makes her early alive to the very superficial nature of his admiration, is hopelessly and irrevocably in love with his regular features, liberal inches, and persuasive manner. The pity of it is the very unsportsmanlike nature of the original capture. Sibyl has too good a head to have been so betrayed by the heart had she had but a little law. As it is, her conduct in difficult circumstances is not unnatural, and while practising general flirtation as a means of correcting the too great complacency of her lover, she is straightforward and womanly in her attitude to the two honest men of good degree whose attentions to her are in earnest. That she can stick to her first lover, although bitterly conscious that his feelings are far less engaged than her own and that he is incapable of any sacrifice for her sake, is true to the nature of many of the best of her sex, though hardly in the newest mode. But Sibyl is a trifle old-fashioned, though pleasant enough to excuse an otherwise rather thin, conventional story.

Ripple and Flood. By James Prior. (Hutchinson & Co.)

To write this novel must have been easier than it is to read it. The book contains a great deal of good material, and some clever sketches of contemporary life in the Trent valley, which a painter might appreciate. But the interest of the story is affected by an unsuccessful effort to tell it autobiographically, and by a want of proportion in its component parts. The history of Edward Allius, afterwards Harrison, brought up as a ploughboy and subsequently as a painter, needs a hand more skilled in literary art. There is no other reason why the book should be as long and as dull as it is.

Blight. By Mrs. Walter Forbes. (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.)

THERE are, probably, readers who enjoy fiction that deals with the ways of the aristocracy. Mrs. Forbes's narrative abounds in duchesses, earls, and persons of title; and it no doubt depicts their manners, their quarrels, and their sympathies with taste, and at times with literary skill. Yet we find it difficult to think that the book will interest any but those who wish to read of titled people. It is not a novel in the ordinary sense of the term, but a narrative. "Blight" is the nickname of a lady who injures the lives and happiness of many of the noble lords and ladies. She is represented as a spiteful and revengeful woman; but she fails to interest the reader. The story is poor as a whole, and might have been much better written. In one place we read, "Long green glades gave galloping ground good enough to rouse the laziest horseman"; and it would be curious to speculate whether the alliteration is due to accident or design.

The Lady Grange. By Alexander Innes Shand. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

In the Highlands, and even in Edinburgh, in the middle of the eighteenth century, anything, as Mr. Shand explains in his opening chapter, including the sequestration of a high-born lady, was possible. The spirit of disaffection was still very much abroad. Highland chieftains, absolute in their own territories, were, for the most part, open to bribery, and no enemies to deeds of violence. The Lady Grange held Jacobite secrets which were enough to betray her husband and his boon companion to the block. She was, moreover, a shrew, of not unimpeachable character, and impossible to live with. The history of her abduction, her confinement in one remote fastness or unapproachable island after another, her futile struggles for liberty, and the final quenching of her strong spirit and stronger body, are well told, as is the vacillating remorse of Lord Grange and the brutal atrocity of Lovat. The book, however, is wanting in dramatic force, and is decidedly monotonous. The lady's friendship with the minister's daughter on St. Kilda's provides an incident of which too little is made. It is rather in the author's capacity for describing rugged scenery, and in the picture of the times that the story suggests, that the interest of it will be found.

A Princess of Islam. By J. W. Sherer, C.S.I. (Sonnenschein & Co.)

Were the writer possessed of more literary grace of style, 'A Princess of Islam' would be more agreeable reading. It is a touching story of a Mohammedan princess married to a young Englishman, a member of the uncovenanted service in India. For reasons of state the Englishman is made to believe that she died during his absence in England, and he marries again. The princess then has an opportunity of showing true nobility of character. The novel cannot boast of very wide attraction; but it may be commended to the notice of all who are interested in Zenana missions.

Pilgrims of the Night. By Sarah Doudney. (Addison.)

Miss Doudney has ever a religious aim; but in her present book there is a little incongruity, as if the author, having determined to write a "novel," felt bound to skirt the verge of "sexual problems," which, as all the world knows, are, or were yesterday, the most essential elements of that kind of literary dish. But then propriety has come to the rescue; so the lax-principled Bennet Daughton, of artistic and desultory temperament, marries his low-born love, and boredom is substituted for perfidy. Again, when the same commonplace egotist has wound himself up to an elopement with the frivolous, but hard-natured Leila Wooledge, the lady backs out at the last moment, much preferring lawful matrimony with a millionaire. If these reservations give a certain insipidity to the passionate part of the narrative, it must be granted that in Dulcie Daughton (née Goss) we have a good study of patient love elevating and refining an otherwise unattractive character. That the composition of short stories should be part of this development is a questionable feature; though that Bennet should appreciate his wife's accomplishment is a remarkable proof of the completeness of his conversion. These and other results are effected through the instrumentality of a sect of "Faith-healers," the "Pilgrims of the Night," who are beyond literary criticism. The fact that they are commendably free from bigotry, and convinced of the supernatural efficacy of sympathetic will, connects them in these later days with the primitive ages of faith. The gentle enthusiasts who under their leader, the cobbler, attend the funeral of "Sister Avory," bear witness to a modern form of an ancient trait of human nature, and their presentment by the author is not uninteresting.

The Winds of March. By George Knight. (Jarrold & Sons.)

Novelists appear in want of a formula to represent the respective ages of hero and heroine at marriage. George Knight might make use of the following: let x be the man's age, and y the lady's; then $^x + 7 = y$, and would be true of any value for x. One of the author's dramatis personæ in working out the relation of the diameter and circumference of a circle to one thousand places of decimals says that the 811th to the 990th figures recur—a proposition worthy of inclusion in De Morgan's 'Budget of Paradoxes.' Seriously, the melodramatic elements in the story are overdone, and quite overbalance the mathematics above referred to. The story is one of Liverpool in recent years; it is graphic and forcible, but shows more promise than performance. We do not often come across a heroine in fiction who is willing and able to perform an obstetrical operation at a moment's notice.

A Full Confession. By F. C. Philips. (Constable & Co.)

There is not much to say about this little trifle. The story is almost amusingly commonplace and conventional—about a girl who runs away from school to marry a young man she had met a dozen times, and her adventures in Paris and elsewhere when she lost him. The best bit in the book is the description of the music-hall director who annexes her and brings her out in the halls; but he does not last long, and the book ends appropriately with the return of the husband, who proves to be a lord and a friend of the son of the Duke of Wessex.

Le Double Joug. Par Jean Bertheroy. (Paris, Colin & Cie.)

Although 'Le Double Joug' contains at the end of the volume a very short story, the novel that gives its name to the book is so considerable that we cannot treat it as contained in what is called a volume of short stories. Did a healthy man of twenty-three, who had been living a materialistic life with an attractive married woman with whom he was not in love while waiting for the time fixed for his marriage with a charming woman of twenty, ever kill himself because he could not decide what to say to both or either? M. Bertheroy's catastrophe is false to the life which he describes, but his characters are well sketched, and his book may attract those who like this kind of study.

THE LITERATURE OF IRISH SPORT.

The Sportsman in Ireland, by a Cosmopolite (Arnold), a condensed reprint of which forms vol. iii. of the "Sportsman's Library," is a happy selection, for if less trustworthy in its details of sport, it is unquestionably more entertaining than either of the previous volumes. The first of these dealt with fox-hunting in England, the second with a sporting tour in Scotland, whilst the present is a description of the shooting and fishing of Southern and Western Ireland as they were in the first half of this century. The liberties the author has taken with fact are amusing rather than misleading, and they begin by his attempt to pose as an Englishman, an endeavour not uncommon amongst his countrymen before his day and after, and one which usually deceives no one save perhaps themselves. The fertility of imagination and the exuberance of the language employed recall vividly the celebrated oration of the Member for Ballyhooly. But after all this is in keeping with the scenes and adds to the entertainment of the reader. The sport enjoyed was fishing in rivers, lakes, and the sea; for the little shooting that is mentioned partook rather of wanton destruction of sea-birds than the pursuit of game, the author and his friend the Major avoiding preserves and entertaining a noble contempt for their owners. Salmon roe was the favourite bait, though lines, after the fashion of long lines at sea, baited with small trout and eels, were shot in the deep parts of the lakes and hauled in after some hours had been spent fly-fishing or trolling. Pike from 30 to 40 lb. weight are said to be not unusual, whilst the weights of trout mentioned are still more abnormal:—

"The first thing that aroused my surprise at Athlone was the continued exposure for sale of trout of eight, ten, or fifteen pounds each, which seemed to excite no admiration among the people.....The fly was not attempted, as in this lake, trout of fifty and sixty pounds are to be found, which can only be taken by trailing. Here Lady Headley succeeded in landing a trout of twenty-seven pounds weight. Although that size is considered ordinary," &c.

The estuary trout is mentioned as a species new to the author, though common in Ireland and in some Scotch rivers. He calls it "a bastard" between the common and sea trout—surely a strange expression evolved from some curious mental confusion. It may or may not be the result of a cross. Many agree with Sir Herbert Maxwell in thinking that it is an ordinary river trout modified in appearance by the tidal water in which it lives. The illustrations are generally good, and have just sufficient tendency to caricature to match the text. This quality is possibly a little over-done in the drawing opposite p. 171, for, the fish having leapt, the strain is off the line, yet the rod is shown with a curve that would do honour to many pounds. With a fish in that position the rod should be straight and lowered and the line slack.

Another work dealing with the same country and similar sport more recently pursued is entitled Wild Sports in Ireland, by John Bickerdyke (Upcott Gill). The author's agreeable style and his evident kind feeling towards the Irish peasantry make the little book (a reprint for the most part of articles in weekly papers) pleasant reading, whilst sufficient information is conveyed to be of service to the reader. Regarding Irish troubles, poverty is considered to be the root, and

"the more sportsmen visit its mountains, bogs, rivers, and loughs, leaving English gold behind them in exchange for Irish salmon, white trout, gillaroo, grouse, and snipe, the better it will be for the 'distressed counthry.'"

No doubt; but as a preliminary the brutal Saxon would like some security that he gets the sport he pays for. Whilst land and water are liable to be poached at the pleasure of the peasantry, it is scarcely a matter of surprise that Englishmen prefer to expend their money elsewhere. Were it not for this, we believe Ireland would be a veritable paradise for poor sportsmen, who can no longer afford the expensive luxury of Scotch moors and rivers. John Bickerdyke writes of the estuary trout mentioned above, only whereas Cosmopolite calls it a lob, he terms it slob, and considers it to be identical with the ordinary trout. Certainly we think there is too great a tendency to admit without sufficient proof new varieties of the salmon tribe and to distinguish them by Latin names. The only one of the newer sort we are prepared to recognize is the Salmo irritans baptized by Bickerdyke and sung by Andrew Lang; with him we have had personal acquaintance. The forty-pound pike, too, is perhaps explained in chap. xiii.; it is said that he probably does exist and may have been caught, but that the captures defy investigation. Nevertheless he who has not a story of one is no pike fisherman. The illustrations of this bright little book deserve to be praised.

RECENT VERSE.

THE series of poems entitled Joan the Maid, by Mr. J. Huntley Skrine (Constable & Co.), has some thought and tenderness to recommend it. The song of the Basque standard-bearer appeals to us by its dash and vigour, and Thomas de Courcelles is dignified and somewhat pathetic. But Mr. Skrine's metres are unfortunate. He has chosen too often to write in short lines, and seems seldom to have left himself room in them for what he wished to say. He clears the way for his nouns by a wholesale sacrifice of articles—or do they call them "demonstrative adjectives" in these daring days that have made all things new, even grammar? A certain clumsiness inevitably follows, and the reader is annoyed by such phrases as "step of Joan at door," "Yet I for her could hold banner up," "from saddle tree," and "girt with caitiff sark"—whatever this last may mean. Mr. Skrine seems to have said his say on the subject of Joan of Arc in his 'Joan the Maid,' and we wish he had been contented with that. The verses that follow are somewhat superior in poetic merit; but their real value is in their sterling and strong patriotic feeling—a sentiment foreign to the artificial muse of most minor-verse writers. There is something so strenuous, so manly, so entirely earnest and noble, about Mr. Skrine's enthusiasm for his country, as expressed in these verses, that we long to shake him by the hand, and could find it in our hearts to forgive him for all his faults of form were they twice as many and twice as glaring. The following poem is not a fair example of Mr. Skrine's patriotic and heroic feeling, but it strikes a true note and deserves quotation:—

REWARD.

What shall the brave in soul attain
Who shape a thought in act and life,
What guerdon to redeem the pain,
What victor palm beyond the strife,
When the worn spirits pass to wait
In silence with the silent great?

Men say "It were reward for all—
For hours of strife an age of fame!"
Ah! faint, methinks, the echoes fall
Of mortals' praise or mortals' blame,
When breaks upon the widening soul
The deep archangel trumpet-roll.

Nay, brothers, neath the Eternal Eyes
One human joy shall touch the just,
To know their spirits' heirs arise
And lift their purpose from the dust;
The father's passion arms the son,
And the great deed goes on, goes on.

The publishers of Piccadilly Poems: Vers de Société, by Mr. J. L. Owen (Roxburghe Press), are good enough to relieve its critics of their tedious duties by telling them what they ought to say about it. It reached us considerately accompanied by a type-written intimation to the following effect:—

"Mr. Owen's powerful word-pictures of 'Society' both East and West are a revelation, and are boldly while delicately touched with the life of the scenes depicted.....Mr. Owen's previous work 'Lyrics from a Country Lane' will doubtless sufficiently speak for the coming book."

We do not remember reading 'Lyrics from a Country Lane,' though many books of verse have reached us, at different times, from a "Town Lane," otherwise yclept Vigo Street; and after a perusal of 'Piccadilly Poems' we shall certainly never repair the omission. We have found Mr. Owen's "word-pictures" neither "powerful" nor "a revelation," except, indeed, of the unlucky vulgarity of their writer, and of the amazing tolerance of the average magazine editor. So far from their being "boldly while delicately touched with the life of the scenes depicted" (whatever that remarkable phrase may imply), we have no hesitation in describing them as at once feeble and coarse, both in sentiment and execution. A single verse from 'A Ballad of Boxing Night' will, we venture to say, justify the foregoing strictures:—

I saw the willowy figures glide
And sway in the mazy dance,
And billowy bosoms, like the tide,
Rise and fall as waves advance.
But those waves were warm, and jewels bright
Gleamed on that human tide,
And luminous eyes shed softer light
Than even the moon outside.

A Trip to Fairyland, by the Rev. John Morgan (Stock), appears to have been merely the honeymoon tour of the poet and his bride. As the author's name plainly promises, the poems are very Welsh indeed, and there is not a gleam of humour from beginning to end. The book concludes with some "free translations of popular Welsh hymns"; but in the earlier portion of the volume the Rev. John Morgan throws sheer Welsh in heavy handfuls at the reader's head. A true love of nature and a true love of the "bride" redeem the book from absolute worthlessness, and the quality of the verse may be judged by the words in which Mr. Morgan expresses his appreciation of the way in which "Creation yields a perfect lyre." After describing "dawn," "noon," "dusk," "burnished wings," "brooklet's murmurs," and "enchanted scenes," his pleasure finds characteristic expression when he says:—

We feel one uniform delight
With the spectacular display.

The Rose-tree of Hildesheim, by Miss Jessie L. Weston (Nutt), is the title of a rather long narrative poem dealing with the loves and sorrows of Konrad and Hildegarde. The tale flows on with some smoothness, and the style has no strength of fault or of merit. Some passable songs and a series of poems on King Arthur's knights complete a little volume in no way interesting or remarkable. The author's most annoying characteristic is the persistent use of certain words, always a snare to the novice in the writing of narrative verse. "Adown," "erst," "aye," are all too obviously chosen because they fill the line, not because they fit the thought. The sudden addition of two redundant syllables in the first line of an heroic couplet comes rather as a shock:—

And as the Benediction of the Presence falls
On all who bow within these hallowed walls.

We suppose that Miss Weston could find no shorter word for "Benediction," and thought a syllable or two more or less of no account.

"Solemn stars" and "white moths," "silver stairs" and "pearly treasures," with other pale virginal objects, have been woven by Miss Irene Putnam into a series of Songs without Answer (Putnam's Sons), quite harmless and well-meaning, if a little thin. Indeed, the delicate soul of the author pleads so plaintively through her work that to adjudge in plain English the value of her poems would be like breaking one of her own "white moths" with a sledge-hammer. Therefore let the rest be silence.

ECONOMIC LITERATURE.

Lectures of Adam Smith. Edited with an Introduction and Notes by Edwin Cannan. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The efforts made in recent years to place before us the surroundings of Adam Smith, the books that he studied, the plan on which he built up his magnum opus, contrast curiously and somewhat sadly with the more successful efforts made by Adam Smith himself to destroy the incomplete fragments of his writings, and even the more complete works unworthy, in his opinion, of publication. Few narratives of death-beds of lone and aged men whose delight in life has been in their studies are more characteristic and more touching than the history of the destruction of the "thin folio paper books" which had remained so long "within the glass folding doors of a bureau" in the bedroom of a man conscious of the fact that his memory, childless as he was, could be perpetuated only by his writings—conscious also of the influence which his works had exerted, and anxious, as only a great author can be, that nothing unworthy of his fame should survive. Recent years, which have done more justice to the great ability of Adam Smith than many more immediately preceding them, have brought forward students and inquirers desirous to know more about him than had previously been the case. A great deal that is interesting may be found in Mr. John Rae's 'Life of Adam Smith.' The attempt recently and most sympathetically made by Dr. Bonar to reproduce the catalogue of his library introduces us more intimately to his fireside occupations. But the contribution at present before us is even more characteristic, as it explains in a great degree his mode of work with his pupils. It consists of a transcript of notes, apparently taken at the time, of the lectures on Justice, Police, Revenue, and Arms delivered by Adam Smith at Glasgow as Professor of Moral Philosophy. Mr. E. Cannan, as editor, has done his work with great care. He gives good reason in his introduction, pp. xix and xx, for believing that these lectures were delivered towards the close of the period of Adam Smith's occupation of that chair. In 1764 Adam Smith undertook the tutorship of the young Duke of Buccleuch, which was destined to exercise an influence on his own life and mode of thought at least as great as that which he exercised on the mind of his pupil, though different in result. Into this subject, attractive as it is, we must not now go further; we can only refer our readers who desire to follow it up to the interesting narrative in chap. xii. of the 'Life' by Mr. Rae. It is sufficient to state now that in January, 1764, Adam Smith severed his connexion with the University of Glasgow; and as Mr. Cannan, by careful study of the internal evidence, shows that the lectures were "almost certainly" not written earlier than November, 1762, we are brought to see that the date was probably 1763, and that they hence show the subjects which occupied Smith's mind from an economic point of view at the end of his career as University Professor. The manuscript was apparently not written out by the person who took the original notes. These were doubtless the work of a student, who would have avoided the mistakes which the copyist fell into. Mr. Cannan has sought carefully to correct these errors; in doing this he has very wisely disregarded the punctuation of the manuscript, which appears to represent only the ideas of the tran-scriber, and he has not sought to reproduce the spelling of the period, which would only perplex modern students. He has supplied explanatory notes which will be of service to the reader. He has supplemented the original index made at the time, and placed then at the end of the manuscript volume, with a careful index of his own. What will be even more valued, he has added a table of parallel passages in the 'Wealth of Nations,' which will enable the reader at once to follow the gradual growth and building up of that well-known work. The method of composition followed by a great thinker is always of interest, and the economist will find in Mr. Cannan's table of parallel passages a subject for much careful study. Mr. Cannan successfully vindicates the publication from any objection which might be made to it on the ground "that it is an act of impiety towards Adam Smith's memory." The 'Wealth of Nations' has long been a classic among us, and any labour which assists the student of the present day to understand the modus operandi of its author is valuable as an assistance to the science over which he exercised so great an authority. The work has been edited most conscientiously and carefully, and we trust it will find that acceptance which the labour bestowed on it deserves.

Banks and Banking. By H. T. Easton. (Effingham Wilson.)—Though at first sight it might seem scarcely to be expected, the history of banking never loses its interest. Often as chroniclers have been found of the doings of the bankers of old time, Italian, Jewish, or Assyrian, fresh writers continually desire to take up the story, fresh matters of importance arise, fresh points of view from which the questions involved may be observed. The reason we take to be that banking occupies itself with a subject of personal and primary interest to all—the progress of economic and social development. This is traced out in Mr. Easton's pages. The history is continued carefully from the foundation of the Bank of England. Mr. Bagehot's remarks on the monopoly it long possessed are quoted, and also what he said regarding the possible superiority of a permanent head to the Bank rather than a continual change of Governors. It is always an advantage that this sound advice of Mr. Bagehot's should be kept before the public, and Mr. Easton deserves our thanks. The change might be beneficial. A more distinct maintenance of a definite policy might result from it. The position of the Bank of England relatively to the other banks now and at earlier periods is also noted by Mr. Easton, and the gradual changes in the conduct of banking business arising from the difference in the manner in which ordinary business is now carried on. It is clear that in proportion to business done bills are fewer than they used to be; and increased loans on the Stock Exchange appear in some measure to take the place of these documents as a channel for the employment of money. Such loans, however, are scarcely so good a form of investment as bills of exchange. Mr. Easton also relates the history of many other changes in the course of business; thus the following sentence mentions an alteration in the number of cheques drawn and of their size, which is highly characteristic of matters at the present time: "In 1880 Messrs. Glyn, Mills, Currie & Co. cleared 19,950 cheques in one day, of which 2½ per cent. were under 1*l.*; but in 1887 they cleared 13,090, of which 4 per cent. were under 1*l.*" It would be interesting to know the proportion of small cheques to the total number of cheques drawn at the present time. It has probably largely increased since 1887. This "paper" circulation in a form entirely unthought of when our present banking laws were instituted appears likely to extend. Already by far the largest part of the cash transactions of the country are entirely independent of "coin," and are merely "book entries" in some form or other. Many other changes in the course of business will be found chronicled in Mr. Easton's pages. In the words of the preface:—

"The author has endeavoured to show how the deposit of money in a bank has developed into a complex system of finance, and also how capital, wielding an immense power in the present day, is largely under the management and control of our great banking institutions."

The sketch which Mr. Easton has provided is necessarily slight, but it gives the main features of our existing system in a manner which will be very clear to those who have adopted banking as their profession, and who appear from his preface to be those to whom he specially addresses himself. We may observe that Sir R. Giffen is mentioned throughout the book as Mr. Giffen, and that his name on p. 75 is misspelt.

A History of Modern Banks of Issue; with an Account of the Economic Crises of the Present Century. By C. A. Conant. (Putnam's Sons.)—The purpose which Mr. Conant had before him in this work is explained in the first lines of his first chapter. This was "to bring together, in compact form, the leading facts regarding the banks of the world authorized to issue circulating notes and the history of the financial and economic crises through which they have passed." This was a highly useful task to undertake, and Mr. Conant has completely accomplished it. There is no work extant which exactly covers the same ground, or which contains the information thus brought together with so much care and industry; and further, the volume is a good deal more than a mere collection of statistics; it is written in the spirit of a trained economist who has also a good knowledge of the method on which banking operations should be conducted. This imparts to the book a high character. In order to do justice to Mr. Conant's work it is not necessary to trouble the reader with a list of all the banks and banking systems comprised in his pages. It is sufficient to say that every country in the world in which banks of issue exist is commemorated, and a statement is given (clear, concise, and generally accurate) of the system followed. Mr. Conant commences with laying down the principle that the first requirement of a sound banking currency is that the notes issued shall be redeemable in standard coin on demand. This is not merely a test of the solvency of banks, but it goes a good deal further. "It goes to the foundation of the economic and financial system of the country, and regulates its commercial relations with other countries." Again and again throughout his work we find Mr. Conant insisting on the importance of this point. With this view clearly before him it is natural that the "currency principle," the basis of Sir Robert Peel's Act of 1844, should find no favour in his eyes. The years which have elapsed since that Act was passed have shown that while the note circulation of the Bank of England has the fundamental merit of absolute security, it does not possess the convenient adaptability to the wants of the country which the issues of others of the large banks of Europe enjoy. Mr. Conant observes that the question "whether the notes constitute a prior lien on the securities and bullion in the issue department is a point which is not clearly set forth, and has never been judicially decided." We may refer him on this subject to the paper prepared by Mr. Freshfield for the information of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, November, 1856, printed in the Report of the Select Committee on the Bank Acts, 1858, which sets out clearly the position of the matter. On other crucial points also Mr. Conant is absolutely sound, such as the necessity that the banking system should be financially independent of the State. Official supervision may be useful, though the advantages of Government inspection may easily be overrated. But no doubt, like the inspection of outside "auditors," such investigations may be of use by interposing a warning to the too venturesome bank manager. In this way official rules may even be an assistance; but the dealing with the note issue is quite another matter. A Government issue of paper is almost always put out in excess. Pledges may be given that a fixed limit "should never be exceeded"; but again and again, as Mr. Conant reminds us, "this pledge was disregarded." Perhaps M. Thiers summed up the matter most clearly in a few concise words when speaking of the Bank of France—the bank in Europe which has gone through the most severe trials of recent years, and which has done more than any other to support public credit—"The bank saved us because it was not a bank of State." Mr. Conant describes with a strict impartiality the national banking system of the United States. He observes with truth that, great as were its services, it "always lacked the essential feature of a purely banking currency. The currency was without elasticity, in the sense of responsiveness to the demands of business." In this respect the principle on which the note circulation of the Bank of Germany is arranged may be regarded as superior. In the case of that bank the note issues are allowed to exceed the fixed limit on the deposit of certain securities and the payment of a tax of 5 per cent. for the time the excess issue lasts. This arrangement permits increased issues when they are required and secures their withdrawal as soon as the pressure is passed. There are many other points in the volume at which we can give only a passing glance. The comparison between the Canadian banking system and that of the United States is a good example of the impartial spirit in which Mr. Conant has written. He observes that the effect of the Canadian system of branch offices compared with the United States plan of isolated and separate banks "has been to make the rate at the most distant interior branch not more than one or two per cent. higher than to the best borrower in Montreal or Toronto, while in the United States rates range between ten and twelve per cent. in the newer sections of the country, while money is a drug" in the great reserve cities. It is not often that a reviewer can close a book dealing with such a subject as is the staple of this volume with the feeling that the interest of the narrative has been maintained over nearly six hundred pages. But Mr. Conant has fairly accomplished this. When his work reaches, as we hope it will, a further edition we trust that a curious misprint on p. 35, another on p. 178, and others on pp. 471 and 481 will be corrected; also Mr. Goschen is incorrectly described on p. 589. The limit of "authorized circulation" of the Imperial Bank of Germany is described correctly on p. 199 as having been originally 250,000,000 marks. A few lines lower it is spoken of as having been "increased to 42,117,000 marks." The sentence should undoubtedly read by and not "to"; but in this there is a slight error, the amount at the present time being, not 292,117,000 marks, but 296,229,000 marks. The statement also of the limits of uncovered circulation of the other German issuing banks on p. 205, though correct, is scarcely clear, as the "actual" as well as the "authorized" issues are both mentioned in a manner which renders it somewhat difficult to discriminate between the one and the other. These, however, are almost inevitable discrepancies in a work of this description, dealing with statements extending over many countries and a large number of figures. We have great pleasure in bearing our testimony to the general accuracy of the work and its great usefulness.

STORIES OF ADVENTURE.

THE elements of popularity contained in a book of adventure are apt to blind the reader to its defects. There is little doubt that Captain Kid's Millions, by Alan Oscar (Chapman & Hall), is very well suited to the taste of the day, and that it has attractive characteristics. The story-telling is good, and recounts the finding and then the loss of a great treasure, and its final rediscovery and realization. In one half of the volume we have the history of the first finding by Kid, the pirate of romance; and this portion of the book has already appeared in the pages of a popular magazine. In the second half a further search is made in our own days, and the treasure is brought home, but not without loss of life. The writing is generally good, and care is exercised to bring the phraseology into harmony with the time to which it relates. But the pleasing element in the volume is the capacity which the author manifests for narrating adventures and describing scenes of romance. It is less satisfactory to find in the opening words of the volume an effort to persuade the unwary reader that the book contains "the true history of one of the mysteries of the world." The wine is good, and needs no such bush; and it is difficult to see how the statement in question, supported as it is by others to a similar effect, adds to the interest of the story. The book is a long and substantial volume; but it has great powers of attraction, which deserve recognition, especially in the case of a new writer.

A short and bright story of adventure is always welcome. In a single volume of narrow compass Mr. Roderic Quinn, the writer of Mostyn Stayne (Sonnenschein & Co.), has placed a number of stirring scenes, somewhat loosely pieced together. The writing is pleasant and easy; the narrative purports to be one composed in the early part of the last century, and offers little that need be criticized. The difficulty of writing a story of adventure in the first person singular is surmounted with some skill.

Captain Shannon, by Mr. Coulson Kernahan (Ward, Lock & Co.), is made up of reminiscences from stories of Irish conspiracy, dynamite explosions, daring murders in Dublin and London, amateur detectives, and manifold disguises. It has no new ideas, and little that is new in incident; but as a budget of sensations, eked out with sixteen more or less striking pictures, it is interesting enough. The crimes of Capt. Shannon, and his gradual hunting down by a volunteer friend of justice, will probably amuse such as have acquired a taste for this sort of thing by much reading of Poe, Dr. Conan Doyle, Mr. Arthur Morrison, Mr. Muddock, and a dozen others. But Mr. Kernahan's last venture evinces none of the imagination which distinguished some of his earlier efforts, and his friends amongst the reading public will put down 'Captain Shannon' with a devout hope that its author has not yet exhausted his more original vein.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. MURRAY sends us an additional volume (the eighth) of Gleanings of Past Years, by Mr. Gladstone. They consist mainly of articles contributed by the author to the magazines on various points of Biblical criticism, ecclesiastical history, and Christian dogma. They show, like his Homeric studies, that Mr. Gladstone belongs to the precritical period, and sets to work to confute Prof. Huxley and other sceptics with a kind of argument that was obsolete forty years ago; but it is impossible not to admire the vigour and intrepidity with which the aged statesman uses it.

WE are able to praise Harvard Stories, a series of sketches of the undergraduates of the old university of the United States, by Mr. Waldron K Post, published by Messrs. Putnam's Sons. The language is sometimes that of modern American slang — incomprehensible — but the pictures are bright and pleasant. In the Civil War the lads who have left Harvard to fight for their Southern States rush in to Richmond to send notes to class mates, prisoners in the Libby, and cheer at news of the annual boatrace, which "almost made up for Gettysburg." "A man came running up to hear.....whether the Yankees had been licked anywhere. We told him not that we knew of, but Harvard had beaten Yale, and he went off damning us for making such a row." The volume contains an admirable account of the boatrace of another year. American rowing slang differs from the English: the use of "starboard" for a side has never been known in our rowing world, and we find "on the boat" for in, and "recover" for recovery.

M. CALMANN LÉVY publishes Montalembert, by Vicomte de Meaux, a life which was hardly needed, but which, though less full than other biographies of the great Catholic gentleman—more Forbes than French — is appreciatively written.

M. PIERRE LEROY-BEAULIEU, son, we believe, of M. Paul Leroy-Beaulieu, and nephew of the author of 'The Empire of the Tsars,' publishes, through MM. Armand Colin & Cie., Les Nouvelles Sociétés Anglo-Saxonnes, a rather heavy volume on Australasia and British South Africa. Australian wine producers will do well to pay heed to the well-informed criticism of M. Pierre Leroy-Beaulieu. His chapter on "Feminism" is thin: he first asserts that the women voters are for suppression of the liquor trade, and then admits that their enfranchisement in New Zealand has proved the contrary. He fails to explain that while in New Zealand women have only the vote, in South Australia they can sit in both Houses and in the Cabinet, but have not yet stood for Parliament. He thinks that Victoria carried woman suffrage in 1896, though the Bill was in fact rejected by the Council, and does not mention that in several other colonies woman suffrage Bills have, as in Victoria, passed the popular House. He thinks that Australian politicians are pleased to be made "K.C.M.G. or even K.C.B.," but fails to note that knighthood is now generally refused in Australia by politicians until the close of their active service in the legislative assemblies, while he is wrong, we believe, as to the K.C.B. being offered to them.

WE recently reviewed M. Victor Bérard's 'La Turquie et l'Hellénisme,' and there now reaches us from the house of Calmann Lévy a similar book, La Macédoine, by the same writer. At the end of the volume there is a suggestion that the Emperor William is likely to propose before the next Paris exhibition, which he wants to visit, that Alsace shall be neutralized; that part of German Austria shall be added to the German Empire; that Austria shall go as far as Salonica; that Russia shall have Armenia; Italy, Albania; Great Britain, Egypt; Bulgaria and Servia, parts of Macedonia.

WE have received vols. xiv. and xv. of the new edition of Meyers Conversations-Lexikon (Leipzig, Bibliographisches Institut), and find them to be worthy of their predecessors. Fulness of information and accuracy of statement characterize them, and the excellent illustrations, maps, and plans add greatly to the utility of this admirable work of reference. There is a most serviceable 'Religions- u. Missionskarte.' The views of the Reichstagsgebäude at Berlin fully confirm all that has been said against that tasteless building. In the instalment before us there are most satisfactory articles on Prussia, Rome, and the Roman Empire, on Russia, and on Roumania. If we may object to anything, we should say that the notice of Porson is insufficient, and so is the account of the English novel.

AT the exceedingly low price of sixpence the Penny Illustrated Paper has published a Diamond Jubilee Life of Queen Victoria, well written and profusely illustrated. Mr. Latey, the editor of the paper, is the author.—The Jubilee number of the Lady's Realm contains good reproductions of some clever drawings of the Queen in her childhood, taken by Lady Elizabeth Heathcote at Ramsgate in 1822.

WE have on our table Jefferies' Land: a History of Swindon and its Environs, by the late Richard Jefferies, edited with Notes by Grace Toplis (Simpkin),—Summer Days for Winter Evenings, by J. H. Crawford (Macqueen),—The Theory of Contract in its Social Light, by W. A. Watt (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Pitt Press Series: The History of the Helvetian War, edited with Notes by E. S. Shuckburgh (Cambridge, University Press),—An Archæological Survey of the United Kingdom, by D. Murray, LL.D. (Glasgow, MacLehose),—Brush Drawing, by J. Vaughan (Moffatt & Paige),—Heavy Trial Balances made Easy, by J. G. Craggs (The Scientific Press),—Diphtheria and Antitoxin, by N. Tirard (Longman),—Mr. Spinks and his Hounds, by F. M. Lutyens (Vinton),—The Yellow Book, Vol. XII. (Lane),—Wonderland, by Wood Smith (Nelson),—With Fortune Made, by V. Cherbuliez, translated by M. E. Simkins (Hutchinson),—Matin Bells and Scarlet and Gold, by F. H. Williams (Roxburghe Press),—The King's Garden, by G. E. Farrow (Hutchinson),—Poems, and other Verses, by H. A. R. J. (Fisher Unwin),—In Lamech's Reign, by A. Glanville (Chicago, Francœur),—The Conversion of Armenia, by W. St. Clair-Tisdall (R.T.S.),—The Thirty-nine Articles of the Church of England, by E. C. S. Gibson, D.D., Vol. II. (Methuen),—System und Geschichte des Naturalismus, by E. Loewenthal (Berlin, Calvary),—Quelques Notes sur les Silvæ de Stace, by G. Lafaye (Paris, Klincksieck),—De l'Idée de la Mort en Grèce à l'Époque Classique, by A. de Ridder (Paris, Thorin),—and Œuvres Scientifiques, by L. Lorenz, Part I. (Copenhagen, Lehmann & Stage). Among New Editions we have Echoes from Old Calcutta, by H. E. Busteed (Thacker),—An Introduction to Theology, by A. Cave, D.D. (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—Dayspring, by E. Marshall ('Home Words' Office),—Eric, Prince of Lorlonia, by the Countess of Jersey (Macmillan),—First Book of London Visions, by L. Binyon (Mathews),—The Writings of St. Patrick, by the Rev. C. H. H. Wright (R.T.S.),—Sheila's Mystery, by Mrs. Molesworth (Macmillan),—The Universe, by F. A. Pouchet (Blackie),—and Professional Women upon their Professions, by M. Bateson (Cox). Also the following Pamphlets: Currency for the Crowd, by G. E. Manisty (Wilson),—The Vocation of Human Life (Williams & Norgate),—The Lancashire Cookery Book (Oldham, Clegg),—Supplement to 'The Tempest,' by S. Wood (Heywood),—A Brief Account of the Armenian Church, by the Rev. J. B. Smith (Skeffington),—and Behind the Veil, by A. J. Raine (Kegan Paul).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Barker's (A.) Diocesan Examination Questions in Religious Knowledge, 8vo. 2/ sewed.
Besant's (A.) Four Great Religions, cr. 8vo. 2/ net.
Modern Reader's Bible: Ezekiel, 16mo. 2/6 cl.
Muir's (Sir W.) The Mohammedan Controversy, 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Muirhead's (L. A.) The Times of Christ, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Pope's (Rev. G. A.) St. John in the Desert, 12mo. 2/ net.
Tomlinson's (J. T.) The Prayer Book Articles and Homilies, some Forgotten Facts in their History, 8vo. 5/ net, cl.
Yeats's (W. B.) The Tables of the Law, The Adoration of the Magi, cr. 8vo. 5/ net, cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Art and Life and the Building and Decoration of Cities, a Series of Lectures, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Borlase's (W. C.) The Dolmens of Ireland, 3 vols. 10/
Hommel's (Dr. F.) The Ancient Hebrew Tradition as Illustrated on the Monuments, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Naval and Military Trophies and Relics of British Heroes, Drawings by Gibb, Notes by Holmes, folio, 147/ net.
Ordish's (T. F.) Shakespeare's London, 12mo. 3/ net.
Pearman's (Rev. A. T.) Rochester, 12mo. 1/ cl.
Ritchie's (J. E.) The Cities of the Dawn: Naples, Athens, Pompeii, &c., cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Venables's (E.) Lincoln, 12mo. 1/ cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Bards of the Gael and Gall, Examples of Poetic Literature of Erinn, Englished by G. Sigerson, cr. 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Brown's (A. M.) Molière and his Medical Associations, 6/ cl.
Deighton's (K.) The Old Dramatists, Conjectural Readings in the Texts of Marston, Beaumont and Fletcher, &c., cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.

Political Economy.

Johnson's (G.) Notes upon Interest, Discount, Profit and Loss, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.

History and Biography.

Burke's (A. P.) Family Records, 4to 42 net
Carlyle's (T.) Montaigne and other Essays, Chiefly Biographical, 8vo, 8/6 net, cl.
Janeway's (C.) Glimpses at Greece, To-day and before Yesterday, cr 8vo 3/6 cl.
Morley's (Right Hon. J.) Machiavelli, the Romanes Lecture, 8vo 2/6 net, bds
Parry's (S. H. J.) An Old Soldier's Memories, 8vo 12/ cl.
Perris's (G. H.) The Eastern Crisis of 1897, cr. 8vo 3/6 cl.
Scott, Rev. W. A., Memoir of, a Hero of the Dark Continent, by W. H. Rankine, cheap edition, cr 8vo. 2/ cl.
Stead's (W. T.) Studies of the Sovereign and the Reign, imp. 8vo 3/6 net, cl.
Urquhart, Mrs., Memoir of, by M. C. Bishop, cr 8vo. 6/ cl.
Victoria, Queen, Events of the Reign, 1837 to 1897, compiled by F. Ryland, cr 8vo 3/6 cl.
Windle's (B. C. A.) Life in Early Britain, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Woolley's (C.) Phases of Panic, a Brief Historical Review, 8vo. 2/ net.

Geography and Travel.

Burton's (General E. F.) Trouting in Norway, cr. 8vo 3/6 cl.
Ramsay's (W. M.) Impressions of Turkey during Twelve Years' Wanderings, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Smith's (E.) Visitor's Handy Guide-Book to England and Wales, 12mo 7/6 cl.
Weare's (G. E.) Cabot's Discovery of North America, 10/6 cl.

Philology.

Elliott's (W. A.) Dictionary of the Tebele and Shuna Languages, cr. 8vo. 10/ net, cl.

Science.

Cartwright's (T.) "Section One" Physiography, cr. 8vo. 2/
Coutts's (J. A.) Some Aspects of Infantile Syphilis, 3/6 cl.
Denny's (G. A.) The Klerksdorp Gold-Fields, 42/ net, cl.
Halford's (F. M.) Dry-Fly Entomology, 8vo. 25/ net.
Payne's (J. F.) Harvey and Galen, the Harveian Oration, October 19th, 1896, 8vo. 2/6 net.
Roose's (Dr. R.) Waste and Repair in Modern Life, cr. 8vo. 7/6
Smyth's (N.) The Place of Death in Evolution, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Students' Handbook of Diseases of the Skin, by Utile Quod Facias, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net, cl.
Taggart's (W. S.) Cotton Spinning, Vol. 2, cr. 8vo. 4/ net.

General Literature.

Alford's (E. M.) Honor, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Balzac's (H. de) Lost Illusions, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net, cl.
Bon-Mots of the Nineteenth Century, edited by W. Jerrold, 18mo. 2/6 net.
Burrage's (E. H.) The Missing Million, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Clayton's (H. J.) The Light of the Eye, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Corelli's (M.) Jane, a Social Incident, illus. 18mo. 2/ cl.
Corrie's (T.) Petrel Darcy, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Crawford's (F. M.) A Rose of Yesterday, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Doctor's Idle Hours, by Scalpel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ford's (G.) The Larramys, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ford's (R.) American Humourists, Recent and Living, 3/6 cl.
Gould's (N.) Not so Bad after All, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Green's (F. L.) Whited Sepulchres, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Griffith's (G.) The Romance of the Golden Star, cr. 8vo. 3/6
Gunter's (A. C.) Bob Covington, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Hird's (D.) In Search of a Religion, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Keith's (L.) My Bonnie Lady, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
King's (B. D.) Father Hilarion, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Knight's (A. E.) The Scuttling of the Kingfisher, cr. 8vo. 3/6
M'Candlish's (J. M.) Thoughts on Familiar Problems, 2/6
Mac Donald's (G.) Salted with Fire, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Mendham's (C. A.) A Troth of Tears, a Romance, cr. 8vo. 6/
Overruled, by Pansy, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Pixley's (F. W.) The Profession of a Chartered Accountant, and other Lectures, 8vo. 6/ net, cl.
Procter's (J.) Boers and Little Englanders, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Scott's Talisman, edited, with Introduction, Notes, &c., by Rev. H. B. George, cr. 8vo. 2/ sewed.
Sinjohn's (J.) From the Four Winds, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Spears's (J. R.) The Port of Missing Ships, and other Stories of the Sea, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Stoker's (B.) Dracula, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Tarver's (J. C.) Some Observations of a Foster Parent, 6/ cl.
Thicknesse's (L.) Two Sinners, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Vignettes, Stories by Rita, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Warden's (F.) The Girls at the Grange, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Winter's (J. S.) A Magnificent Young Man, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Lasson (G.): Zur Theorie des christlichen Dogmas, 2m. 80.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Gruyer (G.): L'Art Ferrarais à l'Epoque des Princes d'Este, 2 vols. 20fr.
Hommel (F.): Die altisraelitische Überlieferung in inschriftlicher Beleuchtung, 5m. 60.

Philosophy.

Strada (J.): La Religion de la Science et de l'Esprit Pur, 7fr.

Political Economy.

Blondel (G.): Études sur les Populations Rurales de l'Allemagne et la Crise Agraire, 12fr.

History and Biography.

Broglie (Duc de): Histoire et Politique, 7fr 50.
Champion (E.): La France d'après les Cahiers de 1789, 3fr. 50.
Loserth (J.): Studien zur Kirchenpolitik Englands im 14 Jahrh., Part 1, 3m.
Ménorval (E. de): Paris depuis ses Origines jusqu'à nos Jours, Part 3, 6fr.
Valades (P. B. des): Martial Delpit, Journal et Correspondance, 6fr.

Geography and Travel.

Bovet (Mlle. M. A. de): La Jeune Grèce, 3fr. 50.
Launay (L. de): Chez les Grecs de Turquie, 4fr.
Ramin (H.): Impressions d'Allemagne, 3fr. 50.

Philology.

Deussen (P.): Sechzig Upanishad's des Veda, übers. u. m. Einleitgn u. Anmerkgn. versehen, 20m.
Heusler (A.): Zwei Isländer-Geschichten, 4m. 50.

Science.

Demoor, Massart, et Vandervelde (Profs.): L'Évolution Regressive en Biologie et en Sociologie, 6fr.
Planck (M.): Vorlesungen über Thermodynamik, 7m. 50
Wilhing (E. A.): Die Meteoriten in Sammlungen u. ihre Literatur, 15m.

General Literature.

Chaperon (P.): Fille de Legende, 3fr. 50.
Gaulard (A.): Brigandes, 3fr. 50.
Misène (J.): Marthe Ambernon, 3fr. 50.
Mortillet (G. de): Formation de la Nation Française, 6fr.
Wyzewa (T. de): Écrivains Étrangers, Series 2, 3fr. 50.

LORD LYTTON'S 'HAROLD.'

21, Dorset Square, N.W., May 31, 1897.

I VENTURE to think that the Athenæum has done my edition of Lord Lytton's 'Harold' an injustice.

I did not edit it as "a classic" in English fiction, but as an historical novel belonging to a series of such productions of English literature of which too little is known, and which it is thought well to place in the hands of those who may be thereby influenced to study history through direct channels. My introduction, notes, and facsimile illustrations are all directed to the one point of showing how closely the author followed history, and in this respect I think it will be admitted that I have established for Lord Lytton's story a foremost position.

Opinions may differ as to the book being "a classic" of English fiction; but even on this point there is its influence upon such a poet as Tennyson and such a historian as Freeman to reckon with. LAURENCE GOMME.

AN ALLEGED ERROR OF VENERABLE BEDE'S.

PROF. MOMMSEN'S text of the well-known passage in the 'Excidium' (cap. xxvi.) which assigns the birth of Gildas and the battle at the Mons Badonicus to the same year runs as follows:—

"Ex eo tempore nunc cives nunc hostes vincebant.....usque ad annum obsessionis Badonici montis, novissimæque ferme de furciferis non minimæ stragis, quique quadragesimus quartus, ut novi, orditur annus mense jam uno [lege primo] emenso qui et meæ nativitatis est."

Bede's version of this ('H. E.,' i. xvi.) is:—

"Ex eo t. n. c. n. h. v. u. ad a. o. B. m. quando non minimas eisdem hostibus strages dabant quadragesimo circiter et quarto anno adventus eorum in Britanniam."

Bede's statement presents two propositions: (1) that the period of forty-four years ended with the year of the battle at the Mons Badonicus; and (2) that this period dated from the arrival of the English in Britain. The second proposition is not supported by the text of the 'Excidium' as we have it, and the former one is almost universally believed to have "been founded upon a misconception of the passage" ("Monumenta," p. 106). Very few modern writers have accepted Bede's view: Polydore Vergil, Habington, Vossius, and Galland are all that occur to me before the publication of the "Monumenta"; Dr. Giles, Haigh, the Bollandist Fathers, and La Borderie, since. On the other hand, Archbishop Ussher, Colgan, Mabillon, Smith and Stevenson, Lipsius (in Ersch and Grüber's 'Encyklopädie,' 1858), and many other writers down to Haddan and Stubbs, Skene, Guest, and Mommsen have maintained that Bede was in error, and that the period began with the year of the battle and ended with the year in which the author of the 'Excidium' was writing. These authorities believe that Bede was misled either by the involved style of that author or by a corrupt text. Mr. Plummer, however (v. V. Bæd., 'H. E.,' 1896, vol. ii. p. 31), though he agrees with the great majority of writers as to the meaning of the passage, is unable to assent to the view that Bede's approximation to the date of the battle is due to his inability to construe the text of his authority.

The passage in question has been translated frequently, but no one has yet succeeded in giving a clear version of it without interpolating explanatory words and clauses. The crux of the passage is clearly the word "qui" with the enclitic. Some commentators believe that this is a nominative, others that it is an ablative. Habington (translation of the 'Epistle' of Gildas, 1638) and Dr. Giles ('Six Old English Chronicles,' 1848, p. 313) have "which," with an interpolation supporting Bede;* Mr. D. H. Haigh ('The Conquest of Britain,' 1861, p. 299) has "and which"; M. A. de la Borderie (Revue Celtique, 1883, vol. vi. p. 9) has "année qui," with an interpolation supporting Bede; Dr. Guest ('Origines Celticæ,' 1883, vol. ii. p. 186) has "from which year"; Mr. C. J. Elton ('Origins of English History,' 1890, p. 350) has "and this," with an interpolation opposed to Bede. Prof. Mommsen ("M. G. H.," 'Chronica Minora,' 1894, III. i. p. 8) treats "qui" as a nominative, and interpolates a clause which condemns Bede: "quique quadragesimus quartus [ut novi] est ab eo qui orditur annus." Prof. Mommsen believes Bede "locum Gildæ ita legisse ut eum legimus nos et, cum intellegi non posset, eum libere ad æram eam [sc. adventus Anglorum] aptasse"; and he agrees with M. de la Borderie that the text as it has come down to us in extant manuscripts is corrupt, and cannot be rendered properly—"quæ libri habent parum sana videntur cum commodam interpretationem nullam admittant....."†

It is a very singular fact that the scholars of three centuries last past have failed to perceive that "qui" is used in this passage as an adverb. Why there should be a difficulty in reading "(strages).....qui.....orditur annus," when there is none in reading "restim volo mihi emere..... qui me faciam pensilem" or "vix reliquit qui efferretur," I cannot tell, and I suggest that Bede found no difficulty, and that the passage should be rendered thus:—

"From that time sometimes our countrymen conquered, sometimes the enemy.....until the year of the siege of Mons Badonicus and of almost the last, not the least, slaughter of the villains; wherewith, also, the year XLIIII., as I have learnt, commences, the first month being already past, which, too, is [the month] of my nativity."

I submit that there is no reason to reject Bede's belief that the year of the battle was the forty-fourth year of the period; whether he was correct in dating the battle in A.D. 449 (circa) + 44 is, of course, another question.

A. ANSCOMBE.

GIBBON'S LIBRARY.

THE catalogue of Gibbon's library at Lausanne was recently added to the treasures in the British Museum. The catalogue itself is a bibliographical curiosity, not only because many of the entries are in the historian's clear and bold handwriting, but also because they are made on the backs of playing cards. American librarians have devised catalogues composed of cards, and these have been largely used and praised; yet, if the plan be good, it is not entirely novel.

It is noteworthy that Gibbon had to collect and pay for the books which he consulted while writing his history, whereas Hume, as Librarian to the Advocates' Library in Edinburgh, had all the material at hand which any historian could desire. Moreover, there is no record of Gibbon caring to lessen the drain upon his purse by resorting to the British Museum, where the collection of books, though much smaller and less skilfully classified than at present, was far from being contemptible. He made some of the Swiss libraries aid him in his work, as he thus acknowledges in his 'Memoirs': "The academical library of Lausanne, which I could use as my own, contained at least the fathers and councils; and I have derived some occasional succour from the public collections of Berne and Geneva." But the pleasure of forming a library is second only to that of using one, and Gibbon may have felt this when writing in 1763 from Lausanne to his father, "I have got a few books together." In 1773, when settled in what he styled his "little palace" in Bentinck Street, which he held to be "absolutely the best house in London," he wrote to his stepmother that "all the notions I ever formed of a London life in my own house, and surrounded by my books, with a due mixture of study and society, are fully realized." Three years later he wrote from Bath to Holroyd, "I long to get back to the library in Bentinck Street, where I shall speedily, but not hastily undertake the second volume." He had no hesitation in borrowing books, while his friend Holroyd, better known now as Lord Sheffield, was reluctant to lend them, as is shown by what Gibbon wrote in 1781:—

* The translation of the 'Excidium,' Harley MS. No. 522, fo. 30, was made from Polydore Vergil's text, and therefore does not render the clause "quique.....emenso."

† Mr. Plummer does not render "qui," and construes the sense of the passage as he conceives it thus: "at the end of the first month of the forty-fourth year [from the year of that event], which is also the year of my birth" (M.S.).

"Your Greeks were not carried from Brighton through carelessness, but as you are seriously absurd about lending books, I have directed Caplin to send them to S[heffield] P[lace] per coach. By way of revenge I may inform you that I have now purchased a copy of Stephen's Greek Poets compared to which yours is very little more than waste paper."

Some time after the work was finished to which he looked forward, with well-founded expectation, for "the establishment of his fame," he wrote to his stepmother that, "although my library be still my favourite room, I am no longer stimulated by the prosecution of any literary work." In his last will he desired that his library should be sold. Lord Sheffield remonstrated in very strong terms, and told Gibbon that his duty was to bequeath the collection to him for custody and for preservation in Sheffield Place. Gibbon's reply was alike pointed and sensible:—

"I am a friend to the circulation of property of every kind, and besides the pecuniary advantage of my poor heirs, I consider a public sale as the most laudable method of disposing of it. From such sales my books were chiefly collected, and when I can no longer use them they can be again culled by various buyers according to the measure of their wants and means. If, indeed, a truly liberal public library existed in London, I might be tempted to enrich the catalogue and encourage the institution: but to bury my treasure in a country mansion under the key of a jealous master! I am not flattered by the Gibbonian collection, and shall own my presumptuous belief that six quarto volumes may be sufficient for the preservation of that name."

Miss Berry, writing when at Lausanne in 1803, says that Gibbon's library was stored in two small rooms hired for the purpose, and that it numbered "near 10,000 volumes." An estimate of the number of books in a room is as difficult to make, and generally as fallacious, as that of the number present at a large concourse of human beings. The card catalogue of the library has the figures 2,675 volumes on the last card. According to Mr. Cyrus Redding, the library was bought by Beckford for 950*l.*; it is added that Beckford spent six weeks in reading its contents, or some of them, till he was "nearly blind," and that he presented the library to Dr. Scholl, of Lausanne. Mr. H. E. Wilkinson, writing in Notes and Queries for May 27th, 1876, says that, in 1830, an Englishman paid 500*l.* for half of the books; the other half was disposed of "piecemeal" by a bookseller at Geneva. The Englishman who bought the half sold his property in Switzerland in 1845, and after a time presented the books to the purchaser of it, whose name has not been disclosed.

Gibbon disposed of several books by his will written by himself, and dated October 1st, 1791, the original being now in the British Museum. By that instrument he bequeathed to "the public library of the Academy of Lausanne" the following books in the following terms:—

"'Thuani Historia,' seven volumes in folio; 'Erasmi Opera,' ten volumes in folio; 'Meursii Opera,' twelve volumes in folio; the first edition of the 'Biographia Britannica,' seven volumes in folio; the Venice edition of the Byzantine writers; and all the works of Muratori."

It has been overlooked that the choice and pathetic passage in which Gibbon records the hour of his "final deliverance," when "the last lines of the last page" of his history were penned, does not necessarily imply that his task was done. A few days previously he had written to Lord Sheffield:—

"My great building is, as it were, compleated, and some slight ornaments, the painting and glazing of the unfinished rooms, may be dispatched without inconvenience in the autumnal residence of Sheffield-place."

Six weeks later he explained that, when he had reached London with his manuscript, he would have to "procure some necessary books and consult others" before he felt free to leave it. A month's stay in London sufficed, and then he went to Sheffield Place, where the proof-sheets were corrected. It is as creditable to the printer as to Gibbon's own industry that he could write from that mansion to his stepmother: "I have the daily duty of receiving, correcting, and returning a printed sheet [sixteen quarto pages] which is sent me from London." Three months after the publication of the last volumes he was back in Lausaune, where, as he wrote to his stepmother,

"I freely and fairly enjoy my liberty, as I promised in my preface; range without controul over the wide expanse of my library; converse, as my fancy prompts me, with poets and historians, philosophers and Orators, of every age and language; and often indulge my meditations in the invention and arrangement of mighty works, which I shall probably never find time or application to execute."

The titles and the names of the authors of Gibbon's books are not only set forth in full, but the sizes, number of volumes, and place of publication are also recorded on the cards which he used for the purpose. Among them are Bossuet's 'Variations,' in four volumes octavo, a work which changed for a time the course of his religious belief, and also several editions of his favourite Pascal and of Montaigne's 'Essais.' He had no complete copy of his own work, the only entries with its title being one quarto volume of the first edition of 1776 and three of the edition of 1777; two of the Dublin one of 1776, and three of the fourth edition of 1781. However, he preserved most of the works in which he was attacked. In the order in which they are catalogued, the first is "Remarks on the Last Two Chapters of Mr. Gibbon's History, by James Chelsum, of Christ Church, Oxford, 1778"; the second, "Examination of the XV. and XVI. Chapters of Mr. Gibbon's History, by G. E. Davis, of Baliol, 1778"; third, 'A Vindication,' by the author, 1779; fourth, 'Two Anonymous Tracts against Him,' 1779; fifth, "A Reply to the Reasonings of Mr. Gibbon, by Smyth Loftus, M.A., Vicar of Corlock, Dublin, 1778"; sixth, 'Gibbon's Account of Christianity Considered,' by Joseph Milner, M.A., York, 1781; and seventh, 'Apology for Christianity,' by Richard Watson, Bishop of Llandaff.

Gibbon's English books formed a fair proportion of his collection, and among them, taking the titles in alphabetical order, are those of Addison (including a French version of his 'Evidences of the Christian Religion'); Anson's 'Voyage round the World'; 'Bacon's Essays'; 'Bell's British Theatre'; Blair's 'Rhetoric'; Burnet's 'Own Times'; 'Hudibras'; 'Chesterfield's Letters'; Churchill's 'Poems'; Clarendon's works; 'Cook's Second Voyage'; Cowley's works; Evelyn's 'Sylva'; Fielding's works; Hakluyt's 'Voyages'; Harrington's 'Oceana'; Hooker's 'Ecclesiastical Polity'; Hume's works; Johnson's Dictionary and other works; Locke's works; Mason's 'Poems and Life of Gray'; 'Ossian'; Purchas's 'Pilgrimages'; Percy's 'Reliques'; Raleigh's 'History of the World'; Reynolds's 'Discourses'; Robertson's histories; Bolingbroke's works; Shaftesbury's 'Characteristics'; Theobald's, and Johnson and Malone's editions of Shakspeare; Sherlock's 'Sermons'; Smith's 'Moral Sentiments'; Hughes's Spenser; the works of Pope, Dryden, Sterne, Swift, Algernon Sidney, Temple, and Walpole; and Dr. Watts 'On the Mind.' His copy of 'The Holy Bible' is duly catalogued, with the addition that it was printed in London, 1663.

Among the noteworthy books in Italian and French are 'Orlando Furioso' and a French translation of it, and 'Orlando Innamorato'; the folio edition of Bayle's 'Dictionnaire'; Beccaria, 'Dei Delitti e delle Pene'; the works of Beaumarchais, Boileau, Brantome, Buffon, Montesquieu, Rousseau, and Voltaire; and a large collection of French plays. It is scarcely needful to add that the Greek and Roman classics formed parts of Gibbon's library, as well as the authorities cited in his great work.

Many men have formed libraries with which their names are honourably associated; but few began the task so early in life as Gibbon, and performed it with such a praiseworthy ideal. In his later years he still remembered the joy which he felt as a very young man when exchanging "a bank-note of twenty pounds for the twenty volumes of the Memoirs of the Academy of Inscriptions." After his father's death, when he himself was twenty-three, he recorded that "my books, the most valuable of my effects, accompanied my own removal to the metropolis." He was able to write with truth and just pride of the "numerous and select library which was the foundation of my works and the best comfort of my life." This account of Gibbon and his library could not be ended with any words finer or more creditable to him than his own:—

"I may allow myself to observe that I am not conscious of ever having bought a book from a motive of ostentation; that every volume, before it was deposited on the shelf, was either read or sufficiently examined; and that I soon adopted the tolerating maxim of the elder Pliny, 'nullum esse librum tam malum ut non exaliquâ parte prodesset.'"

W. Fraser Rae.

DEFOE THE REBEL.

Mr. Omond writes:—

"I observe that in a notice (Athenæum, May 22nd) of the volume on 'Fletcher of Saltoun' in the 'Famous Scots Series' the question is raised whether Daniel Defoe 'was really with Monmouth's, and not with Argyll's expedition.' In his 'History of the Life and Adventures of Mr. Duncan Campbell' he certainly gives a graphic account of Argyll's campaign; and it would add another picturesque episode to Defoe's strange career if it turned out that he found his way to Scotland during the summer of 1685. This work, however, contains nothing which implies that the author had been an eye-witness of the scenes which he describes; while, on the other hand, in his 'Appeal to Honour and Justice,' he speaks of himself as 'a man that had been in arms under the Duke of Monmouth.' I, therefore, think that Wilson and the other biographers of Defoe are right in stating that he joined Monmouth's army."

THE DATE OF MINUCIUS FELIX.

Prof. Ramsay writes from Moffat:—

"Permit me to correct one statement in your generous and judicious review of my 'Phrygia.' You say that my opinion about the comparative date of Tertullian and Minucius Felix probably depends not on my own investigation, but on some authority whom I have been consulting. As I give the opinion for my own, you rate my standard in literary matters lower than I hope is right. In my 'Church in the Empire' the tone of my reference to this question is such as seems to me incumbent on a scholar who has not studied the question carefully. But before using the words which you refer to I lectured on both 'Apologies' in Aberdeen, translating them in full with commentary to my students, and paying special attention to their mutual relation (after the preparatory study needed for such courses of lectures); and I considered as well as I can what has been said on the opposite side down to a recent article in Rh. Mus. (I think). Two years ago I began to write an article on the date of the 'Octavius,' but refrained."

Literary Gossip.

Sir Harry Johnston's work on 'British Central Africa' has been delayed in production owing to the time taken in the preparing of the maps and the printing of the many illustrations — 220 in number. But Messrs. Methuen hope to be able to publish it at the end of June. The volume will reach 544 pages, and be divided into eleven chapters and seventeen appendices. The greater proportion of the book will deal with natural history and anthropology. A valuable appendix to the chapter on botany is contributed by the authorities at Kew, who have for the first time drawn up a catalogue of all the known plants of Nyasaland and South Tanganyika. Another appendix is the translation of an essay on forestry, written by a native of British Central Africa. A good deal of information is given regarding the founding of the protectorate, the slave trade, missionary life, and the prospects and present methods of coffee cultivation. There is a chapter on the Bantu languages in general and those of South Central Africa in particular; and the big game of the country are illustrated with many drawings, and the habits and geographical distribution of the more important birds and mammals are carefully described.

Mrs. Humphry Ward has returned from the north of England, where she has, it is said, been at work on a new novel.

The forthcoming volume of the 'Dictionary of National Biography' includes the memoir of Shakspeare, which is from the pen of the editor, Mr. Sidney Lee. It is the longest article that has appeared in the 'Dictionary,' as befits the importance of the subject. Mr. Lee rejects a good many recent theories, including the accepted interpretation of the "Mr. W. H." of the 'Sonnets.' A concluding section sketches the growth of Shakspeare's reputation at home and abroad.

Mr. Clive Bigham, author of 'A Ride through Western Asia,' and recently Times correspondent with the Turkish headquarters, is writing a book on 'The Campaign in Thessaly,' which will be published by Messrs. Macmillan & Co. in the course of the summer.

Mr. T. Rice Holmes has been engaged for nearly a year in revising his 'History of the Indian Mutiny,' which was adopted some years ago by the Civil Service Commissioners as the text-book on the subject for the Indian Civil Service. The publication of the book has been taken over by Messrs. Macmillan & Co.; and the new (fifth) edition will be ready early in the autumn.

Mr. Gollancz has edited, and Sir John Evans has presented to the members of the Roxburghe Club, a volume of alliterative poetry, hitherto unprinted, entitled 'The Parlement of the Thre Ages, with the Poem of "Winnere and Wastoure" and Illustrative Texts.'

It does not appear to be generally known that Mr. J. R. Dore, the collector of old Bibles, died last August. His account of the early versions of the English Bible, which he published some years ago through Messrs. Eyre & Spottiswoode, ran through three editions in a comparatively short space of time. By way of following up the success achieved by 'Old Bibles,' as the book was entitled, the author had at the time of his death completed a manuscript dealing with the whole subject in a popular and practical style, and this, it is understood, will be published shortly by his representatives. Dr. Copinger's new work, by the way, on 'The Bible and its Transmission' has just been brought out by Messrs. Sotheran.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. will publish immediately a novel entitled 'The Choir Invisible,' by an American writer, Mr. James Lane Allen, who has already won for himself a position among American writers of fiction by 'A Summer in Arcady,' 'A Kentucky Cardinal,' &c. 'The Choir Invisible' belongs to the order of historical romance, the scene being laid in Kentucky about 1795. American critics praise the book. 'The Ape, the Idiot, and Other People' is the title of a new book by a new American writer, Mr. W. C. Morrow, of which Mr. James Bowden has purchased the English copyright.

The Scotch Education Report shows a remarkable increase in the number of Roman Catholic schools in Scotland since the passing of the Education Act of 1872. They have increased from 22 to 183. There has been no corresponding increase in the number of Roman Catholics.

The Scottish branch of the Franco-Scottish Society will hold its anniversary meeting at Edinburgh, from July 12th to 17th inclusive. Among the papers to be read are 'Notes on the French Constitution,' by Prof. Kirkpatrick; 'Pasteur as the Founder of Stereo-Chemistry,' by Prof. Crum Brown; 'The Influence of Scottish Philosophy upon the French,' by Prof. Boutroux; 'Personal Reminiscences of Oxford,' by Sir Mountstuart Grant Duff; 'The Teaching of French Literature in Scottish and English Universities,' by Dr. Sarolea; 'French and Scottish Philosophy,' by Prof. Seth; 'Speculations on the Early Works of Horace and his Relation to Virgil,' by Prof. W. M. Ramsay; 'Le Mouvement Néo-Hellénique dans la Littérature Française,' by Prof. Croiset; 'Pasteur et son Œuvre,' by M. Duclaux; 'The History of the Old Scots College, Paris,' by Mr. Brander Hatt; 'Historical Connexion between the Parliament of Paris and the Scottish Court of Session,' by Dr. Æneas Mackay; and 'French Influence on Scottish Architecture,' by Dr. Rowand Anderson. The university will entertain the French visitors at luncheon, and the city will give them a ball; while the Scottish members will entertain the French at dinner, and there will be excursions to Loch Leven, Stirling, and St. Andrews.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include a Report by Prof. D'Arcy Thompson on his Mission to Behring Sea in 1896 (6*d.*); Scotch Education Reports, Western and Southern Divisions (3*d.* each); Copies of Contracts for the Sale of Ordnance Maps, and Lists of Places where the Maps may be bought and ordered (2*d.*); and the Annual Irish Education Report (4*d.*).

SCIENCE

Autobiographical Sketch of James Croll, LL.D., F.R.S. With Memoir of his Life and Work by James Campbell Irons, M.A. (Stanford.)

In 1867 the Civil Service examiners did themselves the honour of "ploughing"—notably, we believe, in arithmetic—a man whose masterly papers on terrestrial physics had already earned him a high position among the scientific writers of the day. Though the best efforts of officialdom were defeated on that occasion, and Mr. Croll was, notwithstanding his failure to pass a schoolboy examination, appointed to a small post on the Geological Survey of Scotland, red tape had not done with him yet. In 1881, when wretched health and a premature old age forced him to leave the public service, the Treasury awarded him a superannuation allowance of 75*l.* 16*s.* 8*d.* My Lords of the Committee of Council duly "considered" the claims of Dr. Croll to more generous treatment, urged upon their notice by all that England in 1883 held of leaders in the worlds of statesmanship, science, and letters, but found it impossible to add a penny to that sum. The Dukes of Devonshire, Richmond, and Argyll, the Marquess of Salisbury, John Bright, Stokes, Spottiswoode, Prestwich, Tennyson, Lubbock, Owen, Hooker, Huxley, Tyndall, Thomson, Armstrong, Joule, De la Rue, Sorby, Lister—these and many others of like note petitioned in Croll's favour. The recommendation was not strong enough for My Lords. On that miserable pittance, therefore, Croll—by that time a man of world-wide reputation—had to live the rest of his days. That he, being a self-denying Scotchman of the simplest tastes and most thrifty habits, managed somehow not only to live upon this income, but actually to make some slight provision for her who had been to him a true and devoted helpmeet, does not in any degree diminish the meanness of the official record on this occasion. Mrs. Croll received 100*l.* from the Royal Society, and now it is stated that the entire proceeds accruing from the sale of this book are to be handed over to her.

Under circumstances such as these criticism is to a great extent disarmed. But, indeed, there is little with which to find fault in Mr. Irons's volume. It is a sober and faithful memoir of a remarkable man whose life was cast in humble places, whose thoughts were lofty beyond his surroundings, and whose place among men of science, due to the strength of his reasoning powers only, was gained in spite of bodily infirmities, and in spite of a temperament so shy and retiring as to render anything like social success unattainable. We, who knew Croll well, can bear witness to Mr. Irons's entirely truthful presentation of him. The two excellent portraits which adorn his work are not more lifelike than are his descriptions of the kindly, reserved, nervous recluse of our recollection, who could be so alert in scientific controversy, and was so meek and patient in ordinary intercourse.

Mr. Irons has done well in printing without alteration the short 'Autobiographical Sketch' which precedes his own 'Memoir.' Nothing can be simpler—more pathetic in its utter absence of self-pity or vainglory—more like Croll himself, in fact—than this 'Sketch.' We recommend it to all readers.

It matters little now whether Croll's hypotheses are likely to stand the test of later research—whether his explanation of the cause of ice ages or of ocean currents is the right one or not. His work, the result of reasoning rather than of observation, like all first-rate work in speculative science, was above all suggestive, and has been the cause of an immense amount of good work in others. Just as Kant and Leibnitz must always be mentioned in any history of the growth of geological science, so will Croll—like them a thinker rather than a geologist—always be remembered as having served that science well.

ANNUALS.

The Year-Book of the Scientific and Learned Societies (Griffin & Co.) shows manifest signs of improvement. The editor evidently takes more trouble to obtain information than he used to do; but there are still inexcusable gaps. It would not be difficult to find out what are the publications of the Ballad Society. It might have been noted that next winter the new abode of the Mechanical Engineers at Storey's Gate will be ready for them.

The Year-Book of Treatment for 1897. (Cassell & Co.)—The present volume is the thirteenth of this summary of therapeutics. It begins with an interesting digest of recent observations on the treatment of heart disease by muscular exercise and baths—a treatment of some use in cases of feeble action of the heart, and of obvious danger in many cases of advanced valvular disease. Dr. Coupland, who shows both extensive reading and sound judgment in this abstract, quotes a remark of Sir William Broadbent which indicates the necessity for more accurate observations on this method of treatment: "No advance can be made in this direction while it is employed indiscriminately in all forms and stages of heart disease, including cases where perfect compensation has been attained, and cases where no real heart affection exists, nor while statements are made which seem to imply that it is equally efficacious under all circumstances." Dr. Garrod writes on arthritic diseases, while Dr. Dawson Williams gives an abstract of the papers of Hayward, Buttar, Cautley, Marfan, and others on diseases of children. Mr. W. J. Walsham contributes a thorough and valuable digest of all recent contributions to orthopædic surgery, and Mr. Henry Power one on diseases of the eye. The chapter on tropical diseases by Dr. Patrick Manson is not quite so complete as might have been expected from so distinguished an authority on the subject; and the section on public health and hygiene is not so full as it ought to be. Mr. Malcolm Morris, while admitting that the year has added little to our knowledge of the treatment of skin diseases, reports with terseness and lucidity a variety of useful details of practice. The chapters on diseases of women by Dr. Herman and Dr. Handfield Jones are excellent, but that on rectal diseases is far from complete. Dr. Luff's summary on medical jurisprudence and that of Dr. Tirard on new remedies will both be of great service to lecturers on those subjects in the medical schools. The general standard of the articles is high, and the book a useful one.

ZOOLOGICAL LITERATURE.

Geographical History of Mammals. By R. Lydekker. (Cambridge, University Press.) The characteristic note of Mr. Lydekker's work is, as might be expected, the great and wide knowledge of the fossil forms of mammals which it exhibits. There can be no manner of doubt that an account of the geographical distribution of mammals written by one who has a competent knowledge of their ancient history is bound to be a work of value. We must own to some little doubt as to whether the work is exactly adapted to the needs of an undergraduate student, but it is certainly one which will be read with interest and profit by the zoologist. So far as we have been able to test it, and we have tested it pretty severely, it gives a very complete account of the geographical distribution of every kind of mammal. This, of course, means the introduction of long lists of technical terms which will be, or ought to be, beyond the understanding of an undergraduate. We regret to see that Mr. Lydekker perpetuates the error to be found in nearly all lectures and text-books on the subject—that it is to Mr. Sclater that we owe the first important essay on geographical distribution. In these days, when we find competent men of science calling out for an index to scientific literature, it is, we suppose, pardonable that even a writer on the subject should have failed to make himself acquainted with the first text-book of geographical distribution, even though that was by no less a naturalist than Prof. Schmarda; but, in truth, Mr. Lydekker has not the excuse that this work has not been brought to his notice. As a matter of fact, some three or four years ago, Mr. Boulenger wrote a note to our contemporary Nature, pointing out the existence and the value of Schmarda's work. So far as this book is intended for the student it adopts a scheme of nomenclature for the geographical regions of the earth's surface which he will find very difficult to remember. We need not take our readers through the different names that have been proposed by various writers since 1855; it is sufficient to say that Mr. Lydekker adopts the proposal of a writer, who, we think very properly, desires to remain anonymous, who suggested in 1893 the use of the terms "Notogæa," "Neogæa," and "Arctogæa," to indicate the three major divisions of the classification to which in 1890 Mr. Blandford gave the names of Australian region, South American region, and Arctogæan region; for Mr. Lydekker's notogæic realm extends north of the equator, his neogæic realm consists of not half of the New World, while his arctogæic realm reaches down to the Cape of Good Hope. It is obvious that these three technical terms are used in a sense which their etymology does not justify. We regret, too, to see that he has given the vogue which this work will give to the term Sonoran region. There is one other point on which we think Mr. Lydekker might appropriately have exhibited a wider knowledge of the literature at his disposal. Speaking of the oligocene fauna of Eastern Arctogæa, he points out that the types which have continued to exist up till now are very few, and he adds, "If the whole of the extinct ones had been given their relative proportion would have been still less." This is just a point at which he might have appropriately introduced a reference to Kowalevsky's important memoir in which he pointed out the different results which follow adaptive and inadaptive modifications. No question has ever more deeply interested the zoologist than the history of the horse in South America. It is an extraordinary and as yet incomprehensible fact, that what appear to have been animals very similar to the horses which we know to-day existed long years ago in South America. In dealing with this question Mr. Lydekker, like a great number of zoologists, fails to show a comprehension of the fact that since the time of the appearance of the 'Origin of Species' the word "species" has had two meanings. It has, first of all, the meaning which may be called that of Linnæus, the significance which is attached to the word by a descriptive naturalist, who catalogues merely the appearances which he observes. It has, in the second place, the Darwinian or post-Darwinian meaning, which is attached to it by those who have comprehended the true inwardness of the doctrine of evolution. Two forms exactly similar do not belong to the same species if they had a different ancestry, and it is impossible to believe that the South American horse and the wild horse of Asia have ever had one and the same ancestry. Howsoever like, then, they may be, they are not, in the evolutionist's sense of the word, the same species, and any discussion as to the possibility of the dual origin of groups is barren and profitless. The work before us is excellently printed, and a number of the figures are quite as good as we could expect. It would add to the value of the work if, instead of giving a list of works and papers most frequently referred to, a fuller bibliography of the subject were given. If the work comes, as we hope it may, to a second edition, perhaps Mr. Lydekker will see to this.

The Evolution of Bird-Song: with Observations on the Influence of Heredity and Imitation. By Charles A. Witchell. (Black.)—This is an excellent piece of careful and independent work, by an author who began to investigate the features of bird-song in 1881, and had the resolution to read no books on the subject for eight long years, during which he continued his observations. This laborious course of self-education is deserving of high praise, and commendation is also due to Mr. Witchell for refraining from publishing anything for eighteen months more. Into the question of the origin of voice—beginning with the archaic hiss, common to many birds, and indicative of anger—we will not enter. The chapter on alarm-notes is very interesting, especially as regards the way in which nestlings are instantly reduced to silence by the warning voice of the parents, and Mr. W. H. Hudson is quoted ('Naturalist in La Plata') as stating that this admonition affects the young bird even before it is hatched, "when the little prisoner is hammering at its shell and uttering its feeble peep, as if begging to be let out." We are not informed that such precocity has been observed in the Old World; but perhaps Mr. Witchell will direct his attention to the "bitter cry" of the unhatched chick. On first thoughts this "peeping" voice might appear to be even more rudimentary than the hiss already mentioned; but then there is the question of heredity to be reckoned with—a subject discussed in chap. vii. In that, as well as in other portions of the book, there is a certain amount of matter which is somewhat speculative, though well worthy of consideration; but the bulk of the work shows the result of much practical observation, and treats of the natural notes as well as the powers and practice of mimicry in thoroughly wild birds. Fanciers are well aware of the tendency to imitation in species kept in confinement, and they know also that the song of some finches—the chaffinch, for instance—varies in counties at no appreciable distance; but many persons will be surprised to learn that the skylarks near many of our sandy coasts have acquired the plaintive cry of the ringed plover. Mr. Witchell gives a list of no fewer than fifteen species imitated by this soaring songster; more than a score are mimicked by the robin; and many other birds, instead of remaining faithful to their regular notes, occasionally deceive even the elect. It is to some "conveyer" among the thrushes that we are annually indebted for announcements of the (preposterously) early arrival of the nightingale; and the mention of the latter reminds us that by the side of mountain torrents on the Continent the song of the nightingale is usually loud and harsh, as if in rivalry with the noisy stream. This is one of the "effects of environment," to which Mr. Witchell devotes several pages. Many of the notes and several of the complete songs of birds are rendered in musical form, and a good index concludes a thoroughly honest and original work. It can be recommended to all lovers of nature, and many of the suggestions in it are calculated to stimulate that observation which leads to an increase of knowledge.

Artistic and Scientific Taxidermy and Modelling. By Montagu Browne. (Black.)—This portly volume of more than 460 pages, by the well-known Curator of the Leicester Museum, contains twenty-two full-page illustrations and eleven cuts in the text; a history of taxidermy from early times; receipts for preservative mediums, modelling compositions, oils, and varnishes; instructions for obtaining the animals to be preserved; details respecting the making of casts calculated to exhibit their real forms; notes on tanning; the reproduction of foliage; and, in fact, everything which the preserver can possibly want to know. Such a work is necessarily very technical in its nature, and our readers must be content with the assurance that we have gone through the book with care, and are astonished at the amount of practical knowledge therein displayed. We fully agree with Mr. Browne in considering that the best work of a high-class taxidermist is a real work of art, and deserves to be placed on a level with that of a successful sculptor; and until that fact is generally appreciated, taxidermy will not receive the approval necessary for the encouragement of its practitioners. The bad old days of mere "stuffing" are, however, passing away, and before long we may see at our Natural History Museum specimens of art worthy of competing with those at Leicester. In the end we may even attain to such artistic groups as those which glorify the Museum at Pisa, and which, by the way, had received the encomiums of a British naturalist many years before the Americans whom Mr. Montagu Browne quotes had ever seen them.

A Concise Handbook of British Birds, by H. Kirke Swann (Weldon & Co.), is a compilation which is so concise as to be practically useless. It began well, for several excellent authorities, duly named in the preface, were laid under contribution; but either the author got tired of the work, or the publisher thought the poor little book was already too large. Be this as it may, many species are left undescribed, while others, of no greater importance, have an undue amount of space allotted to them. We fear the work must be added to the list of failures.

Die Haustiere und ihre Beziehungen zur Wirtschaft des Menschen. Von Eduard Hahn. (Leipzig, Duncker & Humblot.)—This important work treats of the geographical distribution of animals with relation to their service to man. Foremost are, naturally, those which have been more or less domesticated, such as dogs, various bovine species, goats, sheep, horses, asses, mules, pigs, camels, cats, dogs, ferrets and allied species, llamas and alpacas, as well as guinea-pigs, among mammals; followed by geese, swans, ducks, fowls, guinea-fowls, pea-fowl, pheasants, pigeons, &c.; while pond fish, silkworms, and bees also find place. The entire subject is treated in a truly scientific manner and in detail. We are surprised to find that Dr. Hahn appears to attach credence to the statements that a female mule has occasionally been known to drop a foal, for no such occurrence is known to Mr. Sutherland, the greatest breeder of mules in this country, nor to the producers of tens of thousands of mules annually in Poitou; while, as regards Spain and tropical America, the saying "Una mula parió" is the exact equivalent of "Tell that to the marines." Until recently it was assumed that the best of these supposed cases of fertility were due to telegony, an influence in which many breeders, especially dog-fanciers, believed implicitly; but at the present moment telegony is under a cloud among scientific men, and some of its boldest advocates have "reconsidered their position," or, in plain English, have "ratted." Dr. Hahn's work can be thoroughly recommended to all scientific readers, and an English translation is greatly to be desired. There is an excellent index and a useful map.

A SINGING CROCODILE.

Oxford, May 30, 1897.

Mr. H. Bradley points out to me that the Chalkadri of the Slavonic Enoch would naturally arise out of calcatrix (cf. "Cockatrice" in the 'New English Dictionary'). Calcatrix is a literal translation of ἰχνεύμων; the ichneumon and the crocodile were confounded. This would introduce a fresh element into the strange mingling of animals represented by Chalkadri, and an element entirely inconsistent both with the phœnix and with the crocodile from the point of view of (Egyptian) solar mythology. For the sun-god hated the ichneumon (the symbol of Set) as much as he must have loved the phœnix and the crocodile (his own symbols). That the writer takes the most important part of the Chalkadri (the head) from the crocodile is, however, satisfactory to a mythologist, and we may, perhaps, rest assured now, thanks to M. Berger and Mr. Bradley, that the Chalkadri was in no sense either a serpent or (in spite of its wings) a bird. And if M. Berger pointed in the right direction, the 'New English Dictionary' suggests the probably right conclusion.

T. K. Cheyne.

SOCIETIES.

British Archæological Association.—May 19.—Mr. C. H. Compton, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. Quick, the Curator of the Horniman Museum, exhibited some curiosities recently brought from Benin by some of the officers engaged in the late expedition. These curious objects had been saved from destruction by fire at the time of the capture by reason of their having been in a stone house. One of them was a carved ivory staff of office, having the representation of a human figure holding a peculiar form of bell in an inverted position; this form of bell, it was said, was found only on the West Coast of Africa. This staff was carried by the executioner or one of his attendants, and its ornamentation showed evidence of Portuguese influence. Another object from the same region was a carved wooden case, having a sliding cover bearing the image of the sacred bird (the Ju-Ju bird). This case was used for the transmission of documents. An armlet or bracelet belonging to one of the wives of the king was also exhibited. Mr. Quick further exhibited some prehistoric implements found in excavating for the foundations of a house near the Victoria Embankment, consisting of the remains of a weapon or instrument formed from the antler of a deer, also shank-bones of a horse and an ox.—The Rev. J. Cave-Browne exhibited a seal bearing a foreign coat of arms and coronet, which seal was given by a dying French officer to an English officer who had given him a drink of water upon the field of Waterloo.—Papers were read in the absence of their authors by Mr. Patrick, hon. sec.: one from Mr. J. T. Irvine, descriptive of some prehistoric flint implements found at Overton Longaville, in Huntingdonshire, by the Dowager Marchioness of Huntly, which was illustrated by some very careful drawings.—The other paper was by Dr. Fryer, explanatory of some recent discoveries on Brandon Hill, Bristol, where at an early date a hermitage and chapel were erected, but the first known occupant of which was Lucy de Newchurch in 1351. These discoveries were made during the excavations for the foundation of the Cabot Memorial Tower, which is to occupy the site of the ancient hermitage. The excavations had been carried down to the millstone grit rock of which the hill is composed, where a flooring of thin cement was met with, and on the removal of a portion of this floor a well-made grave was found, measuring 5 ft. 6 in. in length and about 2 ft. deep, tapering from the shoulders to the feet. The grave lay east and west, and was carefully lined with masonry. The grave contained a skeleton, and close by were found the remains of two other skeletons; some fragments of green glazed tiles were also found. The excavation produced several beds of ashes and dark-coloured earth and some early tobacco pipes and leaden bullets, which were found about 4 ft. above the earlier remains, indicating pretty distinctly the position of camp fires during the sieges of Bristol in 1643-4.—Dr. Fryer also contributed a short note on the composition of an Inca ornament, derived from the analysis of the metal of which it was composed.

Society of Biblical Archæology.—June 1.—Sir P. Le Page Renouf, President, in the chair.—A paper by Mr. H. Rassam was read, entitled 'Abraham and the Land of his Nativity.'

Physical.—May 28.—Mr. S. Bidwell, President, in the chair.—Mr. Elder read a paper, communicated by Dr. A. A. Gray, 'On the Perception of the Difference of Phase by the Two Ears.'—Mr. J. Rose-Innes read a paper 'On the Isothermals of Isopentane.'

Aristotelian.—May 24.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—Mrs. Schwann was elected a Member.—Papers were read by Mr. J. E. McTaggart, Mr. G. D. Hicks, and Mr. C. Webb 'On the Meaning and Value of Pantheism.'—The papers were followed by a discussion.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Tues. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Heart and its Work,' Dr E. H. Starling.
— United Service Institution, 3.—'The Future of the Torpedo,' Vice-Admiral P. H. Colomb.
Wed. Navy Records, 3.—Annual General Meeting.
— Geological, 8.—'Cretaceous Strata of Co. Antrim,' Dr W. P. Hume.—'An Account of the Portraits Inlaid,' Messrs C. J. Gardiner and S. H. Reynolds.—'Some Igneous Rocks in North Pembrokeshire,' Mr J. Parkinson.
Thurs. Royal Institution, 3.—'The French Revolution and English Literature,' Mr C. Collins.
— United Service Institution, 3.—'The Great Siege of Malta, 1565,' Rev. W. K. Bedford.
— Mathematical, 8.—'Models of the Regular Convex and Star Solids,' Mr W. W. Taylor.—'On the Primitive Substitution Groups of Degree Fifteen,' Dr G. A. Miller.
Fri. Royal Institution, 9.—'Diamonds,' Mr W. Crookes.
— Astronomical, 8.
— Physical, 5.—'Effect of Sea-Water on Induction Telegraphy,' Mr C. S. Whitehead.—'New Definition of Focal Length and an Instrument for its Determination,' Mr T. H. Blakesley.—'Decomposition of Silver Salts under Pressure,' Drs J. E. Myers and F. Braun.—'New Way of determining Hysteresis in Straight Strips,' Dr Fleming.
Sat. Royal Institution, 3.—'Music in England during the Reign of Queen Victoria,' Mr J. A. Fuller Maitland.

Science Gossip.

The death took place last month of Mr. H. B. Chamberlin, F.R.A.S., founder of the Chamberlin Observatory at Denver, in Colorado. Born at Manchester in 1847, he went to America when only seven years old and returned to England in 1890; his death was caused by a fall from a bicycle.

The decease is announced of the distinguished traveller Mr. Ney Elias, whose acquaintance with Central Asia was greater than that of any other Englishman.

A botanist of great scientific distinction has passed away in the person of Dr. Julius von Sachs, who, born in 1832 at Breslau, has just died at Würzburg, where he had occupied the Chair of Botany since 1868, after having been active in the same capacity at the University of Freiburg. Prof. Sachs was the author of several scientific works of a very high order, such as his 'Experimentalphysiologie der Pflanzen,' his 'Geschichte der Botanik,' and the 'Vorlesungen über Pflanzenphysiologie,' of which two latter works English translations have been published at the Clarendon Press. He also edited the Arbeiten des botanischen Instituts in Würzburg from 1871 to 1888.

At the session of the Vienna Academy of Sciences on Saturday last five foreign honorary members were nominated: Profs. Vogel and Bezold of Berlin, Gegenbaur of Heidelberg, the Right Hon. Max Müller of Oxford, and Lord Lister of London.

The fourth congress of South German Laryngologists will take place next week at Heidelberg.

We have received the first two numbers of the twenty-sixth volume of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani. Prof. Tacchini gives an account of the solar spots, faculæ, and protuberances observed at Rome during the first quarter of the present year, showing a diminution of all classes of these phenomena as compared with the last quarter of the preceding year. The spectroscopical diagrams of the solar limb are continued to the end of September, 1895.

FINE ARTS

Venus and Apollo in Painting and Sculpture. Edited by W. J. Stillman. (Bliss, Sands & Co.)

CONFRONTED with this magnificent folio in which Mr. Stillman has collected together those masterpieces of Greek and Early Renaissance art which represent Venus and Apollo, goddess and god of beauty, the reviewer naturally turns first to the splendid series of plates. We are so grateful, in fact, for the feast of beauty set before us that we sit down to the banquet forthwith without greatly caring to ask why it was spread, i.e., what are the author's views on idealism in art or on the development of Greek mythological types.

The plates begin with Renaissance paintings, and work back to the Greeks, and here at once a notable omission strikes us. Greek sculpture is represented; where is Greek painting? Where is our great national treasure, the white cylix of the British Museum with Aphrodite on the swan? In its sedate beauty, its austerity, its reserved, grave dignity, it is not only the most lovely, and, to use Mr. Stillman's favourite word, "ideal" image of the goddess that ancient art has left us, but it is also that which most fully embodies all familiar Greek characteristics. It is so finished an achievement in its own line that it need not fear to stand by the side of the perfect 'Venus and the Mirror' of Bellini, with which the series begins, and this is more than can be said of any of the Venus types of sculpture, which, as we well know now, though they are the echoes of bygone masterpieces, all belong to the decadence of Greek art.

In the matter, too, of reproduction the Greek marbles come off by comparison but badly. The Renaissance plates are, with few exceptions, of extraordinary beauty and softness; the marbles come out hard, cold, and too black, with a certain photographic rigidity that does scant justice to the softness of marble. The finest of the Greek plates is unquestionably the Venus of Milo. For the early date of this statue Mr. Stillman has long, as is well known, held a brief. He says, "The statue resembles so closely in its type of figure and technique the Victories of the temple of Nike Apteros, of Athens, that it must be attributed to the same epoch—that of the school of Scopas." Our view is diametrically opposite, and for the maintenance of his own Mr. Stillman has done well to reproduce only the upper part of the statue. It is when the statue is seen full length that its lateness, its uncertainty of motive, arising from eclecticism in composition, is felt; that there is a Scopasian element in this eclecticism is not to be denied, but there is also no less a striving after Pheidian characteristics. To our mind the simple topical explanation of the statue is the best. The Venus is no Victory, but a genuine Aphrodite, and she derives her type from the great statue of the island cult, the Tyche or Good Fortune. The type of the Tyche is well known to us from imperial bronze coins of Melos, inscribed ΤΥΧΗ, and from a relief on the drum of a column found in Melos, and reproducing the image of the cult. The pose in all these reproductions is closely analogous to that of our Venus, and the Tyche stood, as is clear from the relief, in a niche just like the one in which the Venus was found. With the exception of Mr. Stillman, we believe that nearly all archæologists now admit that the fragment of the hand holding the apple found with the Venus belongs to it. Venus held the apple not because of the judgment of Paris, but as her own attribute. In Magnesia she was worshipped as Aphrodite Μηλεία, and this in the island of Melos would have its special appropriateness. It was thoroughly in the manner of the later Greek artist to cast his goddess in the type of a local divinity, Aphrodite in the guise of Good Fortune. We have, moreover, in the recent discovery of the diary of the lieutenant of the ship that brought home the statue, unlooked-for confirmation of this theory. In the diary it is distinctly stated that Venus held the apple. This is, of course, not the time or place for the full discussion of all the complex questions of the finding, the restoration, the inscription, pedestal, &c., or the motive that led to the disappearance of the inscription; but we have to remember that the statue was presented to Louis XVIII. as a work of Praxiteles, and that the inscription which gave a later name was an awkward witness, and therefore not forthcoming. Apart from the inscription, however, to our minds the statue in its totality, though the magnificent work of a man of genius, stands convicted of a date not earlier than the second half of the second century B.C.

From this special point—which, as it is so closely connected with Mr. Stillman's name, could not be passed over—we turn to his general statements in his preface and introduction. In the preface Mr. Stillman is concerned to maintain the "innate and unalterable" nature of the idea of what is beautiful. "Of this," he says, "the unfaltering allegiance of all the great artistic epochs to the perfections of Greek art is perhaps the best evidence, and will be the justification of our work." No justification whatever is needed for this collection of noble things; if it were needed, it would not be found by a reference to the Greeks. If one thing is clearer than another from the sequence of these plates it is this, how much in Renaissance beauty there was that was not Greek—nay, that was alien to Greek limitations. To call whatever we admire "Greek" is but to darken counsel. Mr. Stillman is an ardent reactionary. "The Platonists," he says, "and especially the Neo-Platonists, are logically on the side of the artist, but art itself has in the present day so far turned its back on the ideal that between the mistakes of Impressionism and the scepticism of the realists there seems to be nothing common between modern art and Plato." Plato, if our memory of some utterances in the 'Republic' serves us right, was not too eager to be associated with the artists even of his own time. What "mistakes" of the artists he labels collectively as Impressionists Mr. Stillman precisely means he does not pause to tell us, but because we admire the Greek is it really necessary to blind our eyes to the beauty made visible by a Whistler? Any philosophizing about the ideal that blinds our vision and narrows our sympathies is, we certainly hold, "outside the limits of profitable study." After all, beautiful things make a direct appeal to the senses and imagination, and beauty, like good wine, needs no bush.

We could have spared the preface and still more the introduction. Mr. Stillman has chosen Apollo and Aphrodite for his subject. No one will quarrel with his choice, for the god and goddess came to the Greeks to represent their "ideal" of man and woman in the perfect beauty of youth. That is surely enough. But, having linked together Apollo and Aphrodite, he feels impelled to seek out some primitive connexion, some community of origin for the chosen two. This is mere misplaced ingenuity, needless and misleading. The complex, composite community of the Olympian gods is a unity, as we are learning day by day to realize, that arose by a process of the survival of the fittest from the endless variations of local cults. Two main strands went to its weaving, i.e., that substratum of population which some of us call Pelasgian, and the more purely Hellenic factor represented by Homer's Achæans. Of the whole community of Olympians no two have less, as it happens, of primary kinship than Apollo and Aphrodite. The link that Mr. Stillman institutes is that both are elemental deities of earth and sky. The Greek, like every other primitive man, made his gods in his own image, and did so from the outset; but this to Mr. Stillman is only a late stage of a purer nature worship—a "demoralized record of a senseless apotheosis in place of what was at first a principle of nature. The sun myths and earth myths are amongst those which declare their place amongst the purest and earliest, and of these the legends of Apollo and Aphrodite, while not exceptional in their persistence through all the stages of mythological development, are amongst those in which the devolution is the clearest and most interesting." Aphrodite, Universal Love, is, it seems, the daughter of Zeus, the bright sky, and Dione, the fruit-bearing earth, and so on and so on. Does Mr. Stillman really think this is the way primitive man, even if he be a Greek, imagines things? We should scarcely refer seriously to this mythological preface but that Mr. Stillman, with the instincts of his race, refers learnedly to the most recent discoveries, i.e., Mr. Evans's researches as to Mycenæan civilization in the Ægean and the newly found pictographic script. We quite agree that these researches will transform many of our most accredited views as to mythology, but certainly not by their ill-digested application to the revival of sun and earth myths.

The book is, however, we take it, not addressed to the scientific specialist, and for one philosopher who will be irritated by the preface and another mythologist who may be exasperated by the introduction there will yet remain the hundred artists and art lovers who will thank Mr. Stillman for enclosing in this luxurious folio a veritable hortus deliciarum.

ENGLISH AND WELSH CATHEDRALS.

English Cathedrals.—Westminster Abbey. By the Dean of Canterbury. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.—York Minster. By the Dean of York. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted.—Winchester Cathedral. By the Rev. W. Benham, D.D. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.—St. Alban's Abbey. By the Rev. Edward Liddell. Illustrated by F. G. Kitton.—Canterbury Cathedral. By the Dean of Ripon. Illustrated by W. Lapworth and others.—Norwich Cathedral. By the Dean of Norwich. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted.—Gloucester Cathedral. By the Dean of Gloucester. Illustrated by Herbert Railton.—Salisbury Cathedral. By the Dean of Salisbury. Illustrated by Alexander Ansted. (Isbister & Co.)

Bell's Cathedral Series. Edited by Gleeson White and E. F. Strange.—The Cathedral Church of Canterbury.—The Cathedral Church of Salisbury.—The Cathedral Church of Chester. By Charles Hiatt.—The Cathedral Church of Rochester. By G. H. Palmer, B.A.—The Cathedral Church of Oxford. By the Rev. Percy Dearmer, M.A. (Bell & Sons.)

A Monograph on the Cathedral Church of Wells. By Alfred A. Clarke. Illustrated by the Author. (Wells, Young; London, Smith & Son.)

The Cathedral Church of St. Asaph. By P. B. Ironside Bax. (Bournemouth, Commin; London, Stock.)

We know not whether we owe this rush of little books about big churches to the "Diamond" Jubilee, or to the thirteenth centenary of the landing of St. Augustine in Kent, or to any other cause, but here it is upon us, and the two groups at the head of the list are only the firstfruits of series, of which others are to follow.

To begin with the first of them. It does not prepare us for great historical exactness when a series called "English Cathedrals" begins with Westminster Abbey; and we are rather surprised that Dr. Farrar, who was for many years a member of the College of St. Peter at Westminster, should be guilty of the same solecism in his book. Of the book itself little need be said, for it is, with only a few omissions, the same as a paper contributed to a book called 'Our English Minsters,' brought out by the same publishers some years ago—as we now observe, without a date—and reviewed by us at the time. It is difficult to characterize Dr. Farrar's work. It is not a history of Westminster Abbey nor a guide to the buildings. His interest in the Abbey lies with the people and events which have been connected with it rather than with its importance as a monument of art and of history. He gives us some picturesque writing, but we are sorry that the opportunity of reprinting was not taken to correct the inaccuracies, which are many. The illustrations are some of those in the former book, but, having been reduced to a smaller size, they appear even less satisfactory than there.

The Dean of York generally follows his authorities better than does his brother of the southern metropolis; but he should not have repeated the "tradition" about a certain bit of paving being part of the altar of a pagan temple formerly on the site, seeing that the said tradition cannot be older than the fire of 1829. The illustrations resemble their subjects rather more than do those of the Canterbury book.

Dr. Benham's book is reprinted from the same source as Dr. Farrar's, with even less modification. It is chiefly remarkable for discursiveness. The door of the church supposed to be treated of is first reached on the twenty-third page of fifty-nine, and after that the writer makes frequent rambles to Oxford and other places.

Mr. Liddell's book contains the strange statements that the shrine of St. Alban is "carved in clunch stone," and that it was "put together with great skill and perseverance by Mr. Chapple," the clerk of works at the time of the finding. It is also curious that Lord Grimthorpe is named only once in the book, when it is said that the Lady Chapel has been "beautifully restored" by him. We hope it is not true, as said on p. 40, that the shrine has also "recently been restored"; but the vandals of St. Albans are capable of any atrocity. The illustrations of this book are the best of the series so far as it has appeared.

The Canterbury and Gloucester volumes are also new editions of papers in the same book. The former is eked out at the end to bring it to the required bulk, and the other is unaltered except in a paragraph which relates to the so-called "restoration" of the Lady Chapel, which is now in full career. The Norwich book, which, so far as we know, is new, is of like character with those which have come before it, but the illustrations are rather better, as are those in the Dean of Salisbury's contribution. His is the only book in the series, so far as it has been published, which is likely to be of use to anybody. We may not agree with everything that he says, but he does say something, and, eschewing mere wordspinning, he has tried with considerable success to put into the space at his disposal a good historical and descriptive account of the church over which he rules.

The next two books on the list are fairly good handbooks as such things are now, but they owe more to work in the library than to original study of their subjects, with the result amongst others that their information is sometimes out of date. The illustrations, which are often copied from older ones, are generally of better character than those of the other series, but in each book the plan is unsatisfactory. That of Salisbury is only a rather rough sketch, and that of Canterbury shows an arrangement which has not existed for very many years.

With the third in Messrs. Bell's series the author's name first appears. It shows itself to be the work of a man who has a good first-hand knowledge of the building he undertakes to describe. And, on the whole, it is well done, though Mr. Hiatt's history and archæology are somewhat old-fashioned, and we cannot always agree with his criticism. The Oxford and Rochester books show further improvement, and if this is maintained in those which are to follow the series may be expected to provide handy and useful guides to some buildings which have not hitherto had them. But two bad faults need to be corrected—the want of an index and that of a good plan. The illustrations generally are good, but the plans all through the series so far are no more than diagrams.

Why Mr. Clarke's book is called a monograph we do not know. A monograph on a cathedral without a ground-plan of its subject is, to say the least of it, incomplete. The book appears to have been written to the illustrations, which are rather good sketches, but seem to have suffered by too much reduction in the "processing." The text is an uncritical compilation, and its character is sufficiently indicated by the fact that it begins with a quotation from the late Mr. Mackenzie Walcott.

The last book to be noticed is in some respects the best. The writer has evidently a good personal knowledge of the building he writes about, and has made some original research. He is rather behind the time in ecclesiological knowledge, and he might have been more careful to see that the verb agreed in number with the nominative and that his Latin quotations were spelt right. But the book will be useful to visitors to the church and is worth the attention of the general antiquary. The Church of St. Asaph is the smallest of our old cathedrals. Its dimensions are not more than those of a parish church of the middling sort, and its general form is that of a parish church. It once had a collegiate arrangement, but the "restorers" who have done much to modernize the building have worked their will on its fittings, and brought them down to their dull ideal of parochial "correctness." Still the place has a history, there are some remains of antiquity about it, and it is worth a visit. This book alone of all those before us has an index.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Third Notice.)

We proceed with our observations upon the figure pictures in this exhibition—of course, it is hardly necessary to say, without making any attempt to classify them in order of merit. That would be a somewhat troublesome undertaking and likely to ruffle a good many susceptibilities. We shall begin with a picture the visitor can hardly fail to notice, for it is very large, and it is hung in a conspicuous place in Gallery III., The Ploughman and the Shepherdess (No. 209), by Mr. F. Goodall. It reproduces once again that version of Egyptian landscape which is peculiar to the painter, half sand, half water, with a sprinkling of palm trees and a few somewhat conventional figures of a kind but too well known to Mr. Goodall's critics. Confessing that we do not pretend to understand the subject, and that we are still less able to see the application of Byron's lines quoted in the Catalogue, let us say that the statuesque ploughman stands against the glowing evening sky, and the shepherdess sits far from him, almost in shadow and close to a pool of water. Between the two her sheep are straggling. To say nothing of much wild drawing in the sheep, the disproportions of the figures are so obvious that even an untrained eye will be pretty sure to detect them. On the other hand, the breadth, simplicity, and brilliance of the lighting and colouring do so much to help the picture that they prove once again the great value of those qualities, which go very far indeed towards securing what painters call style. Therefore, whatever may be the shortcomings of Mr. Goodall's art, he seldom fails in this respect. On this occasion his design is unintelligible, his drawing is more than questionable, his coloration is mannered, and the effect hopelessly hackneyed; still there is enough of style in it to make his work attractive to a certain extent.

Mr. Orchardson's Rivalry (227) depicts, as we have already mentioned, a complex flirtation between one of those elderly charmers of the Directory period, whom the artist has often painted, and three gentlemen, whose ages are as various as their costumes. Although there is nothing new in his subject nor in his method of treating it, the lady being quite an old acquaintance, and only one of the gentlemen being a stranger to us, it must be admitted that Mr. Orchardson tells his story with even greater spirit and success than usual; but as the story is not worth telling, we must fall back upon the painter's methods, and the extreme, though mannered felicity of his technique. His craftsmanship, indeed, is not merely clever; it is almost fascinating. Parts of his picture are quite exceptionally flimsy, yet the most dexterous and least sincere of those parts subserves the whole design with surprising success. When, however, we look minutely into the design, a point in which Mr. Orchardson is generally one of the happiest of picture-makers, it seems hardly to bear examination. The lady is quite uninteresting in herself, and it requires an effort to imagine that the painter's latent sense of humour made her so in order to show how much she is bored by the elaborate gallantries of her companions, and thus directed our attention to the looks and attitudes of the trio. The background, too, is exceedingly slight and unsound, but it is pleasant to find that the picture contains very much less empty space than is usual with an Orchardson. — A Venetian Broomseller (232) is one of Mr. H. Woods's best works, perhaps the best he has produced since he was elected an Associate; it is a view of a street in Venice, where a broomseller, a cleverly designed and deftly painted figure, is crying her wares. The architecture is exceedingly good, but rather heavy and painty. Although Mr. Woods's minor landscapes in this exhibition are pleasing, and adroitly rather than skilfully painted, we need not particularize them.—It is to be feared that the temptation to secure an easy success has seduced Mr. F. Brangwyn from the kind of art in which he excelled, and led him quite astray in Venice (219), which is simply a libel upon the beautiful city. The group of lifeless fishermen in the foreground is terribly rough and heavily painted, while the distance and the sky are dull and lightless. The artist seems to have lost that feeling for the picturesqueness and sentiment of his themes on which he was rapidly founding a reputation.—Another unsuccessful departure from former methods may be noticed. If Mr. J. H. F. Bacon had never seen M. Dagnan-Bouveret's extremely popular representation of Christ in the picture of 'The Last Supper,' which was lately exhibited in London, he would, we may be assured, never have departed from that mode of thinking and painting by which he was rapidly gaining distinction. It is to be regretted that Mr. Bacon, who has already had more than one style, should have selected for this additional one not only the weakest of his French model's heads, but one far remote from his own last and best performances. The fault of Peace be with You (239) is not only the weakness of the Saviour's face, but the mechanical and conventional composition of the nearly life-size figures, and the lack of novelty in the types and of inspiration in the design. Apart from these shortcomings the expressions are varied, the effect is homogeneous, soft, and harmonious; in fact, however, these elements, though excellent as art, are so much overdone in the work that it has become an academic exercise without sufficient virility and freshness to justify the painter's ambition and his claim to a better place than the hangers have given his picture.—Mr. Frith was singularly unwise to attempt such a subject as that of Juliet on the Balcony (257); it is, however, somewhat better painted than any of his recent productions, yet nothing can redeem his Juliet's leathery skin, lack-lustre eyes, and general tameness.

Mr. R. W. Macbeth's End of a Good Day (258) depicts the return of a hunting party to a Somersetshire manor house. Although the incidents are neither particularly fresh nor interesting, the figures are well designed and full of spirit; their expressions are good and in keeping with the theme; and the accessories, architecture, and costumes, as well as the dog, are extremely well painted, but the execution of the picture is unusually thin, and its colouring "tinty" and spotty.—The Two Corbies (262) of Mr. C. Q. Orchardson is a somewhat prosaic and undramatic rendering of that fine subject of the dead warrior lying unknown upon the lonely moorland. All that is pathetic in the design is to be found in the gathering gloom of a storm approaching from the distance; but of this it might be said, so obvious is it, that the incident suggests itself. The painting of the dead man's armour is a failure; it is dull, and looks like lead. In other respects considerable care and skill have been bestowed on the picture, and justify the hopes we have entertained of the young painter.

A capital picture of its kind is Mr. W. B. Gardner's An Alarm (450), for, like all his numerous designs, it tells its story in a fresh sort of way. The painting is above the average, and the work as a whole is more than usually pleasing. He also appears as an engraver in the Black and White Room, exhibiting an extremely solid and effective print (1719) after Mr. Godward's pretty classical piece called A Priestess, of which more has been made than we should have thought possible. The picture was recently at the New Gallery, and its painter contributes to the Academy a better work, Venus binding her Hair (664), exemplary for smoothness, completeness, and brightness. He evinces, however, more facility than virility, and yet he possesses a certain amount of taste, a decided love for beauty, and accomplishments which are rarely displayed in the Academy when life-size nudities are attempted. The whole-length standing goddess is seen in profile before a mirror while she binds a blue fillet about her chestnut hair. Though this figure is founded on the antique, the type of the Venus de Medici has been adopted in preference to a nobler one; the carnations are paler than they should be, a defect which is, perhaps, partly due to the very dark purple drapery of the background having been added after the figure was finished. It is to Mr. Godward's credit that, dealing with that very difficult subject a full-length, life-size standing nudity in strong daylight, he has devoted so much care and skill to his work.

In No. 288 Mr. R. Fowler has depicted with skill and some élan a life-size, naked nymph standing among flowers and addressing a term of Pan with the words,

Come, enchantment old, Whose spells have stolen my spirit.

Dawn breaks behind the trees in the background and adds to its effect. Although we do not understand the subject, we are bound to praise the technique of the picture, especially the graceful design of the figure and its execution.—In An Idyll (293) Mr. R. Jack has drawn and painted in a somewhat slight and dry manner, yet with some taste and grace, the whole-length figure of a nymph. Mr. Jack's powers and knowledge are manifest in this nudity, to depict which with so much skill and learning implies years of study as exacting as those required for any other education that is real and thorough.—The half-submerged nudities in Mr. J. W. Waterhouse's Hylas and the Nymphs (307) are graceful, and also appropriate to the subject; but the beautiful faces are (as is the case with most of Mr. Waterhouse's nymphs, witches, and heroines) a great deal too much alike; in fact, they are out of one mould, and that an elfish one. The drawing, too, of their figures is by no means irreproachable, and the figure of Hylas is really badly drawn and not nearly so well modelled as it should have been. The charm of the picture lies in the intense expression of the girls' eyes and the poetic suggestions of the gloomy pool and the forest background.

Mr. A. P. Burton's Night fleeing from Dawn (352) is in its way one of the best pictures. The life-size nudity of Night is finely drawn and most solidly painted. Her figure is a really fresh and vigorous bit of design, while its foreshortening is fine enough to be a technical triumph of such unusual value as to merit even warmer praise than Mr. Jack's naked nymph in 'An Idyll,' which is not at all equal to it. The rosy light of Dawn flushes most of Night's form as she traverses the sky, which, as she goes, changes its pale blue to green and gold. Her face, however, has hardly enough beauty to be worthy of the sumptuousness of her form and the energy of her attitude.

Of the whole-length nude figures in which this exhibition is richer than usual, the much attenuated boys in Beside Green Waters (462) are not nearly the best. Their carnations are pallid to excess, their construction is questionable, and their attitudes are tame and purposeless: the water is not green, but cool grey-blue, and the background is so far indescribable that it is a cliff or a waterfall as the spectator pleases. Mr. Tuke has painted much better nudities. In these, apart from their flesh colours, the modelling, though of a good sort, is insufficiently carried out, while the types of the figures are low and their positions are ungainly. Why paint nudities at all if not better than thus?—When Mrs. M. A. Raphael painted Eve (475) she undoubtedly had the courage of her profession, but not taste and judgment enough to choose an appropriate model. Mrs. Raphael may be sure that Adam would never have been beguiled by such an Eve as hers.—Mr. A. Hitchens's Galatea by the Spring of Acis (480) is a graceful nude figure, recumbent and weeping near the rock missile which slew her lover. The picture has agreeable colour, and might look better, or worse, if it had been hung lower down.—The critical student, looking at Mr. G. Thompson's Wood Nymph (496), is sure to repeat what he said of Mrs. Raphael's 'Eve': "Should not a naked woman, if painted at all, be beautiful, and beautifully painted?"

One of the pictures of the season is Mr. E. J. Gregory's Boulter's Lock (on the Thames), Sunday Afternoon (328), a spirited and amusing study of the crowd of boats of all sorts which strive to push through in the height of the season. Among the pretty faces and dashing costumes it is easy to recognize some clever portraits. Unfortunately, the sparkling colours, frank and free movements, just and strong effect of sunlight in this picture suffer much from the coarse and heavy painting of the water and the need of finish and a firmer touch. In these respects 'Boulter's Lock' is but a slovenly performance.—In The Garden by the River (321) Mr. Yeend King has introduced into a bright landscape some sparkling figures painted from nature in open daylight, and executed with such extreme care and decision that the result, despite some defects of keeping and grading, makes us much more hopeful of the artist's future than former works of his led us to be, for, though pleasing, they lacked the character and firmness we find here. The figures are ably introduced and make a capital subject.—Mr. C. H. Wood has surpassed himself in Fair Deceivers (322), a neatly painted and carefully studied, but rather pale picture of girls coquetting with their unseen admirers. The interior and its accessories are really good, the lighting has been thoroughly studied, and the whole is highly creditable to the artist, and leads us to expect good colour in his future works.—Mr. S. Muschamp's Circe (335) depicts, with much sympathy and undeniable feeling for character, the enchantress, wine-jar in hand, approaching her victim seated on a throne. Her half-mocking and sarcastic air, graceful attitude, and well-studied draperies are excellent points in a picture of unusual promise, which needs only a little more force of colour and tone to be first rate.

In Mr. A. Beckingham's Left in Charge (354) there is a good figure of a lady strolling towards us in a good landscape. The sunlight on the dark cedar, the seat beneath it, and the figure of the lady are excellent.—There is, too, merit of several sorts in Mr. F. Stead's Gathering Apples (362), but it is painty and opaque, though the general effect is good and truthful.—A highly noteworthy picture, marking a prodigious improvement in the artist's power and skill, is the Puritans (391) of Mr. E. Bundy. The types of the Puritans are extremely well chosen. The sunlight and shadows in which they appear are, apart from a certain prevailing chalkiness and opacity, extremely appropriate and well managed, so as to give importance to the chief figures where it is most desirable and where their attitudes and actions need to be emphasized or subdued. At the same time it is only fair to add that if the dark tones and stronger tints had been simplified and massed, the chiaroscuro would have been improved. The scale of the figures and the adjustment of the groups with regard to each other are so far successful as to prove Mr. Bundy a master of these difficult parts of his art.—The King of Sorrows (416), by Mr. W. S. Burton, the artist of the famous 'Puritan' of many years ago, is the picture we saw lately at the Graves Gallery. It is dry, somewhat harsh and cold, as well as much injured by the needless intrusiveness of a crudely coloured piece of drapery, upon which Christ is seated in mock state, for the sake of which the simplicity and homogeneity of the whole picture have been most absurdly sacrificed. It is, however, only right to call attention to the severe dignity and moving pathos of a very noble figure.—No. 417, M. G. Bacarisas's view of the Corso, Rome, is quite a different subject: a narrow street, with its cold, electric lights, its glaring and hot gas, its shops and its crowds of noisy and vulgar figures, from the bawling newsboys and the buxom nurse carrying the young baby to the languid ladies of a certain class. A picture full of animation and rich in characteristic points, it is quite as well painted as the subject requires, and is a by no means easy achievement.—From the lurid and uproarious Corso of modern Rome at night to the moonlit sea just before dawn fades into morning on Mount's Bay, where English fishermen are Tacking a School of Pilchards, as in Mr. P. R. Craft's picture, No. 435, the change is great indeed. This subject is the same as that which attracted Mr. N. Hemy, but though admirable in many respects and extremely creditable to the painter, it is not quite so successful as the 'Pilchards' (204), because Mr. Craft has not massed his materials so happily—the light, shade, colours, groups, and tones of the subject—and the whole wants force; in fact, this is a somewhat timid rather than weak example of appropriate treatment of a very fine and fresh subject.

Arab Market (463) is by Mr. E. Mills, and comprises groups of chafferers painted carefully, but without anything like a leading incident to lend interest to the whole, or to make the difficult subject worth painting. A little spotty, there is much good local colour in the picture.

There is a good deal of feeling in the hackneyed design of Mr. C. G. Anderson's lady seated at a piano and playing by lamplight crossed by the remains of daylight, a difficult effect which is fairly well treated in No. 482. The colour of her pale citron dress is well chosen for the chiaroscuro of the picture, in which the yellow flowers and the shadowed music-sheet hardly do their duty in the well-considered tone and colour schemes. Mr. Anderson is a good draughtsman.—There is a nicely painted face of a girl in Miss A. E. Manley's Coming (492), a damsel seated on a bench and waiting for her lover.—The Builder's Daughter (506), which refers to the Prentice Pillar in Roslyn Chapel, is the poorest of Mr. P. R. Morris's productions.—There is good style in Mr. G. H. Neale's "Our ain bonny Bairn" (507), but though broad, simple, and sympathetic, it is rather weak in tone. — In A Lively Haul (515) Mr. F. Morgan proves that he has got rid of that excessive paintiness and that clumsiness which were the chief faults in his works (otherwise often excellent) of years ago representing, as this does, capital groups of children at play. The present instance is brighter, clearer, and purer in its colours and shadows. We care less for his other pictures here, though none of them is without many attractions of a sort.—Destitute (520), by Mr. G. King, evinces some sarcastic humour, and there is a good deal of excellent, though extremely dry painting.—Mr. E. B. Leighton contributes In Time of Peril (521), depicting in a rather obvious and commonplace way the arrival in a boat of a mediæval warrior, of his family, and his plate, at the water-gate of a convent. This design reminds us of the illustrations which Wright and F. Stephanoff contributed to the Annuals and Keepsakes of our grandmothers' days, and the costumes show discrepancies Mr. Leighton ought not to be guilty of. He paints neatly and deftly rather than well and learnedly, and he has not a spark of humour in him.—If Mr. H. H. Piffard would use less paint, there is humour and pathos enough to justify his choice of so good a subject as that of Napoleon reviewing General Bertrand's children when they played at soldiers at St. Helena (527).—Mr. W. Langley's pious illustration of the Three Virtues (528) is a very good picture in the manner of Heer Israëls, and represents figures in the interior of a cottage.—The Courtship of William the Conqueror (529) depicts with considerable spirit Mr. St. G. Hare's notion of how that warrior rolled his future wife and all her finery in the mud of Bruges and beat her into the bargain. Mr. Hare, whose sense of humour surpasses Mr. Leighton's, lets us see that the lady had exasperated William before he took to these strong measures. In this way No. 529 is a good design, but it can hardly be called a picture, as it fails conspicuously in colouring and tonality. — We observe that, not for the first time, Mr. Perugini has assumed the mantle of the late Mr. E. Long, though he is a much better artist. This is manifest in A Fan-maker (559), where the motive and design could not be tamer nor the execution smoother. The picture represents an imbecile young woman of the class Mr. Long delighted in.—We are not quite sure that Mr. W. Logsdail's Maria from 'The Sentimental Journey' (564) was worth painting. Maria's face, if it were better drawn, would be less unattractive, but the work at large is unfortunately chalky and heavy, and the coloration, if the term can be used of what is neither systematic nor homogeneous, seems to have been settled at haphazard. Mr. Logsdail is capable of much better work.

There are more battle pieces here possessed of merit than usual, but none of them is first rate. One of the best is Quatre Bras (75), by Mr. V. M. Hamilton, which is not deficient in vigour, the main thing in such pictures, but (and it is not the less true on that account) is confused and confusing.—The rough execution and by no means too clean tones and tints detract from our satisfaction in Mr. E. Crofts's spirited designing of a number of obvious incidents which constitute The Attack on the Gatehouse of Hougoumont (196).—Mr. W. B. Wollen's Norman Ramsay at Fuentes Onoro (478) deals with the same subject that attracted Mr. R. C. Woodville in No. 940. The former is the more spirited, but it is not so good a design. Its effect is scattered like its incidents, which lack a dominant one on which our attention and sympathies can concentrate themselves. The horses—Mr. Wollen's speciality—are well drawn and their attitudes suit the subject. Of No. 940 it is difficult to say more than that, while it is well constructed as a whole, and its incidents are to some extent concentrated, they are not very fresh, and the drawing and painting are decidedly inferior; the surface, too, is bad, and the treatment rough as well as painty.—Lady Butler's Steady! the Drums and Fifes! (663) which is incomparably the best battle piece of the season, greatly surpasses both of the above in design and the suitability of the subject for painting. It has the advantage of a compact and moving incident, instinct with personal elements which appeal to our common humanity, while a charge of artillery, which is a mere hurly-burly, does not, however much the captains may shout and gesticulate and however furiously the horses may gallop. Lady Butler has often chosen her subjects with the good judgment which is manifest in this case, but she never justified the somewhat excessive popularity of her designs until she put before us this thin line of bandsmen stationed on a height at Albuera, and so exposed to fire that when a comrade or two fell or died at their feet it was not wonderful they lost their heads and made more noise than was required to overcome the screams of the wounded and groans of the dying round about them. Then came the stern command which gives its title to this capital work, and the musicians pulled themselves together as we see; the tall drummer rested his silent drum against his knee and stood at ease; the boy fifer stood up stiff and still and, with both hands down, looked straight before him, and, child as he was, disdained to keep under the lee of his big comrade. The arrangement of the groups is hardly less successful than the design at large or the single figures. Undoubtedly this picture would be far more admirable than it is if it were not for the dirty brownness of the shadows, which are incredible in open daylight, and the many marks of slovenliness.

M. FRANÇAIS.

WE have to record with much regret the death of almost the last survivor of that group of eminent French landscape painters with whom remained the traditions of their art as it was practised about 1840, with exceptional taste, refinement, and an idyllic yet naturalistic feeling, after the more demonstrative and less pure manifestations of the school of Delacroix had subsided. The genial and venerable M. François Louis Français was born at Plombières in 1814, and originally was a bookseller's assistant, in which capacity he had opportunities for adding to the fruits of very insufficient schooling. He began his art education by drawing all sorts of objects, largely landscapes in the neighbourhood of Paris, and also made a few illustrations for cheap books. His work was good enough to attract the attention of Gigoux, who took him into his studio, where Théodore Rousseau exercised a powerful influence upon his fellow pupil. Français began to exhibit landscapes in the Salon of 1837, and became intimate with Corot, who was really his model in painting and with whom he went to Rome. Here he painted romantic views of the Campagna, of which the success was so great as to win for him a gold medal. After this his position was assured, and his contributions to the Salon were frequent and excellent. Among the best of them were 'Bas-Meudon,' 'Orphée,' 'Bois Sacré' (a masterpiece of sad and expressive landscape), 'Environs de Rome' (a quasi-classic theme), and 'Lac de Nemi.' He succeeded R. Henry in the Académie des Beaux-Arts. Of late, as his health and strength failed, Français's pictures showed symptoms of the decay of the painter's powers, but none of his works is without a certain distinction as honourable to himself as it was grateful to his numerous friends and pleasant for them to discover.

ANCIENT ALEXANDRIA.

Smyrna, April 22, 1897.

WILL you allow me space for a short letter in reply to an article, 'About Alexandria,' in the issue of the Nineteenth Century for March, which I have only just seen? In that article Prof. Mahaffy criticizes somewhat severely a report made by me two years ago on the prospects of excavation on the site of the Ptolemaic capital of Egypt.

I do not propose to enter again on the main question. I am still of the same opinion as when I wrote my report, and recent operations in Alexandria have gone far to confirm me in it. Prof. Mahaffy, however, hints at certain motives for my opinion. May I point out that, although I am, or was, a "fastidious Magdalen don," I am about the last person against whom want of sympathy with Alexander, Alexander's foundations, or Alexander's successors can well be alleged? I have generally been accused of too much sympathy with Hellenisticism and Latinism, and too little with Hellenism in the strictest sense. Indeed, I first made Prof. Mahaffy's acquaintance by writing a paper on the deification of Alexander the Great! As a matter of fact, also, I had in 1895 very strong personal reasons for wishing to find a field for excavation in Alexandria—reasons so strong that they might well have influenced my judgment as much as his study of Ptolemaic history influences Prof. Mahaffy's.

Furthermore, may I say that I was sent neither to bless nor to curse a local archæological society, but to report to two independent societies in England, which have funds (none too large !) to devote to excavation, whether, compared with many other possible sites, Alexandria was the best field for their expenditure. The report I had to make was addressed, not urbi et orbi, but to those two societies, and had a private character which Dr. Mahaffy has not altogether prudently tried to change to general publicity. It was intended to be comparative. Dr. Mahaffy endorses some of the most damnatory of its premises: will he seriously question the general conclusion, and advise societies which can dig Thebes, Abydos, Memphis, Buto, Xanthus, Patara, Colophon, Cnossus, Tyana, or Cyrene, to postpone them for Alexandria? Or did he expect me to have been cheaply generous with the money of other people?

I have never said nor even thought that nothing of interest would be found in Alexandria. I feel sure art treasures and historical evidence will be slowly recovered by the unremitting efforts of Dr. Botti and the local society; but I do not base my belief on a sarcophagus carved in Sidon by imported artists from Greece. I do base it on such stray finds as the gold plate found under the Bourse Tussoun, which I not only knew, but once tried to buy. But what would the committee of a foreign society think of that find or everything unearthed near Pompey's Pillar as their reward for a season's expenditure?

As to most of what Dr. Mahaffy alleges about the site, time alone will vindicate him or me. He might leave irresponsible criticism alone for a season, and himself try three months' tomb-digging at Khadra. I should not subscribe, but would extend my sincere sympathy; and some day I shall hope to be his guide to several things in Alexandria which will be new to him, especially to the original of those "marble arches" of the mediæval travellers.

D. G. HOGARTH.

 We regret that pressure on our space during May unduly delayed the appearance of this letter.

THE PENDER SALE.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 29th and 31st ult. the well-known Pender Collection. Drawings: D. Cox, The Salmon Trap, 199*l.*; Crossing the Heath, showery weather, 94*l.* E. Duncan, Whitby Sands, landing fish, 215*l.* Copley Fielding, Doune Castle, Perthshire, 115*l.* Birket Foster, Turnberry Castle, Ayrshire, the early home of Robert Bruce, 330*l.* L. Haghe, The Choir of S. Maria Novella, Florence, 94*l.* W. Hunt, The Village Smithy, 252*l.*; Purple Grapes, Plums, and Greengages, 131*l.*; Purple and Yellow Plums, 60*l.*; A Child, with a red pitcher by her side, 152*l.* F. Pradilla, A Doctor of the Fifteenth Century, 183*l.* S. Prout, The Tomb of the Scaligers at Verona, 157*l.*; Rouen Cathedral, 141*l.* J. M. W. Turner, Florence, 357*l.*; Salisbury Cathedral, south view, 173*l.*; View of a Foreign Town, 110*l.* P. De Wint, Lincoln, early morning, 514*l.* Sir F. W. Burton, The Squire, 58*l.* W. S. Cumming, The Charge of the 93rd Highlanders at Cawnpore, 52*l.* F. Goodall, Water-Carriers on the Nile, near the Pyramids, 92*l.* K. Halswelle, The Haunt of the Wild Fowl, 89*l.*; On the Cherwell, 304*l.* H. Herkomer, Triumphant Spring, 68*l.* E. Nicol, Argument, and Conviction (a pair), 53*l.* D. Roberts, Aaron delivering the Message to the Elders of Israel, 50*l.* Pictures: Sam Bough, St. Monance, Fifeshire, 467*l.* Sir A. W. Callcott, An Italian Landscape, 609*l.*; A View of Eton from the River, Windsor Castle in the distance, 152*l.* W. Collins, Early Morning on the Sussex Coast, 1,155*l.* T. S. Cooper, A Winter Scene, 220*l.* J. S. Copley, Royal Children playing in a Garden, 840*l.* D. Cox, A Welsh Landscape, with a cottage, 409*l.* H. W. B. Davis, Highland Cattle crossing a Shallow Stream, 178*l.*; Towards Evening, four cows in a meadow, 136*l.* W. Dyce, The Soliloquy of Henry VI. during the Battle of Towton, 105*l.*; The Woman of Samaria, 168*l.* T. Faed, "O Nanny! will ye gang wi' me?" 367*l.* P. Graham, Rising Mists, 756*l.* F. Goodall, The Citadel of Cairo, 162*l.*; An Inundated Egyptian Village, 162*l.* K. Halswelle, Canterbury, distant view, 446*l.* Holman Hunt, Valentine rescuing Sylvia from Proteus, 283*l.* Sir E. Landseer, The Lost Sheep, 3,150*l.*; An Event in the Forest, 2,625*l.* B. W. Leader, "In the evening there shall be light," 1,207*l.* Lord Leighton, Phœbe, 577*l.* J. Linnell, A Grand View in Kent, stormy effect of sky, 493*l.*; Cattle crossing a Ford, 399*l.*; A Storm in Harvest, 378*l.* D. Maclise, The Sleeping Beauty, 100*l.* J. MacWhirter, A Highland Storm, 162*l.* Sir J. E. Millais, The Proscribed Royalist, 2,100*l.*; The Evil One sowing Tares, 420*l.* G. Morland, Landing Fish, 231*l.* W. J. Müller, An Encampment in the Desert, 1,680*l.*; Thebes, 210*l.* P. Nasmyth, Landscape, a woman in a red cloak on a road, 840*l.* J. Pettie, The Commencement of the Quarrel, 220*l.* J. Phillip, La Gloria, a Spanish Wake, 5,250*l.*; The Gipsy's Toilet, 1,785*l.*; Baptism in Scotland, 1,470*l.* Sir J. Reynolds, Portrait of Princess Sobieski, 472*l.*; Portrait of the Hon. Mrs. Damer, 136*l.* Briton Riviere, In Charge, a collie-dog on a rough stone wall, 126*l.* D. Roberts, The Chapel in the Church of Dixmude, West Flanders, 567*l.*; The Interior of the Church of St. Jacques, Antwerp, 357*l.*; A Chapel in the Church of St. Jacques, Dieppe, 472*l.* C. Stanfield, The Mew-Stone, Plymouth Sound, 378*l.*; The Wreck, coast of Antrim, 168*l.* J. Stark, A Woody Landscape, 220*l.* L. Alma Tadema, The Education of the Children of Clovis and Clotilde, 798*l.* J. M. W. Turner, Mercury and Herse, 7,875*l.*; Wreckers, Coast of Northumberland, 7,980*l.*; The State Procession, 7,350*l.*; Venice, The Giudecca, Santa Maria della Salute, and San Giorgio Maggiore, 7,140*l.* T. Webster, Sunday Evening, 525*l.* Sir D. Wilkie, The Cotter's Saturday Night, 1,312*l.* R. Wilson, A Hilly Landscape, evening effect, 294*l.* Rosa Bonheur, Mountainous Landscape, with cattle, 1,575*l.* P. de la Roche, Napoleon crossing the Alps, 210*l.* F. L. Français, A Woody Landscape, 105*l.* A. Holmberg, Far from the Noisy World, 724*l.*; The Lost Chord, 441*l.* Ary Scheffer, Paolo and Francesca, 336*l.* C. Troyon, The Heights of Surennes, 1,785*l.* Sculpture: M. J. Ezechiel, Bust of a Lady, in profile, 22*l.* A. Galli, The Bereft Maiden, 31*l.* J. Hutchinson, Right Hon. W. E. Gladstone, 38*l.* J. A. Houdon, Marie Antoinette, 44*l.* Baron C. Marochetti, Sir Edwin Landseer, 21*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

IN Room V. of the National Gallery a picture has been hung, numbered 1495, and entitled 'Christ disputing with the Doctors,' the work of Ludovico Mazzolino (c. 1480–1528). It contains twenty-eight delicately and elaborately finished figures, including that of the Saviour seated on a bench. On either side of Him are groups of the doctors; on our right are Joseph and the Virgin, and behind the latter St. Anne. The figures are animated, their heads carefully modelled; the carnations have, as is usual with the painter, a certain purplish warmth in an excessive degree. The façade of the Temple is decorated with a frieze sculptured to represent a combat of horsemen; further back are two square supports with niches containing statues; at the back is an alcove, above which another frieze represents Moses showing the Tables of the Law to the Jews, of whom the two foremost are kneeling reverentially. This brilliant and highly characteristic miniature measures only 12 by 8½ inches.

MESSRS. VIRTUE & Co. write:—

"Will you kindly allow us to remark about the notice of our 'Pictures of the Year 1897' in your last issue, that we do not wish to have a 'sly hit at a rival which was once weak enough to publish cuts of rejected pictures,' but to call attention to the difference of our publication from other issues or guides, one of which this year contains nearly half, and another about 25 per cent. of rejected pictures? As a matter of fact, of the two rival publications, the one which you mention with special commendation contains 7¼ out of 186 illustrations not hung, and the other 38 not hung out of 157 published. Meanwhile 'Pictures of the Year' does not contain one single illustration of a picture not on exhibition. It is possible the public neither knows nor cares whether all the reproductions of pictures in the Royal Academy guides are actually to be found in the respective exhibitions, but it comes as a disappointment to us that the Athenæum, the leading literary paper, has not discovered the difference in contents, or imagines the custom of including cuts of pictures not hung only occurred 'once.' To produce 'Pictures of 1897' in its present form is such a difficult matter, and necessitates printing at such very great pressure and speed, that it occurs to us whether it is worth while to put ourselves to the trouble of eliminating all rejected pictures, if an authority like yourself is not even aware of the difference. The change to us would be an enormous gain in time, as at present our printers have hardly sufficient time to do themselves justice."

THE Surrey Art Circle has formed an exhibition of works of art at the Clifford Gallery, 21, Haymarket.

MUSIC

The Autobiography of Karl von Dittersdorf. Translated from the German by A. D. Coleridge. (Bentley & Son.)

THIS autobiography was originally published in German by Messrs. Breitkopf & Härtel at the beginning of this century, and has long been valued by those familiar with the tongue of the Fatherland. Its translation into English by Mr. A. D. Coleridge will doubtless be welcomed by all cultured music lovers who take an interest in the state of musical art in the eighteenth century.

Karl von Dittersdorf was born at Vienna, November 2nd, 1739, and died October 31st, 1799, two days after he had completed the dictation to his son of this autobiography. His father held the office of costumier at the Court and at the theatre, and was enabled to give his five children a somewhat better education than was common in those days. Karl was the second of three sons, and early gave proof of exceptional musical aptitude. His first instructor was König, who after two years declared that he had nothing more to teach the youth. The young musician was then placed under Joseph Ziegler, a much esteemed violinist and composer of chamber music of his day. At his advice Karl attended the services on Sundays and saints' days at the Roman Catholic Church of the Benedictines, where the precentor permitted him to join the orchestra. This was the first step in a remarkably successful career, the history of which is told in an honest and vivacious manner that makes the book one of the most interesting of its kind. Karl's playing at the church one day attracted the attention of Prince Friedrich von Hildburghausen, whose service he entered in 1751. This appointment was of the greatest value to the boy, as the prince, taking a lively interest in him, placed him under the best masters, not only for music, but for languages, riding, dancing, and other accomplishments. Referring to this time, the author says:—

"With all these varied amusements, which made my life at Schlosshof a Paradise, my studies went on uninterruptedly. So far from hindering, they encouraged me to work, and even if I gave no proof of fiery genius, which never slumbers and sleeps, and seldom does what it is told, I am just as well content; for my honest punctuality in time and business stood me in good stead in later life."

The future success of Dittersdorf and the long list of works which he composed in all the higher forms are to be found in musical dictionaries, but the autobiography throws many interesting side lights upon his doings and the origin of his various compositions. One of the most attractive features of the book is the insight it gives into the life at the petty courts of the time. It was the fashion of those days for every prince to have his own private orchestra. In many of these Dittersdorf held important positions as solo violinist, and ultimately as conductor. When the reigning monarch visited the castles of his nobles, various performances and masques were arranged, the description of which provides much curious reading. On one of these occasions it was thought necessary to have a quartet of bagpipes, and it fell to Dittersdorf's duty to provide the party. To do this he secured the attendance of all the bagpipe players in the neighbourhood of Schlosshof, from amongst whom were selected the four most brilliant executants. "These," says Dittersdorf, "I kept....Then I got my own violin, and dinned the melody again and again into the ears of the four pipers, until they had it perfectly by heart." Manifestly the fortune of Dittersdorf was not always enviable. The account of the subsequent masque—which, we are told, "was so extraordinarily effective that every one was struck, and the Emperor grew quite emotional"—suggests the childishness of mind that must have prevailed to render such amusements acceptable.

After having twice fallen in love, and recovered, Dittersdorf met Mlle. Nicolini, concerning whom he says:—

"I had a many good opportunities of discovering both her good qualities and her solid character, so I made up my mind to come out boldly with an offer of marriage.....When at last I was clear upon that point, I one morning made her the offer, asking her at the same time to take as long an interval as she chose for reflection—a year if she liked! She answered that she needed no time for reflection."

It is satisfactory to learn that the gentleman's deliberation and the lady's quickness of decision resulted in a very happy union. Perhaps one of his most curious experiences was his appointment by the Prince-Bishop of Breslau to the office of Forstmeister (Forest Ranger) in the Principality of Neisse, the result of the accuracy of his shooting while out hunting with the prince-bishop. From these selections may be gathered a fair idea of the entertaining and readable nature of this autobiography, the translation of which shows Mr. Coleridge to have been in thorough sympathy with his subject.

THE WEEK.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.—'Lohengrin'; 'L'Attaque du Moulin'; 'Tannhäuser.'
QUEEN'S HALL.—Symphony Concerts.
ST. JAMES'S HALL.—Richter Concerts.
WESTMINSTER TOWN HALL.—Westminster Orchestral Society.

THE repetition performance of 'Lohengrin' at the Opera on Friday last week attracted just as large an audience as on the previous occasion, and would not require notice but for the fact that there were two changes in the cast. Miss Macintyre replaced Madame Eames as Elsa, and seemed a little uneasy with the German text, to which she was unaccustomed. She sang surprisingly well, however; and in the unavoidable absence of Miss Marie Brema, Miss Meisslinger was a youthful and engaging Ortrud.

M. Bruneau's picturesque opera 'L'Attaque du Moulin' was revived on the following evening, and the audience was small and apathetic. To account for this we must place on record the fact that, notwithstanding the extremely favourable reception accorded to the work in 1894 (Athen. Nos. 3480, 3481), it had been practically shelved, and therefore was probably unknown to the majority of those present. As regards individual embodiments there was very little cause for fault-finding in the performance. Zola's conception of a hearty, conscientious, if uncultured miller in Lorraine, 1870, seemed to be fully understood by M. Noté, and his powerful voice told well. Miss Esther Palliser sang and acted intelligently as Françoise. Miss Marie Brema had much to do in the way of rivalling Madame Delna as Marcelline, who has special reasons for detesting "la guerre, l'horrible guerre," but she succeeded, and has seldom, if ever, appeared to more advantage. M. Dufrane, as Le Capitaine Ennemi, was acceptable, and so were M. Scaramberg as Dominique and M. Bonnard as the unfortunate sentry. The chorus, however, left much to desire, and it was evident that the opera had been insufficiently rehearsed. It should be mentioned here that the performance of 'Die Meistersinger,' announced for Monday evening, did not take place, owing to the inability of M. Jean de Reszké to appear, and 'Tannhäuser' was substituted with M. Van Dyck in the titular part. The management may be requested to keep to the times announced for the commencement of the performances, for the changes suddenly made on Saturday and Monday must have caused much loss and inconvenience.

The regular series of Symphony Concerts at the Queen's Hall for the present season concluded last Saturday afternoon with what may be termed a popular programme, including Tschaïkowsky's 'Symphonie Pathétique'; Beethoven's 'Leonora' Overture, No. 3; and the 'Queen Mab' scherzo, all of which were well played under Mr. Henry Wood's direction. M. Gregorowitsch, a Russian violinist, impressed his hearers by a rendering of Mendelssohn's Concerto at once refined and powerful. He combines, so far as may be judged at a first hearing, all the leading qualities that go to form a fiddler of high rank, that is to say, good tone, artistic and technical skill in phrasing, and an ear that renders the executant able to play with perfect intonation. A better performance of Mendelssohn's somewhat hackneyed work has not been heard of late. Tschaïkowsky's lively little suite 'Casse-Noisette' concluded the concert. Madame Blanche Marchesi introduced, for the first time in England, M. Saint-Saëns's graphic and musicianly setting of Victor Hugo's tragic ballade 'La Fiancée du Timbalier,' a declamatory and discursive, but unquestionably effective piece. She sang it artistically, if we make allowance for the fact that her voice did not prove quite sufficiently powerful for some of the passages.

The second Richter Concert on Monday evening was noteworthy for the production of Mr. F. H. Cowen's Sixth Symphony, described as the 'Idyllic.' It is in the key of E major, and though classical in form it has a "poetic basis." We are told that the first movement is intended to suggest "the pleasurable sensation of awaking in the country on a breezy summer's morning"; the second, a stroll through the fields; the third, peace and religious meditation; and the fourth, village festivities in the evening, which last until night closes in. Here, then, we have a theme exactly suited to Mr. Cowen's idiosyncrasy as a composer, and although we do not pretend to speak dogmatically on a symphony on a first hearing, initial impressions of the 'Idyllic' were extremely favourable. The themes, or at any rate some of them, are pleasantly old-fashioned, and the orchestration is as piquant as it could well be. We must hear the work again when the first opportunity arises. The new pianist, M. Gabrilowitsch, who was introduced in Tschaïkowsky's extremely vigorous Concerto in B flat minor, is undoubtedly an executant of great ability. His execution reminded the listener of Rubinstein, and he will be followed closely at his forthcoming recitals. Dvorák's so-called 'Triple Overture,' but more properly speaking romantic symphony, headed the scheme.

The Westminster Orchestral Society's concert on Wednesday was entirely successful in an artistic sense, Mr. Stewart Macpherson's orchestra showing further improvement. The symphony was Gade's rather peculiar work in D minor, No. 5, Op. 25, in which there is an obbligato part for pianoforte—not a pianoforte solo as in a concerto. Miss Rosalind Ellicott's Fantasie in A minor for piano and orchestra, produced at the Gloucester Festival on September 11th, 1895 (Athen. No. 3543), was well played, as to the solo part, by Mrs. Clara Asher on the present occasion. Some cleverly written pieces for violin and orchestra by Signor Achille Simonetti were excellently interpreted; and songs by Brahms were sung with perfect refinement by Mrs. Kate Lee, who may be specially praised for her German pronunciation.

Musical Gossip.

THE Ascension Day performance of 'Elijah' by the Queen's Hall Choral Society was artistically successful, but the attendance was not very large. Mr. Santley resumed the titular part, and the other principal vocalists were Miss Thudichum, Madame Belle Cole, and Mr. Lloyd Chandos. The choir sang extremely well throughout.

THE Kneisel Quartet gave their second concert last Saturday afternoon, and, as before, three works were performed, these being Dvoràk's Quartet in E, Op. 80, of which a delightful interpretation was presented; Beethoven's great Quartet in A minor, Op. 132; and Haydn's in D, Op. 64, No. 5.

THE "Société des Instruments Anciens," founded by MM. Diemer, Delsart, Waefelghem, and Grillet, attracted a numerous body of amateurs at their first concert in the Salle Erard on Monday afternoon. To give the instruments the French names used in the programme, they were the clavecin, viole de gambe, viole d'amour, and vielle; and among the quaint compositions presented were some by Couperin, Ariosti, Rameau, Daquin, and J. S. Bach. They were all carefully rendered, and the performance was certainly interesting to musicians with antiquarian tastes. A second concert was announced for Friday evening this week.

IN M. Sevadjian's second recital at St. James's Hall on Tuesday afternoon the principal items were Grieg's Sonata, Op. 7, and a further selection of 'Airs Arméniens' from his own pen, brief trifles decidedly Oriental in character. Liszt's fantastic piece 'Après une Lecture de Dante' is a dreary, meaningless composition. Throughout M. Sevadjian played with much fluency, but he might on future occasions offer more interesting programmes.

THE first of three orchestral concerts, which took place under the auspices of Herr Kruse at St. James's Hall on Tuesday evening, afforded ample evidence that he is an able solo executant as well as a perfect second violinist in the Joachim Quartet. Herr Kruse played the principal part in Spohr's Concerto in E minor, No. 7, and Max Bruch's in G minor, No. 1, being more successful in the latter than the former, as his style is not sufficiently sentimental for Spohr's music. An excellent orchestra, under the direction of Prof. Villiers Stanford, deserved commendation for the rendering of Brahms's 'Tragic' Overture and Beethoven's rarely heard 'Leonora' Overture, No. 2. Madame Blanche Marchesi was, of course, artistic in airs by Handel and Massenet.

A HIGHLY commendable orchestral concert was sustained by students of the Guildhall School of Music in the large hall of the City of London School on Wednesday evening. Capital performances were given of one of Haydn's Symphonies in D and Beethoven's 'Coriolan' Overture, under the direction of Mr. W. H. Cummings; and much promise as a composer was shown by Clarisse Mallard in a scena entitled 'Daybreak.' All the pupils who appeared gave ample evidence that they are in good hands.

ARRANGEMENTS for the Carl Rosa Opera season at Covent Garden, which will commence in October next, are already advancing rapidly, and it seems probable that much of interest will be done, though until an official announcement is made it would be rash to offer any definite information which might eventually prove delusive.

THE Sir Charles Halle Scholarship at the Manchester Royal College of Music is now well endowed, and will be of the annual value of 30*l*. Candidates must apply to the Registrar not later than July 19th, and the first competition will take place on September 27th.

THERE is much controversy at Leeds respecting the lowering of the Town Hall organ to the pitch known as le diapason normal. The majority of musicians, of course, advocate the reform, though Sir Arthur Sullivan takes a different view, and supports it by reasons; but Prof. Villiers Stanford, in a letter to a local paper, effectually demolishes the arguments used, and concludes with words which may well be quoted: "The first importance is the presentation of the works of the great masters at the pitch for which they were written, and not all practically transposed a semitone higher, to the destruction of their tone colour and of the human voice." We may add that if the adoption of the French pitch might result in a "disastrous muddle" at the next Leeds Festival, it is difficult to understand why no muddle, but brilliant artistic success, crowns nearly all the performances that take place in the Queen's Hall, Langham Place. As the change must become universal in this country, the sooner vocalists and instrumentalists recognize this fact the better for them.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

MON.	Royal Opera Covent Garden, 'Tristan and Isolde,' 7.30.
TUES.	M. Gabrilowitsch's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Florence Hughes's Vocal Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Mr. William Nicholl's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Misses Klean and Lieut.-Col. Wyon's Concert in Aid of the Prince of Wales's Hospital Fund, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 'Tannhäuser,' 8
WED.	Fitzner Quartet Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Kneisel Quartet Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Madame Melba's Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Alfred Bayliss's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Choral Concert, 'The Death of Moses,' 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
—	Mr. Ormie Darvall's Concert, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
THURS.	Mlle. Chaminade's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Cerasoli's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mrs. Kate Ralph's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
—	Mr. E. Jaques-Dalcroze's Orchestral Concert, 8.30, St. James's Hall.
FRI.	Handel Festival, Rehearsal Day, 12, Crystal Palace.
—	Miss Maud MacCarthy's Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Adela Verne's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Herr Kruse's Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
SAT.	Sarasate Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Charles Gardner's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Mr. Vivian Bennett's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Florence Daly's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
—	Royal Amateur Orchestral Society's Concert, 9, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE ELIZABETHAN DRAMA.

Temple Dramatists.—Arden of Feversham. Edited by the Rev. Ronald Bayne.—The Two Noble Kinsmen. Edited by Prof. C. H. Herford.—Dr. Faustus. Edited by Mr. Israel Gollancz. (Dent & Co.)—Trustworthy texts, sufficiently introduced and annotated for the supposed requirements of the general reader, handsome printing, and a convenient pocket-volume form being the main objects of this series, it will be sufficient to say of the first two plays on our list that their editors have done their work satisfactorily. We have noted but one slip of any importance. Prof. Herford, in the last page of his introduction, assigns to "Mr. Rolfe" work actually done by Mr. Robert Boyle. Apart, however, from the question of Shakspeare's share, if any, in these two plays—a question that probably will never be definitely answered—an editor has no great difficulties to contend with, each play having but one authoritative version. With Marlowe's 'Faust' Mr. Gollancz has had a more serious task. There are two versions of the play he has undertaken to edit, differing enormously, and to understand their relation to each other separate reprints of both are absolutely necessary. Mr. Gollancz is apparently not of this opinion; he approaches his subject with a light heart. His text, he tells us, "represents an attempt to blend the two versions of the quartos of 1604 and 1616; it follows neither the one text nor the other, but results from a 'contamination' of both." We can only guess at the word buried under this malapropian "epitaph," for to the best of our belief it forms no part of Mrs. Malaprop's "orthodoxy"; but certainly to us this "contamination" has meant confusion, and we suspect Mr. Gollancz has himself been affected by it; numerous wrong references in the notes, and the attribution of the readings of one quarto to the other, suggest this. In one case, which concerns a whole scene, we should like Mr. Gollancz to reconsider his "contamination." His scene vii. represents two clowns, Robin and Dick, who have got hold of Faustus's conjuring-book; his scene ix. represents two clowns, Robin and Ralph, who have also got hold of Faustus's conjuring-book. The motive of both scenes is the same, though the dialogue differs greatly. We have always supposed that this scene vii., taken from quarto 1616, was the equivalent in that quarto of the scene ix. taken from quarto 1604; but in his notes the editor tells us that his scene vii. is "in nowise represented" in quarto 1604, and that his scene ix. is "omitted" in quarto 1616. He prints both versions, and tells us that neither exists. Errors, however, excepted, it must be admitted that the reader gains a good deal and loses little by Mr. Gollancz's recast of the play. Whether his work exceeds or not the legitimate limits of his office as editor is a question we shall not discuss.

The Works of William Shakspere. Avon Edition. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—A cheap one-volume edition, plays and poems, too heavy for comfortable reading, and, though perfectly legible, admirable neither for print nor paper. The text, we are told, is mainly that of Delius. In lieu of notes or glossary it is supplemented with an abridgment of Miss Evangeline O'Connor's 'Index to Shakspere's Works,' a book published by the firm some ten years ago, which we recollect noticing at the time as containing some good points, but, on the whole, as being better in intention than in execution. So far as can be judged by this abridgment, the work has not been revised since then.

The Works of William Shakespeare. Whitehall Edition, Vol. VIII. Edited by T. Gregory Foster. (Constable & Co.)—We have from time to time acknowledged receipt of the preceding volumes of this excellently printed edition. The present volume contains the Poems and Henry VIII.

The Old Dramatists: Conjectural Readings. By K. Deighton. (Constable & Co.)—In 1893 Mr. Deighton issued in pamphlet form some notes on Marston; these he reissued in 1894, adding to them notes on Beaumont and Fletcher, Marlowe, and Peele; he has now gathered these notes into a small volume, containing besides a large additional number on Chapman, Heywood, Greene, Middleton, Dekker, and Webster. Altogether we have here a mass of over five hundred conjectural readings of very varying interest and importance. Some few of these we have noted as excellent and as sure eventually to take their place in the authorized texts; a few more we can only characterize as ingeniously extravagant. Some, again, have already been published in editions of the plays not consulted by Mr. Deighton. The bulk, while they are for the most part such as would suggest themselves to an intelligent and careful reader acquainted with the literature of the time, will be useful by drawing attention to the doubtful passages of the texts to which they refer. For the most part, however, they are thrown before the reader without a word of comment. Certainly the collection would have gained by selection and more liberal treatment, and we notice that the author himself has appended to his book an index to the "Principal Emendations Proposed"; these amount to only 165 of a total of 512, and the suggestion is that the remainder are not of absorbing interest.

Nos Auteurs et Compositeurs Dramatiques: Portraits et Biographies. Par Jules Martin. (Paris, Ernest Flammarion.)—Ushered in by a preface by M. Maurice Donnay appears a 12mo. volume of some five to six hundred pages, intended as a companion to the 'Nos Artistes' and 'Nos Académiciens' of the same author. The work is a small encyclopædia, giving portraits and biographical sketches of some hundreds of living dramatists and composers, with a list of their works. It is thoroughly up to date, and forms a useful supplement to more important works.

Dramatic Gossip.

IT is a curious fact that the last week in May in what is supposed to be the busiest of all seasons has been conspicuous rather for the closing of theatres than the production of novelties. The only new English pieces that have been given have been offered tentatively at afternoon representations. 'Belle Belair' has meanwhile been withdrawn with haste almost unprecedented from the Avenue; and the Lyric, at which performances of 'Othello' have ceased, is now closed. At a still earlier date 'Mr. Sympkyn' had been withdrawn from the Globe, at which house 'An Irish Gentleman,' by Messrs. Murray and Shine, is in rehearsal.

No more successful than on its first production in America has been Mr. Gilbert Parker's adaptation 'Seats of the Mighty,' with which Mr. Tree began his management of Her Majesty's. The piece is accordingly withdrawn this evening. On Monday 'Trilby,' with Mr. Tree and Miss Dorothy Baird in their original characters of Svengali and Trilby, will be played as the first of a series of revivals, in which it is proposed to include 'Capt. Swift' and 'The Red Lamp.'

THIS evening witnesses at the Haymarket the first production of 'A Marriage of Convenience,' an adaptation, it is stated, of 'Un Mariage sous Louis XV.,' by the elder Dumas, first produced at the Théâtre Français in 1841, with Madame Plessy as the heroine. The original is a comedy in the vein of 'Mlle. de Belle-Isle,' very simple in story, but offering dramatic opportunities.

AN adaptation of 'Mlle. de Belle-Isle' is also promised at the Duke of York's Theatre. It has been executed by Messrs. Grein and Churchill, and is to be given on the afternoon of the 15th inst.

MLLE. JANE MAY appeared on Monday at the Royalty as the heroine of 'Les Amours de Cléopatre,' an amusing comedy of M. Marc Michel, and as Pierrot in 'Les Premiers Armes de Pierrot.' On Thursday she played Joseph in 'Le Gamin de Paris, a two-act vaudeville of Bayard and Vanderburch, produced at the Gymnase Dramatique in 1836. The part of Joseph, now taken by Mlle. Jane May, is that in which Bouffé first established his reputation.

A FEW playgoers were beguiled on Monday afternoon to the Globe to see a play in three acts by Mr. H. W. Williamson, entitled 'Queenie.' The announcement of this was disingenuous. The play proved to be a reduction into three acts of a comedy drama given at the Vaudeville on April 9th, 1889, under the title 'The Queenie.' Two of the original cast, Miss S. Vaughan and Miss M. Brough, reappeared in their former characters.

'MACBETH' was revived on Monday at the Olympic as one of the series of representations of Shakspeare at popular prices. The curious and unwonted announcement that all seats were taken was put forward some days in advance.

ON Tuesday afternoon Sir Henry Irving repeated at the Prince of Wales's his fine performance of Geoffrey Brewster in Dr. Conan Doyle's 'Story of Waterloo.' This impersonation is a veritable masterpiece. In 'Pygmalion and Galatea,' subsequently given, Miss Esmé Beringer played Galatea with much feeling and tenderness. Miss M. A. Baird as Myrine created a highly favourable impression. Mrs. Clement Scott, Mrs. Billington, Mr. F. Cooper, and Mr. John Le Hay were in the cast.

'THE LAY FIGURE' is the title of a farcical comedy adapted by Mr. Ralph Lumley from the French which will, when occasion requires, replace 'The Queen's Proctor' at the Strand.

THE Court Theatre, from which 'The Hobby Horse' has been withdrawn, will be closed during the first three days of next week, and reopen on Thursday with a revival of 'Caste,' with Mr. Hare as Eccles and with a company differing little from that with which it was given last year at the Lyceum.

'THE COUNTY FAIR,' a play of New England life, which has had a great success in America, is given this evening at the Princess's.

AN adaptation by Mr. Edwin Gilbert of 'In the Golden Days,' by Miss Edna Lyall, is promised at the Matinée Theatre for the 17th inst.

'FOR THE HONOUR OF THE FAMILY,' a version of Augier's 'Mariage d'Olympe,' in which Miss Eleanor Lane, an American actress, will appear, is promised for the 10th inst. at the Comedy.

A DRAMA by Mr. Walter Frith, entitled 'The Mills of the Gods,' has been accepted by Mr. and Mrs. Kendal with a view to production in the autumn.

THE death is announced of Jeanne Plessy, better known as Madame Arnould-Plessy, formerly of the Comédie Française. Born at Metz, September 7th, 1819, she entered the Conservatoire in 1830, and made her début at the Comédie Française, March 10th, 1834, as Emma in 'La Fille d'Honneur.' At the close of the year she became sociétaire. Between that time and 1845 she "created" many important parts in 'La Passion Secrète,' 'Le Verre d'Eau,' 'Une Chaîne,' and other pieces. In July, 1845, Jeanne Plessy left Paris for London, where she married J. F. Arnould the dramatist, who died in 1854. As the result of legal proceedings brought by the Comédie Française she was cast in 100,000 fr. damages, and deprived of her privileges as sociétaire. She stayed till 1855 in St. Petersburg, where she acquired a great reputation. In 1855 she was engaged as pensionnaire at the Comédie, where she played in the comedy of Molière and Marivaux. Among her conspicuous successes in the modern repertory were La Baronne in 'Le Fils de Giboyer' and Madame Lecoutellier in 'Maître Guérin.' A still greater triumph was obtained by her on the revival of 'L'Aventurière.' On May 8th, 1876, she took her farewell benefit at the Théâtre Français, playing in the first three acts of 'L'Aventurière,' the third act of 'Le Misanthrope,' and 'Le Legs.' She died at her country residence, the Abbâye du Quartier at Courtivron, Côte d'Or. She was an "infant phenomenon," and was able, it is said, at the age of ten to recite the whole of Molière's 'Misanthrope.' She acted in London in her earlier years, and spoke English fairly well.

THE publication of Mr. Fitzgerald Molloy's 'Romance of the Irish Stage' has been put off until the autumn, in order to secure copyright in the United States, where the work will be issued by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co.

THE Irish Literary Society makes a fresh departure at St. Martin's Town Hall on the evening of the 10th inst., when Lord Dufferin, supported by Lord Russell of Killowen, presides at a lecture on 'Sheridan,' by Richard Ashe King, to be followed by a concert and dramatic recital, at which songs and scenes from the plays of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, Sheridan Knowles, Sheridan Le Fanu, Lady Dufferin, and the Hon. Mrs. Norton will be sung and acted by Mrs. Hutchinson, Madame Antoinette Sterling, Mrs. Kate Lee, Miss Mary Kingsley, and Miss Honor Brooke, Mr. Wm. Ludwig, Mr. Joseph O'Mara, Mr. Kennerley Rumford, Mr. Kirwan, and Mr. Arncliffe.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—W. F. M. & Co.—C. C.—H. B. C.—W. P.—received.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

Erratum.—No. 3631, p. 707, col. 1, line 6 from foot, for "1792" read 1794.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION BY POST.

To all parts of the United Kingdom.

	s.	d.
For Twelve Months...	15	3
For Six Months	7	8

For all Countries within the Postal Union.

For Twelve Months...	18	0
For Six Months	9	0

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

POPULAR ROYALTY.

By ARTHUR H. BEAVAN, Author of 'Marlborough House and its Occupants.' Demy 8vo. cloth, 10s. 6d.

This book contains life-sketches of Her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Family, besides four chapters reviewing the national advance and changes during the last seventy or eighty years. A special feature will be the numerous full-page illustrations and frontispiece portrait of the Queen, reproduced in photogravure.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATIONS,

1827-1892. The Experiences of Sixty-five Years from the Accession of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence as Lord High Admiral to the End of the Naval Administration of Lord George Hamilton. By the late Sir JOHN HENRY BRIGGS, Reader to the Lords and Chief Clerk to the Admiralty. Edited by Lady BRIGGS. Illustrated with 10 Photogravure Portraits. Demy 8vo. cloth, ONE GUINEA.

"*" Prospectus sent on application.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND THE LIBRARIES.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

The LIFE of NELSON the EMBODIMENT of the SEA POWER of GREAT BRITAIN. 2 vols. demy 8vo. Illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics.....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

SIAM; on the Meinam from the Gulf of Ayuthia. By MAXWELL SOMMERVILLE, Professor of Pennsylvania University. Together with Three Romances illustrative of Siamese Life and Customs. With 50 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. cloth, 14s.

PEN and PENCIL in PARLIA-

MENT. By HARRY FURNISS. Profusely illustrated by the Author. Crown 4to. cloth, 5s.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

THE MASSARENES.

By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

PUNCH says:—"Ouida's latest novel, 'The Massarenes,' is from every point of view excellent."

TRUTH says:—"So interesting that in spite of its exceptional length it will seem to most readers tantalizingly short."

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

A Tale of the Australian Bush. By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

"Strikingly original and ingenious, animating, interesting, and puzzling.....Deserves grateful recognition by lovers of tales well told."—World.

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED. T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.'

"The development of events is extremely interesting; it is invested at various stages with fine touches of tenderness, and the racy dialogue is a constant source of enjoyment."
Scotsman.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

JUNE NUMBER.

LONDON as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. V. London Salons. Written and illustrated by Mr. Gibson.
UNDERGRADUATE LIFE at PRINCETON. Old and New. (Illustrated.) James W. Alexander.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. Chaps. 14-15. (Concluded.) Richard Harding Davis.
The NEW LIBRARY of CONGRESS. (Illustrated.) Montgomery Schuyler.
The OPEN BOAT. Stephen Crane.
A PARTING SONG. Arthur Sherburne Hardy.
The NON-COMBATANT. (Illustrated.) Octave Thanet.
WITH a BIT of GORSE from CARNAC. Lilla Cabot Perry.
A NORMANDY PASTORAL. (Illustrated.) Theodore Robinson.
The STORY of a PLAY. Chaps. 11-13. W. D. Howells.
TO a POET on a VACATION. George Meason Whicher.
RALEGH in GUIANA. Barrett Wendell.
&c. &c. &c.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

CHAPMAN & HALL'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL IRELAND.

The DOLMENS of IRELAND. Their Distribution, Structural Characteristics, and Affinities in Foreign Countries; together with the Folk-lore attaching to them, with Plans and Illustrations, and an Introduction dealing with the Anthropology of the Irish Race. By WILLIAM COPELAND BORLASE, M.A., late President of the Royal Institution of Cornwall, and a Vice-President of the Society of Antiquaries of London. With 4 Maps, 800 Illustrations, and 2 Coloured Plates. 3 vols. royal 8vo. 5*l.* 5*s.* [This day.

One of the most elaborate archæological works of modern times. For the last ten years Mr. Borlase has devoted the best part of his time to elaborating this truly monumental work mentioned. A large proportion of the drawings and measurements have been taken by the author himself during his numerous journeys to Ireland.

NATURAL HISTORY OF AUSTRALIA.

The NATURALIST in AUSTRALIA. By W.

SAVILLE-KENT, F.L.S. F.Z.S., &c., Past President Royal Society of Queensland; formerly Assistant in the Natural History Departments of the British Museum; Author of 'The Great Barrier Reef of Australia,' 'A Manual of the Infusoria,' &c. Illustrated by 48 Full-Page Collotypes, 7 Coloured Plates by Keulemans and other artists, and numerous smaller Illustrations in the Text. Royal 4to. 3*l.* 3*s.* net. [Ready.

Mr. Saville-Kent is already known as the author of 'The Great Barrier Reef of Australia.' His new book contains the results of many years' exploration, and include observations on the aboriginal tribes as well as on the natural history of the island continent. Special attention is given in it to the author's favourite subject, aquatic zoology.

FOR ARTISTS AND DESIGNERS.

PLANTS and their APPLICATION to ORNA-

MENT. Edited by EUGÈNE GRASSET. 72 Hand-coloured Plates in portfolio. 5*l.* 5*s.* net.

This magnificent work is indispensable to art students, artists, art masters, designers, builders, decorators, bookbinders, &c. The 72 plates are coloured by hand, under the immediate superintendence of M. Grasset, the greatest decorative designer in Europe, and consist of twenty-four different examples of natural flowers, with two plates to each example, showing how the form of the plant or flower may be applied to ornamental design.

THE WORK IS AN ATTEMPT TO STEER A COURSE BETWEEN THE FANATIC DETRACTOR OF IBSEN'S DRAMATIC WORK AND THE IBSEN FANATIC.

IBSEN on HIS MERITS. By Sir Edward

RUSSELL and PERCY CROSS STANDING. Crown 8vo. 5*s.*

The MANCHESTER COURIER says:—"A clever and careful analysis of the leading plays and poems.....The greatest enemy of Ibsen will find in it some new light upon the character of the plays; some new meanings; and, above all, it would be difficult to find another criticism in which the relation of Ibsen's work to actual human life is more clearly or more forcibly pointed out."

A VOLUME OF POEMS BY THE AFRICAN POET.

LYRICS of LOWLY LIFE. By Paul Laurence

DUNBAR. With Photogravure Portrait of Author. Small crown 8vo. 5*s.*

Extract from the Introduction by W. D. HOWELLS:—"So far as I could remember, Paul Dunbar was the only man of pure African blood and of American civilization to feel the negro life æsthetically and express it lyrically. It seemed to me that this had come to its most modern consciousness in him, and that his brilliant and unique achievement was to have studied the American negro objectively, and to have represented him as he found him to be, with humour, with sympathy, and yet with what the reader must instinctively feel to be entire truthfulness."

A VOLUME OF POEMS BY ELLA FULLER MAITLAND.

The SONG-BOOK of BETHIA HARDACRE.

By ELLA FULLER MAITLAND, Author of 'Pages from the Day-Book of Bethia Hardacre.' Large crown 8vo. 6*s.*

Mrs. Fuller Maitland, the well-known author of 'Pages from the Day-Book of Bethia Hardacre,' has collected into a single volume a number of scattered poems, written in the particular manner which has procured her fame among literary critics. The volume is printed by the Chiswick Press from Morris type on deckled-edged antique laid paper.

TWO NEW EDITIONS.

EXTINCT MONSTERS: a Popular Account of some of the Larger Forms of Ancient Animal Life. Fifth Edition. With numerous Illustrations by J. Smit and others. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

BIOLOGY. By Dr. Charles Letourneau. A New

Edition. With 83 Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

THE FORTNIGHTLY REVIEW.

Edited by W. L. COURTNEY.

JUNE.

A PLOT AGAINST BRITISH INTERESTS in the LEVANT. By Vindex.
The QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE.
(1) LITERATURE in the VICTORIAN ERA. By H. D. Traill.
(2) POSTAL and TELEGRAPHIC PROGRESS UNDER QUEEN VICTORIA. By J. Henniker Heaton, M.P.
(3) AGRICULTURE DURING the QUEEN'S REIGN. By W. E. Bear.
(4) The COLONIAL EMPIRE of 1837. By E. Salmon, F.R.C.I.
The MODERN FRENCH DRAMA. (I.) By A. Filon.
CORSICAN BANDITS. By Hamilton Aidé.
CAPTAIN MAHAN'S 'NELSON.' By Judge O'Connor Morris.
The NEW ERA in HYDERABAD. By Joseph Rock.
NAVAL and COLONIAL POLICY of GERMANY. By H. W. Wilson.
IMPERIAL FREE TRADE. By Sir G. Baden-Powell, M.P.
The PARIS SALONS. By H. H. Statham.
The THESSALIAN WAR of 1897. By Charles Williams.

THE EASTERN QUESTION.

The EASTERN CRISIS of 1897 and BRITISH

POLICY in the NEAR EAST. By G. H. PERRIS. With a Poem by WM. WATSON, a Cartoon by WALTER CRANE, and a Sketch Map. Crown 8vo. [Next week.

Designed to give English readers a key, not only to the causes and the possible consequences of the Græco-Turkish War, but also to the larger developments and wider issues of the Eastern Question. The first part will deal with the attitude of Great Britain to the other Powers, and of these to Turkey up to the Cretan rising of this year; the second will narrate the course of events in Crete up to the recall of the Greek troops; and the third will summarize the facts of the war, and draw general conclusions.

"ONE OF THE BEST BOOKS EVER WRITTEN ON TURKEY."—Saturday Review.

The SULTAN and HIS SUBJECTS. By

RICHARD DAVEY. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. 24*s.*

The SPECTATOR says:—"We have seldom taken up a book of a like weight and importance which we have found it so difficult to lay down."

The DAILY CHRONICLE says:—"It deserves not only to be read, but to find a permanent place upon the bookshelf."

SEVENTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

CECIL RHODES: a Biography and Appreciation.

By "IMPERIALIST." With "Personal Reminiscences" by Dr. JAMESON. 2 Portraits of Mr. Rhodes, and a Map of South Africa. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

The TIMES says:—"For the first time the theory and practice of Mr. Rhodes's career have been brought together, compared, and put before the public in a readable narrative which covers the whole of his active life."

ENGLISH TRADE AND FOREIGN COMPETITION.

OUR TRADE in the WORLD in RELATION to FOREIGN COMPETITION, 1885-1895. By WILLIAM G. H. GASTRELL, Commercial Attaché to Her Majesty's Embassy at Berlin, and to Her Majesty's Legation at Copenhagen and Stockholm. Royal 8vo. 6*s.*

The avowed object of the author in this book is merely to lay before the British public a clear unvarnished statement of facts, so far as they can be gathered from official sources, and to leave the public to judge for themselves, after reading the facts elaborated in the volume, whether there is not serious cause for apprehending that our foreign trade is by no manner of means in such a satisfactory condition as we are led to believe in many quarters.

NEW BOOK BY W. S. LILLY.

ESSAYS and SPEECHES. By W. S. Lilly,

Author of 'Ancient Religion and Modern Thought,' 'A Century of Revolution,' &c. Demy 8vo. 12*s.*

The Contents of the Volume are:—Alexander Pope—Professor Green—John Henry Newman: a Memoir—The Temporal Power of the Pope, with a Rejoinder to Signor Crispi—The Making of Germany—Literature and National Life—The New Spirit in History.

The ACADEMY says:—"This is a volume of vivid and various interest.....A book which displays a veritable dubia cena—a feast of fat things full of marrow.....Mr. Lilly is a noble and most ennobling teacher."

NEW NOVELS AT ALL LIBRARIES.

BY W. CLARK RUSSELL.

A TALE of TWO TUNNELS. By W. Clark

RUSSELL. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.* [Just ready.

BY JAMES CASSIDY.

The GIFT of LIFE. By James Cassidy. Crown

8vo. 6*s.*

BY ALAN OSCAR.

CAPTAIN KID'S MILLIONS. By Alan Oscar.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The SHEFFIELD TELEGRAPH says:—"Mr. Alan Oscar gives us some fine fighting with plenty of cutlass play and pistolling, boarding of prizes, mutinies, and marooning, and the scene at Execution Dock, when Kid goes to see himself hanged by proxy, is realistic and bloodcurdling."

BY LADY WATKIN WILLIAMS.

SYBIL FOSTER'S LOVE STORY. By Lady

WATKIN WILLIAMS. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

CHAPMAN'S MAGAZINE.

Edited by OSWALD CRAWFURD.

JUNE. Price Sixpence.

VIOLET HUNT.—Unkist, Unkind! (Serial.)
ADA CAMBRIDGE.—A Painful Interview.
ESTHER POLAND.—"Copy."
WILLIAM BEAUMONT.—Bhonda's Revenge.
MYRA SWAN.—In Bliss and Ignorance.
F. BAYFORD HARRISON.—Humdrum.
LADY RIDLEY.—A Tempered Wind.
EDWIN PUGH.—Consolation.

CHAPMAN & HALL, LIMITED, London, W.

DAVID NUTT,

270–271, STRAND.

THE CLASSICAL REVIEW.

Vol. XI. JUNE, 1897. No. 5. 1s. 6d. net.

Contents.

H. RICHARDS. Critical Notes on the Minor Works of Xenophon.

A. E. HOUSMAN. Critical Notes on Ovid's 'Heroides.'

M. L. EARLE. Notes on 'Il.' i. 418 and 'Od.' xix. 231.

C. M. MULVANY. Notes on 'Od.' iv. 544-7.

J. S. REID. Note on Cicero, 'Ad. Fam.' 1, 2, 2, and 1, 1, 2.

W. M. LINDSAY. On the Discovery of a Collation of the 'Codex Turnebi' of Plautus. II.

B. W. HENDERSON. On the Grant of Immunitas to Brundisium.

A. PLATT. On Homeric Genitives.

W. E. HEITLAND. On Francken's Edition of Lucan.

R. M. BURROWS. Aristides and the Battle of Salamis.

SHORTER NOTES.

De Ridder's 'L'Idée de la Mort en Grèce.' A. W. VERRALL.

Hunziker on Hyperbole in Virgil. E. B. KOSTER.

Cartault on Virgil's Bucolics. F. HAVERFIELD.

Ridley's Translation of the 'Pharsalia' of Lucan. J. P. P.

Molhuysen on MSS. of the Odyssey. C. M. MULVANY.

Franklin's 'Traces of Epic Influence in Aeschylus.' H. W. HAYLEY.

Head's Catalogue of Greek Coins in the British Museum. PERCY GARDNER.

MONTHLY RECORD.

READY JUNE 10.

THE TUDOR TRANSLATIONS.

Edited by WILLIAM ERNEST HENLEY.

Vols. XVII., XVIII.

The HISTORY of COMINES.

Englished by THOMAS DANETT, anno 1596. With an Introduction by CHARLES WHIBLEY. 2 vols. small 4to. 11. 4s. net.

 Of the previous Works issued in this Series 'MONTAIGNE' and 'APULEIUS' are entirely out of print; NORTH'S 'PLUTARCH' is nearly out of print; and comparatively few copies remain of SHELTON'S 'DON QUIXOTE,' UNDERDOWNE'S 'HELIODORUS,' and MABBE'S 'CELESTINA.'

JARROLD & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 1s. 6d.

A SHORT POPULAR HISTORY OF

CRETE.

By J. H. FREESE, M.A., late Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

With Introduction by P. W. CLAYDEN.

Maps of Crete and Seat of War.

MR. GLADSTONE writes:—"I hope this book may tend to enhance the public interest in the condition of Crete, which at present threatens to bring serious disgrace upon this country."

The Daily Chronicle says—"A useful piece of work....A singularly clear account of the origin of the present crisis in the island."

SIXTH EDITION OF

The GREEN BOOK; or, Freedom

Under the Snow. By MAURUS JOKAI. SIXTH EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"Altogether a great book, and worth all the novels of native growth we are likely to see this season."—Pall Mall Gazette.

LADY JEAN'S SON. By Sarah Tytler.

SECOND EDITION. Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"The glimpses of Edinburgh society while the Northern Athens was still the seat of fashion are lifelike and clever. 'Lady Jean's Son' is from first to last a delightful story."—Pall Mall Gazette

The WINDS of MARCH. By George

KNIGHT, Author of 'Dust in the Balance,' 'Sapphira of the Stage,' 'Circle of the Earth.' Crown 8vo. art linen, gilt top, 6s.

"Cannot but add to his already considerable reputation. Told with a vigour, a pathos, and a wealth of poetic sympathy with all that is beautiful that makes the book admirable from first to last."—Star.

The REJUVENATION of MISS

SEMAPHORE: a Farcical Novel. By HAL GODFREY. Crown 8vo. cloth elegant, 3s. 6d.

BLIND LARRY: Irish Idylls. By

LEWIS MACNAMARA. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"There is a strong literary charm in the tales. So genuine is the artistic touch of the writer, so true his command of the springs of human pathos and passion, that these tales will take their place among the best of those short sketches of simple country life that form a feature of the literary products of the last ten years. The book is the work of a hand that may yet make a strong mark in the fictional literature of the day."—Scotsman.

Now ready, the first 5,000 Copies of the Sixth Volume in

THE DAFFODIL LIBRARY OF SHORTER NOVELS

BY AUTHORS OF THE DAY.

Vol. VI. entitled

A TOMBSTONE TREASURE. By

FERGUS HUME, Author of 'The Mystery of a Hansom Cab.' Crown 12mo. paper, 1s. 6d.; cloth gilt, 2s.

London: JARROLD & SONS, 10 and 11, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Of all Booksellers and at the Libraries.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

(EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains:—

NOTES:—Arms of the United States—Church Registers—Bannockburn—Epilogue by Charles Lamb—Wamesot—Uncertainty of Official Records—The Vyne Queer Burials—'Tindering Time'—May Day Custom—Type-writing Machines—"Crattle"—Sullow—John Hunter's House

QUERIES:—H. Baxter—J. Smith, LL.D.—"Carell"—Use of Armour—Hattock, Huttock, Haddock—Gabriel Grub—Amphibia—Mediæval Banners—King Lear—Handelston—Line in Goldsmith—Convicts in England—Sir E. Baynham—Proprietary Chapels—School at Parson's Green—Crest—Pelling Bridge—W. Crawford, M.P.—H. Cornish—The Derby—John Roberts—Ollia's Grave—The Tourist in Wales—The Sole—William Hewes—Yeomen of the Guard—Crœsus

REPLIES:—Children of Sir H. Percy—St. Dunstan—Gillman Family—Cunobelinus—D. Sedgwick—Darvel Gadarn—Songs on Sport—Title and Author Wanted—C. Packe—"Ave, Cæsar, &c."—Alphabetman"—Seal of Sligo—Chapel Snake—Barley-men—Buttresses—Culloden—'English Hexapla'—'A Tinker's Curse'—Ben Jonson—"A cat may look at a king"—French Prisoners—Cherry Blossom Festival—Dictionary of National Biography'—Alderman Beckford's Speech—Ulster Plantation—Labels on Books—Wesleyan Monuments—Wilkes—London Topography—"Not worth a rap"—Hatchments in Churches—"Mag astro mancer"—Crenelle—Dialect—Flower of the Well—G. Lipscomb—Caen Wood—'Clavus grriophili'—'Dadle'—St. Roque—"Grass-widow"—Challenge to Champion of England—Bruce—'Master William Bennett'—Stained Glass—Bishops in 1660—H. Waddington—Easter Riding in Tyrol—Lord Bowen—Utterance of Tom Taylor—Hand of Glory—Authors Wanted

NOTES on BOOKS:—Florio's 'Essays of Montaigne'—Carpenter's 'English Lyric Poetry'—Swift's 'Prose Works,' vol. i.—Leigh Hunt's 'Months'—Gasquet's 'Old English Bible'—Cole's 'History of Doddington'

Notices to Correspondents.

LAST WEEK'S NUMBER (May 29) contains—

NOTES:—Lord Byron's Remains—Unicorn—"Dog-latin"—St. Cynog—Literary Women—Breden Stone—Immaculate Conception—"Returns"—Reversing Postage-Stamps—Thimble—Insular Conceit—"Letters of a Country Vicar"—"Give him beans"—Misquotation—Work by T. Short.

QUERIES:—"Burvil"—W. B. Stevenson—Nelson's Breeches—"Fullams"—Stained Glass—Brudenell—Threatened Invasion of England—Arthurian Legends—"Harry-carry"—Townley—Artificial Flowers on Graves—C. Packe—Public-houses—McKinley—Songs on Sports—Mortuary Observance—Yiddish—Private Auction—H. Waddington—Title Wanted—Smith of Chichester—Early Headstones—Peter Harrison—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—"Sitting Bodkin"—Local Areas in Danish and Norman Times—"Li maisie hierlekin"—"Buslet"—Umbrella Folk-lore—Sharp's 'Bishoprick Garland'—J. G. Whittier—A. Blayney—"Harpy"—St. Patrick's Purgatory—Cupples—Street Inscription—"Cacorne"—"Dispatch"—Ploughwoman—"Three acres and a cow"—Changes in Trades—Age of Yew Trees—Parish of Stepney—Dukes of Aquitaine—"Wallop"—Veil of Mary, Queen of Scots—Graham Family—Lundy—Shakspeare and Holinshed—Surname Eyre—Dog Row—Date of First Easter—Allhallows—"Good intentions"—Haselden—Lucifer Matches—Suffix "Well"—Wooden Pitchers—"Crn"—Bacon's 'Promus'—The Siege of Colombo.

NOTES on BOOKS:—'Early Printed Books in the British Museum'—Munro's 'Prehistoric Problems'—Boase's 'Modern English Biography'—Eeles's 'Bells of Kincardineshire.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d.* each; by post, 4½*d.* each.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2s.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."

Daily News—"Very spirited."

Pall Mall Gazette—"Really admirable."

Morning Advertiser—"Sure of a wide popularity."

John Bull—"Very successful."

Metropolitan—"Instinct with patriotic fire."

Illustrated London News—"Right well done."

News of the World—"There is real poetry in these songs."

Mirror—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."

Echo—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."

Nonconformist—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give out the genuine ring."

Graphic—"We may fairly say that Dr. Bennett has taken up the mantle of Dibdin."

Examiner—"Full of incident and strongly expressed sentiment, and having a simple, dashing, musical roll and movement that reminds us of some songs that are favourable with all sailors, and the touches of humour he introduces are precisely of the kind that they will relish."

Scotsman—"Dr. Bennett's heart is thoroughly in his work....All spirited and vigorous. There is a healthy, manly, fresh-air dash about them which ought to make them popular with the class for whose use and pleasure they are designed."

Leeds Mercury—"There is no one nowadays who can compete with Dr. Bennett as a popular song-writer. In his volume of sea songs we find the qualities which must secure its success."

Liverpool Mail—"Dr. Bennett has devoted his lyrical powers to a noble object in this comprehensive yet inexpensive work. This gem deserves to be patronized not only by our entire Royal Navy, but by all our Sailors' Homes and all our Mercantile Marine Associations."

Literary World—"It seeks to quicken the pulses of our national life. It is to be hoped those spirit-stirring songs may be sung in all parts of the world by our gallant tars, north and south, east and west—wherever, in short, the Union Jack floats proudly over the sea. We heartily commend Dr. Bennett's 'Songs for Sailors' to the public at large."

Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

PROMETHEUS the FIRE-GIVER. An Attempted

Restoration of the Lost First Part of the Trilogy of Æschylus.

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

SIR EVELYN WOOD'S ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY

A BOOK on SOCIAL LIFE in the VICTORIAN AGE

SCOTTISH POETRY of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY

A BOOK on BOOK COLLECTING and STORING

A DUTCH ACCOUNT of the DOMBOCK EXPEDITION

NEW NOVELS—Mr. Peters, A Long Probation, Carlton Priors, Adopted

JAMES'S PHILOSOPHICAL ESSAYS.

SHORT STORIES

OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS

The 'DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY'—SALE of the PHILLIPPS MSS.—TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP

SCIENCE—The Dawn of Modern Geography, The Royal Society's Projected Catalogue, Mythic Singing Crocodiles, Societies, Meetings, Gossip

FINE ARTS—Foreign Bookbinding, Library Table, The Salons at Paris, Sir A. W. Franks, P.S.A., The Silchester Excavations, Sales, Gossip

MUSIC—The Week, The Feis Ceoil, Gossip, Performances Next Week

DRAMA—The Week, Library Table, Gossip

MISCELLANEA.

The ATHENÆUM for May 22 contains articles on

MR. YEATS'S SECRET ROSE

PROF. RAMSAY on PHRYGIA.

A BOOK on BURMA

The HISTORY of ANCIENT CHESTER

NEW NOVELS—Nulma, Pantalas, The Secret of Saint Florel, False Gods, Uncle Bernac, Jinny Blake, The Great Jekyll Diamond

AMERICAN HISTORY

SCOTTISH BIOGRAPHY.

RECENT VERSE

AMERICAN FICTION.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.

COLERIDGE on SPINOZA, TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY, NELSON'S 'AUTOBIOGRAPHY', An ANGLO-SAXON ENIGMA, SALE.

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.

SCIENCE—Mr. A. D. Bartlett, Societies, Meetings: Gossip

FINE ARTS—The New Gallery, The Salons at Paris; Greek Inscriptions at Clandeboye, Sales, Gossip

MUSIC—The Week; The Late Mr. Best; Gossip; Performances Next Week.

DRAMA—The Week; Gossip.

THE ATHENÆUM, EVERY SATURDAY,

PRICE THREEPENCE, OF

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Breams-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

MOLIÈRE and his MEDICAL ASSOCIATIONS.

GLIMPSES OF THE COURT AND STAGE, THE FACULTIES AND PHYSICIANS OF THE GRAND SIÈCLE.

By A. M. BROWN, M.D.

Demy 8vo. printed on antique paper, 200 pages, cloth, 6s.

The Cotton Press, Granville House, Arundel-street, London, W.C.

TEACHERS' SCRIPTURAL LIBRARY.

Price Sixpence each net.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A., F.R.A.S.

1. BIBLE CHRONOLOGY and DICTIONARY; or, the Principal Events recorded in the Holy Scriptures arranged under their probable respective dates, with a Dictionary giving an account of the places named, an Appendix on English Translations of the Bible, and Six Maps.

2. BRIEF LESSONS on the PARABLES and MIRACLES of OUR LORD. The First Part contains short expositions of the Parables, arranged according to Date; in the Second, the Miracles are treated under the heads of the Regions in which they were wrought. With Two Illustrations.

3. EMINENT SCRIPTURE CHARACTERS: a Series of Biographical Studies in the Old and New Testaments. Illustrated by Six Views of Biblical Scenes, which will, it is hoped, be found useful to all who are interested in the study of the Holy Scriptures.

Published by George Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."

Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

Monthly, price Half-a-Crown.

THE CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Contents for JUNE.

VICTORIA, PRINCESS and QUEEN. By Emily Crawford.
The GERMANS and their KAISER. By Germanicus.
OUR FINANCIAL RELATIONS with IRELAND: a Reply to Mr. Courtney. By Thomas Lough, M.P.
EATEN with HONOUR. By W. M. Flinders Petrie.
OXFORD and JOWETT. By A. M. Fairbairn, D.D.
TWENTY-FOUR MILLIONS on the NAVY. By Sir A. B. Forwood, M.P.
OUTDOOR LIFE in HOLLAND. By C. J. Cornish.
DARWINISM and DESIGN. By Professor F. C. S. Schiller.
The KING of SIAM. By B. A. Smith.
CYPRUS, ACTUAL and POSSIBLE: a Study in the Eastern Question. By Patrick Geddes.

London: Isbister & Co., Limited, Covent-garden, W.C.

THE FORUM.

Contents. Vol. XXIII. No. 4.
1*s. 6d.* JUNE, 1897. 1*s. 6d.*

The TRANS-MISSOURI DECISION. George R. Blanchard.
A NEW FORM of GOVERNMENT. J. B. Bishop.
The FUTILITY of the SPELLING GRIND. II. Dr. J. M. Rice.
A PROPAGATOR of PAUPERISM: the Dispensary. Dr. George F. Shrady.
AMERICAN EXCAVATIONS in GREECE: Plataia and Eretria. J. Gennadius.
The CASE of CAPTAIN DREYFUS. "Vindex."
WHEN DID CABOT DISCOVER NORTH AMERICA? Henry Harrisse.
The GRIEVANCE of the WEST. J. H. Hyslop.
CONTEMPORARY AMERICAN ESSAYISTS. Benjamin W. Wells.
PAUL BOURGET. Yetta Blaze de Bury.

London: G. P. Putnam's Sons, 24, Bedford-street, Strand.

PAN.

A German Review of International Art and Letters.

The most complete and elaborate Art Periodical in existence.

Published Quarterly, price 25*s.* each issue; or Four Guineas Yearly.

Contents of Current Number.

Poems.—GUSTAV FALK—HERMANN HEIBERG—OTTO ERICH HARTLEBEN—KARL VON DER HEYDT, u.A.

Articles—Wilhelm Bode, DIE BERLINER AKADEMIE—W. von Seidlitz, HAMBURGER PRIVATSAMMLUNGEN—Alfred Lichtwark, ZUR ORGANISATION DES DILETTANTISMUS—Freiherr E. von Bodenhausen, ENGLISCHE KUNST IM HAUSE, DAS ENGLISCHE BUCH—E. Warburg, AMERIKANISCHE CHAP-BOOKS, u.A.

Illustrative Plates by W. ROTHENSTEIN (Porträt Walter Crane's), WALTER CRANE, JOSEPH PENNELL, WILLIAM STRANG, HANS OLDE (Porträt Klaus Groth's), THOMAS HERBST, VALENTIN RUTHS, ARTUR ILLIES, u.A.

Wm. Heinemann, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

LEICESTER ARCHITECTURE.—See the BUILDER of June 5 (4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*) for fully illustrated Article on Leicester, being the Seventh of a Series, appearing at intervals, on the Architecture of our large Provincial Towns.

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

THE "QUEEN" CARTOONS FROM PUNCH.

Price HALF-A CROWN.

THE QUEEN and MR. PUNCH.

The Story of a Reign as told in Mr. Punch's "Queen" Cartoons, with Historical Notes by Toby, M.P.

Making a handsome quarto volume of 128 pages printed on fine paper, and stitched in a wrapper, in gold and colours, specially designed by Linley Sambourne.

 HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN and H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES have intimated to the Publishers that they will have much pleasure in accepting a copy of 'The QUEEN and MR. PUNCH.'

London: Bradbury, Agnew & Co., Limited, Bouverie-street, E.C.

NO. I. WITH TWO HAND-COLOURED PLATES.

Price One Shilling.

THE COMIC HISTORY of ENGLAND.

By G. A. A'BECKETT.

With JOHN LEECH'S ILLUSTRATIONS.

The First Number of this new and attractive Edition can be had from all the Booksellers. It consists of Sixty-four pages of Text, printed in large old-faced type on laid antique paper, and containing Two hand coloured Plates and many Illustrations, stitched in a handsome wrapper.

London: Bradbury, Agnew & Co., Limited, Bouverie-street, E.C.

JAMES CLARKE & CO.'S BOOKS.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

CHRISTIAN INSTINCTS and MODERN DOUBT. Essays and Addresses in Aid of a Reasonable, Satisfying, and Consolatory Religion. By the Rev. ALEXANDER H. CRAUFURD, M.A., formerly Exhibitioner of Oriel College, Oxford, Author of 'Enigmas of the Spiritual Life.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

OLIVER CROMWELL. A Study in Personal Religion. By R. F. HORTON, D.D.

"He gives an impressive picture of Cromwell, not merely as a religious man, but as a man to whom religion was everything. These pages deal with the most sacred personal facts in Cromwell's life, and, therefore, at a time when there are not wanting any number of complacent pedants who are ready to assure us that he was half a hypocrite and all gether an iconoclast, it is well to insist upon the fearless sincerity and spiritual depth and consistency of the man."—Leeds Mercury.

NEW EDITION. NINTH THOUSAND.

HOW to READ the BIBLE. Hints for Sunday-School Teachers and other Bible Students. By W. F. ADENEY, M.A., Professor of New Testament Exegesis, &c., New College, London. Paper, 1*s.*; cloth, gilt top, 1*s. 6d.*

"They who read the little book will know not a little about the Bible, and especially how well worth reading the Bible is."—Expository Times.

IN the LAND of TOLSTOI. Experiences of Famine and Misrule in Russia. With 43 Illustrations. By JONAS STADLING and WILL REASON, M.A. 8vo. cloth, 7*s. 6d.*

"An intensely interesting portion of the book is the detailed and graphic description of the many persecuted Nonconformist sects of Russia, who include in their number almost all the peasants who have education and enlightenment."—East Anglian Daily Times.

James Clarke & Co. 13 and 14, Fleet-street, E.C.

MEMORY.

PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s. 6d.* English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
SOLD ONLY BY THE PUBLISHER.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.

Made in Three Sizes.

10*s. 6d.*, 16*s. 6d.*, and 25*s.* each, post free.

Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.

Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

W. M. & GEO. LAW.

COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.

104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT,
and INDIGESTION,
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

SWAN SONNENSCHEIN & CO.

AN ANGLO-INDIAN NOVEL.

A PRINCESS of ISLAM. By J. W. Sherer, C.S.I. 6s. A Tale of Zenana Life and of the Effect produced by Western Influences on a Mahomedan Lady of Rank.

"The novel is mainly a study of this woman, and would be well worth reading if there was nothing else. But there are other characters, in particular the lady missionary, depicted with almost equal finish and effect, and there are also many interesting passages descriptive of native life and manners and scenery in India." Scotsman. "The interest of the story centres in the character of the Indian Princess. The writer has evidently an intimate acquaintance with Indian manners, and his local colour has an air of being very true." Manchester Guardian.

The EVOLUTION of the ARYAN. By Professor von Ihering. Trans- lated by H. DRUCKER, M.P. 8vo. 10*s. 6d.*

"The work is of very great interest, and we commend it to all interested in speculations as to the past history of mankind. The whole is a brilliant series of pictures abounding in realistic detail." Saturday Review. "A masterly study of a profoundly interesting subject. Mr. Drucker's translation is in every sense satisfactory." Scotsman. "Prof. von Ihering's researches into old Roman customs and superstitions throw many lights upon the life of the people and the meaning of classical allusions. Having in picturesque detail sketched the situation of early Aryan culture, pastoral habits, the absence of towns, ignorance of metal work, the legal relations of husband, wife, and children, and the laws of property and crime, the Professor turns to the Semites. He gives us a lively image of Semitic, and more particularly Babylonian, arts and customs, agriculture, architecture, engineering, astronomy, commerce.....The book is full to the brim of historical and sociological interest."—Literary Guide.

MR. GRANT RICHARDS'S NEW BOOKS.

To-day is published LITTLE STORIES ABOUT WOMEN, by GEORGE FLEMING, Author of 'A Nile Novel,' 'Mirage,' 'For Plain Women Only,' &c. Cloth, 3s. 6d.

On WEDNESDAY, the First Volume of the "SYLVAN SERIES": A PEAKLAND FAGGOT: Tales Told of Milton Folk, by R. MURRAY GILCHRIST, Author of 'The Stone Dragon,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s. 6d.

On the same day will be issued, under the auspices of the Fabian Society, LABOUR in the LONGEST REIGN (1837–1897), by SIDNEY WEBB, Author of 'The London Programme,' &c. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 1s.

To the new Series, GRANT ALLEN'S HISTORICAL GUIDES (in which 'Paris' and 'Florence' have already appeared), has been added a Volume on The CITIES of BELGIUM. Fcap. 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

BY VERNON LEE.

LIMBO and OTHER ESSAYS. By VERNON LEE, Author of 'Euphorion,' 'Althea,' 'Renaissance Studies,' &c. With Frontispiece. Fcap. 8vo. buckram, 5*s.* net.

BY THE BRITISH RESIDENT AT PAHANG.

IN COURT and KAMPONG: Sketches of Native Life in the Malay Peninsula. By HUGH CLIFFORD. Large crown 8vo. cloth, 7*s. 6d.*

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'CYNTHIA: A DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES.'

ONE MAN'S VIEW: a Novel. By LEONARD MERRICK. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s. 6d.*

BY EDWARD SPENCER ("NATHANIEL GUBBINS").

CAKES and ALE: a Memory of many Meals. The whole interspersed with various Recipes more or less Original, and Anecdotes mainly Veracious. With cover by Phil May. Small 4to. cloth, 5*s.*

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'TUXTER'S LITTLE MAID.'

"OLD MAN'S" MARRIAGE: a Novel. By G. B. BURGIN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

BY LADY TROUBRIDGE.

PAUL'S STEPMOTHER, and One Other Story. With Frontispiece by Mrs. Adrian Hope. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s. 6d.*

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE STORY OF CREATION.'

PIONEERS of EVOLUTION, from Thales to Huxley. With an Intermediate Chapter on the Causes of the Arrest of the Movement. By EDWARD CLODD. With Portraits in Photogravure of Charles Darwin, Professor Huxley, Mr. Herbert Spencer, and Mr. A. R. Wallace. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5*s.* net.

A POLITICAL ANNUAL.

POLITICS in 1896. An Annual. Edited by FREDERICK WHELEN. With Contributions by H. D. TRAILL, H. W. MASSINGHAM, G. BERNARD SHAW, and others. Small crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* net.

9, HENRIETTA-STREET, COVENT-GARDEN, W.C.

CASSELL & COMPANY'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NEW NOVELS.

JUST PUBLISHED, price 6*s*.

MY LORD DUKE.

By E. W. HORNUNG,

Author of 'A Bride from the Bush,' 'The Rogue's March,' &c.

"The plot is ingenious and bright with graphic scenes. From the first page to the last Mr. Hornung's story is fascinating and powerful."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"'My Lord Duke' is a book to read. It is worth any dozen of the novels which would compete with it for popular favour."—Daily Mail.

"One of the most agreeable novels that we can remember."—Academy.

"Mr. Hornung charms the reader with the vividness of his contrasts between life in the bush and every-day experiences in social circles in England. 'My Lord Duke' is full of boisterous mirth, and leaves the pleasantest of impressions of the uncultivated bushman, who unconsciously provides so much of the humour."—Scotsman.

FRANK STOCKTON'S NEW NOVEL.

NOTICE.—A STORY-TELLER'S PACK, by FRANK STOCKTON, Author of 'The Adventures of Captain Horn,' 'Rudder Grange,' &c., is now ready, price 6s.

NOW READY, price 5*s*.

"ROGUES OF THE FIERY CROSS."

By S. WALKLEY,

Author of 'In Quest of Sheba's Treasure,' &c.

With 16 Full-Page Illustrations.

JUST PUBLISHED, price 6*s*.

ILL-GOTTEN GOLD:

The Story of a Great Wrong and a Great Revenge.

By W. G. TARBET.

"'Ill-Gotten Gold,'" says the Scotsman, "is a story of stirring interest.....A series of exciting events lead to a powerful and highly dramatic ending."

"The Publishers rightly claim that 'ROYAL ACADEMY PICTURES, 1897,' forms the MOST PERFECT REPRESENTATION of the ACADEMY ever placed within reach of the public. Not only is the best work on exhibition represented, but the SCALE of REPRODUCTION is UNIQUE."
WESTMINSTER GAZETTE.

NOW READY.

Parts I. to IV. price 1*s*. each.

(PART V. COMPLETING THE WORK, READY JUNE 11.)

ROYAL ACADEMY PICTURES, 1897.

 This Work is also issued in One Volume, handsomely bound in cloth, price 7*s*. 6*d*.

N.B.—The publication of the Complete Volume and of Part V. have been postponed till June 11th, so as to ensure that perfection of production which is the distinguishing characteristic of this unique fine-art work.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

THE FIRST LARGE EDITION

OF THE

MAGAZINE OF ART

For JUNE (price 1*s*. 4*d*.),

CONTAINING THE

OPENING ARTICLE ON THE

QUEEN'S TREASURES OF ART

IN THE

ROYAL PALACES

(by Her Majesty's gracious permission),

Has already been exhausted, but a SECOND EDITION having been prepared, copies can now be obtained by order at any Bookseller's or Railway Bookstall throughout the United Kingdom.

N.B.—The JUNE PART is enlarged (without increase of price) in order that special prominence may be given to the important contribution announced above.

Completion of 'Social England.'

Vol. VI. READY SHORTLY, price 18*s*.

SOCIAL ENGLAND.

Edited by H. D. TRAILL, D.C.L.

Vol. VI. contains from the Battle of Waterloo to the General Election of 1885.

Also supplied in sets, half-morocco, full gilt, price 5*l*. 15*s*. 6*d*.

"The utility of such a work is obvious, its interest to all cultivated people enormous, and the scale on which the book is written adequate."—Speaker.

NOW READY, price 9*s*.

PICTORIAL ENGLAND AND WALES.

With upwards of 320 beautiful Illustrations, prepared from Copyright Photographs.

Handsomely bound in cloth, price 9*s*.

THE QUEEN'S LONDON.

Containing nearly 400 Exquisite Views of London and its Environs.

"A fascinating collection of photographs."
Times.

"The artistic finish displayed places this publication immeasurably above any other work of the kind."—Public Opinion.

HOW THE QUEEN AND THE QUEEN'S SUBJECTS TRAVEL.

24 Superb Reproductions of Copyright Photographs.

See Part 2, price 6*d*., of

THE QUEEN'S EMPIRE.

N.B.—Three Immense Editions of Part I. of this magnificent Work have already been called for.

CASSELL & COMPANY, LIMITED, London, Paris, and Melbourne.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs Bell & Bradfute and Mr John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, June 5, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3633. SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY.
(Incorporated by Royal Charter.)
Patron—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
President—The Right Hon. Sir M. E. GRANT-DUFF, G.C.S.I.
THURSDAY, June 17, 5 P.M., at the Museum of Practical Geology, Jermyn-street, S.W., the following Paper will be read:—'An English École des Chartes,' by Professor YORK POWELL.
HUBERT HALL, Director and Hon Secretary.
115, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6.
SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

THE Committee of the REDRUTH SCIENCE and ART SCHOOLS invite applications for the position of SCIENCE PRINCIPAL and LECTURER in CHEMISTRY and METALLURGY (Practical and Theoretical), MINERALOGY, &c.
Candidates are desired to forward particulars of their qualification to the Secretary not later than July 8, from whom further information may be obtained. W. K. WILTON, Secretary.

PROFESSOR SOLLAS having announced his intention to resign in September next the PROFESSORSHIP of GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY in the UNIVERSITY of DUBLIN, the Council will proceed on October 13, 1897, to nominate a successor in his place.—Applications to be sent, on or before October 9, to the REGISTRAR, from whom Candidates can obtain information as to duties and salary.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL, CANADA.
CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.
The Governors of McGill University are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the newly founded PROFESSORSHIP of ZOOLOGY. Salary $2,500 per annum.—Candidates from Great Britain are requested to forward applications, with any testimonials and references they may desire to submit, on or before June 15, addressed PRINCIPAL, Office of the High Commissioner for Canada, 17, Victoria-street, Westminster.

BATH COLLEGE.
The Council invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTER. Candidates may be in Holy Orders or Laymen. The salary is 500*l.* per annum, with a Capitation Fee of 2*l.* The School House accommodates Fifty-five Boarders. There is a Classical and a Modern side. Duties to commence in September.
Applications should be sent in by June 19 to the Secretary, GRAHAM SIMMONS, Esq., 8, Edgar-buildings, Bath, from whom further particulars can be obtained.

JONES' WEST MONMOUTHSHIRE SCHOOL, PONTYPOOL.
The Governors invite applications for the HEAD-MASTERSHIP of the above BOYS' SCHOOL, to be opened in JANUARY NEXT.
The Head Master must be a Graduate of a University of the United Kingdom. Previous teaching experience is desirable.
Salary 100*l.*, with a Capitation Fee of 2*l.* per Scholar. The School will accommodate Two Hundred Boys. The Head Master is also permitted to take Boarders.
Copies of the Charity Commissioners' Scheme, or sufficient Extracts therefrom, can be obtained from the undersigned (price 6*d.*).
Applications and testimonials, stating age, qualifications, and experience (twenty copies, printed or type-written), must be sent so as to reach my Office not later than July 17 next.
JOHN HUTCHINS, Clerk to the Governors.
County Court Chambers, Newport (Mon.),
June 9, 1897.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—Forthcoming Examination—DRAUGHTSMAN in the HYDROGRAPHICAL DEPARTMENT in the ADMIRALTY (17-25), JULY 7th. Expertness in Hydrographical Chart Drawing essential. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, London, S.W.

THE ALDEBURGH SCHOOL for GIRLS.—For Prospectus apply to MISS M. I. GARDINER, Aldeburgh, Suffolk. References: Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M.D., the Rev. and Hon. A. T. Lyttelton; Arthur Sidgwick, Esq., M.A.; Mrs. Henry Sidgwick, &c.

SWITZERLAND.—HOME SCHOOL for limited number of GIRLS. Special advantages for the Study of Languages, Music and Art. Visiting Professors. University Lectures. Bracing climate; beautiful situation, and large grounds. Special attention to health and exercise.—MLLE. HEISS, Waldheim, Berne.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

BEDFORD COLLEGE, LONDON, for WOMEN, York-place, Baker-street, W.
Principal—Miss EMILY PENROSE.
The EASTER HALF-TERM BEGAN on MONDAY, May 31. Lectures on Bacteriology form part of the Course of Scientific Instruction in Hygiene during this Term.
ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.
ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE annual value 48*l.*, and ONE CLIFT SCHOLARSHIP in ARTS, value Thirty Guineas, each tenable for Three Years, will be awarded on the result of the Examination to be held at the College on JUNE 24 and 25.
Names to be sent in to the Principal not later than June 15.
LUCY J. RUSSELL, Honorary Secretary.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford, opposite Examination Schools, answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

FRENCH MASTERSHIPS.—The Education Committee of the Scottish Branch of the Franco-Scottish Society direct the attention of Educationalists to the fact that a list of highly qualified FRENCH TEACHERS can be procured from MONSIEUR PAUL MELON, Secrétaire-Général du Comité de Patronage des Étudiants Étrangers, La Sorbonne, Paris.

SCHOLASTIC AGENCY WORK is undertaken by the MEN'S REGISTRY DEPARTMENT of the TEACHERS' GUILD on the lowest terms to cover necessary expenses. Registrar—W. H. FRICKER, M.A. (Oxon.). Personal interviews 3 to 5 Daily, except Thursdays.—Office: 74, Gower-street, W.C.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

MR. EDWARD WHYMPER will accept engagements to LECTURE on MOUNTAINEERING and MOUNTAIN TRAVEL during the Season 1897-8.—For full particulars apply to THE LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, London.

MR. WHITWORTH WALLIS has a FEW DATES OPEN, Season 1897-8, for his LECTURES on 'The English Pre-Raphaelites: Holman Hunt, Millais, and Rossetti. Illustrated with Reproductions of the Artists' Principal Pictures by special permission of the owners of the copyrights.
All communications to the LECTURE AGENCY, LIMITED, Outer Temple, Strand, W.C.

ORIGINAL PLAYS, suitable for Schools and Families. Indoor and Outdoor. Plays written to order for special occasions.—MISS HARVEY, 5, Park-place West, Gloucester Gate, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER and ASSISTANTS.—Authors' MSS. 1*s.* per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process. MISS SIKES, West Kensington Type writing Agency, 13, Wolverton-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

SCHOLARLY TYPE-WRITING.—Foreign and Classical MSS., and others requiring special care, undertaken by a Graduate. English at usual rates.—TYPOGRAPHIC AGENCY, Dan, Beeches-road, West Bromwich.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued. Pupils trained for Indexing and Secretarial Work.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6090. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TO AUTHORS.—Any Author desirous of Publishing his Works efficiently on agency terms may make use of Central London Offices, Clerks, Traveller, &c., as established by an Author-Publisher who has by these means recently published satisfactorily.—PUBLICITY, Box 1,564, Sell's Advertising Agency, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, LIMITED, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MANUSCRIPTS in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.
9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY, Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.
Now ready,
CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY.
DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.
Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE, just published, of Works on English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh Topography, Heraldry, and Family History free on application.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

ELLIS & ELVEY, Dealers in Old and Rare Books and Manuscripts.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 86) of RECENT PURCHASES now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

OLD MEZZOTINT PORTRAITS.—FIRST PART of a CATALOGUE of ENGRAVERS, A to H, including Engravings by Beckett, Blooteling, Browne, Clint, Corbutt, Cousins, Dawe, Dickinson, Dunkarton, Earlom, Faber, Frye, Green, Hodges, Haid, and many others, after celebrated Painters, with prices, post free of JAMES KIMBELL & SON, 91, Oxford-street, London, W.
Old Engravings and Books Bought.

JUST READY, CATALOGUE, No. 274, Books on Austria, Bohemia, Hungary, Greece, and Turkey. 704 Nos. Will be sent gratis.—MARTINUS NIJHOFF, The Hague.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

A. MAURICE & CO., of 23, Bedford-street, London, W.C., will send on application their NEW CATALOGUE of SCARCE BOOKS, comprising Skelton's Mary Stuart, Creighton's Queen Elizabeth, and Holmes's Queen Victoria, on Japanese vellum, bound by Zaehnsdorf—Napoleon's Ivory Powder Flask—scarce Illustrated French Books, &c.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

THE "SUTHERLAND" BINDING.
A NEW COLOUR PROCESS (PATENTED).
Beautiful Tooling in any Colour. Colours absolutely permanent.
Mr. BAGGULEY will be glad to supply particulars as to where the specimens referred to in the Athenæum of May 22 (p. 679) can be seen in Town.
High-street, Newcastle-under-Lyme.

MAGNIFICENT PRESENTS.—TAPESTRY, very pretty piece, size 6 feet—PUNCH, exceptionally fine Set, vols. 1 to 100, new, half-morocco, faultless original, Almanacks, &c.—ILLUSTRATED LONDON NEWS, 70 vols. handsome half-morocco, nice as new. Cheap Samples, with prices, on application.—CHARLES LOWE, Book Exporter, Baskerville Hall, Birmingham.

TEN POUNDS REWARD for decisive and indisputable proof of the existence in print or writing of the Motto MANUS HAEC INIMICA TYRANNIS, or of its use by any Family prior to the year 1650.—Address A., care of Parnell, 63, Southampton-row, W.C.

LARGE PICTURE BY MAYER
'LA COUR D'ASSISE,' Exhibited at Paris Exhibition, FOR SALE.—May be seen at E. GALLAIS & Co., Wine Merchants, 90, Piccadilly, W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

PRODUCERS AND PUBLISHERS OF

PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS OF FAMOUS WORKS OF ART.

AUTOTYPES of the OLD MASTERS in the GREAT CONTINENTAL GALLERIES.

AUTOTYPES of MODERN ENGLISH ART.

AUTOTYPES of PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY.

AUTOTYPES of DRAWINGS by the OLD MASTERS.

AUTOTYPES of PICTURES in the FRENCH SALONS.

Those interested in Art, and in the recent developments of the Photographic Reproduction of Pictures, are invited to inspect the Company's extensive Collection of Autotypes and Autogravures of all Schools, now on view at their Gallery, 74, New Oxford-street, where may also be seen a series of framed examples, of specially designed patterns, made in oak, walnut, and other hard woods.

Catalogues and Price Lists post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. BASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS

NOW OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST

(100 PAGES)

Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;

241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;

48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at

BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

HIGH-CLASS SIXPENNY JOURNALS at ONE-FOURTH PUBLISHED PRICE.—GRAPHIC, SKETCH, QUEEN, and GUARDIAN (or any other Four selected from our List) for 6*d.* per week, to post on.—Apply, for particulars of supply, to THE SECRETARY, The Holborn Literature Club, 259, High Holborn, W.C.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)

Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

Drawings by Phiz illustrating Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop' and 'Barnaby Rudge.'

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, the COMPLETE SERIES of ORIGINAL WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS to CHARLES DICKENS'S 'OLD CURIOSITY SHOP' and 'BARNABY RUDGE,' by HABLOT K. BROWNE (PHIZ), together with a fine series of original Drawings and Sketches by George Cruikshank, T. Rowlandson, J. Leech, C. Keene, and R. Caldecott, &c., the Property of a well-known COLLECTOR.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, comprising, amongst the Manuscripts, Illuminated Horæ and other Devotional Works and Oriental MSS.; Holograph MSS. of Algernon Charles Swinburne. The Books comprise rare and valuable First Editions of Modern Authors—fine Illustrated French Books—Collection of Engravings by Israel Silvestre—a fine Second Folio Shakespeare—Postage Stamps—Books in fine Bindings, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Original Manuscript of Nelson's Autobiography.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, the interesting and valuable MANUSCRIPT MEMOIR of LORD NELSON'S EARLY LIFE, WRITTEN ENTIRELY IN HIS OWN HANDWRITING, also a number of most important Letters connected with his Naval Career; and a volume of Twenty-three Letters addressed to his friend Admiral Sir Thos. Trowbridge in the Year 1801.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had

Manuscripts of Sir Walter Scott's Novels.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 15, the ORIGINAL AUTOGRAPH MANUSCRIPTS of Sir WALTER SCOTT'S 'Lady of the Lake,' 'Tales of a Grandfather,' 'Essay on Popular and Ballad Poetry,' 'Harolden Hall,' 'Doom of Devorgoil,' 'Old Mortality,' &c., also ROBERT BURNS'S EDINBURGH COMMONPLACE BOOK, and a magnificent relic of the Poet.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Valuable Engravings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 17, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS, comprising Fancy Subjects and Portraits after R. Cosway, J. Downman, J. Hoppner, G. Morland, and others; also a nearly complete series of Wheatley's Cries of London, printed in colours—Engravings by Old Masters—Plates from Turner's Liber Studiorum—and a few Water-Colour and other Drawings.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Library of H. SPENCER SMITH, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 17, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the LIBRARY of H. SPENCER SMITH, Esq., comprising scarce Works relating to America—a large Collection of Books on Angling—Works illustrated by Bewick, Cruikshank, Caldecott, Leech, Rowlandson, and others—First Editions of the Writings of Sir E. Arnold, A. Austin, R. D. Blackmore, Miss Burney, S. T. Coleridge, Defoe, Charles Dickens, B. Disraeli, H. Fielding, Oliver Goldsmith, Sir A. Helps, Dr. Johnson, T. Hood, Leigh Hunt, Charles Lamb, S. Richardson, T. Smollett, R. L. Stevenson, W. M. Thackeray, &c.—Works relating to Kent, Poetry, and Theology—Browne's Religio Medici, First Edition—Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, First Edition, 1621—Goldsmith's The Traveller and The Deserted Village, First Editions—Lamb's John Woodvil, a Tragedy, First Edition—Quarles's Enchiridion, First Edition—Extra Illustrated Works—Modern Illustrated Publications.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Portion of the Collection of Book-Plates of Colonel ACTON HAVELOCK.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House No. 13 Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 18, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a PORTION of the Valuable COLLECTION of BOOK-PLATES EX-LIBRIS, of Colonel ACTON HAVELOCK.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Autograph Letters, including the Remaining Portion of the Collection of FRANCIS RICHARDSON, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, June 19, and THURSDAY June 24, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS, including the Remaining Portion of the Collection of the late FRANCIS RICHARDSON, Esq., comprising Specimens of Burns, Captain Cook, Cowper, Dr. Johnson, Nelson, Wesley, &c.—Sign Manuals of English and Foreign Sovereigns, including Henry VII., Henry VIII., Queen Elizabeth, James I., James II., Charles I., Charles II., Queen Victoria, &c.—Interesting Letters of Coleridge, C. Lamb, Shelley, Swinburne, Wellington, Dean Swift, and Tennyson.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE ASHBURNHAM LIBRARY OF PRINTED BOOKS. FIRST PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 25, and Seven Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the FIRST PORTION of the Magnificent LIBRARY of excessively Valuable and Rare PRINTED BOOKS, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of ASHBURNHAM. This Portion comprises the Letters A—J only, and includes a Large Number of Books, both English and Foreign, of the highest degree of rarity and interest amongst which may be mentioned the First Ten Editions of Dame Juliana Barnes's Book of Hawking, Hunting, &c., from 1486 to 1596—Ten Books printed by William Caxton—Thirty-eight Books printed upon Vellum, including the First Latin Aristotle beautifully decorated, the Gutenburg and 1462 Bibles, and the Durandus of 1459—a splendid Series of the Rarest Bibles in various Languages, but chiefly English—Rare Editions of Ariosto, Boccaccio, and Dante—the Earliest Editions of Chaucer to the End of the Sixteenth Century—the Chronicles of St. Albans, Arnold, Caxton, Froissart, and Fabyan—Fine and Rare Special Breviaries—First Editions of the Writings of Ascham, Lord Bacon, John Bale, Hugh Broughton, Cocker, Cranmer, Defoe, Gawin, Douglas, Drayton, Fielding, Fletcher, John Foxe, Fuller, &c.—some excessively Rare Books by the First Printers in the City of London, St. Albans, Ipswich, Oxford, Cambridge, and other Localites—a Fine Series of Bible Illustrations, and Books with Engravings and Woodcuts—some Rare Books on America—and other Remarkable Items too numerous to particularize. Many of the Books have additional interest and value attached to them from the fact of their being either Presentation Copies from the Authors or from having belonged formerly to Celebrated Families, and some are in Splendid Bindings done for Royal, Noble, and Famous Personages.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-Crown each. Copies, illustrated with Nine Facsimiles in Gold and Colours of some of the remarkable Bindings, may be had, price 5*s.* each.

PALL MALL.—The Carleton Hall Heirlooms; Pictures.—In the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, Mr. Justice Kekewich, 1894, C. No. 1,694.

MESSRS. FOSTER respectfully announce for SALE by AUCTION, by direction of Mr. Justice Kekewich, at the Gallery, 54, Pall Mall, on WEDNESDAY NEXT, June 16, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely each day, the valuable COLLECTION of PICTURES formed by the late JOHN COWPER, Esq., of Carleton Hall, Penrith, Cumberland, including a Chef-d'Œuvre by George Romney, Life-size Portraits of Two Beautiful Children, also a number of Early English, Dutch, and French Pictures, including Works ascribed to

Barry, R.A.	Ostade	Teniers
Breughel	Peters	Van Loo
De Loutherbourg	Pynaker	Van Worrell
Gainsborough	Ryckaert	Wilson
Luny	Stephenoff	Zoffany.

Also a number of Landscapes by Knox, and some Water-Colour Drawings.

May be viewed Monday and Tuesday next, when Catalogues may be had.

NOTE.—The George Romney Picture will be on view until the Sale at 54, Pall Mall.

WILLIS'S ROOMS, KING-STREET, ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE.

A Collection of important Pictures by the late Louis Falero.

MESSRS. ROBINSON & FISHER are instructed to OFFER FOR SALE, on THURSDAY, June 17, at 3 o'clock, The NIGHTMARE, an important Work by LOUIS FALERO. Also Four other Examples of the Same Artist.

May be viewed the Saturday and Three Days prior to the Sale, and Catalogues had.

Choice Books from the Library of a well-known Collector.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, choice BOOKS from the LIBRARY of a well-known COLLECTOR, including Cruikshank's Humourist, 4 vols.—Egan's Life in London, First Edition —Ainsworth's Jack Sheppard, First Edition—Cruikshank's Fairy Library, 4 vols. with double set of plates—Grimm's German Popular Stories, 2 vols. First Edition—Maxwell's Irish Rebellion — Poetical Magazine, 4 vols. plates by Rowlandson—Nimrod's Life of a Sportsman, Coloured Plates by Alken—Real Life in London, 2 vols.—Keats's Endymion, First Edition—Scott's British Field Sports—Lafontaine, Contes et Nouvelles, extra illustrated—Goldsmith's Traveller, First Edition—Vicar of Wakefield, Coloured Plates by Rowlandson—Voltaire, Pucelle, Proof Plates—Barker's Greenwich Hospital, Coloured Plates—Quarles's Emblems and Hieroglyphics, 1639—Swift's Tale of a Tub, First Edition —Defoe's Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols. 1719—Stevenson's College Memories, 1886—MSS. on Vellum, with Miniatures—First Editions of Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, &c., the majority of which are in choice bindings by Rivière, Zaehnsdorf, Bedford, &c.; also Autograph Letters of Dickens, George Eliot, Swinburne, Rossetti, Carlyle, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

Valuable Violins, Violas, Violoncellos, and Double Basses.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 17, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable COLLECTION of VIOLINS, VIOLAS, VIOLONCELLOS, and DOUBLE BASSES, including the Properties of the late V. PURRIER, Esq., the late A. E. HARPER, Esq., the late — SHEIBE, Esq., and other Private Properties, comprising choice Examples of the Works of

Antonius Stradiuarius	Gabrielli	Duke
Amati	Villaume	W. Forster
Gagliano	Lupot	Betts
Ruggerius	Fendt	And other Masters,

with the Bows and Cases.

THE WHOLE OF WHICH ARE GUARANTEED TO THE PURCHASERS AS DESCRIBED IN THE CATALOGUE.

May be viewed two days prior and morning of Sale. Catalogues on receipt of three stamps.

Library of J. F. SNAITH, Esq., B.A., late of H.M. Madras Civil Service.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, July 1, FRIDAY, July 2, and MONDAY, July 5, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of J. F. SNAITH, Esq., B.A., amongst which will be found Hakluyt's Voyages, 16 vols.—Pepys's Diary, extra illustrated—Blake's Works, by Ellis and Yeats, 3 vols—Burton's Arabian Nights, by Smithers, 12 vols.—Boswell's Johnson, by G. B. Hill, 6 vols—Jowett's Plato—Annals of Sporting, Coloured Plates by Cruikshank, Alken, &c., 13 vols.—World in Miniature, Complete Set, original boards—Shakespeare's Works, by Dyce, 10 vols.—Sowerby's English Botany, Vols. I.-XI. half-morocco—Morris's British Birds, 6 vols.—Cook's Voyages, with Folio Atlas—La Belle Assemblée, Coloured Plates—Lever's Works, cloth, uncut—Syntax's Tours, 4 vols.—Books on the Occult Sciences, &c.

Catalogues on application.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., during JULY, a PORTION of the LIBRARY formed by CAPTAIN F. H. HUTH, consisting of a unique Collection of Works on Horsemanship.

Catalogues on application.

MONDAY NEXT.

A Selection of English and Foreign Carpets and an Assortment of Hearthrugs from a Manufacturer.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on MONDAY NEXT, June 14, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view Saturday prior 10 till 3 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FRIDAY NEXT.

400 Lots of Miscellaneous Property, including High-Class Photographer's Apparatus, Scientific Instruments, &c., from Private Sources.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, June 18, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, June 14, valuable COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, the Property of His Highness PRINCE VICTOR DULEEP SINGH.

On TUESDAY, June 15, the COLLECTION of REYNOLDS MEZZOTINTS of the late Mr. H. TOOTAL BROADHURST.

On TUESDAY, June 15, important JEWELS, the Property of Mrs. GIDEON, of Paris.

On FRIDAY, June 18, ORIENTAL PORCELAIN and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On FRIDAY, June 18, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late H. HICKS, Esq., PEARSON COX, Esq., and others.

On SATURDAY, June 19, the choice COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late JAMES LETHART, Esq., of Gateshead-on-Tyne, and the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late Sir HENRY EDWARDS.

On THURSDAY, June 24, OLD ITALIAN and ANTIQUE BRONZES, MEDALS, and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of Sir EDGAR BOEHM, Bart., and PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late J. J. FARQUHARSON, Esq.

On THURSDAY, June 24.—In the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, re the Earl of Ellenborough's Settled Estates—Colchester v. Law—OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER-GILT PLATE.

On FRIDAY, June 25, magnificent PEARL NECKLACE, sold by order of the Executor of his Grace WILLIAM DROGO, Seventh DUKE OF MANCHESTER, deceased.

On FRIDAY, June 25, rare JEWELS, including the celebrated pink diamond "Noor-ul-Deen" of H.H. PRINCE ALEXANDER IZARY of Singapore.

On SATURDAY, June 26, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of G. A. BAIRD, Esq., deceased, and PICTURES the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

Theological and Miscellaneous Books, including the Library of the late Rev. W. E. LORD (by order of the Trustees), removed from Northiam, Sussex.

MESSRS. HODGSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock, THEOLOGICAL and MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Benedictine and other Editions of the Fathers—Faber's Greek Testament, Large Paper, 3 vols.—Trommius and Taylor's Concordances—British Museum Marbles, &c., 36 vols.—Historical MSS. Commission, 43 vols.—Speeches of Pitt, Canning, &c., 24 vols.—Smiles's Engineers, 3 vols.—Rawlinson's Herodotus, 4 vols.—Geneste's English Stage, 10 vols.—Kay's Caricature Portraits, 2 vols.—Bewick's Birds, 2 vols—Yarrell's Fishes, 2 vols.—Topographical and Antiquarian Prints, Autograph Letters, &c.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

VALUABLE LIBRARY FOR SALE, belonging to the Executors of the late Miss F. CRAWFORD, removed from The Villa, Houghton-le-Spring, to SHADFORTH'S SALE-ROOMS, 12, NORTH-ROAD, DURHAM. Amongst the Books are fine Examples of Hogarth's Works—Hutchinson's Durham—Bewick's Gleanings—Land and Water Birds—Quadrupeds, &c. Sale, TUESDAY, June 15, at 2 P.M.

Catalogues may be had on application to the Auctioneer, T. SHADFORTH, Durham.

Extensive and valuable Law Library.

MESSRS. BENNETT & SON respectfully give notice that they will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 6, UPPER ORMOND QUAY, on WEDNESDAY, June 16, and Following Day, commencing at half-past 2 o'clock, the select and valuable LAW LIBRARY of the late JOHN ROCHE, Esq., Q.C., County Court Judge; also the LIBRARY of a BARRISTER, retiring from practice, comprising Beavan's Chancery Reports, 36 vols.—Clarke and Finnelly's House of Lords Reports, 23 vols.—the Incorporated Councils Reports for England, in 251 vols. half-calf, and numbers up to 1896—the Irish Reports, complete, from 1867 to 1896, with Digests, 58 vols. and numbers—the Irish Common Law and Chancery, 34 vols.—the Statutes Revised, second edition, 12 vols.—the Revised Reports, with Index, 24 vols.—Chitty's Equity Index, fourth edition, 9 vols.—Mews's Consolidated Digest—Brunker's Digest—the Irish Law Times 27 vols. half-calf, and numbers to 1897—Mews's Common Law Digest, 8 vols., &c., with numerous up-to-date Text-Books, Treatises, &c.

Catalogues issued one week previous to Sale. Terms cash and 5 per cent. fees.

BENNETT & SON, Auctioneers, 6, Upper Ormond Quay.

THE GEOGRAPHICAL JOURNAL. 2*s.*

Contents. JUNE.

Anniversary Address, 1897. By the President.—Fourth Centenary of the Voyage of John Cabot, 1497. By the President.—Further Notes on the Tripoli Hill Range. By H. S. Cowper.—The Nomadic Berbers of Central Morocco. By Walter B. Harris.—The German Geographical Congress at Jena. By Hugh Robert Mills, D.Sc.—Geography at the Universities.—Admiralty Surveys during the Year 1896.—The Census of the Russian Empire. By P. K.—The Monthly Record.—Obituary: J. Theodore Bent, F.S.A.; Sir William C. F. Robinson, G.C.M.G.; Louis Pascel Casella, F.R.A.S. F.R.Met.S.—Correspondence: Sand-dunes, by A. C. Yate, Major, 2nd Baluchis; Proposed New Terms in Geographical Distribution, by P. L. Sclater, F.R.S.—Meeting of the R.G.S.—Geographical Literature of the Month.—New Maps.—Numerous Maps and Illustrations.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, S.W.

BELFAST NEW MUNICIPAL BUILDINGS; Architecture at the Royal Academy (IV.); Sketches of London Street Architecture (XIV.); the Architecture of the Renaissance in Italy, &c.—See the BUILDER of June 12, post free, 4½*d.*

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

MESSRS.

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS' NEW BOOKS.

DIAMOND JUBILEE PUBLICATIONS.

LIFE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

By G. BARNETT SMITH.

With 12 pages of Illustrations. Cloth, gilt edges, price 3*s.* 6*d.*

SIXTY YEARS OF THE QUEEN'S REIGN.

AN EPOCH OF EMPIRE MAKING.

By Sir RICHARD TEMPLE, Bart., G.C.S.I.

Paper cover, price 1*s.*; cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*

LIFE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

By G. BARNETT SMITH.

With Portrait. Paper covers, price 1*s.*; cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*

NATIONAL PROGRESS DURING THE QUEEN'S REIGN.

By M. G. MULHALL. Price 1*s.*

ROUTLEDGE'S DIAMOND JUBILEE GUIDE TO LONDON.

Edited by the Rev. ROBERT GWYNNE.

With Plan of Route of the Queen's Procession, 100 Illustrations, and Map. Paper cover, price 1*s.*; cloth, 1*s.* 6*d.*

EVENTS OF THE QUEEN'S REIGN.

Edited by G. BARNETT SMITH.

Paper cover, price 6*d.*; cloth, with Portrait, 1*s.*

LIFE OF QUEEN VICTORIA.

Price 2*d.*

GEORGE ROUTLEDGE & SONS, LIMITED, Broadway, Ludgate hill, London.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS' NEW PUBLICATIONS.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED,

The WOODLAND LIFE. By Edward THOMAS.

With a Frontispiece. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

INDIAN MUTINY REMINISCENCES.

OLD MEMORIES. By General Sir HUGH GOUGH, G.C.B. V.C.

With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

"An interesting and well-written account of some of the most stirring scenes in the Mutiny."—Manchester Guardian.

DR. MUNRO'S NEW WORK.

PREHISTORIC PROBLEMS. By ROBERT MUNRO, M.A. M.D. F.R.S.E.,

Secretary of the Society of Antiquaries of Scotland; Author of 'The Lake-Dwellings of Europe,' 'Rambles and Studies in Bosnia-Herzegovina and Dalmatia,' &c. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo. 10*s.* net.

The ETHICS of JOHN STUART MILL.

By CHARLES DOUGLAS, M.A. D.Sc., Lecturer in Moral Philosophy, and Assistant to the Professor of Moral Philosophy in the University of Edinburgh, Author of 'John Stuart Mill: a Study of his Philosophy.' Post 8vo. 6*s.* net.

"Written with an admirable lucidity and order. .....A carefully edited and well-planned class-book."—Scotsman.

MAN'S PLACE in the COSMOS, and other Essays.

By ANDREW SETH, LL.D., Professor of Logic and Metaphysics in Edinburgh University, Author of 'Scottish Philosophy,' 'Hegelianism and Personality.' Post 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

IMMEDIATELY WILL BE PUBLISHED,

An ELECTRIC SHOCK, and other Stories.

By E. GERARD (Madame de Laszowska), Author of 'A Foreigner,' &c., Joint-Author of 'Reata,' &c. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

AUDREY CRAVEN. By May SINCLAIR.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

"A clever novel, admirably conceived and well written."—Saturday Review.

POPULAR EDITION OF BURTON'S 'SCOTLAND.'

The HISTORY of SCOTLAND. From Agricola's Invasion to the Extinction of the last Jacobite Rebellion.

By JOHN HILL BURTON, D.C.L., Historiographer-Royal for Scotland. In Eight Monthly Volumes. 3*s.* 6*d.* each. [Vols. I.–IV. ready.

CHEAP REISSUE IN COURSE OF PUBLICATION.

ANCIENT CLASSICS for ENGLISH READERS.

Edited by Rev. W. LUCAS COLLINS. In Shilling Volumes, bound in limp cloth.

Now ready:—HOMER: ILIAD, by the EDITOR.—HOMER: ODYSSEY, by the SAME.—HERODOTUS, by G. C. SWAYNE.—CÆSAR, by ANTHONY TROLLOPE.—VIRGIL, by the EDITOR.—HORACE, by Sir THEODORE MARTIN, K.C.B.—ÆSCHYLUS, by BISHOP COPLESTON.—XENOPHON, by Sir ALEX. GRANT, Bart., LL.D.—CICERO, by the EDITOR.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS, Edinburgh and London.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY G. BERESFORD FITZGERALD.

A FLEETING SHOW. By the Author of 'An Odd Career,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [This day.

NEW NOVEL BY HATTIL FOLL.

MAJOR CARLILE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [This day.

NEW NOVEL BY ROBEY F. ELDRIDGE.

The KESTYNS of CATHER CASTLE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Second Edition.

"Very beautiful and interesting. The Kestyns will doubtless find a large and appreciative audience."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVEL BY JOHN BRIDGE.

DINNER for THIRTEEN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [This day.

JEAN DE LA BRÈTE'S FAMOUS NOVEL.

FATE'S FETTERS (Un Vaincu). Translated from the French by Mrs. F. HOPER-DIXON. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. (Eleventh Edition in the original.)

"Distinctly a novel worth reading."
Glasgow Herald.

"The book will be popular."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVEL BY CLEMENT A. MENDHAM.

A TROTH of TEARS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. With a Frontispiece. [This day.

NEW NOVEL BY H. J. CHAYTOR.

The LIGHT of the EYE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d. [This day.

NEW DETECTIVE STORY BY J. H. SWINGLER.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The author has considerable literary ability, and knows how to write for the general reader."
Dundee Advertiser.

FLORENCE MARRYAT'S LATEST.

IN the NAME of LIBERTY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Third Edition.

ALICE M. DIEHL'S LATEST.

A LAST THROW. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Second Edition.

NEW WORK ON ORNITHOLOGY.

The BIRDS of OUR COUNTRY. By H. E. STEWART, B.A. Illustrated throughout. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d. Over 400 pages.

 Illustrated Prospectus post free.

AUTHORS may now send their MSS., suitable for Volume Publication, to DIGBY, LONG & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

With Illustrations, 8vo. 8s. 6d. net.

A RIDE through WESTERN ASIA. By CLIVE BIGHAM. Part I. ASIA MINOR. Part II. PERSIA, North to South. Part III. TURKISH ARABIA. Part IV. PERSIA, West to East. Part V. CENTRAL ASIA.

TIMES.—"A series of unusually fresh pictures of scenery and life which will be more or less novel even to the well-read man.....An exceedingly bright and readable account of a journey through countries of great and varied interest."

THE ROMANES LECTURE, 1897.

MACHIAVELLI. The Romanes Lecture delivered in the Sheldonian Theatre, June 2, 1897. By the Right Hon. JOHN MORLEY, M.P., Hon. D.C.L. Oxon., Hon. LL.D. Camb. 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MORRICE BUCKLER.'

The PHILANDERERS. By A. E. W. MASON. Crown 8vo. 6s.

WORLD.—"The characters throughout are drawn with a masterly hand.....One of the most intesesting novels we have met for a long time."

BY F. MARION CRAWFORD.

A ROSE of YESTERDAY. Crown 8vo. 6s.

SCOTSMAN.—"It has a mature imaginative power which stamps it as a novel of a high order."

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ROBBERY UNDER ARMS.'

MY RUN HOME. By Rolf Boldrewood. Crown 8vo. 6s.

The SECRET of SAINT FLOREL. By JOHN BERWICK.

OBSERVER.—"A capital romance, and well worth reading.....With well-managed incidents, good scenic effects, and human characters, the reader's attention is successfully preserved up to an exciting and somewhat startling finale."

The FALL of a STAR. A Novel. By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart.

OBSERVER.—"Contains some exciting and amusing incidents, and the tragic climax is decidedly novel."

16mo. 6s.

The CHOIR INVISIBLE. By James LANE ALLEN, Author of 'Summer in Arcady,' &c.

DIAL (Chicago).—"Hardly since 'The Scarlet Letter' and 'The Marble Faun' have we had fictive work so spiritual in essence and adorned with such delicate and lovely embroiderings of the imagination."

12mo. 3s. 6d.

The PORT of MISSING SHIPS, and other Stories of the Sea. By JOHN R. SPEARS.

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.

NEW VOLUME.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3s. 6d. "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5s.

SNARLEYYOW. By Captain MARRYAT. Illustrated by H. R. MILLAR. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY.

SIXTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

RHYME? and REASON? By LEWIS CARROLL. With 65 Illustrations by Arthur B. Frost and 9 by Henry Holiday. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6s. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

JAMIESON'S SCOTTISH DICTIONARY. The NEW EDITION in 5 demi 4to volumes, containing upwards of 3500 pages price £5 17s. 6d. The Publisher begs to intimate that the above important work is now nearly out of print, about 30 Sets only remaining. Librarians and others should secure copies at once, as the Edition is likely to be soon exhausted. It is not stereotyped.

Alex. Gardner, 25, Paternoster-square, London, and Paisley, Publisher and Bookseller by appointment to Her Majesty.

BY PROFESSOR CAMPBELL BLACK, F.R.S.E.

The MEDICAL ENVIRONMENT. 1s. net.
Hugh Hopkins, 17, West Regent-street, Glasgow.

The URINE in HEALTH and DISEASE. 7s. 6d.
Baillière, Tindall & Cox, 20, King William-street, London.

LECTURES on BRIGHT'S DISEASE. 2s. 6d.

The FUNCTIONAL DISEASES of the URINARY and REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS. 5s.
J. & A. Churchill, 7, Great Marlborough-street, London.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. Gould, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

(EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—'Anglorum Feriæ'—Casanoviana—Books on Alchemy—Pre-Victorian M P s—'Origin of the Moss Rose'—'Callow'—Ghost-Name—Royal Processions—'Non sibi, sed toti'—Praying for the Crops—Error concerning Maize—'Puss in Boots'—'Apparata.'

QUERIES:—'Dick's Hatband'—H. J. H. Martin—R. Colegate—'Lady in the Lobster'—Van Cortlandt—Captive from Wreck—Crosby Family—Pawne—Pronunciation of Evelyn—Heraldic—'To put in one's motto'—Holy Week Ceremonial—Anglo-Saxon Brooch—Dr. Sacheverell—Portreeve—Ogier—Italian Sonnet—Payne—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—Palfrey Money—Hole House—Stepney Church—Lord Byron's Remains—Hauwell Church—Value of Money—National Anthem—Archbishop Rotherham—Psalm Tune—Sneezing—Cambridgeshire—Holly Meadows—Grammarsow—Dolor—Dog Row—Military Banners—History of Pickwick—Monmouth Rebellion—"Consensus facit matrimonium"—'Rarely'—Best Ghost Story—'The A B C'—Coat of Arms—'Harry-carry'—Beds in the Hall—"Three acres and a cow"—Josiah Nisbet—Carnation—'Bob,' an Insect—'Skates'—'Scratches'—Reversing Postage-Stamps—"Returns"—J. G. Whittier—Peter of Colechurch—Nonconformist Ministers—Miss Fairbrother—Rule the Roost—Chinese Folk-lore—Henri Waddington—Red, White, Blue—Countess Bruce—Pope's Villa—Authors Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Baring-Gould's 'English Minstrelsie,' Vol. VII.—Reviews and Magazines.

Notices to Correspondents.

LAST WEEK'S NUMBER (June 5) contains—

NOTES:—Arms of the United States—Church Registers—Bannockburn—Epilogue by Charles Lamb—'Wainscot'—Uncertainty of Official Records—The Vyne—Queer Plurals—"Tindering Time"—May-Day Custom—Type-writing Machines—"Crattle"; "Sullow"—John Hunter's House.

QUERIES:—H. Hayter—J. Smith, LL.B.—"Caltiff"—Use of Armour—Hattock; Huttock; Haddock—Gabriel Grub—Amphillis—Military Banners—King Lear—'Hand-shoe'—Line in Goldsmith—Convicts in England—Sir E. Barnham—Proprietary Chapels—School at Parson's Green—Crest—Pelling Bridge—W. Crawford, M.P.—H. Cornish—The Derby—John Roberts—Offa's Grave—'The Tourist in Wales'—The Sole—William Hewes—Yeomen of the Guard—Crœsus.

REPLIES:—Children of Sir H. Percy—St. Dunstan—Gillman Family—Cunobelinus—D. Sedgwick—Parvel Gadarn—Songs on Sport—Title and Author Wanted—C. Packe—"Ave, Cæsar," &c.—"Alphabetman"—Seal of Sligo—Chapel-Snake—'Barley-men'—Buttresses—Culloden—'English Hexapla'—"A Tinker's Curse"—Ben Jonson—"A cat may look at a king"—French Prisoners—Cherry Blossom Festival—'Dictionary of National Biography'—Alderman Beckford's Speech—Ulster Plantation—Labels on Books—Wesleyan Monuments—Wilkes—London Topography—"Not worth a rap"—Hatchments in Churches—"Mag-astro-mancer"—Crenelle—Dialect—Flower of the Well—G. Lipscomb—Caen Wood—"Clavus griophili"—'Dadle'—St. Roque—"Grass-widow"—Challenge to Champion of England—Bruce—'Master William Bennett'—Stained Glass—Bishops in 1660—H. Waddington—Easter Riding in Tyrol—Lord Bowen—Utterance of Tom Taylor—Hand of Glory—Authors Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Florio's 'Essays of Montaigne'—Carpenter's 'English Lyric Poetry'—Swift's 'Prose Works,' Vol. I.—Leigh Hunt's 'Months'—Gasquet's 'Old English Bible'—Cole's 'History of Doddington.'

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4d. each; by post, 4½d. each.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SECOND THOUSAND.

THE ROMANCE OF ISABEL LADY BURTON: the Story of her Life.

Told in part by HERSELF and in part by W. H. WILKINS.

In 2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth gilt and gilt top, 36*s*. With Photogravure Portraits and 40 Full-Page Illustrations.

 OVER 60 COLUMNS OF FAVOURABLE REVIEWS HAVE ALREADY APPEARED.

THE CONCISE KNOWLEDGE LIBRARY.

THE FIRST VOLUME NOW READY.

THE CONCISE KNOWLEDGE

NATURAL HISTORY.

By R. LYDEKKER, F.R.S., Dr. R. BOWDLER SHARPE, W. F. KIRBY, F.L.S., W. GARSTANG, M.A., B. B. WOODWARD, F.G.S., F. A. BATHER, F.G.S., R. J. PEACOCK, H. M. BERNARD, F.L.S., and R. KIRKPATRICK.

Complete in 1 vol. in large crown 8vo. containing nearly 800 pages, with 530 Original Illustrations. In half-bound leather, gilt, 5*s*.

The cheapest Natural History ever published.

COMPLETE IN ONE VOLUME, PRICE 5s.

A concise, systematic Index precedes the work, and a full Alphabetical Index, which contains about 10,000 References, is given at the end.

"'No criticism is necessary of the volume on 'Natural History' in 'The Concise Knowledge Library.' The work is excellently arranged, beautifully printed, neatly illustrated, and sensibly and strongly bound. It is a model of how a book of reference should be produced. Its contributors are the highest authorities in zoological science."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"It gives a complete survey of the whole animal kingdom; it is excellently condensed, well illustrated, and the several departments are dealt with by specialists who are distinguished as authorities and original investigators.....'The Concise Knowledge Library' should have the success which it unquestionably deserves.....Messrs. Hutchinson & Co. are to be heartily congratulated."—Graphic.

"The bulk, to say nothing of the cost, of natural history books with any pretensions to completeness puts them beyond the reach of the majority; and here we have one at once compact, cheap, and comprehensive."—Illustrated London News.

A THIRD EDITION IN THE PRESS.

The DAGGER and the CROSS. By Joseph HATTON. With Frontispiece by W. H. Margetson. In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

"Powerful, intensely interesting, with exciting incidents, and a complex plot, 'The Dagger and the Cross' will take front rank among Mr. Hatton's novels. Admirably told, tragically beautiful, the whole story is full of dramatic force."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THIRD EDITION NOW READY.

The JESSAMY BRIDE. By Frankfort Moore. With Illustrations by A. Forestier. In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

NEW NOVEL BY A NEW NOVELIST.

The LARRAMYS. By George Ford. In cloth gilt, 6*s*. [This day.

MORLEY ROBERTS'S NEW NOVEL.

MAURICE QUAIN. In buckram gilt, 6s.

"It is so singularly powerful, fascinating, and well written, its success should be assured."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A THIRD EDITION IN THE PRESS.

SCARLET and STEEL. A Story of Military Life, containing certain Humours, Sentiments, and Tragedies of Cavalry Life. By E. LIVINGSTON PRESCOTT. In cloth gilt, 6*s*.

"It is a brilliant and interesting book. To compare this book with Mr. Kipling's stories is a comparison so obvious, and at the same time so deeply eulogistic, that we should hesitate to make it lightly; but it is only fair to Mr. Prescott to say that his work would stand even that arduous test. We commend a remarkable novel to the public."—Westminster Gazette.

A STORY OF SOCIETY.

JANE. By Marie Corelli. In cloth gilt and gilt top, 2*s*., with Full-Page Illustrations by G. H. Edwards.

The First and Second Editions having been immediately exhausted, a THIRD EDITION is in the press.

LAZARUS: a Tale of the Earth's Great Miracle. By LUCAS CLEEVE. In canvas gilt, 6*s*.

"Those who have read it think it a very powerful and daring idea."—Daily Mail.

"It must be admitted that Mr. Cleeve has produced an interesting story. Some of the characters are very powerfully drawn, some very effective scenes, and another very powerful contrast is that between the two women who love Lazarus."—Glasgow Herald.

NEW NOVEL BY JAMES PRIOR.

RIPPLE and FLOOD. In buckram gilt, 6s.

"'Ripple and Flood' is a story with an atmosphere of great freshness, and with descriptions of country life and scenery that remind us of Mr. Thomas Hardy. A story, indeed, which it would be unfair to describe as merely creditable; the two brothers are both striking characters, while Ivy Sivil is almost as attractive as a Salvation lassie as in boy's clothes."—Times.

"An excellent piece of work, sober and restrained, but powerful throughout."—Saturday Review.

"Vivid, impressive, and original, the story rivets the attention right to the last line, and the book is laid down with a feeling of admiration for the author's glowing imagination and his skill in reproducing its conjurings. Altogether it is a book which deserves a hearty reception from the public."—Scotsman.

A SECOND EDITION OF RICHARD PRYCE'S NEW NOVEL.

ELEMENTARY JANE. In cloth gilt, 6s.

"The reading public owe the author a debt of gratitude."—World.

"'Elementary Jane' is a triumph of characterization." Daily Chronicle.

"A very charming tale, which rings true."—Westminster Gazette.

"The whole story has a charm."—Manchester Guardian.

NEW NOVEL BY K. DOUGLAS KING.

FATHER HILARION. By the Author of 'The Scripture Reader of St. Mark's.' In cloth gilt, 6*s*. [This day.

London: HUTCHINSON & CO. Paternoster-row.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

LORD ROBERTS' FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

The Nineteenth Edition of the above Work is now ready at all Libraries and Booksellers', in 2 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel and Copper, Maps, Plans, and Illustrations, price 36s.

NOW READY,

LETTERS FROM THE BLACK SEA

During the Crimean War, 1854-55.

By Admiral SIR LEOPOLD HEATH, K.C.B.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Illustrations and Plans, 7s. 6d.

SECOND EDITION READY THIS DAY.

DEAR FAUSTINA.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Red as a Rose is She.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The dénoûment brings to an artistic and natural close a study of contemporary manners which will certainly enhance the author's reputation as an alert and penetrating observer of her sex."
World.

A SOCIAL SATIRE.—NOW READY.

PANTALAS.

By EDWARD JENKINS,
Author of 'Ginx's Baby.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"It is difficult to know whether most to admire the humour and force of the picture of men and life which it presents, or the profundity of its teaching as a lesson in sociology. It is in its way a brilliant little study in a great subject, full of sound common sense and quiet humour."—Scotsman.

"A very clever satire. Mr. Jenkins has a virile caustic wit, and plies the lash with airy cultured skill."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

A TRICK OF FAME.

By H. HAMILTON FYFE,
Author of 'A Player's Tragedy.'

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'In a Country Town' is a simple study of a girl's life, and with all its simplicity we can congratulate the author in having, in Brunhild, accomplished a really fine bit of character study. Miss Perceval writes with a single directness and a humorous appreciation of life in provincial places, particularly where interesting curates and romantic maidens are concerned."—Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK.

Now ready, in 1 vol. small 4to. extra cloth, gilt top,
Price HALF-A-GUINEA.

WOMEN NOVELISTS OF QUEEN VICTORIA'S REIGN.

A BOOK OF APPRECIATIONS.

The SISTERS BRONTE, by Mrs. OLIPHANT. GEORGE ELIOT, by Mrs. LYNN LINTON. Mrs. GASKELL, by EDNA LYALL. Mrs. CRAIK, by Mrs. PARR. And other Essays by CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, ADELINE SERGEANT, Mrs. MACQUOID, Mrs. ALEXANDER, and Mrs. MARSHALL.

"We may say at the outset that this volume stands high above the general level of books about books."—Daily News.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portrait of Author, 12s.

AN OLD SOLDIER'S MEMORIES.

By S. H. JONES-PARRY, J.P. D.L.,
Late Captain Royal Dublin Fusiliers,
Author of 'My Journey round the World,' &c.

NEW EDITION, CONDENSED, REVISED, AND WITH MUCH NEW MATERIAL.

Now ready at all Booksellers', in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Portrait of Lady Hamilton, gilt top, 6s.

LADY HAMILTON AND LORD NELSON.

AN HISTORICAL BIOGRAPHY.

Based on Letters and other Documents in the Morrison Collection.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,
Author of 'The Real Lord Byron,' &c.

NEW SPORTING SKETCHES BY FINCH MASON.

Now ready, in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with 6 Coloured Plates and Illustrated Title-Page drawn especially for this Work by the Author, extra cloth, 7s. 6d.

The TAME FOX, and other

Sketches. By FINCH MASON, Author of 'Flowers of the Hunt,' &c.

"Mr. Finch Mason wields with equal facility and effect the pen and the pencil; his narratives are full of 'go' and spirit."—Globe.

"As enjoyable a book of horsey stories as has been written for many a day."—Scotsman.

"To all with a turn for sport I say emphatically procure 'The Tame Fox.'"—Whitehall Review.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

SALTED with FIRE. By George

MAC DONALD, LL.D., Author of 'Robert Falconer,' 'Sir Gibbie,' &c.

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R.

HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'A Flame of Fire' deserves commendation for a certain picturesqueness and vigour of writing, for strongly-conceived incident, and for the bold incisiveness of its descriptive passages."—Globe.

BROKEN THREADS. By Compton

READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"There is bright comedy all through Mr. Compton Reade's story, with just so much serious interest as is necessary to keep the book from being frivolous or trifling."
Scotsman.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

READY NEXT WEEK.

POPULAR ROYALTY.

By ARTHUR H. BEAVAN,
Author of 'Marlborough House and its Occupants.'

Royal 8vo. with Photogravure Portrait of the Queen and numerous Full-Page Illustrations, cloth, 10s. 6d.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATIONS,

1827-1892. The Experiences of Sixty-five Years from the Accession of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence as Lord High Admiral to the End of the Naval Administration of Lord George Hamilton. By the late Sir JOHN HENRY BRIGGS, Reader to the Lords and Chief Clerk to the Admiralty. Edited by Lady BRIGGS. Illustrated with 10 Photogravure Portraits. Demy 8vo. cloth, ONE GUINEA. [Next week.

IN DARKEST AFRICA; or,

the Quest, Rescue, and Retreat of Emin, Governor of Equatoria. By HENRY M. STANLEY, M.P. D.C.L. LL.D., &c., Author of 'How I Found Livingstone,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition, Revised and Corrected throughout, with New Preface, a Map, and 150 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. [Next week.

JOURNEYS AMONG the

GENTLE JAPS in the SUMMER of 1895. By the Rev. J. LL. THOMAS, M.A. F.R.G.S. With a Special Chapter on the Religions of Japan, a Map, and Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d. [Next week.

PEN and PENCIL in PARLIA-

MENT. By HARRY FURNISS. Profusely illustrated by the Author. Crown 4to. cloth, 5s. [Ready.

FOURTH EDITION IN THE PRESS.

THE MASSARENES. By OUIDA.

Crown 8vo. 580 pp. 6s.

PUNCH says:—"Ouida's latest novel, 'The Massarenes,' is from every point of view excellent."
TRUTH says:—"So interesting that in spite of its exceptional length it will seem to most readers tantalizingly short."
NATIONAL OBSERVER says:—"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

"Strikingly original and ingenious, animating, interesting, and puzzling.....Deserves grateful recognition by lovers of tales well told."—World.

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED. T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.'

"The development of events is extremely interesting; it is invested at various stages with fine touches of tenderness, and the racy dialogue is a constant source of enjoyment."
Scotsman.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

The MAGIC INK. By William

BLACK. Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

NOW READY, PRICE ONE SHILLING.

SCRIBNER'S MAGAZINE.

JUNE NUMBER. Containing—

LONDON as SEEN by C. D. GIBSON. V. London Salons. Written and illustrated by Mr. Gibson.
UNDERGRADUATE LIFE at PRINCETON. Old and New. (Illustrated.) James W. Alexander.
SOLDIERS of FORTUNE. (Concluded.) Richard Harding Davis.
The NEW LIBRARY of CONGRESS. (Illustrated.) Montgomery Schuyler.
The OPEN BOAT. Stephen Crane.
A PARTING SONG. Arthur Sherburne Hardy.
The NON-COMBATANT. (Illustrated.) Octave Thanet.
WITH a BIT of GORSE from CARNAC. Lilla Cabot Perry.
A NORMANDY PASTORAL. (Illustrated.) Theodore Robinson.
The STORY of a PLAY. Chaps. 11-13. W. D. Howells.
RALEGH in GUIANA. Barrett Wendell.
&c. &c. &c.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

SATURDAY, JUNE 12, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
SPORT IN NORWAY	767
A BOOK OF PRIORY OBSERVANCES IN THE THIRTEENTH CENTURY	767
SWIFT'S PROSE WORKS	768
PATER'S REPRINTED ESSAYS	769
MR. THOMPSON'S NEW POEMS	770
A NEW THEORY OF HEBREW ACCENTS AND VOWEL-SIGNS	771
NEW NOVELS (Dear Faustina; A Rose of Yesterday; The Last Entry; A Fountain Sealed; The Gift of Life; Miss Tudor; A Spotless Reputation; Dans la Brume)	772—773
TRAVELS IN NORTH AMERICA	773
BOOKS ON FOLK-LORE	773
SCANDINAVIAN LITERATURE	774
BOOKS RELATING TO INDIA	775
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS	776—777
LITERARY EXPENSES IN ST. MARGARET'S, WESTMINSTER; A NEW ARABIC DICTIONARY; JUNIUS'S EDITION OF CHAUCER	777—779
LITERARY GOSSIP	779
SCIENCE—GEOGRAPHICAL PUBLICATIONS; THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY, GREENWICH; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	780—783
FINE ARTS—VENETIAN MISSALS; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; MINOR EXHIBITIONS; SALES; GOSSIP	783—786
MUSIC—THE WEEK; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	787—788
DRAMA—THE WEEK; GOSSIP	788

LITERATURE

Wild Norway. By Abel Chapman. (Arnold.)

THE weak point in Mr. Abel Chapman's 'Wild Norway' is in the illustrations. It may be true that, as he says, "photography in landscape is caricature, false alike in perspective and proportion," but it is not so faulty in this way as some of the drawings in this volume; that one, for instance, which is entitled 'Beginning to Yield,' and which seems to represent a whale disporting himself in a hayfield. Another called 'Reindeer Stalker's Hut in Breiava' is not much better—condemned by the impossible antlers, carefully drawn in outline of never varying thickness, as a child draws. But this is before all things a book for sportsmen, and sportsmen are not as a rule exacting critics in matters of art, as the conventional hunting picture lives to testify. And it must be confessed that both the author and Mr. P. Chenevix Trench are successful in the representation of individual specimens of natural history; some of the fish and fowl when displayed alone are well done. Mr. Charles Whymper has also contributed to the illustrations. It might have been expected that it would be easy to distinguish his work by its greater excellence, but we have been unable to do so.

At this point criticism comes to an end. Mr. Chapman has a defined and not perhaps a very wide object in his work. An advertisement of the book expresses the hope that it may become a standard one on Norwegian sport, and the author expressly says that of the people of Norway he intends to say nothing, human beings having so much less interest in his eyes than the lower creation. As his interest in the latter is not, it must be owned, of a wholly beneficent kind, it is perhaps as well that "humans" do not share it. In fact, however, this is a volume which may be read with interest by a great many others beside the mere sportsman, so wide is our author's knowledge of natural history, and so perspicuous is all that he has to say about the fish, flesh, and fowl which he meets with in his expeditions. The book is somewhat loosely put together, and seems rather a shaking out of diaries of sport than a systematized treatise. The two chapters which follow the introductory one deal with reindeer stalking. Chaps. iv.-xi. are concerned with fishing. There is one—only one, alas!—devoted to small-game shooting. We go back to the reindeer in chap. xiii. Next follow two excellent chapters on elk shooting in the high latitudes; and finally half a dozen of a more general character (including two devoted to Denmark) close the volume. But there is immense variety in all this material. Even on subjects with which the ordinary reader is more or less familiar, such as salmon or trout fishing, Mr. Chapman shows himself not a sportsman only, but a man who observes and reflects; witness what he has to say about the motives which induce the salmon to take the fly in rivers. Salmon never take the fly as such—that is as an insect—nor as food at all. It is from mere idleness or curiosity, or possibly to keep the digestive organs in order—as dogs eat grass and birds sand—that they snatch at some bright object floating overhead, at "blue angel," say, or "doctor"; or

"the tinsel and gaudy feathers it may be recall pleasant memories of the week or month before, and Salmo salar with reawakened rapacity, but without pausing to consider the anomaly of thus finding a prawn inland or a starfish stemming a rapid, dashes at the intruder—and gets the hook."

For the salmon when in fresh water does not feed. He lives upon the reserve of fat which he has accumulated in the sea: a fact obvious enough when we reflect on the immense numbers of the salmon in salmon rivers, and on their natural rapacity, which it were absurd to suppose satisfiable by any number of flies. Moreover, as our author truly says, the salmon fly bears not the remotest resemblance to any form of life in fresh water. All these facts are clear upon reflection. Not the less true is it that the majority of us who have thrown salmon flies have never paused to reflect on the object which they were designed to serve.

Of Norwegian flying game Mr. Chapman entertains evidently but a poor opinion, so that he devotes only one chapter to this branch of sport. As he himself mentions a bag of sixteen grouse out of a total of twenty-seven made with the aid of a half-bred elk-dog, he does not seem to have so much to complain of. But the Norse legislature has—in fear of hydrophobia—prohibited the importation of English dogs; and our author esteems that shooting without the co-operation of a properly broken dog is not sport, a point which would be arguable, if space allowed of the argumentation. When the reader comes to the chapters on reindeer stalking and elk shooting (this is not, Mr. Chapman says, to be described as stalking, seeing that the elk is rarely found in the open) he is on territory which is beyond the reach of the modest sportsman. Lest any one should go into such enterprises without duly counting the cost, let him read the awful diary of our author's experiences on the Hardangervidde. Some of the most interesting passages of the book occur in the parts written in the form of a journal kept from day to day. Mr. Chapman nowhere attempts ornamental writing, a thing for which his readers ought to be duly grateful; but the extreme simplicity of the form of narration in the journals makes the experiences they record the more impressive for the imaginative reader. Even the very baldest diaries, such as that kept in Spitsbergen, are not without this charm. How well, for example, is the perpetual night of the Spitsbergen winter brought to mind by such entries as:—

"Dec. 27 and 28. Several walrus heard blowing among the ice both days.

"Jan. 1. Seals heard.

"Jan. 2. Aurora. Birds heard both these days and some seen. But too dark to distinguish species."

What is more surprising is to find records of the heat in midwinter. On Christmas Day they have "no fires: windows open. Mean temperature, 36° F." To any one not a keen sportsman the mere record of fishing or shooting experiences becomes in the end somewhat wearisome. What relieves the monotony in the present volume is the frequent insertion of notes on natural history. There are beside two chapters of a more distinctly naturalist character: one on "Wild Life in Forest and Fjeld: Studies of some Few of the Typical Species characteristic of Scandinavian Fauna," and another "The North Sea: Notes on Bird and Insect Migration observed during Twenty-four Voyages." The first of these chapters is full of interesting matter, though probably there is little in it which might not be found in some special works on the Norse fauna and avifauna, such as Prof. Collett's. One would have liked to learn something more definite with regard to the insect migration mentioned in the other chapter. Most of us have seen insects a considerable way out at sea, either on the North Sea or the Atlantic. Do they ever cross the former? To that question Mr. Chapman's observations give no decisive answer. It is something to find a sportsman who is an entomologist as well as a naturalist. A botanist Mr. Chapman does not profess to be, though he prints a list of some of the flowers most commonly encountered (by him?) in Norway. From this list the Linnæa borealis is conspicuous by its absence: why? It is to be met with everywhere. Absent, too, is the common grass of Parnassus (Parnassia palustris), and many another flower which the present writer has met with as frequently as most of those mentioned by Mr. Chapman.

The Observances of the Augustinian Priory at Barnwell, Cambridgeshire. Edited by John Willis Clark. (Cambridge, Macmillan & Bowes.)

IN spite of his many and multifarious duties Mr. J. W. Clark has found leisure to produce another book which shows a mastery of mediæval history and a sympathy with the mediæval spirit rare even among those who make the Middle Ages their one and only interest. These Observances, now printed in Latin and English, were found by Mr. Clark in a book of Barnwell memoranda among the Harleian MSS. The book was written 1295–6, and describes a large and flourishing house of Augustinian canons, of which very little is above ground save a part of the cellarer's checker, some fragments of the bakehouse, and a piece of the subvault of the dorter. Nothing whatever remains of the huge Early English abbey church which lay behind the existing church of St. Andrew the Less, familiar to all who know the Newmarket Road and the ugly east-end of Cambridge. But though little is left to gladden our eyes of the priory in which the canons once lived and moved and had their being, a noble memorial of their life exists in these Observances. In many of the larger monastic houses a custumary was used to supplement the brief and ancient rule, and as it regulated every minute detail of monastic conduct, and was of authority second only to the rule itself, it never fails to be an interesting document: it gives a real picture of the life actually led. The Observances of St. Victor at Paris and of St. Denis at Rheims, both Augustinian houses, are fairly familiar, and both have proved useful to Mr. Clark in explaining points of custumal left unnoticed by the Barnwell writer. For completeness' sake Mr. Clark has also printed in Latin and English the first and second 'Rule of St. Augustine,' from another Harleian MS., collated with the printed editions.

Although the Observances afford no evidence of unduly easy living, it was clearly intended that the Cambridge regular canons should live a life of decent comfort, and for their guests they were bidden to provide such luxuries as silver spoons, proper pillows, a fire that did not smoke, and fire-screens. The fraterer was to provide mats and rushes to strew the frater and the alleys of the cloister at the frater door, and frequently to renew them; in summer to throw flowers, mint, and fennel into the air to make a sweet odour, and also to provide fly-flappers (muscatorias). The arrangements for cleanliness were probably such as ordinary thirteenth century gentlemen thought decent. The brethren were not to wipe their noses or rub their teeth on the napkins or table-cloths; they were to direct the fraterer's attention to any unusually large stains on the table-cloths, that he might wash them with all speed. The chamberlain arranged terms with a laundress, who was to do the conventual mending; the linen was to be washed once a fortnight in summer, once in three weeks in winter. The chamberlain counted out the wash with the laundress, and the record was kept on tallies; if any article were missing the laundress made it good out of her wages. The food mentioned is meat; fish, including herrings and dried fish; eggs; vegetables; bread, which might be warm, but must not be dirty, broken, burnt, or gnawed by mice; fruit; wine; and beer, which might not be served for drink until the fourth day after brewing. The kitchener was warned to send nothing to table imperfectly cooked, putrid, or stale. Excessive clattering in the kitchen was to be avoided; the servitors were to be quick in serving the food, but not to run or jump in an unbecoming fashion; to hold the dishes neither too high nor too low, but so that the food might be seen by him who carried it.

"Brethren sometimes fall into a state of weak health from the irksomeness of life in the cloister, or from long continuance of silence; sometimes from fatigue in the quire or extension of fasting; sometimes from sleeplessness or overwork. Some are afflicted with a sense of heaviness in the head and pain in the stomach from sitting up too late with guests, and either drinking too much or overloading the stomach with food."

No undue severity is to be used with these sufferers; by leave of the prelate they may try to walk off their heaviness in the vineyard, the garden, and along the riverside, or in fields and woods outside the precincts; for their further diversion they may take their meals with those who have been bled and are having an invalid's diet in the farmery.

Mr. Clark has added to his book a plan of Barnwell, drawn by Mr. St. John Hope, and an account of the monastic services by Mr. W. H. Frere. Wherever his own equipment fell short the editor was able to go to the first authority on his subject, and he who can refer in any difficulty to Mr. Micklethwaite, Dr. Jessopp, Dr. Wickham Legg, Dr. Norman Moore, Dr. Jackson, and Dr. James has very few pitfalls to dread. We have noticed few mistakes in the translation or preface. The erratum "for 'writing materials' read boxes," as a rendering of scrinia, is no great improvement; the context shows that the word should be translated screens. The usual translation of allec is herring; robæ probably does not mean "gowns" in the passage where the cellarer's duty is declared to be the purchase "allecis et piscis duri, et robarum et vinorum," for the gowns were made in the monastery by the chamberlain's servant. "Stoke" (p. xxiii) should apparently be stope; "progressæ" (p. ci) should be progressu. The term staurum should be translated stock rather than "store," as it evidently alludes to live stock (p. 181). The cellarer is to see whether the heaped or straked measure is used: "mensure cumulate vel rase," not "whether the measure be full or scanty." Prebenda should be translated provender, not "allowance." The cellarer is to point out to the prelate all cases as they arise ("omnes casus emergentes eidem indicare"), not "all cases of emergency as they arise." The passage, "Nec .... terras vendere, vel emere, ad firmam dimittere vel mutare," is translated "Nor .... sell or buy any lands, to lease them or change their tenants"; but it was the exchange of lands, not of tenants, which the monks dreaded. "De redditibus et denariis levandis" appears as "on the reduction of rent or money due." The words of the "prophet," "Promptuaria eorum plena," should be rendered in the words of the Psalmist David, with a reference to Ps. cxliv. 13. With these small exceptions we may say of Mr. Clark's translation what the writer of the Observances says of St. Augustine's rule: "An elephant can swim in it and a lamb can walk in it safely."

The Prose Works of Jonathan Swift, D.D. With a Biographical Introduction by W. E. H. Lecky, M.P.—Vol. I. Swift's Tale of a Tub, and other Early Works. Edited by Temple Scott. With Portrait. (Bell & Sons.)

An adequate edition of Swift—the whole of Swift, and nothing but Swift—has long been one of the pressing needs of students of English literature. It is nearly three-quarters of a century since Sir Walter Scott's second edition appeared, and although we live in an age of much editing, no scholar has ventured to improve upon it until now; for we do not reckon Roscoe's congestion in two volumes as an improvement. It would be different if Scott had been more critical and careful; but it is notorious that his nineteen volumes abound in pieces which were certainly not written by Swift, that Swift's true works are arranged in a confusing order, and that the texts have not been collated with the best early editions. Scott was not an ideal editor according to modern standards, though it is only fair to admit that his Swift was a distinct advance upon the collections of his predecessors, Sheridan, Hawkesworth, and Nichols. When the extreme difficulty of the task is considered, one need not be surprised at Scott's shortcomings, nor at the obvious reluctance of later students to tackle the numerous problems connected with the authenticity and attribution of a mass of anonymous pamphlets and broadsides. If it is certain that many pieces included in Scott's edition were not the work of Swift, it is also extremely probable that among the anonymous squibs and lampoons of the period preceding the Treaty of Utrecht, and also among the later tracts dealing with Irish grievances, there may be several which came from Swift's pen, though hitherto unidentified. The process of weeding out spurious works is easier than that of authenticating unacknowledged sheets, especially when the 'Journal to Stella' comes to an end; but a modern editor of Swift must keep his eye fixed upon the whole range of anonymous political literature of the time if he means to attempt anything approaching finality in attribution.

Mr. Temple Scott, who is preparing the new edition of Swift's 'Prose Works' in eight convenient volumes for "Bohn's Standard Library," has begun well. His first volume is marked by care and knowledge. He has scrupulously collated his texts with the first or the best early editions, and has given various readings in the foot-notes. He reproduces the original title-pages, and prefixes an accurate and sufficient account of the origin, the principal changes in the chief editions, and the political bearing, of each work. To do more would unduly swell the volume, and would be deserting the restricted province of the editor and commentator, and trespassing upon the special field of literary and historical criticism already adequately worked by other hands. His foot-notes are wisely confined to concise explanations, brief biographies of persons referred to, and various readings; and, so far as we have examined them, the notes appear to be remarkably accurate and judicious. There are occasional repetitions and trifling discrepancies, as, for example, in the two notes on Thomas Rymer and on John Dennis on pp. 37 and 294, where the latter is described first as known "for his intemperate criticisms," and afterwards as "an excellent critic." These oversights, however, are extremely rare, and Mr. Temple Scott may well be congratulated on his skill and judgment as a commentator. We could, indeed, wish that he had verified the references to classical and other authors, and inserted "chapter and verse." Such references as "Tacit.," or "Plutarch," or "Xenoph. in conviv." are too indefinite, and should have been filled in, in brackets of course; while "Bernier, Mem. de Mogol" (p. 197), is not only inadequate, but inaccurate.

Mr. Temple Scott does not explain the order he intends to adopt for the arrangement of Swift's works; but we gather that he contemplates some sort of classification according to subject-matter. The present volume contains the prose works up to 1710, but omits the ecclesiastical or theological works, such as the 'Sentiments of a Church of England Man,' the 'Argument against Abolishing Christianity,' and the 'Project for the Advancement of Religion,' all of which were written in 1708–9, and were included in the 1711 collection of 'Miscellanies,' which contained other pieces printed in the present volume. From this it would appear that Swift's religious pamphlets are to be brought together in a separate volume, perhaps with his sermons and the letter to the young clergyman. The plan has its merits, though on the whole a strictly chronological order is preferable. The 'Tale of a Tub,' written in 1696, begins the volume (printed from the fifth edition of 1710, with the 'Apology' and Wotton's notes), and is followed by the other pieces originally issued within the same covers, namely, the 'Battle of the Books' (1697), and the 'Discourse on the Mechanical Operation of the Spirit.' The 'History of Martin,' which is said to have followed Section 9 of the 'Tale of a Tub' in the original MS. and in the Dutch edition of 1720, is appended. The other pieces comprised in the volume are the prefaces to Swift's edition of Temple's works, the 'Contests in Athens and Rome' (1701), 'Thoughts on Various Subjects' (brought together from the 'Miscellanies' of 1711 and 1735, and Hawkesworth's edition of 1766), the 'Tritical Essay,' written in 1707, the Bickerstaff papers of 1708–9, and the 'Meditation upon a Broomstick,' written in 1704. Altogether we have in these 334 pages the most brilliant work of Swift's earlier years, and we have it in a well-edited, well-printed, and thoroughly handy form at an absurdly low price. Mr. Temple Scott has undoubtedly earned the gratitude of all admirers of our greatest satirist, and all students of vigorous, masculine, and exact English.

Mr. Lecky's 'Biographical Introduction' is partly a reprint of his essay on Swift in 'Leaders of Public Opinion in Ireland,' originally published in 1861, and reissued in a revised form ten years later. But the whole sketch has been expanded and greatly improved both in style and accuracy. Mr. Lecky has taken advantage of the researches of various Swift students during the last twenty-five years to correct the numerous minor errors which defaced his original essay, and his mature judgment has modified some of his earlier opinions. On the question of the supposed marriage with Stella he does not commit himself; but he still holds to the historical existence of a letter from Vanessa to Stella, and Swift's ride to Marlay ending in the "awful look," the evidence for which was challenged by Mr. Paget, if we remember aright, in 'Puzzles and Paradoxes.' Mr. Lecky has, perhaps, hardly shown his usually just sense of proportion in sparing nine pages out of ninety for so trivial an episode as Vanessa's passion. On the Irish pamphlets and the political and industrial situation in Ireland he is, of course, especially full and forcible; but taking the sketch as a whole, whilst admitting that it is clear, accurate, and, within its necessary limits, comprehensive, we cannot regard it as altogether sympathetic. The reader, however, will find in it an admirably written outline of Swift's career, which he can readily supplement from larger biographies.

Essays from the 'Guardian.' By Walter Pater. (Privately printed.)

THE journalism of a distinguished writer, when, as in the case of Walter Pater, it has been scanty, and seems to have been done from careful personal choice, may be permitted to have more than the interest for us of an idle curiosity. It is certain that the reader will find in it some indication of tastes, some perhaps freer passing of judgments, some valuable side-lights upon the finished work of which it was never intended to be more than a marginal note. And, while he should not look specially for passages of beautiful writing, it is probable that he will find them; at all events, in individual sentences, perhaps a little entangled with the too insistent subject-matter of the review. The charming little book which has recently been printed contains only a portion of Pater's literary journalism, but it contains not the least interesting portion in the nine reviews which he contributed to the Guardian between 1886 and 1890. The titles and dates are as follows: English Literature (February 17th, 1886); Amiel's 'Journal Intime' (March 17th, 1886); Browning (November 9th, 1887); 'Robert Elsmere' (March 28th, 1888); Their Majesties' Servants (June 27th, 1888); Wordsworth (February 27th, 1889); Ferdinand Fabre: an Idyll of the Cevennes (June 12th, 1889); The 'Contes' of M. Augustin Filon: Tales of a Hundred Years Since (July 16th, 1890); Mr. Gosse's Poems (October 29th, 1890). To this list it may be interesting to add a few uncollected, and in some cases unsigned, reviews of Pater, probably unknown to many students of his work: 'The Complete Poetical Works of William Wordsworth,' edited by J. Morley (Athenæum, January 26th, 1889); 'Correspondance de Gustave Flaubert' (Deuxième Série, Athenæum, August 3rd, 1889); J. A. Symonds's 'Renaissance in Italy: The Age of the Despots' (Academy, July 31st, 1875); M. Jules Lemaître's 'Serenus, and other Tales' (Macmillan's Magazine, November, 1887, unsigned); The Life and Letters of Flaubert (Pall Mall Gazette, August 25th, 1888); Fabre's 'Toussaint Galabru' (Nineteenth Century, April, 1889); Lilly's 'Century of Revelation' (Nineteenth Century, December, 1889); A Poet with something to say: Mr. Arthur Symons's 'Days and Nights' (Pall Mall Gazette, March 23rd, 1889, unsigned); 'It is Thyself' (Pall Mall Gazette, April 15th, 1889, unsigned); 'Dorian Gray' (Bookman, November, 1891); Mr. George Moore as an Art Critic (Daily Chronicle, June 10th, 1893). To these others could no doubt be added, but, we think, not many. To one who wrote as slowly and carefully as Pater the writing of a review was really not worth the labour it cost, and it was only occasionally that he gave way to what, in his case, was in the nature of a temptation.

Five out of the nine reviews in the volume before us may be taken, in their different ways, as models of what reviewing should be, of what the best kind of review can be. These are the 'English Literature,' 'Browning,' Amiel's 'Journal Intime,' 'Robert Elsmere,' and 'Mr. Gosse's Poems.' The article on Wordsworth will be for the most part familiar to readers of the 'Appreciations.' The essay on Wordsworth, perhaps the most intimately critical of any of Pater's criticisms, appeared for the first time in the Fortnightly Review many years ago. Part of it was used, word for word, in the Guardian and in the Athenæum review, so that Pater may certainly be said to have signified his own sense of the value of what he had to say in this notable passage of the Wordsworth essay by using it three times over before its appearance in the book. The review of M. Filon's 'Contes' is occupied almost entirely with telling the story—not a particularly interesting one—of a single tale in it, and it makes one wonder at the sometimes uncritical indulgence of a great critic's leisure moments. The review of M. Fabre has one charming and delicately felt sentence, brought in by way of illustration:—

"The reader travelling in Italy, or Belgium perhaps, has doubtless visited one or more of those spacious sacristies, introduced to which for the inspection of some more than usually recherché work of art, one is presently dominated by their reverend quiet: simple people coming and going there, devout, or at least on devout business, with half-pitched voices, not without touches of kindly humour, in what seems to express like a picture the most genial side, midway between the altar and the home, of the ecclesiastical life."

The remaining review — that on Dr. Doran's 'Annals of the English Stage'— is a quaint, gossiping little paper, admirably done, certainly, and amusing to read because it is written by Pater, and ending with its ingenious moral, so delicately just:—

"Contact with the stage, almost throughout its history, presents itself as a kind of touchstone, to bring out the bizarrerie, the theatrical tricks and contrasts, of the actual world."

"He was meant," says Pater, speaking of Amiel,

"if people ever are meant for special lines of activity, for the best sort of criticism, the imaginative criticism; that criticism which is itself a kind of construction, or creation, as it penetrates, through the given literary or artistic product, into the mental and inner constitution of the producer, shaping his work."

How admirably this defines, in its definition of what to Pater was the ideal criticism, his own realization of that ideal! And in this very essay, perhaps the best in the book, there is a passage which may be quoted as an instance of just this kind of imaginative insight into "the mental and inner constitution" of a writer not easy to seize through all his disguises:—

"Yet, in truth, there are but two men in Amiel—two sufficiently opposed personalities, which the attentive reader may define for himself; compare with, and try by each other—as we think, correct also by each other. There is the man, in him and in these pages, who would be 'the man of disillusion,' only that he has never really been 'the man of desires'; and who seems, therefore, to have a double weariness about him. He is akin, of course, to Obermann, to René, even to Werther, and, on our first introduction to him, we might think that we had to do only with one more of the vague 'renunciants,' who in real life followed these creatures of fiction, and who, however delicate, interesting as a study, and as it were picturesque on the stage of life, are themselves, after all, essentially passive, uncreative, and therefore necessarily not of first-rate importance in literature. Taken for what it is worth, the expression of this mood—the culture of ennui for its own sake—is certainly carried to its ideal of negation by Amiel. But the completer, the positive, soul, which will merely take that mood into its service (its proper service, as we hold, is in counter-action to the vulgarity of purely positive natures), is also certainly in evidence in Amiel's 'Thoughts'—that other, and far stronger person, in the long dialogue; the man, in short, possessed of gifts, not for the renunciation, but for the reception and use, of all that is puissant, goodly, and effective in life, and for the varied and adequate literary reproduction of it; who, under favourable circumstances, or even without them, will become critic, or poet, and in either case a creative force; and if he be religious (as Amiel was deeply religious) will make the most of 'evidence,' and almost certainly find a Church."

In this essay, and, at greater length, in the review of 'Robert Elsmere,' we find a more definite statement on the subject of religion than Pater cared usually to give. "Robert Elsmere," to quote the most separable passage from the latter,

"was a type of a large number of minds which cannot be sure that the sacred story is true. It is philosophical, doubtless, and a duty to the intellect to recognize our doubts, to locate them, perhaps to give them practical effect. It may be also a moral duty to do this. But then there is also a large class of minds which cannot be sure it is false—minds of very various degrees of conscientiousness and intellectual power, up to the highest. They will think those who are quite sure it is false unphilosophical through lack of doubt. For their part, they make allowance in their scheme of life for a great possibility, and with some of them that bare concession of possibility (the subject of it being what it is) becomes the most important fact in the world. The recognition of it straightway opens wide the door to hope and love; and such persons are, as we fancy they always will be, the nucleus of a Church."

This scrupulous moderation, this entirely scholarly subtlety in judgment, is the most distinguishable characteristic of these reviews. The delicate weighing of justice: we find that in the consideration of Amiel, where not the most generous or plausible of prejudices in favour of an interesting defect is permitted to disturb the exact balance of the scales; we find it in the careful, forbearing review of 'Robert Elsmere,' a model of the good manners of literary criticism, with its keen, at times droll, sidelights: "And their goodness, when they are good" (he is speaking of the men in that novel), "is—well! a little conventional; the kind of goodness that men themselves discount rather largely in their estimates of each other." We find it in the delicate, kindly criticism of the article on Mr. Gosse's poems, saying so prettily, and with such charm of lightness in the touch, all that needs saying, all that can be said, on its subject. We find it in the review of Mr. Arthur Symons's 'Introduction to the Study of Browning,' where the art of quotation is carried to perfection, passage after passage from the book being pieced together, from every corner of it, with an admirable effect of ensemble, the reviewer's far more valuable comments being introduced but sparingly. "Imaginatively, indeed," he says of Browning in one place, "he has been a multitude of persons; only (as Shakespeare's only untried style was the simple one) almost never simple ones." And again:—

"In the preface to the later edition of 'Sordello,' Mr. Browning himself told us that to him little else seems worth study except the development of a soul, the incidents, the story, of that. And, in fact, the intellectual public generally agrees with him. It is because he has ministered with such marvellous vigour, and variety, and fine skill to this interest, that he is the most modern, to modern people the most important, of poets."

The essay on 'English Literature,' which opens the volume, is not less admirable in its adjustment of four books of prose selections into the scope of a single and perfectly continuous essay. It contains, too, some valuable criticism of the course and capacities of English prose. Speaking of Elizabethan poetry, it adds:—

"That powerful poetry was twin-brother to a prose, of more varied, but certainly of wilder and more irregular power than the admirable, the typical, prose of Dryden. In Dryden, and his followers through the eighteenth century, we see the reaction against the exuberance and irregularity of that prose, no longer justified by power, but cognizable rather as bad taste. But such reaction was effective only because an age had come—the age of a negative, or agnostic philosophy—in which men's minds must needs be limited to the superficialities of things, with a kind of narrowness amounting to a positive gift."

"A kind of narrowness amounting to a positive gift"! How perfectly that describes so much of the correct writing on which unimaginative writers in all ages are so confident in priding themselves! And could anything be more suggestive, coming from Pater more significant, or, rightly taken, more valuable in its counsel, than this summing up of the question of style in prose?—

"Well, the good quality of an age, the defect of which lies in the direction of intellectual anarchy and confusion, may well be eclecticism: in style, as in other things, it is well always to aim at the combination of as many excellences as possible—opposite excellences, it may be—those other beauties of prose. A busy age will hardly educate its writers in correctness. Let its writers make time to write English more as a learned language; and completing that correction of style which had only gone a certain way in the last century, raise the general level of language towards their own."

It was in the finest sense, certainly—in the sense in which he means it in this passage—that Pater himself wrote English as if it were a learned language. It did not seem to him that one should treat a living language, because it is living, and one's own, with less respect than a dead language which had once been living to the people of another nation.

New Poems. By Francis Thompson. (Constable & Co.)

VERSE, unless it is in some measure ecstasy, cannot be poetry. But it does not follow that in verse the most fervid ecstasy is the best poetry. If, indeed, for "fervid" be substituted "fervidly expressed," it is quite the contrary. Coventry Patmore has pointed out that the sign of great art is peace, a peace which comes of the serene, angelic triumph over mortal tumults, and those less essential raptures which are after all flames of the earth's centre. Mr. Francis Thompson has the ecstasy; but unfortunately he has not realized that ecstasy, if it is to be communicated from the soul to the soul, and not merely from the mouth to the ear, must be whispered, not shouted.

If a man's style is the man—his innermost self, as we may suppose, revealing itself in the very words he uses — Mr. Thompson, in a more special sense than almost any other writer, is seen in his language. He is that strange phenomenon, a verbal intelligence. He thinks in words, he receives his emotions and sensations from words, and the rapture which he certainly attains is a rapture of the disembodied word. It is not that his verse is without meaning, that in taking care of the sound he allows the sense (poor orphan!) to take care of itself. He has a meaning, but that meaning, if it has not a purely verbal origin, is at all events allowed to develope under the direct suggestion of the words which present themselves to interpret it. His consciousness is dominated by its own means of expression. And what is most curious of all is that, while Mr. Thompson has a quite recognizable manner, he has not achieved a really personal style. He has learnt much, not always with wisdom, and in crowding together Cowley, Crashaw, Donne, Patmore, to name but a few of many, he has not remembered that to begin a poem in the manner of Crashaw, and to end it in the manner of Patmore, is not the same thing as fusing two alien substances into a single new substance. Styles he has, but not style. This very possession by the word has, perhaps, hindered him from attaining it. Fine style, the style in which every word is perfect, rises beautifully out of a depth into which words have never stretched down their roots. Intellect and emotion are the moulders of style. A profound thought, a profound emotion, speaks as if it were unconscious of words; only when it speaks as if unconscious of words do the supreme words issue from its lips. Ornament may come afterwards: you cannot begin with ornament. Mr. Thompson, however, begins with ornament.

Unhappily, too, Mr. Thompson's verse is certainly fatiguing to read, and one of the reasons why it is so fatiguing is that the thought that is in it does not progress; it remains stationary. About the fragile life which cries somewhere in its centre he builds up walls of many-coloured bricks, immuring his idea, hiding it, stifling it. How are we to read an ode of many pages in which there is no development, not even movement? Stanza is heaped upon stanza, page is piled upon page, and we end where we began. The writer has said endless things about something, but never the thing itself. Poetry consists in saying the thing itself.

But this is not the only reason why it is fatiguing to read Mr. Thompson's verse. To read it is too much like jolting in a springless cart over a ploughed field, about noontide, on a hot summer day. His lines, of which this is typical,—

Pulp the globed weight of juiced Iberia's grape, are so packed with words that each line detains the reader. Not merely does Mr. Thompson prefer the line to the stanza or the paragraph, he prefers the word to the line. He has failed to remember that while two and two make four, four are not necessarily better than two—that because red is brighter than grey, red is not necessarily the better colour to use whenever one wants to use a colour. He hears the brass in the orchestra sounding out loudly over the strings, and he therefore suppresses the strings. He has a bold and prolific fancy, and he pampers his fancy; yet prodigality is not abundance, nor profusion taste. He is without reticence, which he looks upon as stint or as penury. Having invited his guests to his feast, he loads their plates with more than they can eat, forcing it upon them under the impression that to do otherwise is to be lacking in hospitality.

Yet, after all, the feast is there—Trimalchio's if you will, but certainly not a Barmecide's. Mr. Thompson has a remarkable talent, he has a singular mastery of verse, as the success of his books is not alone in proving. Never has the seventeenth century phrasing been so exactly repeated as in some of his poems. Never have Patmore's odes been more scrupulously rewritten, cadence for cadence. Mr. Thompson's fancy is untiring, if sometimes it tires the reader; he has, not exactly at command, but not beyond reach, an eager imagination. No one can cause a more vaguely ardent feeling in the sympathetic reader, a feeling made up of admiration and of astonishment in perhaps equal portions. There are times when the fire in him burns clear through its enveloping veils of smoke, and he writes passages of real splendour. Why then does he for the most part wrap himself so willingly in the smoke?

For it is difficult to avoid the conviction that Mr. Thompson deliberately rejects simplicity, and even, at times, with an elaborate and conscious search after long and heavily coloured words. There is in this book a translation of Victor Hugo's 'Ce qu'on entend sur la Montagne,' a well-known poem in the 'Feuilles d'Automne.' In going carefully over Mr. Thompson's version and comparing it word for word with the original, we have found that where Victor Hugo — not a simple writer — is simple, Mr. Thompson embroiders upon him, and that where he is not simple, Mr. Thompson is always less so. For instance, in the very first couplet we have "let your tread aspirant rise" for monté; a few lines below,

One day at least, whereon my thought, enlicensèd to muse,
Had drooped its wing above the beachèd margent of the ooze,

for

—— un jour qu'en rêve
Ma pensée abattit son vol sur une grève.

Further on,

The one was of the waters; a be-radiant hymnal speech!

for

L'une venait des mers; chant de gloire! hymne heureux!

And, finally,

And I made question of me, to what issues are we here,
Whither should tend the thwarting threads of all this ravelled gear,

in place of

Et je me demandai pourquoi l'on est ici,
Quel peut être après tout le but de tout ceci.

What could be more significant than this heaping up of long and extravagant and sometimes feeble words, instead of the direct language of Hugo, who in this poem, though not without a certain rhetoric, says exactly what he wants to say, and when, as in the last two lines quoted, he thinks that an almost bald simplicity will be in place, sets down his thought in terms of an almost bald simplicity? In this translation Mr. Thompson has betrayed himself; he has allowed his critics to see him at work, substituting what is roundabout for what is straightforward; what is lengthy for what is brief; what is elaborated for what is simple. Has not a similar process gone on in his own mind — how far consciously one cannot tell — during the writing of his original poems?

A Theory of the Hebrew Accents and Vowel-Signs (Grundzüge der hebräischen Akzent- und Vocallehre). By Hubert Grimme. Collectanea Freiburgensia, Fasc. V. (Williams & Norgate.)

HERR GRIMME has produced a work which must be characterized as original, daring, and highly suggestive; but it cannot be said that he has succeeded in carrying conviction to the minds of Semitic students. In all the best Hebrew grammars composed at various times during the last six hundred years or more it has been assumed that the Masoretic vowel-system was meant to distinguish not only the quality but also the quantity of the various sounds; but our new teacher tells us that it is all a huge mistake, that the earlier Masorites and grammarians never connected the Hebrew vowel-signs with the idea of quantity, and that we can only attain to philological truth by emptying ourselves of all the confused knowledge with which our minds have unfortunately been filled. According to Grimme, the mischief was all done by Joseph Kimchi, who in the twelfth century engrafted upon the Hebrew vowel-system the purely European distinction of quantity, and thus obscured the whole subject, not only for the ordinary run of students, but also for men like Elias Levita, Ewald, and Gesenius. It is, however, pretty certain that our author is laying far too heavy a load of blame on poor Joseph Kimchi. It is true that he reduced the then prevalent opinions on the Masoretic vowel-signs to a somewhat stiff and rather inconsistent body of rules, but it can hardly be maintained that the germs of the system are not clearly discernible in the works of the earlier grammarians. The theory of open and closed syllables is much older than Joseph Kimchi, and it should not be difficult to recognize that as certain Hebrew vowel-signs can, unless fortified by the accent, only form open syllables, such signs must necessarily differ in quantity from those which usually form closed syllables only. Herr Grimme himself admits that the letters אהוי, which were anciently used as marks of vocalization, aimed at quantity mainly, and it is, therefore, difficult to see why the inventors of the vowel-system in the seventh or eighth century should have entirely dissociated quantity from the newly adopted graphic signs.

It must be admitted that Herr Grimme goes to work in a strictly scientific manner. He begins with accentuation, because in his opinion the placing of the accents, and absolutely nothing else, lies at the basis of all the quantitative differences of Hebrew vowel-sounds. But as there is no means of ascertaining how Hebrew was accented in the times of David, Isaiah, or even Ezra, we are bidden to start from what is known of the Arabic accents in the seventh century or so. But the Hebrew tone-syllables as known to us from information reaching up to the earlier Masorites are largely at variance with the ancient Arabic, and our author is thus reduced to the necessity of explaining apparent anomalies in a manner which scholars are not likely to consider entirely satisfactory. He, moreover, neglects sources of information without the aid of which a final judgment can hardly be pronounced. Of the superlinear punctuation he says almost nothing, and the Spanish-Portuguese or Sefardi manner of pronouncing Hebrew is to him non-existent. He confesses he is not in a position as yet to formulate a complete comparative theory of Semitic accentuation, and he also leaves unconsidered much that modern grammarians like Stade, Barth, Kautzsch, and Eduard König have said on various points. These facts not only establish a primâ facie case against his theory, but also constitute a certain number of weak or broken links in the chain of his argument.

In an appendix our author exemplifies the results that may be expected from his theory by an entirely new view on the divine name "Yahweh." A masterly summary of this interesting subject was given some years ago by Dr. Driver in 'Studia Biblica,' and several other scholars have more recently made various additions to the literature bearing on it. But Herr Grimme is regardless of them all. He may be pardoned for believing that "Yahu" is more primary in form than "Yahweh," but it is rather startling to be told that the name of the God of Israe is not a singular noun after all, but a plural form like "Elohim." One's only comfort is that the new proposal rests on the most slender grounds imaginable, and that, therefore, the "unity" of the name is not likely to be disturbed thereby.

A fully deserved word of praise at the end: Herr Grimme is a most conscientious worker. The startling results at which he arrives are themselves a proof of this, for a less conscientious student would no doubt have sought to avoid such conclusions. The impression which the present work leaves upon one's mind is that its author is not one who will hesitate to modify his opinions, if further investigation should lead him that way; and as he is not the man to stop short in his researches, it is extremely probable that our best hopes will one day be fully realized.

NEW NOVELS.

Dear Faustina. By Rhoda Broughton. (Bentley & Son.)

Miss Broughton exhibits signs of over-anxiety to seize on and impress into her service the fleeting fashions and types of the hour. 'Dear Faustina' accentuates the growing tendency. It is manifestly and before everything intended to strike into the heart of the "movement"—woman's movement, of course! The attitude of impartial observer is fairly well maintained. Readers, as a majority, are not likely to be deeply stirred on the side either of pioneers or of the "other person." Strained is about the last word one would naturally apply to any of Miss Broughton's writings, but here there is really a hint of observation strained to a fixed point, instead of moving freely athwart people and subjects well within the writer's natural range and focus. And then, though the author may not be so, others are a little weary of the emancipated woman and her works, treated from almost any point of view. The strain is certainly not in the writing itself—as of old it wears a "thrown-off" air, and as of old the lightsome present flickers on every page. The voice is distinctly the voice of Miss Broughton, also to some extent the handling, but the matter is less characteristic. In more than one "outstanding" lady novelist we have noted the determined adoption of passing mannerisms and ephemeral catchwords, with the frequent result of loss of originality of outlook and expression. The author of Faustina had once on a time a sufficient grasp of the nature and habits of average girlhood, and her way of presenting her observations was her own, and not (as it has since become, by no fault of hers) another's. The sixties produced a different kind of girl, superficially speaking, from the girl of the nineties. That is the ordinary process of time and goes without saying. Miss Broughton understood the young person of her epoch, and wrote of and for her—wrote of her language, manners, aspirations, with discrimination and daring. She established a convention, and handled it with ability and abundant conviction. Her Nancys, Sarahs, and other old heroines had some piquancy and fascination, and wanted not a kind of humanity. Of the later growths of her garden of girls so much cannot be said. The sense of effort, the attempt to keep abreast with mental development and social progress (or the reverse), sit a little amiss on the brow of one whose function has been to provide not so much amusement combined with instruction as pure and simple amusement tinctured with sentimentalism. 'Dear Faustina' contains scarce one really amusing sally to cheer the way. Still there is some quick observation though little spontaneous vivacity. We all have or know Faustinas. This one is not a mere caricature of the genus. The author might have drawn her still more incisively, and above all more humorously, and left her human enough. She wants, too, more explanation or at least suggestion. Althea Vane, the worshipper of this specimen of platform womanhood who lives for, and a little by, the wrongs of society, is extremely wishy-washy, a figure poorly conceived and poorly worked out, with whom one has no sympathy. If her task be to play the beau rôle it does not somehow come off. She is a dreary creature who is permanently surprised, and is always weakly re-echoing every remark addressed to her. The good brother-in-law is more in the author's old vein; but he fails to produce the right amount of mirth at his own expense.

A Rose of Yesterday. By F. Marion Crawford. (Macmillan & Co.)

Is not Mr. Crawford writing rather too fast? Novels are no doubt shorter than they used to be; but even so, one every three months, which, or something like it, seems to be about his present rate of output, must be a heavy strain on the most fertile imagination. We seem to see some evidence that it is telling on him; not that he writes less carefully than usual, but the tendency to disquisition on general subjects seems to be growing on him, as if the strain of thinking out his story had to be relieved by a little discursive talk—of a kind that comes easily to any practised writer—on topics more or less remotely suggested by his narrative. Thus we have several pages upon divorce, Socialism, and the "woman question" at large; one or two about the transmission of letters, and the theories it might suggest to an inhabitant of Mars if provided with a glass which would (apparently) enable him to see the letter and not the vehicle which bore it; and a finale upon art and truth. On all these subjects—the first and last, at any rate—Mr. Crawford writes shrewdly and suggestively, but most readers will, we think, a little resent being stopped in their progress through the story, or detained when it is finished, in order to hear just then what he has to say. Another sign of overhaste is a certain lack of organic construction. The scene at the opening, in which Sylvia Strahan, over a copy of Dürer's famous 'Knight and Death,' betrays her heart to the chivalrous elderly colonel who is the hero of the story, has little or no bearing on what follows. It is not referred to again, and except as an illustration of Col. Wimpole's character serves no purpose in the development of the narrative. Sudden death, too, is surely a cheaper mode of solving a dilemma than a writer of Mr. Crawford's skill is entitled to use. On the whole, the book, though readable, like everything its author writes, strikes us as a trifle fragmentary.

The Last Entry. By W. Clark Russell. (Chatto & Windus.)

The writing of Mr. Clark Russell's last story can hardly, one may imagine, have cost the author any severe labour. Mr. Vanderholt, a "colonial merchant prince" of Dutch extraction, once a seaman before the mast, owns a yacht and a daughter. He takes the latter on a cruise to the Equator, in the former. On the way the crew mutiny—why, is not very apparent. A good many dark hints as to the brutality of the captain are given, no doubt, and he is mysteriously referred to as "something in the Nova Scotia way"; but within the covers of the book nothing is recorded of his conduct which could have justified the outrageous conduct of the crew in stabbing him, killing the unfortunate owner with a belaying pin, and leaving the daughter, alone with one of their own number who had lost his senses, on board a derelict timber vessel. More gratuitous crime we never read of. Yet this is practically the whole of the story. With a liberal garnish of the nautical language in which Mr. Russell is an adept—e.g., "You 're talking as if the ghosts of them bodies had jockeyed the yard-arms of your mind, and was close-reefing your intellect"—it serves to fill out a volume, but will not do much to increase the author's reputation.

A Fountain Sealed. By Walter Besant. (Chatto & Windus.)

One of Sir Walter Besant's chief characters in 'A Fountain Sealed' thus addresses the heroine:—

> "If you write about love, talk little of other matters Let your discourse be always of love .....keep the lover always before your readers. Let them hear the voice of love and see the eyes of love.....When the love tale is ended, close the volume: draw a line: write 'Finis' below —walk off the stage, and do not let your lover lag behind."

The advice thus proffered is carefully followed by the author. He tells the story of the love of King George III. for the pretty Quakeress Miss Nancy Walden. The time is the period just previous to the young king's accession, and the marriage of the prince and the Quakeress is interrupted by the death of his grandfather. In a short preface Sir Walter Besant deals with the various legends attaching to the king and a supposed Quakeress, and describes his book as "an attempt to tell the true story of George and Hannah" (Lightfoot). For the purpose of his story Sir Walter Besant states the lady is, until the moment when she sees her lover for the last time, ignorant of his rank and identity. There is more pleasure in the accessories of the story than in its subject. The neighbourhood of St. James's Palace in the year 1760 is remarkably well depicted; and equal care is bestowed on the subjects of a masquerade at Marylebone Gardens in the autumn of that year and a water party on the Thames. Though not among the author's most remarkable works, 'A Fountain Sealed' shows many of his best qualities as a writer, and here and there one of his best passages. The word "regale" as a substantive is unusual, and we twice find "ankress" used as the female equivalent of "anchorite." Neither expression is altogether free from exception, even where the narrative purports to be an autobiographical narration written in or shortly after the year 1780.

The Gift of Life. By James Cassidy. (Chapman & Hall.)

Deathlessness is the subject of a somewhat lengthy narrative which partakes more of the nature of an allegory than a romance, as it is described by the writer. Until the last few pages the reader is led to believe that a learned person confers by inoculation the power of resisting death; and the effect of the inoculation on the characters who constitute the story is varying, and is described with considerable skill and interest. Sufficient motive is suggested for the learned person's proceedings; and the explanation, when it is vouchsafed, is very simple and natural. The whole volume is a somewhat laborious effort to ridicule the popular prejudice against death in every walk of life; the irony is, however, carefully concealed to the end, and the story shows enough literary merit to attract a wide circle of readers. The word "nitact," which occurs in one passage, is possibly a misprint for intact.

Miss Tudor. By John Le Breton. (Macqueen.)

THERE are many well-worn and familiar features in a story which recounts a girl's efforts to procure success as a singer at London music-halls and theatres. The wicked manager, who bargains for the girl's love before he will help her, is in this story represented as repentant and anxious to marry his victim. The author frequently refers to the "variety-world" as a term which includes the whole of his dramatis personæ, and it is one which sums up the story he has to tell. The book shows no remarkable literary skill; it is painstaking, and in places pathetic. The writer seems in doubt as to the spelling of Johannesburg, from which place he brings one of the villains of the plot. The shape of the book is unusually large for a novel. The story appears to be better adapted to the club-table than to the drawing-room.

A Spotless Reputation. By D. Gerard. (Blackwood & Sons.)

HARD cases, it is said, make bad law; extreme cases do not make the best novels. Miss Gerard's conception is of a girl of surpassing beauty brought up, or rather left alone, till the age of seventeen, in complete isolation by a somewhat eccentric father, a valetudinarian with no interest save his garden; then married, after a very brief courtship, to the first man except her father whom she has ever known; then carried by the circumstances of her husband's profession—he is a diplomatist—into the thick, first of London, then of Vienna society. Such are the surroundings. Geraldine herself is not only absolutely beautiful, but absolutely passionless. Self-esteem is, so far as appears, the only spring of action which she recognizes. From sheer vanity she throws herself at the head of one man after another, driving them by one means or another to the grave, and passing on to the next conquest with scarcely a pang and with "a spotless reputation." From the day when, at her first introduction to London, she is found studying a history of England "to enable me to keep my place in conversation" to the moment when, her complexion injured by an accident, she feels that "if life must be again worth living, she must be her perfect self again," and flings away her life in the hopeless attempt to recover what she has lost, she is wholly centred in herself, until even her upright husband, the type of the "professionizing moral man," though not devoid of heart, is constrained to use words which, in all but the spirit which prompts them, remind us of nothing so much as Joseph Surface's recommendation of "a trifling faux pas." The story of the gradual development of Geraldine's—not character, for that no doubt was there from the first, but conduct—from the time when "nothing could lie further from her inclination than to have thrust herself upon society as an idol; but since society would adore, she was beginning to understand that it is not entirely unpleasant to be adored," to that when she deliberately sets herself to win the love of another woman's husband merely because the poor man is in love with his own wife—is cleverly enough traced, and in the result it forms a curious comment, by way of inversion, on the quia multum amavit of Scripture; but as a novel it fails either to "convince" or to attract. It has not even the morbid attraction of a clinical study. The case, one feels, is as impossible as those mathematical problems involving elephants "whose weight may be neglected." Women devoid of conscious physical passion there are in plenty, but did anybody ever meet with a woman (unless rendered ferocious by external circumstances) devoid of what is called "heart" in the widest sense—of sympathy for something or somebody other than herself? Details are mostly well attended to, but "à la bonheur" is terrible, nor is it usual, we think, to prune roses while they are flowering.

Dans la Brume. Par Léon de Tinseau. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)

M. DE TINSEAU'S new novel is at his usual level. The French people in it have their noses put out of joint by a delightful American heroine. This is a sign of the times in France, where the virtues of the women of the United States and the superiority of their training are the fashion of the day. M. de Tinseau thinks that the English readers of the world number three hundred millions. We wish they did.

TRAVELS IN NORTH AMERICA.

The Wilderness and its Tenants, by Mr. John Madden (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.), is a work in three volumes to which few critics, however long-suffering and well informed, could hope to do justice. Mr. Madden has journeyed over the globe; he has read largely and is careful in giving an authority for each of his many quotations; if he cite a text from the Bible he gives chapter and verse in a foot-note, and he candidly acknowledges in notes his obligations to other recondite books such as Murray's handbooks to Bengal and Egypt and Appleton's 'Guide to the United States and Canada.' He informs the reader at p. 37 of his first volume that sea-sickness is, as long experience has taught him, "to a great degree mental." He uses the first person plural throughout his work, and sometimes with an effect which is ludicrous as well as ungrammatical, the words about sea-sickness, which follow those quoted above, being an example: "We may just say that as a youngster no one has probably ever suffered more severely than we have." He is careful to guard the reader from thinking that hay fever and paroxysmal sneezing are one and the same. He quotes Parkman as his authority for the simple statement that "the Indian is a true child of the forest and the desert." He tells his own experience of mirage at sea, and he quotes what others have narrated about it on land. He gives receipts from good authorities for tying fly-hooks and tanning fishing nets; and he concludes his work with an account of Thomas Paine condensed from the 'Dictionary of National Biography.' Many things in this work are sheer commonplaces. It is a pity that Mr. Madden should have filled three volumes with the contents of his note-books instead of condensing into one all that he can tell which might be novel.

On Snow-Shoes to the Barren Grounds (Osgood, McIlvaine & Co.) is the narrative of a journey by Mr. Caspar Whitney in quest of musk-oxen and wood-bison, the journey extending over 2,800 miles. These Barren Grounds have an estimated area of 350,000 square miles; they have been traversed by others before Mr. Whitney, who have told the story of their hair-breadth escapes from death by hunger, and Mr. Whitney's experience resembles theirs. Though the story is thrilling at times, yet it leaves the reader in a critical mood, because he knows that, if the hero had not escaped, the book would not have been written. Mr. Arthur Heming, who accompanied him to illustrate the book, excites more of the reader's sympathy. After the journey had begun Mr. Heming fell ill, and his case was so serious that he had to turn back. We are not told what became of him after parting from Mr. Whitney, and this omission is surely a mistake on the author's part. The story is familiar to all the readers of travel in the Arctic regions. The adventures of an Arctic traveller chiefly relate to procuring food. The snow falls; the wind blows; the scene is barren and lugubrious; yet if food be abundant, there is as little risk as there is pleasure. Mr. Whitney tells his story very clearly and well, the illustrations are many and good, and this last account of the "Barren Grounds" is as worthy of being read as any which has yet been written.

The Western Avernus; or, Toil and Travel in Further North America (Constable & Co.), is a reissue, with many illustrations, of the work by Mr. Morley Roberts which appeared in 1887. The author says in the preface that he regards the work as autobiography; it is, indeed, a piece of self-portraiture and a revelation of character. Mr. Roberts suffered several hardships, and he learned to loathe his fellow men; but most of his pains were as much self-inflicted as those of St. Simeon Stylites. In Texas he "began to feel alive, volitional, not dead and basely mechanical as at home in England." But then he had a brother in Minnesota, and he thought he would be happier still in the "bracing northern air" than in "the sweet, fresh air of Texas." He reached Colorado city possessing but nine pounds, and consequently unable to pay his fare to St. Paul, nearly thirteen hundred miles away. He suddenly started for Chicago, leaving his luggage and money behind him; returned to Colorado city, quitting it again for Chicago, and arriving there penniless. At times he made a living by tending cattle, at others by working as a navvy, and, when the fancy seized him, he gave up the work in hand for the possibility of obtaining work of any other sort elsewhere. When he had enough to eat and sufficient leisure, as at New Westminster, he perused all the books he could procure, and he even performed the feat of reading Alison's 'History of Europe.' A good man struggling with adversity moves the sympathy of the gods themselves; but a man who partly makes the adversity with which he contends does not receive or merit any pity. Though resembling the proverbial rolling stone, Mr. Roberts returned to his native land bearing with him experiences which he has turned to good literary account, and we hope that he has now been compensated for the days of trial during which he could not get a dinner, and the nights during which he could not get a bed.

BOOKS ON FOLK-LORE.

New Folk-lore Researches, Greek Folk-poesy: Annotated Translations. By L. M. J. Garnett. Edited, with Essays on the Science of Folk-lore, Greek Folk-speech, and the Survival of Paganism, by J. S. Stuart-Glennie. 2 vols. (Nutt.)—In 1885 we noticed with strong commendation the first edition of this work. The book then consisted of an essay on the survival of paganism and translations from Greek folk-verse. The thin volume has now expanded into two stout volumes. In the first of them there are several essays and double the amount of verse-translations. The second contains a large collection of new translations from Greek prose tales, and the essay on the survival of paganism appears again, brought up to date. Both Mr. Stuart-Glennie and Miss Garnett have done their best to make the work perfect. We have compared a considerable portion of the verse-translations with the Greek, and we have found that they are accurate and embody the exact ideas and convey the spirit of the originals. We have also compared with the Greek nearly all the prose tales that are taken from the first volume of the Δελτίον of the Historical and Ethnological Society of Greece—a large proportion of the whole—and we have observed the same accuracy and the same effort to catch the spirit of the tale-teller. Mr. Glennie thus states his aim :—

"No less important, however, did I esteem the duty of ensuring, by careful and repeated revisions of the translations, a scrupulously close rendering both of the spirit and letter of the originals ; and as to the character of the Englishing, our aim has been to make it as simple as possible, and dialectic only in occasional touches."

Mr. Glennie and Miss Garnett have succeeded in this aim. There is no collection of popular verse and tales that surpasses this one in interest. Especially there is a delightful charm about the stories, which are likely to fascinate both old and young alike. They nearly all are genuine popular tales and have the characteristics of the popular mind. The only exceptions are one or two Christian tales, through which runs a moralizing thread which has not proceeded direct from the brain of the people. The annotations added to the verses and tales are also exceedingly good. It would be impossible to discuss Mr. Glennie's essays in a short review. They expound a philosophy of civilization and the place of folk-lore in that philosophy in opposition to current ideas. They contain the generalizations at which Mr. Glennie has arrived, but these generalizations are not supported by details of the facts on which they are based. Only a few hints are vouchsafed. Mr. Glennie has evidently read very widely, and he has consulted and made good use of the best authorities ; but he does not appear to be a specialist in some of the historical researches on which his conclusions depend. Yet all his suggestions deserve careful consideration. He starts from the belief that no savage tribe or nation has ever risen to civilization unaided, and that there does not exist mental identity or mental equality among men. The results of his inquiries are that the origin of what he calls primary civilizations "was a conflict of higher white, but non-Semitic and non-Aryan, races with lower coloured and black races"; that the primary civilizations were those of Chaldea and Egypt ; and that subsequent civilizations were derived directly or indirectly from these primary civilizations. Thus have existed, and still exist, two classes of people—the cultured and the folk, whose mode of thought and conduct differs widely. Folk-lore deals with every expression of the mode in which the folk speak or feel, and hence this collection of folk-poesy and folk-tales is not confined to narratives of survivals, but embraces every aspect of the life of the people. Mr. Glennie has an admirable excursus on Greek folk-speech, in which he narrates the development of the Greek language from the classical to the present times. We do not know an essay in which the subject is treated so lucidly and accurately within such short compass. Mr. Glennie has had recourse to the most recent writers, and his readers may be misled into thinking that these are the authorities for the results which he records, and not the mere recorders of them. Thus he mentions that neo-Hellenic has no traces of the ancient dialects in it, as was formerly supposed, and he quotes from Pernot to this effect. But the man whose masterly inquiries into this subject settled the question was Hatzidakis. The book is on the whole carefully printed, but a little more pains might have been bestowed on the spelling of Greek words and of proper names, and on placing the Greek accents correctly.

What They Say in New England (Gay & Bird) is a collection, made by Mr. Clifton Johnson, of "signs, sayings, and superstitions." The compiler deserves praise for rescuing so much folk-lore in North America from oblivion. He has demonstrated, moreover, how closely akin the New Englanders are to ourselves in their weather wisdom and proverbial philosophy. Such a phrase as the following was not originally made in America : "If March comes in like a lion, it goes out like a lamb. If it comes in like a lamb, it will go out like a lion." Certain beliefs in dreams crossed the Atlantic with the Puritans : "To dream of a funeral is the sign of a wedding. To dream of a wedding is the sign of a funeral." When boys in New England touch their buttons and repeat the following words till the last is reached, in order to learn what they are to be in later life, they imitate or continue the practice of boys in the country from which their forefathers came : "Rich man, poor man, beggarman, thief, doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief." Long before any English settler set foot on American soil it was supposed in England that "sleep before midnight is 'beauty sleep.' Therefore if you wish to be handsome go to bed early." To rub a sty with a wedding ring or the tail of a black cat is a form of cure which the Old World gave to the New, and the New has preserved. Many rhymes and jingles and children's games appear to have crossed the Atlantic. Of course, the wording is different in some printed by Mr. Johnson, yet the collection made by him is decidedly interesting, and if one of a like kind could be made in the south and west of America the whole would be a valuable contribution to an attractive kind of literature.

SCANDINAVIAN LITERATURE.

The Story of Egil Skallagrimsson. Translated from the Icelandic by Rev. W. C. Green. (Stock.)—Mr. Green has produced an excellent translation of the 'Egill Saga,' at least so far as the prose portion of it is concerned. The difficult stanzas by Egill interspersed throughout the text are, on the other hand, rendered in a somewhat bald and trivial style, which can give an English reader unacquainted with Icelandic a very faint idea of the vivid force of the originals. No doubt these verses, with their obscure mythological allusions and baffling periphrases, are incapable of being adequately Englished even by the most ingenious scholarship. Still we think Mr. Green might have done more for his readers in this respect than he has contrived to do. Occasionally, moreover, he is not even accurate. Take, for instance, that pathetic stanza (No. 61 in Herr Jónsson's edition), one of the last things Egill wrote, wherein the old man rebukes the churlishness of the kitchen wench who spurned him out of her way. Mr. Green renders it thus :—

> Blind near the blaze I wander,
> Beg of the fire-maid pardon,
> Crave for a seat. Such sorrow
> From sightless eyes I bear.
> Yet England's mighty monarch
> Me whilom greatly honoured :
> And Princes once with pleasure
> The poet's accent heard.

Here in lines 2 and 3 Mr. Green mistranslates "biþk geira eirar Syn sitja mér harm," as if Egill had begged the wench's pardon and craved for a seat, being evidently under the impression that sitja has something to do with sitting down. As a matter of fact, with the dative it means "to bear with," "to put up with," so that so far from cringing to the saucy scullion the old Viking, with ironical courtesy, begs "the goddess wearing the round stones [i. e., stone necklace] to bear with the feebleness of his own round eyeballs," harm, be it noticed, which Mr. Green translates "sorrow," here meaning a physical defect or failing. In the last four lines, indeed, there is nothing absolutely wrong except the gratuitous introduction of the word "Princes"; but the translator mulcts the reader of the fine comparison between the words of the poet and the words of the giants, i. e., gold, the poet's rightful meed, with which the stanza so nobly concludes. Surely a version something like the following, which we do not, of course, pretend to consider anything like perfect, at any rate better meets the requirements of the case :—

> Blind about the blaze I totter,
> Beg the necklace-bearing goddess
> To forgive my failing eyeballs.
> Yet whilom the mighty monarch
> Joyed to hear my words, and sped me
> With the giants' words rejoicing.

Egils Saga Skallagrímssonar, nebst den grösseren Gedichten Egils. Herausgegeben von Finnur Jónsson. "Altnordische Saga-Bibliothek," Heft 3. (Halle, Niemeyer.)—The editors of the "Altnordische Saga-Bibliothek" have done well to include in their collection this useful abridged German version of Herr Finnur Jónsson's critical edition of the 'Egill Saga,' published some seven years ago by the Samfund til Udgivelse af gammel Nordisk Litteratur of Copenhagen. Herr Jónsson's reputation as one of the surest and soundest Icelandic scholars of the day has long been established, but we doubt whether even he has done better editorial work than this. It is not merely that his scholarship is excellent. The names of at least half a dozen other eminent Norse scholars occur to us at this moment who are fully his equals in learning and acumen. But we know of no other Northern scholar so entirely free from prejudice and parti pris, and it is not too much to say that his views as to the origin and development of the old Norse literature (especially as set forth in his magnum opus, 'Nordiske Literaturhistorie'), despite the opposition they have met with, commend themselves to an unbiassed mind as far more probable than the antagonistic theories of the Norwegian philological school as represented, e. g., by Prof. Bugge, of Christiania, or, formerly, by that arch-sceptic Dr. Carl Arnold Jessen in his 'Undersögelser til Nordisk Oldhistorie' and other treatises. Herr Jónsson's standpoint is conservative in the best sense of that much abused word. He would be the last to maintain that the sagas tell us nothing but the bare truth, and would submit each one of them to the most searching criticism ; but at the same time he rightly protests against the reckless rashness of those extremists who refuse to accept as historical even the best authenticated of the sagas, and his method of interpretation, which proceeds mainly on internal evidence, seems to us broader, clearer, and, on the whole, less open to objection than the more hazardous method of the purely philological school, some of whose pet hypotheses rest almost entirely on textual emendations or linguistic subtleties. Anyhow, the 'Egill Saga' is a convenient battle-field for both parties. Its historical value will, of course, be judged very differently according to the standpoint taken ; but that a great many historical data are scattered up and down its pages is undeniable. Roughly speaking, its chronology embraces nearly 150 years, extending from about 840 to 982, and no fewer than four kings (three Norwegians, Harold Fairhair, Erik Bloodaxe, and Hako the Good, and our own great Athelstan, with whom the hero of the story was on the most intimate terms) figure more or less conspicuously in its pages. Geographically, too, the saga has a very wide range, stretching from Iceland and the White Sea southwards to England and Friesland, and south-eastwards as far as Scania and Courland.

Herr Jónsson is inclined to regard such details as the subjugation of Norway by Harold Fairhair, the dealings of Egill's family with the Finn-Lapps in Finmark, and most of the exploits of Egill in his Viking raids as absolutely veracious; but he has a keen eye also for the fictitious elements intermingled with the historical data, and does not minimize the difficulties in the way of fixing the chronological sequence of events. The most egregious blunder of the saga, and the strongest argument against its historical trustworthiness, is, of course, the confusion between the great battle of Brunanburg, in Northumberland, where Athelstan crushed the Danes in 938, and the much smaller affair of Windune, or Vinheiðr, twelve years before, in which Egell's brother þórólfr was slain while fighting on the side of the English. Yet, for all that, it is plain that, judged by the standard of his age, the compiler of this saga must have been wonderfully well informed both as an historian and as an antiquary; that he was no mean critic; and that on the selection and arrangement of his materials, especially that portion of them relating to the traditions of the Mýramenn (Egill's family), he bestowed infinite pains. But whatever may be thought of the 'Egill Saga' as an historical document, from a literary point of view there can only be one opinion—it is one of the noblest jewels in the crown of Northern art. In point of style it approaches as near to perfection as this genre admits of, while for vividness, consistency of characterization, dramatic force, and technical skill it is, perhaps, superior to any of the other sagas. The character of the hero in particular is admirably drawn, and fascinates us irresistibly from the first. He contrasts very favourably with two other celebrated Viking poets: his contemporary, the somewhat sinister Kormakr, who died fifteen years before him, and the venomous Gunnlaugr, who was born the year after his death. Like them, indeed, he was, in the main, a valiant freebooter, who regarded fighting as the chief business of a manly life, and vengeance as a religious duty—nay, the very first authentic verses he composed, while still a mere lad, express an enthusiastic longing to fare away with the Vikings, stand up in the prow of the bonny bark, and steer her straight to the landing-place of the merchants, there to cut down heaps upon heaps of men. Yet he was of a far nobler spirit than either Kormakr or Gunnlaugr. There was a playful strain in his character which we look for in vain in them, and he was infinitely more kindly. His sense of justice was as keen as his sense of injury; if his hatreds were bitter, his affections were intense; he was capable of the most self-denying, the most romantic friendships; he was a devoted son, a most excellent father, and his pathetic lament over the dead body of his drowned son Böthvarr, expressed in that noble poem 'Sonattorek,' surprises, almost shocks one by its unlooked-for agony of tenderness and its touching indignation at the injustice of Odin in allowing such a bright young life to perish ingloriously. Next to his sword he valued most of all his gift of song, and in his old age (to his great regret) he died what is nowadays called a natural death. When, to use his own expressions, he tottered blindly about the hearth, beseeching (ironically) the goddess of the stone-necklaces (i. e., the kitchen wench) to bear with the evil of his stony eyeballs, he amuses himself by good-humouredly ridiculing his own increasing infirmities, or comforts himself with the recollection of how of yore "the land-renowned king [i. e., Athelstan] used to delight in the words of my songs, and delight me in turn with the words of the giants [i. e., a poetical circumlocution for "gold"]."

Norges Indskrifter med de ældre Runer. Udgivne ved Sophus Bugge. Hefte II. (Christiania, Norske Historiske Kildeskriftfond.)—The ancient monuments described by Prof. Bugge in this the second part of the older runic inscriptions of Norway are three, i. e., the Fonnaas buckle or clasp, the Einang stone, and the By stone. The buckle, which is now in the archæological section of the University of Christiania, was found at Fonnaas, in the parish of Upper Rendal, in 1877, about a mètre below the surface of the ground. It is of silver, and weighs 215·15 gr. The larger part of the front side is gilded and ornamented in relief; the raised ribs dividing it into sections are of ungilt silver inlaid with niello. It was cast in two pieces, and on the smooth back of the square upper piece are four lines of runes scratched in with a nail. Prof. Bugge deciphers these runes thus: "Angilaskalkr Wakrs husingr sā ingisarbiske aih spindul tel," which he translates: "The Englishman Vakr's house-thrall from Ingesarv owns this good nail." The Fonnaas inscription is interesting for many reasons. To begin with, we find here a Scandinavian place-name indicated for the first time by a Scandinavian himself in the popular dialect. In the second place, it shows us what word was used in those days to designate a fibula, i. e., spindul, doubtless derived from the Latin spinula, a word, moreover, which had disappeared from the North in historic times in favour of the still living dálkr, to which Prof. Bugge is inclined to give a Celtic origin, i. e., Irish delg=thorn. The Einang stone was first made generally known in 1871 by the antiquary A. Lorange, and the runes inscribed upon it, after four very careful examinations by five of the ablest archæologists in Scandinavia, have been tentatively deciphered by Prof. Bugge thus: "dagar þar runo [i. e., runor] faihido," which means: "I Dag wrote these runes." It is noteworthy that the dead man in whose memory this stone was raised is not mentioned at all in the inscription. The stone at By was known to archæologists in the eighteenth century, and a MS. description of it by the antiquary G. Falch in 1744 is quoted by Prof. Bugge. As late as 1856 it was used as a stepping-stone by the owners of By Manor, but was finally rescued from such vile uses and sent to the University of Christiania in 1866. The runic inscription upon it, which leaves much to be desired in the way of legibility, is deciphered by Prof. Bugge: "eirilar hrorar hrorer orte þat arina u[þ]t alai[b]u dr [i. e., dohtur] rmþr [i. e., runor] markide þar ehar," which, being interpreted, runs: "The captain of warriors, Hror Hror's son, made this stone plate in memory of [his] daughter Aaleiv, these runes marked Eh." Prof. Bugge notes as peculiar to the By inscription its lack of consistency and stability, the same rune frequently having widely different forms, thus pointing to the fact that the older runic script was at this time in its decline. The rune writer, who seems to have been acquainted with both the older and the later forms, was evidently bent upon recording what he had to say in a composite script. We have but very roughly indicated the bare outlines of Prof. Bugge's labours in this most interesting department of antiquarian philology. That he has given nearly a hundred large quarto pages to the consideration of these three inscriptions alone is the best proof of the exhaustiveness of his method of investigation. As to the ability and acumen of his scholarship it would, of course, be impertinent to speak.

BOOKS RELATING TO INDIA.

To the "Story of the Nations" Series has now been added British India, by Mr. R. W. Frazer (Fisher Unwin). Mr. Frazer is conversant with his subject, and knows how to combine breadth of treatment and terseness of expression with a happy selection of pertinent and even picturesque details. He has evidently spared no pains to compress into 390 pages the results of a close study of the most helpful documents, and the extent and thoroughness of his reading may be seen in every page, although out of regard for his probable readers he has wisely refrained from foot-notes or from references in the text. His obligations to Sir William Hunter and the "Rulers of India" Series are especially acknowledged in the preface. To Sir George Birdwood, Capt. Mahan, Prof. George Forrest, and Mr. F. C. Danvers he has also been indebted for "most valuable and suggestive" guidance. It is amusing, by the way, to note how persistently the theory of sea-power has been trotted out by recent writers, as if Capt. Mahan had been the first to discover a principle long since patent to any intelligent reader of modern or ancient history, and written large over many a chapter in the story of British India. Literature, however, like most other things, will have its fashions, and just now people talk gravely about "sea power" and "the expansion of the British empire," as though these things had not been known before by other names. The book opens with an instructive chapter on "The Early History of Indian Commerce," showing how the Portuguese diverted the course of trade from the Mediterranean to the route round the Cape of Good Hope, and how they were followed and supplanted by the Dutch and English. The causes which hastened the downfall of the Portuguese power, and those which favoured the English in the struggle with their Dutch rivals, are traced in the chapter dealing with the rise of the East India Company. In the chapters on Robert Clive and Warren Hastings, Mr. Frazer does full, yet impartial justice to the character and achievements of the two men who laid and strengthened the foundations of our rule in India. His last words about Hastings are worth quoting:—

"His life, his heroism, his proud reserve and confident assurance that all his failings and faults arose from a single-minded desire to carry out the intentions of his time, are summed up in the words by which he declared his own vindication, and his accusers' condemnation: 'I gave you all, and you have rewarded me with confiscation, disgrace, and a life of impeachment.'"

In dealing with Lord Cornwallis's administration Mr. Frazer shows up the weak points in the Permanent Settlement of Bengal. The forward policy of Lords Wellesley and Hastings is boldly and clearly outlined; and some interesting pages set forth the peaceful achievements of Lord William Bentinck. The successes and disasters of the first Afghan war are told with condensed force and vividness; and one of the lessons taught by the war is "that notwithstanding the vast distance of the British army from its basis, and the follies of its commanders, its power could not ultimately be resisted by any state surrounding its borders." The exciting tale of the Great Mutiny is prefaced by a thoughtful review of the numerous causes which may have worked together in the native mind towards the explosion ultimately fired by the greased cartridge in 1857. The last two chapters trace the subsequent history of India under the Crown, and the moral and material progress of the people under British rule. The book has a respectable index, several maps and plans, and many helpful illustrations. There are some few printers' errors—or are they slips of the pen?—which need early correction. That famous regiment the 3rd Dragoons will be surprised to hear that they went threes about at Chilianwala. On p. 257 Lawrence and Havelock are made to change places. Again, at p. 307, Sir Colin Campbell is said to have seen service "in the American war of 1842" instead of 1812–14.

The Indian Calendar, by R. Sewell and S'aṅkara Dīkshit (Sonnenschein & Co.), is a valuable and accurate work that should be on the table of every intelligent Indian official. For all Oriental scholars who can work calculations the elaborate tables with full explanations in the text should be of the greatest use, while for such as can venture on eclipses full data are supplied (not, however, for lunar eclipses) in the appendix of tables by Dr. R. Schram, of Vienna. These are of really great importance for the ancient chronology of India, as it was the custom for royal grants of land inscribed on dated plates to be made on days when eclipses were due. The need of a volume as considerable in size as the present is largely caused by the great number of eras, now as formerly, in use. To take one case, the Hindus of Bengal still use quite arbitrarily three different epochs, to say nothing of those introduced by other religions. Art. 71 gives an excellent account of twenty-three different eras, but it requires amplification. As Nepal, not in British India, has been rightly included, surely the eras of Burma and Ceylon should have been described. The Parsi era, for which tables are provided in at least one Indian directory, has been also overlooked, and is referred to incidentally only at p. 47.

It is not quite easy to see the raison d'être of a book like Mr. G. Temple's Glossary of Indian Terms (Luzac). If the author had stuck to his first text of "Religion, Customs, Government, Land," the result might have been more satisfactory, especially if the work had been made applicable to the whole of India; but he has seen fit to pad it out with "other terms and words in common use"—in some cases amounting to random extracts from the Hindustani dictionaries. These appear to increase in number towards the end of the book. Now Hindustani is certainly not the leading language in the whole of the country, but only in a portion of Northern India. It is consequently an error of judgment to add as appendices two vocabularies referring to the North-West Provinces and Oudh. These are useful in themselves, but should have been incorporated, with due acknowledgment, in the main work. At the same time the spelling might have been harmonized and some redundancies excluded. It might be at least asked that a popular manual should be "up to date"; but the compiler takes no notice of the scheme of transliteration sanctioned by the Oriental Congress in 1894, and since adopted by the leading learned and religious societies concerned with India; while for Indian chronology he actually refers to a work published in 1825. The book is moderate in price and clear in print; and though possibly it may be practically useful to some, its plan requires modification.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MESSRS. ROUTLEDGE & SONS publish Sixty Years of the Queen's Reign, by Sir Richard Temple, a pleasant little Jubilee handbook of the reign, written in a properly jubilant spirit. It contains in its optimism a few questionable statements. Great Britain is hardly controlling the Nile from its source to its mouth, when by one lease of territory—our right to lease which was doubtful—the Congo State was brought into a vast domain on the Nile, from which it has been expelled by France, whose expeditions are now traversing it, while by another lease of a smaller territory the Congo State is now seated on the Nile, though this latter lease is to the present King of the Belgians for life only. The statement that for many years proposals for an Australian confederation to include New Zealand have been before conferences, and before the legislatures of the separate colonies, requires modification as far as New Zealand is concerned. New Zealand was represented at one of the conferences, but voted for a refusal, not acceptance, of the scheme; and she is not represented at the present conference nor likely to be in the future. It is hardly accurate to say that the peace establishment of the land forces of the empire has been raised to a strength of about a million of men. This figure cannot be reached at all, and can only be approached by including all the volunteers, all the militia, and all the reserves. Now the reserves and the militia are certainly not a peace establishment, but a war establishment in the modern scientific sense of the words. No doubt the term "establishment" is used in our Estimates in a wholly different sense, but it is not used with the epithet "peace" or "war"; and when Sir R. Temple puts in the word "peace" he gives a technical meaning to his phrase, which thus becomes entirely inaccurate. Russia, indeed, has a peace establishment of a million men, but no other country attains to anything in the least comparable with that figure. In common with all the books of reference Sir R. Temple counts the cost of the British navy as being that shown in the annual votes. There is, however, no ground whatever for the exclusion of money raised by loan. Works which until recently used to be paid for from Estimates are now paid for from the Naval Works Loans Acts of 1895 and 1896, which are to be followed by a Naval Works Loans Bill of 1897; and the naval expenditure of the country is not accurately stated unless the amount named by the Chancellor of the Exchequer as expended in the year out of loans is included.

MESSRS. KEGAN PAUL & Co. have issued An Irregular Corps in Matabeleland, by Col. Plumer, a serious and well-executed volume on the Matabele rising, which suffers by being less lively than Col. Baden-Powell's recent book, and less interesting, therefore, to the general public; while, on the other hand, the rising was not of sufficient military importance to create a large demand for the present book.

The Lives of the Troubadours. Translated from the Mediæval Provençal, with Introductory Matter and Notes, and with Specimens of their Poetry rendered into English, by Ida Farnell. (Nutt.)—The biographies of the troubadours were written at different times during the thirteenth century as separate introductions to the various collections of Provençal songs which were formed in the south of France and in Italy when the poetry of the troubadours was on its decline. A few of those lives may be traced to authors who had been personally acquainted with the poets whose lives they intended to narrate, and these are really historical documents; but a far greater number have been concocted from scanty and often erroneous information, or, even worse, from such notions as could be gathered from the very songs which they pretend to explain historically. There is much in those compositions which is mere assumption or invention. Recent researches have conclusively proved that they are often misleading. This especially seems to be the case with the long and apparently very circumstantial explanations (razos) which are appended to some of the songs of Bertrand de Born. However, the biographies of the troubadours have long been accepted as strictly historical, and it cannot be denied that some of those which are hardly better than literary forgeries may be considered as charming little novels. Miss Farnell may have overrated their value, but her translation will be read with pleasure, and does credit to her skill and learning. She has followed the text of Mahn's edition. She would probably have preferred the more recent edition by M. Chabaneau (in vol. x. of Vaissète's 'Histoire de Languedoc,' new edition) if she had known it. If we may venture on a very mild criticism, we wonder why so many lines begin with "Now":—

Now Guiraudon the Red was of Toulouse.
Now Bernart of Ventadorn was of Limousin.

There is nothing like it in the text. To the lives Miss Farnell has added some of the best reputed songs of the troubadours, which she has generally selected from Bartsch's 'Chrestomathie.' Here the task was not an easy one, inasmuch as the translation preserves, as far as possible, the strophic arrangement of the originals. We believe that she has succeeded fairly well in rendering not only the meaning, but even some of the spirit of the Provençal songs, the few mistakes which could be pointed out resting, not with the translator, but with the texts which she has followed. As a whole, the little book affords pleasant reading, and can be recommended to those who wish to have some knowledge of a poetry which, in its original form, is accessible but to a few scholars.

UNDER the title of A Passing World (Ward & Downey) Madame Belloc has collected a number of articles which have been evidently reprinted from magazines. They are pleasantly and intelligently written, and the spirit that animates them is excellent, but they cannot be said to be much above the level of magazine articles. The paper on Dr. Parr, for instance, only deals with some superficial aspects of his character, and says nothing of that important incident in English school history, the secession to Stanmore, and little of the fierce Whiggism, which led him in the Hundred Days to pray nightly for success to Napoleon and confusion to the Allies. One of the most interesting bits in the volume is the glimpse of J. A. Froude before the appearance of 'The Nemesis of Faith,' "who still occasionally preached and did duty. 'He never touched on doctrine, but his sermons were the most wonderful compositions ever heard; Newmanish in style, but still quite original.'" Madame Belloc is more accurate than most ladies; yet she is not always exact. She implies that Carlyle wrote his 'Life of Friedrich' before his 'Latter-day Pamphlets'; she speaks of "General and Lady Washington," and she styles Vergennes "the Prime Minister of France."

Machiavelli, the striking Romanes Lecture which Mr. Morley delivered before his old tutor and other dons last week, has been published by Messrs. Macmillan. Mr. Morley is rather inclined to try Machiavelli by the standards of our day. Machiavelli, with his many shortcomings, really loved his country, and that in the Italy of the Borgias was no small thing.

Jack Hinton is the latest addition to the exceedingly handsome edition of Lever's novels which Messrs. Downey & Co. are publishing.

WE have received the catalogues of Mr. Baker (theological), Mr. Dobell (interesting), Messrs. Dulau & Co. (two catalogues, mathematics and French), Mr. Edwards, Messrs. Ellis & Elvey (rare books, good), Messrs. George & Son, Mr. Glaisher (interesting), Mr. Higham (two catalogues, theological and general), Mr. Jeffery, Messrs. Lamley & Co., Messrs. Luzac & Co. (Oriental books, many from Dr. Rost's library), Messrs. Maurice & Co. (good), Mr. Menken (two), Messrs. Myers & Co. (good), Messrs. Parsons & Sons (three: engravings and etchings, Napoleonic portraits, and general), Messrs. Rimell & Son (mezzotint portraits, good), and Messrs. Williams & Norgate (fine-art books). We have also catalogues from Mr. Downing (two), Mr. Wilson (two, good), and Mr. Thistlewood of Birmingham; from Messrs. Fawn & Sons of Bristol; from Messrs. Lupton Bros. of Burnley; from Mr. Brown (good), Mr. Cameron (two), Mr. Clay, Messrs. Douglas & Foulis (interesting), and Mr. Grant, all of Edinburgh; from Messrs. Kerr & Richardson and Messrs. MacLehose of Glasgow (remainders, good); from Messrs. Andrews & Co. of Hull; from Mr. Miles of Leeds; from Mr. Murray of Leicester; from Messrs. Young & Sons of Liverpool (two). Mr. Thorne of Newcastle-on-Tyne, Messrs. Thornton & Son of Oxford, Messrs. Hitchman & Co. of Sheffield, and Mr. Iredale of Torquay have also sent us their catalogues.

From abroad we have received the catalogues of Mr. Nijhoff of the Hague (continental geography), and Mr. van Langenhuysen of Amsterdam (scarce books), while Messrs. Baer & Co. have sent us two catalogues from Frankfort (Byzantine empire and Greece).

THE Journal of Commerce at Liverpool has reprinted a lecture by Mr. James Pinnock on Benin, profusely illustrated from photographs. It will be found interesting by all who are concerned with the west coast of Africa or with negro manners and customs.

THE house of Calmann Lévy publish Forçats et Proscrits, by Paul Mimande, a writer who has already described one French penal settlement, and now writes on Cayenne and its dependencies. He is an agreeable companion on a disagreeable journey, but writes with the usual French ferocity on the subject of the unfortunate criminal or victim, Capt. Dreyfus.

WE have on our table On Veldt and Farm, by Frances Macnab (Arnold),—Campaign in Italy, 1796, or the Début of General Bonaparte, by Major Conyers Surtees (Stanford),—Transactions of the Jewish Historical Society of England, Vol. II. 1894–5 (Wertheimer, Lea & Co.),—Supplementary Volume to Thermodynamics, treated with Elementary Mathematics, by J. Parker (Low),—A Dead Man's Thoughts, by the Rev. E. Foster (Roxburghe Press),—The Unknown God (Redway),—Unthinkables, discussed by F. H. Balfour (Bentley),—A Passing Madness, by Florence Marryat (Hutchinson),—Irralie's Bushranger, by E. W. Hornung (Neville Beeman),—The Earth for a Dollar, by Roof Roofer (Gay & Bird),—Self Seekers, by André Raffalovich (Smithers),—The Cross beneath the Ring, by the late E. F. M. Benecke (Sonnenschein),—Cambridge Greek Testament for Schools and Colleges: The Epistle to the Philippians, with Introduction and Notes by the Rev. H. C. G. Moule (Cambridge, University Press),—A Five Years' Course of Bible and Prayer-Book Teaching (C.E.S.S.I.),—The Right of Systematic Theology, by B. B. Warfield, D.D. (Edinburgh, T. & T. Clark),—The Apostolic Ministry in the Scottish Church: the Baird Lecture for 1897, by R. H. Story (Blackwood),—and Pages Choisies des Auteurs Contemporains: Émile Zola (Paris, Colin). Among New Editions we have The Prince, by N. Machiavelli, translated from the Italian by N. H. Thomson (Clarendon Press),—The Lover's Missal, by Eric Mackay (Scott),—Village Sermons, First Series, by R. Drummond B. Rawnsley (Ellis & Keene),—Herbal Simples approved for Modern Uses of Cure, by W. T. Fernie, M.D. (Simpkin),—and Les Vierges aux Rochers, by G. d'Annunzio, translated from the Italian by G. Hérelle (Paris, Lévy). Also the following Pamphlets: English Hexameter Verse, with a Specimen, by T. S. Omond (Edinburgh, Douglas),—Moods, their Mental and Physical Character (Churchill),—and Important Facts in English History, 1688–1815, by the Rev. G. H. Manbey (Chapman & Hall).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Amram's (D. W.) The Jewish Law of Divorce according to Bible and Talmud, 8vo. 6/ cl.
Assumption of Moses, translated from Latin Sixth Century MS., edited by R. H. Charles, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Fiske's (A. K.) The Myths of Israel, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Hawkins's (E. L.) The Students' Guide to the Gospels and Acts, cr. 8vo. 2/ net.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Stubbs's (Dean) Historical Memorials of Ely Cathedral, imp. 16mo. 4/6 net.

Poetry.

Backward Looking: Verses Occasional and Miscellaneous, cr. 8vo. 3/6 net.

Philosophy.

Nash's (H. S.) Genesis of the Social Conscience, cr. 8vo. 6/

History and Biography.

Dictionary of National Biography, edited by S. Lee, Vol. 51, royal 8vo. 15/ net.
Foster-Barham's (A. H.) Genealogy of the Descendants of Roger Foster, of Northumberland, 21/ net.
Heath's (Admiral Sir L. G.) Letters from the Black Sea during the Crimean War, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.
Maxwell's (Sir H.) Sixty Years a Queen, 4to. 7/6 net.
Oliphant (Mrs.) and Linton's (Mrs.) Women Novelists of Queen Victoria's Reign, 4to. 10/6 cl.
Sykes's (F. W.) With Plumer in Matabeleland, 8vo. 15/ net.

Geography and Travel.

Allen's (Grant) Historical Guides: Cities of Belgium, 3/6 net.
Burnand's (F. C.) The Z Z G, or Zig-Zag Guide to the Kentish Coast, illus. by Phil May, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Our Empire Atlas, with Introduction by C. P. Lucas, 6/ cl.
Schulz (A.) and Hammar's (A.) The New Africa, 8vo. 28/ cl.

Philology.

Ridge's (J. J.) Medical Temperance Dictionary, 4to. 2/6 cl.

Science.

Armstrong's (Lord) Electric Movement in Air and Water, oblong 4to. 30/ net.
Johnstone's (A.) Mineralogical Geology for Students, 3/6 cl.
Minot's (S.) Human Embryology, 8vo. 25/ net.
Roberts's (I. P.) The Fertility of the Land, cr. 8vo. 5/ net.
Thomas's (E.) The Woodland Life, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

General Literature.

Allen's (J. L.) The Choir Invisible, 12mo. 6/ cl.
Black's (W.) The Magic Ink, and other Tales, cheap ed. 2/6
D'Aurevilly's (F. A. B.) Of Dandyism and of George Brummell, trans. by D. Ainslie, 18mo. 5/ net.
Donovan's (D.) The Mystery of Jamaica Terrace, 2/ bds.
Earle's (Mrs. C. W.) Pot-Pourri from a Surrey Garden, 7/6
English's (Mark) The Sorrows of a Society Woman, 3/6 cl.
Fleming's (G.) Little Stories about Women, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Gilchrist's (R. M.) A Peakland Faggot, Tales told of Melton Folk, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Hervey's (M. H.) David Dimsdale, M.D., cr. 8vo. 4/6 net.
Keyser's (A.) From Jungle to Java, cr. 8vo. 2/ cl.
Mason's (J.) Chess Openings, cr. 8vo. 2/ net.
Robinson's (P.) In Garden, Orchard, and Spinny, 6/ cl.
Sanitary and Social Questions of the Day, by an Observer, 8vo. 2/ cl.
Twain's (Mark) Innocents Abroad, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Kattenbusch (F.): Das apostolische Symbol, Vol. 2, Part 1, 11m.
Meinardus (Dr.): David Hume als Religionsphilosoph, 1m. 60.
Nissen (W.): Die Regelung des Klosterwesens im Rhomäerreiche bis zum Ende des 9 Jahrh., 2m.
Schwartzkopff (P.): Die Irrtumslosigkeit Jesu Christi u. der christliche Glaube, 2m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Benoit (F.): L'Art Français sous la Révolution et l'Empire, 20fr.
Meissner (F. H.): Tiepolo, 3m.

Music and the Drama.

Granges (C. M. des): Geoffroy et la Critique Dramatique sous le Consulat et l'Empire, 7fr. 50.
Jacobsthal (G.): Die chromatische Alteration im liturgischen Gesang der abendländischen Kirche, 14m.

History and Biography.

Fauth (F.): Dr. Martin Luther's Leben, 5m.
Lehugeur (P.): Histoire de Philippe le Long, Roi de France, Vol. 1, 7fr. 50.
Le Querdec (Y.): Le Journal d'un Évêque: Part 2, Après le Concordat, 3fr. 50.
Mottaz (E.): Stanislas Poniatowski et Maurice Glayre, Correspondance relative aux Partages de la Pologne, 3fr. 50.
Ollivier (É.): L'Empire Libéral: Vol. 2, Napoléon III. et le Coup d'État, 3fr. 50.
Pellenc (Capitaine): Les Italiens en Afrique, 5fr.

Geography and Travel.

Brandt (M. v.): Ostasiatische Fragen, China, Japan, Korea, 7m.

Philology.

Jehlitschka (H.): Türkische Konversations-Grammatik nebst e. Einführung in den türkischen Epistolarstil, Schlüssel, 3m.

Science.

Autenrieth (W.): Qualitative chemische Analyse, 3m.

General Literature.

Bovet (M. A. de): Parole Jurée, 3fr. 50.
Cantacuzène-Altiéri (Princesse O.): Responsable, 3fr. 50.
Charpentier (A.): L'Initiateur, 3fr. 50.
Daudet (L.): La Flamme et l'Ombre, 3fr. 50.
Drault (J.): Un Aïeul de Chapuzot, 3fr.
Leroy-Beaulieu (A.): Études Russes et Européennes, 3fr. 50.
Marga: Inconsolée, 3fr. 50.
Maurceley (B. de): Amour et Gloire, 3fr. 50.
Prévost (M.): Dernières Lettres de Femmes, 3fr. 50.
Sales (P.): Abandonnées, 3fr. 50.
Silvestre (A.): Au Fil du Rire, 3fr. 50.
Stéphane: Une Race, 3fr. 50.
Witt (Madame G. de): Pages Choisies de Guizot, 3fr. 50.

LITERARY EXPENSES IN ST. MARGARET'S, WESTMINSTER, THROUGH REFORMATION TIMES.

THE important historical information given in the accounts of the churchwardens of St. Margaret's becomes all the more valuable when classified into consecutive lines of thought. It seems, therefore, worth while separately to note the rapid changes in religion and education, as expressed by the expenditure on literature and its adjuncts during eighty years of these interesting records, commencing with 1530 to 1532, when William Russell and Thomas Cloudesley, churchwardens, "payd for a pryk-song book xx*d*." The next wardens "payd for the covering of the pryk-song book iis." Passing over the regular items of quires of paper for their "particular book," and of parchment for their "general book," we find little worth notice till Thurston Amere and William Combes (1538–40) in their first year "payd for a book to registre the names of the buryalls, Weddynges, and Christeninges, iis." The injunctions of Cranmer and Cromwell, ordaining that the Bible in English should be set up in churches, that a sermon should be preached at least every quarter, and that a register book be kept safe in a chest with two locks, were only dated October 11th, 1538. St. Margaret's is one of the few churches whose registers date back to this period. In their second year these wardens "payd for the halfe parte of the Bybell accordingly after the king's injuncions ixs. ix*d*. Item, paid for a desk for the Bybell iiis. viii*d*." Among the "foren payments" are repairs to the organ; and for "two hympnalls for the same, iis. viii*d*."

The "accompt of Robert Smalwood, gent, and William Heynings, grome of the king's most honourable chamber" (1540–42), mentions the purchase of a "book for the pewes of freemen, xi*d*." John Kenet and Thomas Massey (36–38 Hen. VIII.), amid the "foren payments of the first yere, payd for vi. Bookes of the Lattony in Englyshe xviii*d*." Nicholas Ellys and Richard Dod (38 Hen. VIII. to 2 Ed. VI.) record the dirge for Henry and the contributions to his funeral, and in their second year

"payed in Christmas quarter to Goodman Beyton for makyng of the stone in the body of the churche for the priest to declare the pistolls and gospells, iis.....To Thomas Stokedale for xxxv. ells of clothe for the fronte of the Rode Lofte where as the x. commandements be wrytten, price of the ell viii*d*., xxiii*s*. iiii*d*.....To him that dyd wryght the said x. commandements and for the drynkynge, lxvi*s*. ix*d*. Also payd for the hanging of the same clothe, v*s*. ii*d*. Also payd for a Byble for to rede the pystell and the gospel, x*s*. Also payd for ij. wayscotte bords for the hie Alter, xij*d*. Also payd for the wryghtynge of the Scriptures upon the same bords, v*s*."

Richard Babbye and John Buckherde (2 to 4 Ed. VI.) in the first year "payd for the half pte of the paphyrice of Erasmus the xth August, v*s*." After Christmas they bought "viii. salters in Englishe, xiii*s*. iiij*d*." "Also payd to Hansforthe for the Inventory that was delivered to the Kyngs Commyssioners, iii*s*. viii*d*." In the second year, for some purpose or other they "paid for searching of the records in the King's Exchequer, ii*s*. v*d*.....To Nicholas Poole for wryttyng and prykynge of songs for the Quyer, iii*s*. iiij*d*.....To William Curlewe for mendynge of divers pewes that were broken when Doctor Lattymer dyd preache, xviii*d*." In their "Forren payments" they "payd for iiij. books of the Service in the Church, xvi*d*.....To Nicolas Poole for pryking of divers songs, iii*s*. iiii*d*. Also payd for the taking up of the foundation of the Crosse at the west door, viii*d*."

Thomas Duffield and John Curtesse (4 to 6 Ed. VI.) note an energetic sale of tabernacles and Popish ornaments, and the introduction of a Communion table and Communion cups after the Protestant fashion:—

"Also payde to a Carpenter for a dayes workynge to set up the Skaffolde for hym that dyd wryght the vi. chapter of St. John's Gospell in the quire, viii*d*.....For nailes for the same, iii*d*.....To hym that did paynte and wryghte the vi. chapter of Saynt John's Gospel in ye quyre, xl*s*.....To hym for wrytynge of certain chapitres more in the quyre as appereth, xiii*s*. iiij*d*.....Also paid to him for wrytynge and trymynge of the north yle and the sowthe yle, iii*l*. ix*s*. viii*d*.....Also payde for the makyng of our Bill to put in at the Bishopp's visitacyon, iiij*d*.....For a boke of the Artycles, ij*d*..... For a supplicacyon that was put to Mr. Chanceloure of the Augmentation for his patent, ii*s*."

Nicholas Ludforde and Rychard Castell occupy the responsible position from 6 Ed. VI. to 1 Mary, and before any notice of change of sovereign their entries go straight on from Protestantism to the old faith:—

"Also payd to Mr. Curate and Nicholas Poole for makynge the Book of Church goods to be presented to the Kinges commyssioners and for the paynes they toke abowte it, that is to say to Mr. Curate iii*s*. iiii*d*., and to Nicholas Poole vi*s*. viii*d*.....For two Communion Bookes, viii*s*. iiii*d*.....For the pullpit where the Curate and the Clark did reade the chapitres at servis tyme, xiii*s*. iiii*d*.....Also payd for an ymnall and a processionall, iiij*s*.....For iii.

grent Antiphoners, ij. grayles, and a masse book, xlixs.....For an owlde Legente, a masse book, and a processionall and an owlde Antyphoner, xiis.....To John Bray for the new trimming of an Antiphoner, ijs. Also payde for a Supplicacion to the Queen's majesty for the Church goods, ijs.....For a copie of the Instructions geven by the commissioners to Mr. Smallwood and others for the Church goods, vid."

William Pampion and John Bray (1 Mary to 1 and 2 Philip and Mary) early in their office pay "to a painter for washing owte of the Skripture from off the hie Altar table, xiid..... To Wyer for new byndynge of a mansel and a processionall, xiid." The next churchwardens "payd for making of a Serplis of the cloth that hung before the Rode loft, wrytten with the Commandements, iis."

Richard Hodges and Robert Davys, churchwardens from 4 and 5 Philip and Mary to 2 Elizabeth, move also unostentatiously back to Protestantism; for in their second year they

"payd for a Bybill and a paraphrase, xvis.....For a Comunion Booke bounde in Parchmine, vis. Item, paid for a book of the names of all such persons as were buried within the Parish from mydsomer day in Anno domini 1558 until mydsommer day in the year 1559, delyvered to the vysytors, iis.....Item, for a chaine and two stapulles for the paraphrase, xd."

John Skonner and John Hunter (2 to 4 Elizabeth) in their first year paid for

"a quire of paper, iiiid.....A Psalter for the Quyre, xviiid.....For byndynge a Communion booke, xiid. .....For a Quyre of paper and for setting the same in the Register booke, vid.....For a new Calendar set for the order of our Servys in the Church, iiiid..... For a paper with the x. commandments, xvid."

In their second year they "payde for a Bill to the Commissioners of concealed lands, viiid..... and for a Communion Book, iiiis."

William Worley and William Stanton (4–6 Elizabeth)

"payd for 4 qr bookes of psalmes in meeter for the quyer, iiiis. viiid.....To Nycholas Poole for the prykynge of two bookes with Te Deum Laudamus for the Quyre, xd.....For 2 bookes of meeter Psalms of the gretest volume for the quyer bought by Poole, iis. viiid.....For a quire of paper for the making of a certificate of strangers, iiiid.....For a Book of the Queene's Maties injunctions, vid.....A quire of paper for a book of clerk's wages, iiiid.....For 4 qr songe bookes for the service of God in the same churche, vs.....For 4 qr bookes of service for the cessing of warres, xvid.....For 4 qr books of prayer to God for the cessing of the plague, viiid.....To a Booke bynder for newe byndynge and mendynge of sondrie places of the Bible, iiis.....For a quier of paper for the clerke to make weekely certificates unto the Court of all Burials and cristenings, iiijd.....To Christopher Robinson for a copy of Edmond Wilgres bill signed under the hand of Mr. Argall, iiis. iiiid."

William Spencer and John Fisher (1564–66)

"payd for two quyer of paper, viiid.....For one pynte of ynke, viiid.....For two paddelocks for the Register cheaste, xvid.....For 2 Psalme books for the Quyer, iiiis.....Item, payd to Mr. Archdeacon's man for writing a book of articles, xiid. For two Psalme Bookes for the quyer, iiiis. For a quire of paper for certificates, iiiid.....For writing a book for the collectors, xd.....For two books of Prayers, iid."

Richard Gybbes and Roger Boseley (1566–1568) in their second year paid

"for a Book of the Queen's Injuncions, iiiid..... For a book of Homilies, iiis.....For two books of prayers set out by the Bysshope of Canterbury to be redd Sondaies, Wedensdaies and Fridaies, vid..... For a certificate made of all the strangers within the parish, vid. For one book of Homelyes and another book called a protestation, xiid."

John Jennens and Richard Garradd (1568–1570)

"payd for byndyng and new covering of the Bybell, vis. viiid.....For the writing of a book for the Queen's majesties commissioners for armes, xiid. .....For writing of a booke to Mr. Latimer of articles, xiid."

George Brighte and Nicholas Corne (1570–1572)

"payd for a new booke of the Queen's Majesties Injuncons, iiijd.....For a plott of the church drawn out in parchment, xxd.....Payd to the Register for entering our book of presentments when we delivered up the same, iiiid."

Thomas Clerke and Andrew Holborne (1572–1574)

"payd for a new Regyster book for to wryte in the names of every buryall, crystening, and marryage that is in the parishe, vs.....For 3 new books of common prayers set owt by the Bishop, vid.....For writing a copy of the Artycles, iiijd."

John Wheler and Edward Taylor (1574–76)

"payd for a coppy of the Artycles gyven by the vysytors to the sworn men to enquire of, iis. Item, payd for a new Byble of the largest volume, xxviiis."

Davy Rogers and John Ryall (1576–77)

"payd for tow iron chaynes for the tow paraphrases of Erasmus, js. Item, payd for making, writinge, and drawing out of the lease of St. Ann's Chapell to laye wood in for the poor, vs. viiid."

John Ryall dies, and his place is taken next year by John Fyssher, and he and Davy Rogers continue in office till 1580, but spend nothing on literature worth noting. Thomas Wharton and John Lovadge (1580–82) in the latter year "payd for an abridgment of the Statutes to remain in the Church, ixs." Morris Pickering and John Priest (1586–88)

"payd for a Communion Booke, viis. Item, payd for an Houer glasse, iiiid. Item, payde for three Psalter bookes, vs. Item, payd for a lace for a register for the Communion Booke, vid. Item, payd to Robert Jones for wrytynge of certayne duties ordered by the consentes of the Parish, and for wrytynge the names of the pore people of Mr. Cornellis his almes howses, xiid. Item, payd for three books of prayers for the Queenes Matie, vid. Item, payd for a Boke of Injuncions, iiiid. Item, payd to Mr. Price for two bookes of prayers for the Queenes Majesties daye, vid. Item, payd for a backe and cheste for a writting table, iis. Item, payd to the joyner for making a Table wherein are sett the names of all such that payde in every ward towards the Statute of Westminster, and for wrytyng of the same table, iis. viiid."

Thomas Cooper and Richard Ireland (1588–90) in their first year

"payd for the wrytyng of a copy of Mr. Warnham's will, vid. Item, payd for two prayerbooks, when the Spanisshe Fleete was upon the narrow Seas, iiid. Item, payd for mending the Table of the Tenn Commandments that hangeth over the Communion table, iis. Item, payd for making of the Indentures between Baron Southerton and the Churchwardens, xiid."

William Towe and Cuthbert Lyne (1590–1592)

"payd to Thomas Collins for drawing certen articles of agreement for the benefit of the Church, and after for ingrossing them into the Register Booke, iiiis."

Marmaduke Servaunt and Thomas Cole were in office in the years 1592–94, but this being plague time, there is little that has a literary bearing.

William Goddard and George Waites (1594–1596) record in their first year the item,

"Geven to Mr. Fletcher, a precher who preached the 4 of August, being Sonday in the afternoon, by consent of such of the vestry as were present at that sermon, vs. Item, spent upon Mr. Fletcher the preacher at an other tyme after his sermon ended, iiijd."; and in their second year,

"Item, geven to Jhon Crewonne, alias Foke, a pore scoller borne in this parish, after a sermon by him made in this church, by consent of such of the vestry as were present at that sermon, xxs."

Roger Darly and Samuel Haselwood (1596–1598) enter, "Item, for a prayer book, 1d." In their second year, "for a Comunion Book and a Psalter book bothe embossed, viiis. iiiid. Item, for a praier book, iid." Henry Weatherfield and William Man (1598–1600) record, "Item, geven to Mr. Ailworthe for preaching on Easter day, xs. Item, payd for a service book, iiis."

In the period between 1602 and 1604 occurs another plague; but on "the 24th March payd for four books, xvid.," that is, on the date of Elizabeth's death and James's accession.

William Carter and John Butcher (1604–6) head their pages with decorations and a motto, "Tempora mutantur et nos mutamur in illis." After November 5th, 1605, they "payd for three prayer books, xiid. Item, to Thomas Collins, scrivener, for drawing and engrossing an abstract to be delivered to the Justices, xs. Item, for an Almanack, id."; and they seem to have their almanacs regularly after this. Between 1608 and 1610 they paid "to Mr. Burte the preacher for three sermons, xxs. Item, for four bookes of Common Prayer, xixs." On August 5th, 1611, was

"payd for a paper booke of two quyers, redie bounde, for the Sexton to register the names of all them that are to be buried under everie peine, and for other paper to be spent about other businesses, and for boat-hier furthe and back, iis. xd. Item, paid for two hundred leaves of parchment and for ruling and binding of the same, at iiid. the leafe, to Registre the Cristenynges, buryinges, and wedynges therein, ls."

This is probably the second register, still preserved in the church.

"Item, payd unto the preacher for a sermon made the v of August, vis. viiid."

That would probably be in remembrance of the Gowrie conspiracy, keenly remembered by James.

"For a sermon made the xviith of August, vis. viiid. Item, payd to the preacher for a sermon made more, vis. viiid. Item, payd to John Roade for wrytynge the names of all such persons as were presented for not receiving of the holy Comunion at Easter last past, 1611, iiijd."

With the new edition of the Bible published in 1610–11, and with the comparative permanence of creed and custom that has since prevailed, the churchwardens' accounts become less important to the student of the religious changes during the four reigns. Each point may seem trifling in itself, but all fit into many other records, and help to piece together and make clearer the pictures of the past.

CHARLOTTE CARMICHAEL STOPES.

A NEW ARABIC DICTIONARY.

MR. SOCRATES SPIRO, of Cairo, has issued a specimen sheet of a new 'English - Arabic Vocabulary of the Modern and Colloquial Arabic of Egypt,' which will form the counterpart of his 'Arabic-English Vocabulary' published a year or so ago. Mr. Spiro's familiarity with the spoken dialects should enable him to produce a useful book, and one which, it cannot be denied, is much wanted; but he hardly does himself justice in the specimen sheet, which it is to be hoped is not to be taken as representative of the whole. The collocation of meanings and phrases appears to be singularly unhappy. Who, for example, would look for "a house" under the article "A"? Of course what Mr. Spiro means to illustrate is that there is no indefinite article in Arabic, and that beyt (which he spells "bêt" in the German fashion) means both "house" and "a house." But he ought to explain this in a brief grammatical introduction; and at least, if he gives beyt as meaning "a house," he should not add beyt wâhid as a synonymous form, when it means definitely "a single house." Nor should he go on with mara wâhda for "a woman," without the simple form mara. Then he prints the th in thalâtha as t, merely because it is so pronounced (but not so written) in the abominable dialect which Egyptians call Arabic. Other blemishes occur on the very first page. For example, "alif, bê, tê" are printed as the equivalent of our A B C, instead of the proper term Abjad. The l in el-kursy is absurdly assimilated to the k ("ek-kursy"). The Arabic for water is transliterated "mayia" instead of môya. The dotted final h is generally, but not uniformly, deprived of its dots. The objectionable use of y for the prolonged kesr as well as for the yê produces such a form as tasyyb; yet in the very same column we have wiqyia, which, according to Mr. Spiro's system, should be wiqyya (or rather uqyya, we believe the commoner form). It would be curious to hear the average subaltern, newly commissioned in the Egyptian army, try to pronounce these words. Mr. Spiro has a special affection, it would seem, for the vowel kesr: he writes "widû" for wudu, "filûs" for fulûs, "dikûl" for dakhûl, "wikâla" for wekâla, "gidîd" for qedîd, &c. Again, we have always heard the phrase by which he renders "adieu" spoken as ma' es-selâm, not "selâma"; and râîh is certainly not pronounced "râyih." Among many singular meanings, we note that "above-ground" is rendered in three ways, one of which is tayyib. It is worth while to call attention to these defects in the hope that it is not too late for Mr. Spiro to revise what ought to be a serviceable work if only it is carried out with adequate care. Nothing, indeed, can reconcile us to his mode of transliteration, which is wholly unsuited to ordinary English learners, nor do we agree with some admirers of the Muayyad press. The typography strikes us as inferior. Still, much may be done before the book appears in its final form, and we wish Mr. Spiro all success in his difficult task.

JUNIUS'S EDITION OF CHAUCER.

Cambridge, Mass.

RECENTLY, while seeking material for an account of the life and work of that wonderful seventeenth century English scholar Franciscus Junius (1589–1677), there came to light a fact which is of some interest and importance to the history of English scholarship, namely, that in the latter part of his life Junius prepared an edition of Chaucer's works, comparing favourably, in respect to its completeness and thoroughness, with the best modern ones, and containing a vast deal of material of permanent value.

That this work has been so entirely overlooked hitherto is due to an unfortunate accident which has separated from one another the two volumes containing the results of his labours on the text and language of Chaucer. The first part consists of an elaborately annotated copy of Speght's edition (1598) of Chaucer's works, now among the Junius MSS. in the Bodleian. This has never been described, so far as I know, save in the brief entry concerning it in the Bodley Catalogue, which states the fact that it contains notes by Junius. The second part is found in a large quarto in the same collection, filled with slips in Junius's handwriting, and erroneously entitled 'Dictionarium Veteris Linguæ Anglicanæ.' The references in this dictionary are adapted to the system of notation used by Junius in the copy of Speght's Chaucer just referred to, so that there can be no doubt that the two volumes belong together. Wanley knew this ('Catalogus,' 1705, p. 102), but does not describe the glossary correctly when he says that the words beginning with A are wanting. Since his time, however, the two volumes have been separated, probably because of the mistake in the binder's title on the glossary, and they are now (I think for the first time) brought together in their proper connexion.

The work itself contains internal evidence that Junius wrote or planned a third part to contain supplementary notes and complete the edition. For, besides the elaborate system of cross-reference, the citations of parallel forms of expression from classic and mediæval writers, and the corrections and emendations to Speght's text, the book contains the words "Vid. Annotat." written opposite to such passages as need something more than an explanation of their language to make them clear. But such a set of notes is not extant, so far as can be learned. A careful search through all the Junius MSS., which Bodley's librarian kindly permitted me to make, failed to disclose anything more than the few stray leaves fixed into the part already described.

The two parts of the edition which are left to us, however, are sufficient to show how great is the loss that Chaucer study has suffered in not having begun with Junius's work in the seventeenth century. For the greater part of his investigations, concerning as they do the facts and not theories of Chaucer interpretation, have a permanent value as well as an historic interest.

As to the extent of the notes, they cover pretty evenly the entire contents of the volume in which they are found, excepting the prose parts, which are annotated but sparingly. An average page of text contains thirty-seven. An idea of their character and scope can be formed from those given below. The glossary contains about three-fourths as many entries as Prof. Skeat's larger edition does, but covers, of course, a different ground. The text-emendations concern themselves largely with the correction of the misprints found in Speght's edition, and do not seem to be based on any additional MS. evidence.

The other notes, written mainly in Latin, can be divided into three classes. Of those which concern the interpretation of particular words, the following is a typical example. (I supply modern references and text from Prof. Skeat's edition.) It is on 'Knight's Tale,' A, 2290 :—

"A crowne of grene oke unseryall (early edd.).
Lege ceriall, for cerrus is a kind of tree like an oke and berith maste ; vide Plinium (16, 5, 6)."

For such explanations the reader is often referred to Junius's 'Etymologicum Anglicanum,' in which many Chaucer passages are interpreted.

Those which refer to Chaucer's phraseology are the most numerous and valuable, and have evidently been prepared with the most painstaking care. They are nearly always apposite and illuminating ; e. g., the note on 'Man of Lawes Tale,' B, 323, when it has been expanded, is :—

"The moder of the sowdan, welle of vyces.
Cf. 'Squire's Tale,' F, 505 :—
That semed welle of all gentillesse.
'Wife of Bath's Tale,' D, 107 :—
But Crist, that of perfecioun is welle.
'Prioresses Tale,' B, 1846 :—
This welle of mercy, Cristes moder swete.
'Troilus,' I. 873 :—
And seyde, 'allas of al my wo the welle.
'Troilus,' II. 178 :—
that is of worthinesse welle.
'Troilus,' II. 841 :—
as he that is the welle of worthinesse.
'Troilus,' III. 1472 :—
My lady right and of my wele or wo
The welle and rote.
'Troilus,' V. 1330 :—
of wele and wo my welle.
'Troilus,' V. 1565 :—
That next him was of worthinesse welle."

Or take another from the 'Knight's Tale,' A, 1761 :—

"For pitee renneth sone in gentil herte.
Cf. 'Man of Lawes Tale,' B, 660 :—
As gentil herte is fulfild of pitee.
'Squieres Tale,' F, 479 :—
That pitie renneth sone in gentil herte.
'The Marchantes Tale,' E, 1986 :—
Lo pitee renneth sone in gentle herte.
'Prologue to Leg. of G. W.' (491) 503 :—
But pitee renneth sone in gentil herte."

Another class of notes deals with citations of parallels from classic and mediæval writers, which often throw fresh light on the passages to which they refer. As, for instance, the note on 'Miller's Tale,' A, 3227–30 :—

"He knew nat Catoun, for his wit was rude,
That bad man sholde wedde his similitude
* * * *
For youthe and elde is often at debaat.
Cf. Solon apud Ausonium (v. Wölfflin, 'Publilii Syri Sententiæ,' p. 151) :—
Par pari jugatur conjux; quicquid impar dissidet."

Or that to 'Knight's Tale,' A, 1798–9 :—

"Now loketh, is not that an heigh folye ?
Who may been a fool, but if he love ?
Cf. Mimi iambus P. Syri ('P. Syri Sententiæ,' ed. Wölfflin, 15) :—
Amans quid cupiat scit, quid sapiat non videt.
Plautus, 'Pseudol.,' Act I. sc. iii. :—
Non jucundum est nisi amans facit stulta."

Or the one on 'Knight's Tale,' A, 2448 :—

"In elde is bothe wisdom and usage.
Cf. Ovid, 'Met.' vi. 29 :—
Serus venit usus ab annis."

That this whole work was the fruit of Junius's riper years is shown by his citations from Vossius's 'Etymologicum Linguæ Latinæ' and his own 'Etymologicum Anglicanum,' though the latter was not published until after his death. He also frequently refers to a similar work of his on Gawin Douglas's translation of Vergil's Æneid that is still extant among the Junius MSS. in the Bodleian.

It will be a pity if some means is not found to make this material available to modern scholarship. MARK LIDDELL.

Literary Gossip.

MR. WILLIAM ANGERSTEIN'S death on the 31st ult. removes the last of those who were on terms of close personal friendship with Madame d'Arblay. Mr. Angerstein's mother was a daughter of Mr. Locke, of Norbury Park, where Madame d'Arblay (as readers of the 'Diary' will remember) was a frequent visitor, and after her marriage she resided within easy distance of Mr. Locke's place. Mr. Angerstein was born in 1811, and from his earliest childhood till Madame d'Arblay's death, in January, 1840, he was frequently in her society, and, like all the other members of his family, he had a very great regard and admiration for the author of 'Evelina.' On one of the last occasions that we had the pleasure of seeing Mr. Angerstein the conversation turned to Madame d'Arblay, and he complained strongly of the inaccurate description of his old friend's habits and mode of life given in Sir Henry Holland's 'Memoirs.'

THE new volume of the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' to be published on June 26th, extends from Scoffin to Sheares. Besides the article on Shakspeare by Mr. Sidney Lee, which we mentioned last week, the volume contains memoirs of Sir George Gilbert Scott, by Mr. Paul Waterhouse ; James Scott, Duke of Monmouth, by Dr. A. W. Ward ; John Scott, first Earl of Eldon, by Mr. J. M. Rigg ; Michael Scott, the reputed magician, by Sheriff Mackay ; Sir Walter Scott, by Mr. Leslie Stephen ; William Scott, Lord Stowell, by Mr. J. A. Hamilton ; John Scotus or Erigena, the philosopher, by Mr. R. L. Poole ; George Julius Poulett Scrope and Adam Sedgwick, the geologists, by the Rev. Prof. Bonney ; Richard le Scrope, Archbishop of York, by Mr. James Tait ; Archbishop Secker, by Canon Overton ; Sir John Robert Seeley, by Prof. Prothero ; Prideaux John Selby, the naturalist, by Dr. W. Selby Church ; John Selden, by the Right Hon. Sir Edward Fry ; Alexander Selkirk and Thomas Shadwell, by Mr. G. A. Aitken ; Elkanah Settle, by Mr. Thomas Seccombe ; Joseph Severn, the artist, by Dr. Richard Garnett ; Anna Seward, by Miss Elizabeth Lee ; Edward Seymour, Duke of Somerset, the Protector, by Mr. A. F. Pollard ; Frederick Beauchamp Seymour, Lord Alcester, by Prof. Laughton ; Robert Seymour, the book illustrator, by Mr. G. S. Layard ; James Sharp, Archbishop of St. Andrews, by Mr. T. F. Henderson ; Sir John George Shaw-Lefevre, by Mr. C. Alexander Harris ; Nicholas Shaxton, Bishop of Salisbury, by Mr. James Gairdner ; and John Sheares, United Irishman, by Mr. Robert Dunlop.

MR. GEORGE SMITH is going to give a dinner early in July to the contributors to celebrate the completion of the list of names in the 'Dictionary of National Biography.'

It will take place in the Whitehall Rooms of the Métropole.

A PAPER will be read at the meeting of the Royal Historical Society on the 17th inst. by the Oxford Regius Professor of History upon a long neglected subject. Probably no State institution has ever exerted such a widespread influence upon historical studies as the French École des Chartes, and the desirability of a similar establishment in this country for the systematic study of palæography and diplomatics will form the subject of Prof. York Powell's address to the Royal Historical Society.

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD & SONS will shortly publish the first series of Prof. Tiele's Edinburgh Gifford Lectures, under the title of 'The Science of Religion in its Historical Development.' The volume will treat of the morphological part of that science. The action brought by Dr. Hastie against the learned professor has been withdrawn, a compromise having been effected between the irate theologians.

Two of the Welsh counties, namely Monmouth and Pembroke, will be shortly provided with bibliographies. That for Monmouthshire is compiled by Mr. W. Haines, of Abergavenny, and will be published by Messrs. Woodall & Co., of Oswestry. The other is by Mr. Henry Owen, the editor of Owen's 'Pembrokeshire'; it is being appropriately printed within the county itself, at Fishguard, and will be issued in connexion with the Archæological Survey of Pembrokeshire, which is now being carried out under the auspices of the Cambrian Archæological Association.

A BIBLIOGRAPHY of all works either written in Welsh or relating to Wales, published within the nineteenth century, has also been prepared by Mr. Charles Ashton for the National Eisteddfod Association, but its publication will be deferred till after the close of the century, so that the whole period may be covered by it.

THE discontinuance by the Welsh University Colleges of special courses for the London matriculation is coincident with a notable increase of matriculants in the University of Wales. They number this year 425, nearly five times as many as in 1895.

THE rejection of the proposals of the Educational Board of the Diocese of Lincoln, which would have made the association of schools coextensive with the county, is of evil omen. The plan was supported by the Dean and the Chapter. Indeed, the only clergyman of any note who joined the Bishop in opposing them was Canon Overton. The meeting was much disturbed by the noisy conduct of sundry literates, who tried to shout down Lord Heneage, the Dean, the Chancellor, and all who advocated the Board scheme.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE are going to follow the example of Messrs. Puttick & Simpson, and sell a collection of ex-libris on Friday and Saturday next. It is that formed by Col. Havelock.

WE regret to hear of the death of Mr. Edward Manwaring Baines, one of the managing directors of Edward Baines & Sons, Limited, the proprietors of the Leeds Mercury, and the oldest surviving representative of the firm of Edward Baines & Sons.

DR. LUDWIG HIRZEL, who has been Professor of the German Language and Literature at the University of Berne for many years, died on June 1st. He belonged to the old Zurich patrician family of the Hirzels, which has given several eminent scholars to Switzerland and Germany, and of which the late Salomon Hirzel, the well-known Leipzig publisher and "Goetheforscher," was also a member. Ludwig Hirzel, who was born at Zurich in 1839, studied successively at the universities of Zurich, Jena, and Berlin. He published a series of contributions to Goethe literature, especially on Goethe's relations to Zurich and the Swiss, and continued Salomon Hirzel's catalogue of a Goethe library (1761 to 1874), which he brought down to the year 1884. In 1882 he wrote an exhaustive biography of Albrecht von Haller, and edited a new edition of Haller's 'Poems.' In the next year he published Haller's journals of his travels in England, Holland, and Germany from 1723 to 1727.

SCIENCE

GEOGRAPHICAL PUBLICATIONS.

MR. LUCAS, of the Colonial Office, continues his geographical works in Volume IV., Parts I. and II. (which are really two volumes), of his Historical Geography of the British Colonies, dealing with South and East Africa, Part I. being the historical volume, for which we have nothing but praise, and Part II. being the geographical volume, in which we have detected but one error. The map of British East Africa shows as "British possessions," "leased to the Congo State," the large tract to the west of the thirtieth parallel of east longitude, and south of the tenth parallel of north longitude, which was, indeed, the subject of such a lease, but cannot be considered to be still in that position. This great territory in the heart of Africa is one over which we have never had any kind of control. We apparently endeavoured to secure ourselves in a theoretical claim to it by undertaking to lease it to the Congo State. That lease was at once denounced by France, and the Congo State immediately renounced the lease, and informed France that she had withdrawn from the territory in question four officers who had begun to attempt to take possession of it. It is a territory, therefore, which is, at the best, in dispute; though, as we have never taken the slightest notice of the French action, but have treated it as a matter with which we are not concerned and which is wholly between the Congo State and France, it can hardly be said that practically it is even in dispute so far as we are concerned. Certainly it is misleading to now describe it as a "British possession," and equally misleading to represent it as "leased to the Congo State." There is another use of the words "leased to the Congo State" on the same map, concerning territory on the shores of the Albert Nyanza, but we are unable to state whether these words are or are not incorrect, inasmuch as the red paint is applied in a peculiar fashion, and it is not clear to what territory the words are intended to have application — probably to the territory near Mount Ruwenzori, which, however, is coloured here as Congo State territory and removed by some distance from the words in question, which are printed partly over the lake itself and partly over portions of Unyoro which are in the occupation of Great Britain and under the Foreign Office. Perhaps the Colonial Office is not better informed on the subject of Foreign Office claims than the Foreign Office has lately shown itself to be in the House of Commons upon the subject of Colonial Office claims. The work is issued by the Clarendon Press.

Messrs. Macmillan & Co. publish a Geography of Africa by Mr. Edward Heawood, in which we have found no errors, and which contains some excellent illustrations. The map is unsatisfactory, but it is impossible to produce a satisfactory map of Africa without colours or on so small a scale as that attempted. The Spanish protectorate, for example, in the west of the Sahara is given too great an extension, and is made to include some districts which are actually administered by Morocco, and others which are claimed by France, and in which it is certain that the Spaniards will never be allowed to exercise any influence. The territories of the Niger Company are shown as extending far above Say, in the direction of Timbuctoo; but it must not be forgotten that this territory is claimed by France, has lately been visited by a French official expedition, and is never likely to be brought under the Niger Company's control. On the whole, even the map is wonderfully accurate considering its scale.

Philips' New Handy General Atlas of the World. (Philip & Son.)—The publishers of this atlas have done such good work in the matter of cheap publications that it is a great pity that they should fail in their more costly attempts. But it must be admitted that the present volume, handsome though its binding is, and despite the excellent quality of the paper on which it is printed, cannot from other points of view be reckoned a success. We doubt the utility of Mr. Philip's physical and climatological maps reproduced from the 'Systematic Atlas.' Two spheres of 6½ in. diameter each cannot really give any but the crudest information as to ocean currents; and to divide the vegetation of the world into five classes in such a way as to classify South Wales with the interior of Arabia as desert, and Siam with the Kalahari desert as grassland, is mere trifling. All these fancy plates, too, are as ugly as the crudest possible colouring can make them, a fault which the publishers have often avoided with considerable skill in much less pretentious productions. A word of praise must, however, be bestowed on the maps of the North Atlantic and the Mediterranean, though they are a good deal defaced by the too conspicuous marking of steamer routes, and that determination to paint British possessions red which becomes exceedingly tiresome when carried to excess, and in one case has led the editor to annex Guadeloupe and Martinique to England. Wars are a constant source of trouble to all map-makers, and we observe that Mr. Philip has had the bad luck to put Turnavo in Turkey, and to give the meanest possible map of Crete. On the other hand, he comes out of the campaigns on the Nile and the Niger not without credit. His north-west frontier of India is a poor matter, which is a serious fault. The map of the Pamirs might be twenty years old, and Kafiristan is a mere jumble. Two plates do not agree with Dr. Donaldson Smith or with one another as to the existence, course, or destination of the Omo. We find no sign of recent lamentable events in Erithrea, and Mr. Jackson's discoveries in Franz Josef Land appear to be wholly neglected. The mountains in Switzerland, as far as the shading is concerned, all appear to be of the same height and flat topped. The existence of glaciers in the same country is noticed, though the fact escapes any but the most careful examination, and about half the names in the plate are practically illegible. The map of Spain is so dark with mountains that it is difficult to see anything else, and that of the north-east of the United States is, as usual, almost entirely railways. The chief merits of the atlas are that it includes sixty plates, most of them well selected, and that the index as far as we have tested it is excellent; but we fear that they hardly make up for the defects that have been noticed.

Pocket County Companion. Compiled by Robert Dodwell.—Devonshire, Norfolk, Derbyshire, Berkshire. (Tylston, Edwards & Marsden.)—These volumes display all the characteristics of the earlier ones of the same series already noticed by us. They are handy in form and very neat in style, but the matter of the books is too puerile even for contempt. Any peg is good enough for the author to hang upon it some newspaper cutting, including Tit-Bits, or some rankly stale story. Under the title "Dartmoor" a page and a half of type is wasted in the reprint of a story from the Lady's Pictorial of July 11th, 1891. The connexion of Sir Walter Raleigh with Hayes Farm leads to the insertion of three pages of print on smoking (why not potatoes?), a digression which ranges or lumbers over Dr. Syntax, G. A. Sala, Tennyson, Notes and Queries, and what not. This is digression and book-making run mad and become despicable.

THE ROYAL OBSERVATORY, GREENWICH.

LAST Saturday being the first in June, the annual Visitation of the Royal Observatory was held, and we have before us the Astronomer Royal's usual Report, which contains several features of special interest. The building of the north wing and central dome of the Physical Observatory has been completed, but the office furniture was not supplied until quite recently, so that those important adjuncts have but just come into occupation. The Astronomer Royal looks forward to the immediate commencement of the east and west wings, after which the building operations will be completed. A site has, after much consideration, been selected for the Magnetic Pavilion, which it is necessary to have as far as possible from any iron masses; the place at last chosen (on what is locally called One Tree Hill) is on the east side of the Observatory, at a distance of between three and four hundred yards. The new altazimuth was completed a year ago, but observations could not be made with it till the observing floor had been provided, and it was then found that discordances were manifested in the working, the causes of which were, after some delay, ascertained and rectified, so that it is hoped regular observations may now be undertaken with this newly contrived instrument. The recent completion of the Thompson photographic equatorial has already been mentioned in the Athenæum; the necessary adjustments have now been carried out, and the instrument is in good working order, the mechanical arrangements being found to be very satisfactory. The great 28-inch refractor (the largest in England) was in constant use for micrometric measurements from May 11th last year till January 11th this; after that the crown lens was reversed and the instrument used for photography until April 23rd (except on the occasion of Prof. Barnard's visit to the Observatory on February 17th), when micrometric observations were resumed.

To refer now to the older instruments. With the transit-circle, the sun, moon, planets, and fundamental stars have been regularly observed as in previous years, and the annual catalogue of stars observed in 1896 contains 3,454 objects. The preparation of the new ten-year catalogue, which will contain accurate places of nearly 7,000 stars observed during the period 1887 to 1896, is making good progress. For the next ten years the programme is to include determinations of the accurate places of all stars, down to the ninth magnitude inclusive, which are situated within 26° of the Pole. The moon has been observed during the year ending 1897, May 10th, on 101 nights with the transit-circle, or 7·6 times per lunation, and with the old altazimuth (still used to supplement the meridian observations) on 55 nights, or 4·4 times per lunation. The reflex zenith tube has continued in regular use for observations of γ Draconis, and the old equatorials for those of occultations and other casual phenomena, besides some of two comets. Active progress has been made during the year with the Greenwich portion of the great photographic map of the heavens; and a number of miscellaneous photographs have also been taken with the astrographic equatorial. Observations with the visual spectroscope have been suspended since the date of the last report, pending the completion of the photographic spectroscope and its adaptation to the 30-inch reflector of the Thompson equatorial. Photographs of the sun have been taken on no fewer than 222 days with the Dallmeyer photo-heliograph, mounted on the terrace roof of the south wing of the Physical Observatory, and these have been supplemented by photographs taken in India and Mauritius; in this way photographs were secured on 360 days in the year 1896. The spot activity of the sun has on the whole continued to decline, but there were two remarkable cases of temporary revival: the first in September, 1896, when the longest connected group ever photographed at Greenwich was observed, and the other at the commencement of the present year.

As regards magnetic observations, the variations of magnetic declination, of horizontal and vertical forces, and of earth currents have been registered photographically, and accompanying eye observations of absolute declination, horizontal force, and dip have been made as in former years. The magnetic disturbances in 1896 have been comparatively trifling. Allusion has already been made to the selection of a site for the new Magnetic Pavilion, which it is desirable to have at a distance from the iron in the Physical Observatory and the new Altazimuth Pavilion, and also from that in the Kent Water-Works Reservoir to the south of the Observatory.

The meteorological instruments are all in good order. It may be of interest to give, as usual, some particulars of the atmospherical conditions during the year. The mean temperature of 1896 was 50°·1, being 0°·7 above the average for the fifty years 1841–1890. During the twelve months ending April 30th, 1897, the highest daily temperature in the shade recorded in the open stand was 91°·1 on July 14th. The lowest winter temperature was 23°·8 on January 18th, as compared with 24°·3 in the preceding winter. The mean daily horizontal movement of the air during the twelve months ending April 30th, 1897, was 289 miles, which is eight above the average for the preceding twenty-nine years. The highest recorded pressure of the wind was 26 lb. on the square foot, which was on March 3rd. The number of hours of bright sunshine was 1,152 out of 4,454 on which the sun was above the horizon, but it is supposed that rather more should have been recorded through some instrumental defect which was remedied at the beginning of this year. This was first suspected by a comparison between the Kew and Greenwich records. The rainfall for the year ending April 30th, 1897, was 26·83 inches, which is 2·29 inches above the fifty years' average. Excessive rainfall characterized the month of September, when 5·54 inches were measured. This is 3·29 above the average for that month, and the fall for March was also 1·89 above the average, whilst those of May and July were considerably deficient.

In one of Airy's early reports, issued sixty years ago (when he initiated the system of presenting them), he speaks of the burden laid upon Greenwich as compared with other observatories in the care and rating of chronometers. This, like the work of most other departments, has increased of late years, as has that connected with the distribution of time.

The portable transit instruments used in the Paris-Greenwich longitude determinations have been satisfactorily tested, and it is hoped that the determination of that of Killorglin, or some other suitable station at the western extremity of the great European arc of longitude, may be undertaken next year with the view of eliminating the probable local attraction at Valentia and Waterville, the stations which have been used for longitude determinations.

The personal establishment has been to some extent reorganized. Of the two chief assistants, Mr. Dyson has special charge of the astronomical department and Mr. Cowell of the astrophysical, in which is included the magnetic and meteorological branch (the latter being immediately superintended by Mr. Nash). Amongst the other assistants it may be mentioned that Mr. Maunder is charged with the heliographic photography and reductions, and Mr. Hollis with the photographic mapping of the heavens, the measurement of the plates, and the computations for the astrographic catalogue.

We will conclude by giving some of Mr. Christie's general remarks at the end of the Report in his own words:—

"The addition of two new instruments to the Observatory equipment has involved much work in supervising their erection and in planning the various accessories required. The Thompson equatorial, with its powerful combination of telescopes adapted to visual, photographic, and spectroscopic work, has been erected and got into good working order. With the new altazimuth there have been difficulties which, it is believed, are not confined to this particular instrument, and these have delayed the commencement of regular work with it.....As regards the Astrographic Chart, the decision to measure the plates for the catalogue twice (in reversed positions), with a view to securing greater accuracy, naturally involves a considerable addition to the work, but the value of the results will be more than proportionately increased. At the present rate of progress, the whole work of measurement and remeasurement will be completed within nine years, and by the end of the present year it is expected that all the plates for the zones between 64° and 68° declination will have been measured twice, and that the measures will be ready for printing together with the constants for the plates. This portion of the catalogue, which it is proposed to publish without delay, will contain the results from 268 plates out of a total of 1,149 plates allotted to Greenwich."

Mr. Christie refers in an earlier part of the Report to his disappointment through cloudy weather in his journey to Japan to observe the total eclipse of the sun last August, taking with him the Thompson 9-inch photographic telescope for the purpose of photographing the corona on a large scale. The Norway party (which included two members, Mr. Maunder and Mr. Crommelin, from the Greenwich Observatory) was, as our readers are already aware, equally unsuccessful.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

THE excavations at Brassempouy, from which so many objects of interest have been derived, were continued in 1896 by M. Edouard Piette and M. Joseph de la Porterie. From an account furnished by them to L'Anthropologie for April, 1897, it appears that their excavations in the Grotte du Pape were about to be given up, when they were agreeably surprised to discover a small ivory statuette of a female figure. In their opinion it represents a person who did not belong to the same race as the figure previously found, called the Venus of Brassempouy. It has been reduced, however, by time to such a fragmentary condition that it is difficult to say whether that conclusion can be supported. In any case, the explorers are to be congratulated on their discovery of a remarkable object of pristine art. They also found, in another portion of the same grotto, two engraved pieces of bone, one representing an animal of the horse type with erected mane, the other two horse heads.

Among the other original memoirs in the same publication are the first portion of an article on primitive civilization in Eastern Sicily, by M. G. Patroni, of the National Museum at Naples; a note on the anthropology of Madagascar, by Dr. A. Bouchereau; and the continuation of an account by Dr. H. Malbot and Dr. R. Verneau of the trepanning of the cranium among the Chaouias of Algeria, with illustrations of the instruments employed.

The Society of Anthropology of Paris has awarded the Broca Prize to Dr. Eugène Dubois, the discoverer of Pithecanthropus, and has divided the Fauvelle Prize between Prof. Ramon y Cajal, of Madrid, and M. Chudzinski.

Among recent papers read before that Society and recorded in its Bulletins the following seem worthy of note. Dr. Sadoul has furnished answers to the Society's questionary as to sociology and ethnography with respect to Madagascar, and M. Ch. Letourneau has discussed the origin of the Hovas. M. Paul d'Enjoy has expounded the Chinese calendar, and Dr. J. J. Matignon has contributed a curious observation on the prevalence in infancy among the Chinese of congenital stigmata or patches of discoloration. Dr. Bertholon communicated a note on identity of anthropological characters in the Basques and the Phœnicians. A discussion was raised on the stone and metal ages in Egypt upon a summary by M. G. de Mortillet of Mr. de Morgan's work on that subject. Mr. de Morgan holds that Egyptian civilization had an Asiatic origin; but M. de Mortillet adheres to his previously expressed opinion that it originated in Africa. M. H. Galiment read a learned paper on the part played by Herodotus in the formation of Græco-Egyptian syncretism. Dr. Felix Regnault contributed an essay on the origin of ornamental geometric art among primitive peoples. His observations on the early use of the cross are interesting.

Mr. Nasirvanji Jivanji Readymoney, of Bombay, has prepared a form of book, entitled 'Descriptive Biography Columns,' for the purpose of making entries in which groups of biographical facts may be classified and arranged, so as, in his words, "to describe or define human life."

Among the principal contents of the Journal of the Anthropological Institute for May are Lieut. Boyle Somerville's ethnographical notes in New Georgia, a group of islands forming part of the Solomon Islands in the South Pacific, with songs and specimens of the language; and observations on Melanesian and New Guinea songs, by Mr. Sidney H. Ray. Lieut. Somerville, as an officer of H.M. surveying ship Penguin, was employed in making a survey of New Georgia in 1893–4, and took the opportunity of recording his original personal observations of the people, following the order given in 'Notes and Queries on Anthropology.' The illustrations, from his photographs, are more than usually lifelike and successful. Mr. Henry Balfour, à propos of a human skull used by an Aghori fakir as a drinking vessel, traces the life-history of the fakir, and adds some notes on the similar use of skulls by other races, with illustrations from a number of specimens in the Oxford University Museum and other collections. Mr. R. H. Mathews furnishes an account of the Keeparra ceremony of initiation as observed by tribes occupying a tract of country on the eastern coast of New South Wales. Dr. J. H. Gladstone communicates a valuable paper on the transition from the use of copper to that of bronze, with analyses—for the most part made in his own laboratory—of certain typical copper and bronze implements. Dr. E. B. Landis describes the native dyes and methods of dyeing in Korea, which are now almost supplanted by the introduction of aniline dyes. Mr. T. V. Holmes reviews the paper read by Mr. Clement Reid before the Royal Society on the palæolithic deposits at Hitchin and their relation to the glacial epoch.

The movement for establishing a Bureau of Ethnology for the empire is making progress, and a deputation will probably before long wait upon Mr. Chamberlain.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL.—June 3.—Annual Meeting.—Lord Lister, President, in the chair.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Dr. R. Bell, Sir W. H. Broadbent, C. Chree, H. J. Elwes, Dr. J. S. Haldane, Prof. W. A. Haswell, Prof. G. B. Howes, Dr. F. S. Kipping, Prof. G. B. Mathews, G. R. M. Murray, F. H. Neville, Prof. H. Alleyne Nicholson, Prof. J. M. Thomson, Prof. F. T. Trouton, and Prof. H. H. Turner.—The following papers were read: 'The Sensitiveness of the Retina to Light and Colour,' by Capt. Abney,—'On the Mechanism by which the First Sound of the Heart is Produced,' by Sir R. Quain,—'Mathematical Contributions to the Theory of Evolution: on the Relative Variation and Correlation in Civilized and Uncivilized Races,' by Miss A. Lee and Prof. K. Pearson,—'An Investigation on the Variability of the Human Skeleton, with especial reference to the Naquada Race, discovered by Prof. Flinders Petrie in his Explorations in Egypt,' by Mr. E. Warren,—'On the Brains of Two Sub-Fossil Malagasy Lemuroids,' by Mr. C. I. F. Major,—'On the Dielectric Constants of certain Frozen Electrolytes, at and above the Temperature of Liquid Air,' and 'On the Dielectric Constants of Pure Ice, Glycerine, Nitrobenzol, and Ethylene Dibromide, at and above the Temperature of Liquid Air,' by Profs. Fleming and Dewar,—'Preliminary Communication on the Nature of the Contagium of Rinderpest,' by Mr. A. Edington,—'Average Contribution of each several Ancestor to the Total Heritage of the Offspring,' by Mr. F. Galton.—and 'On the Influence of a Magnetic Field on Radiation Frequency,' by Prof. Lodge.

GEOLOGICAL.—May 26.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Mr. J. T. Smith was elected a Fellow.—The following communications were read: 'On Augite-Diorites with Micropegmatite in Southern India,' by Mr. T. H. Holland,—and 'The Laccolites of Cutch and their Relations to the other Igneous Masses of the District,' by the Rev. J. F. Blake.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—June 3.—Mr. C. H. Read, Secretary, and afterwards Viscount Dillon, President, in the chair.—This was the first ordinary meeting since the death of the late lamented Sir A. W. Franks. The proceedings opened by the Secretary's informing the meeting that the votes of the Council had fallen upon Harold Arthur, Viscount Dillon, as President of the Society. The minutes of the Council of that day were then read, recording (1) such election of the President, (2) the resignation of the Treasurer, and (3) the bequest by the late President of such of the antiquarian books and heraldic MSS. in his library as were not already in the library of the Society. The Secretary thereupon instructed the Assistant-Secretary to introduce the new President.—The President having taken the chair vacated by the Secretary, the latter from his proper place congratulated the President in the name of the Society on the high honour which had been conferred upon him. The President acknowledged these congratulations in a speech in which he bore testimony to the excellent qualities and profound knowledge of the late President. In connexion with the proceedings the following resolutions were laid before the meeting. The first is a resolution passed by the Council: "The Council of the Society of Antiquaries desires to record its sense of the irreparable loss which not only the Society, but all those interested in the study of archæology, literature, and science, have sustained by the death of Sir Augustus Wollaston Franks, President of the Society of Antiquaries of London, which occurred on May 21st last and during his tenure of that office. In recording this, the Council has not only to deplore the loss of a most learned, liberal, and distinguished President, but of one who, by his amiability and sympathetic courtesy, endeared himself to all with whom he was brought into association." The second resolution was moved by Sir J. C. Robinson in a feeling speech, and seconded by Mr. C. Knight Watson, and received the unanimous assent of the meeting: "While concurring with the Council in the resolution which has been read, this meeting cannot refrain from bearing independent testimony to the great eminence and the personal worth of its late President, and from offering to his family the assurance of its profound sympathy." The following resolution was also proposed by Capt. Telfer, seconded by Mr. A. C. King, and carried unanimously: "The Society of Antiquaries of London learns with sincere regret that to the grievous and irreparable loss which has been incurred by the Society in the death of its beloved and lamented President has now been added a still further loss in the resignation of the Treasurer. Dr. Freshfield has for twenty-three years served the best interests of the Society by a zeal and assiduity to which it would be difficult to find a parallel. In the special department over which he has presided for the last eight years, the success which he has achieved in placing the finances of the Society on a sound basis has exceeded the most sanguine expectations. The Secretary is hereby requested to convey to Dr. Freshfield this expression of very sincere regret at his resignation."—This being an evening appointed for the election of Fellows, no papers were read. Notice was given that a ballot would be taken at the evening meeting on Thursday, June 17th, for the election of two members of Council vice Sir A. W. Franks, President, deceased, and Dr. Edwin Freshfield, Treasurer, resigned, and that the Council had recommended the names of Edmund Oldfield, Esq., and H. A. Grueber, Esq., to fill the vacancies; also that a further ballot would be taken at the same time for the election of a Treasurer, and that the Council had recommended the name of Philip Norman, Esq., to fill the office.—The following gentlemen were elected Fellows: Col. J. H. Rivett-Carnac, Rev. J. F. Wilkinson, and Messrs. F. P. Barnard, R. Burnard, H. F. Cook, A. R. O. Stuttfield, A. Prevost, H. Y. Thompson, and E. P. Warren.

BRITISH ARCHÆOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION.—June 2.—Mr. T. Blashill, Hon. Treasurer, in the chair.—A large collection of rare and beautiful miniatures was exhibited by Mr. B. Nathan, many of which were of historical interest. Amongst the more prominent were a miniature of Lady William Russell by Englehart; a miniature of Lady Penelope Fitzgerald by Plimer; a miniature of Marie Louise, Princess of Orange; a box with enamel of the marriage of Marie Antoinette with the Dauphin, afterwards Louis XVI.; a circular miniature by Greuze; a large miniature of Madame Vestris by Plimer; a Limoges enamel of the Virgin and Child from the Bohn Collection. In all there were some thirty-six exhibits.—A paper was read by Mr. Patrick, Hon. Secretary, in the absence of the author, Mr. T. Cann Hughes, 'On Notes from North Lancashire,' in which the ancient charters of Lancaster, the borough seals, the fairs which were formerly held there, and other local customs, some of which are now obsolete, were described. The earliest existent document is that of John, Earl of Morton, dated 1193. The mayor's seal of the borough is believed to be of the reign of Henry IV. or V., and bears in its centre three towers, each triple turreted, with a lion passant gardant, crowned with a fleur-de-lys. The ancient stocks of the town are preserved at the Town Clerk's office, together with an interesting series of ale and spirit measures which are said to have been made from guns captured from the Spanish Armada. There are very many ancient doorheads in and about Lancaster, some of them having curious designs of fish and other emblems.—The Rev. H. J. Dukinfield Astley, the newly appointed Hon. Secretary and Editor, was introduced to the meeting, and commenced his duties.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—June 2.—Judge Baylis, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. H. W. Seton-Karr exhibited a large series of flint implements from the lost flint mines of Egypt, discovered by him in November last in the Eastern desert, between ten and thirty miles from the Nile, in the Wady el Sheik district. Among the large number of implements discovered, many are quite new to science. The mines resemble ruined cities, and there is a central work-place in each, where most of the objects were found. They consist of flint ornaments, truncheon-shaped implements in great numbers, clubs, axes, javelin-points, sickles, and variously shaped knives. He also exhibited flint implements found during the last expedition to East Africa. Mr. Seton-Karr discovered on a long low hill in a plain what might have been a palæolithic city, judging by the thousands of large implements in a most perfect condition. It is situated near Jalelo, about a hundred miles from Berbera. This is the first instance of such a discovery, and the first time prehistoric weapons have been found in tropical Africa, and, according to Sir J. Evans and other men of science, the find may throw much light upon the question of the original home of the human race.—A paper by Lord Dillon and Mr. W. H. St. John Hope was read on the contents of an inventory of cloths of Arras and other tapestries, beds, vestments, and books for the chapel, silver vessels, &c., books, garments, arms, and armour belonging to Thomas of Woodstock, Duke of Gloucester, K.G., and seized in his castle of Pleshy, in Essex, December 13th, 21 R. II. (1397), with their values as shown in the accounts of the escheator for the counties of Essex and Herts.—Mr. J. Hilton read a paper 'On the Coronation Stone at Westminster Abbey,' giving an outline of the story attached to it as related by Holinshed in his 'Chronicles,' circa 1577, and gathered by him out of earlier Scottish legends and records, which say that the stone came from Palestine to Egypt, and was carried to Spain, Ireland, and Iona. The particulars as related gained implicit belief in Scotland, involving as they did a prophetic Latin couplet that the Scottish reign should follow the destination of the stone. The paper then recited the views of modern investigators and critics, showing that the early story is fabulous down to the time when a certain stone found its way to Dunstaffnage Castle, in Argyllshire, where for a considerable period it was used as a seat of the Scottish kings, who were crowned there. The stone was conveyed for similar use and better preservation to Scone, in Perthshire, by King Kenneth, circa 834 A.D., and it is said the prophetic verses were by his order engraven upon it. In the year 1296 Edward I., King of England, removed the stone to Westminster. The inscription is quoted in a chronicle written as early as 1389, or nearly two centuries before the birth of James VI., in whom is claimed the fulfilment of the prophecy, and since his time, and probably much earlier, sovereigns of England have been seated on it when crowned. Geological evidence shows that the stone is of Scottish origin. The paper brings together for the first time all that appears in scattered sources for or against the story, whether of fable, legend, or fact. A very curious light is thrown on the prophetic character of the Latin couplet by a tract in the British Museum Library, dated 1681, wherein the words are printed as a chronogram involving the mundane date of the birth of James VI., the first of the Scottish race to reign over England, a document hitherto unnoticed by writers on the subject of the Coronation stone. Mr. Hilton puts it on record for whatever it may be worth. It certainly is not a prediction written after the event. The paper concluded with remarks on the present condition of the Coronation chair.

ZOOLOGICAL.—June 1.—Dr. A. Günther, V.P., in the chair.—A communication was read from Dr. J. Anderson, containing a water-colour drawing of the Egyptian weasel (Mustela subpalmata), taken from living specimens which he had recently presented to the Society's menagerie. Dr. Anderson also sent some remarks on this rare Egyptian mammal, and others were made by Mr. E. C. Taylor.—A communication was read from Prof. T. W. Bridge 'On the Morphology of the Skull in the Paraguayan Lepidosiren and other Dipnoi.' The first part of this memoir treated in detail of the structure of the skull in one of the specimens of Lepidosiren collected in the region of the Paraguay river by the German traveller Dr. Bohls. In the second portion was included a revised account of the cranial structure of Ceratodus and Protopterus, and a detailed comparison of the two genera with one another and with Lepidosiren.—A paper 'On the Classification of the Thyrididæ, a Family of the Lepidoptera Phalænæ,' by Sir G. F. Hampson, was read. It contained short diagnoses of the twenty-six known genera (of which Pycnosoma and Plagiosella were described as new) of the group, and a list of the known species of each genus.—A second communication from Sir G. Hampson treated of the classification of the Chrysauginæ, a sub-family of moths of the family Pyralidæ. Like the preceding paper, it contained diagnoses of the known genera, of which seventy-six were enumerated, and a list of the known species of each genus. Of the genera the following were characterized as new: Hyalosticta, Protrichia, Prionidia, Microzancla, Sarcistis, Monoloxis, Dilaxis, Tetraschistis, and Cyclopalpia.—Dr. A. G. Butler read a paper 'On a Collection of Lepidoptera obtained in East Africa in 1894 by Mr. F. Gillett.' Fifty-seven species were enumerated, and the dates of the capture of the specimens were recorded.—Dr. C. I. Forsyth Major read a paper on the Malagasy genus of rodents Brachyuromys, and entered into the question of the mutual relation of some of the groups of the Muridæ (Hesperomyinæ, Microtinæ, Murinæ, and Spalacidæ) with each other and with the Nesomyinæ of Madagascar. The Malagasy rodentia were considered as forming a sub-family Nesomyinæ, the lowest of Muridæ, being forerunners of the American Hesperomyinæ, the Old-World Murinæ and the Microtinæ (Arvicolinæ). One of the genera from Madagascar (Brachyuromys) was stated to show close affinities to a genus of the Spalacidæ. Reasons were given for regarding the last-named family as only lowly organized Muridæ.

CHEMICAL.—June 3.—Prof. J. Dewar, President, in the chair.—The following papers were read: 'On the Thermal Phenomena attending the Change in Rotatory Power of freshly prepared Solutions of certain Carbohydrates, with some Remarks on the Cause of Multirotation,' and 'On the Thermo-Chemistry of Carbohydrate Hydrolysis,' by Messrs. H. T. Brown and S. Pickering,—'Optical Inversion of Camphor,' 'Derivatives of Camphoric Acid: II. Optically Inactive Derivatives,' and 'Racemism and Pseudo-Racemism,' by Messrs. F. S. Kipping and W. T. Pope,—'On some New Gold Salts of the Solanaceous Alkaloids,' by Mr. H. A. D. Jowett,—'Camphenol from Camphor,' by Messrs. J. E. Marsh and J. A. Gardner,—'The Oxidation of Fenchene,' by Messrs. J. A. Gardner and G. B. Cockburn,—'Rhamnazin,' by Messrs. A. G. Perkin and H. W. Martin,—and 'Apiin and Apigenin,' by Mr. A. G. Perkin.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
— Engineers, 7½.—'The Compression of Air by the Direct Action of Water,' Prof. H. W. Umney.
— Aristotelian, 8.—'The Ideal of Knowledge,' Mr. J. H. Muirhead.
— British Architects, 8.
TUES. Statistical, 5½.—'Statistics of Small-pox and Vaccination, with Special Reference to Age-Incidence, Sex-Incidence, and Sanitation,' Mr. A. Milnes.
— Zoological, 8½.—'Mammals obtained by Mr. J. Whitehead during his Recent Expedition to the Philippines, with Field-Notes by the Collector,' Mr. O. Thomas; 'Presence of Ribs in Polyodon (Spatularia) folium,' Prof. T. W. Bridge; 'Spiders of the Family Theraphosidæ (Mygalidæ) from the Ethiopian Region, contained in the Collection of the British Museum,' Mr. R. I. Pocock.
WED. Meteorological, 4½.—'The Non-Instrumental Meteorology of London, 1713-1896,' Mr. R. C. Mossman; 'Hailstorm in the South-West of London, April 27th, 1897,' Mr. C. Harding.
— Microscopical, 8.
— Society of Arts.—Conversazione.
THURS. Royal, 4½.
— Historical, 5.—'An English École des Chartes,' Prof. York Powell.
— Numismatic, 7.—Annual Meeting.
— Linnean, 8.—'Distribution of Primula elatior, Jacq.,' Mr. M. Christy; 'Acari collected by Mr. H. Fisher, of the Jackson-Harmsworth Polar Expedition,' Mr. A. D. Michael: 'Further Observations on Stipules,' Sir J. Lubbock; 'Minor Tension Lines between Plant Formations,' Prof. C. Macmillan.
— Chemical, 8.—Election of Fellows; 'The Reduction of Perthiocyanic Acid,' Messrs. F. D. Chattaway and H. P. Stevens; and six other Papers.
— Antiquaries, 8½.—'Further Discoveries at Dore Abbey, Herefordshire,' Mr. R. W. Paul; 'Discovery of Roman Remains on Mersea Island, Essex,' Mr. H. Laver. Ballots for Election of a Treasurer and Two Members of Council.

Science Gossip.

THE annual conversazione of the Royal Society will be held on Wednesday next.

MESSRS. HENRY SOTHERAN & Co. will publish this month a new work by Mr. J. G. Millais, author of 'Game Birds and Shooting Sketches,' on 'British Deer and their Horns,' which will treat the subject in a more thorough way than has ever been attempted yet, and will be illustrated with numerous plates from drawings by the author.

MESSRS. DENT & Co. have become the publishers of Natural Science. Among those who will contribute to the July number are Dr. John Murray, Prof. Ray Lankester, Dr. P. L. Sclater, and Mr. R. Lydekker.

MR. DOUGLASS, of the Lowell Observatory, has determined that Jupiter's third and largest satellite rotates on its axis in about seven days five hours, which is almost exactly the duration of its siderial revolution round the planet. It is now just one hundred years since Herschel (his paper on the subject was read before the Royal Society on June 1st, 1797) inferred from observed changes in their amounts of brightness that all the then known satellites of Jupiter rotated in that way; and more than five years previously he had come to a similar conclusion with regard to the fifth satellite of Saturn (afterwards designated Iapetus), the changes in the brightness of which had been found to be very considerable, as Cassini had noticed so early as 1705, though he hesitated to ascribe this to a rotation of the satellite. The observations of the late Mr. C. E. Burton in 1871–3 appear to prove a rotation of this kind in the case of the fourth satellite of Jupiter; and it seems now not unlikely that Herschel's conjecture that the other satellites of the solar system rotate like our moon, nearly in the same time in which they revolve round their primaries, may prove to be true.

THE well-known man of science Fritz Müller, born in 1821 in Thuringia, died on the 21st ult. in Brazil. He was brother of the late Prof. Hermann Müller, the distinguished botanist, and half-brother of Dr. W. Müller, the titular Professor of Zoology at Greifswald. Dr. F. Müller was a great friend of Darwin.

FINE ARTS

Les Missels imprimés à Venise de 1481 à 1600. Par le Duc de Rivoli. Gravures. (Paris, Rothschild.)

ONE of the "Études sur l'Art de la Gravure sur Bois à Venise," a folio abounding in curious woodcuts and larger prints on copper, numerous initials and marks of printers, designers, and engravers, this is among the most valuable of M. Rothschild's numerous ventures, but it is not likely to become the most popular. The title correctly explains the nature of the work, but it is right to add that the letterpress and its illustrations are not restricted to "les Missels imprimés" in the closest application of the phrase, but abound in examples of religious design reproduced in other modes than engraving and woodcutting; for example, the frontispiece is a good photogravure from the noblest specimen of Andrea della Robbia's peculiar art, the large altarpiece in the duomo at Arezzo representing the Crucifixion in the resplendent and beautiful colours of enamelled terra-cotta, a mode of art which was so little practised on this side of the Alps that not one untravelled Englishman in twenty has seen a specimen of it. Even in France such work was almost unknown until about twenty years since, when a small number of examples were added to the Louvre. The Crucifixion, as depicted by Fra Angelico, Simone Martini, and L. della Robbia, furnishes the subject of other large plates.

"Missels imprimés à Venise," although very numerous and full of merit, are much less known in this country than those issued during the same age from German and Dutch printing houses, to which the Italian examples bear only a general resemblance. The printers of Venice during the period in question published breviaries as well as missals, and besides these, biographies of saints in considerable numbers. The book before us is a sort of supplement to rather than a sequel to the 'Bibliographie des Livres à Figures Vénitiens, 1469–1525,' which was published by M. Rothschild in 1892. The subject, though neglected till of late, is extremely interesting, and the three hundred and fifty cuts supply the materials for a capital chapter in the history of popular religious art in North Italy during nearly a century and a quarter—art that was graceful, energetic, and, in its way, refined to a degree far surpassing anything produced in contemporaneous Germany. Above all, it was naïve and sincere, not fantastic nor extravagant in its mode and motives, after the fashion of Dürer, nor rude, clumsy, and crude as the works commonly circulating in England during the same period, most of which came from Holland, and finer than those very similar works which are more common in France than elsewhere. The devotional motives of all these designs, and generally the subjects chosen by the designers, were pretty much the same; it was in treatment that the designers of each country differed, so that, just as Italy surpassed Germany and France in painting, her pious illustrators excelled their northern rivals. A certain picturesqueness and elegance, such as we are wont to associate with the names of Zoan Andrea and the illustrious Master of the Caduceus, are recognizable in most of the illustrations to the missels, modified as their details necessarily were by the demands of the religious orders under whose auspices they were produced. The Italians excel in drawing the human figure and its draperies, as well as in the freshness, variety, and aptness of the minor incidents accompanying the designs for the Crucifixion, the Annunciation, and other subjects. Of course, no one accustomed to such things fails to expect to find crescents surmounting the towers and domes of Jerusalem which fill the backgrounds of nearly all the Crucifixions delineated in Europe at the period, but the naïve reverence of Gabriel in such cuts as that copied from a missel of 1516 is thoroughly Italian.

It is this characteristic wealth of incident and artistic grace which adds much to the technical attractions of these missels, as in the large cut of the Crucifixion by G. Battista del Porto which faces p. 30, and in a noble and broad Italian style depicts a stately and stalwart St. John at the side of the Cross. The anatomy of the central figure is learned, though not refined. The background, too, is romantic. Roughly cut, it is the work of an excellent artist belonging to a great school, the variety of whose productions evinces its resources and its great traditions. It is worth while to note for the benefit of antiquaries that several German as well as Italian names which not seldom crop up in the course of studies occur here as the authors of such and such works. They include Gregorius de Gregoriis, Nicholaus de Franckfordia (a frequent name here as well as elsewhere), L. A. Giunta, G. Arrivabene, Andreas and Jacobus Spinelli, and the so-called Joannes Gryphius. Students of printing will recognize known names in the "Table d'Imprimeurs," such as Arrivabenus, S. Bevilaqua, Giunta, P. Lichtenstein, J. B. Sessa, and J. and G. Variscus. The "Table Alphabétique Générale" is in itself a treasure of its kind not often found even in French books, and but seldom, indeed, in those which issue from English presses.

Apart from the main subject indicated in the title, we may mention some of the more important subjects of the various sections. The Duke has judiciously grouped his observations under such headings as iconographers and painters most affect, giving with each of them appropriate examples of the manner in which his missels treat it irrespective of the book as a whole. Thus, we have "St. Bernard" from a Cistercian missel, comprising, too, a figure of Satan captive to the saint, and delineated in a manner of which verily the Evil One himself might complain. Under "Calendrier" are to be found some pretty cuts appropriate to the months. Under "Christ" the events of His life are systematically grouped, and illustrations supplied from various books of Venice; but, of course, the student will find the most to his purpose under "Crucifixion"—which is replete with notes on publications of Bartholomeus de Alexandria, Octavianus Scotus (a much debated name), Sessa, Georg Breu, and G. Arrivabene—"Élévation" (of the Host), "St. Esprit," and the saints severally, under the title of each of them.

The second part consists of a monumental bibliography of editions of the missals which were published at Venice from 1481 to 1600 for the various dioceses and religious orders, and embraces an exhaustive collation of those examples which were illustrated with woodcuts, each under the name of the diocese for which it was printed; for instance, Besançon, Cracow, Würzburg, Paris, Prague, Rome (a very full list extending over a long period of time), Urgel, &c. Equally copious notes on "Missalia Ordinum" complete the work. The sources of the Duc de Rivoli's work are largely his own collection of books, the public libraries of Paris, Florence, Venice, and London, and especially the well-known catalogue of Mr. Weale and Hain's 'Repertorium Bibliographicum.' M. Rothschild has outdone himself (can more be said?) in the printing and illustrating.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Fourth Notice.)

WE have little more to say about the figure pictures in this exhibition, for but few of those we have still to notice are really satisfactory. There is plenty of feeling and some good painting in Mr. E. S. Harper's A Reverie (No. 222), a girl (whose back is towards us) seated at a piano, the keys of which her fingers hesitate to touch, because a stirring fancy has called her attention away. Her face, which is shown in profile, is finely expressive. On the other hand, the composition of the whole is awkward; the figures painted on the front of the piano intrude upon, and even break up, the tone and colour schemes of the picture, parts of which are excellent.—In The Morning Swim (626) of Mr. F. P. Wild there is some excess of paint. He depicts in modest fashion a tall damsel guiding a punt across the Thames at Marlow, while two dogs swim eagerly by her side, and a small spaniel whimpers in the boat.—In Disgrace (630), by Mr. F. D. Walenn, represents a child in blue standing against a blue curtain—but differently blue. The face is good and expressive, the design is clever, and its treatment is artistic with meritorious colouring.—Mrs. H. Rae's conception of Isabella (634) with the pot of basil is weak and lachrymose; the picture is feebly modelled and without solidity, and altogether the work does not possess vigour enough to justify its existence. In several respects Mrs. Rae is the Angelica Kauffman of our time, but Angelica painted with greater care and a stronger sense of colour, and her draperies were truer and more thoroughly studied.—Mr. S. M. Fisher's Children's Picnic (647), though a more spontaneous and natural piece of work, is somewhat pale and flat, defects which are but too obvious in the painter's delineation of sunlight upon the herbage amid which his little ones are disporting themselves. This is rather the beginning of a picture than a complete work of art, and its shortcomings are surprising, for the artist is endowed with a graceful fancy, and has produced several really pretty and modest things. We do not think it would be worth while to complete the 'Children's Picnic.'—In Minnow Fishing (661) Mr. T. A. Brown has, like Mr. Fisher, attempted to paint sunlight without recognizing the nature and pictorial conditions of his experiment. Consequently his work is a mosaic in paint of the kind Mr. La Thangue essays to produce with dirty shadows and soiled lights, such as set nature at defiance. Mr. Fisher is, at least, partially successful, and the bright and pure tones of his picture are commendable; on the other hand, a good and powerful coloration is marred by the roughness of the surface of his picture—a heavy touch and "blottiness." Altogether the graceful rusticity of the figures and their other good qualities are much impaired by the crudities of the artist's technique. The belt of grass on the side of the stream is simply offensive.—The Sea hath its Pearls (670), a damsel in white on a beach looking at a shell, by Mr. W. H. Margetson, is not the fruit of a robust or even a romantic inspiration; but, slight as it is, it is pretty, bright, and not without taste and spirit.

Roughness caused by neglect of serious and searching study, and a general lack of completeness, purity of colour and tone, do serious injury to the clever design of Mr. G. P. J. Hood's The Little Swineherd (678).—A clever sketch, made with a lighter touch and freer hand, is Mr. W. D. Almond's A Bit of Blue (734), which forms one of the throng of cabinet pictures crowded into Gallery IX.—No. 735, "He cometh not," She Said, is a modern illustration by Mr. St. G. Hare of the Laureate's famous verse. It, too, is a clever sketch and not more. It seems to us that—small or large, preposterously out of proportion to their merits, or mere miniatures as to their size and laboriousness—only pictures thoroughly complete, and no "potboilers," such as those which fill half this room, ought to find places in Burlington House.—Phyllis (739), by Mr. J. Mitchell, a girl in pink, has good eyes and an acceptable expression. Unlike Nos. 734 and 735, it is carefully, neatly, and firmly painted, but there is a great deal of exaggeration about the purplish undertone of the carnations, which are almost apoplectic.—Mr. C. T. Garland's Daydreams (746), a pretty child seated on the sward of a hillside, is bright and deftly, yet skilfully touched. The expression and attitude are quite appropriate, and the colour pleasant.—Mr. T. W. Cafe's picture of Bulwer's Nydia (796) pouring water on a vase of roses has the air, attitude, and expression which characterize blindness, and the lighting and colouring are decidedly pretty and bright.—Very pretty, too, animated and graceful in their way, are the figures of the bathers in Mr. W. Rutledge's The Wind and the Waves (836), a lightly touched sketch, which is really a study; that is, it is intended for future use, and is not, so to say, an end in itself, such as sketches per se must needs be.—Very good in its way—which is a clever and artistic way—is Miss H. Staite's A Spring Day (854), the scene being a sparkling, sunlit glade, in which a dashing damsel dressed in white is walking swiftly. It is, apart from the figure, a study of an effect in tone and colour.—Mr. D. Hardy has often painted as well as in The Favourite (855), a reminiscence of Fortuny, but a subject suggesting J. F. Lewis.—In Gallery X. we encounter Mr. E. Normand's Rivals (941), another harem scene, on a much larger scale than Mr. Hardy's; it is in every respect more pretentious, but it is by no means so good. Mr. Normand does himself injustice in so frequently assuming the mantle of the late Mr. E. Long, who was a worse draughtsman than he, and never showed a purpose or anything like sincerity in any of his pictures. The passions and purposes of Mr. Normand's ladies are as obvious as they are hackneyed, but the women themselves, though inert and dull, are not so silly as Mr. Long's were wont to be. Of the two artists, the Academician was the less masculine; yet, on the whole, we are by no means sure the Academy has done well in permitting the revival at Burlington House of his mild airs and graces in Mr. Normand's contributions. Surely a canvas no bigger than Mr. D. Hardy's was large enough for Mr. Normand's groups of women doing nothing. The exhibition abounds in enervated art of this kind. The respectable technique of the 'Rivals' is faintly academic, but it does not possess the honourable solidity of good academic work. Of course, in this case it may be truly said that the prettier it is the worse it is.—In Mr. T. B. Kennington's Maternity (947), a girl looking at a baby, the sentimentality is of the mildest possible kind ; but, hackneyed as it is, it is genuine and possesses life. — We come to a much finer thing in Mr. A. C. Tayler's Cantus Evangelii (957), a carefully studied effect of silvery light in the interior of a large church. Its stone walls, sculptures, and stained glass are harmonized with rare sympathy and that skill which, in Mr. Tayler's picture of last year, suffered what we rejoice to find was but a temporary abatement. In this interior a group of priests and singers are gathered before an altar. The chief ecclesiastic prays without so much energy as can evoke our interest in him and his emotion ; near him is a younger ecclesiastic whose feeble - mindedness is as manifest as it is depressing. However, the breadth, softness, homogeneity, and refined coloration of 'Cantus Evangelii' are charming enough to redeem the weakness of the attitudes and expressions of the figures upon which Mr. Tayler has spent so much time and pains. This weakness is a pity, for the picture is one of the works of art proper which are by no means too numerous in the Academy, and incomparably the best thing the artist has done.—At the Capstan Bars (964), by Miss M. A. Cohen, is a beach scene. The faces and gestures of the fishermen have been studied from nature, and painted with a vigour we fail to find in Mr. Normand's much less difficult production. Miss Cohen's ambition is at present greater than her skill, or perhaps her patience and devotion to art. Consequently it is not difficult to detect in her figures bad drawing such as a sound training would have made impossible, and a coarse and rough surface which a better taste would never tolerate. A defective education and lack of self-restraint are likely to tell heavily against the lady's future. However, at present her future is in her own hands.—Jubilee Rejoicings (966) is a capital work of Mr. Joseph Clark's. In its clearness, apt design, and firm touch, not less than in the artist's determination not to change his models or to depart from those types by which he has always charmed us, it is worthy of the artist. The faces are excellent, felicitous, and appropriate in very high degree, and the gestures are as various as they are natural. On the other hand, the characteristic brownness of the shadows and the somewhat too blooming complexions of the children will offend the visitor's taste.—The Whist-Players (992) of the Hon. J. Collier is apparently a group of portraits. The skins of the sitters are much too like parchment, and, what is more unfortunate, the finish of their life-size figures is strangely defective. The expressions and attitudes, on the other hand, are much above the average of such works as this, but experiments of this kind, if attempted at all, ought to have been carried out more completely, searchingly, and truly. The painter's delight in his art, to say nothing of his natural desire to sell his work, ought to have stimulated him to make this meritorious effort a complete specimen of art.—No. 1000, by Miss E. Clacy, represents a sort of passionate episode. A good deal of clever painting, warm sympathy with her subject, and care to treat her picture as a whole, have gone to the making of The Sound of the Beloved's Footsteps. The lady, who hears her beloved coming, has seized (we do not know why) a large glass bowl of gold fish, and seems to be carrying it across the room in such a manner that one fears she will spill its contents, fish and all, over the grand piano at her side. Probably Miss Clacy has rather overdone the raptures of the happy lady, but her picture, as a picture, is decidedly successful ; the attitude and action are thoroughly lifelike, the treatment of the effect and local tones is really good, and the homogeneity of the whole is much to be commended. —The Childhood (1022) of Mr. C. Sims is a bewildering allegory or apologue in paint, representing what seems to be a children's picnic in a cemetery. The design is at once confused and confusing, if that can be called a design which is a congeries of unconnected groups of figures without a common and controlling motive. There are parts of which the colouring is fortunate, but the whole is unsystematized and inchoate. One of the leading incidents, which is certainly original, represents a group of children who are solemnly interring a doll ; at least this is what Mr. Sims, incredible as it is, appears to intend.—The last of the figure pictures in oil which we need to mention is Mr. A. J. Elsley's A Tempting Slide (1046), a capital piece of humour in its way, as full of spirit, character, and freshness as it can be, and it is, moreover, a quite original delineation of the intense excitement of a pet dog, who, while in his young master's lap, sees the silhouettes of a furious cat and fearful mice set forth by means of a magic-lantern slide. The laughing child and exasperated dog are very good indeed, and the whole is carefully and skilfully painted, with a good and true effect of shadow and light transmitted from the lantern.

Of the portraits we have already praised to our readers some of the best are by painters of subject pictures. It is right to say that Mr. Orchardson's Bishop of St. Asaph (70), which, both as a picture and a portrait, pleased us much at first sight, does not by any means improve on acquaintance. Of two other portraits of his, The Provost of Oriel (355) and Mrs. Tullis (410), we may add that it is only by comparing them with No. 70 that we have reluctantly come to the conclusion that the artist is not at present a first - rate portrait painter. He may become so again, and he has, of course, produced several very excellent portraits which are likenesses as well as pictures. His failure at present is, generally, in regard to the character (insight into which makes true portraiture) of his sitters, and this is accentuated by the excessive slightness and the mannerisms of his workmanship.—Mr. Macbeth's portraits of his brother Academicians Messrs. Gilbert and Calderon (Nos. 909 and 918) are, except as crude likenesses tending to caricature, anything but admirable. Their exaggerations and the badness of their drawing condemn them. —Mr. Anderson's Maid of Kent (235) is a capital portrait of a young lady.—Of the portraits by portrait painters proper and artists who, whatever their ordinary practice may be, send nothing but portraits this year, the following are some of the most important. Miss V. Matthews (14), by Mr. P. W. Gibbs, wears a well-treated purple dress upon a grey ground. The picture is very good, broad, and harmonious in tone.—Mr. Fildes's Mrs. Donaldson (29) is not his masterpiece, being rather hard, and parts of the dress might be suppressed for the benefit of the whole. The black dress is "cut up" and the face too light in tone and colour. However, like all Mr. Fildes's portraits, it is a capital likeness and extremely vivacious. Jack, Son of E. Speed, Esq. (124), a little boy seated on the ground and looking up after a bird escaped from its cage at his feet, is manifestly founded upon Sir Joshua, and though there are some good points in the picture it is not a success. Mrs. Maple (345), an elderly lady in a white cap and black silk dress, and seated, is a capital piece of its kind, but mannered, rather tame, and thoroughly uninteresting to the public, who could have dispensed with all the similar portraits of the year. In the same category we are compelled to rank Mrs. Lever (444), another lady in black. The portrait of Sir M. Fenton (499) is hardly a success in any respect, and except in its genial expression it is unworthy of Mr. Fildes.—Lady Kelvin (31), by Mr. H. G. Riviere, is a first-rate example of the painter's skill and good taste ; still better is his excellent Master of the Temple (339), leaning sideways with hands joined on the back of his chair. Mr. Riviere's conception of his subject is clever and spirited, and, in fact, No. 339 is an admirable study of character. Wenefryde (943) is hardly less worthy of praise, although its theme is much less "paintable."—An Art Student (41), a young lady with a portfolio, by Miss L. Edmonds, is sober in feeling, while its tonality and light and shade are well managed and artistic.

Mr. J. W. Schofield's Mrs. H. Cunnick (49), in white and yellow, is really bright and spirited. — Of Sir G. Reid's Prof. Mitchell (61) we have spoken in high terms already, and therefore need now only praise its animation, freshness, carefulness, and skill. One of the best examples of character rendering in the Academy, it is likewise one of the best pieces of workmanship.—Mr. S. J. Solomon's G. Frampton, Esq. (90), is a somewhat ignoble likeness, but still a likeness, yet hardly a fine picture.—In Varying Moods (120) is a triple likeness of an elderly person in three views, very well painted and altogether soundly treated. It is by Mr. A. L. Burroughs.—Far inferior to other portraits of ladies we have seen by him is Mrs. W. Armstrong (171), by Mr. W. Osborne. — Alec Forbes (163), by Mrs. E. Forbes, a highly commendable whole-length figure of a boy, is much more acceptable than her subject picture, No. 679, A Dream Princess.—Mr. H. Herkomer, the most unequal of portrait painters, is this year below his best. His Hon. Mrs. E. Bourke (241) is an exceptionally unequal piece of work. With much bad drawing and slovenly painting, slight workmanship, and other crudities such as most self-respecting artists overcome, it is an admirable, not to say charming rendering of character, and, at the distance the painter postulates for the best view of his picture, represents the carnations wonderfully well. The Lord Harris (254), a life-size, whole-length standing figure in bright sky-blue robes, is not happy in its coloration and tonality. Besides, it lacks repose and simplicity. Of chiaroscuro it may be said to have none, but the face, which is out of keeping with all the neighbouring elements, is a first-rate likeness and finely painted. Of Mr. Herkomer's seven contributions only three are up to his ordinary, to say nothing of his higher mark. Of these the Presidential Badge (2052), a rather showy piece of goldsmithery, is, on the whole, the most worthy of his powers. The rest of his seven works had better have been kept at home.

MINOR EXHIBITIONS.

At this season London abounds in small collections of works of art formed by the less ambitious societies of painters, by the leading dealers, and by enterprising and benevolent persons anxious to improve the public taste. As the last never obtain new examples, and often borrow the same specimens over and over again, it is not necessary to notice their exhibitions, but only to announce them when opened. With the other two groups it is different, and we do our duty by mentioning—all too briefly for their merits—the best things in the galleries to which the public has at present access. First of these we place the very select body of French cabinet paintings at Mr. Obach's, 20, Cockspur Street. Here are to be seen some choice examples of Daubigny, including the grave and softly luminous Les Laveuses, a broad and finely toned vista of the painter's much-beloved Oise, near Auvers ; and a similar Banks of the Oise, where Daubigny almost surpassed himself in the wealth of his tints and the beauty of his tones. His Road at Valmondois is close by. A characteristic Isabey is The Alchemist, and his Granville Harbour and Old Calais Harbour are also here. There is a capital Troyon in the bold Normandy Cliffs, which is full of light. Corot's Le Vieux Pont de

Mantes, Morning in Italy, and, above all, the Roads des Nymphes, are admirable. The last is an exceedingly choice version of one of Corot's most poetic effects and able compositions. Environs of Arricia is as good as we expect everything to be from the hand of M. H. Harpignies when he works on a minor scale, but not in minor keys of light and colour. By the same and almost as excellent are Souvenir of the Pyrenees, Banks of the Haute Loire, and Outskirts of a Wood. The Approaching Storm, by Diaz, is one of his powerful and expressive masterpieces in small, but, personally, we prefer the telling Forest of Fontainebleau. Besides these, there are in the gallery examples of MM. C. Jacque, A. Mauve, E. Fromentin, and J. Dupré.

The Society of Miniature Painters holds its second exhibition (a great improvement upon its very attractive, if rather unequal forerunner) in the Graves Galleries, Pall Mall, and there effectually asserts its right to exist, notwithstanding photography and all its devices. Among nearly three hundred and fifty works, some of which have no business to be there, our limits allow us to note only a few. These are (in the order of the Catalogue) Miss A. G. Fletcher's Day-Dreams, a study of white; Mr. E. Tayler's A Lady in a rose-coloured dress; Miss E. E. Pyne's Dr. Nansen, a picture of energy; Gwendolen, by Miss P. Woolner; Mr. W. T. S. Barber's Gino; Mr. C. J. Hobson's Rhona; Mr. F. Brooks's Mrs. F. Brooks; By the Sea, a coast piece, by Mr. A. D. May; Mr. R. Sauber's poetic Reminiscences, a fine and solid example; Irene, a pretty work in colour and style by Miss M. B. Jones; and Mrs. E. Lyttleton, by Miss E. Maas.

In the same galleries which contain the miniatures we find a collection of "War Paintings" by two artists, which vary in fire and strength. As the pictures are mostly well known, it will serve the reader's purpose if we name only the best of them, such as Mr. R. C. Woodville's Saving the Guns at Maiwand, borrowed from the Liverpool Corporation; the same painter's Charge of the Light Brigade, 1854, and his Napoleon's Old Guard at Waterloo, the best work he has done. We care much less for his rather clayey Storming of Badajoz. Mr. G. D. Giles's Charge of the Heavy Brigade is, for a battle picture, an unusually good and well-massed design, and does not overdo the "sound and fury" which usually characterize English attempts at this kind of art.

He is an extremely fortunate lover of ancient European enamels, incrusted, bassetaille, cloisonné, champlevé, painted, or translucent, who knows a member of the Burlington Club, and obtains by his means opportunities for studying the wonderfully fine collection of nearly three hundred specimens now in Savile Row. As Mr. Higgins, in the capital digest of the history of the subject which precedes the Catalogue, truly repeats, the enameller's craft has been employed in these islands more extensively and persistently than elsewhere, and the artistic charm and rarity of many of the articles, dating as they do from early in the twelfth century to the latest and most sumptuously ornate examples of the sixteenth and early seventeenth centuries, are great. Of course, it does not invariably follow that the earlier the rarer are the relics before us, nor that the oldest, or the latest, should be historically and logically the most beautiful and interesting. We notice with fresh pleasure every time we meet them such precious specimens as Lord Crawford's Breviary Cover (1), a rare instance of German champlevé work of the twelfth century. Mr. C. Davis's flabellum is of probably a somewhat later date, but one of the rarest things in the world, if not unique. Mr. J. E. Taylor's Limoges basins of champlevé on copper are really curious, artistically speaking, but less rare. The ciborium in the form of a dove, lent by Sir J. C. Robinson, shows more distinctly than usual that Byzantine influence which, under many names and in various forms, cheers the patriotic fancies of Irish antiquaries, who take its manifestations to be national, original, and indigenous. The historic relics include Strafford's badge of the Garter; a pomander, said to have been given to Cortez by Charles V.; and the betrothal cup, by Jean Court, alleged to have been presented by Darnley to Mary, Queen of Scots. Among the most liberal contributors to this exhibition are Lords Clanricarde, Cowley, Crawford, Home, and Malcolm; the Dukes of Devonshire and Norfolk; Sir J. Evans, Sir S. Montagu, Sir H. S. Naylor-Leyland, and Sir J. C. Robinson; Messrs. Higgins, C. Davis, W. Mitchell, L. de Rothschild, J. Whitehead, and G. Salting. No such collection was ever got together before in England.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 1st and 2nd inst. the following from the Pender Collection. Pictures: K. Halswelle, Constantinople, 132*l.*; Wittenham Clumps, Day's Lock, 105*l.* Sir J. Reynolds, Portrait of Mrs. Martin, of Plymouth, 110*l.* J. M. W. Turner, Fishing Boats in a Rough Sea, grey sky, 110*l.* Engravings: At Evening Time, after B. W. Leader, by B. Debaines, 22*l.*; ditto, 21*l.* After Sir E. Landseer, by T. Landseer, Children of the Mist, 27*l.*; The Monarch of the Glen, 52*l.*; The Stag at Bay, 32*l.*; Night, and Morning (a pair), 44*l.*

The same auctioneers also sold on the 2nd inst. the following engravings from various collections: After Sir T. Lawrence, by S. Cousins, Lady Blessington, 26*l.*; Nature (the Calmady children), 21*l.*; Miss Julia Peel, 31*l.* After Meissonier, by A. Blanchard, The Chess-Players, 24*l.*; Les Bons Amis, 23*l.* Lady Louisa Manners, after J. Hoppner, by C. Turner, 60*l.* Juvenile Retirement (the Douglas children), and Children Bathing (the Hoppner children), after J. Hoppner, by W. Ward, 26*l.* Miss Cumberland, after Romney, by J. R. Smith, 54*l.* Mrs. Fitzherbert, after R. Cosway, by J. Condé, 47*l.* Lady Smyth and Children, after Sir J. Reynolds, by Bartolozzi, 59*l.* The Duchess of Devonshire, after Downman, by Bartolozzi, 22*l.* Infancy, and Fidelity, after Cosway and Gardner, by C. White (a pair), 39*l.* Morning, or the Fisherman's Departure, and Evening, or the Fisherman's Return, after Corbould, by W. Ward (a pair), 21*l.* Haymakers, and Compassionate Children, after J. Ward, by W. Ward, 30*l.* The Duke of Newcastle's Return from Shooting, after Wheatley, by Bartolozzi, 22*l.* The Return from Coursing, after Hamilton, by A. Cardon, 22*l.* The Cow-House, and the Companion, after J. Ward, by W. Ward, 24*l.* After G. Morland, The Deserter, by G. Keating (a set of four), 21*l.*; A Carrier's Stable, by W. Ward, 24*l.*; Morning, or the Benevolent Sportsman, and Evening, or the Sportsman's Return, by J. Grozer (a pair), 34*l.*; The First of September, Morning and Evening, by W. Ward (a pair), 46*l.*

The medals commemorative of British history collected by the late Mr. Hyman Montagu were dispersed by Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge between the 24th and 29th ult. Protestant Safeguard, 1526, fetched 35*l.* Battle of Nieuport, 1600, 41*l.* Maurice, Prince of Orange, on his Capture of Grave, 1602, by Bloc, unpublished, 23*l.* 15*s.* Queen Elizabeth, in commemoration of her reign, 1602, 25*l.* 10*s.* The Honourable Irish Society Badge, oval, enamelled in various colours, crowned and draped bust of King James I., 23*l.* James I., oval portrait medal, by Simon Passe, 25*l.* 10*s.*; Queen Anne, oval portrait medal, by the same, 23*l.* 10*s.*; Charles, Prince of Wales, 1616, by the same, 24*l.* 5*s.*; Maurice, Prince of Orange, 1616, by the same, 38*l.* The Synod of Dort, 1619, 35*l.*, and Earl of Essex, 1642, 37*l.* Oliver Cromwell as Captain-General of the Army of the Parliament, 1650, gold, by T. Simon, 30*l.* 10*s.* William II. of Orange and Admiral Van Tromp, 50*l.* Oliver Cromwell, on his elevation to the Protectorate, 1653, gold, by Simon, 70*l.*, and Peace between Great Britain and Holland, 1654, gold, 51*l.* Charles II., Honorary Naval Reward, 1665, by Rawlins, silver, 39*l.* Peace of Breda and Alliance of England and Holland, 1667, gold, by C. Adolfszoon, 25*l.* 10*s.* Peace of Breda, 1667, by John Roettier, gold, 39*l.* Installation of John George, Elector of Saxony, as a Knight of the Garter at Windsor, 1671, gold, 25*l.* The Siege of Groningen, 1672, silver, 39*l.* Siege of Naerden, 1673, silver, by P. Van Abeele, 51*l.* Charles II. "Royal" Medal, gold, no date, by Roettier, 40*l.*, and Landing of William of Orange at Torbay, 1688, gold, by R. Arondeaux, 26*l.* William and Mary, gold, by J. Boskam, 21*l.* 10*s.* Battle of Blenheim, 1704, gold, by Jan Boskam, 30*l.* 10*s.* Congress of Utrecht, 1712, silver, by P. Wermuth, with chronogrammatic legend, 26*l.* Battle of Culloden, 1746, gold, by Yeo, 225*l.* The total realized was 5,232*l.* 19*s.*

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold the greater portion of the collection of Greek coins of Mr. R. Hobart Smith, of New York, the 127 lots realizing 464*l.* A Syracuse decadrachm, B.C. 405–345, by Evænetus, head of Persephone to left, fetched 29*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

TO-DAY (Saturday) is appointed for a private view in the Goupil Galleries of paintings by Mr. J. Buxton Knight.—At the same time there will be a private view in the Fine-Art Society's Gallery of works representing Rome, the Tiber Valley, by Signor O. Carlandini, and, by Mr. F. A. Rawlence, the Riviera. All these collections will be opened to the public on Monday.—Mr. A. Legros, who has been commissioned to design the decorations of the Bank of England during the Jubilee celebrations, exhibits his drawings for these works at 40, North End Road, S.W.

THE 'Church of St. Mary the Virgin, Oxford,' by Mr. T. G. Jackson, R.A., is now passing through the Clarendon Press, and will be ready for publication to subscribers almost immediately. Mr. Jackson has written an exhaustive history of this most interesting of all churches, and supplied numerous full-page plates and cuts. The new edition of the Rev. W. K. R. Bedford's 'Blazon of Episcopacy,' which for nearly forty years has been the standard book of reference on the subject, is also almost ready for publication by the Clarendon Press to subscribers. Upwards of a thousand engravings of bishops' arms will be included, and nearly twice as many will be described in the enlarged volume.

THE Council of the Society of Antiquaries, in accordance with its royal charter of incorporation, proceeded on the 3rd inst. to elect a President in the room of the late Sir A. Wollaston Franks. The choice of the Council fell upon Harold Arthur, Viscount Dillon, who has several times been Vice-President, and for some years filled the office of Secretary. Lord Dillon has for several years been President of the Royal Archæological Institute, and is well known as a high authority on ancient arms and armour. He is Curator of the Tower Armories, and is interested generally in antiquarian pursuits.

AT the last Council meeting of the British Archæological Association for the session 1896-7 Dr. W. de Gray Birch was presented with an address and testimonial from some of the members and friends on his retirement from the post of Honorary Secretary and editor of the Journal of the Association.

ON Monday next Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge will offer for sale the complete series of original water-colour drawings to Charles Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop' and 'Barnaby Rudge' by Hablot K. Browne ("Phiz"), sixty-one drawings in the former case and sixty in the latter. An effort will be made to keep the two series of drawings intact by offering each en bloc, and it seems a thousand pities that they should be offered in any other way. Once split up, such collections are never again likely to be completed. The same sale will include pencil and other sketches by John Leech, Charles Keene, George Augustus Sala, Cruikshank, Rowlandson, and R. Caldecott, and a very clever and humorous pen-and-ink sketch by Thackeray of H.M. the Queen and the Prince Consort walking arm-in-arm followed by all the members of the royal family, with Windsor Castle in the background. The heads of all the figures are cut from old penny red stamps, and altered to suit the likenesses required.

The obsequies of Français were celebrated on the 30th ult. in the church of Notre Dame des Champs, Paris, and included the delivery of speeches by some of the most eminent officials and distinguished painters. The final interment of the famous and venerable landscape painter will be at Plombières, where, as we said last week, he was born. An accident caused us to state that Français succeeded "R. Henry" in the Académie. It should have been Robert-Fleury.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Queen's Hall.—Philharmonic Concerts.
Royal Italian Opera, Covent Garden.—'La Traviata'; 'Roméo et Juliette.'
St. James's Hall.—MM. Fauré and Wolff's Concert. M. Gabrilowitsch's Pianoforte Recital.
Royal College of Music.—Brahms "In Memoriam" Concert.

The fifth Philharmonic Concert on Thursday last week could scarcely have been more successful in any sense than it was. New works by Dr. Hubert Parry are always awaited with interest, and his reputation will certainly not suffer by his Theme and Variations for Orchestra in E minor, which obtained a very favourable reception, and will probably be heard again, if not during the present season, at any rate in the autumn. Dr. Parry is of opinion that the variation form is not yet exhausted, and he thinks the sonata affords an opportunity for further developments by the adoption of varying tonalities, in this way avoiding monotony. So we have eleven variations in E minor, six in C major, four in A minor, and finally four in E major, all proceeding without break to the end. The subject itself is only six bars in length, common time, so that it differs from the chaconne and the passacaglia, which were in triple measure. But there is equally no, or very little, resemblance to the symphonic or sonata form, as some have asserted, and, in fact, the variations are quite independent in structure, and not only extremely clever, but fresh and thoroughly English in character. They were conducted by the composer, who was three times recalled to the platform. Señor Sarasate played Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto with his customary brilliancy, and Madame Sigrid Arnoldson sang airs by Gounod and D'Alibieff with perfect taste. Spohr's symphony 'Die Weihe der Töne' was welcome, as it had been permitted to slumber for some time. It is not exactly a great work, but it contains much beautiful music, and it was, of course, well rendered by the Philharmonic orchestra under Sir Alexander Mackenzie.

The new management of Covent Garden is not meeting with unqualified good fortune. It would seem that Verdi's once popular opera 'La Traviata' is no longer attractive, as there was a very poor house on Friday last week, although the cast was fairly good. Madame Saville sang the music of Violetta with perfect taste and looked the part well. In the earlier and lighter scenes she also acted well, but showed some want of emotional power when the plot took a tragic turn. As the contemptible Germonts, father and son, M. Salignac and Signor Ancona did the best they could, but the once favourite numbers fell flat.

On Whit Monday there was a great disappointment, for once more M. Jean de Reszké was unable to sing, and 'Tristan und Isolde' could therefore not be given. Gounod's 'Roméo et Juliette' was substituted. M. Bonnard as the hero and Miss Marie Engle as the heroine were both efficient, though they could not efface recollections of some of their predecessors in the characters. There is nothing more that we can record concerning the opera at present.

The chamber concert which took place under the auspices of MM. Gabriel Fauré and Johannes Wolff on Saturday afternoon last was, generally speaking, successful, though too much of the programme was devoted to M. Fauré's music, and the prevalent impression was that more variety would have been agreeable. The concerted works were the French composer's poetically conceived and musicianly Pianoforte Quartet in C minor, and the equally piquant Sonata in A for pianoforte and violin. In the first-named work the concert-givers were associated with Mr. Gibson and Mr. Paul Ludwig. Madame Blanche Marchesi, M. Slivinski, and Mr. Theodore Byard also took part in the concert.

Pianists have a curious fondness for the derangements of Bach's organ preludes and fugues by Liszt and Tausig, and M. Gabrilowitsch commenced his first recital on Tuesday afternoon with the distorted version of the great work in A minor from the second book of the Leipzig edition. He played it without any exaggeration in emphasis, but he was far more acceptable in Beethoven's Sonata in E flat, 'Les Adieux,' &c., which he played with perfect purity in execution and all needful expression. Curiously enough, after this a falling off was noticeable. Chopin's Nocturne in D flat was rendered rather coldly, and his version of the Ballade in A flat. Op. 47, was certainly not note perfect. Nor could M. Gabrilowitsch be wholly commended for his interpretation of Schumann's 'Faschingsschwank aus Wien.' The third movement was taken so fast that the music could not be easily followed, and the finale was not by any means clearly played. The youthful Russian pianist was at his best in a group of miscellaneous pieces which concluded the programme, and two trifles from his own pen were distinctly pleasing.

The Brahms "In Memoriam" Concert at the Royal College of Music on Tuesday evening did much credit to all concerned, although the programme reflected the master in a very severe light. The items for orchestra alone were the 'Tragic' Overture and the Symphony in C minor, No. 1, which were astonishingly well played, mainly by students of the College, under the direction of Prof. Villiers Stanford. The very fine Pianoforte Concerto in B flat was an arduous task for Miss Maud Branwell, but she accomplished it without the slightest approach to a disaster, and Miss Muriel Foster sang the solo part carefully in the Rhapsodie for alto solo and male chorus. The magnificent 'Schicksalslied,' or 'Song of Destiny,' completed a praiseworthy performance.

Musical Gossip.

The directors of the Royal Carl Rosa Opera Company are making several changes in the company for next season, and amongst the new artists who have been engaged is Mr. Barron Borthald, a tenor who has been singing with the leading opera companies in the United States during the past few years, and has made a high reputation there. He has been secured by the directors for three years. In view of the company's season in London at the Opera-house, Covent Garden, in October next, and their performances in Edinburgh and Glasgow at the same time, artists are being secured for the period of the double season — Madame Duma, Miss Olitzka, and Madame Agnes Janson having already been engaged. The new provincial season will open on the 16th of August at Liverpool. Among the novelties to be produced will be the late Ambroise Thomas's opera 'La Songe d'une Nuit d'Été.' All the charming music of this opera will be retained, but the book has been entirely rewritten by Mr. W. Beattie Kingston. The opera in its English guise will be called 'The Poet's Dream.'

Herr Fritz Masbach's pianoforte recital took place at the Queen's Hall on Thursday afternoon last week, and all that can be said is that the talented executant was announced to play Beethoven's Sonata in E, Op. 109, Schumann's 'Carnaval,' and various minor pieces by Schubert, Chopin, and Godard.

Miss Katie Goodson's pianoforte recital in St. James's Hall on Friday afternoon last week showed conclusively that the young aspirant is already no mean executant, for she rendered with much vigour and intelligence Schumann's 'Papillons,' Beethoven's Sonata in C minor, Op. 111, Chopin's in B minor, and various smaller pieces.

A series of promenade concerts was commenced at the Earl's Court Victorian Exhibition last Saturday evening. The colossal Empress Theatre is certainly not first rate in its acoustic properties; and although Mr. Henry Wood has a fine orchestra of a hundred performers under his command, the principal items in the programme—including Grieg's 'Peer Gynt' Suite, No. 1, the three dances from Mr. Edward German's incidental music to 'Henry VIII.,' the Prelude to the Third Act of 'Lohengrin,' and various pieces by Liszt, Berlioz, Mackenzie, and Dvoràk—sounded rather ineffective. Mr. Arthur W. Payne did the utmost he could with De Beriot's Violin Concerto in D, which is not saying very much, for the work is utterly without inspiration. Miss Lucile Hill and Mr. W. A. Peterkin were successful as the vocalists.

The concert given by Madame Melba, who for some inexplicable reason is not engaged at Covent Garden this season, passed off very well at the Queen's Hall on Wednesday afternoon, and, though nothing that was done in a miscellaneous programme calls for serious criticism, it should be said that the Australian prima donna was in beautiful voice, and that she received able assistance from Miss Clara Butt, Mr. Ben Davies, Mr. Kennerley Rumford, and M. Henry Mariotti, the last-named artist proving himself an agreeable violoncellist. A competent orchestra was conducted by Signor Arditi and Mr. Landon Ronald.

THE Fitzner Viennese Quartet, who gave their first concert in London in the small Queen's Hall, also on Wednesday afternoon, won a favourable verdict in works by Mozart, Beethoven, and Schumann, being, perhaps, most acceptable in the Quartet in D by the Salzburg master.

A CONSIDERABLE number of excellent concerts cannot receive the attention which they would command at a period of less feverish musical activity.

WE hear that as an appropriate accompaniment of the International Archæological Congress which is to be held next month at Malines, a concert will take place, consisting of older musical pieces, chiefly dating from the sixteenth century. Among these there will be several compositions by Philippe de Monte, presumably born at that town about 1521, and celebrated by Elizabeth Weston in a Latin poem. He was, among others, the author of a large number of madrigals, and held the post of Kapellmeister at Vienna in 1568 under the Emperor Maximilian II.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

MON.	Handel Festival, 'The Messiah,' 2, Crystal Palace
—	Mr Carl Armbruster's Lecture Recital on 'The Nibelung's Ring,' 3, King's College
—	Miss Marie Tempest and Mr. Norman Salmond's Concert, 3, St James's Hall
—	Miss Dorothy Magg's Pianoforte Recital, 3.30 Portman Rooms
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 7.45, 'Tristan und Isolde.'
—	Miss Gertrude Jackson's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Richter Concert, 8.30, St James's Hall
TUES.	M. Paderewski's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Miss Lucy Stone's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Le Nozze di Figaro.'
WED.	Handel Festival Selection, 2, Crystal Palace
—	Miss Cissie Loftus's Matinée Musicale, in Aid of a Catholic Charity, 3, St James's Hall
—	Madame Blanche Marchesi's Vocal Recital, 3, St James's Hall
—	Miss Edith Greenop's Pianoforte Recital, 3.30, Salle Erard.
—	Royal College of Music Concert, 7.45
—	Mr John Thomas's Welsh Choir Concert, 8, St James's Hall.
—	Miss Alice Glyn's Concert, 8, Steinway Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden
THURS	Fitzner Quartet Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	M. Gabrilowitsch's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Herr Georg Schneevoigt's Violoncello Recital, 3.30, Salle Erard
—	Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. L. Cottell's Indian Famine Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden
FRI.	Handel Festival, 'Israel in Egypt,' 2, Crystal Palace.
—	Messrs Pecskai and Lebell's Violin and Violoncello Recital, 3.30, Salle Erard
—	Herr Kruse's Orchestral Concert, 8, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
SAT.	Sarasate Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Diamond Jubilee Festival Concert, 3, Albert Hall.
—	Church Sunday School Choir Commemoration Festival, Crystal Palace.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

HAYMARKET.—'A Marriage of Convenience,' a Version of Alexandre Dumas's Comedy in Four Acts, 'Un Mariage sous Louis XV.,' by Sydney Grundy.

EXCELLENT as is the result obtained in 'A Marriage of Convenience,' the new and not too happily named translation of 'Un Mariage sous Louis XV.,' it has been secured with a very moderate expenditure of Mr. Grundy's conspicuous abilities. Leaving the scene where the French dramatist placed it, in Paris in the middle of the last century, and accepting the characters and situations which he found to his hand, Mr. Grundy has had the good sense and prudence to meddle the least possible with the dialogue of the original. Something he has done. He has emphasized and underlined the witticisms and impertinences with which 'Un Mariage sous Louis XV.' is charged, and he has, with a view to rendering rôles acceptable to those in authority, transferred a few telling speeches from one character to another. Pardonable enough are both proceedings. The first duty of a dramatist is to get his piece produced, the second is to commend it to his public. The former will not readily be accomplished by a writer who shows himself intractable to the manager; and the latter is hopeless in the case of a man who persists in writing over the heads of his audience. It is to be feared that there is some truth in the assertion that an English public is less quick in accepting a hint or a suggestion than a French public. Mr. Grundy at least, like Iago, > —— for mere suspicion in that kind

> Will do as if for surety.

He has accordingly made all things in the shape of innuendoes as plain as pikestaves. Artistically this is to be deplored; practically it is pardonable and possibly expedient. When, which is rarely, he goes beyond this point, Mr. Grundy is wrong. The last step in winning the love of a woman with whom he has contracted a marriage purely of interest is taken by the Comte de Candale when he risks his life in a duel with a man who has treated her with levity. Asked by his uncle the commander whether he has given his fier-à-bras a coup d'épée, he replies: "Ma foi, oui, mon oncle, au beau travers du corps. Je n'avais pas le temps de choisir la place; j'étais pressé." Mr. Grundy's hero, when asked the same question by his wife, says flippantly, "A mere scratch." This is at once modern and unworthy. It deprives the action of dignity and of colour, and it takes from the public a significant revelation how completely the conquest of this paulopost regency hero has been effected by his wife, and in what haste he is to join a woman, his marriage with whom was on the point of being annulled. Mr. Grundy may regard as trivial this and similar departures from the original. Such as they are, however, their influence is evil.

This grumble over, we may congratulate Mr. Grundy and the Haymarket management upon having revived a masterpiece which, so far as England is concerned, has long slept, and provided the London public with an artistic and an exhilarating entertainment. Though a flimsier piece than 'Mademoiselle de Belle-Isle,' which it followed and with which it is naturally associated, 'Un Mariage sous Louis XV.' is more rapid in action and not less sympathetic. Both pieces are necessarily artificial—as artificial as the life which survives to us in the tales of Voisenon and Crébillon fils and the pictures of Moreau le jeune. It is a pleasant life, however, to contemplate upon the stage, and it demands for its due illustration a class of acting we cannot afford to lose. The performance, on the whole, was better than we dared to expect. Women are more facile and adaptable than men, and Miss Emery and Miss Adrienne Dairolles were seen to advantage. Miss Dairolles was an ideal soubrette, though perhaps rather Lisette of 'Les Jeux de l'Amour et du Hasard' than the Marton of 'Un Mariage sous Louis XV.' Miss Emery mean time looked divine in her powder as the Countess, and played in a spirit of high and refined comedy. There was an occasional whinnying noise—we can find no other word for it—the significance of which we did not understand. This detracted but slightly from a beautiful piece of acting. Mr. Terriss looked superb as the Count, and played in the main with quietude and distinction. One or two bursts—as when he drew his sword on his uncle—were misjudged, and told of Adelphi experiences and tuition. Mr. Cyril Maude's Chevalier was not a success. It was too comic. Valclos is after all a brave and courtly gentleman. To present him as a species of Osric in 'Hamlet' detracts from the dignity of the action. Mr. Maude's conspicuous talents are better seen in characters of a more pronounced type

Dramatic Gossip.

'SETTLED OUT OF COURT,' a four-act play by Miss Estelle Burney, produced at the Globe on the afternoon of Thursday in last week, is a grim and uncomfortable study of feminine madness. A wife who has betrayed her husband and married her lover finds herself haunted by an invisible spectre of the man she has wronged, and kills her second husband while he is keeping an assignation with another woman. In the character of the hero Miss Burney seems to have essayed the portrait of a nineteenth-century Don Juan. Miss Janette Steer played the heroine in melodramatic style. Miss Granville, Mr. Lewis Waller, Mr. Fulton, and Mr. Sydney Brough were seen to fair advantage in other parts.

'THE COUNTY FAIR,' by Mr. Charles Barnard, which, after delighting the American public for seven years, has by way of the Brixton Theatre reached the Princess's, is a highly charged picture of New England life. The chief feature in it is a presentation by Mr. Neil Burgess of a demure and benevolent spinster. In its way this is clever, and it is as little vulgar as anything of the kind can easily be. Among the attractions of the piece for the unsophisticated public to which it appeals are what is now well known as "a variety show" and a presentation of a horse-race in which mechanical arrangements are used with a curious effect.

ON Monday 'Trilby' was substituted at Her Majesty's for 'The Seats of the Mighty,' Mr. Tree reappearing as Svengali, and Miss Dorothy Baird as Trilby. It is revived for a few days only, however, and is this evening replaced by 'The Red Lamp' and 'The Ballad-Monger.' In the piece last named Miss Baird will play Loyse.

ON Thursday Mr. John Hare revived at the Court Theatre Robertson's 'Caste,' repeating himself his fine performance of Eccles. The cast was the same in most respects as that with which the piece was given last year at the Lyceum and during the autumn season in America.

ON Thursday afternoon for a benefit Mr. Charles Wyndham appeared at the Criterion as David Garrick.

AFTER being prolonged for a week, the series of Shakspearean representations at the Olympic under Mr. Ben Greet comes this evening to a close.

ON the arrival of Madame Bernhardt at the Adelphi the American drama 'Secret Service,' which has hit the public taste, will be transferred on the 14th inst. to the Comedy Theatre.

THE only novelties promised by Madame Bernhardt during her occupation of the Adelphi are the altered version of 'Lorenzaccio,' in which she makes her first appearance, and M. Sardou's 'Spiritisme.' She will also be seen, according to present arrangements, in 'Magda,' 'La Tosca,' 'L'Étrangère,' and 'La Dame aux Camélias.'

IN the crowd of theatrical entertainments which the season has witnessed the interesting representations given at the Royalty by Mlle. Jane May have been lost. Mlle. May's season closes this evening. During the first half of the week she was seen in 'Si jamais je te pince' and 'En Bonne Fortune,' and during the second in 'Pauvre Petit.'

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—M. A. L.—G. J.—G. A. B. D.—received.

R. Ll. P. Ll.—We do not reply to such questions.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

CLARENDON PRESS PUBLICATIONS.

Vol. III. D and E. READY JULY 1.

Also DOOM—DZIGGETAI: being a Double Section. Edited by Dr. MURRAY (completing Vol. III.). 5*s.*

A NEW ENGLISH DICTIONARY on HISTORICAL PRINCIPLES: founded mainly on the Materials collected by the Philological Society. Imperial 4to.

			£. s. d.
Vol. I.	A, B	Edited by Dr. MURRAY ... ... Half-morocco	2 12 6
Vol. II.	C	Edited by Dr. MURRAY ... ... Half-morocco	2 12 6
Vol. III.	D, E.	Edited by Dr. MURRAY and HENRY BRADLEY. To be published July 1 ... ... Half-morocco	2 12 6
Vol. IV.	F, G, H.	Edited by Dr. MURRAY and HENRY BRADLEY. Five Sections of F already published.

TIMES.—"THE CLASSICAL EDITION OF BUTLER."

NEW POPULAR EDITION OF THE WORKS.

Edited by the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

The WORKS of JOSEPH BUTLER, D.C.L.,

sometime Lord Bishop of Durham. Divided into Sections, with Sectional Headings, an Index to each Volume, and some Occasional Notes; also Prefatory Matter.

Vol. I. ANALOGY, &c. Vol. II. SERMONS, &c.

Vol. III. SUBSIDIARY STUDIES.

Demy 8vo. Vols. I. and II. 28*s.* Vol. III. 10*s.* 6*d.* | Crown 8vo. Vols. I. and II. 10*s.* 6*d.* Vol. III. 4*s.* 6*d.*

ATHENÆUM.—"By philosophical as well as theological students Mr. Gladstone will be sincerely thanked for this splendid edition of Bishop Butler's works."

JUST PUBLISHED, in 2 vols. medium 8vo. half-roan, 28*s.*

 Uniform with Dr. BIRKBECK HILL'S Editions of BOSWELL'S LIFE of JOHNSON' and 'LETTERS of SAMUEL JOHNSON.'

JOHNSONIAN MISCELLANIES. Arranged and

Edited by GEORGE BIRKBECK HILL, D.C.L. LL.D., Honorary Fellow of Pembroke College, Oxford.

 This Work includes all the Writings generally entitled "Johnsoniana," most of which have never yet been edited with an adequate Commentary.

OXFORD PRELIMINARY LOCAL EXAMINATIONS, 1898.

NOW READY, extra fcap. 8vo. stiff covers, 2*s.*

SCOTT.—The TALISMAN. Edited, with Introduction, Notes, and Glossary, by the Rev. HEREFORD B. GEORGE, M.A., Fellow of New College.

PART VIII. NOW READY, price 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

HISTORICAL ATLAS of MODERN EUROPE, from the Decline of the Roman Empire. Comprising also Maps of Parts of Asia and of the New World connected with European History. Edited by R. L. POOLE, M.A. Imperial 4to.

PART VIII., containing

Map 34.—Germany under the Saxon and Salian Dynasties. By the EDITOR.

Map 56.—France during the Hundred Years' War. By JAMES TAIT, M.A.

Map 62.—The Spanish Kingdoms in the Sixteenth Century. By the late ULICK R. BURKE, M.A.

Parts I.–VII. already published, 3*s.* 6*d.* net, each.

SCOTSMAN.—"This atlas has already established its reputation as the most generally satisfactory which a modern English student can consult."

NOW READY, pp. 171–iv, crown 8vo. stiff covers, 3*s.* 6*d.*

SELECTA ex ORGANO ARISTOTELEO

CAPITULA. In Vsvm Scholarvm Academicarvm.

Small 4to. cloth, 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

A STUDENT'S DICTIONARY of ANGLO-SAXON. By HENRY SWEET, M.A.

Brevity and conciseness have been aimed at throughout. The meanings are given in plain modern English. References have been omitted, irregular forms are noticed very briefly, and cognate words are given only in Old English itself.

ATHENÆUM.—"By far the most trustworthy of the language that has yet been published."

Demy 8vo. paper covers, 1*s.*

REVISED INDEX to VON RANKE'S HISTORY of ENGLAND, principally in the SEVENTH CENTURY. (The History itself is in 6 vols. 8vo. price 3*l.* 3*s.*)

SUBSCRIPTION LISTS CLOSE ALMOST IMMEDIATELY.

IMMEDIATELY, in demy 4to. on Hand-made Paper, price to Subscribers before publication 25*s.* net.

(The volume will eventually be published at 36*s.* net.)

The CHURCH of ST. MARY the VIRGIN, OXFORD. By T. G. JACKSON, R.A., Architect, sometime Fellow and now Honorary Fellow of Wadham College, Author of 'Dalmatia, the Quarnero, and Istria,' 'Wadham College, Oxford: its Foundation, Architecture, and History,' &c. With 19 Full-Page Illustrations and numerous Cuts in the Text.

IMMEDIATELY, SECOND EDITION, GREATLY ENLARGED.

Price to Subscribers, 1*l.* 1*s.* net cash.

The BLAZON of EPISCOPACY. By the Rev. W. K. R. BEDFORD, M.A.

'The BLAZON of EPISCOPACY,' a Catalogue of the Arms borne by or ascribed to Individual Bishops of the Sees of England and Wales from the Earliest Period of Armorial History, was originally published in 1858, and has remained ever since a standard book of reference on this important subject.

The letterpress will extend to about 300 pages in small 4to., and there will be also 70 Pages of Plates.

The number of Arms engraved will exceed 1,000, while the number described will amount to nearly twice as many.

The price of the book will be raised on publication.

Demy 8vo. cloth, Vol. I. 12*s.* 6*d.*

BURNET'S HISTORY of MY OWN TIME: the Reign of Charles II. A New Edition based on that of M. J. ROUTH, D.D., and Edited by OSMUND AIRY, M.A.

TIMES.—"All serious students will commend the laudable enterprise of the Clarendon Press in issuing a new edition of this famous work, and in securing the services of so competent an editor as Mr. Airy."

2 vols. crown 8vo. cloth, pp. lxx–876, 18*s.*

BRITISH MORALISTS: being Selections from Writers principally of the Eighteenth Century. Edited, with an Introduction and Analytical Index, by L. A. SELBY-BIGGE, M.A., formerly Fellow and Lecturer of University College, Oxford.

SCOTSMAN.—"A reader interested in the ethical thought of this country in the last century could find few books, if any, by which he could be better informed."

ATHENÆUM.—"A most useful collection of extracts.....The introduction contains interesting and judicious remarks."

ANECDOTA OXONIENSIA.

IV. MEDIÆVAL AND MODERN SERIES.

1. SINONOMA BARTHOLOMEI. Edited by J. L. G. MOWAT, M.A. 3*s.* 6*d.*
2. ALPHITA. Edited by J. L. G. Mowat, M.A. 12*s.* 6*d.*
3. The SALTAIR NA RANN. Edited from a MS. in the Bodleian Library by WHITLEY STOKES, D.C.L. 7*s.* 6*d.*
4. The CATH FINNTRAGA; or, Battle of Ventry. Edited by KUNO MEYER, Ph.D. M.A. 6*s.*
5. LIVES of SAINTS, from the Book of Lismore. Edited, with Translation, by WHITLEY STOKES, D.C.L. 1*l.* 11*s.* 6*d.*
6. The ELUCIDARIUM and other TRACTS in WELSH, from Llyvyr Agkyr Llandewivrevi, A.D. 1346. Edited by J. MORRIS JONES, M.A., and JOHN RHYS, M.A. 21*s.*
7. The CRAWFORD COLLECTION of EARLY CHARTERS and DOCUMENTS, now in the Bodleian Library. Edited by A. S. NAPIER and W. H. STEVENSON. 10*s.* 6*d.*, or in cloth, 12*s.*
8. HIBERNICA MINORA. Being a Fragment of an Old Irish Treatise on the Psalter. With Translation, Notes, and Glossary. Edited by KUNO MEYER. 7*s.* 6*d.*
10. The EARLIEST TRANSLATION of the OLD TESTAMENT into the BASQUE LANGUAGE (a Fragment). Edited, with Facsimile, by LLEWELYN THOMAS, M.A. 15*s.* 6*d.*

FULL CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUES WILL BE SENT POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Clarendon Press Warehouse, Amen Corner, E.C.

BRADSHAW'S RAILWAY GUIDES AND HANDBOOKS

PUBLISHED BY

W. J. ADAMS & SONS, 59, FLEET-STREET, E.C.

Manchester: HENRY BLACKLOCK & CO., Editorial Department, ALBERT-SQUARE.

MONTHLY.

BRADSHAW'S GENERAL RAILWAY and STEAM NAVIGATION GUIDE for GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND. With Railway Travelling Map. Monthly, price 6*d.*; by post, 10½*d.*

BRADSHAW'S CONTINENTAL GUIDE. Price 2s. with Map of the Continent; by post, 2s. 4d.

BRADSHAW'S SPECIAL CONTINENTAL RAILWAY GUIDE for the whole of EUROPE, including Turkey, Algeria. With Maps and Plans. Price 3*s.* 6*d.* cloth; by post, 4*s.* 1*d.*

ANNUALLY.

BRADSHAW'S PARIS and ENVIRONS. Cloth, 2s. 6d.; stiff wrapper, 1s. 6d. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK of BELGIUM and the RHINE. Cloth, 5s. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to FRANCE. Cloth, 5s. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to GERMANY. Cloth, 5s. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to ITALY, including ROME. Cloth, 7s. 6d. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to SPAIN. By Dr. Charnock, F.S.A. Cloth, 7s. 6d. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to BRITTANY, with Maps. Cloth, 3s. 6d. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to SWITZERLAND. Cloth, 3s. 6d. post free.

BRADSHAW'S HANDBOOK to TYROL. Cloth, 2s. 6d. post free.

BRADSHAW'S GUIDE through NORMANDY and the CHANNEL ISLANDS, with Maps. Price 1*s.* 6*d.* stiff wrapper, post free.

BRADSHAW'S CONTINENTAL PHRASE BOOKS (handy and convenient for the pocket), in English, French, German, Italian, and Spanish. Bound in cloth, 1*s.* each, post free.

PASSPORTS.

W. J. ADAMS & SONS,

BRADSHAW'S GUIDE OFFICE, 59, FLEET-STREET, E.C.

Travellers to any part of the world who desire to avoid trouble may obtain these through the above well-known Agency. The cost of Passport is 2*s.*; fee, 1*s.* 6*d.* Visas, 1*s.*, and Consulate charges in addition. Passport Cases from 1*s.* 6*d.*

Although not absolutely necessary in some parts of Europe, it is advisable to have a Passport, and beyond being a ready means of recognition, it is very useful in obtaining admission to Museums, Picture Galleries, &c., closed to the general public, or for obtaining letters addressed "Post Restante."

Passports and Visas are absolutely required in Turkey and Russia. Intending travellers are, therefore, earnestly requested not to start until they have provided themselves with the same.

As the rules of the various Powers are continually changing with respect to Visas, &c., it is advisable for holders of old Passports to write before starting to see if anything is required.

Foreign Office Passports cannot be granted to persons already abroad.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24s.

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"A fascinating page of literary history."
Illustrated London News.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

W. C. BENNETT'S POEMS.

The GOLDEN LIBRARY.—Square 16mo. cloth, 2s.

CONTRIBUTIONS to a BALLAD HISTORY of ENGLAND.

Athenæum.—"These ballads are spirited and stirring; such are 'The Fall of Harald Hardrada,' 'Old Benbow,' 'Marston Moor,' and 'Corporal John,' the soldier's name for the famous Duke of Marlborough, which is a specially good ballad. 'Queen Eleanor's Vengeance' is a vividly told story. Coming to more modern times, 'The Deeds of Wellington,' 'Inkermann,' and 'Balaklava' are excellently well said and sung. As a book of ballads, interesting to all who have British blood in their veins, Dr. Bennett's contribution will be welcome. Dr. Bennett's ballads will leave a strong impression on the memory of those who read them."

SONGS for SAILORS.

Morning Post.—"Spirited, melodious, and vigorously graphic."
Daily News.—"Very spirited."
Pall Mall Gazette.—"Really admirable."
Morning Advertiser.—"Sure of a wide popularity."
John Bull.—"Very successful."
Metropolitan.—"Instinct with patriotic fire."
Illustrated London News.—"Right well done."
News of the World.—"There is real poetry in these songs."
Mirror.—"With admirable felicity he embodies national sentiments and emotions which stir the hearts of the people."
Echo.—"These songs are literally written for sailors, and they are precisely the kind of songs that sailors most enjoy."
Nonconformist.—"These songs bear a true literary mark, and give out the genuine ring."

London: Chatto & Windus, 110 and 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

MR. McCARTHY'S HISTORY of our own TIMES from 1880.
TWO LATIN CLASSICS in ENGLISH VERSE.
A FRENCH WRITER on JOAN of ARC.
HISTORY of MORAY and NAIRN.
NEW NOVELS—Mrs. Crichton's Creditor; Old Corcoran's Money; Only a Flirt; Ripple and Flood; Blight; The Lady Grange; A Princess of Islam; Pilgrims of the Might; The Winds of March; A Full Confession; Le Double Joug.
The LITERATURE of IRISH SPORT.
RECENT VERSE
ECONOMIC LITERATURE.
STORIES of ADVENTURE.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
LORD LYTTON'S 'HAROLD'; An ALLEGED ERROR of VENERABLE BEDE'S; GIBBON'S LIBRARY; DEFOE the REBEL; The DATE of MINUCIUS FELIX.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Dr. James Croll; Annuals; Zoological Literature; A Singing Crocodile; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—Venus and Apollo; English and Welsh Cathedrals; The Royal Academy; M. Français; Ancient Alexandria; The Pender Sale; Gossip.
MUSIC—Karl von Dittersdorf; The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Elizabethan Drama; Library Table; Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM for May 29 contains Articles on

SIR EVELYN WOOD'S ACHIEVEMENTS of CAVALRY.
A BOOK on SOCIAL LIFE in the VICTORIAN AGE.
SCOTTISH POETRY of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.
A BOOK on BOOK COLLECTING and STORING.
A DUTCH ACCOUNT of the LOMBOCK EXPEDITION.
NEW NOVELS—Mr. Peters; A Long Probation; Carlton Priors; Adoptée.
JAMES'S PHILOSOPHICAL ESSAYS.
SHORT STORIES.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
The 'DICTIONARY of NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY'; SALE of the PHILLIPPS MSS.; TENNYSON BIBLIOGRAPHY.

ALSO—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—The Dawn of Modern Geography; The Royal Society's Projected Catalogue; Mythic Singing Crocodiles; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—Foreign Bookbinding; Library Table; The Salons at Paris; Sir A. W. Franks, P.S.A.; The Silchester Excavations; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; The Feis Ceoil; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; Library Table; Gossip.
MISCELLANEA.

THE ATHENÆUM, EVERY SATURDAY,
PRICE THREEPENCE, OF
JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

LATEST PUBLICATIONS of the ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON.

PROCEEDINGS of the ZOOLOGICAL SOCIETY of LONDON. Part I. containing Papers read at the Scientific Meetings held in January and February, 1897. With 18 Plates. Price to Fellows, 9s.; to the Public, 12s.

To be obtained at the Society's Office, 3, Hanover-square, W.; or through any Bookseller.

BY SIR WILLIAM MUIR, K.C.S.I.
(Principal of the University of Edinburgh).

Just published, 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

THE MOHAMMEDAN CONTROVERSY.—BIOGRAPHIES of MOHAMMED, SPRENGER on TRADITION, The INDIAN LITURGY, The PSALTER.

By Sir WILLIAM MUIR, K.C.S.I. D.C.L. LL.D., &c.

Edinburgh: T. & T. Clark, 38, George-street. London: Simpkin, Marshall, Hamilton, Kent & Co., Limited.

TEACHERS' SCRIPTURAL LIBRARY.
Price Sixpence each net.

By W. T LYNN B.A., F.R.A.S.

1. BIBLE CHRONOLOGY and DICTIONARY; or, the Principal Events recorded in the Holy Scriptures, arranged under their probable respective dates, with a Dictionary giving an account of the places named, an Appendix on English Translations of the Bible, and Six Maps.
2. BRIEF LESSONS on the PARABLES and MIRACLES of OUR LORD. The First Part contains short expositions of the Parables, arranged according to Date; in the Second, the Miracles are treated under the heads of the Regions in which they were wrought. With Two Illustrations.
3. EMINENT SCRIPTURE CHARACTERS: a Series of Biographical Studies in the Old and New Testaments. Illustrated by Six Views of Biblical Scenes, which will, it is hoped, be found useful to all who are interested in the study of the Holy Scriptures.

Published by George Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, Paternoster-row, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th, and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2s.; or free by post, 2s. 3d.

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10s. 6d. English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
SOLD ONLY BY THE PUBLISHER.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.
COCOA-NIB EXTRACT. (TEA-LIKE.)
The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely flavoured powder—COCOAINE—a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.
SOLD ONLY IN LABELLED TINS.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

MR. WM. HEINEMANN BEGS TO ANNOUNCE THAT A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK ON AFRICAN EXPLORATION IS READY THIS DAY AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.

THE NEW AFRICA.

A JOURNEY UP THE CHOBE AND DOWN THE OKOVANGA RIVERS.

A RECORD OF EXPLORATION AND SPORT.

By AUREL SCHULZ, M.D., and AUGUST HAMMAR, C.E.

With a newly drawn Map of hitherto Unexplored Parts of the Country and 70 Illustrations from Original Drawings by the Authors and Photographs.

1 vol. demy 8vo. 28s.

London: WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford-street, W.C.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS' AND RAILWAY BOOKSTALLS.

BENTLEY'S FAVOURITE NOVELS.

Each Work can be had separately, uniformly bound, price 6s.

LATEST ADDITIONS.

DEAR FAUSTINA. By Rhoda Broughton.

THE MISTRESS OF BRAE FARM. By Rosa N. Carey.

By Mary Linskill.
Between the Heather and the Northern Sea.
The Haven under the Hill.
In Exchange for a Soul.
Cleveden.
Tales of the North Riding.

By Rosa N. Carey.
The Mistress of Brae Farm.
Sir Godfrey's Grand-daughters.
Basil Lyndhurst.
Nellie's Memories.
Barbara Heathcote's Trial.
Heriot's Choice.
Queenie's Whim.
Mary St. John.
For Lilias.
Not Like Other Girls.
Only the Governess.
Robert Ord's Atonement.
Uncle Max. | Wee Wifie.
Wooed and Married.
Lover or Friend?

By Jessie Fothergill.
The "First Violin."
Borderland. | Kith and Kin.
Probation. [Reprinting.
Aldyth. | From Moor Isles.

By Florence Montgomery.
Misunderstood.
Thrown Together.
Seaforth.

By W. E. Norris.
Major and Minor.
Miss Shafto. [Reprinting.
A Bachelor's Blunder. [Reprinting.

By Maarten Maartens.
My Lady Nobody.
An Old Maid's Love.
The Sin of Joost Avelingh.
"God's Fool."
The Greater Glory.

By J. Sheridan Le Fanu.
Uncle Silas.
In a Glass Darkly.
The House by the Churchyard.

By Mrs. Riddell.
George Geith of Fen Court.
Berna Boyle.

By E. Werner.
Success.
Fickle Fortune.

By Mrs. Annie Edwardes.
Leah: a Woman of Fashion.
A Girton Girl.
Susan Fielding.

By Hawley Smart.
Breezie Langton.

By Mrs. W. K. Clifford.
Aunt Anne.

By Helen Mathers.
Comin' thro' the Rye.

By Mrs. Alexander.
The Wooing o't.
Her Dearest Foe.

By Mrs. Augustus Craven.
A Sister's Story.

By Anthony Trollope.
The Three Clerks.

By Rhoda Broughton.
Scylla or Charybdis?
Mrs. Bligh.
Cometh Up as a Flower.
Good-bye, Sweetheart.
Joan. | Nancy.
A Beginner.
Not Wisely, but Too Well.
Red as a Rose is She.
Second Thoughts.
Belinda. | Alas!
"Doctor Cupid."

By Mary Cholmondeley.
Diana Tempest.
Sir Charles Danvers.

By Lady G. Fullerton.
Too Strange Not to be True.

By Baroness Tautphœus.
The Initials.
Quits!

By Marcus Clarke.
For the Term of his Natural Life.

By Jane Austen.
(The only Complete Edition.)
Emma.
Mansfield Park.
Lady Susan, and The Watsons.
Northanger Abbey, and Persuasion.
Pride and Prejudice.
Sense and Sensibility.

By Mrs. Notley.
Olive Varcoe.

By L. Dougall.
The Madonna of a Day.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, June 12, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3634. SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

BRITISH MUSEUM.—The BRITISH MUSEUM, Bloomsbury, and the NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM, Cromwell-road, will be CLOSED on TUESDAY, June 22, by order of the Trustees.
E. MAUNDE THOMPSON, Principal Librarian and Secretary.
British Museum, June 15, 1897.

THE ELIZABETHAN STAGE SOCIETY.—ARDEN of FEVERSHAM and EDWARD III. (Acts I. and II.). Acted as in the Sixteenth Century at ST. GEORGE'S HALL, on JULY 9.—Secretary, Miss Brown, 32, Melrose-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6.
SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

METROPOLITAN HOSPITAL SUNDAY FUND.
Patron—HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN.
Vice-Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES.
HOSPITAL SUNDAY, JUNE 20, 1897. Any person unable to attend Divine Worship on that day is requested to send his or her Contribution to the Lord Mayor. Cheques and Postal Orders should be crossed "Bank of England," and sent to the Mansion House.

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.
PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.
Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

LIBRARIES ARRANGED and CATALOGUED by an EXPERIENCED MAN. Reasonable terms and good testimonials.—Apply W., Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

TO NOBLEMEN and GENTLEMEN.—The Advertiser requires PERIODICAL or PERMANENT ENGAGEMENT in a LIBRARY to furbish, keep in order, bind, and restore old bindings, having had great experience with that celebrated bookbinder Francis Bedford. Good references given.—Address W. R., 111, Ivanhoe-road, Denmark Park, Camberwell, S.E.

THE Committee of the REDRUTH SCIENCE and ART SCHOOLS invite applications for the position of SCIENCE PRINCIPAL and LECTURER in CHEMISTRY and METALLURGY (Practical and Theoretical), MINERALOGY, &c.
Candidates are desired to forward particulars of their qualification to the Secretary not later than July 8, from whom further information may be obtained. W. K. WILTON, Secretary.

ROYAL COLLEGE of SURGEONS of ENGLAND,
Lincoln's Inn-fields, London, W.C.
JUNE 18, 1897.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, that the Council will shortly proceed to the election of a LIBRARIAN of the College.
Candidates for the appointment are requested to send in their applications to the SECRETARY not later than July 10, 1897.
Particulars relating to the appointment may be obtained on application to the SECRETARY. EDWARD TRIMMER, Secretary.

NEATH COUNTY (DUAL) SCHOOL, NEATH, GLAMORGANSHIRE.
WANTED, a MISTRESS. Salary 150*l.* per annum. S.K. qualifications. Languages, Drill recommendations.—Applications, with copies of testimonials, to reach the Head Master not later than July 13.
Also an ASSISTANT MASTER. Ordinary Form subjects. Latin, French, &c. S.K. qualifications. Welsh, Manual Instruction, Athletics recommendations.—Applications to reach the Head Master not later than July 13.

JONES' WEST MONMOUTHSHIRE SCHOOL, PONTYPOOL.
The Governors invite applications for the HEAD-MASTERSHIP of the above BOYS' SCHOOL, to be opened in JANUARY NEXT.
The Head Master must be a Graduate of a University of the United Kingdom. Previous teaching experience is desirable.
Salary 100*l.* with a Capitation Fee of 2*l.* per Scholar, and House provided. The School will accommodate Two Hundred Boys. The Head Master is also permitted to take Boarders.
Copies of the Charity Commissioners' Scheme, or sufficient Extracts therefrom, can be obtained from the undersigned (price 6*d.*).
Applications and testimonials, stating age, qualifications, and experience (twenty copies, printed or type-written), must be sent so as to reach my Office not later than July 17 next.
JOHN HUTCHINS, Clerk to the Governors.
County Court Chambers, Newport (Mon.),
June 9, 1897.

PUBLISHING PARTNERSHIP.—A Publisher, owner of a well-known established Book Publishing Business, having in preparation for this autumn what will be a very profitable and lasting publication, is prepared to take a JUNIOR PARTNER, with capital of 5,000*l.*, in view of a general extension of his business.
The fullest particulars can be forthcoming to any bond fide likely Gentleman possessed of some knowledge of the Publishing Business.
Communications by letter, addressed to PUBLISHER care of Messrs. Shaen, Roscoe, Massey & Co., 8, Bedford-row, London, W.C., will receive attention should the advertiser consider the applicant suitable for the position referred to.

GERMAN TUTOR (University Man) is willing to RECEIVE ONE or TWO PUPILS in his refined home. Perfectly able to undertake the whole education for a Literary or Business Career. Fourteen years' experience, and first class English and Continental references.—TUTOR, care of Seyffardt's Buchhandlung, Amsterdam, Holland.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's yard, Westminster.

THE ALDEBURGH SCHOOL for GIRLS.—Head Mistress, Miss M. I. GARDINER, Nat. Sc. Tripos Cambridge, late Assistant Mistress St. Leonard's School, St. Andrews. References—Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M.D., the Rev. and Hon. A. T. Lyttelton; Arthur Sidgwick, Esq., M.A., Mrs. Henry Sidgwick, &c.

SWITZERLAND.—HOME SCHOOL for limited number of GIRLS. Special advantages for the Study of Languages, Music and Art. Visiting Professors; University Lectures. Bracing climate; beautiful situation; and large grounds. Special attention to health and exercise.—MLLE. HEISS, Waldheim, Berne.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL.

GOVERNESSES for PRIVATE FAMILIES.—Miss LOUISA BROUGH can RECOMMEND several highly qualified English and Foreign GOVERNESSES for Resident and Daily Engagements.—Central Registry for Teachers, 25, Craven-street, Charing Cross, W.C.

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

SCHOLASTIC AGENCY WORK is undertaken by the MEN'S REGISTRY DEPARTMENT of the TEACHERS' GUILD on the lowest terms to cover necessary expenses. Registrar—W. H. FRICKER, M.A. (Oxon.). Personal interviews 3 to 5 Daily, except Thursdays.—Office: 74, Gower-street, W.C.

EXPERIENCED COACHES and VISITING TEACHERS.—University Women, with Distinctions in Literature, History, French, German, Classics, Mathematics, and Science, are recommended by the UNIVERSITY ASSOCIATION of WOMEN TEACHERS.—HON. SEC., 48, Mall Chambers, Kensington, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

TO LECTURE COMMITTEES of Literary Socities, Institutes, &c.—The LECTURE AGENCY, Limited, The Outer Temple, Strand, London, W.C., acts as agent for all the leading Lecturers and Entertainers of the day.—Full particulars post free on application.

TYPE-WRITER.—AUTHORS' MSS., Plays, Reviews, Literary Articles, &c., COPIED with accuracy and despatch. Manifold or Duplicate Copies.—Address Miss E. TIGAR, 23, Maitland Park-villas, Haverstock-hill, N.W. Established 1884.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SCHOLARLY TYPE-WRITING.—Foreign and Classical MSS., and others requiring special care, undertaken by a Graduate. English at usual rates.—TYPOGRAPHIC AGENCY, Dan, Beeches-road, West Bromwich.

THE EXCEL TYPE-WRITING CO.,
49, BROAD-STREET HOUSE, OLD BROAD-STREET,
WANTS YOUR TYPE-WRITING.
SPECIAL TERMS TO AUTHORS, LITTÉRATEURS, AND PLAYWRIGHTS.

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.
INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued. Pupils trained for Indexing and Secretarial Work.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

SOCIETY of AUTHORS.—LITERARY PROPERTY.—The Public is urgently warned against answering advertisements inviting MSS., or offering to place MSS. without the personal recommendation of a friend who has experience of the advertiser or the advice of the Society. By order G. HERBERT THRING, Secretary.
4, Portugal-street, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.
N.B.—The AUTHOR, the organ of the Society, is published monthly, price 6*d.*, by HORACE COX, Bream's-buildings, E.C.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The Interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—
AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.
And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, LIMITED, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MANUSCRIPTS in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

TO AUTHORS.—Any Author desirous of Publishing his Works efficiently on agency terms may make use of Central London Offices, Clerks, Traveller, &c., as established by an Author-Publisher who has by these means recently published satisfactorily.—PUBLICITY, Box 1,564, Sell's Advertising Agency, Fleet-street, London, E.C.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.
12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

Catalogues.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,
14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.
CATALOGUES on application.

ELLIS & ELVEY Dealers in Old and Rare Books and Manuscripts.
NEW CATALOGUE (No. 86) of RECENT PURCHASES now ready, post free, Sixpence.
29, New Bond-street, London, W.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

FOREIGN BOOKS and PERIODICALS promptly supplied on moderate terms.
CATALOGUES on application.
DULAU & CO. 37, SOHO-SQUARE.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. Catalogues issued and sent post free on application. Books bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford-street, London, W.C.

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.
Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.
CATALOGUE, just published, of Works on English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh Topography, Heraldry, and Family History free on application.
MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

THE NELSON MANUSCRIPTS, consisting of Lord Nelson's Autobiography in his own handwriting, are now FOR SALE and on view at H. SOTHERAN & CO.'s West-End House, 37, Piccadilly, W. (opposite St. James's Church).

LARGE PICTURE BY MAYER.
'LA COUR D'ASSISE,' Exhibited at Paris Exhibition, FOR SALE.—May be seen at E. GALLAIS & CO., Wine Merchants, 90, Piccadilly, W.

THE "SUTHERLAND" BINDING.
A NEW COLOUR PROCESS (PATENTED).
Beautiful Tooling in any Colour. Colours absolutely permanent.
Mr. RAGGULEY will be glad to supply particulars as to where the specimens referred to in the Athenæum of May 22 (p. 679) can be seen in Town.
High-street, Newcastle-under-Lyme.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)
Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each; 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

PRODUCERS AND PUBLISHERS OF

PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS OF FAMOUS WORKS OF ART.

AUTOTYPES of the OLD MASTERS in the GREAT CONTINENTAL GALLERIES.

AUTOTYPES of MODERN ENGLISH ART.

AUTOTYPES of PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY.

AUTOTYPES of DRAWINGS by the OLD MASTERS.

AUTOTYPES of PICTURES in the FRENCH SALONS.

Those interested in Art, and in the recent developments of the Photographic Reproduction of Pictures, are invited to inspect the Company's extensive Collection of Autotypes and Autogravures of all Schools, now on view at their Gallery, 74, New Oxford-street, where may also be seen a series of framed examples, of specially designed patterns, made in oak, walnut, and other hard woods.

Catalogues and Price Lists post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

Books can be exchanged at the residences of Subscribers in London by the Library Messengers.

SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per Annum.

MUDIE'S FOREIGN LIBRARY.

All the Best Works in French, German, Italian, and Spanish are in circulation.

CATALOGUES of English or Foreign Books, 1*s.* 6*d.* each.

Prospectuses and Clearance Lists of Books on Sale, postage free.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, Limited,

30 to 34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, London.

BRANCH OFFICES:—

241, Brompton-road; and 48, Queen Victoria-street, E.C. (Mansion House End).

Also 10–12, Barton Arcade, Manchester.

LONDON LIBRARY,

ST. JAMES'S-SQUARE, S.W.

Patron—H.R.H. THE PRINCE OF WALES, K.G.

President—LESLIE STEPHEN, Esq.

Vice-Presidents—Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, The Very Rev. the Dean of Llandaff, Herbert Spencer, Esq., Sir Henry Barkly, K.C.B.

Trustees—Right Hon. Sir M. Grant Duff, Right Hon. Sir John Lubbock, Bart., M.P., Right Hon. Earl of Rosebery.

The Library contains about 170,000 Volumes of Ancient and Modern Literature, in various Languages. Subscription, 3*l.* a year; Life Membership, according to age. Fifteen Volumes are allowed to Country and Ten to Town Members. Reading-Room open from Ten to half-past Six. Catalogue, Fifth Edition, 2 vols. royal 8vo. price 21*s.*; to Members, 16*s.* C. T. HAGBERG WRIGHT, Secretary and Librarian.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c.; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

FRIDAY NEXT.

400 Lots of Miscellaneous Property, including Photographic, Scientific, Electrical, and other Apparatus, &c., from a Private Source.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38, King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, June 25, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

FOR SALE, a quaint and valuable COLLECTION of upwards of FORTY RARE and CURIOUS BOOKS, forming part of the LIBRARY of the late venerated Poet Laureate WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, D.C.L., including Works of Ancient and Modern Authors, Curious and Rare Editions of Old English Worthies and other early Typography. The majority of the Works have the Poet's Autograph therein. Catalogues will shortly be ready, and may be had on application.—JOSEPH SAUL, Auctioneer, Southport.

MESSRS. HODGSON beg to announce the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., commencing at 1 o'clock each day:—

On MONDAY, June 28, LAW BOOKS, including a Library from one of the Colonies, comprising Moore's East Indian Appeals, 14 vols.—Shaw and Maclean's Scotch Appeals, 4 vols.—Dow's House of Lords Cases, 6 vols.—the Jurist Reports, 55 vols.—Common Bench Reports, 39 vols.—Cases in Equity, Exchequer, Nisi Prius, and Common Law—Howell's State Trials, 34 vols.—the Year-Books by Maynard—useful Modern Text-Books—Mahogany Bookcase, &c.

On TUESDAY, June 29, and Three Following Days, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS of all classes, including the extensive English and Foreign Theological Library of an Eminent Divine.

May be viewed two days prior to Sale, and Catalogues had.

THE ASHBURNHAM LIBRARY OF PRINTED BOOKS. FIRST PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, June 25, and Seven Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the FIRST PORTION of the Magnificent LIBRARY of extensively Valuable and Rare PRINTED BOOKS, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of ASHBURNHAM. The Portion comprises the Letters A—F only, and includes a Large Number of Books both English and Foreign, of the Highest degree of rarity and interest, amongst which may be mentioned the First Ten Editions of Dame Juliana Barnes's Book of Hawking, Hunting, &c., from Pynson, Wynkyn de Worde, Julyan Notary, Berthelet, and Tottel—Thirty-eight Books printed upon Vellum, including the First Latin Aristotle (beautifully illuminated), the Gutenberg and 1462 Bibles, and the Durandus of 1459, a splendid Series of the Rarest Bibles in various Languages, but chiefly English—Rare Editions of Ariosto, Boccaccio, and Dante—the Earliest Editions of Chaucer to the End of the Sixteenth Century—the Chronicles of St. Albans, Arnold Caxton, Froissart, and Fabyan—Fine and Rare Service Breviaries—First Editions of the Writings of Ascham, Lord Bacon, John Bale, Hugh Broughton, Cocker, Cranmer, Defoe, Erwin, Dowriche, Heaton, Fielding, Fletcher, John Foxe, Fuller, &c.—Some curious early Dated Books by the First Printers in the City of London, St. Albans, Ipswich, Oxford, Cambridge, and other Localities—a Fine Series of Books of Emblems and Books with Engravings and Woodcuts—some Rare Books on America, and other Remarkable Items too numerous to particularize. Many of the Books have additional interest and value attached to them from the fact of their being either Presentation Copies from the Authors, or from having belonged formerly to Celebrated Personages, and some are in Splendid Bindings done for Royal, Noble, and Famous Possessors.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-Crown each. Copies, illustrated with Nine Facsimiles in Gold and Colours of some of the remarkable Bindings, may be had, price 5*s.* each.

 A list of the Prices and Purchasers' Names at this Sale will be published shortly after its conclusion, and may be had of Messrs. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE, price 5*s.* each.

The Collection of English and Foreign War Medals, formed by Col. WALFORD.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, July 5, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN WAR MEDALS and DECORATIONS, formed by Col. WALFORD, and other small Properties, comprising N.G.S. Medals with rare single clasps for "Bonne Citoyenne" with Furieuse—"Nassau, 22nd March, 1808"; "Anhalt 25th March, 1811"; "Boat Service, 4th Feb. 1884"; "Boat Service, 2nd May, 1813"; M.G.S. with single clasps for "Barrosa," "Chateauguay," "Fort Detroit," &c.—H.E.I.C. Medals for Rodriguez, Bourbon and Isle of France, Nepaul, and Capture of Java—Army of India 2-clasp for Assaye, Ariaume, Gawilghur—rare Groups of Medals—Officer's Silver Medal for Egypt, 1801—Indian Chief's Medal, AR. small size, including a Collection of English and Foreign Orders and Decorations, Victoria Cross and Legion of Honour (as a group), Gold Guelphic Medal of the Prince Regent, &c.—Medal Cabinets.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings by the Old Masters, the Property of HEDLEY PEEK, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, July 7, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ETCHINGS by the OLD MASTERS, formed in the last Century by one of the Bourbon Princes and now the Property of HEDLEY PEEK, Esq.; also a few very choice ENGRAVINGS, in Mezzotint and Colour, the Property of a LADY.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of Books on Angling of the late R. W. COLEMAN, Esq., of Pennsylvania.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, July 8, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of BOOKS on ANGLING of the late ROBERT W. COLEMAN, Esq., of Pennsylvania, originally Collected by Rev. G. W. BETHUNE, American Editor of "Walton's Angler."

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On THURSDAY, June 24, OLD ITALIAN and ANTIQUE BRONZES, MEDALS, and OBJECTS of ART, the Property of Sir EDGAR BOEHM, Bart.; and PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE OBJECTS of the late J. J. FARQUHARSON, Esq.

On FRIDAY, June 25.—In the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, re the Earl of Ellenborough's Settled Estates.—Colchester v. Law.—OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER-GILT PLATE.

On FRIDAY, June 25, magnificent PEARL NECKLACE, sold by order of the Executor of his Grace WILLIAM DROGO, Seventh DUKE OF MANCHESTER, deceased.

On FRIDAY, June 25, rare JEWELS, including the celebrated pink diamond "Noor-ud-Deen" of H.H. PRINCE ALEXANDER TZARY of Singapore.

On SATURDAY, June 26, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of G. A. BAIRD, Esq., deceased; and PICTURES, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On MONDAY, June 28, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of W. G. ARCHER, Esq., deceased, and from different Sources.

On TUESDAY, June 29, EARLY ENGLISH ENGRAVINGS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On TUESDAY, June 29, interesting RELICS of Mrs. SARAH SIDDONS, the Great Actress, and MINIATURES, BOXES, and other OBJECTS of VERTU, including a SMALL COLLECTION, the Property of a BARONET.

On WEDNESDAY, June 30, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late J. J. FARQUHARSON, Esq., and the Rev. H. R. WADMORE.

On THURSDAY, July 8, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, forming a Portion of the COLLECTION of D. P. SELLAR, Esq.

On SATURDAY, July 10, the GOTT HEIR-LOOMS, PICTURES of C. T. DODD, Esq., deceased, and important PICTURES by Sir T. Lawrence, P.R.A., and Sir H. Raeburn, R.A.

NEW POEM BY MR. G. F. SAVAGE-ARMSTRONG

Just published, price 5*s.* small 4to. bound in royal red cloth, bevelled boards, with Medallion on side embossed in gold.

QUEEN, EMPRESS, and EMPIRE, 1837–1897. By GEORGE FRANCIS SAVAGE-ARMSTRONG, M.A. D.Lit.

Belfast: Marcus Ward & Co., Limited, London, New York, and Sydney.

NOW READY.

THE ANTI-PHILISTINE.

A Periodical of Protest.

"Would to God my name were not so terrible to the enemy as it is."

Contents of the Initial Number.

The ATROCITIES of MARIE CORELLI.

The PROSE BEAUTIES of CLEMENT SCOTT.

HER QUEENLINESS as a WOMAN and HER WOMANLINESS as a QUEEN.

AVE IMPERATRIX. An Imperial Poem by John Huntley Skrine, sometime Newdigate Prizeman.

IF CHRIST CAME to MASHONALAND.

The AMERICAN HEIRESS.

WHY EDINBURGH DISLIKED ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

NEW BOOK REVIEWS, ESSAYS, POEMS, LITERARY GOSSIP, &c.

Published on the 15th of each Month.

At all Booksellers' and Bookstalls, price 6*d.* net; or will be sent, post paid, on receipt of 7*d.* by the Publishers,

John and Horace Cowley, Granville House, Arundel-street, W.C.

A beautifully printed Prospectus of the Anti-Philistine Magazine will be sent on receipt of a halfpenny stamp.

A PRIZE of 5*l.* is offered for a very SHORT STORY. For particulars see current issue.

THE ROMAN WALL, NORTHUMBERLAND (with Illustrations); Roof of the Chapter-House, Canterbury; Work at a German Technical College; Design for a Carved Wood Panel; New Wesleyan Chapel, Crosby, &c.

See the BUILDER of June 19, post free, 4½*d.*

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

FOR COMMEMORATION DAY.

THE FAIRIES' FAVOURITE; OR,

THE STORY OF QUEEN VICTORIA TOLD FOR CHILDREN.

By T. MULLETT ELLIS.

With Four Illustrations, cloth gilt, royal colours, price One Shilling.

Ash Partners, Limited, Publishers, London.

PUBLICATIONS NOUVELLES de la LIBRAIRIE HACHETTE et CIE.

London: 18, King William-street, Charing Cross.
Paris: 79, Boulevard Saint-Germain.

VASES ANTIQUES du LOUVRE (Salles A.-E. Les ORIGINES—Les STYLES PRIMITIFS—ÉCOLES RHODIENNE et CORINTHIENNE). Par M. E. POTTIER, ancien membre de l'École d'Athènes, agrégé de l'Université, docteur ès lettres, Conservateur adjoint des Musées nationaux. 1 vol in-4, avec 2 photogravures et 332 dessins de Jules Devillard. Broché, 30 fr.; cartonné, 32 fr.

(Ouvrage publié sous les auspices du Ministère de l'Instruction publique et des Beaux-Arts et de l'Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres.)

RUSKIN et la RELIGION de la BEAUTÉ. Sa physionomie, ses paroles, sa pensée esthétique et sociale. Par ROBERT de la SIZERANNE. 1 vol. in-16, broché, 3 fr. 50.

NOUVEAU DICTIONNAIRE de GÉOGRAPHIE UNIVERSELLE. Mise en vente du 1er volume du SUPPLÉMENT.

EN VENTE:

NOUVEAU DICTIONNAIRE de GÉOGRAPHIE UNIVERSELLE. 7 vols. in-4, brochés, 205 fr.

Reliés en demi-chagrin, plats en toile, tranches jaspées, 240 fr.

Just published, 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 5*s.*

THE CITIES of the DAWN: Naples, Athens, Pompeii, Constantinople, Smyrna, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Alexandria, Cairo, Marseilles, Avignon, Lyons, Dijon. With 31 Illustrations. By J. EWING RITCHIE ("Christopher Crayon").

"Some impressive descriptions of a holiday tour in the East, and a useful guide to future travellers."—Daily Mail.

"Full of interest from beginning to end."—East Anglian Daily Times.

London: T. Fisher Unwin, Paternoster-square.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. GOULD, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.

NOTES and QUERIES for DECEMBER 10th and 24th, 1892, and JANUARY 7th and 21st, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of MR. GLADSTONE.

Price of the Four Numbers, 1*s.* 4*d.*, or free by post, 1*s.* 6*d.*

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BENJAMIN DISRAELI, EARL OF BEACONSFIELD, 1820 to 1892.

NOTES and QUERIES for APRIL 29th, MAY 13th, 27th, JUNE 10th, 24th and JULY 8th, 1893, contains a BIBLIOGRAPHY of the EARL of BEACONSFIELD. This includes KEYS to 'VIVIAN GREY,' 'CONINGSBY,' 'LOTHAIR,' and 'ENDYMION.'

Price of the Six Numbers, 2*s.*, or free by post, 2*s.* 3*d.*

John C. Francis, Notes and Queries Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

THE QUEEN'S DIAMOND JUBILEE IS RECORDED IN THE JULY NUMBER OF THE

PALL MALL MAGAZINE,

Now ready, price ONE SHILLING net,

By the appearance of an Illustrated Article entitled

"THEN AND NOW,"

Written by Mr. J. HOLT SCHOOLING, describing the phenomenal developments and the Progress of the English People during the Sixty Years' Reign of the Queen and Empress who ruled them "then," and who rules them "now." In addition is an attractive Article on

"THE STAGE DURING THE VICTORIAN ERA,"

by Mr. FREDERIC WHYTE, illustrated with Costume Portraits of the leading Actors and Actresses during the period.

The other Contents include:—

The Queen at the Age of Eleven. R. WESTALL, R.A.
Photogravure Frontispiece.
The Fairy Blacksmith. From the Gaelic. The MARQUESS of LORNE, K.T. M.P.
Illustrated by Arthur H. Buckland.
British Army Types: II. A Captain, First Life Guards.
Drawn from Life by Arthur Jule Goodman.
Audley End. Miss E. SAVILE.
Illustrated from Special Photographs by the Rev. A. H. Malan.
Just Sixty Years Ago. REBECCA SCOTT.
Colonel Drury. JOHN LE BRETON.
With Illustrations by Simon Harman Vedder.
England. GEORGE EDGAR MONTGOMERY.
Illustrated by E. F. Skinner.
Lee of Virginia. Part I. HENRY TYRRELL.
With Portraits of the Confederate Generals, &c.
St. Ives. Chapters 25–27. The late ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.
With Illustrations by G. Grenville Manton.
July. A. L. BUDDEN (Ada Bartrick Baker).
Illustrated by W. B. Robinson.
Sport of the Month: Yachting. R. S. PALMER.
With Full-Page Illustrations by George Roller.
The Man Who Intervened. ROBERT HICHENS.
With Illustrations by Arthur Jule Goodman.
Religion. Rev. EDWARD SIMMS, M.A.
Illustrated by H. Cole.
"Labour and Sorrow." "RAB."
The Scissors. Rev. A. CAPES TARBOLTON.
A Volcanic Valve. W. L. ALDEN.
Illustrated by Anthony Fox.
Pan. CHARLES T. LUSTED.
Illustrated by H. Cole.
A Fastidious Woman. "LUSMORE."
With Illustrations by Hounsom Byles.
From a Cornish Window. A. T. QUILLER COUCH.
With Thumb-Nail Sketches by Mark Zangwill.
The Humours of the Month.

EXQUISITELY ILLUSTRATED BY THE LEADING ARTISTS.

Offices:
18, CHARING CROSS-ROAD, LONDON, W.C.

DR. SMILES'S WORKS.

LIVES of the ENGINEERS. With 9 Steel Portraits and 342 Engravings on Wood. 5 vols. 7*s.* 6*d.* each.

LIFE of GEO. STEPHENSON. With Illustrations. 21*s.*, 7*s.* 6*d.*, or 2*s.* 6*d.*

JAMES NASMYTH, ENGINEER. An Autobiography. Illustrated. 6*s.*

JOSIAH WEDGWOOD, F.R.S., the Great Artistic Potter: his Personal History. With Portrait. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

JASMIN: Barber, Poet, Philanthropist. 6*s.*

The HUGUENOTS: their Settlements, Churches, and Industries in England and Ireland. Crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

6*s.* each.

SELF-HELP. | THRIFT.
CHARACTER. | DUTY.
LIFE and LABOUR.
INVENTION and INDUSTRY.
INDUSTRIAL BIOGRAPHY.

THOMAS EDWARD: Scotch Naturalist. Illustrated by Sir George Reid, P.R.S.A.

ROBERT DICK: Geologist and Botanist. Illustrated. 12*s.*

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

With Illustrations, 8vo. 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

A RIDE through WESTERN ASIA.

By CLIVE BIGHAM. Part I. ASIA MINOR. Part II. PERSIA, North to South. Part III. TURKISH ARABIA. Part IV. PERSIA, West to East. Part V. CENTRAL ASIA.

BROAD ARROW.—"Cannot fail to attract the attention of alike the politician, the student of history, and even of those readers whose desires carry them no further than a wish to be interested and amused by an excellently well-written book of travel and adventure."

THE ROMANES LECTURE for 1897.

MACHIAVELLI. The Romanes Lecture delivered in the Sheldonian Theatre, June 2, 1897. By the Right Hon. JOHN MORLEY, M.P., Hon. D.C.L. Oxon., Hon. LL.D. Camb. 8vo. 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

SEVEN NOVELS WORTH READING.

Price Six Shillings Each.

BY F. MARION CRAWFORD.

A ROSE OF YESTERDAY.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

SCOTSMAN.—"It has a mature imaginative power which stamps it as a novel of a high order."

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'MORRICE BUCKLER.'

THE PHILANDERERS.

By A. E. W. MASON. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

WORLD.—"One of the most intesesting novels we have met for a long time."

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'ROBBERY UNDER ARMS.'

MY RUN HOME.

By ROLF BOLDREWOOD. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

THE FALL OF A STAR: a Novel.

By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

WORLD.—"Novel-readers on the look-out for something exciting will do well to secure 'The Fall of a Star.'"

THE SECRET OF SAINT FLOREL.

By JOHN BERWICK. Crown 8vo. 6*s.*

OBSERVER.—"A capital romance, and well worth reading."

12mo. 6*s.*

THE CHOIR INVISIBLE.

By JAMES ALLEN, Author of 'Summer in Arcady,' &c.

DIAL (Chicago).—"Hardly since Hawthorne have we had such pages as the best of these."

SECOND EDITION.

THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR.

By FREDERIC ADYE.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"A story to be read and enjoyed.'

12mo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The PORT of MISSING SHIPS, and other Stories of the Sea. By JOHN R. SPEARS.

Illustrated, 8vo. 10*s.* net.

The YEW-TREES of GREAT BRITAIN and IRELAND. By JOHN LOWE, M.D. Ed., Honorary Physician to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, &c.

SIXTH THOUSAND NOW READY.

RHYME? and REASON? By LEWIS CARROLL. With 65 Illustrations by Arthur B. Frost and 9 by Henry Holiday. Crown 8vo. cloth gilt, 6*s.* net.

8vo. sewed, 2*s.* net.

The MONETARY SITUATION in 1897. By G. M. BOISSEVAIN. Translated from the Dutch.

Crown 8vo. 6*s.* 6*d.*

The NATIONAL MOVEMENT in the REIGN of HENRY III. and its CULMINATION in the BARONS' WAR. By OLIVER H. RICHARDSON, A.B., Professor of History in Drury College.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

The following is a Reprint of a LIST of PUBLICATIONS which appeared in the ATHENÆUM of December 30th, 1837.

LITERARY PRESENTS FOR CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEAR'S DAY.

I.

SOUTHEY'S BOOK OF THE CHURCH.

Fourth Edition, with Notes, 1 vol. 8vo. 12*s.*

II.

BARROW'S LIFE OF ADMIRAL HOWE.

With a Portrait, &c., 8vo. 12*s.*

III.

*MRS. SOMERVILLE ON THE PHYSICAL SCIENCES.

Fourth Edition, fcap. 10*s.* 6*d.*

IV.

LYELL'S PRINCIPLES OF GEOLOGY.

Fifth Edition, 226 Woodcuts, 16 Plates, 4 vols. 12mo. 28*s.*

V.

BISHOP HEBER'S PARISH SERMONS.

Third Edition, 2 vols. post.

VI.

PRIOR'S LIFE OF GOLDSMITH.

With Plates, 2 vols. 8vo. 30*s.*

VII.

*HALLAM'S MIDDLE AGES.

Sixth Edition, 3 vols. 8vo. 36*s.*

VIII.

*HALLAM'S CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

Third Edition, 3 vols. 8vo. 36*s.*

IX.

*HALLAM'S HISTORY OF LITERATURE.

Vol. I. 8vo. 15*s.*

X.

*BYRON'S COMPLETE WORKS.

With Notes and Embellishments.
THREE NEW EDITIONS.
1. In Seventeen Volumes, fcap. 5*s.* each, cloth boards.
2. In Ten Pocket Volumes, 3*s.* 6*d.* each.
3. In ONE VOLUME, royal 8vo. 20*s.*

XI.

CRABBE'S LIFE AND WORKS.

8 vols, fcap. 5*s.* each.

XII.

*BOSWELL'S LIFE OF JOHNSON.

With the Notes of CROKER and others.
With Plates, 10 vols. fcap. 5*s.* each.

XIII.

JOHNSONIANA.—A SUPPLEMENT TO BOSWELL'S JOHNSON.

45 Plates, 8vo. 24*s.*

XIV.

*MALCOLM'S LIFE OF THE GREAT LORD CLIVE.

Portrait, 3 vols. 8vo. 2*l.* 2*s.*

XV.

*ABERCROMBIE ON THE INTELLECTUAL POWERS.

Fourth Edition, post 8vo.

XVI.

*COLERIDGE'S TABLE TALK.

Second Edition, fcap. 7*s.* 6*d.*

XVII.

*THE CHACE, THE TURF, AND THE ROAD.

By NIMROD. 14 Plates 8vo. 16*s.*

XVIII.

*THE WORKS OF OLIVER GOLDSMITH.

Edited by JAMES PRIOR.
With Plates, 4 vols. 8vo. 2*l.* 8*s.*

XIX.

*THE JOURNAL OF A NATURALIST.

Third Edition, Plates, post, 15*s.*

XX.

*JESSE'S GLEANINGS IN NATURAL HISTORY.

3 vols. post, 10*s.* 6*d.* each.

XXI.

LOCKHART'S LIFE OF BURNS.

Fourth Edition, fcap.

XXII.

LIFE OF CRABBE. By his Son.

With Portrait and 15 Illustrations, fcap. 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

XXIII.

*DAVY'S CONSOLATIONS IN TRAVEL.

Fourth Edition, fcap. 6*s.*

XXIV.

*DAVY'S SALMONIA.

Third Edition, Plates, fcap. 12*s.*

XXV.

*MAXIMS AND HINTS FOR ANGLERS.

Plates, 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

XXVI.

LANDSCAPE ILLUSTRATIONS OF THE BIBLE.

95 Views, with Description by Rev. T. H. HORNE.
New Edition, 3 vols. 8vo. 3*l.* 3*s.*

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle-street. DECEMBER, 1837.

* Editions of these Works have been in Continuous Sale since 1837 and are still in demand.

COPY OF JUNE, 1837, LIST.

8, NEW BURLINGTON-STREET, June 2, 1837.

MR. BENTLEY

HAS JUST PUBLISHED THE FOLLOWING NEW WORKS.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE PILOT.'

In 3 vols. post 8vo.

ENGLAND;

WITH SKETCHES OF

SOCIETY IN THE METROPOLIS.

By J. FENIMORE COOPER, Esq., Author of 'The Pilot,' 'The Spy,' 'Excursions in Switzerland,' &c.

"These volumes are unquestionably the most searching and thoughtful of any which have been published by an American on England. Mr. Cooper is much less flippant than the 'Young American,' and far deeper and more comprehensive. His experience and acquirements are much greater than Willis's, and his judgment less likely to be imposed upon by the mere externals of things. His time and opportunities were greater than either of these writers, whether we regard the length of his sojourn, or the society in which he mixed, and the men of mark—as Rogers, Scott, Mackintosh, Earl Grey—with whom he associated."—Spectator.

In 3 vols. post 8vo.

NICK OF THE WOODS.

Edited by W. HARRISON AINSWORTH, Esq., Author of 'Crichton,' 'Rookwood,' &c.

"There are scenes in this tale which are in no respect inferior to the best contained in Cooper's romance of 'The Pioneers.'"—Sun.

In 2 vols. post 8vo.

AUNT DOROTHY'S TALE;

Or, GERALDINE MORTON. A Novel.

"There is a freshness and talent about this production which has exceedingly captivated our fancy."—Literary Gazette.

CAPTAIN CHAMIER'S NEW WORK.

In 3 vols. post 8vo.

THE ARETHUSA: A NAVAL STORY.

Edited by CAPT. CHAMIER, R.N., Author of 'Ben Brace,' 'Life of a Sailor,' &c.

"Captain Chamier is certainly not inferior in descriptive power, in the naïve delineation of sea-manners and characters, and in the general skill of the novelist, to any existing writer of stories of naval life. 'The Arethusa' is a very clever and very entertaining work. It would be impossible to do justice to it by extracts; we must therefore be content in one word to say that it is one of the best sea-novels, which have lately become so popular."—Literary Gazette.

MR. THEODORE HOOK'S NEW NOVEL.

In 3 vols. post 8vo.

JACK BRAG.

By THEODORE HOOK, Esq.,
Author of 'Sayings and Doings,' 'Maxwell,' 'The Parson's Daughter,' &c.

"Abounding in wit, originality, and ludicrous incidents. We can fairly recommend a perusal of 'Jack Brag' to every one who loves a frolicsome and laughable story."—Courier.

MR. LOVER'S NEW ROMANCE.

In 3 vols. post 8vo. with Fifteen Characteristic Illustrations by the Author.

RORY O'MORE: a Romance.

By SAMUEL LOVER, Esq., Author of 'Legends and Stories of Ireland,' &c.

"A truly Irish, national, and characteristic story."—Literary Gazette.

"Full of the broadest Irish humour, mixed with beautiful imagery, and the rich fruits of a truly poetical mind."—John Bull.

MR. WASHINGTON IRVING'S NEW WORK.

In 3 vols. post 8vo.

ADVENTURES OF CAPTAIN BONNEVILLE;

Or, Scenes beyond the Rocky Mountains of the Far West.

By WASHINGTON IRVING, Esq., Author of 'The Sketch-Book,' 'The Alhambra,' 'Astoria,' &c.

"Unsurpassed in deep interest in the wildest creations of fancy. A more stirringly interesting work has not issued from the press for many months."—Sun.

MR. ALBANY FONBLANQUE'S NEW WORK.

In 3 vols. post 8vo. with Portraits.

ENGLAND UNDER SEVEN ADMINISTRATIONS.

By ALBANY FONBLANQUE, Esq.

"The terse and condensed style, the felicity of humorous illustration, and the searching scrutiny into the principles of every question, give each separate chapter of this work great value and interest."—Athenæum.

THE GERMAN PRINCE'S NEW WORK.

In 3 vols. post 8vo.

SEMILASSO IN AFRICA:

Or, ADVENTURES IN ALGIERS AND OTHER PARTS OF AFRICA.

By PRINCE PUCKLER MUSKAU,
Author of 'The Tour of a German Prince.'

"An extremely amusing work."—Literary Gazette.

"Prince Puckler Muskau has given us a much more lively and entertaining account of his visit to Algiers than any other recent traveller."—Spectator.

THE NEW COMIC PERIODICAL WORK EDITED BY "BOZ,"

And illustrated by George Cruikshank, &c.

Now ready, with Two Illustrations by George Cruikshank,
No. VI., price Half-a-Crown, of

BENTLEY'S MISCELLANY.

Among the Contents will be found—

Song of the Month. By J. A. Wade.
Periodical Literature of the North American Indians.
A Geographical Epigram.
Darby the Swift. By J. A. Wade.
Shakespeare Papers. No. II. Jaques. By Dr. Maginn.
Lord Tomnoddy, a Sporting Anecdote. The Hon. Mr. Sucklethumbkin's Story. By Thos. Ingoldsby.
The Romance of a Day. By the Author of 'The Bashful Irishman.' With an Illustration by George Cruikshank.
The Man with the Tuft. By Haynes Bayly.
Love in the City. By the Author of 'Stories of Waterloo.'
The Minister's Fate. From the 'Recollections of H. T.' Mrs. Jennings.
Hints for an Historical Play. By Thos. Ingoldsby.
John Pooledoune, the Victim of Improvements. By Wm. Jerdan.
The Legend of Mount Pilate. By G. Dance.
Glorvina, the Maid of Meath. By Sheridan Knowles.
Ode on the Birth-day of the Princess Victoria. By J. A. Wade.
Nights at Sea. No. III. The Chase. By 'The Old Sailor.' With an Illustration by George Cruikshank.
Address of the Editor, &c.

THE COMPANION TO THE WAVERLEY NOVELS.

Now publishing, in neat Pocket Volumes, price 6s. each (any of which may be had separately, containing a Complete Work, in all but four instances), printed and embellished uniformly with the Waverley Novels, THE STANDARD NOVELS AND ROMANCES.

This unrivalled Collection of the best Modern Works of Fiction, chiefly by Living Authors, now includes—

Hope's Anastasius.
Cooper's Pilot—Spy—Last of the Mohicans—Pioneers—Prairie—Lionel Lincoln—Borderers—Water Witch—Bravo—Red Rover—Headsman—Heidenmauer.
Beckford's Vathek.
Hook's Maxwell—Parson's Daughter.
Washington Irving's Alhambra.
Bulwer's Eugene Aram—Paul Clifford.
Morier's Hajji Baba—Zohrab.
Miss Austen's Sense and Sensibility—Emma—Mansfield Park—Northanger Abbey and Persuasion—Pride and Prejudice.
G. P. R. James's Darnley—De L'Orme.
Peacock's Headlong Hall—Nightmare Abbey—Maid Marian and Crotchet Castle.

And the Popular Novels of Godwin, Miss Porter, Schiller, the Misses Lee, Mrs. Brunton, Galt, Mrs. Inchbald, Madame de Staël, Maxwell, Banim, Victor Hugo, Gleig, Manzoni, Trelawny, Mrs. Shelley, &c.

 The New Volume, to be published with the Magazines on the 30th of June, will contain Mr. G. P. R. James's 'PHILIP AUGUSTUS,' and will be immediately followed by Mr. Ainsworth's popular Romance 'ROOKWOOD,' and other celebrated Fictions.

ALSO JUST READY,

NEW WORK EDITED BY G. P. R. JAMES, ESQ.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. with Portraits,

MEMOIRS OF CELEBRATED WOMEN.

Edited by G. P. R. JAMES, Esq.,
Author of 'Darnley,' 'De L'Orme,' 'The Gipsy,' &c.

NEW EDITION,

In 3 vols. post 8vo. with a Portrait of the Author,

A PILGRIMAGE TO THE HOLY LAND, &c.

By A. DE LAMARTINE.

Second Edition, Revised and Corrected, with Additions.

In 3 vols. 8vo. with numerous Portraits,

THE CELEBRATED LETTERS OF

LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU.

Edited by LORD WHARNCLIFFE.

RICHARD BENTLEY, New Burlington-street (Publisher in Ordinary to His Majesty).

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

LORD ROBERTS' FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

The Nineteenth Edition of the above Work is now ready at all Libraries and Booksellers', in 2 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel and Copper, Maps, Plans, and Illustrations, price 36s.

NOW READY,

LETTERS FROM THE BLACK SEA

During the Crimean War, 1854-55.

By Admiral SIR LEOPOLD HEATH, K.C.B.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. with Illustrations and Plans, 7s. 6d.

"Some very interesting personal experiences during the Crimean War, narrated in a straightforward, honest style."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SECOND EDITION READY THIS DAY.

DEAR FAUSTINA.

By RHODA BROUGHTON,
Author of 'Red as a Rose is She.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The dénoûment brings to an artistic and natural close a study of contemporary manners which will certainly enhance the author's reputation as an alert and penetrating observer of her sex."
World.

A SOCIAL SATIRE.—NOW READY.

PANTALAS.

By EDWARD JENKINS,
Author of 'Ginx's Baby.'

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"It is difficult to know whether most to admire the humour and force of the picture of men and life which it presents, or the profundity of its teaching as a lesson in sociology. It is in its way a brilliant little study in a great subject, full of sound common sense and quiet humour."—Scotsman.

"A very clever satire. Mr. Jenkins has a virile caustic wit, and plies the lash with airy cultured skill."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

A TRICK OF FAME.

By H. HAMILTON FYFE,
Author of 'A Player's Tragedy.'

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

IN A COUNTRY TOWN.

A Story Unfounded on Fact.

By HONOR PERCEVAL.

In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'In a Country Town' is a simple study of a girl's life, and with all its simplicity we can congratulate the author in having, in Brunhild, accomplished a really fine bit of character study. Miss Perceval writes with a single directness and a humorous appreciation of life in provincial places, particularly where interesting curates and romantic maidens are concerned."—Literary World.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK.

Now ready, in 1 vol. small 4to. extra cloth, gilt top,
Price HALF-A-GUINEA.

WOMEN NOVELISTS OF QUEEN VICTORIA'S REIGN.

A BOOK OF APPRECIATIONS.

The SISTERS BRONTE, by Mrs. OLIPHANT. GEORGE ELIOT, by Mrs. LYNN LINTON. Mrs. GASKELL, by EDNA LYALL. Mrs. CRAIK, by Mrs. PARR. And other Essays by CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, ADELINE SERGEANT, Mrs. MACQUOID, Mrs. ALEXANDER, and Mrs. MARSHALL.

"We may say at the outset that this volume stands high above the general level of books about books."—Daily News.

"A handsome and very readable volume; the book will attract feminine readers in particular, and will have a permanent value as an 'expert' review of a notable phase of Victorian literature."—Globe.

"Of the many books, notable and otherwise, for which this splendid date in our national history is responsible, very few, if any, are more valuable, fascinating, and instructive than the 'Women Novelists of Queen Victoria's Reign.'"
Pall Mall Gazette.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portrait of Author, 12s.

AN OLD SOLDIER'S MEMORIES.

By S. H. JONES-PARRY, J.P. D.L.,
Late Captain Royal Dublin Fusiliers,
Author of 'My Journey round the World,' &c.

"The author is able to impart a considerable degree of freshness to the story of his varied experiences in Burmah, the Crimea, and the Indian Mutiny."—Scotsman.

NEW EDITION, CONDENSED, REVISED, AND WITH MUCH NEW MATERIAL.

Now ready at all Booksellers', in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Portrait of Lady Hamilton, gilt top, 6s.

LADY HAMILTON AND LORD NELSON.

AN HISTORICAL BIOGRAPHY.

Based on Letters and other Documents in the Morrison Collection.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,
Author of 'The Real Lord Byron,' &c.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

SALTED with FIRE. By George MAC DONALD, LL.D., Author of 'Robert Falconer,' 'Sir Gibbie,' &c.

"Dr. Mac Donald's thoughtful and suggestive writing has long kept hold of that cultured section of the public which regards literary ability as the first requirement of the novelist."—Globe.

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'A Flame of Fire' deserves commendation for a certain picturesqueness and vigour of writing, for strongly-conceived incident, and for the bold incisiveness of its descriptive passages."—Globe.

BROKEN THREADS. By Compton READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"There is bright comedy all through Mr. Compton Reade's story, with just so much serious interest as is necessary to keep the book from being frivolous or trifling."
Scotsman.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

JOHN C. NIMMO'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY, with magnificent Coloured Plates, 4to. cloth elegant, gilt edges, 7l. 7s. net.

NAVAL and MILITARY TROPHIES and PERSONAL RELICS of BRITISH HEROES. A Series of Water-Colour Drawings by William Gibb. The Descriptive Notes by RICHARD R. HOLMES, F.S.A., and an Introduction by F.-M. Viscount WOLSELEY, K.P. G.C.B. Dedicated to Her Majesty the Queen.

TIMES.—"Altogether it is eminently worthy of the dedication to herself which Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to accept."

DAILY NEWS.—"A publication that will appeal to all patriotic hearts."

THE STANDARD WORK ON BRITISH BIRDS.

In 4 vols. royal 8vo. cloth, with numerous Wood Engravings and 63 Coloured Plates, 6l. 6s., now 5l. 5s. net.

A HISTORY of BRITISH BIRDS, with Coloured Illustrations of their Eggs. To which is added the Author's Notes on their Classification and Geographical Distribution. By HENRY SEEBOHM, Author of 'Siberia in Europe,' 'Siberia in Asia,' &c.

In 2 vols. extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 21s. net; or in Eight Parts, 2s. 6d. net, Parts I.-III. ready.

The FLORA of the ALPS. Being a Description of all the Species of Flowering Plants indigenous to Switzerland; and of the Alpine Species of the adjacent Mountain Districts of France, Italy, and Austria, including the Pyrenees. By ALFRED W. BENNETT, M.A. B.Sc. F.L.S., Lecturer on Botany at St. Thomas's Hospital. With 120 Coloured Plates.

TIMES.—"The illustrations are numerous and accurate."

ACADEMY.—"The whole book forms a valuable contribution to the intelligent enjoyment of a holiday in Switzerland."

In 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. cloth, 1l. 10s. net; or in Twelve Parts, 2s. 6d. net, Parts I.-III. ready.

BRITISH GAMEBIRDS and WILD FOWL. By BEVERLEY R. MORRIS, M.D. Revised and Corrected by W. B. TEGETMEIER, F.Z.S. M.B.O.U. With 60 large Plates Coloured by Hand.

DAILY NEWS.—"Has held a unique position among works of its class. The sixty hand-coloured plates are splendidly executed."

THE POPULAR HISTORY OF BRITISH BIRDS.

FOURTH EDITION, 6 vols. super-royal 8vo. cloth, with 394 Plates Coloured by Hand, 4l. 10s. net; also in Thirty-six Monthly Parts, 2s. 6d. net, Part XXVII. now ready.

A HISTORY of BRITISH BIRDS. By the Rev. F. O. MORRIS, B.A.

FOURTH EDITION, 3 vols. super-royal 8vo. cloth, with 248 Coloured Plates, 2l. 5s. net; also in 18 Monthly Parts, 2s. 6d. net, Part XVI. now ready.

A NATURAL HISTORY of the NESTS and EGGS of BRITISH BIRDS. By the Rev. F. O. MORRIS, B.A. Entirely Revised and brought up to Date by W. B. TEGETMEIER, F.Z.S. M.B.O.U.

FOURTH EDITION, 4 vols. super-royal 8vo with 132 Plates (1,933 Figures), all Coloured by Hand, 3l. 3s. net; also in 18 Monthly Parts, 2s. 6d. net, Part XIV. now ready.

A NATURAL HISTORY of BRITISH MOTHS. By the Rev. F. O. MORRIS, B.A. With an Introduction by W. EGMONT KIRBY, M.D.

Extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, with Portrait and Two Illustrations, 5s.

FRANCIS ORPEN MORRIS. A Memoir of the Author of 'A History of British Birds,' &c. By his Son, the Rev. M. C. F. MORRIS, B.C.L. M.A., Rector of Nunburnholme, Yorkshire.

NEW ILLUSTRATED EDITION IN MONTHLY VOLUMES.

VOLUMES I., II., AND III. NOW READY.

In extra crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 5s. per volume net.

THE REV. S. BARING-GOULD'S

LIVES of the SAINTS. With a Calendar for Every Day in the Year. New Edition, Revised, with Introduction and Additional Lives of English Martyrs, Cornish and Welsh Saints, and a full Index to the entire Work. Illustrated by over 400 Engravings.

DAILY CHRONICLE.—"No student of history—to go no further—can dispense with such a valuable book of reference. There is nothing like it in our language."

STANDARD.—"The book is of real value, since it is written with scholarly care, imaginative vision, and a happy union of charity and courage."

LITERARY WORLD.—"Mr Nimmo's edition is as nearly perfect as possible—good paper, pleasant type, appropriate illustrations, and comely binding."

London: JOHN C. NIMMO,
14, King William-street, Strand.

SATURDAY, JUNE 19, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
THE FIRST CROSSING OF SPITSBERGEN	799
THE EARLY CELTIC CHURCH OF WALES	800
THE SIKHS AND SIKH WARS	801
VAUGHAN'S POEMS	802
VERNON LEE'S ESSAYS	802
NEW NOVELS (My Run Home; A Nineteenth Century Miracle; My Lord Duke; In Vallombrosa; The Philanderers; Maurice Quain; Daughters of Thespis; Fierceheart the Soldier; His Double Self; The Dreams of Dania; False Dawn; Without Issue; The Fall of a Star; One Man's View; A Fleeting Show)	803—805
THE BYZANTINE EMPIRE IN THE TENTH CENTURY ...	805
BIBLICAL LITERATURE	805
LAW-BOOKS	807
THE MILITARY HISTORY OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY	808
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	808—809
SIR THOMAS ROE; AN ALLEGED ERROR OF VENERABLE BEDE'S; SALES; MATTHEW PRIOR AS A BOOK-COLLECTOR; THE HARLEY PAPERS	809—811
LITERARY GOSSIP	811
SCIENCE—MEDICAL LITERATURE; PROF. K. R FRESENIUS; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP	812—815
FINE ARTS—DE MORGAN ON EARLY EGYPT; ELEMENTARY MANUALS; THE SALONS AT PARIS; SALES; GOSSIP	815—817
MUSIC—THE WEEK; JUBILEE MUSIC; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	818—819
DRAMA—THE WEEK; THE 'IPHIGENEIA AT AULIS'; GOSSIP	819—820

LITERATURE

The First Crossing of Spitsbergen. By Sir W. M. Conway. With Contributions by J. W. Gregory, A. Trevor-Battye, and E. J. Garwood. (Dent & Co.)

FROM the Alps or the Andes to the Arctic Circle may seem a far cry. Yet before Sir Martin Conway Alpine travellers have been amongst Arctic adventurers. Payer's first explorations were among the then unknown and unmapped glaciers of the Adamello; Mr. Whymper once inspected Greenland. For practical as well as for scientific reasons it is well that Arctic expeditions should not be left solely in the hands of sailors. Nansen's first great success, the crossing of Greenland, was due to knowledge and skill acquired not at sea, but in a mountainous country. And among landsmen it is obvious that those who have had the most experience among the islands of ice and snow which dot the temperate zones and who have studied their features must possess exceptional qualifications in regions where similar difficulties and phenomena are to be encountered.

The companions who went out with Sir M. Conway were well chosen for the work in hand. Dr. Gregory, of Mount Kenia, and Mr. Garwood are known both as active climbers and as competent geologists. Mr. Trevor-Battye's zeal for natural history, for which, unfortunately, Spitsbergen offered but a poor field, had already led him among Arctic snows. The artist of the party, a namesake of the leader, did excellent work. Sir M. Conway's pages show how much the success of the expedition was due to this happy combination, which left him comparatively free to carry on the work of surveying, always irksome, and peculiarly so in this foggy and chilly region.

It is not, however, the results of his survey—interesting as these may be to the experts of the Geographical Society—which will give to this record of travel importance and interest for the general reader. There are many travellers who are capable of making what are termed scientific observations. Sir Martin Conway is capable of something better. He is a man of letters. He belongs at heart to the school of picturesque observers, of which Pierre Loti is, perhaps, the ablest living professor. No one who has the patience to read attentively his narrative is likely to lay it down without having received a vivid impression of the strange, solitary islands which lie nearest to the Pole of all shores accessible to vessels of ordinary construction. If, as it seems probable, Spitsbergen (this, we are told, is the correct spelling of the name) is to be brought within ten days of our ports, to become a recognized holiday resort, it is to the pages of this volume that the itinerant lecturers, who will, no doubt, be provided by the tourist caterer, will turn for vivid descriptions of the beauties and the horrors of the Far North. Although the Gulf stream keeps an open sea in the summer months to its shores, the Spitsbergen archipelago lies almost entirely north of the seventy-seventh parallel. First discovered by Dutchmen in 1596, the whale fisheries had at the beginning of the seventeenth century become of such value that at one time 18,000 men are said to have spent the summer on the islands! To avoid quarrels, a formal line of division had to be drawn between the Dutch and English whaling grounds. The whales not unnaturally retired to less troubled waters, the fisheries were after a time deserted, and no European power has thought it worth its while to hoist its flag on this No Man's Land.

It was abandoned to casual seal or walrus hunters and to scientific explorers. The latter visited and mapped its coasts, but nothing like a thorough investigation of any part of the interior had been attempted before the present expedition. Consequently its true character was unknown and wrongly imagined. The general impression was that a continuous icecap would be found, and it was under this idea that the explorers made their preparations. In place of a frozen surface they met with crevassed sloppy glaciers, surrounded by miles of quaking bogs and innumerable watercourses—a region emerging, as it were, from a glacial epoch. The perpetual day of the brief Arctic summer produced a perpetual thaw; land and snow and atmosphere seemed equally saturated. The very rocks were rotting, and crumbled under the touch of the climbers' hands or feet. "Cold and miserable air between a floor of grey sea and a low roof of grey cloud": such is the first impression received by the visitors, and it remains the dominant note of the narrative:—

"All day long the light was pale and feeble, like that of a cloudy English afternoon in December. Cold showers fell at intervals with increasing frequency and increasing volume."

"The character of the scenery is understood when it is perceived how the surfaces of all the hillsides, softened by frost and wet, slowly flow down, as bog glaciers, to lower levels."

"The air of Spitsbergen is not stimulating. It resembles that of a moist English spring when the ground is clammy beneath a dripping sky."

Travel in tents in such a region involves necessarily so many discomforts that the reader understands why previous travellers mostly stuck to their ships. The unhappy ponies (brought from Norway) which carried the baggage were constantly immersed in bogs; the sledges were broken by the moraines and rough torrent beds; the only spots dry enough to serve as camping grounds were those exposed to every blast of foul weather. The travellers were always sodden, and when out of their sleeping bags seldom warm. The misery of such a combination must be complete!

Why, the reader may ask, should human beings endeavour to inhabit, even for a time, a region so obviously unsuitable for them? And if the thirst for knowledge or novelty, or the bubble reputation, be pleaded as an excuse for pioneers, he may reasonably resent the invitation to follow in their track here offered him. Conscious possibly of this fact, impelled also by his genuine and keen appreciation of the various aspects of nature, Sir M. Conway has eagerly seized on "the gem-like moments" which even an Arctic landscape in midsummer is not without. "The Arctic glory," he tells us,

"is a thing apart, wilder, rarer and no less superb than the glory of any other region of this beautiful world. Here man has no place and there is no sign of his handiwork. Nature completes her own intentions unhelped and unhindered by him. Such pure snows no Alpine height presents, nor such pale blue skies, nor that marvellous, remote, opalescent sea with its white flocks and its yet more distant shore. No Alpine outlook penetrates through such atmosphere, so mellow, so rich."

There are days—rare days—of glorious cloud effects, when faint mists, delicate and grey, brood on the fiords and almost obliterate the bases of the hills, leaving their tops to stand out clear against a sky mottled with brilliant flocks of cloudlets. The beauties of Spitsbergen are found, not, as in true mountain regions, in the forms of the hills, but in the atmospheric colours and effects. The landscapes have the charm of breadth, of horizontal lines, rather than any sublimity or picturesqueness. To judge from the coloured plates in this volume, and still more from the original sketches by the author's relative recently exhibited, the soft purples and blues and greys of the Arctic distances have a quality singularly luminous and harmonious, and very capable of reproduction by the artist. There are flowers, too, to attract the botanist, and the Himalayan traveller recognized friends he had seen last under the shadow of the Karakoram.

The concluding chapters are occupied by a description of a voyage round the northern shores of the main island and a visit to some of its fiords, and by an account by Mr. Garwood of his adventurous climb through the persistent fog to the top of one of the bolder ridges, some 4,500 feet above sea level. The scientific results of the expedition are left for record elsewhere. This no doubt may be held expedient as far as details are concerned, but it is somewhat tantalizing to be told:—

"The whole country is intensely interesting from a scientific point of view because of the rapidity with which its surface is being modelled into such forms as were impressed in glacial times on the now temperate and inhabited parts of Northern Europe."

The author might surely have given us his general conclusions from the facts brought under his daily observation as to the action of glaciers and water; at any rate, we trust he will do so elsewhere. Mean time he has fully succeeded in his aim; he has afforded all who care for it an opportunity to obtain a most vivid impression of the scenery of Spitsbergen, and the incidents of land travel among its snows and morasses, as they strike a keen and competent observer and an experienced traveller.

The volume is handsome in its proportions, and adequately illustrated. The critic who has not learnt to read the quartos of eighteenth century travel and who dislikes all books he cannot hold up to his eyes will perhaps call it cumbrous. Such readers prefer the nondescript books dear to circulating libraries. Our wiser forefathers had their bookshelf volumes and their pocket volumes, and managed to master them both. Continental readers are to this day capable of a similar exertion. The plates are mostly from photographs; these have been well reproduced, and give a very fair idea of the general dreary aspect of the islands, while a few coloured plates help us to understand their occasional fascination. Two district maps bear witness to Sir M. Conway's labours with the plane-table and the camera.

The Celtic Church of Wales. By J. W. Willis Bund. (Nutt.)

THE author of the 'English Village Community' apologetically confessed in his preface to "having approached his subject not as an antiquary, but as a student of economic history, and even with a directly political interest." An analogous confession would not have been inappropriate in the mouth of Mr. Bund, who seems to have approached his present inquiry possessed with the conviction that the solution of such questions of latter-day politics as Disestablishment and Church government in Wales should depend on accurate views as to the nature of the early Celtic Church of that country. But it cannot be charged against him that he has allowed party bias or theological prejudices to warp his judgment on historical matters, for although avowedly "a Tory and a Churchman," he has been led to emphasize the view that the Anglican Church has always been for Wales "an alien ecclesiastical establishment" — the symbol of conquest—and that the Latin principle of the supremacy of the Church over the State is opposed to the instincts and traditions of the Celtic inhabitants of these islands!

The author finds a sufficient justification for adding another to the number of works treating of British Christianity in the fact that nearly all the existing histories regard the subject from the Latin, none from the Celtic point of view. The period which has elapsed since the publication of the ancient laws of Ireland and of Wales renders a fresh survey at last possible, and by the application of the comparative method to the study of these materials, the ascertained facts of Irish ecclesiastical history can be made to throw light on the dark problems of the sister Church of Wales. In other words, the Irish records afford sufficient details to fill in a picture of the Celtic Church:—

"Taking such a picture as a starting-point, and using it to examine Welsh customs and Welsh documents, some outlines of the ideas prevailing in Wales on Church matters may be gained,"

for

"if the Irish laws show the effect the conversion of Ireland had upon the laws and customs of the converts, the Welsh laws show us how far and in what direction four centuries of Christianity had modified the old heathen ideas of the country. So that, to some extent, the one supplements the information obtainable from the other."

It is the use which Mr. Bund thus makes of these two great collections of ancient law, by applying the comparative method to their study, that chiefly distinguishes his treatment of the subject from that of previous writers. Hitherto, so far as the history of British Christianity is concerned, the Welsh and Irish laws have been examined, for the most part, separately, and out of relation to each other, instead of in mutual corroboration, so as to supply between them some links now missing in the chain of circumstantial evidence. As a lawyer, Mr. Bund is well qualified to re-examine these documents comparatively, side by side; and so strikingly strange are some of the results of that examination that, if well founded, their publication in this book may not unreasonably be expected to mark a new departure in this field of historical research, perhaps even render it necessary that the earlier chapters of the history of the Welsh Church should be largely rewritten.

We have explained Mr. Bund's method at some length, as it is, in many respects, the most valuable feature of his book. His conclusions, on the other hand, will require revision, and for the present they may not unfairly be regarded as the tentative results of a first experiment in the comparative study of ancient Celtic law for the purposes of ecclesiastical history. We shall, however, briefly state a few of his more important conclusions.

As to the actual source of Celtic Christianity—whence and by whom introduced into the British Isles — the writer has nothing new to say, nor does he seem to consider it of much importance as compared with the admitted fact that its subsequent development was purely local, which, according to his own interpretation, means "in accordance with tribal as opposed to imperial ideas." Owing to this freedom from external influences, the conversion of the Celts was simply the accommodation of the old tribal system to the new Christianity, without displacing much of the older religion. The product of that process was "a dilution of Christianity with paganism, a mixture in which paganism largely preponderated." In support of this view the writer might have quoted the authority of Prof. Rhys, whose studies in Celtic heathendom led him, some ten years ago, to a similar conclusion, chiefly based in his case on the prevalence of pagan survivals in Welsh literature. Mr. Bund's view that the tribal organization of the Welsh modified their Christianity, instead of itself being modified by it, is also supported, though indirectly, by no less an authority than Mr. Seebohm in his recent masterly analysis of the 'Tribal System in Wales.' Unfortunately Mr. Bund does not appear to have made any serious use of that indispensable work, and his chapter on the tribal system has especially suffered in consequence.

Turning to monasticism, which was admittedly a marked characteristic of the Celtic Church, we find its definition by Mr. Bund differs widely from common opinion on the subject. The Celtic monastery he regards as a native product and not an adapted or debased form of the Latin institution. Arguing chiefly from the Irish laws, he says that at first it was probably only a name for the Christian settlement, where the converts dwelt with their wives and families, their organization founded, like the tribe, on kinship, and upon that alone. The term "saint" was also apparently restricted to those persons who were members of the religious tribe, without any regard to holiness of life.

More clearly established, perhaps, is Mr. Bund's description of the Celtic bishop as "simply a monastic official," who, quite contrary to Latin notions, had no territorial diocese over which he claimed jurisdiction; "he was a naked bishop and nothing more," says Mr. Bund, irreverently applying to him a celebrated criticism on Power's statue of the Greek slave. In Ireland such bishops swarmed, while in Wales also they were far too numerous to admit of any theory of a diocesan episcopate. Their numbers have long puzzled ecclesiastical historians, and Mr. Bund's explanation seems to be the best hitherto offered.

Another point of difference between the Celtic and Latin systems is the absence from the former of the idea that the clergy formed a privileged class distinct from and superior to the laity, or that, in consequence, the Church was supreme over the tribe or State. According to Mr. Bund's view, it was not the details of ritual, but this much greater question of the supremacy of Church or of State, that lay at the root of that bitter controversy which so long was carried on between the two churches. And if we understand our author rightly, it is from the Celt's attitude towards this question that we should derive his revolt in Wales and elsewhere against State churches generally!

The chapter which, perhaps, has most interest for the modern politician is that dealing with the endowments of the Church. The few references which the Welsh laws contain to tithes as a property of the Church are deemed to be interpolations of a later date. For no such references occur in the 'Liber Landavensis,' compiled about 1150, or in the 'Black Book of St. David's,' an unpublished survey of that diocese, made in 1326. The 'Valor' of Pope Nicholas IV., made in 1291, does, however, refer to tithes in the diocese of St. Asaph, which was most directly under English influence, but not in the other three dioceses. This seems, therefore, to be the period of their introduction, and Mr. Bund concludes that "the general levy of tithes for ecclesiastical purposes is one of the things that the Welsh owe to the Normans and Plantagenets," who diverted to the benefit of the Church, and established as tithes, the commuted food-rents originally payable by the tribesmen in support of their chieftains. Sacrilegious as this view of the secular and somewhat modern origin of Welsh tithes may seem to some, still their derivation from the tribal food-rents—the oldest incidents attached to the holding of land in Wales—would greatly strengthen the title of their present owners against "disendowment." But Mr. Bund seems unaware of the fact that these ancient dues are still paid, in the shape of small quit-rents, throughout a great part of Wales, so that the origin of tithes in that country still remains unsolved.

Mr. Bund's work is brimful of interesting points which cannot be noticed individually here. His faculty for drawing political lessons from the facts of the remote past invests his inquiry with a practical present-day interest. A piquant style conceals the aggressive audacity with which he advances his views, while his illustrations and comparisons sometimes even border on irreverence. But under the cover of much pleasantry, the book is one to demand attention, and will probably evoke many an answer from the opponents of the theory of a Celtic Church.

The Sikhs and the Sikh Wars. By General Sir Charles Gough, V.C., G.C.B., and Arthur D. Innes, M.A. (Innes & Co.)

THAT many histories of the remarkable brotherhood and confederation known as the Sikhs have been written is not surprising when the circumstances of their rise, their maintenance of a proud position amongst the states of India, and their eventual absorption by the paramount power, are remembered.

As long ago as 1808 or 1812 Lieut.-Col. Malcolm wrote a 'Sketch of the Sikhs, a Singular Nation, who inhabit the Provinces of the Penjab'; and a little later, in 1834, Henry Thoby Prinsep published an excellent account of the origin of the sect and its development under Maharaja Ranjit Singh. Other writers followed, amongst whom the names of McGregor, Thornton, Carmichael Smyth, Henry Lawrence, and Herbert Edwardes may be mentioned; but the best account of the origin of the nation is probably to be found in Capt. J. D. Cunningham's well-known work, whilst the story of their relations with the British power in India is fully set forth in the 'Career of Major George Broadfoot.' With all this information available, and with no new facts to relate, the expediency of attempting a fresh epitome may well be questioned, and we must look elsewhere if we desire to find justification for this volume.

No great search is needed; students of the histories of the Sikh wars do not require to be reminded of the public verdict that though Lord Gough possessed many valuable qualities as a soldier, he was wanting in some of those most necessary to a commander in the field. Apparently with the hope of modifying this view the authors have undertaken their task, relying for fresh matter on the records of the British regiments engaged, on the diaries of officers, including Lord Gough, and on personal communication with men who took part in the chief events. From these, surely, much might be expected, yet little results beyond disappointment. Either Lord Gough's papers are singularly deficient in interest and information for those of an officer in his position, or there may be reasons for not making free use of them; at any rate, no additional light of any value is thrown on the conduct of the wars or on the character of the chief. The authors are, no doubt, entitled to their opinion, and justified from their point of view in setting it forth; but that they have little information beyond what has already been published there seems no reason to doubt.

Briefly the case was thus. Our frontier was threatened by the Sikhs, who were at the time in a state of revolt against their own rulers. Hardinge, who was Governor-General, desired if possible to keep peace and preserve the Sikhs in order that they might form an independent barrier between British India and the Mohammedan states towards the north-west. This policy of peace was strongly enjoined from England, but was considered to be jeopardized by the presence on the frontier at a critical time of the Commander-in-Chief. He, seeing the probabilities of invasion, naturally desired to take steps to meet the danger; but those steps the Governor-General thought were likely to precipitate matters. The result of the presence on the frontier at such a time of two personages in positions so exalted could scarcely fail to be prejudicial. Military preparation conflicted with the desired policy, and was made to give way to it. Consequently, as Lord Gough's admirers with much force assert, he should not be held responsible for failure from want of sufficient troops or for bloodshed, the result of the attack on an intrepid foe with inadequate numbers. The contention is fair, and may, to a great extent, be conceded.

The next episode illustrative of the differences of opinion between Hardinge and Gough is the event which took place just before the battle of Firozshah. It was told for the first time in the 'Career of Major Broadfoot,' and was repeated in the life of Lord Hardinge by his son ("Rulers of India"). Gough wished to attack the Sikhs without waiting for the Firozpur army under Littler, whereas Hardinge considered that to do so would be fatal, and he peremptorily overruled the Commander-in-Chief in the field. The advocates for the latter urge that Littler would have arrived in time to supply the place of the reserve who were to take part in the attack; and great store is set on the fact that, by waiting, three and a half hours of daylight, during which the battle might have been won, were lost.

On the other hand, events proved that Gough's army, even when reinforced by Littler's division, was none too strong for the assault; indeed, so severe was the contest that nightfall and the consequent partial suspension of hostilities were probably blessings to our wearied men, for during the night discipline in the Sikh camp was lost. The men plundered the tents of their own commander-in-chief, and in the morning failed to stand before the British assault.

Whatever other opinions may have been held as to the conduct of the campaign, the Duke of Wellington's can be inferred from the fact that he suggested a course of action whereby Hardinge was furnished with authority to enable him to command personally the troops in India, and further he promised to explain to Gough the absolute necessity for the measure; but before the powers arrived the necessity for employing them had passed. The victory of Sobraon had obliterated the bloody record of Firozshah, and the tension of feeling in England was relaxed. In describing the battle of Sobraon (or the fight of Hariki, as the Sikhs call it) the authors seem to have failed to grasp some of the most salient features. The calmness with which, when the day was lost, certain Sikh regiments deployed under our close and murderous fire, and retired on the river and ford as if on parade; and the striking figure of their honoured chief Sham Singh, Atariwala, who had been forced by the taunts of the Rani to take part against us in a combat which he deplored, are alike missed. Sir Lepel Griffin, in the 'Punjab Chiefs,' tells how the Sardar on the morning of the battle dressed himself in white,

> "and, having mounted his white mare, addressed his men, begging them, as true sons of the Khalsa, to die rather than turn their backs on the enemy. During the first part of the battle, he was everywhere present, urging the Sikhs to fight bravely; and it was not till he saw that all was lost, that he spurred forward against the 50th Regiment, waving his sword, and calling on his men to follow him. Some fifty of them obeyed the call, but were driven back into the river, and Sham Singh fell dead from his horse, pierced with seven balls.....The body of the old Sardar, conspicuous by his white dress and long white beard, was discovered where the dead lay thickest."

Such incidents should not be overlooked when the story of the battle is told.

Respecting the second Sikh war, it is unnecessary to examine the whole detail. The explanation why Gough was so dilatory in supporting Edwardes at Multan is unsatisfactory; possibly he did not appreciate the gravity of the situation, and perhaps he thought that Edwardes, but recently his own aide-de-camp, was exaggerating its importance, and might with advantage experience some of the sweet uses of adversity. However that may be, the general who carried impetuosity to a fault in the field seems to have carried caution to excess in council. Then when he did take command the old errors were repeated; surely an ordinary reconnaissance would have acquainted him with the movements of the enemy at Ramnuggur and Chilianwala, where he seems to have come suddenly on the foe, without feeling his way, and to have had no option but to fight. The result was disastrous, but, as before at Sobraon, the victory at Gujerat retrieved the situation. There the guns had time to shake the enemy, thanks in a measure to the episode here related that Lord Gough was enticed on to the roof of a house by Grant, who then removed the ladder. This story is treated as a fiction, but it seems to be founded on fact. The history, however, of the Sikh wars—the second, specially—has yet to be written, and must probably be deferred until the papers of Lord Dalhousie are published, and till further information is available. The present volume will be useful as a contribution to existing evidence, though we fear it will not succeed in convincing the historian that Lord Gough was a great and prudent general. Possibly, indeed, the book may have a detrimental effect on his reputation. People were forgetting the faults for which he has been blamed, and recollecting merely his victories and his noble qualities.

With respect to the volume itself, the absence of a good portrait of the handsome old man is to be regretted, and it is marred by mistakes which might easily have been avoided. Thus on the map facing p. 73 the dates of the various battles are misstated in a remarkable way. In one place they are correctly quoted thus: Moodkee, December 18th, and Firozshah, December 21st and 22nd; yet immediately below this the dates are entered as February. Again, it would be interesting to know on what authority the statement is made that Duleep Singh was born after Ranjit Singh's death; he was, we believe, nine years old in 1846, and the great Maharaja died in June, 1839. On p. 82 we are told that "balled" ammunition was served out, and may next expect to hear of a salute fired with blanked cartridge. The type is good and clear, but the binding is defective, a blemish we noticed when reviewing the 'Sepoy Revolt' published by the same firm.

Poems of Henry Vaughan. Edited by E. K. Chambers. 2 vols. (Lawrence & Bullen.)

THIS new instalment of the "Muses' Library" renders accessible for the first time the complete poems of the most thoughtful among the old devotional poets of our English tongue. Dr. Grosart's edition was bulky and for private circulation only. The Aldine edition was not complete, being, like the facsimile edition published by Mr. Elliot Stock in 1885, a reprint of Vaughan's greatest work alone, the 'Silex Scintillans.' Here at length we have a complete edition in two dainty little volumes, charmingly printed, tastefully bound, handy for the pocket, admirably edited. Mr. E. K. Chambers is responsible for this task, and excellently he has done his part. His notes provide all needful illustration of the text, and, in particular, bring together all the parallels between Vaughan and his avowed model, Herbert. To the second volume he has prefixed a biographical note, in which he has collected the latest scraps of information regarding the ancestry and private history both of Henry Vaughan and of his brother Thomas—better known under the name of Eugenius Philalethes, which he assumed in those alchemical writings by which he is chiefly distinguished. The introduction to this edition is from the pen of the Rev. H. C. Beeching, and is at once complete, succinct, and full of appreciation, enthusiastic without excess. The reader who does not already know Vaughan could not have a better guide than Mr. Beeching, and none of the lesser-known poets has been luckier in editor, introducer, and publisher than the at last fortunate Henry Vaughan.

"At last fortunate," we say, for Vaughan has been an unfortunate poet. From another standpoint, however, he may be considered a consoling proof that no good work is finally lost. The poems on which his fame must rest, 'Silex Scintillans,' appear to have gone through two editions in five years, and then completely to have collapsed. There is no certain trace of any further edition from the seventeenth century until nearly half through the nineteenth century. We doubt whether any poems of like merit can show a like extraordinary eclipse—an eclipse so long and total that it might well seem final. Yet the neglected volume had become operative before its republication, and on no less a poet than Wordsworth. It is now proved that Wordsworth had amongst his books a copy of 'Silex Scintillans'; and the influence of Vaughan's mystical philosophy is clearly visible on Wordsworth's, the influence of Vaughan's poetry evident in many a Wordsworthian passage, particularly in the famous 'Intimations of Immortality.' Indeed, not only does this contain reminiscences of individual passages in Vaughan, but the whole germ of the great ode is manifestly a certain poem of Vaughan's—the beautiful and most Wordsworth-like 'Retreat.' The extent to which Vaughan followed Herbert has caused them to be compared. Poem for poem, Vaughan comes ill out of the comparison. Herbert has more of level excellence, is nearer to an artist—though both seem far enough from artists to our modern criticism. There is a more than Wordsworthian waste of dreariness in Vaughan—recompensed, as in Wordsworth, by a flash, a line, a passage, here and there. Very few, too few, are the poems which stand forth as wholes. But when he is touched by that parsimonious inspiration, it is not in Herbert, it is not in Crashaw, it is not in anything of the sixteenth or seventeenth century, that we can find his likeness. His lines then have so instantaneous a magic, make such wonderfulness of every-day words, are so one with the brain of nature, that they cannot be paralleled before the advent of Wordsworth himself. This seems a daring saying: yet let the reader note only the examples Mr. Beeching quotes in his introduction. Or, to take a less perfect instance not there quoted, but beautiful enough, from 'Childhood':—

> I cannot reach it; and my striving eye
> Dazzles at it, as at eternity.
> Were now that chronicle alive,
> Those white designs which children drive,
> * * * *
> Quickly would I make my path even,
> And by mere playing go to heaven.
> * * * *
> How do I study now, and scan
> Thee more than e'er I studied man,
> And only see through a long night
> Thy edges and thy bordering light!

That is not Vaughan at his highest (Mr. Beeching has robbed us of the finest passages), yet surely it is a sweet mixture of quite modern feeling with antique utterance. He is full, too, of strange gleams of poetic intuition into things not yet quite known to science. In one poem he makes solemn use of the idea (not unfamiliar to modern mystical writers) that all man's acts are invisibly photographed on the inanimate things around him:—

> I—alas!
> Was shown one day in a strange glass
> That busy commerce kept between
> God and His creatures, though unseen.
> They hear, see, speak,
> And into loud discoveries break,
> As loud as blood.....
> Hence sand and dust
> Are shak'd for witnesses, and stones,
> Which some think dead, shall all at once
> With one attesting voice detect
> The secret sins we least suspect.
> For know, wild men, that when you err,
> Each thing turns scribe and register.

A poet in whom these are not the finest and most striking things, but only casual gleanings left from the gleanings of Mr. Beeching's introduction, should find many fresh lovers in this delightful edition. Like Wordsworth, he "wakens a sort of soul in sense," can give to plain speech mystery and depth which take us by surprise. Felicity starts on us as from an ambush.

Limbo, and other Essays. By Vernon Lee. (Grant Richards.)

THEY are not to be taken too seriously, these essays that are the by-play of that active leisure of which St. Jerome, as the author bids us know, is the peaceful patron. But if they do not offer the solid stuff, for instance, of Vernon Lee's 'Euphorion,' they are not without the qualities of true insight, of observant experience, even of a certain erudition. But they possess other qualities more appealing; for their peculiar charm lies in the frank confidence of a style that is free from all affectation and egoism; that is buoyant, lucid, redolent of warm airs, and coloured by the unstudied graces of Nature in lands "where the richness runs to flowers." The words of Aprile come back to us as we read the work of one who reflects so plainly in her tastes the influence of Browning—and what more natural in her happy exile under Italian skies? Most marked, perhaps, is this influence in that delightful fantasy of 'Tuscan Midsummer Magic' to whose mysteries 'Sordello' must have been her guide. Certainly she is at her best among those Italian scenes which reveal most intimately her personal habits and environment. The book should have been called after one of the chapters that treat of such themes rather than after 'Limbo,' an essay which, though it disarms criticism by proclaiming itself to be "exclusively addressed to the very nicest people," does not perhaps quite worthily represent the writer's powers. If these studies do not pretend to the terse restraint, the implicit manner, the exquisiteness—in its literal sense—of Mrs. Meynell's style, they have their own compensating virtues. With the same gentle arbitrariness, tempered by sane judgment, they have a fresher charm, a more careless spontaneity; the note of artifice or of preciousness is not to be suspected in them. And though Mrs. Meynell studiously avoids the first person, while Vernon Lee uses it with frank abandonment, yet it is the latter who is the less self-conscious in her work.

That is an excellent chapter on 'The Lie of the Land,' the ineffable something which, as distinct from colour and such obvious effects as may be easily reduced to words, constitutes the individuality of certain scenes in our association. In this chapter the author weighs with just discrimination the work of the Impressionist school of painters—what they have achieved, and what, in respect to the lie of the land, they are content to ignore. Speaking elsewhere of Italian gardens, the history of their development, and of "the decorative sculpture which worked in union with place and light and surroundings," she has a kind word to say for the much abused school of Bernini, whose works, she contends, "are thoroughly right in the open air." "Imagine them," she adds,

"replaced by fine classic sculpture—stiff manikins struggling with the overwhelming height, the crushing hugeness of all things Roman; little tin soldiers lost in the sky instead of those gallant theatrical creatures swaggering among the clouds, pieces of wind-torn cloud, petrified for the occasion, themselves!"

This is an unfortunate passage if by "classic sculpture" the author refers to Greek work. Can she have forgotten the colossal forms of Phidias—"fine" too, for all their largeness, if we may judge from his pediment work—that she should imagine these things to be the invention of Bernini?

But to pass from special themes to general. And here, on such topics as 'Leisure' or 'The Praise of Old Houses,' we can hardly hope for thoughts that are very new, save in the manner of expressing them. But Vernon Lee has the manner. Always vivacious in sentiment, and gifted with a delightful garrulity, she clothes familiar truths with the most engaging air of novelty. But her freshness is not simply a freshness of form; she has the finer instinct for perceptions that escape the common mind:—

"The world wants useful inhabitants. True. But the clouds building bridges over the sea, the storms modelling the peaks and flanks of the mountains, are a part of the world; and they want creatures to sit and look at them and learn their life's secrets, and carry them away, conveyed perhaps merely in altered tone of voice, or brightened colour of eye, to revive the spiritual and physical hewers of wood and drawers of water. For the poor sons and daughters of men require for sustenance, as well as food and fuel, and intellect and morals, the special mysterious commodity called charm."

And even if the easy freedom of Vernon Lee's style has naturally the defect of its kind, one would not care to picture her at the task of polishing her composition. "I hope," she says somewhere, "that my readers will be more literary characters than myself." The quaint modesty of the phrase renders the duty of a reviewing pedant the more invidious. Yet there are some few faults which might be remedied with small expense of pains. Thus, to be precise, one cannot be said to "aspire at," or to "investigate into"; one does not actively "stroll" a person, nor does a thing passively "obliterate." And if the author, in a passing mood of criticism, chances to revise her work, she will, perhaps, take note of the following fallacy:—

"Though I have pined to hear the singers of last century, I know that any other period than this of the world's history would be detestable to live in. For one thing—one among other instances of brutish dulness—our ancestors knew nothing of the emotion of the past, the rapture of old towns and houses."

One has heard of a modern representation of the 'Agamemnon' with the palace of Mycenæ in ruins, and here the obverse of this picture is only a little less fascinating.

NEW NOVELS.

My Run Home. By Rolf Boldrewood. (Macmillan & Co.)

ROLF BOLDREWOOD'S last story is a racy volume. It has many of the best qualities of Whyte Melville, the breezy freshness and vigour of Frank Smedley, with the dash and something of the abandon of Lever. We are bound to admit that we did not expect quite so much spirit from Rolf Boldrewood; for, vigorous as he was in 'Robbery under Arms,' when he had command of a novel and unhackneyed subject, some of his later stories have been comparatively dull and perfunctory. His last volume, however, is one of his best, and suggests a possibility of even better things from him in the future. In the autobiographical form he gives the experiences of an Australian scion of an old English family who returns to the home of his father's youth—to Boldrewood Chase, where he enjoys the hospitality of his uncle and the attentions of his girl cousins, and proceeds to show the old country what Young Australia can do at its best. He is a splendid man—quite out of the common, it must be confessed: handsome and bearded, of any height and girth you like to mention, an admirable sportsman, a buck-jumper such as we do not raise in England, a consummate boxer, an ideal ladies' man, a poet whose speech is larded with Dickens and Thackeray—in brief, a Crichton of the Antipodes. We are compelled to make all these admissions, which may seem to cast a little doubt on the estimate already given of 'My Run Home.' But he who loves an adventure story will not be put off the scent by trivial details of this kind, knowing how essential it is to a novel of the spirited and open-air order that its hero should have unlimited claims on the admiration of the reader. Needless to say, there is no particular plot in Rolf Boldrewood's story. It is a mere record of movement—a constant posing of situations of difficulty and danger, with the inevitable hero ever ready to negotiate them.

A Nineteenth Century Miracle. By Z. Z. (Louis Zangwill). (Chatto & Windus.)

MR. ZANGWILL here adventures on what we believe is a new line for him, the novel of mystery. He has certainly succeeded in finding a sufficiently gruesome murder on which to hang his story, and the cynical frankness with which the murderer and his accomplice rejoice over their crime reminds one of the story of the workman who never laughed so much since father died. But in spite of the gruesomeness the novel is not particularly successful; Mr. Zangwill has been so ingenious in diverting the scent from the true murderer that his confession at the end seems incredible. Moreover the exact and business-like details of the inquest, erroneously imagined to be de rigueur in such stories, are tedious and might be considerably abbreviated. It is a further mistake too, in our view, to introduce so much love-making in a novel of mystery; it is not strictly business, and in this instance becomes rather nauseous. Mr. Zangwill is not a Gaboriau yet.

My Lord Duke. By E. W. Hornung. (Cassell & Co.)

'MY LORD DUKE' is thoroughly clever and amusing. The mystery which surrounds the story of the real duke and the ingenious way in which all the problems are solved in the end are most entertaining, but still more are we pleased with the way in which the characters are drawn. If any criticism is to be passed, it is that the book is almost too slight for the excellence of the character drawing; such power of delineation seems wasted on what after all is rather a slight work, and we should be glad to see Mr. Hornung undertake a more important novel. Claude especially, the indecisive and generous friend, is admirable, and among the minor characters the golf-playing Home Secretary is the best.

In Vallombrosa. By Adeline Sergeant. (White & Co.)

THERE is very little story in this book, and the little that there is is uninteresting; the rest of the book is taken up with long descriptions of the scenery of Vallombrosa and an account of the legend of a saint. It would have been much more satisfactory if Miss Sergeant had confined herself simply to the description and the account, and labelled her book a sketch or a guide-book, instead of adding to it the feeble story she has invented. The characters are not living, they merely illustrate qualities, and as no interest lies in the commonplace plot there is nothing to redeem the story. But the morals are unimpeachable.

The Philanderers. By A. E. W. Mason. (Macmillan & Co.)

MR. MASON here deserts the historical romance by which he first achieved success for the novel of sentiment, and he has again achieved success. This is a well-observed and well-thought-out study of weakminded sentimentalists contrasted with a strong man, master of himself and of his passions. The sentimentalists—or philanderers, as Mr. Mason prefers to call them—form a dreary society of humbug and weakness and craven feelings, but they are not dreary to read about: Mr. Mason avoids this by his capacity for entering into their point of view and making the reader, while condemning their actions, understand their motives. Clarice, wayward and capricious, capable of the meanest actions, yet quite wide-awake to true nobility and strength of character, would be unintelligible in less skilful hands; but Mr. Mason understands her so well that her actions never excite surprise. Mallinson, too, her currish husband, is equally truly felt. And the author's ability to bring to light the springs of weakness makes him no less capable of realizing a fine man such as Drake is represented. He may possibly have been suggested, as some reviewer has hinted, by 'The God in the Car'; but if so it is a suggestion quite independently treated and made his own by Mr. Mason, who is to be much congratulated on a fine book.

Maurice Quain. By Morley Roberts. (Hutchinson & Co.)

MR. MORLEY ROBERTS has written a depressing but powerful story in 'Maurice Quain,' but the conscious or unconscious influence of Dickens is upon him. The story opens weakly with Maurice Quain in one of his black moods, rowing up the river at night on the chance that some one will be good enough to attempt suicide. Naturally there is a beautiful young woman ready to oblige, and Maurice, not being able to lift her into his crazy little boat, fastens her to it by means of her hair and tows her along. He takes her to his own rooms, where she regains consciousness. Maurice is a married man, and the beautiful young woman he has rescued from a watery grave is a married woman. So the story begins. As it develops Maurice shows himself to be the possessor of an extremely unenviable temper and temperament. His mistress, the woman he rescued, is cursed with a jealous temper, but is otherwise a very charming creature, whom Maurice, without intending to do so, treats very badly. Mr. Roberts's study of Maurice Quain is a powerful one, but we should have liked to notice a little more humour in the treatment of such a man. The book is intolerably gloomy, and the reader has a suspicion that the author means it to be so. It is life poverty-stricken, unfortunate, and with all the fun left out.

Daughters of Thespis. By John Bickerdyke. (Simpkin, Marshall & Co.)

In this story "the pretty sinner," to use John Bickerdyke's own words, which we can honestly endorse, "is not disguised in the white robes of virtue." On the contrary, she parades her lack of them so persistently that she is absolutely without fascination. Several men fall desperately in love with her, but John Bickerdyke's presentation of his pretty sinner leaves the reader wondering at their infatuation. He is told that she is beautiful; but she never makes a clever, pretty, or amusing remark. In a word, she is absolutely without charm. Eric Fairlough, who is engaged to a beautiful, good, and charming actress, Dorothy Sheriden, becomes so infatuated with the pretty sinner that he behaves not only like a blackguard to his betrothed, but like an absolute imbecile. In the end Dorothy, who began by making forty pounds a week, is, through an accident, reduced to poverty and despair, and is about to commit suicide when her worthless lover saves her. The pretty sinner, on the contrary, who was morally as completely destitute of the robes of virtue as she was of more material garments when she posed for the nude in a life school to a group of young artists, after being the mistress of a German moneylender, a consumptive baronet, the idiot Eric Fairlough, and an elderly duke, finishes up by marrying an Irish peer. The marvel is that, as far as we have been able to calculate, on her marriage day she had not yet entered upon the eighteenth year of her age.

Fierceheart the Soldier. By J. C. Snaith. (Innes & Co.)

Mr. Snaith's manner of writing English reminds the reader at times of a caricature of that of Mr. George Meredith. This is a fashion so irritating that Mr. Snaith should get quit of it as soon as possible. He has a keen eye for character, and he can tell a story, though he is apt to retard the action of it unduly with long-winded conversations, notably those between the soldier and the parson. All the characters are a trifle loquacious, but these two could at a pinch talk themselves silly. In spite of the faults which we have indicated, this story of the '45 has that in it which very few stories have—originality, and an imagination that at least has strength. If Mr. Snaith will only cultivate a simple style, and refrain from putting his own observations, however clever, into his characters' mouths, he will yet achieve something considerable.

His Double Self. By E. Curtis. (Jarrold & Sons.)

The idea of Mr. Curtis's story is uninteresting, because it is, so far as we know in our present state of ignorance, an impossible idea. Keith Winstanely is thrown into the water one foggy night. Some one jumps in to save him, and thereby sustains in his own person a serious accident, which, to a certain extent, deprives him of memory. Keith Winstanely imagines his deliverer is dead, and from that time speaks and acts in a way that is only intelligible on the hypothesis that the astral body, or whatever it is called, of some one else is, for the time, lodged in Keith Winstanely's body. Although the idea is remote from probability, yet it might have been so treated as to make its improbability count for nothing. This Mr. Curtis has hardly succeeded in doing. Not one of the characters is alive. They have to take Keith Winstanely seriously, and that is all they can do. The reader, however, will find his attention held by the question: Who threw the hero into the water?

The Dreams of Dania. By Frederick Langbridge. (Bowden.)

Dania was an exceedingly foolish young woman, and deserved a much worse fate than Mr. Langbridge apportions to her. She had literary aspirations, and was accustomed to read her writings aloud to Gerard, who, though he loved her, could not praise them with a good conscience. Dania resented his conduct bitterly. What Gerard despised, however, Standish Verschoyle in a freak of good humour accepted for his paper, and as a bad joke addressed to Dania a fulsome letter of praise. Ultimately they make each other's acquaintance, and Dania, although she is supposed to be engaged to Gerard, flings him over in favour of Standish. When Gerard was informed of this "he gave a little start. His eyes seemed to be swimming in a red haze." And when Dania went so far as to tell him that she loved another man with a love such as no woman would ever bestow on him, "Gerard's white face seemed to pass through one fierce spasm into a kind of peace." In the end, of course, Standish proves himself a cad, and Gerard and Dania, having both written what is fervently praised by either, find solace in each other's arms once more. Could one only manage to like Dania, the story of her dreams would be interesting enough, for it is told with some skill.

False Dawn. By Francis Prevost. (Ward, Lock & Co.)

Considering the material at his command, Mr. Prevost seems to have unduly prolonged the story of his unmarried hero's love for a married woman, especially as there is neither catastrophe nor happy ending. The result of the man's love for the woman is to unman him, and the reader accordingly has a poorer opinion of him at the end of the story than at the beginning. Of the heroine it is difficult to know what to think. When she is brought on the scene she undoubtedly gives the impression that she is a light woman. But as the story progresses the reader discovers that she has quite a passion for respectability, and a deep sense of right and wrong. There is a great deal of brilliant conversation between them and others—so brilliant sometimes that it does everything but ring true. The hero's conversation with the policeman on the bridge, for example, is so false as to be almost ludicrous. Only imagine a young man who was once the hope of his party in the House of Commons philosophizing to a policeman upon women and love! Mr. Prevost writes well, and has a pretty wit; but so far his books do not show a very close grip of life.

Without Issue. By Henry Cresswell. (Hurst & Blackett.)

There is a plot in Mr. Cresswell's story, but little else. The characters are insipid creations at the best, and their conversation is sometimes so small as to make one wonder why they take the trouble to open their mouths at all. The younger of the sisters, however, is in a way quite extraordinary. How one so young should be so abnormally selfish and depraved (in a quite respectable manner) certainly puzzles the reader, and, were it possible to have any affection for her, might make him tremble for her future. The dilemma, however, which she and the villain of the piece construct for her sister is too impossible, and one cannot feel any sympathy with the heroine's distress. Rather are we constantly wondering how such depravity and innocence live together without being uncomfortable.

The Fall of a Star. By Sir William Magnay, Bart. (Macmillan & Co.)

A melodramatic story, narrated simply and unaffectedly, and involving a great success in the House of Commons at a moment when a charge of felony is about to be made against the successful speaker, has strong claims on popularity. That the hero should suddenly become a villain is a point in favour of the prospects of popularity. In fact, the story is good, and there is no need to spoil it by any further hint of its details. With regard to the literary aspect of the volume, the best that can be said is that the author takes care not to spoil a good plot, though a suspicion is easily aroused that the plot is one rather for a play than a novel. It is a weak point, no doubt, that the hero's scientific tastes should be inadequately accounted for, seeing that they are essential to the story; but the blemish is slight. The book may be confidently read by those who fear the more "advanced" tendencies of modern fiction.

One Man's View. By Leonard Merrick. (Grant Richards.)

Lawyers rarely make good lovers in fiction. A prominent instance readily occurs to the mind of one who made an offer of marriage "without prejudice." Leonard Merrick's hero, who becomes Solicitor-General, has to marry and divorce his wife before she really returns his love for her, and we leave the happy couple in full confidence that they will marry again. The scheme of the story does not constitute an ideal plot, and the reader is hardly satisfied that such exceptional proceedings are warranted. Such as it is, the story is written carefully and intelligently. It cannot be described as either interesting or exciting. Its merit lies in the fact that it gives the lawyer hero a better character than is usually accorded to lawyers in fiction.

A Fleeting Show. By G. Beresford Fitz-Gerald. (Digby, Long & Co.)

APART from a reference to Diane de Poitiers as "that very dissimilar person" (the only other person mentioned in the same sentence being the head of an Oxford college), there is nothing remarkable in 'A Fleeting Show.' The study of an unusual form of mental affliction; some slight sketches of scenes in London, Oxford, Paris, Venice, Madrid, and other places too numerous to mention; a lady who is quaintly referred to as a "modern cameleon," and her sister, who is the heroine, supply some of the materials of a story which is too feverish to be satisfactory.

L'Épopée Byzantine à la Fin du Dixième Siècle : Jean Tzimiscès, les Jeunes Années de Basile II., le Tueur de Bulgares (969–989). Par Gustave Schlumberger. (Hachette & Cie.)

THE tenth century witnessed a great revival of imperial power both in Eastern and Western Europe. In the West the work of the eighth century had been half undone, and the ruined edifice of Pippin and Charles the Great had to be restored in a new shape by the Ottos. In the East, on the other hand, the effects of the Isaurian revival had been permanent, and, notwithstanding the iconoclastic schism, there had been no decline or disintegration such as had befallen the Western Empire in the ninth century. The Isaurian emperors had most wisely restricted their aims to the consolidation of the empire as they found it, and had not embarked on a policy of redeeming lost imperial lands. And so while the enormous dominion of Charles was falling asunder, and his institutions were sinking into decay, the Macedonian dynasty entered upon a flourishing and compact inheritance, and found itself able to engage in a policy of expansion. The Saxon sovereigns had the harder task of consolidating the German kingdom before they won the empire and restored its old prestige. The Macedonian emperors were not called upon to renovate a degenerate society; but they were forced to watch with a constant and jealous eye the powerful nobles of Asia Minor. Eastern and Western empires alike had to struggle for life and death with barbarous enemies; Tzimisces beat back the Russians, as Henry the Fowler and Otto the Great beat back the Magyars. But whatever were the similarities and the differences in their tasks, the tenth century was an age of great monarchs in Europe—Henry, and the three Ottos, Nicephorus Phocas, John Tzimisces, Basil II., all successful champions of Christendom or recoverers of lost imperial dominions.

M. Gustave Schlumberger has constituted himself the historian of the three Eastern heroes. His large and handsome monograph on Nicephorus Phocas was reviewed in the Athenæum some years ago. In the present work, which has been brought out (by different publishers) in an equally sumptuous form, he has continued the story from the death of Nicephorus to the thirteenth year of Basil, ending with the departure of the Princess Anna (unhappy princess! sighs M. Schlumberger) to spend her life with the rude barbarian Vladimir of Kiev. Another volume, which is nearly written, will carry the narrative down to the death of Basil; and M. Schlumberger has set before himself as the ultimate termination of his labours the abdication of Michael VI. in 1057, when the Macedonian dynasty makes way for that of the Comneni.

The execution of the present volume is beyond all praise. It has involved long and laborious researches in sources written in many languages, not only Greek and Latin, but Arabic, Armenian, Georgian, and Slavonic; and M. Schlumberger has travelled for the sake of his book, making a pilgrimage, for instance, to Armenia, to visit the ruins of Ani, the residence of the Bagratid kings, who play an important part in the history of this period. But the historian has not lost himself in the archæologist, and with all his "minutieux travail de mosaïque," M. Schlumberger keeps his reader's interest in the march of events fully awake. It is startling at first to find 700 pages or so devoted to the events of twenty years, which Lebeau and Finlay disposed of in about a page to a year. Without new material such an enlargement would hardly have been possible. But the historian has new sources of which Finlay could not make use, especially the Arabic writer Yahia ibn-Said ibn-Batrik el Antaky, whose chronicle has been rendered accessible by Baron Rosen. Moreover M. Schlumberger has related in great detail the history of Southern Italy, a corner of the empire with which Finlay dealt in very summary fashion. The disastrous expedition of Otto II., which has been well told by Giesebrecht from the German point of view, is, next to the Russian campaign of Tzimisces, the most exciting episode in this volume. The author observes, somewhat regretfully, that we have not "la femme" to lend her interest to the drama, as we had in 'Nicéphore Phocas.' At the very outset we have to take leave of the proud, unscrupulous Theophano, the consort of Romanus and Nicephorus, the mistress of John Tzimisces, whom she incited to slay her husband. It is hard to imagine a more sudden or complete catastrophe in a human life than that which befell Theophano in the hour of her fancied triumph. To win his own pardon from the Church Tzimisces was commanded to sacrifice his paramour, and he did not hesitate for an instant. Theophano was banished to the island of Protê, within sight of the capital. Can one imagine her terrible surprise? M. Schlumberger has skilfully brought out the situation, in a passage which may be cited as a specimen:—

"Poussée peut-être à la fois par la haine, l'amour et l'ambition, peut-être bien plutôt par le désir plus noble de préserver ses fils menacés par Nicéphore, elle fait tuer par son amant son vieil époux. Elle-même guide les pas des assassins tremblants dans cette nuit terrible! La victime désignée périt misérablement. L'amant meurtrier s'assoit sur le trône des basileis. Théophano plus que jamais se croit impératrice souveraine avec cette seule différence, qu'elle a quitté la couche du mystique et grossier Nicéphore pour celle de l'Arménien ardent et fin, jeune encore, qu'elle se figure uni à elle par les liens d'une passion fougueuse. Déjà elle roule en sa tête charmante de radieux projets de vie à deux dans la toute-puissance. Soudain un prêtre cassé par l'âge, un vieillard moribond se dresse vengeur entre elle et ce rêve presque réalisé. Polyeucte, d'une voix déjà mourante, crie à Jean Tzimiscès: '.....Chasse, chasse Théophano de ta couche, de son palais, de sa capitale, sinon tu ne régneras point!' Et l'amant que la malheureuse avait cru lié à elle pour toujours par leur crime même, témoignant ainsi à quel point ce fut l'amour du rang suprême bien plus que sa passion qui l'a rendu meurtrier, se courbe devant l'arrêt du vieillard sans un mot de protestation, sans l'ombre d'une résistance. Sur-le-champ il sacrifie celle qu'il prétendait tant aimer. Vit-on jamais déception plus amère, chute plus surprenante!"

The judgments of M. Schlumberger on doubtful or debated points strike us as usually discreet. There can be no question that he is right in deciding for A.D. 972 as the year of the Russian expedition of Tzimisces, and 973 as the year of the death of Sviatoslav, Prince of Kiev, notwithstanding the contrary opinion of several Russian scholars, who place both events a year earlier. (On p. 82, note, there should be a reference to p. 172, note 1.) Another question, of greater interest, is the identity of the Princess Theophano who became the wife of Otto II. and mother of Otto III. The Emperor Otto the Great had asked for his son a princess born in the purple, daughter of Romanus II. and Theophano, sister of Basil II. Now (1) the Byzantine sources mention no daughter of Romanus except Anna, who subsequently married Vladimir of Kiev. (2) Bishop Liutprand of Cremona, in the famous account of his embassy to the Court of Nicephorus, does not give the name of the princess whose hand was sought for the Saxon prince. (3) Bishop Thietmar of Merseburg expressly states that John Tzimisces sent to Germany not the purple-born lady, but a niece of his own named Theophano ("non virginem desideratam, sed neptem suam Theophanou vocatam"). If we accept the statement of Thietmar, we may infer that Anna was the maiden whom the Western Court desired. This is the view which has been defended by Moltmann. But it is difficult to suppose that the powerful emperor of the West would have so easily suffered the usurper of the East to impose an unsought bride upon his son, and received her as if she were the true purple-born. The silence of the Greek writers as to the existence of Theophano is very far from being conclusive, and the statement of Thietmar can be explained as a false inference of the writer. Assuming Theophano to have been the daughter of Romanus, she would have been the neptis of John Tzimisces, for he married, soon after his accession, the sister of Romanus. He would naturally have emphasized this affinity of his own to the bride, and so she appears in the diploma drawn up by her bridegroom on the occasion of his marriage as "Iohannis Constantinopolitani imperatoris neptis clarissima." This might have easily misled Thietmar, ignorant that John had married her aunt Theodora. It is therefore, on the whole, prudent to favour the view (adopted by M. Schlumberger with some hesitation) that Theophano was the sister of Basil. She was worthy, indeed, to be his sister. She was probably the ablest woman who had to deal with public affairs in Europe during the ninth, tenth, and eleventh centuries. What a contrast was her successful administration during the minority of Otto III. with the calamitous regency of Agnes of Poictiers, the mother of Henry IV.!

We must call attention to a highly important rectification of chronology which has been established by M. Schlumberger in regard to the conquest of Northern Greece by the Bulgarian leader Samuel, the great antagonist of Basil Bulgaroctonus. The capture of Larissa and conquest of Thessaly had been hitherto placed in A.D. 980 or 981, whereas the true date is A.D. 986. This follows from certain passages in the 'Strategicon' of Kekaumenos, a document of the eleventh century, first edited by Vasilievski. Since M. Schlumberger wrote, a new text of this work has appeared by Vasilievski and Jernstedt.

The only part of M. Schlumberger's book on which we have any serious criticism to make is the map. Small though the scale is, there is plenty of room for the insertion of a number of places in Asia Minor which occur in the narrative, such as Pankaleia, Karissa, Euagina, Lykandos (Lapara), &c. This would have made the map far more useful. But even accepting it as merely destined to illustrate the distribution of the Empire into Themes, we doubt whether the divisions are accurately drawn. We observe that there is no demarcation between the Bucellarian and the Charsian Themes; the Theme of Lycandus seems to protrude too far west, while the Theme of Cappadocia, which probably did not cross the Halys, is enlarged at the expense of the Charsian. The Charsian Theme reached down to the borders of Cilicia. Again, the Bucellarian province came much further west and bordered on the Opsician Theme, along the river Sangarius, south of Malagina.

In his most interesting account of the foundation of the monastery of Iviron on Mount Athos M. Schlumberger has used the material furnished by the Georgian scholar Brosset; but he seems to have also consulted the Georgian life of St. Euthymius, which is preserved in the Asiatic Museum at St. Petersburg. He does not appear to have made inquiries about a Greek document which he (like Brosset) cites as a 'Life of Euthymius,' preserved in the Synodal Library of Moscow. It is not clear what induced Brosset, who apparently consulted the work directly, to call it a life of Euthymius. For according to its title (quoted in the catalogue of Vladimir) it is a Διήγησις concerning the miraculous Icon of the Portaitissa of Iviron, and there is reason to conjecture that Euthymius is mentioned only incidentally. Rarely indeed does any fact connected with his sources escape the notice of M. Schlumberger; but he should have pointed out that Thietmar's relation of the wonderful escape of Otto II. from the Saracens depended on a popular poem, the 'Modus Liebinc.'

The numerous and admirable illustrations are the distinctive feature of this volume, as of 'Nicéphore Phocas.' They cannot be described in a review; we must be content with calling attention to the pains which M. Schlumberger has bestowed on this part of his work, and the success he has achieved. Miniatures, ivory triptychs and diptychs, seals, mosaics, jewels, and reliquaries of various kinds, dating from the tenth and eleventh centuries, are reproduced here, so that the reader receives a very distinct impression of the art of the period. Many works of this kind are scattered about in churches in France. There is a really beautiful silk fabric, embroidered with a most curious representation of Daniel in the lions' den, in the treasury of the Cathedral of Sens. There is another fine silk of the same age, known as the kerchief of St. Germain, in a church at Auxerre. The Cathedral of Troyes possesses a beautifully carved ivory coffer, with a representation, on the lid, of a Basileus riding forth from his palace. In directing the reader's notice to such memorials in his own country, in places where one might not seek them, M. Schlumberger has done, we think, no less service than in collecting the numerous other illustrations for which he has had to go further afield—to Armenia, to St. Petersburg, to Mount Athos, not to speak of the rest of Europe.

BIBLICAL LITERATURE.

The Illustrated Bible Treasury, by Sir Charles Wilson, K.C.B., Prof. Sayce, Lieut.-Col. Conder, Dr. E. Naville, and many others, and a new concordance to the Authorized and Revised Versions, combined with a subject-index and dictionary of Scripture proper names, edited by William Wright, D.D., with upwards of three hundred and fifty illustrations and a new indexed Bible atlas (Nelson & Sons), is not strictly a learned book, for there is no discussion on any point, but a popular and useful dictionary of the English Bible. Amongst the contributors are eminent men, but they have had to write in popular style. They state concisely the facts according to the orthodox view. There is no variety of authorship in the Pentateuch, nor in Isaiah, the Psalms, &c. Still the contributors are abreast of the latest discoveries. Thus Prof. Sayce notices the finding in June, 1896, of fragments of the Hebrew original of Ecclesiasticus. The completeness of the matter in the dictionary is marvellous, and the arrangement most methodical. After a general introduction follow the sections on the Old Testament and the New Testament. Section iv. gives the history and chronology of the Bible. Next comes the geography of Bible lands. Section vi. treats of Bible science. In Section vii. are to be found the Treasury of Antiquities, Bible terms, &c. (alphabetically arranged). The last section is devoted to the Apocrypha. The excellent illustrations are more (including the maps and plans) than three hundred. A second part contains a concordance to the Bible which is decidedly full, and this part will certainly, for various reasons, be the most used. Why then lead beginners astray by giving doubtful and sometimes impossible translations? To take the first instance in the book, how can Aaron mean in Hebrew "mountaineer"? הר certainly means "mountain," but what about the initial א and the final ן?

Two more instalments of Prof. Haupt's "Sacred Books of the Old Testament" have just appeared. In Part I., The Book of Genesis, with notes by the Rev. C. J. Ball (Leipzig, Hinrichs), the arrangement of the text is exceedingly complicated, as might be expected, the editor distinguishing by means of colours no fewer than eight documents, and marking the additions to them by overlining. Opinions will differ as to the necessity of some of these dissections of the text, and also as to the emendations, which are numerous. The annotations are relatively much more extensive than those on other numbers of the series which have been noticed in these columns. Perhaps this was unavoidable, considering the many difficult questions raised by the book, and while we are far from sorry to have Mr. Ball's views on points on which he is specially qualified to speak, several of the notes seem rather out of keeping with the general plan of the series, and more suited to a full commentary; for instance, the discussion of the tribal names in chap. xxx., and the criticism of Zimmern's views on the blessing of Jacob, chap. xlix. At the same time the notes are full of interest, and illustrated by a fund of philological suggestions drawn from Egyptian, Assyrian, Sumerian, and even Chinese sources. Part XVIII., The Book of Daniel, is edited by Prof. A. Kamphausen. Here the only difference of colouring is that the Aramaic portion of the book (ii. 4b to vii. 28) is printed in red. The editor, tacitly adopting the modern view of the date of the book, is able to dispense with discussions of what were once controversial points, such as the names of the musical instruments in chap. iii. On the other hand, the comparison of the Persian words is fully and conveniently put. It is interesting to find a "higher critic" warning his readers (on vi. 20) against rashly rejecting from the text passages which appear to be glosses. It may be added that with regard to printing and general execution these two parts fully maintain the high standard of excellence reached by the previous numbers.

The Collatio Codicis Lewisiani rescripti Evangeliorum Sacrorum Syriacorum cum Codice Curetoniano, cui adiectæ sunt Lectiones e Peshitto desumptæ (Oxford, Clarendon Press), is, as far as we have tested it, accurate, and will be useful to New Testament students. The Rev. Albert Bonus, Pembroke College, Oxford, is the editor. The Latin preface supplies a clue to the contents of the monograph, as well as a list of the works referred to by the editor.

Mr. Michael L. Rodkinson has issued the first volume of a new edition of The Babylonian Talmud: English Translation, Original Text Edited, Formulated, and Punctuated (Redway). This volume contains the tract (tractate?) 'Sabbath' in English, revised by the Rev. Isaac M. Wise, of Cincinnati. The critical text of this tractate is not yet at our disposal, and we cannot say whether it deserves consideration or not. From the author's text and prolegomena of the tractate 'Rosh hash-Shanah,' which was issued some months ago, we doubt whether Mr. Rodkinson is prepared for this difficult task. Of course he knows his Talmud, as do many Jews trained in the old-fashioned Talmud schools; but to issue a critical edition requires more than the common teaching of the Gemara. Indeed, there are singularly few explanatory notes in Mr. Rodkinson's translation which help to an understanding of the subject-matter. Philological, historical, and technical explanations are almost entirely absent: it is even doubtful whether his translation is always intelligible. The "reconstruction of the original text of the Talmud" (in itself a difficult undertaking) by Mr. Rodkinson is uncritical as far as we can follow him, since there is no sign of an apparatus criticus, except that some passages are omitted without plausible reason, and even without indication in a foot-note or in the margin. The following passage from his introduction may serve as a sample of his critical powers of dealing with Talmud literature. He says: "Most of the Mishnayoth date from a very early period, and originated with the students of the Jewish academies which existed since the days of Jehoshaphat, King of Judah [2 Chron. xvii. 9]."

LAW-BOOKS.

The Law of Copyright. By B. A. Cohen. (Jordan & Sons.)—Mr. Cohen has endeavoured to compress an account of the present state of the law of copyright in all its branches into the space of eighty-four pages, the remainder of his book being occupied with a history of literary copyright and an appendix of statutes and orders. The subject is not one which lends itself readily to such treatment. There are no general principles which can be stated and concisely illustrated, and to which subordinate cases can be referred. Each question which has arisen, or may arise, on the construction of the conflicting, and, in some cases, almost unintelligible statutes requires separate treatment and attention, thus rendering conciseness impossible without some sacrifice of accuracy or completeness. Allowing, however, for this difficulty, Mr. Cohen has, on the whole, done his work well, and, provided his book is not taken (as it obviously is not intended to be taken) as a substitute for the more elaborate and complete works on the subject, it should be useful to many who wish for a short statement of the principal points which have been decided on the various statutes. We have not noticed any omission of real importance, and the result of the cases cited is stated as accurately as the limited space will allow. More care might, however, have been shown in dealing with matters under their appropriate headings. For instance, the fact that a painter may assign the right to engrave his picture in one size, and yet retain the copyright in the picture, and (probably) the right to engrave it in other sizes, appears under the heading of "Author of Photograph," which is hardly where it would be looked for, and there are other instances of a similar want of care in arrangement. The chapters on international and colonial copyright are the weakest parts of the book, and, as the matters dealt with in them are of daily increasing importance, it seems a pity that further space was not devoted to them. This might well have been done without enlarging the book by the omission of the preliminary chapter on the "History of Literary Copyright," which is somewhat superfluous in a work of this kind. The author accepts without comment Mr. Scrutton's view that English paintings are entitled to copyright in the United States, although under the Fine-Art Copyright Act (25 and 26 Vic. c. 68) the productions of American artists are not protected in this country. This may be and probably is correct; but having regard to the footing on which this country obtained the benefit of the United States Copyright Act, it would probably be wiser, and certainly more honest, for us to amend the Fine-Art Copyright Act by removing the present restriction of its benefits to British subjects and residents within the dominions of the Crown.

A Digest of Anglo-Muhammadan Law, setting forth in the Form of a Code the Special Rules now applicable to Muhammadans as such by the Civil Courts of British India. By Sir R. K. Wilson, Bart. (Thacker & Co.)—Sir R. K. Wilson writes for legal practitioners and also for students. In addition to Mohammedan law, strictly so called, he prints, as might be expected from the title of the book, decisions of Anglo-Indian courts and of the Privy Council; and his appendices set forth verbatim portions of the code of criminal procedure, the Act 20 of 1863 (religious endowments), certain Acts as to pre-emption, and portions of the Koran under the title of "The Koranic Basis of Anglo-Muhammadan Law." It is probable that practitioners may find the "case-law" portion of the book useful as helping them to find their way among the intricate mazes of the various sets of reports; but as regards the actual law of Islam, so far as it exists untouched by decisions of our courts, it is a book to be avoided alike by practitioners and by students. It is no recommendation to a work of reference that its table of addenda et corrigenda contains about fifty-five corrections, for the reader must lose much valuable time by having to refer to the table at every step; but this inconvenience is as nothing compared with the fact that a host of contradictions, ambiguities, and actual blunders will be found to be still uncorrected. Sir R. K. Wilson, in fact, is behind the day as to the sources of his knowledge, and has a confused and inaccurate mode of presenting even what he knows. He treats "Mr. Grady and Mr. Rumsey" as writers of a quarter of a century ago, and seems not to know that Prof. Rumsey's 'Moohummudan Law of Inheritance' was published in 1880, and the second edition of his 'Al Sirájiyyah Reprinted' in 1890. Yet the latter was issued by Sir R. K. Wilson's own publishers, and is advertised by them on the advertisement sheets of his own books. He mentions Prof. Van den Berg's edition and translation of the 'Minhâdj at-Tâlibîn,' but appears not to have heard of the learned and industrious Delft professor's later work, his edition and translation of the 'Fath al-Qarîb,' so that the opportunity is lost of recording the discrepancies between those works (both of the Shafeite school) which were pointed out some months ago in the Athenæum. The interesting subjects of "vested inheritances" and "exclusion" find no place, we think, in Sir R. K. Wilson's work. Possibly he may be under the impression that his eliminating method ("in default of the relatives last mentioned.....the property will be distributed between," &c., and the like) supplies the place of the rules of "exclusion," but this cannot always be the case. We find nothing, for instance, to show that a true paternal grandmother is excluded equally by the father and by the mother, while a true maternal grandmother is excluded by the mother, but not by the father. Again, we find nothing to call attention to the curious circumstance that uterine brothers and sisters differ from other relations in not being excluded by the mother, while all other relations are excluded by persons through whom they are related to the deceased. At p. 187 the words "uterine brothers count for this purpose as uterine sisters" are misleading, for uterine brothers and uterine sisters have equal rights and positions for all purposes. The remarkable case of Al-Mocharrakah, by which the Shafeite lawyers escape the anomaly of allowing uterine brothers or sisters (in a particular combination) to exclude a full brother, is described in the 'Minhâdj at-Tâlibîn' and in at least one English work, but it has no place, so far as we can find out, in the book before us. There is no justification for doubting the exclusion of uterine brothers and uterine sisters by the true grandfather (p. 187), the doctrine being laid down positively in the 'Sirájiyyah.' The treatment of Zaid's curious doctrine as to the rights of the true grandfather (p. 195, &c.) is erroneous in more points than one. The author entirely omits the primary case of grandfather without other sharers, in which he takes his share from mukásamah (i.e., division as a residuary) or one-third of the whole estate, whichever is the "best" for him. And he misapprehends the more complicated case of grandfather with other sharers, stating that he is "put to his election," whereas, in fact, he takes the "best" of three things: his share from mukásamah, a third of the residue, and a sixth of the whole estate. At p. 209 we are told that full brothers' sons' sons come, in the order of inheritance, after consanguine brothers' sons' daughters, i.e., certain residuaries after certain of the third class of distant kindred! Similarly, at p. 214, we find the father's full brothers, who are residuaries, placed in the fourth class of distant kindred; it is true that this last mistake is corrected in the addenda et corrigenda, but the error is made even worse by the next correction, which places them at the very bottom of that class, and, moreover, strikes out the uterine brothers and sisters of the father and mother, who really belong to it! The author knows very well that full brothers' sons' sons and father's full brothers are residuaries, and states those facts in various places; but what is to become of the unhappy reader, "floundering and foundering" in the cross-currents of a sea of contradictory statements? The 'Sirájiyyah' may here and there be difficult to understand, and may tax an author's perspicacity and power of exegesis; but here there is no such excuse, for it lays down in plain language that the third class of distant kindred are "the sisters' children, and the brothers' daughters, and the sons of brothers by the same mother only"; the fourth class, "paternal aunts, and uncles by the same mother only, and maternal uncles and aunts." There is no possible place here for the relations whom the author has unaccountably included. The arithmetical illustrations which usually form so conspicuous and interesting a feature in Mohammedan law-books are not very numerous in the work under notice, and those that are found in it are not always correctly set forth. In the illustration worked out at p. 207 the daughter's daughter's son's portion ought to be three-fifteenths. The author gives him only one-fifteenth, and the remaining two-fifteenths are not accounted for, so that only thirteen-fifteenths of the estate are distributed instead of the whole. In the same page the author describes a notable illustration in the 'Sirájiyyah' as involving "nine distinct lines of descendants," whereas it really involves twelve. In illustration (e), p. 213, we find the remarkable statement that the fraction two-sevenths is equal to the fraction three by twenty-one. But the worst case of arithmetical error that we have come across is found in the illustration at p. 211, where the author states that one-half of two-thirds is equal to one-half, and, having then (under the circumstances of the case) only one-sixth left for the three children of the uterine brother and sister, gives them one-eighteenth each, whereas they ought to have one-ninth each. This same illustration is fully worked out so as to give the correct result in at least two well-known modern works, which are, unfortunately, not included in the author's lists of books "referred to"; but the text of the 'Sirájiyyah' would have saved him from error if he had noticed the words "a third of the estate is divided equally among the branches by the same mother, in thirds," or the words "the estate is correctly divided by nine." Passing for a moment from the great subject of inheritance to branches of law less difficult to understand, we may say that we find fewer actual mistakes, but the same want of power and want of thoroughness. Turning to "Wills and Death-bed Gifts," we are struck by the absence of all notice of many important doctrines laid down in the 'Hedaya,' e.g., the very careful rules as to accepting a bequest, and the rules on the effect of bequeathing the whole to one person and afterwards one-third to another; on that of bequeathing a third and a sixth to the same person; on that of bequeathing a specific article to one person and afterwards the same article to another person, &c. At p. 229 the author states that "it is not necessary to the validity of a Muhammadan bequest that the legatee should be a Muhammadan." This is misleading as implying that any non-Mohammedan may take such a bequest, whereas the rule actually laid down (and cited from the 'Hedaya' in the same place) applies only to a zimmee or resident tax-paying non-Mohammedan. The natural inference is that the author makes the mistake of believing the word zimmees to include all persons who are not Mohammedans. In this and other parts of the book the author is far too fond of referring to "Baillie" as an authority, forgetting that Mr. Neil Baillie is (or was?) only a fallible writer like himself, and, moreover, that although Mr. Baillie's books are professedly founded on ancient works of undoubted authority, there are few references to particular passages, so that it is difficult to verify his statements. Incalculable harm has been done in past times by reckless citation of modern writers as "authorities," and it is earnestly to be hoped that this practice may not be revived. We must pause here in our comments lest we try the patience of our readers too much. We would only observe in conclusion that the study of Mohammedan law, which has received a remarkable impetus during the last thirty years or thereabouts, will be seriously retarded in its progress if a treatise so faulty and imperfect as that before us should have an appreciable influence. Many years ago that study suffered grievously from a similar cause; we hope that history will not repeat itself.

Commentaries on the Constitution of the United States, Historical and Juridical (Kegan Paul & Co.), is the first volume of a work by Mr. Roger Foster which promises to take rank with the best on the same subject that his countrymen have produced. Mr. Foster is a member of the New York bar, a lecturer at Yale on Federal jurisprudence, and he has written legal works of note and practical value. Such a treatise cannot be judged fairly, except as a whole, and a notice and estimate of its aim and character alone can be given after perusing this volume. But we do not hesitate to applaud the spirit and manner in which the work is planned. The author displays a thorough acquaintance with his subject and a rare capacity for treating it. One of his objects is to point out how well, on the whole, the Constitution of his country has subserved the purposes of its framers, whereas the Constitutions of the South American republics have served as targets for scorn and ridicule. In the case of the United States, the founders of the republic carried into effect the results of their experience as colonists who had enjoyed self-government, while the inhabitants of the southern part of the continent had been under the yoke of Spain, and thought that they would vie with the northern republic if they followed its example and copied its Constitution. The result, though sad and mortifying, is not surprising to the student of history. No Constitution, whether written, as in the United States, or a subject of faith, as in Great Britain, will enable the people to govern themselves with advantage and without injury to their neighbours, unless it be an historic product of their racial tendencies and conditions. Mr. Foster appears to understand this, and his work is founded on facts which cannot be shaken, and which must be accepted when elucidated in the manner which he has adopted.

THE MILITARY HISTORY OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.

THE publications of such a body as the Société d'Histoire Contemporaine must necessarily vary in interest. It so happens that the subject of none of its last three productions (issued in Paris by MM. Picard & Fils) is likely to satisfy those English readers whose expectations may be based on their remembrance of the memoirs of the Raigecourts, of Moulin, or of Duquesnoy. Yet L'Invasion Austro-Prussienne (1792–1794), edited by M. L. Pingaud, contains two contributions to military history which are not without value. The first is by the Comte de Langeron, a French free-lance equally ready to fight with or against his own country, who in 1789 transferred his allegiance to Russia. Having in 1792, with the permission of Catherine II., joined the émigrés princes in the invasion of Champagne, and having in 1793–4 at that empress's request accompanied the Austrian army in the Low Countries, he here summarizes the story of those "two disastrous campaigns, in which every move made by the allies was either a political or military blunder." He moreover prognosticates the widespread disaster the European powers were preparing for themselves by their insane dissensions and their heedlessness of the force of the Revolutionary flood. Esteeming Mack as "the soul and strength" of the Austrian army, he enumerates the failures that occurred when, the storming of the camp of Famars having rendered the position of the French troops desperate and their destruction easy, that general, wounded and slighted, was succeeded by Prince Hohenlohe as quartermaster-general to the Prince of Coburg. Like Alison, he blames the blunder committed in placing the imperial arms over the gates of the captured French towns, the time wasted by the allies ("Les Autrichiens en perdent toujours"), and above all "ce système désastreux de cordon, qui fait qu'on est faible partout," a fault, by-the-by, which we find General Jourdan attributing also to the republican forces (Moniteur, November 27th, 1793). The error of the retreat before Maubeuge is shown to have been even greater than the English historian represents it. For after the Austrians had been driven from Wattignies and the retreat ordered, some troops previously detached by Coburg's directions from the main armies were so ably handled by M. de Chasteler that the enemy's flank was turned and the French sent flying from Wattignies, abandoning forty guns. "La bataille était donc complètement gagnée, mais le Prince de Cobourg la reperdit une seconde fois, en ne voulant point contremander l'ordre de retraite d'après ce succès, qu'il sut à dix heures du soir." We note that Clairfayt's engagement with the republican troops on May 10th and 11th, 1794, in which some 4,000 men were lost on each side, is stated by Alison to have occurred around Cambray (vol. ii. p. 469), in lieu of which town Langeron gives Courtrai, a version which seems to us more probable. The delay and inaction of the Archduke Charles during the battle of Turcoing, ascribed by the English writer to Coburg's defective combinations, was due, says our author, to the fact that, the order to march arriving when the archduke was sleeping off an attack of epilepsy, none dared wake him or open the letter. In the quarrels between Hohenlohe and the Duke of York the latter's cause is warmly espoused by Langeron, influenced, maybe, by the belief that he had once saved the duke's life, or perhaps by the idea that the English prince might yet ascend the French throne, on which Carra and Brissot had already proposed to place him (Moniteur, October 28th, 1793), and which, according to Jourdan, he had now landed on the Continent to beg "avec la famine et la calomnie" (Moniteur, November 27th, 1793). The detestation entertained by the allied generals (English excepted) for "the very name of French" is shown by their "criminal indifference" for the fate of the émigrés, their brothers in arms. On the surrender of garrisons, for instance, no stipulation was ever made to save these unfortunate Royalists from being massacred by the Republicans. Langeron mentions the successful use on various occasions by the French of balloons for reconnoitring purposes; for the rest, "On ne doit point se lasser de répéter que le Français, quel qu'il soit, attaquant à nombre égal ou même inférieur, est souvent victorieux, et que supérieur en nombre, il est souvent battu quand il est attaqué." The remainder of the volume is by an anonymous writer, apparently one of Condé's officers. He vindicates Count Wurmser's operations in Lower Alsace in 1793 at the expense of the Duke of Brunswick, whose masterly inactivity was by many ascribed to his desire to see the French monarchy revived in the person of one of his sons. The details of the campaign from day to day, the strength of the forces engaged, and the losses sustained by each regiment serving under Wurmser are carefully stated. A map of the theatre of the war suggests comparisons between the invasion of 1793 and that of 1870.

The military publisher, M. Baudoin, of Paris, issues La Guerre de la Succession d'Autriche (1740-1748): Campagne de Silésie (1740-1741), by Major Z, a little work which is historical, not military. We do not know why the author has chosen to veil his identity possibly because of a close and interesting parallel which he draws between the modern ways of Prussia and the behaviour of Frederick the Great in 1740. There is much criticism of the diplomacy of George II., of the effect of the policy of Hanover on that of Great Britain, and of the writings of Carlyle; the pamphlet is, however, rather an account of the recent historical researches of the Austrian military historians attached to the War Office at Vienna than an original study. Austrian diplomacy and mobilization were as inferior to Prussian diplomacy and mobilization in 1740 as they were in 1866 and 1870.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE present craze for disinterring every fact or supposed fact about the Brontës deserves little sympathy. Why must every trifling detail in the lives of three women who died many years ago be raked up simply because they were women of genius? Is the grave to be no protection against a morbid curiosity? Yet we are glad to see that both Mr. Mackay, the author of The Brontës: Fact and Fiction (Service & Paton), and Mr. Ramsden, the writer of The Brontë Homeland (Roxburghe Press), are alive to the absurdities to be found in Dr. Wright's book 'The Brontës in Ireland.' When we reviewed that volume we expressed the opinion that Dr. Wright had been hoaxed, and we hold that view still more firmly at the present time.

MESSRS. CHAPMAN & HALL issue The Eastern Crisis of 1897 and British Policy in the Near East, by Mr. G. H. Perris, a volume in which partisanship on behalf of Greece is frankly admitted.

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. publish Notes on Political Economy by "A New Zealand Colonist," a volume which does not teach us much that is new.

MLLE. DE BOVET is one of the most versatile of writers—one whose work varies infinitely in character and a good deal in merit. Her La Jeune Grèce, published by L. Henry May, of Paris, is a volume which we can praise unreservedly. As a book of travel it is fresh and bright, and as a work of observation of a people it is excellent. A preface attached to it since the war lectures France with justice for an unreasoned change in her former phil-Hellenic views.

WE have received the elaborate and interesting Jubilee numbers of the Illustrated London News and the Queen.

WE have on our table Thomas Chalmers, by W. G. Blaikie (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier), —Whitman, a Study, by John Burroughs (Constable),—The Early Fiction of Richard Jefferies, edited by Grace Toplis (Simpkin),—History in Fact and Fiction, by the Hon. Albert S. G. Canning (Smith & Elder),—The Law relating to Factors, by P. T. Blackwell (Wilson),—International Law, by H. W. Bowen (Putnam),—Pitt Press Series: Cornelius Nepos, edited by E. S. Shuckburgh (Cambridge, University Press), —A History of Greek Art, by F. B. Tarbell (Macmillan),—Our Weights and Measures, a Practical Treatise on the Standard Weights and Measures in Use in the British Empire, by H. J. Chaney (Eyre & Spottiswoode),—The Mechanics of Pumping Machinery, by Dr. J. Weisbach and Prof. G. Herrmann, translated by Karl P. Dahlstrom (Macmillan),—The Story of Yorkshire (Arnold),—Tobacco Talk and Smokers' Gossip (Redway), —Fruit-Culture for Amateurs, by S. T. Wright (Gill),—The American Journal of Theology, January, 1897, Vol. I. (Luzac),—The Cabot Calendar, 1497–1897 (Toronto Lithographing Co.),—The Magnet Magazine, Vol. I. (Henderson),—The System of Courtly Love studied as an Introduction to the Vita Nuova of Dante, by L. F. Mott (Ginn),—John Littlejohn, of J., by G. Morgan (Lippincott),—A Slight Indiscretion, by Mrs. E. Cartwright (Fisher Unwin),—"And they Two," by Violet Tweedale (Redway),—Monologues of the Dead, by G. W. Steevens (Methuen),—Harold Effermere, by M. Costello (Sonnenschein),—Sir Knight of the Golden Pathway, by Anna S. P. Duryea (Putnam),—A New Faust, by A. Smythe (Digby & Long),—The Rome Express, by Major Arthur Griffiths (Milne),—The Strange Schemes of Randolph Mason, by M. D. Post (Putnam),—The Black Mass, by F. Breton (Hutchinson),—Poems, by S. Waddington (Bell),—The Triumph of Love, and other Poems, by W. Officer (Peterhead, Scott),—Australian Idylls and Bush Rhymes: Poems, by the late E. G. Henty and E. A. Starkey (Digby & Long),—The Significance of the Old Testament for Modern Theology, by G. Lindsay (Blackwood),—The Theology of Modern Fiction, being the Twenty-sixth Fernley Lecture, by T. G. Selby (C. H. Kelly),—The Student's Life of Jesus, by G. H. Gilbert (Chicago, Theological Seminary Press),—The Sympathy of the Passion, by the Rev. F. W. Isaacs (S.P.C.K.),—Questions on the Church Catechism, by W. F. Handcock ('Home Words' Office),—Petri de Dacia, by J. Paulson (Grevel),—Les Aryens au Nord et au Sud de l'Hindou-Kouch, by Charles de Ujfalvy (Paris, Masson),—Reiseeindrücke und Beobachtungen eines deutschen Neuphilologen in der Schweiz und in Frankreich, by K A. M. Hartmann (Leipzig, Stolte),—Le Guerre Germaniche, by F. C. Giuliano (Rome, Loescher), — and Julia de Trécœur, by O. Feuillet (Paris, Lévy).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Blavatsky's (H. P.) The Secret Doctrine, the Synthesis of Science, Religion, &c., Vol. 3, royal 8vo. 15/ net.
Cambridge Bible for Schools and Colleges: Joel and Amos, Notes, &c., by Rev. S. R. Driver, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Copinger's (W. A.) The Bible and its Transmission, 105/ net.
Feasey's (H. J.) Ancient English Holy Week Ceremonial, 8vo. 7/ net.
Forlong's (Major-General J. G. R.) Short Studies in the Science of Comparative Religions, royal 8vo. 28/ cl.
Jâtaka, The, or Stories of the Buddha's Former Birth, edited by Prof. E. B. Cowell, Vol. 3, royal 8vo. 12/6 net.
Selwyn's (Right Rev. J. R.) Pastoral Work in the Colonies, 12mo. 2/ cl.

Poetry and the Drama.

Browning's (R.) Bells and Pomegranates, Second Series, 2/6
Greer's (M.) A Vision's Voice, and other Poems, 2/6 net.
Jones's (H. A.) The Case of Rebellious Susan, a Comedy in Three Acts, 12mo. 2/6 cl.
Masterman's (Rev. J. H. B.) The Age of Milton, 12mo. 3/6

Music.

Bach, John Sebastian, Life of, in Relation to his Work as a Church Musician, by S. Taylor, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.

Philosophy.

Külpe's (O.) Introduction to Philosophy, trans. by W. B. Pilsbury and E. B. Titchener, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ribot's (Th.) The Psychology of the Emotions, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

History and Biography.

Armstrong's (G. T. S.) Queen, Empress, and Empire, 1837-97, 4to. 5/ cl.
Arnold of Rugby, his School Life and Contributions to Education, edited by J. J. Findlay, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Briggs's (Sir J. H.) Naval Administrations, 1827-1892, edited by Lady Briggs, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Harvey's (Rev. M.) Newfoundland in 1897, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Richardson's (O. H.) The National Movement in Reign of Henry III., cr. 8vo. 6/6 net.
Social England, ed. by H. D. Traill, Vol. 6, 8vo. 18/ cl.

Geography and Travel.

MacRitchie's (Rev. W.) Diary of a Tour through Great Britain in 1795, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Thomas's (J. L. L.) Journeys among the Gentle Japs in the Summer of 1895, cr. 8vo. 7/6 cl.

Science.

Boucher's (Dr. W.) Electric Smelting and Refining, translated by W. G. McMillan, 8vo. 21/ cl.
Brunton's (T. L.) Lectures on the Action of Medicines, 8vo. 10/6 net.
Cayley's (A.) Collected Mathematical Papers, Vol. 12, 25/
Don's (J.) First-Stage Sound, Light, and Heat, cr. 8vo. 2/cl.
Lowe's (J.) The Yew-Trees of Great Britain and Ireland, 8vo. 10/ net.
McIntosh (W. C.) and Masterton's (A. T.) Life-Histories of the British Marine Food Fishes, 8vo. 21/ cl
Millais's (J. G.) British Deer and their Horns, folio, 84/ net.
Muir (R.) and Ritchie's (J.) Manual of Bacteriology, 12/6 cl.

General Literature.

Bangs's (J. K.) The Pursuit of the House Boat, 12mo. 2/ cl.
Buchanan's (R.) Rachel Dene, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 2/ bds.
Cameron's (Mrs. L.) A Man's Undoing, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Ellis's (E. S.) In the Days of the Pioneers, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.
Gerard's (E.) An Electric Shock, and other Stories, cr. 8vo. 6/
Guest's (M.) List of Members of the Royal Yacht Squadron and their Yachts, 1815-97, imp. 8vo. 21/ net.
Miall's (L. C.) Thirty Years of Teaching, 12mo. 3/6 cl.
Ouseley's (M.) The Spirit of the Day, a Novel, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Twain's (Mark) Adventures of Tom Sawyer, cheaper ed. 3/6

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Sellin (E.): Beiträge zur israelitischen u. jüdischen Religionsgeschichte, Part 2, Vol. 1, 6m.
Steinmetz (R.): Die zweite römische Gefangenschaft des Apostels Paulus, 3m. 60.
Vollert (W.): Die Lehre Gregors v. Nyssa vom Guten u. Bösen u. v. der schliesslichen Ueberwindung des Bösen, 1m. 50.
Zahn (T.): Einleitung in das Neue Testament, Vol. 1, 9m. 50.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Karabacek (J.): Mitteilungen aus der Sammlung der Papyrus Erzherzog Rainer, Vol. 6, 4 parts, 20m.
Reber (F. v.): Die phrygischen Felsendenkmäler, 8m.
Uzanne (O.): Les Modes de Paris de 1797 à 1897, 39fr.; L'Art dans la Décoration Extérieure des Livres en France et à l'Étranger, 30fr.

Philosophy.

Fleury (M. de): Introduction à la Médecine de l'Esprit, 7fr. 50.
Hartmann (E. v.): Schelling's philosophisches System, 4m. 50.
Novicow (J.): L'Avenir de la Race Blanche, Critique du Pessimisme Contemporain, 2fr. 50.
Stein (L.): Die sociale Frage im Lichte der Philosophie, 16m.
Wolff (H.): Neue Kritik der reinen Vernunft, Nominalismus od. Realismus in der Philosophie, 9m.

Political Economy.

Fagniez (G.): L'Économie Sociale de la France sous Henri IV., 1589-1610, 10fr.
Raffalovich (A.): Le Marché Financier en 1896-1897, 7fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Lovenjoul (Vicomte de S. de): Autour de Honoré de Balzac, 3fr. 50.
Robiquet (P.): Discours et Opinions de Jules Ferry, Vol. 5, Part 2, 10fr.
Seignobos (Ch.): Histoire Politique de l'Europe Contemporaine, 1814-96, 12fr.
Thouvenel (L.): Trois Années de la Question d'Orient, 1856-1859, 7fr. 50.
Verdier (A.): Trente-cinq Années de Lutte aux Colonies, Côte Occidentale d'Afrique, 7fr. 50.

Philology.

Pichon (R.): Histoire de la Littérature Latine, 5fr.
Wartenberg (G.): Das mittelgriechische Heldenlied v. Basileios Digenis Akritis, 1m.

Science.

Joret (C.): Les Plantes dans l'Antiquité et le Moyen Age, Part 1, Vol. 1, 8fr.
Ludwig (H.): Die Seesterne des Mittelmeeres, 100m.

General Literature.

Annuaire de la Presse Française et du Monde Politique, 17fr.
Brunschvicg (L.): Pascal, Opuscules et Pensées, 3fr. 50.
Comminges (Comte de): Dressage et Menage, 6fr.
Daudet (L.): La Flamme et l'Ombre, 3fr. 50.
Gyp: Le Baron Sinaï, 3fr. 50.
Rambaud (A.): L'Anneau de César, Vol. 2, 3fr.
Thiéry (J.): Monsieur le Neveu, 3fr. 50.

SIR THOMAS ROE.

MR. WILLIAM FOSTER, of the India Office, is about to render an important service to students of Indian history and of the literature of travel by editing the 'Journal' of Sir Thomas Roe, lord ambassador to the Great Mogul, 1615–19. It is rather singular that although the manuscript of the larger and more important part of this 'Journal,' from 1615 to February, 1616/7, is perfectly well known to exist in the British Museum (Addit. MS. 6,115), it has never been printed in full or with any approach to accuracy or editorial care. Purchas, who first printed the 'Journal' in 1625, seems to have omitted about a third of it as given in this manuscript, but he evidently had another copy to work from, since his extracts run as far as January, 1617/8—though doubtless the later portion was mutilated by him in the same fashion as the earlier. Churchill in 1732 printed a somewhat fuller edition of the 'Journal' from the original MS., but what happened to the rest of the MS. is unknown. Mr. Foster, in editing the British Museum MS. for the Hakluyt Society, proposes to collate it with a second MS. in the same collection containing the earlier part of the 'Journal,' and also with Churchill's text; while the more important of Roe's letters of the same period, a good many of which are preserved in the British Museum and the India Office, will be inserted at the proper dates, and will be used to complete the record, as far as possible, for the year of Roe's mission wanting in the MSS. and printed texts of the 'Journal.' The whole will, of course, be carefully annotated.

Incidentally Mr. Foster has lighted upon one or two hitherto unnoticed facts in Roe's life. For instance, his (probably secret) marriage to Eleanor Cave before he started on his Indian mission, which was first discovered and approximately dated by Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole from a passage in Carew's letters (referring to "your Mrs. or rather the best part of yourselfe"), has been confirmed by Mr. Foster's discovery of a Court minute of the East India Company authorizing the payment of the expenses of Sir T. Roe "and his lady" from the Downs to London on his return from India. Another fact brought to light by Mr. Foster's investigations is that Lady Roe was a widow when she married the ambassador: she had married Sir George Beeston, of Beeston Castle in Cheshire, in 1610, and enjoyed a pension of 200*l.* a year on this account. The date of Sir G. Beeston's death still remains to be discovered. All these matters will doubtless be dealt with in the 'Life of Sir Thomas Roe' which Mr. S. Lane-Poole proposes to write, and for which considerable materials have been collected. Among the problems to be solved will be the present whereabouts of the portrait of Roe by Mierevelt, engraved as a frontispiece to the 'Negotiations' in Turkey, and the existence of the Van Dyck portrait referred to by Richardson in his dedication of the same volume. The gold medal struck by Charles I. in 1630 in honour of Roe's diplomatic services in bringing about the peace between Sweden and Poland is another curious point. It looks as if the Bodleian specimen, presented by Lady Roe, were the only one struck, since none exists in the British Museum or appears to be known to the authors of the 'Medallic Illustrations of English History,' whilst the description of the piece recorded in the Calendar of State Papers is avowedly from a paper squeeze.

AN ALLEGED ERROR OF VENERABLE BEDE'S.

Bodleian Library, Oxford, June 13, 1897.

CENTURIES before Gildas, the old instrumental qui (="with which," "with what") had ceased to be used of simple statements of fact followed by the indicative, and remained only as an interrogative, or as a relative of purpose followed by the subjunctive; consequently Gildas's "quique.....orditur" cannot mean "wherewith also.....commences."

But I do believe that Bede and Mr. Anscombe are right on the point contended for by the latter, and that the passage has been misunderstood by recent writers, including myself. How it should be taken I will try to show.

Two years ago, in a printed letter on 'King Arthur in Gildas,' I said that "novi" was "nō" in the two oldest MSS., and should have been expanded by Mommsen as "novus." But I misread his apparatus criticus—they have not that reading; and, had they had it, the right expansion would probably have been not "novus," but "noster." Hence my own rendering falls to the ground.

Mommsen's text is:—

"Ex eo tempore nunc cives, nunc hostes, vincebant.....usque ad annum obsessionis Badonici montis, novissimæque ferme de furciferis non minimæ stragis, quique quadragesimus quartus ut novi orditur annus mense iam uno emenso, qui et meæ nativitatis est."

I would construe thus:—

"From that time, now the citizens, now the enemies were victorious.....until the year of the campaign against the Bath hill, and of almost the latest slaughter (a considerable one*) of the scoundrels, and which (as I know) begins as the forty-fourth year—one month having already been measured out [i.e. passed through], which also is that of my birth."

I understand this as follows: The slaughter took place in the forty-fourth year from "that time," if we count from the beginning of the calendar year. One month of the calendar year had, however, elapsed, and that was the month of Gildas's own birth

* I cannot feel sure whether "non minima" means "of any importance" or "—and it was no slight one," but prefer the latter.

He does not mean simply that he was born in the first month of the calendar, but in the month before the slaughter. Whether he reckoned the year from January 1st, March 1st, or Christmas I do not know; I suspect, from January 1st. "Ut novi" probably means that his parents had told him that it was forty-four years from the victory of Ambrosius.

Bede takes the invitation to the Saxons (which he dates in 449) as the starting-point of the forty-four years, and so the slaughter would be in 493. But the 'Annales Cambriæ' put it in 516, and Gildas's context proves "that time" to be the time of Ambrosius's victory. I have a further reason for believing the date of the 'Annales.' According to Geoffrey of Monmouth's old Breton chronicle, Hoel, King of Armorica, son of King Budicius, was at the time in Britain, helping his uncle Arthur with a large Breton contingent (Giles's ed. of Geoffrey, ix. § 2). But according to Daru ('Hist. de Bretagne,' i. p. 90) Budicius did not die till 509, and his son Hoel did not recover Armorica from its Frisian invaders till 513. I have no time now to thrash out this matter, as I hope to do some day, or even to discuss it; but provisionally I adhere to 516, and consequently date Ambrosius's victory in 472.

E. W. B. NICHOLSON.

SALES.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON sold on Monday the library of a well-known collector, the majority of the books being in fine modern bindings. The following were some of the chief prices realized:—M. Arnold's Saint Brandan, 2*l.* 2*s.* Barker's Greenwich Hospital, coloured plates, 5*l.* 5*s.* Mrs. Browning's The Runaway Slave, 3*l.* Cavalier's New Common Prayer Book, 1644, 3*l.* 18*s.* Cotgrave's Wits Interpreter, 1671, 5*l.* 15*s.* Cruikshank's Humourist, 4 vols., 31*l.* Grimm's German Popular Stories, 2 vols., 21*l.* Der Freischütz Travestie, plates by Cruikshank, 6*l.* 10*s.* Cruikshank's Fairy Library, 4 vols., 11*l.* Defoe's Robinson Crusoe, 3 vols. (vols. ii. and iii. first edition), 4*l.* 10*s.* Dibdin's Bibliographical Decameron, 7*l.* 17*s.* 6*d.* Dickens's Picnic Papers, 4*l.* 15*s.* D'Urfey's Pills to Purge Melancholy, &c., 11*l.* 5*s.* Egan's Life in London, 6*l.* Life of an Actor, 5*l.* George Eliot's Brother and Sister Sonnets, 2*l.* 8*s.* Goldsmith's Traveller, first edition, 10*l.* 5*s.* Goldsmith's Vicar of Wakefield, plates by Rowlandson, 7*l.* W. Morris's Sir Galahad, 3*l.* 12*s.* Nimrod's Life of a Sportsman, 8*l.* 10*s.* Stevenson's College Memories, 12*l.* Mr. Thackeray, Mr. Yates, and the Garrick Club, 4*l.* 10*s.*

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold on Tuesday, the 15th inst., several important manuscripts. The MS. Autobiography of Lord Nelson, to which attention was drawn previously in our columns, fetched 1,000*l.* Messrs. Sotheran & Co. were the purchasers. On the same day twenty-three Letters of Nelson to his friend Admiral Trowbridge, bound in one volume, were sold for 280*l.* Thirty-one other Letters of the Admiral (sold separately) went at a total of 142*l.* 16*s.* The prices realized for the Scott MSS. were surprisingly high. The Lady of the Lake, original autograph MS., brought 1,290*l.*; Tales of a Grandfather, portion of the original autograph MS., 106*l.*; Essay on Poetry, Halidon Hill, and Doom of Devorgoil, partly original autograph MS., 62*l.*; Old Mortality, original autograph MS., complete, 600*l.* (this sold for 33*l.* in Cadell's sale); Castle Dangerous, original MS., written from dictation by Wm. Laidlaw, Scott's amanuensis, with corrections in the author's hand, 32*l.* The Edinburgh Commonplace Book of Robert Burns, 1787, sold for 365*l.*; and Eight Autograph MSS. by A. C. Swinburne of Poems published in the first series of Poems and Ballads, 1866, realized 39*l.* 10*s.* 6*d.*

MATTHEW PRIOR AS A BOOK-COLLECTOR.

MR. MATTHEW PRIOR was one of the very few poets of his day whose lines ran in fairly pleasant places. The bards of that time were not a very amiable set of men; the fear of the "dun," or the certainty of an empty stomach on the morrow, may have given vigour to their couplets if it did not increase the sweetness of their dispositions. The manufacture of poetry is not usually the channel through which men gain riches; indeed, history may be said to teach us that the richer the poet the poorer his poetry. The versifiers of "glorious Anne's" reign were poor enough in this world's goods to be very great poets indeed; and if the majority of them were book-makers rather than book-collectors, the fault is not so much their own as of the trade which they followed. To search, therefore, for book-collectors among this "rhyming crew" is a somewhat vain quest. There were, however, exceptions.

In his 'Journal to Stella' we get very many delightful glimpses of Swift as a book-hunter. Pope was a book-lover and owned a fairly good library, and even the great Mr. Addison could not have denied the soft impeachment of bibliomania. But greater in this way than all these was Matthew Prior, the genial wit and wily diplomatist. It seems curious that this side of Prior's career should have remained until now almost completely hidden, and even the latest and most admirable edition of his poems, that published in the Aldine series, contains only a brief reference to the volumes which he bequeathed to St. John's College, Cambridge. This bequest comprises only a very small portion of the thousands of books which Prior collected in this country and abroad, and quite a complete inventory was until lately one of the most interesting documents in the immense collection of manuscripts formed by the late Sir Thomas Phillipps. Prior, like Swift and Addison, did not depend upon his poetry for book-money—the booksellers were careful enough to see to that; but that he formed a very large and interesting library admits of no question.

Prior died at the seat of his generous patron, Lord Oxford, at Wimpole in September, 1721, and the inventory above mentioned was taken on November 8th of the same year by Adrian Drift and Samuel Harding, the books being distributed in several cases in the study, bedchamber, and closet of Prior's residence. The books chosen by Mr. Bedford for St. John's College amounted to 206, including a number of pamphlets bound up in volumes, and were valued at 200*l.*; these, "with my Poems on greatest paper, to be kept in the Library," so runs Prior's will. Another interesting bequest comprised nearly 300 books, chosen by Lord Oxford, and valued at 71*l.*—a much too modest sum cæteris paribus—by Samuel Harding. Harley—for it is by this name that Lord Oxford is best known to posterity—is one of the giants in the book-collecting world, and his magnificent library is now one of the integral portions of the British Museum. He had a very wide knowledge of books and editions, and he was not slow to exercise this knowledge when he made a selection from Prior's library. From the classics he secured the edition of Ausonius printed at Bordeaux (Burdigalæ), 1575, and one of the many commentaries of Aristotle issued by Aldus, 1504. Two of the books related to Mary, Queen of Scots, both in French, and both now exceedingly rare—Blackwood's 'Martyre de la Royne d'Ecosse, Douairiere de France,' 1587, and 'Apologie, ou Défense de l'Honorable Sentence et Très-juste Exécution de Marie Stuard,' 1588. There were also two editions of 'Ovid His Invective against Ibis,' 1577 and 1658; and of the other works selected by Harley I need only mention the Verona edition of Pescetti, 'Proverbi Italiani,' 1598; the Etienne edition of Horace, 1577; Cowley's works in folio and an edition of Rabelais; whilst of "memoirs" and "lives" there were many.

Deducting these two bequests, the value of Prior's library, including his drawings, charts, and prints, was placed at 375*l.*, so that the sum which he altogether spent on his books must have been a very large one for the time, and for a person in Prior's highly unsettled circumstances. The library comprised several thousand volumes, and was a thoroughly representative collection. Mr. Prior was not a first-edition man, nor a tall-copyist, nor, indeed, a faddist of any particular species; he was a genuine book-lover who liked to have good editions of the best books, and the excellence of the judgment which he displayed in forming his library is unquestionable. The poets of his own time and country were patronized—mostly to the extravagance of large-paper copies — very liberally and without regard to their politics or religion, which meant much at a time when both were at fever heat. There were Dryden's plays, his fables, his translations of Juvenal and Virgil, Garth's Ovid, Rowe's Lucian, Pope's Homer, and Trapp's Virgil, a large-paper copy of Mr. John Dennis's 'Letters,' and the best available editions of Spenser, Chaucer, Davenant, Milton, Marvell, Ben Jonson, Randolph, Daniel, and the 'Art of Poetry' of Bysshe and the similar work of Gildon. The most notable absentee is Shakspeare, of whose works it seems that Prior did not possess an edition.

Several early printed books escaped the selections of Harley and St. John's College, notably an edition of Pliny's 'Natural History,' printed at Brescia, 1496; several works from the Aldine press, such as the rare and beautiful editio princeps of Aristophanes, 1498, edited by Marcus Musurus; the first Greek edition of Aristotle, 1495–7, justly regarded as one of the most splendid and elaborate productions of the Aldine press; and a volume on astronomy, 1499. The classics were also represented by a very fair sprinkling of Elzevirs, such as the Pliny, Livy, Ovid, Cæsar, Seneca, Horace ("in corio Turcico"), and others issued by the celebrated family of Dutch printers. Indeed, Mr. Prior attached much importance to the Dutch editions of the classics, judging by the extent to which he purchased them—an appreciation which I fear is no longer extended to them by scholars.

In "mémoires" and "histoires" Prior's library was very rich, more particularly those of French celebrities and of the various kings and epochs of France. One of the rarest works in this class was a copy of Perrault's 'Hommes Illustres,' 1696–1700, the celebrated and rare first edition; in the list Cardinals Mazarin and Richelieu figure of course, both in Dutch editions, whilst even Prior's copy of Clarendon is in French and was printed at the Hague. Besides two "lives" of Cromwell in English, there was also one in French, "avec figures," Paris, 1691.

Although Prior was scarcely what one would call a religious man, he apparently took much interest in religious controversies and so forth. He owned a copy of the Barker edition of the Bible printed in 1599, and one of the Bill and Barker edition of 1633, "in blew Turkey with silver clasps." He was sufficiently catholic to include the 'Apology for Nonconformists,' 1689, 'The Whole Duty of Man,' Buchanan's 'Psalms,' Edinburgh, 1621, and Bennet's numerous writings on Popery, schism, Quakerism, the Common Prayer, &c. Finally, Prior possessed the virtue, as rare two centuries ago as it is to-day, of seeing that the books which he borrowed were returned to their owners. He borrowed Trapp's 'Prælectiones Poeticæ,' 1711, and Winstanley's 'England's Worthies,' 1684, from Dr. Freind, and Barwick's 'Life,' 1721

(large paper), from Mr. Bedford; in the inventory these books are duly entered and marked off as returned to their respective owners. Many of us would gladly reconcile ourselves to the death of some of our friends if we could be sure of at length getting back the books which they had borrowed!

The fate of the residue of Prior's library can only be a matter for conjecture; doubtless it was acquired from the executors by some enterprising bookseller—probably Tom Osborne, of Gray's Inn, the Quaritch of the day—and doled out to the minor book-buyer. Although Prior was neither a very great nor perhaps, in some respects, a very wise man, he had, at all events, what much greater men have often lacked, an excellent knowledge of books, the reading of which failed to make him a dull man. W. ROBERTS.

THE HISTORICAL MANUSCRIPTS COMMISSION.
THE HARLEY PAPERS.

THE latest Report of the Historical Manuscripts Commission upon the muniments of Welbeck Abbey contains, as we were able to announce some time ago, very curious and interesting revelations of the "intimate relations which existed for public purposes" between the Lord Treasurer Robert Harley and Daniel Defoe.

The existence of these peculiar relations has, indeed, been long suspected by Defoe's biographers, but the full details of these transactions are given here for the first time—a fact which constitutes, as the editor justly observes, one of the rare instances in which the secret of the inner life of a famous man of letters has been well preserved. That Harley kept faith with his anonymous correspondent surprises us less than that the latter had the resolution to conceal his own important relations with the Government. But Defoe, although an impecunious author, was essentially a man of business, especially in an affair which concerned his claims upon "the Queen's Bounty." Moreover, he was not only loyal to the hand which paid him, but also by conviction a patriotic politician. That Harley was able to use a man of Defoe's character and ability speaks much for his qualifications as a party leader in an age of profound and unscrupulous intrigue. Statesmen like Burleigh, Walpole, and Harley were well served, because their service was a source of pride as well as of profit to their trusted agents.

Of Daniel Defoe in his new character as "Mr. Alexander Goldsmith" we hear much between the years 1703 and 1707 in connexion with a secret mission to Scotland to ascertain the real temper of the Scotch people towards the projected Union. As the enthusiastic champion of the English Revolution, which equally brought political liberty to Scotland, Defoe was just the man for such a mission. There was a common bond of sympathy herein between Harley's agent and the Scotch Whigs which would ensure a frank communication of ideas. To serve the true cause of the Whig Revolution in England and Scotland alike, and "to make some such sort of return as no man ever made" for his patron's bounty, Defoe did not hesitate to play the part of a spy upon the Scottish Whigs. He was esteemed by an excellent judge "to be a very ingenious man and fit for that business," and the turbulent patriots of Caledonia were as babes under his dexterous handling. When Harley fell from power in the year 1707 Defoe's political employment ceased; but a few supplementary notices of Scotch affairs are found after his patron's return to office in 1710. Only second in interest to these revelations are the reports of two more agents employed by Harley, William Greg and John Drummond. But these political newsletters do not nearly exhaust the interest of this remarkable Report. St. John, Atterbury, Argyll, Boyle, and other famous personages are presented to us in these pages. Perhaps, however, the most fitting title for the bulk of this correspondence would be that of "Harley and his Friends." Their reports, advice, criticisms, praise, remonstrances, all serve to throw a strong light upon the masterly, but somewhat crooked policy of one of England's most astute and least engaging statesmen.

The Commissioners have been fortunate in securing the services as editor for this occasion of the Secretary to the Commission, Mr. J. J. Cartwright, whose knowledge of the statesmen and politics of this period, second to that of no other living scholar, has proved of the highest value in tracing these difficult and delicate negotiations.

Literary Gossip.

IN No. 504 of this journal, that of June 24th, 1837, we wrote, "May the reign of our young Queen, 'the expectancy and rose of the fair state,' be hereafter famed for its intellectual and peaceful glories"; and a fortnight afterwards, on July 8th, we published Mrs. Browning's well-known poem, which contains the line, "Thou shalt be well beloved." Both wish and prophecy have been verified, as the history of the past sixty years has amply proved. In 1837 we noticed the edition in six volumes of Wordsworth's poems, "forced on him," we remarked, "by our abominable law of copyright as the only means of securing to his family some portion of that profit, which else, in case of his death, would go to benefit the piratical publishers." That defect was remedied by the Copyright Act passed five years afterwards. Of the great authors who have adorned Her Majesty's reign, Dickens in 1837 had not yet completed 'Pickwick'; Carlyle was beginning to attract attention by his 'French Revolution'; Thackeray was an anonymous contributor to journalism; Browning's fame had not extended beyond the circle of his friends; Tennyson was hardly better known, nor was Mill; Matthew Arnold was a schoolboy; Morris was in the nursery; Mr. Swinburne was not three months old; Macaulay was in India; Froude was an undergraduate; the Brontës were trying to make a living by teaching; Mrs. Gaskell had lately married; George Eliot was taking charge of her father's house in Warwickshire.

IN science the great names in 1837 were Airy, Babbage, Brunel, Buckland, Sir Astley Cooper, Sir John Herschel, Hooker, Faraday, Lawrence, Lyell, Murchison, Owen, Sedgwick, Stephenson, and Whewell. Darwin had made his voyage in the Beagle, and had begun his first note-book on evolution, but 'The Origin of Species' was not to appear for two-and-twenty years. Railways were in their infancy, and a colonel of Engineers had the sagacity to say so, and we expressed our agreement with his opinion. Lardner was advocating steam communication with India (Athenæum for July 8th, 1837), but steam navigation was still in a rudimentary state. 1837 was the year of Wheatstone's patent, and consequently of the birth of the electric telegraph. Photography was undiscovered, and nobody thought about germs.

UP to now the Jubilee does not seem to have inspired many bards. Their silence, indeed, is a noticeable incident. We have just learnt, however, that Mr. John Lane publishes to-day a poem by Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, called 'Jubilee Greeting at Spithead,' addressed to "the men of Greater Britain."

A DINNER significant of the change in the position of women during the Victorian era is to be given at the Grafton Gallery next month. The hostesses will be a hundred representative women, who will each nominate a distinguished man as her guest. In the evening there is to be a soirée for distinguished guests who were not invited or did not wish to be invited to the feast. The names of Lady Jeune, Mrs. Humphry Ward, Mrs. Fawcett, and Miss Ellen Terry appear among others on the committee.

THE Anniversary Study in the forthcoming July number of the Cornhill is from the pen of Mr. C. H. Firth, and is devoted to the battle of Marston Moor. A further instalment of the reminiscences of the late Sir Charles Murray contains anecdotes of Goethe, Lord Eldon, and Samuel Rogers, and records a romantic incident in the life of Prince Bariatinsky, the conqueror of the Caucasus. Mr. J. W. Mackail writes on 'Piers Ploughman and English Life in the Fourteenth Century,' and the Rev. H. C. Beeching in an article on 'The Poverty of the Clergy' pleads the cause of the Queen Victoria Clergy Sustentation Fund. Investors should find judicious counsel in Mr. Hartley Withers's 'How to Scan a Prospectus'; and there is some curious lore in Dr. Withington's article on 'Legal Proceedings against Animals.' Several unpublished anecdotes of Jowett are printed in the 'Pages from a Private Diary,' and short stories are contributed by Mrs. B. M. Croker and Mr. G. H. Powell.

THE July number of Macmillan's Magazine will contain an article on 'Slavery in West Central Africa,' by Major Mockler-Ferryman, who in 1889–90 acted as private secretary to Major (now Sir Claude) MacDonald on his special mission to West Africa to inquire into the working of the Royal Niger Company, and who on his return published a book, 'Up the Niger,' which was reviewed in the Athenæum on October 15th, 1892. It will also include a description of the Zoological Gardens at Amsterdam, by Mr. C. J. Cornish, author of 'Life at the Zoo'; a short story, 'The Haunted Schooner,' a mystical tale of the Eastern seas, by Mr. Hugh Clifford, British Resident at the Malay State of Pahang; and an essay on the vexed question of the genesis of the word kangaroo, by Mr. Edward Morris, Professor of Modern Languages and Literature at the University of Melbourne.

THE great book sale of the season begins on Friday next, when Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge will commence the eight days' sale of the first portion of the Ashburnham Library. This portion extends from A to F, and in monuments of the early printers of all European countries it is bewilderingly rich; but there is also a very fair leavening of ordinary "bread-and-cheese" books, in which respect the Ashburnham Library differs from many other really great libraries. The illustrated catalogue forms a fairly handsome souvenir of the collection.

THE English Dialect Society has lately issued title-pages for its last three volumes, with suggestions for binding all the publications from 1873 to 1896 in thirty-two volumes. A complete list of the Society's publications has also been issued with an alphabetical index, to which an index of authors and books reprinted is added, and another of the authors and editors of original publications. Subscribers are advised to take an early opportunity of testing the completeness of their sets. Some copies remain of the greater part of the numbers issued, and can be obtained from the publisher, Mr. H. Frowde, of the Oxford University Press Warehouse.

Mr. Demetrius Boulger has been for some time engaged on a new 'Life of Sir Stamford Raffles,' a work which he has undertaken with the sanction and co-operation of the principal surviving representatives of the Raffles family. A considerable quantity of unpublished letters and other documents has been placed at his disposal, and the work will be illustrated with engravings and photographs. The book will be published by Messrs. Horace Marshall & Son early in October.

Mr. Stuart J. Reid, at the request of the Duke of Marlborough, has been trying for some time past to identify the flags captured by John, Duke of Marlborough, at Blenheim, Ramilies, Oudenarde, and Malplaquet, in the years 1704–9. Mr. Reid's report on these military trophies is based on researches in England and France, and it has been just submitted to the Commander-in-Chief, who is himself busy with the closing volumes of his life of the great Duke of Marlborough. Lord Wolseley states that Mr. Reid has studied the subject thoroughly, and compiled a most interesting and valuable report, which practically exhausts the subject. His Grace intends to have some of the most typical of the flags which Mr. Reid has identified reproduced in silk embroidery, and hung in the great hall of Blenheim Palace.

M. L. Lemaire, a native of Pont-sur-Sambre, one of the places mentioned in 'An Inland Voyage,' has received permission to translate that charming volume into French. The translator is now a teacher at the Lycée of Valenciennes. He was a boy of fourteen when Stevenson passed through Pont-sur-Sambre. The people of the village, he says, still retain a pleasant recollection of Stevenson and his fellow traveller. The judge at whose house they dined at Landrecies is still alive, and has provided M. Lemaire with interesting particulars about the visit of his now illustrious guests.

After to-day visitors to the Grenville Library at the British Museum will miss the familiar figure of its custodian, Mr. William Holden, who is retiring on a well-earned pension, having passed fifty years in the service of the Trustees. During the last ten or twelve years of Mr. Grenville's life Mr. Holden, who is now eighty years of age, was his personal attendant, and in accordance with his master's wish he accompanied the library when it entered the Museum in 1847. Mr. Holden has always taken the most jealous care of the books under his charge, and it is in no small degree due to his vigilance that, after half a century, they still retain so much of the freshness which was Mr. Grenville's special delight.

'Greece in the Nineteenth Century' is the title of a volume which will be published in a few weeks by Mr. Fisher Unwin. The author, Mr. Lewis Sergeant, has included in this work so much of his book on 'New Greece'—published eighteen years ago and long out of print—as does not seem to have been rendered nugatory by lapse of time. A large part of the new volume is devoted to the relations between Greece and the Powers in the last two decades, and it ends with a summary of contemporary Greek literature.

The fund raised for the benefit of Mrs. Robert Harrison, the widow of the late librarian of the London Library, amounted to 181*l.* odd, and has been invested for her benefit.

The obituary of the Times of Thursday last contained the name of Charlotte Jeffrey's only daughter and the widow of William Empson, who succeeded Macvey Napier in the editorship of the Edinburgh Review. She was eighty-three years of age.

The annual general meeting of the Jewish Historical Society of England will be held on Sunday, June 27th, Dr. Adler, President of the Society, in the chair. The report for the session 1896–1897 will be presented, and the election of officers for the coming year will take place. A paper will be read by the Rev. S. Singer on 'Translators and Translations of the Liturgy in England.'

Mr. P. Chenevix Trench writes:—

"With reference to your remarks relative to 'Wild Norway's' illustrations, I think it only fair to Mr. Whymper to say that 'the individual specimens of natural history,' which you consider successful, were done by him and the author. I am only responsible for two, 'A Lively Double' and 'the whale in the hayfield.'"

The new volume of the Transactions of the Honourable Society of Cymmrodorion contains an address by Mr. Frederic Seebohm on 'The Historical Importance of the Cymric Tribal System'; 'Transcripts of some Early Ministers' Accounts relating to Wales,' by Mr. R. A. Roberts, of the Record Office; and a paper by Prof. Kuno Meyer 'On the Early Relations of the Gael and the Brython.' As a supplement to this volume several unpublished documents, including an Irish saga of the eighth century, entitled 'The Expulsion of the Dési,' will also be edited by Prof. Meyer in further illustration of his paper.

A paper by Mr. Alfred Nutt on another Irish story, that of Manannan and his son Mongan, which he compares and equates with the Arthurian legend, will find a place in the author's 'Essay on the Celtic Doctrine of Re-birth,' to be shortly issued in the "Grimm Library."

A volume entitled 'A Shetland Minister of the Eighteenth Century: being Passages in the Life of the Rev. John Mill, 1712-1805,' by the Rev. John Willcock, of Lerwick, will appear at the end of the month.

Rudolf Philippi, an eminent expert in Prussian history, died at Wiesbaden in the last week of May. He was Keeper of the Provincial Archives at Königsberg, and was not only a laborious editor of the 'Quellen und Urkunden,' but wrote several original monographs dealing with Prussian national history.

The death is also recorded of Oskar Köhler on May 31st at Dessau. He was formerly editor of the Dresdener Nachrichten, a poet of some repute, and the author of a series of extremely clever "Märchendramen."

The second International Bibliographical Congress will take place at Brussels from the 2nd to the 4th of August. The first Congress took place, as our readers will remember, two years ago.

The Imperial Printing Office at Berlin is preparing an édition de luxe of the 'Nibelungenlied' for the next Universal Exhibition at Paris, as a specimen of the progress in the arts of printing, illustrating, and binding in Germany. Will there be sent from this country some similar national work to the same exhibition?

In our number for July 2nd we hope to publish a series of articles on the literature of the Continent for the twelve months. Belgium will be treated by Prof. Fredericq, Bohemia by Prof. Tille, Denmark by Dr. A. Ipsen, France by M. J. Reinach, Germany by Hofrath Zimmermann, Greece by Prof. Lambros, Holland by M. Crommelin, Hungary by M. L. Katscher, Italy by Commendatore Giacosa, Poland by Dr. Belcikowski, Russia by M. L. A. Bogdanovitch, and Spain by Don Rafael Altamira.

The Parliamentary Papers of the week include the Annual Report of the Astronomer Royal for Scotland (1*d.*); the Fifteenth Report, Appendix, Part IV., of the Historical MSS. Commission: Manuscripts of the Duke of Portland, Vol. IV. (2*s.* 11*d.*); a List of the Telephone Exchanges of the Post Office, price 1*d.*; and one Paper named in our "Science Gossip."

SCIENCE

MEDICAL LITERATURE.

The Diary of a Resurrectionist, 1811–1812. By J. B. Bailey, B.A. (Sonnenschein & Co.)—This interesting book deals with a subject whose history has never been adequately written, though it is one whose importance can hardly be over-estimated. Anatomy is the foundation of all medical knowledge, yet as lately as 1742 the actual dissection of a human body was so rare an occurrence that the event was advertised in the public newspapers. Until 1832 the College of Surgeons had to share with the hangman the duty of carrying out the sentence on murderers who were condemned to be hanged and anatomized, and this was the only legal method of procuring a body for anatomical teaching. Public opinion amongst the lower orders ran strongly against this form of legalized dissection, and the beadles of the Surgeons' Company found a constantly increasing difficulty in obtaining the bodies from Tyburn or from Newgate. Anatomical teaching was of comparatively little importance so long as the old order lasted, but a wave of educational progress set in about the beginning of the present century, which led to a complete revolution in the methods of medical education. New schools sprang up in every direction, mostly owned by young and active men whose reputation was founded upon their ability to teach anatomy, then the only exact science in the medical curriculum. Students flocked to the new schools from all parts of the country, and the price of bodies rose rapidly from two to sixteen guineas apiece. Various means were taken to obtain an adequate supply. Many were imported from France and from Ireland, but as the means for preserving them were of the most elementary kind, the custom-house officers were soon compelled to suppress the practice. Importation being thus stopped, the teachers of anatomy resorted to exhumation of the newly buried. Sometimes they performed this revolting business themselves, sometimes through their pupils, but most often they paid a gang of ruffians, known as resurrectionists, to do the work for them. The trade was carried on at first by a few men and without public scandal, but as the profits were large, it soon attracted the scum of the large towns, until in 1828, although only ten regular resurrectionists were known to the London police, their adherents numbered more than two hundred, who were nearly all of the worst type of thieves and ruffians. Information given by rival gangs often brought the resurrectionists to prison, and the 'Diary' shows that they quarrelled freely amongst themselves. As a rule only the poorest class of graves was rifled, an easy task in the days of intramural interment when bodies were buried in huge pits to within eighteen inches of the surface. The fear of exhumation became a panic amongst all classes, and many means were taken by the wealthy to secure the graves of their relatives. Mr. Bailey has given pictures of some of these methods, amongst which iron coffins, and the mortsafes so often found in large towns and in quiet country villages where the churchyard was a little remote from the houses, are the best known. The teachers of anatomy tried for many years to get their art placed upon a proper footing, but it was only after the crimes of Burke and Hare in Edinburgh, and of Bishop and Williams in London, had called public attention to the scandal that Warburton was able to get his Bill through Parliament. It became law on August 1st, 1832, and is the Anatomy Act, by which, with some slight modifications, the teaching of anatomy in Great Britain is still regulated. Mr. Bailey concludes his most interesting introduction with a summary of the regulations in force in foreign countries at the time of the passing of the Anatomy Act. The 'Diary' is a genuine document kept by Joseph Naples, a member of the chief gang of resurrectionists in London. It commences November 28th, 1811, and ends December 5th, 1812. It gives an unvarnished account of the doings of the gang night by night, stating where they went, when they got drunk, what luck they had, to whom they sold, and what profits they divided. The original diary is in the possession of the Royal College of Surgeons of England, to which body Mr. Bailey is librarian. It was obtained by (Sir) Thomas Longmore, apparently from the diarist himself, when he was collecting material for Bransby Cooper's life of his uncle Sir Astley Cooper. Mr. Bailey has executed his task with the greatest skill, and has produced a work which will become the standard of reference upon this somewhat unsavoury topic.

The Lumleian Lectures on certain Points in the Ætiology of Disease, to which is added the Harveian Oration. By P. H. Pye-Smith, M.D., F.R.S. (Churchill.)—Dr. Pye-Smith, the senior physician to Guy's Hospital, has published in this volume the lectures which he gave at the College of Physicians in 1892 on certain points in the ætiology of disease, his Harveian oration of 1893, and his memoir on 'The Life and Works of Harvey,' which first appeared in the 'Encyclopædia Britannica.' The lectures show wide reading, sound physiological knowledge, extensive observation of disease, and experience in its treatment. They present a collection of interesting remarks on various parts of their subject, without much obvious connexion or sustained argument, and are a kind of medical light reading. This is no detraction from their merit, for to raise points, to suggest solutions of difficult problems, to expose fallacies, and to show what is to be learnt from the history of a subject, are among the most useful forms of teaching in medicine, and can only be exercised by those whose learning is profound. Dr. Pye-Smith's discussion of the question, "Is 'overwork' a cause of disease?" has interest for every one, and most physicians will agree with his answer:—

"To this question we may, I believe, broadly answer No. The vanity of human nature is tickled by ascribing its disorders to such respectable antecedents as industry, energy, and intellectual activity. We must all have felt this when the obvious results of habitual gluttony are ascribed by a patient or his wife to an 'overtaxed brain' or too strenuous devotion to business, especially in the public service. There is no fear of any one of us using our brains too much for our health; nor do I believe that any amount of mental labour or business or honest work of any kind interferes with health or shortens life a day."

The lecturer is generous in his appreciation of the work of others, and praises with some warmth ten living fellows of his college, and as many more who are dead. He censures none; but in his remarks on the minute discussion to which all medical statistics ought to be subjected he is unjust to a very distinguished fellow of the college:—

"It was said by a biographer of the great Dr. Thomas Young that although his scientific reputation was far higher than his medical, yet it was a remarkable fact that the percentage of deaths among his patients at St. George's Hospital was much lower than among those of his colleagues. Doubtless the explanation is that fewer acute cases found their way to his wards than to those of more zealous and enterprising physicians."

Young had not a very large practice, but a careful study of his works will satisfy most physicians that he was excellent in all parts of medicine, and that if he had not many private patients it was rather because his means were sufficient, and that he did not wish for them, than that they might not with great advantage have consulted him. Dr. Pye-Smith's Harveian oration is less interesting than his memoir of Harvey in the 'Encyclopædia Britannica,' but both show a thorough knowledge of Harvey's works, and set forth the steps and nature of his discovery with admirable clearness. Some additions to our knowledge of Harvey have been made since Dr. Pye-Smith delivered this oration, in Dr. Munk's 'Notæ Harveianæ' and in the edition of the notes of Harvey's lectures published with the authority of the Royal College of Physicians; but with these exceptions the life in the 'Encyclopædia' is as complete as it is lucid.

A Short History of Aryan Medical Science. By H.H. Sir Bhagvat Sinh Jee, Thakore Saheb of Gondal. (Macmillan & Co.)—This account of Hindoo medicine by a native prince who graduated in medicine at Edinburgh, and dedicates his book to the Professor of Anatomy in that university, though neither critical nor exhaustive, contains much information of the highest interest. The Hindoos believe that medicine was to begin with a divine revelation, and their oldest books divide it into eight parts: Shalya, surgery; Shalakya, treatment of diseases of the head and neck; Kaya-chikitsa, constitutional diseases; Bhoot-vidya, diseases due to demons; Kaumara-bhritya, diseases and management of children; Agada, toxicology; Rasayana, preventive and alexipharmac medicines; and Vajikarana, aphrodisiac medicine. A famous quatrain, often quoted to this day, sums up the particular merit of each of the four most famous Hindoo fathers of medicine:—

Nidane Madhavas shreshthas,
Sutrasthane tu Vagbhatas:
Sharire Sushrutas proctas,
Charakas tu chikitsake.

Madhava peerless in diagnosis, Vagbhata in the science of physic, Sushruta in surgery, Charaka in the treatment of disease. After a chapter on the Hindoo theory of creation comes one on Hindoo practice during the period of nubility, which sets forth the twenty-five rites of the several periods of life. An elaboration of details based upon groundless hypotheses is characteristic of Hindoo medicine, and where there are such innumerable conjectures it happens that some of them point in the direction of modern discoveries. A chapter on the theory of Indian medicine gives a clear account of the three Doshas or humours and their effects. Sir Bhagvat Sinh Jee thinks that a passage in which Harita, an ancient writer, after attributing anæmia to swallowing clay, says, "The clay thus eaten blocks the lumen of the several veins, and stops the circulation of the blood," points to an anticipation of Harvey. This and other passages prove that the Hindoos knew that the blood moved in the blood-vessels, but they were ignorant of the particular course of its movement, which Harvey was the first to demonstrate. An elaborate account of native materia medica is full of interest, and shows much more learning and enlightenment than the essay on the same subject published some years ago by a Parsee physician in a voluminous 'Digest of Medicine.' Another very interesting chapter is that on the qualities of a physician and his prognosis. The Hindoos hold that as physicians ascend in the scale of knowledge they use more and more drugs:—

"A practitioner knowing one hundred remedies for any one disease is called a Vaidya, one with a knowledge of two hundred remedies for any one disease is called a Bhishak, and to one who is acquainted with no less than three hundred remedies for each and every affection is applied the term Dhanvantari. The knowledge of diseases and the knowledge of the drugs are of equal importance to a physician. One without the other is like a vessel without a helmsman."

Many European writers have in recent times taken the opposite view, that the more learned the physician the fewer drugs he will employ, while Sir William Gull and some of his followers have almost reached the point of denying the efficacy of materia medica. The Thakore Saheb of Gondal, learned as he is, retains a lingering respect for all the views of his ancestors, and has something to say in praise of astrology. He believes that European medicine owes much to the East, and with genuine enthusiasm concludes his book with the words:—

"The Indian Medicine deserves preservation and investigation. It is the business of all seekers after truth—be they Europeans or Hindoos—to take up the question in the spirit of fairness and sympathy. The revival of such a spirit will, it is hoped, lead at no distant date to a juster appreciation of Aryan Medical Science."

He omits the discussion of the relation of the Hippocratic school to the East, without which the true status of Indian medicine in relation to the progress of knowledge cannot be determined, but his work is full of interesting facts not accessible in any other English book, and deserves high commendation. His Highness has made good use both of his studies in Edinburgh and of his opportunities of acquiring Hindoo learning.

PROF. K. R. FRESENIUS.

CHEMICAL science, in its application to analysis, has lost a distinguished representative by the death of Prof. Fresenius, which occurred on the 10th inst. at Wiesbaden. Karl Remigius Fresenius was born at Frankfort-on-the-Main as far back as December 28th, 1818. After studying at Bonn and at Giessen, he became assistant to Liebig, and while still young distinguished himself by introducing, in conjunction with Will, certain improvements in alkalimetry and acidimetry. At three-and-twenty years of age he went to Wiesbaden as professor of chemistry, physics, and technology at an agricultural college; and there he subsequently founded the laboratory which has since developed into an important educational institution, at present under the direction of his eldest son. Prof. Fresenius made a special study of mineral waters, and wrote a work on the important springs of Nassau. But his best-known writings were his classical treatises on analysis, the 'Anleitung zur qualitativen chemischen Analyse' and the companion volume on quantitative analysis. These important works, issued edition after edition and widely known by translations, became recognized as the standard authority on their special subjects. For many years, too, as editor of the Zeitschrift für analytische Chemie, Dr. Fresenius kept the chemical world in touch with all improvements in analytical methods of research.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

PROF. NEWCOMB having retired from the post of Superintendent of the American Nautical Almanac, which he has held for nearly twenty years, Prof. W. W. Hendrickson has been appointed his successor. The latter has held since 1873 the office of head of the department of mathematics of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and has been an officer of the American navy since 1862.

We regret to notice the somewhat sudden death on the 12th inst., in his fifty-ninth year, of the Rev. A. Freeman, F.R.A.S., Rector of Murston, near Sittingbourne. Mr. Freeman graduated as Fifth Wrangler in 1861, and was the author of several contributions to the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society, the Observatory, and other astronomical and mathematical publications. He acted as deputy to Challis, Plumian Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge, for a year or two before the death of the latter in 1882.

Mr. Douglass finds from his observations at the Lowell Observatory that Jupiter's fourth satellite, as well as his third, rotates on its axis in about the same time as it occupies in revolving round the planet.

The Report of Her Majesty's Astronomer at the Cape of Good Hope (Dr. Gill) to the Secretary of the Admiralty for the year 1896 has been received. Considerable alterations and additions have been made in the building, particularly the erection of a new dome, which is "admirable in design, excellent in workmanship, easy and convenient for use, and reflects the highest credit on the makers, Messrs. T. Cooke & Sons, of York." Unexpected delay has occurred in the completion of the McClean telescope, but it is hoped that all will be in full working order by the end of the present year. Great progress has been effected in making up the arrears of calculations, besides which activity has been resumed in the department of meridian observations, restricted, however, to those of stars by night. A large amount of work has been accomplished with the astrophotographic telescopes, chiefly on the Cape portion of the great photographic survey of the stellar heavens, a scheme the organization of which was greatly due to Dr. Gill. The equatorials have been employed in the observation of casual phenomena, besides which searches have been undertaken for southern double stars, which have resulted in the discovery of a considerable number. Several publications of importance have been issued from the Observatory, particularly the second volume of 'A Determination of the Solar Parallax and Mass of the Moon from Observations of Iris, Victoria, and Sappho in the Years 1888 and 1889,' and the first volume of the 'Cape Photographic Durchmusterung,' containing the places and magnitudes of 152,598 stars, derived by Prof. Kapteyn from the Cape photographs between 19° and 37° southern declination. The second volume of this (now in course of printing) will carry the results on to 52° south declination and contain the places and magnitudes of 158,000 stars. In addition to these works, the account of the Geodetic Survey of South Africa, executed by Col. Morris, under the direction of Dr. Gill, with a reduction of Sir T. Maclear's arc of meridian, has been presented to the Cape Parliament, and distributed to astronomers and other persons interested in geodesy. At the conclusion of the Report attention is called to the necessity of an increase in the staff, and also that of the provision of a reversible transit-circle—proposals which have been favourably considered by the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, and therefore, it is hoped, will before long become accomplished facts.

The death is announced of Mr. Alvan Clark, of the well-known firm of astronomical instrument makers of Cambridgeport, Mass.

SOCIETIES.

STATISTICAL.—June 15.—Mr. A. E. Bateman, President, in the chair.—A paper 'On Statistics of Small-pox and Vaccination, with Special Reference to Age-Incidence, Sex-Incidence, and Sanitation,' was read by Mr. A. Milnes.

LINNEAN.—May 24.—Anniversary Meeting.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—The report of the Librarian having been read, the Fellows present proceeded to ballot for the President, Officers, and Council for the ensuing year, and the result was declared to be as follows: President, Dr. A. Günther; Treasurer, Mr. Frank Crisp; Secretaries, Mr. B. D. Jackson and Prof. G. B. Howes.—The President then delivered the annual presidential address.—The obituary notices of deceased Fellows having been laid before the meeting, the Gold Medal of the Society was formally awarded to Dr. J. G. Agardh, Emeritus Professor of Botany in the University of Lund, and, in consequence of his inability to receive it in person, was delivered on his behalf to his Excellency the Minister for Sweden and Norway, who made a suitable acknowledgment.

June 3.—Dr. A. Günther, President, in the chair.—The Hon. W. Rothschild and Mr. J. B. Sowerby were admitted, and the following were elected Fellows: Messrs. E. R. Budden, W. S. Rowntree, T. Steel, and G. C. Turner.—The President appointed the following Vice-Presidents for the ensuing year: Messrs. W. Carruthers, F. Crisp, St. G. Mivart, and D. H. Scott.—Prof. G. B. Howes exhibited specimens of the remarkable crustacean Anaspides tasmaniæ, from the Hartz Lake, Huon district, Tasmania, which he had received from Mr. G. M. Thomson, its discoverer (see Trans. Linn. Soc. Zool [2], vol. vi. p. 287), together with a letter stating that the animal is now known from three localities. He directed attention to a recent monograph by Calman (Trans. R. Soc. Edinb., vol. xxxviii. p. 787), in which the conclusion was drawn that the "pod shrimps" of the genera Acanthotelson, Gampsonyx, and Palæocaris, in respect to characters in which they are anomalous, agree with Anaspides, and that the four genera are probably to be referred to an ancient group of primitive Malacostraca. He remarked that he was disposed to agree with Calman's determination of the morphological value of the "first thoracic segment" of Thomson, and that he could confirm his statement that the peduncle of the flagellum of the antenna was but two-jointed.—The Rev. T. R. Stebbing threw doubts upon the association claimed by Calman for Acanthotelson, and remarked that some amphipods are known to agree with Anaspides in the possession of double epipodial lamellæ. The "ocellus" of Calman did not appear to him to occupy the position of an ocellus, and he thought it might possibly be a luminous organ.—Dr. G. D. Haviland gave the substance of a paper on Termites, illustrated by lantern-slides, showing some of the more characteristic and remarkable forms of nests made by these insects, as well as figures of the insects themselves.—A discussion followed, in which Mr. Saville Kent, the Rev. T. R. Stebbing, and the Rev. F. C. Smith took part; Mr. Kent exhibiting another series of lantern-slides illustrating the nests of Australian species.—Prof. T. R. Jones communicated a paper, by himself and Mr. F. Chapman, on the genus Ramulina, forming the second part of a paper of which the former portion, on the tubulose and fistulose Polymorphinæ, has been already published (Linn. Soc. Journ. Zool., xxv. p. 496). After some general remarks on the genus, its constitution and relationships, especially to Polymorphina in its initial chambers and septate nodes, and to other genera in some analogous modes of growth, Prof. R. Jones remarked that of this genus a large number of forms occur in the cretaceous formations, three in the Jurassic, and several in the tertiary, and that seven still survive in existing seas. In addition to notices of some forty forms already known, nineteen novelties were described, several of which were shown by means of lantern-slides. These specimens were all grouped in five species, namely, Ramulina lævis, Jones (five forms), R. globulifera, Brady (twenty-three forms), R. aculeata, Wright (twenty-three forms), R. grimaldii, Schlumberger (one form), and R. cervicornis, Chapman (seven forms).—The Secretary communicated a paper, by Mr. E. C. Horrell, 'On the Number of Sterigmata and Spores in Agaricus campestris.'

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—June 2.—Mr. R. Trimen, President, in the chair.—The President referred to the great loss which the Society had sustained by the death of Dr. Fritz Müller, one of its Honorary Fellows, and to his distinguished services in the cause of entomological science, and especially in forwarding the theory of the origin of species.—Dr. Chapman exhibited the larva of Eriocephala allionella.—Mr. Jacoby exhibited a fine example of the large hepialid, Leto venus, from Plettenberg Bay, South Africa.—The President said that the insect afforded an interesting case of localized distribution, being confined to an area of about fifty by fourteen miles, whereas the larva fed on the wood of Virgilia capensis, a common and widely distributed leguminous tree. The insect was very conspicuous and could not have been overlooked in other localities.—Mr. Burr showed a pair of gynandromorphous earwigs, Chelisoches morio, Fabr., from Java, with ordinary males and females for comparison. In both specimens the right branch of the forceps was of the male, and the left branch of the female form.—The Hon. W. Rothschild exhibited a series of specimens of Eudæmonia brachyura, Drury, and E. argiphontes, Kirby, to show the differences between these two West African saturniid moths. The distinctness of the latter species had been doubted, as until recently it was only known by the unique examples in the Dublin Museum, and the three published figures of these were materially different from each other. A comparison of the series exhibited showed the two species to be abundantly distinct.—Mr. Kirkaldy exhibited fifty specimens of Notonecta glauca, Linn., to show the extreme range in size and colour of this widely distributed species.—The discussion on mimicry and homœochromatism in butterflies was then resumed by Dr. Dixey, who replied to the comments of Prof. Poulton and Mr. Blandford on his paper. He did not regard the phenomenon of reciprocal convergence as necessarily a demonstrable feature in Müllerian mimicry; it was merely potential. With respect to mimetic Pieridæ, he did not consider that they were invariably protected, but that, in certain cases, they were shown to be so by the indications of convergence exhibited by the models.—Mr. Elwes thought, from his personal experience as a collector, that there was too much assumption about both the Batesian and Müllerian theories. In many supposed cases he doubted whether the so-called models were protected by taste or smell. He had previously referred to the extraordinary superficial resemblance between two Pieridæ found in the high Andes of Bolivia, and two others found at similar elevations in Ladak, and was inclined to think that similar conditions of environment produced similar effects.—Mr. J. J. Walker, Sir G. Hampson, and Col. Yerbury gave evidence, from personal experience in the tropics, as to the extreme rarity of butterfly-destruction by birds.—The President admitted its rarity in Africa, but stated that he had seen birds, especially the Drongo shrike, chasing butterflies.—Mr. Blandford called attention to a recent paper by M. Piepers, who, as the result of twenty-eight years' observation in the Malay region, had seen four instances only of butterflies, two of which belonged to the "protected" genus Euplœa, being attacked by birds, and had been driven to the conclusion that the phenomena of mimicry had nothing to do with natural selection.—Papers were communicated by the Rev. F. D. Morice 'On New or Little-known Sphegidæ from Egypt,' and by Prof. J. B. Grote 'On Changes in the Structure of the Wing of Butterflies.'

METEOROLOGICAL.—June 16.—Mr. E. Mawley, President, in the chair.—A paper by Mr. R. C. Mossman, 'On the Non-Instrumental Meteorology of London, 1713-1896,' was read by the Secretary. The author has gone through the principal meteorological registers and weather records kept in the metropolis, and in this paper discusses for a period of 167 years the notices of thunderstorms, lightning without thunder, fog, snow, hail, and gales. The average number of thunderstorms is 9·7 per annum, the maximum occurring in July and the minimum in February. The average number of fogs is 24·4, and of "dense" fogs 5·8 per annum. The decadal means show that there has been a steady and uninterrupted increase of fog since 1841. The average number of days with snow is 13·6 per annum. The snowiest winter was that of 1817-8, with forty-three days, while in the winter of 1862-3 there is not a single instance of a snowfall. The mean date of first snowfall is November 9th, and of last snowfall March 30th. Hail is essentially a spring phenomenon, reaching a maximum in March and April; the minimum is in July and August. The average number of days with hail is 5·9 per annum.—Mr. C. Harding gave an account of the hailstorm which occurred in the south-west of London on April 27th, 1897.

INSTITUTE OF ACTUARIES.—June 1.—Annual General Meeting.—Mr. T. E. Young, President, in the chair.—The report for 1896-97 was read, and the following were the officers and Council elected: President, T. E. Young; Vice-Presidents, H. W. Manly, H. Cockburn, W. Hughes, and G. H. Ryan; Council, A. B. Adlard, M. N. Adler, H. W. Andras, T. G. C. Browne, A. F. Burridge, J. Chisholm, H. Cockburn, G. S. Crisford, R. Cross, J. J. W. Deuchar, A. J. Finlaison, N. B. Gunn, R. P. Hardy, A. Hendriks, W. Hughes, G. King, F. Laing, H. W. Manly, G. Marks, W. O. Nash, P. L. Newman, G. H. Ryan, J. Sorley, T. B. Sprague, W. Sutton, H. C. Thiselton, S. G. Warner, W. J. H. Whittall, F. B. Wyatt, and T. E. Young; Treasurer, J. Chisholm; Honorary Secretaries, F. B. Wyatt and A. F. Burridge.

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—June 14.—Mr. G. M. Lawford, President, in the chair.—A paper was read by Prof. H. W. Umney 'On the Compression of Air by the Direct Action of Water.'

MATHEMATICAL.—June 10.—Prof. Elliott, President, and subsequently Major MacMahon, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. W. W. Taylor gave a detailed description of several models of the regular convex and star solids.—Other communications made were 'The Calculus of Equivalent Statements' (sixth paper), by Mr. H. MacColl,—'On the Primitive Substitution Groups of Degree Fifteen,' by Dr. G. A. Miller,—and 'A Generalized Form of the Binomial Theorem,' by the Rev. F. H. Jackson.

PHYSICAL.—June 11.—Mr. S. Bidwell, President, in the chair.—A mathematical paper was read by Mr. C. S. Whitehead 'On the Effect of Sea-Water on Induction Telegraphy.'—Mr. T. H. Blakesley read a paper 'On a New Definition of Focal Length, and an Instrument for determining It.'—Dr. J. A. Fleming read a paper 'On a Method of determining Magnetic Hysteresis Loss in Straight Iron Strips.'

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

MON. Victoria Institute, 4½.
— Geographical, 8½.
THURS. United Service Institution, 3.—'Smokeless Powders and Aërial Torpedo Warfare,' Mr. H Maxim.
FRI. Physical, 5.—'A New Theory of the Earth's Magnetism,' Mr. Sutherland; 'Experiments in Critical Phenomena,' Dr. Kuenen; 'Attenuation of Electric Waves in Wires,' Dr. Barton; 'The Steady Motion of an Electrified Ellipsoid,' Mr. G. F. C. Searle.

Science Gossip.

MR. HOWARD SAUNDERS is preparing for Messrs. Gurney & Jackson a revised edition of 'A Manual of British Birds.' The work will be brought quite up to date and many new illustrations added, drawn and engraved on wood by Mr. G. E. Lodge. It is intended to issue this new edition in monthly parts, and it is hoped that their publication will commence before next autumn.

ONE of the highest authorities on metallurgical science has just passed away in the person of Prof. Peter Ritter von Tunner, of Leoben, in Styria, who has died at the ripe age of eighty-nine. To the literature of his favourite science he contributed a number of works dealing with the production of iron and steel, not only in Austria, but in Sweden and in the United States. The famous white pig-iron, smelted from spathic ores with charcoal, rendered Styria long ago a classical locality to the student of metallurgy; and Tunner, the founder of the local Mining Academy, was an acknowledged representative of the industry. He was one of the jurors at our Great Exhibition in 1851, and he received the Bessemer Medal of the Iron and Steel Institute in 1878.

AMONG the Parliamentary Papers issued on June 11th is one showing the Experiments on Living Animals in 1896, price 6*d*.

FINE ARTS

Recherches sur les Origines de l'Égypte: l'Age de la Pierre et des Métaux. Par J. de Morgan. (Paris, Leroux.)

M. DE MORGAN'S book is, as its title shows, addressed in the first case to Egyptologists; but the most cursory glance at its pages will convince any reader that he is dealing with a work the scope of which comprises not only Egyptology in particular, but comparative ethnography in general. It is the outcome of an attempt made by its learned author to piece together the various fragments of information which excavations in Egypt have yielded during the last few years, and to deduce from them a connected series of facts wherefrom we may attempt to calculate the antiquity of man in Egypt, and to learn something of his manners and customs and of the circumstances under which he lived. M. de Morgan has been preparing himself for the work for some years past, and though we may not accept all the conclusions which he now so ably puts before us, it must be confessed that an archæological case was never better argued nor so well supported by incontrovertible facts. He discusses impartially the results of his own extensive excavations and those of Mr. Petrie and M. Amélineau, and without attempting to describe the various steps of his argument, we hasten to enumerate the main facts of the problem which he tries to solve.

Of the original home, race, and language of the Egyptians, who are familiar to us through their hieroglyphic inscriptions, nothing is known. Some say their home was Asia, and some fix their birthplace in Africa; some trace their language to Semitic sources, and some to Aryan; and various authorities would ally them to Libyans, Negroes, Semites, and Asiatics of the Far East. Keeping such opposite opinions steadily in view, M. de Morgan has tried to construct an edifice of facts connected with the origin and development, and the manners and customs and beliefs of the early or prehistoric Egyptians, which he has gleaned from their tombs and methods of burial, and from their pottery, stone and metal tools, weapons, &c. Having traced the earliest geological changes which resulted in the formation of the Delta and the valley of the Nile and its fertile districts, he discusses the Stone Age in Egypt, and finally decides that flint tools belong to a very much more remote date than has hitherto been supposed. Of the autochthons, whom M. de Morgan identifies with the men of the palæolithic age, he believes that four stations have been discovered, viz., Dahshur, Abydos, Tukh, and Thebes, and remains of them have been found by him in several other places. Abundant woodcuts illustrate their axes and other tools. Of all their remains, however, the most interesting are those of el-'Amrah, a necropolis which is situated four or five miles to the south of Abydos. Here were found a number of tombs of considerable interest. The tomb consisted of an oval ditch sunk in the soil to a depth of from four to six feet, and in it the body was placed, lying on its left side; the knees were bent up to the chest, and the hands were crossed before the face. Around the corpse were found large rough earthenware jars and other vessels; vases made of red pottery, with black, shining edges; green schist figures of animals, fishes, &c.; flints, and other objects. Bronze objects are rare in tombs of this period, and when found they are quite small, a fact from which some have concluded that the art of making bronze was new when these tombs were dug. That the bodies were buried lying on their left sides is a noteworthy fact, for in the oldest Egyptian tombs known bodies are always found lying on their backs.

With the description of the pottery of the autochthons M. de Morgan opens up a question which cannot be discussed at length here for want of space, and we must content ourselves with saying that considerable diversity of opinion exists among experts as to its age. The objects which M. Amélineau ascribes to the prehistoric period are attributed by M. de Morgan to the period of the early historic dynasties of kings; and, if we mistake not, Messrs. Maspero, Petrie, and Brugsch Bey consider them to belong to a much later date. On the other hand, M. de Morgan and Mr. Petrie differ considerably in the dates which they assign to the pottery which each has excavated in his own sites, and it is quite evident that the question of the accuracy of the various theories put forward cannot be settled out of hand. It must, however, be remembered that M. de Morgan's views are those of a trained mind, and that in cases where he has expressed a definite opinion he has, so far as we can judge, good grounds for it. On points of abstruse anthropology and Egyptology he has recourse to the knowledge of experts, and it is a significant fact that he does not attempt to settle in an arbitrary manner moot points connected with his work. His scientific knowledge has served him well in his sixth chapter, wherein he describes the flora and fauna of the valley of the Nile after the Egyptian conquest, and it is probable that many readers may consider it the most interesting chapter in the book. In an appendix Dr. Fouquet gives some valuable notes and measurements of the skulls found by M. Amélineau at el-'Amrah.

In conclusion, M. de Morgan's views may be thus stated: 1. The Egyptians are probably of Asiatic origin, and if this be so their ancestors were Chaldean Semites. 2. The art of metal working came from China, and the Egyptians probably learned it from the Chinese. 3. The Egyptian civilization comes partly from Asia and partly from Africa. 4. Remains of prehistoric man abound in Egypt, and from them we may construct a scheme of his life. 5. The existence of civilized man in Egypt may be reckoned by thousands of years, and that of the autochthons by myriads of years. The many coloured plates and illustrations in the book do much to prove the general accuracy of M. de Morgan's statements.

ELEMENTARY MANUALS.

A Handbook of Art Smithing. By F. S. Meyer. Translated, with an Introduction, by J. S. Gardner. Illustrated. (Batsford.)—Mr. Batsford maintains in this manual the well-earned reputation of his firm of publishing good, sound, and highly practicable books on the decorative arts and handicrafts. While we do not for a moment believe that any one, however handy and attentive he may be, could become a smith, much less a practitioner of "Art Smithing," by the aid of this or any other book, the work may be described as an excellent, clear, intelligent, and, so far as its size permits, complete account of the craft of working in iron for decorative purposes, replete with cuts of well chosen specimens of the leading styles and applications of the craft, which rather ambitiously calls itself an art. Where Herr Meyer's own studies could not carry him, he has applied to sources more peculiarly qualified, such as Dr Beck of Brunswick's treatise on the history of iron-working. Although the examples set before the reader are not always the best that might be found, they are invariably appropriate and sufficient, and the cuts from them, though mostly a little harsh and mechanical, are clear and correctly as well as intelligently drawn. It is to Germany, and especially to Cologne and Nuremberg, Munich, Augsburg, and Carlsruhe, that we must look for the finest decorative ironwork, as well as triumphs of the armourer, Europe has produced. Damascus, Spain, and Italy excelled in sword-making, but of the toreutic crafts at large no countries knew more, or did more, than Baden and Bavaria. Rude as was all the ironwork of Europe until the thirteenth century was well advanced, it was then at its best in those countries, and has remained so since. Though at times France and England have not been far behind, each of these countries failed to keep an unbroken record. It is well, therefore, that an author who, like Dr. Meyer, is German, should write a text-book such as this, and it is likewise well that it should be translated into English. The manual being as it is, however, we should, on æsthetic and technical grounds, have preferred that its chosen models might conform to Gothic or some equally logical principles of design, and less to rococo, and, worse still, baroque types.

A Plain Guide to Oil Painting. By Hugh Nisbet. Illustrated. (Reeves & Son.)—Mr. Nisbet, a practised artist and teacher of drawing and painting, counsels his pupils not to be in too great a hurry to begin to paint in oil or any other material. In this we agree with him, and think this little book of his at least unobjectionable, if not desirable. In order to teach, Mr. Nisbet begins at the beginning, and gives instructions so simple that we almost believe any one could, if he were sufficiently attentive, not only understand the instructions of the teacher, but, in time, follow them out, so far as rudimentary draughtsmanship goes. We then come to a chapter (which seems premature) warmly commending the colours and other materials sold by Messrs. Reeves & Son, who, as the reader sees, publish this "plain guide." Passing this little matter of business, it is pleasant to find that Mr. Nisbet is able to describe various operations of the painter's craft, such as the setting of a palette secundum artem, that is, in a safe, if conventional way. Into this we shall not attempt to follow Mr. Nisbet, especially as we do not believe any one would or could get any good by trying to master from a book a most difficult, complex, and delicate handicraft. In short, let us say that while we doubt the possibility of learning to paint from a book, any more than how to sing or to ride a bicycle by similar means, we admit that what Mr. Nisbet has written is correct and well expressed as far as it goes.

Black-Board Drawing. By M. Swannell. (Macmillan & Co.)—We agree with the compiler of this body of sketches printed upon black, so that the diagrams show in white, in attaching great value to drawing as a means of education—as, in short, the only way of training the pupil's eyes, and of doubling the serviceableness of his fingers; but we do not believe with him that, unless a very great deal more time is allotted to the subject, the pupils of our schools will ever attain power to delineate anything more difficult than the simpler forms in the rudimentary subjects before us. It is quite absurd to expect a youth, still more a child, to draw, or, even with reasonable accuracy, copy the diagram in perspective (the curves of which are, by the way, egregiously wrong) of St. Paul's Cathedral (plate xxvi.). Nothing so ugly should be put before the young as some of the concentric patterns on plates i. ii. iii. and x. As object lessons designed to awaken the beginner's powers of observation, the sketches of natural forms, fishes, flowers, leaves, and the like, which occur on several of the plates, are good; but this is not teaching drawing, which means the power of seeing for oneself, and analyzing as well as delineating whatever the eye contemplates. It is this power to see, and seeing, analyze, which it ought to be the object of the drawing-master to cultivate, and which cannot be attained to without technical performance of some sort. Object lessons are all very well in their way and so far as they go, but at best they are, so far as pupils are concerned, second-hand and perfunctory. They may be amusing, but they fail to confer the power of observation which drawing at first hand, even if it is rudimentary in the narrowest sense of the term, secures. It was long ago said that a good draughtsman sees, but no one else does more than half see.

THE SALONS AT PARIS.

(Fifth and Concluding Notice.)

HAPPY are the sculptors who know to what end and for what destination they are imagining and composing their work, whether it be statue or basrelief, and who can supplement it by the strong support of durable architecture, and connect it with the inspiring idea of a common programme. Herein lay the secret of the force and fertility of the makers of images for cathedrals. Even a superficial view of the Salons will quickly explain the secret of the feeble work of the sculptors of to-day. In spite of their talent—and talent is certainly no rarity—an obvious uneasiness weighs upon them; and reflection only corroborates the view that the reason of this is nothing but the want, if one may put it so, of a social destination for modern sculpture. It is idle for the academies to attempt to prolong the ascendency of formulas or æsthetic principles which once flourished; it is beyond their power to change the vital conditions and the very essence of art, which can only truly support and renew itself from the very sources of national life. Now, as far as sculpture is concerned, these sources are to-day singularly diminished. The ideal monument round which the statues and basreliefs would care to group themselves, like a unanimous and living people, the great inspiring idea to regulate, support, inspire, and in some sort impart their rhythm to their movements, are not forthcoming. Our sculptors are consequently reduced to look for motives for their statues, or invent attitudes laboriously; and when one of them has by chance discovered one which appears novel, studio after studio quickly repeats it under various titles and very slight modifications of arrangement. Some years ago, for instance, a young sculptor of talent imagined an allegory, 'The Stream and the Meadow,' which appeared ingenious. The meadow was represented by a figure lazily couched over which strode the river, slender and urgent, passing it with a movement full of light grace. This year, at every step, can be seen in the Jardin de la Sculpture groups all derived from these same data. The Storm and the Leaf of M. Forestier (No. 2942, Champs Élysées), The Rock and the Wave of M. Loysel (3160), The Oak and the Reed of M. Coutheillas (2835)—only to mention examples which display real talent—are, rightly taken, merely repetitions of an already familiar theme. It is but fair, however, to add that M. Loysel has put a more personal sentiment into his piece; the tired, caressing movement of the wave, symbolized by a female figure, towards the rock which eternally repels it, is a finely conceived piece of sentiment.

This is not the place for a detailed examination of all the statues in which the search for a movement more or less original has been the one idea that has occupied the sculptor, and which wait, with outstretched arm, for the liberality of the State or the Ville de Paris—the only possible buyers to-day of works of the sort—to secure them a position in some public garden. It will be enough to cite La Pesée (3056), by M. d'Houdain, which is truly sculpture of the bold and free style, and one of the most remarkable groups in the Salon.

If we look for sculptures which have not been produced merely to be exhibited, which only appear at the Salons to occupy later a situation already arranged, it does not take long to count them up, and we meet with nearly always the same customers—namely, the State and the Ville de Paris. To these, however, must be added some provincial municipalities who are anxious to perpetuate in a suitable monument the remembrance of some local glory, to possess the statue of their great man, or raise his image above his tomb.

To this category belong some of the most remarkable or most discussed works in the two Salons: at the Champs Élysées, The Monument of Guy de Maupassant for the Parc Monceau (3441), by M. Verlet; The Monument of Leconte de Lisle for the gardens of the Luxembourg (3316), by M. Puech; The Tomb of Madame Carvalho (3202), by M. A. Mercié; that of Cardinal Guibert for the basilica of Montmartre (3156), by M. Louis-Noel; at the Champ de Mars, the tomb of Alexandre Dumas, the younger (131), by M. de Saint-Marceaux, for the cemetery of Montmartre; the monument of Victor Hugo (125), by M. Rodin; the statue of Marshal Canrobert (87) for the town of Saint-Céré (Lot), his birthplace, by M. A. Lenoir; a bronze group, which is very tumultuous and rather heavy, destined for the gardens of the Luxembourg, The Triumph of Silenus (31), the work of M. Dalou; and the execution in stone of a fragment of that admirable Monument to the Dead (6), by M. Bartholomé, which will be raised by the care of the State and the Ville de Paris at the entrance of the cemetery of Père-Lachaise. I spoke at length last year of this work, which figured in plaster at the Champ de Mars, and is so beautiful in feeling, thought, and form that it will rank at once amongst the most monumental and the most human sculpture that our times have produced.

The 'Victor Hugo' of M. Rodin has, as is always the case with the works of this artist, aroused frenzied admiration in some quarters, violent indignation in others. The truth is that we have here a mere rough cast, in which exceedingly powerful suggestions are accompanied by a slovenliness so glaring that it is impossible to see in the work more than the beginnings of execution. The poet is seated on the seashore. Leaning against a rock, he supports his heavy and pensive head on his hand, and listens to the voices of inspiration brought to him by the breeze from the open sea, and the waves which come rolling to his feet. The voices are represented by women; one, couched on a rock above his head, with arms stretched out, and mouth open as if to curse, is the voice of the 'Châtiments,' of anger and indignation, if not hate; the other, standing behind the poet, retiring and plaintive, is the voice of the 'Contemplations' or the 'Feuilles d'Automne.' The movement of the two figures is of an epic cast; but the execution of them is hardly attempted—there are merely approximations at a rendering; and whilst the frantic admirers of M. Rodin pretend to raise even his faults to the rank of sublime beauties, the uncompromisingly classical and the academic schools are unwilling to recognize anything but ignorance, incoherence, and raving madness in the extravagant gesticulations of these figures. And as there is nothing like æsthetic discussion for bringing out self-conceit, the two parties exchange more abuse than sound argument on the subject.

Statues being difficult to "place," and the number of princes and rich amateurs who once ordered them considerably reduced, the sculptors have taken to producing or reproducing statuettes, which can be easily lodged, and consequently find a readier sale. We cannot blame them for this, especially when we see works as charming in every way as those of M. Rivière - Théodore or M. Dampt. M. Rivière - Théodore exhibits at the Champs Élysées a portrait in bronze, cire perdue, of M. Armand Silvestre (3344), and especially a small group (bronze, marble, and ivory), Charles VI. and Odette (3668), and a Portrait of Madame Pujol (various marbles, ivory, gold, and precious stones, 3669), which are from the correctness and expressive force of their movement, from the fineness of execution, and the taste of their arrangement pieces of unusual value. M. Dampt exhibits at the Champ de Mars a bust of a woman (wood and ivory), and a statuette of Du Guesclin as a boy (bronzed steel and marble), which also represent art of the greatest value. MM. Antonin Mercié, Ferrary, Charpentier, Gérôme, Cordonnier, and many others, have also entered on the path which M. Frémiet laid open before them. This year again he sets the example by exhibiting not only a powerful basrelief, destined for the Museum of Natural History, which represents Man in the Stone Age (2955) bringing home to his cave a bear's cub whose mother he has just slain—

Ferre domum vivos indignantesque solebat, but also a charming little bronze, The Hen with the Golden Eggs (2956), and both in his monumental sculpture and his statuette he brings those qualities of decision, freedom, and expressive force to bear which he derives from his master Rude and also from Barye.

A few words will be enough to deal with the objets d'art. A reflection of a general order rises at once to one's lips when one has traversed at both the Salons the section (better furnished each year) which is reserved for their exhibition. It is that, instead of drawing from the destination of the object the principle of its decoration and endeavouring to make objects which one could and would be glad to use, artists and artisans seem to be addicted by preference to oddities and complications of form. They make for the most part gewgaws of the glass-case or whatnot order. This is a deplorable line to take. To mingle art with life one must apply it to common objects. As long as this elementary but fundamental truth is not thoroughly recognized everywhere, there will be nothing truly fertile produced by the great effort, now some years old, which has been made to regenerate decorative art. We see here much talent entirely wasted. In furniture in particular nothing really good or useful has yet been produced, but in ceramics, enamelling, jewellery, bookbinding, and leather work more successful attempts have been made. M. Lalique exhibits at the Champs Élysées (3615) ornaments, bracelets, pins, rings of gold, silver, and precious stones which are as original in invention as they are precious in execution; and it is in the observation of nature, whose inspirations are inexhaustible for those who know how to observe her with love and intelligence, that he has met with his most original conceptions. M. Nocq at the Champ de Mars (315) exhibits also some extremely pretty trinkets. There is especially a mirror in the shape of a water-lily leaf, in silver adorned with enamels, pearls, and precious stones, while the handle is formed by a Narcissus looking at himself in the crystal, which is quite exquisite. ANDRÉ MICHEL.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS sold on the 11th inst. the following pictures: Mignard, Portrait of a Lady, in a yellow dress, with a basket of flowers, 210*l*. Titian (after), Human and Divine Love, 141*l*.

The same auctioneers sold on the 12th inst. the following pictures: G. Romney, Portrait of John Dunlop, Esq., in brown coat and wig, 131*l*.; Lady Hamilton, seated, resting her head on her right hand, 892*l*. A. Cuyp, La Pêche au Saumon, a youth showing a salmon to a gentleman on horseback, 152*l*. Sir J. Reynolds, William, fourth Duke of Devonshire, with robes and Order of the Garter, 315*l*.; William, fourth Duke of Devonshire, in grey coat with blue and gold facings, 252*l*.

The same auctioneers sold on the 15th the following mezzotint portraits, after Sir Joshua Reynolds, from the collection of the late Mr. H. T. Broadhurst: Mrs. Abington as the Comic Muse, by J. Watson, 157*l*. Lady Bampfylde, by T. Watson, 60*l*. Mrs. Beresford, with the Marchioness Townshend and the Hon. Mrs. Gardiner, by T. Watson, 126*l*. Mrs. Bonfoy, by J. McArdell, 28*l*. Lady Sarah Bunbury, by E. Fisher, 39*l*. Lady Carlisle, by J. Watson, 168*l*. Mrs. Carnac, by J. R. Smith, 278*l*. Barbara, Countess of Coventry, by J. Watson, 65*l*. Master Crewe as Henry VIII., by J. R. Smith, 52*l*. Viscountess Crosbie, by W. Dickinson, second state, 25*l*. Lady Ann Dawson, by J. McArdell, 25*l*. Lady Betty Delmé, by V. Green, 262*l*. Duchess of Gordon, by W. Dickinson, 105*l*. Miss Frances Gordon, "Angels' Heads," by P. Simon, 28*l*. Mrs. Hale as Euphrosyne, by J. Watson, 44*l*. Lady Jane Halliday, by V. Green, 157*l*. Mrs. Hardinge, by T. Watson, 30*l*. Countess of Harrington, by V. Green, 299*l*.; ditto, second state, 42*l*. The Marlborough Family, by C. Turner, 38*l*. Miss Meyer as Hebe, by J. Jacobé, 51*l*. Lady Caroline Montagu as Winter, by J. R. Smith, 52*l*. Miss Nelly O'Brien, by J. Watson, 204*l*. Lady O'Brien, by J. Dixon, 49*l*. Mrs. Pelham feeding Chickens, by V. Green, 199*l*. The Penn Family, by C. Turner, 34*l*. Countess of Salisbury, by V. Green, 115*l*. Hon. Mrs. Stanhope as Contemplation, by J. R. Smith, 71*l*. The Strawberry Girl, by T. Watson, 37*l*.; ditto, 25*l*. Lady Talbot, by V. Green, 73*l*. Lady Taylor, by W. Dickinson, 52*l*. Viscountess Townshend, by V. Green, 136*l*. The Ladies Elizabeth Laura, Charlotte Maria, and Anna Horatia Waldegrave, by V. Green, 588*l*. Turner's Liber Studiorum, a complete set, in two morocco leather Solander cases, 130*l*.

The same auctioneers sold on the same day the following engravings, the property of a lady: After G. Romney, by J. R. Smith, Mrs. North, 44*l*.; Henrietta, Countess of Warwick, 115*l*.

Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge sold on the 10th, 11th, and 12th inst. the collection of the works of George Cruikshank formed by Mr. H. W. Bruton, of Gloucester, which comprised an extensive series of books illustrated by the artist, original drawings, caricatures, and broadsides. The following are some of the high prices realized: Illustrations to Ainsworth's Jack Sheppard, First Proofs, signed, 49*l*. Guy Fawkes, India Proofs, 16*l*. 10*s*. Windsor Castle, First Proofs, 10*l*. Tower of London, India Proofs, 22*l*. 10*s*. Miser's Daughter, first edition, 10*l*. 15*s*. Illustrations to the same, India Proofs, 12*l*. Saint James's, India Proofs before Letters, 13*l*. 13*s*. Anstey's New Bath Guide, First Proofs, signed, 10*l*. 5*s*. Illustrations to Brough's Life of Sir John Falstaff, India Proofs and Duplicates, 37*l*. Comic Almanack, complete in original parts, with duplicate set of unlettered India Proofs, 39*l*. 10*s*. Crowquill's Holiday Grammar, coloured, 13*l*. 10*s*. Illustrations to the Table Book, large paper, India Proofs, 14*l*. Omnibus, large paper, India Proofs, 11*l*. Original Drawings, Tracings, and Proof Etchings for his Autobiography, 61*l*. Reid's Catalogue, large paper, 15*l*. Illustrations to Grimaldi, India Proofs before Letters, 20*l*. Sketches by Boz, first edition, 37*l*.; illustrations to the same, undivided India Proofs before Letters, 46*l*. Illustrations to Oliver Twist, India Proofs and cancelled plates, 32*l*. 10*s*. Fairy Library, complete, 18*l*.; India Proofs of the same, 20*l*. 10*s*. Grimm's Popular Stories, Proofs, 84*l*.; another, 67*l*.; Set of Proof Etchings to same, 26*l*. The Humourist, 60*l*.; another copy (not so good), 27*l*. Inconveniences of a Trip on the Continent, 17*l*. 15*s*. Ingoldsby Legends, 15*l*. 15*s*.; Proof Illustrations and Drawings to the same, 29*l*. Ireland's Napoleon, 31*l*. Kenrick's British Stage, 13*l*. Maxwell's Irish Rebellion, First India Proofs, 40*l*. 10*s*. The Meteor (sold with all faults), with duplicates and special impressions, 73*l*. Monstrosities of Fashion (two states), 17*l*. 15*s*. Moore's Annals of Gallantry, 14*l*. 5*s*. My Sketch-Book, 16*l*. 10*s*. Illustrations to Popular Works, large-paper India Proofs, 14*l*. 5*s*. Illustrations to Punch and Judy, large-paper Proofs and Etchings, 29*l*. Wit's Magazine, 56*l*. Loving Ballad of Lord Bateman, undivided India Proofs, 17*l*. 15*s*. Kean in the Character of Richard III., 14*l*. 15*s*. Earliest Published Portrait of Kean (only two copies known), 9*l*. 10*s*. The Theatrical Atlas (Kean supporting Whitbread's brewery), 10*l*. 5*s*. Boney's Meditations on St. Helena, 9*l*. 5*s*. The total of the three days' sale of 605 lots amounted to 2,519*l*. 10*s*. 6*d*.

The same auctioneers sold on Monday, the 14th inst., the complete series of original water-colour drawings by Hablot K. Browne to illustrate Chas. Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop' and 'Barnaby Rudge.' They comprised in all 121 drawings and were sold en bloc for 610*l*. In the same sale was a small humorous drawing by W. M. Thackeray of Her Majesty the Queen and the Prince Consort walking arm-in-arm followed by all the members of the royal family, which realized 30*l*.

On Wednesday, the 16th inst., among other pictures from Carleton Hall, Penrith, Messrs. Foster sold a portrait of Louisa Stuart, daughter of James II., by Van Loo, for 96 guineas; a portrait of David Garrick, by Zoffany, with Masks of Tragedy and Comedy, for 100 guineas; a very interesting life-size bust portrait of Queen Charlotte, by Gainsborough, for 270 guineas; and life-size, whole-length portraits of children in a garden, by G. Romney, for 9,100*l*.

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE Society of Miniaturists, which is not the body which we referred to last week as showing excellent examples of their art in the Graves Gallery, has formed its summer exhibition at the Grafton Gallery, the private view being held yesterday (Friday). — The members of the '91 Art Club have appointed to-day (Saturday) for the private view of their works in the Clifford Gallery, 21, Haymarket. The collection will be on view until the 29th inst.—At 39, Charing Cross Road, Mr. A. Letchford exhibits seventy-one oil pictures, illustrating Sir R. F. Burton's 'Arabian Nights.'

AFTER the closing of the present exhibition of the Bristol Academy, which shuts its doors on the 10th prox., an important and highly interesting collection of pictures, large and small, and sketches and studies of various kinds, made chiefly in Cornwall, Devonshire, and North and South Wales, by the late C. P. Knight, a native of Bristol, well known in London galleries, will be opened to the public. Later in the autumn a similar exhibition of his works will be, we understand, formed in London.

AT the Goupil Gallery may now be seen fifty-eight paintings and drawings by Mr. J. B. Knight, which, despite excessive roughness and occasional crudities and bad drawing, manifest a natural, if only half-cultivated gift of painting after nature in a generalizing, but often coarse and immature way. His ability shows itself most distinctly in respect to the colours and tones (much of the drawing being simply naught) of studies which, being what they are, deserved better treatment and a choicer and more searching elaboration than has been bestowed on them. Still, some of them grow upon the observer and deepen his regret for their very obvious shortcomings and juvenilities. The best of them show art which would be really valuable if the painter's easy-going ways could be amended by cultivation and patience. One of the best of them is 'Old Dick's Farm' (No. 12), a glowing, misty effect of wintry light and half-transparent vapours about a group of farm buildings, the colour and tone of which deserve high praise. In No. 14, 'Blue-Bell Wood,' there is much delicacy of colour and effect; especially noticeable is a flying gleam of great beauty upon herbage and among old trees. The opalescence of the water and air in 'Dover Pier' (20) is not unworthy of Cox in his best time, when he painted similar subjects in Picardy and Normandy. We like much for their various qualities 'West Drayton Golf Ground' (13), 'The Golf Ground' (15), 'A Leafy Aisle' (17), 'The Windmill' (18), 'Greenwich Hospital' (28), 'Ramsgate Harbour' (32), and the very real 'Meadowsweet' (40), which is limpid, broad, jewel-like in its brilliancy and choiceness. What Mr. Knight most lacks is a firmer touch, and clearer as well as less obtrusively hot shadows.

MR. F. A. RAWLENCE'S drawings of the Riviera, which we mentioned last week as collected in the galleries of the Fine-Art Society, are dexterously and effectively drawn and painted, undeniably scenic, but not by any means offensively so, and very full of light. Apart from their mannerisms and artificialities, the best are 'Villefranche' (No. 3), another 'Villefranche' (69), 'The East Gate, Bordighera' (36), and 'The Deserted Cemetery of the Lazaret, Villefranche.' Seventy-three examples in all comprise none which is not worth looking at.—In the same gallery the reader may find Mr. O. Carlandi's water-colour drawings of "Rome: the Tiber Valley." Many of these are extremely clever and sympathetic, though some of them are a little forced in colour, and there is a slight lack of moderation in the otherwise good colouring they exhibit. Upon the whole, we like best the impressive and powerful 'Sacred Grove, the Circus of Romulus,' and 'The Conversazione,' a group of amphoræ standing up and leaning, as if confidentially whispering, against each other in a cellar.

AT a meeting of the antiquaries and archæologists of the north of England recently held at Newcastle, it was unanimously resolved that a portrait of the Rev. W. Greenwell, F.R.S., should be painted and presented to the library of Durham Cathedral, and a committee was appointed to consider ways and means. It was originally intended to rely upon local support for carrying the resolution into effect, but it was felt in many quarters that the testimonial should not be limited to Northern archæologists only, and subsequently a representative committee was formed, which includes the Earl Percy, Sir John Lubbock, Sir John Evans, General Pitt-Rivers, Sir E. Maunde Thompson, Canon Tristram, the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford, Lord Armstrong, the Dean of Durham, the Bishop of Stepney, and several other well-known antiquaries. The honorary secretary of the committee is Mr. J. G. Gradon, Lynton House, Durham, to whom subscriptions may be sent.

AMONG the greatest of the difficulties attending the destruction of the Palais de l'Industrie in the Champs Élysées, which is actually in progress, and will be completed now that the Salon is closed, is that of deciding on a site for the Salon of next year. The proposal to hold this exhibition in a wooden building, to be erected in the square of the Palais Royal, including the site of the famous Café de la Rotonde, has, as might be expected, been abandoned, not only because the square is not large enough, but on account of the narrowness of most of its approaches. Another plan has been started, and includes the erection of a wooden structure in the Jardin du Louvre, behind the monument of Gambetta and near the Pavillon Sully—that is, where the Bureau des Postes was installed a few years ago, and comprising two long galleries parallel to the Rue de Rivoli and the quai, with three transverse connecting galleries. A third and better plan proposes to house the Salon on the Champ de Mars, vis-à-vis to the existing exhibition there. If this reconciles the two societies it will be a happy arrangement.

THE historical painter August Jakob von Heyden died at Berlin on June 2nd. He was a son of the poet August Friedrich von Heyden, and was born at Breslau in 1827. Originally an engineer, he resigned a profitable situation as director of mining works because of his passion for art. In his thirty-second year he became a student at the Berlin Academy, and in 1861 went to Paris to study under Gleyre and Th. Couture. His first large picture, a 'St. Barbara bringing the Sacrament to a Dying Miner,' now in the parish church of Dudweiler, obtained him a gold medal in the Salon of 1863. His 'Luther and Frundsberg at Worms' is in the Germanic Museum at Nuremberg. He executed several large decorative paintings for the Berlin National Gallery and Opera-house, and for other public buildings in different parts of Germany. From 1882 to 1893 he was the professor of "Kostümkunde" at the Berlin Academy of Arts.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

ROYAL OPERA, COVENT GARDEN.—'Die Walküre'; 'Tristan und Isolde.'
CRYSTAL PALACE.—The Handel Festival.

BY common consent the performance of Wagner's 'Die Walküre' last Saturday was declared to be one of the finest ever given in London, thanks in great measure to Mr. Anton Seidl, who showed not only that he had mastered every detail of the score, but that he had the faculty—supreme in a conductor—of impressing the vocal and instrumental force under his control with his personal ideas as to the method in which the music should be rendered. So the Bayreuth master's orchestration was played in a way that he would have desired, for detail was brought out with all possible eloquence, and the glowing strains in the first and third acts have never been interpreted to more advantage, at any rate in London. As Siegmund M. Van Dyck was not altogether satisfactory. He looked the part well, and acted with all requisite fervour; but his vocalization left much to desire, for he declaimed rather than sang the tenderest lyrical passages in the score. Quite the reverse was Miss Susan Strong as Sieglinde, a part that demands in equal measure girlish grace and womanly fervour. Both were forthcoming, and therefore the impersonation gave almost complete satisfaction. Mr. David Bispham was again unexceptionable as Wotan, and so was Madame Schumann-Heink as Fricka. The ungrateful part of Hunding was rendered in the most conscientious manner by Mr. Lempriere Pringle, and in all minor matters there was little cause for complaint.

On Monday M. Jean de Reszké made his reappearance in 'Tristan und Isolde,' and seemed all the better for his enforced rest, for he was in magnificent voice, and his impersonation was, if possible, finer than last year. There was a new Isolde in the person of Mlle. Sedlmair, who created an extremely favourable impression. Her voice is not so much remarkable for power as for sweetness in quality, and her method is above reproach. Moreover, nature has endowed her with personal attractions above the average. M. Édouard de Reszké's King Mark and Mr. David Bispham's Kurwenal are well-known and highly esteemed embodiments, and Miss Marie Brema as Brangäne was earnest, as she always is. The smaller parts were in good hands. The orchestra under Mr. Anton Seidl was again faultless, and, speaking generally, we doubt if Wagner's impassioned music could be more finely interpreted. We are not surprised that the management at once decided to repeat 'Tristan und Isolde' on Friday.

It was quickly discerned on the rehearsal day of the Handel Festival on Friday last week that the choir this year was of exceptionally fine quality. Mr. Manns had taken as much pains as he could with it, for there were more London rehearsals than in former years, and he had visited the principal country centres from which contingents were drawn. The sopranos did not sound quite so powerful as the other sections, which soon proved themselves splendid in vigour and quality of tone. Mr. Manns very properly made the day's proceedings a genuine rehearsal, and not a performance, not hesitating to stop his forces when he thought it expedient. Of course, criticism of this day's work is out of the question, and we pass to Monday's performance of 'The Messiah.' In Mr. Prout's interesting letter that appeared in the Athenæum of March 31st, 1894, is related how he and Dr. A. H. Mann examined a set of parts of the oratorio found in a cupboard at the back of the organ loft at the Foundling Hospital. These include parts for oboes and bassoons not in the original scores, and as there is no question of their authenticity, Prof. Prout rightly says that conclusive proof is thereby afforded that the addition of wind instruments to Handel's scores is not only no outrage, but is distinctly carrying out the intentions of the composer. There is sound sense in these words, for to insist that the works of the old masters should be performed exactly as they wrote them is mere puerile pedantry. If that were so, they might as well be placed on the shelf at once, for no one would listen to a Handel Festival at the Crystal Palace with sixty executants. It is a remarkable feature in the Anglo-Saxon composer's music that more power piled upon his scores means a greater effect, and almost overpowering were the impressions produced on Monday by "For unto us," "All we like sheep," the "Hallelujah," and "Worthy is the Lamb." The solos were perfectly safe in the hands of such artists as Madame Albani, Miss Marian McKenzie, Mr. Edward Lloyd, and Mr. Santley, and though objection might be taken to certain points, the principal quartet on the whole did very well indeed.

The Selection Day is becoming rather a stereotyped affair, for there were no novelties, or rather revivals, of any importance on Wednesday. A comparatively slight amount of work was accorded to the choir, their principal efforts being the Coronation Anthem 'Zadok the Priest,' the superb "Immortal Lord" from 'Deborah,' "Your harps and cymbals sound" from 'Solomon,' "Wretched lovers" from 'Acis and Galatea,' and the very grand peroration to the 'Ode on St. Cecilia's Day,' for soprano solo and chorus, "As from the power of sacred lays." There was an occasional unsteadiness, but these magnificent choruses were on the whole very worthily rendered. With respect to the solos, which perhaps occupied too much space in the scheme, all that need be said is that the various items, more or less familiar, were earnestly, if not in every instance successfully interpreted by Madame Albani, Madame Nordica, Miss Ella Russell, Miss Clara Butt, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Barton McGuckin, Mr. Andrew Black, and Mr. Santley. Of the conclusion of the festival we must speak next week, when we propose to add notes by way of summing-up.

JUBILEE MUSIC.

THE great national celebration this year has naturally led to the issue of many compositions more or less in keeping with the event, most of them of a religious or semi-religious character. We have received Victoria; or, the Bard's Prophecy, words by the Rev. Charles Kent, music by Dr. G. F. Huntley (Novello, Ewer & Co.). This is a so-called dramatic cantata, beginning with the last stand of the British under Boadicea against the Romans, and ending with various suggestions concerning the coming commemoration, in which the spirits of the Druids rise and take part. The music is not only scholarly but full of brightness and spirit, ending, as a matter of course, with a version of the National Anthem.—In The Banner of St. George, a Ballad for Chorus and Orchestra, words by Shapcott Wensley, music by Edward Elgar, Op. 33 (same publishers), the words deal with ancient legend in a very free manner, and end with an epilogue rather hymnlike as to its versification. As to the music, remarks similar to those made above will apply. Mr. Elgar writes like a thorough musician, and his ballad is worth taking up by choral societies. In the finale there is a clever suggestion of 'Rule Britannia,' but the tune is not given in its entirety.—Messrs. Novello, Ewer & Co. also send The Order for Morning and Evening Prayer, as revised for use on the 20th inst., edited by the Rev. Frederick A. J. Hervey, with appropriate chants by eminent composers; Twelve Hymns with Tunes, suitable for use at commemoration services, written and composed by various well-known clergymen and musicians; The Proper Psalms, cathedral psalter pointing, with chants, and the versicles as appointed for the day of the Queen's accession; and a special number of Novello's School Songs, consisting of patriotic ditties printed in the staff and tonic sol-fa notations.

Musical Gossip.

WHAT may be termed a quiet programme was offered by Señor Sarasate at his first concert this season at St. James's Hall on Saturday afternoon last week. In a Duet Sonata by Bach and a Suite by Émile Bernard, the Spanish violinist was associated with Dr. Otto Neitzel at the pianoforte. The ensemble was not altogether satisfactory, for the pianoforte sometimes overpowered the violin, and there were audible remonstrances from the gallery.

THE only pianoforte recital that M. Paderewski finds it in his power to give in London this season took place at the Queen's Hall on Tuesday afternoon, and the brilliant Polish executant was at his best in touch, feeling, and every other qualification which distinguishes a true artist from a performer who has merely a mechanical mastery of the key-board. In Brahms's Variations on a Theme by Handel; Beethoven's Sonata in D minor, Op. 31, No. 2; Schumann's 'Carnaval,' Op. 9; and smaller pieces of great difficulty by Chopin and other composers M. Paderewski displayed his pre-eminence among pianists of the present day.

MADAME EMMA EAMES has decided that after the present season, in addition to Elsa in 'Lohengrin,' she will sing her Wagnerian répertoire, consisting of Eva, Elizabeth, and Sieglinde, in the German language. The prima donna and her associates the brothers De Reszké have been desirous for some time of singing 'Die Meistersinger' with its original words, and to that end she is now studying Eva, and as she has already acquired Sieglinde in the vernacular, there remains but Elizabeth for her to learn in German.

MADAME BLANCHE MARCHESI has been engaged for the London Philharmonic Concert on November 4th, and Herr David Popper and Mr. Frederic Lamond for December 2nd.

THE death is announced of Dr. Spark, who for many years officiated at the organ in the Town Hall at Leeds. If not a particularly good musician, he was an able executant and an amiable man. Dr. Spark was the editor of the Organist's Quarterly Journal since its first appearance in 1869.

A VERY large number of concerts must again pass without notice; but with this week the feverish activity in musical circles will sensibly decline.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Thanksgiving Day Concert, 3 30, Queen's Hall.
—	Thanksgiving Day Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
MON.	Mr. Carl Armbruster's Lecture Recital on 'The Nibelung's Ring,' 3, King's College.
—	Mr. K. Little's Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Mr. Edgar Haddock's Historical Recital, 3, Salle Erard.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 7.45, 'Siegfried.'
WED.	Royal College of Music Orchestral Concert, 7 45.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, State Performance.
THURS.	Royal Academy of Music Concert, 3, St. James's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
FRI.	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
SAT.	Miss Annie Burghes's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Salle Erard.
—	Nonconformist Choir Union Commemorative Concert, Crystal Palace.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

COURT.—Revival of Robertson's 'Caste.'

GLOBE.—'An Irish Gentleman,' a Play in Three Acts. By David Christie Murray and J. L. Shine.

HER MAJESTY'S.—Revival of 'The Red Lamp' and 'The Ballad-Monger.'

A TENDENCY unduly to depreciate the work of the generation immediately preceding our own seems to prevail in the case of the drama. Victor Hugo, the appearance of whose plays promised to enlarge the horizon of dramatic effort, has fallen upon evil days; Scribe, one of the most ingenious as well as the most fecund of dramatists, is a byword; and Ponsard is simply forgotten. In this country meanwhile, with the latest school of criticism at least, Robertson is held up as an instance of all that is to be avoided. A performance of 'Caste' such as is being given at the Court disposes one to question the justice of this verdict. Something there is in 'Caste' that is artificial and trivial; common sense is sacrificed at times to theatrical effect, and there are situations which in real life could never have occurred. Yet the play, with all its faults, appeals with irresistible effect to the feelings, and he is little to be envied whom the diatribes of Eccles over the cot of the sleeping infant will not rouse to mirth or the return of the soldier husband will not convulse with tears. During the thirty years that have elapsed since the production of 'Caste' many schools of drama have been inchoated, though none has been definitely established. At the present moment even the problem play is almost a thing of the past, and our best dramatists are with some discouragement seeking a line that will satisfy at once themselves, their critics, the actor manager, and the public. That desideratum Robertson found. 'Caste' won immediate and ungrudging acceptance, and the man, be he who he may, Grundy, Jones, or Pinero, who will give us now a second 'Caste' as good and no better will not have long to wait for recognition or profit. During its stay in America Mr. Hare's company has greatly improved. Mr. Hare's Eccles now commands hearty admiration; the Hawtree of Mr. Kerr and the Sam Gerridge of Mr. Gilbert Hare are as good as they can be, and the general cast is all that can be desired. Before our readers accept finally the new cult or close resolutely their hearts against the old we counsel them to make, if only pour prendre congé, one visit to the Court Theatre.

What ailed Mr. Christie Murray, whom we must suppose responsible for 'An Irish Gentleman,' to trick it forth with songs, it is hard to conjecture. In so doing he sealed its fate. Not that there is much of a story to ruin. The materials with which Mr. Murray has dealt are the most familiar conceivable. His handling is, however, spirited; much of his dialogue is vigorous and terse, and local colour is freely and cleverly used. All might have been well, accordingly, if his hero had not turned the whole into ridicule by song. One refuses the slightest modicum of faith to the notion that an Irish squire, however bibulous, who is not a candidate for a lunatic asylum, will, on the return of a hunting party splashed with mud and craving for food, keep them all standing while he warbles a song. Surely a comic dance is bound to follow. One cannot conceive the self-belief of an actor, the most extraordinary product of egoism the world has yet contemplated, swallowing the idea that people would tolerate an absurdity such as this. Thus, though there is some good acting by Mr. Reeves Smith, Mr. Gordon, and Miss Eva Moore, the impression left behind is that we have been watching a burlesque.

'The Red Lamp' is a judicious revival. Mr. Tree is, perhaps, a little too fussy as Demetrius, and some of his tricks of attempted discovery are too patent. Still, it is one of his best characters, and is a fine piece of acting. Mrs. Tree is excellent as the Princess Claudia, and the general performance is greatly to be commended. Miss Gigia Filippi made a very pleasing "first appearance on any stage" in her sister's character of Félise. In 'The Ballad-Monger,' which has also been revived, Miss Dorothea Baird as Loyse strengthened the favourable impression she made as Trilby.

THE 'IPHIGENEIA AT AULIS.'

UNDER the direction of Prof. Ernest Gardner a successful performance of the 'Iphigeneia at Aulis' was given last week at University College. The choice of play was decidedly happy, for in spite of the corruptness of text, which has baffled and will continue to baffle the ingenuity of scholars, it may be doubted whether any Greek play which has come down to us is better calculated to enlist the sympathies of a modern audience than this story of the sacrifice of Iphigeneia. In it "Euripides the human" is seen at his best. Not only are the dramatic situations full of interest, but the leading characters are drawn with consummate skill.

For the performance at University College the play was judiciously cut down and divided into two acts. Of these the first was subdivided into four scenes: (1) the opening dialogue between Agamemnon and the old family servant; (2) the scene first between Menelaus and the servant, then between Menelaus and Agamemnon, followed by the arrival of the messenger announcing that of Clytemnestra with Iphigeneia; (3) the entry of the Chorus preceding that of the Queen and her daughter, and their first interview with the embarrassed father; (4) the entry of Achilles; the interview between him and Clytemnestra, in which the false pretence under which Iphigeneia has been brought to the camp first comes to light; and, finally, the discovery to them of the whole plot by the old servant. The second act—opening with the bridal song of the Chorus, and comprising Clytemnestra's reproach of her husband's duplicity and cruelty, with his daughter's pathetic appeal; the return of Achilles with the report of the hostile attitude of the Greek host and his own determination to stand, nevertheless, by the Queen and her daughter to the last; Iphigeneia's heroic resolve to submit herself after all to the sacrifice; the hymn to Artemis, and Iphigeneia's farewell to the light of day—was given in a single scene. The epilogue was of course omitted.

The setting of the play was attractive in its simplicity. The scene represented the entrance to the tent of Agamemnon, closed with a scarlet curtain, while the porch was supported by pillars of rough-hewn pine, and the body of the tent was covered with a rude lattice-work of the same material. The actual stage was narrow, and separated by two steps only from the orchestra in which the main action took place, the entry from the country and from the camp being made into the orchestra respectively on the left and on the right. This concession to Dr. Dörpfeld's well-known theory was amply justified by the results, and might well be followed in future representations of Greek plays at Cambridge and elsewhere. The orchestra was bordered with plain canvas stretched over pinewood supports.

Passing now to the details of the performance, we have no hesitation in giving the palm among the actors to Miss Ogilvy's Iphigeneia. The character is one of the most charming in dramatic literature, and Miss Ogilvy did justice to it. Her girlish playfulness and affection in the first interview with her father, the touching pathos of her plea for life when she first learns that father's intent, her gratitude for the chivalry of Achilles, her gradual realization of the sacrifice demanded of her by her country's honour, and her determination to go through the ordeal without flinching—all these varying moods were given with a naturalness which was nothing short of convincing. One seemed to see the transition from innocent childhood to the full dignity of noble and unselfish womanhood passing before one's eyes, under the stress of compelling fate. The Clytemnestra of Mrs. Ernest Gardner was also creditable. She looked the part admirably, and if in her first interview with Agamemnon she seemed hardly to rise to her queenly position, her grasp of the character gained noticeably as the play went on, and in the last act her bearing alike to Achilles, to her husband, and to her beloved daughter, was wanting neither in dignity nor pathos. Prof. Gardner's Agamemnon was satisfactory on the whole, and allowance must be made for an actor who has to play so mean a part as is assigned to the "king of men" in this particular play. He could not in any case carry with him the sympathies of the audience, and it would require quite exceptional dramatic ability even to command their respect. Mr. Mayor's Achilles was manly, though at times a little wanting in refinement. Mr. Milne played the part of the old servant with intelligence and effect. Mr. Fletcher made as much as could be expected of the not very attractive personality of Menelaus. The ladies of the chorus sang and danced very acceptably. The music by Miss Aldis was very appropriate, and M. Louis Nicole may be congratulated upon his success in adapting for the final hymn to Artemis the hymn to Apollo which was recently found at Delphi. The dresses alike in form and colour left nothing to be desired.

A word must be said of the pronunciation, which was a compromise between that usual in English schools and (to a limited extent) the practice of modern Greece. The broadening of the vowel sounds was a distinct improvement, and generally the effect was more melodious than with the ordinary English pronunciation. But the representation of the η by the sound of a as in name was very puzzling and of questionable authority. It is probable that with longer practice the effect of the pronunciation as a whole would have been more natural. As it was there was a sense of conscious effort in the pronunciation which somewhat marred the illusion requisite to perfect enjoyment of a play. Nevertheless, the experiment was well worth trying, and one would like to have it repeated.

Taking the performance as a whole, Prof. Gardner deserves both our thanks and our congratulations for his presentation of a drama of singular beauty and interest. Γ.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE season of Madame Bernhardt began at the Adelphi on Thursday with the production, for the first time in England, of 'Lorenzaccio,' in which, as the juvenile hero, the actress obtains one of her most conspicuous triumphs.

ON Wednesday evening 'David Garrick' was revived at the Criterion, with Mr. Wyndham and Miss Mary Moore in their familiar characters.

COLLAPSE in the case of modern theatrical productions is indeed rapid. 'An Irish Gentleman' was withdrawn from the Globe after four representations.

THE season of Madame Réjane will begin at the Lyric on the 28th inst. with 'La Doulou-reuse.' Madame Réjane will be supported by the Vaudeville company.

ANYTHING rather than a good piece is the 'Disparu' of MM. Alexandre Bisson and André Sylvane, which by some strange caprice of destiny found its way on March 19th, 1896, to the boards of the Gymnase-Dramatique. It is, however, a miracle of talent beside the version by Mr. Arthur Bourchier given on Wednesday, under the unhappy title of 'All Alive Oh!' at the Strand. Mr. Bourchier the adapter, Mr. Fred Thorne, Mr. Kinghorne, Miss May Palfrey, and Miss Phyllis Broughton did their best to commend it to the public, and it escaped condemnation. It is, however, naught.

MISS ADA REHAN begins on July 5th a "country tour," in course of which she will play in August at the Grand Theatre, Islington. 'As You Like It' will be given (in the open air if possible) on July 29th at Stratford, for the benefit of the Shakspeare Memorial Fund.

THE death is announced from Vienna of Charlotte Wolter, known also as the Countess O'Sullivan, an eminent tragédienne. Among the chief parts in her repertory were Lady Macbeth, Cleopatra, Mary Stuart, and Phædra.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—E. J. P.—received.

E. W.—Yours is a question an intelligent bookseller should be able to answer.

E. N.—We cannot undertake to answer such questions.

W. P.—The book is not for sale.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL LIBRARIES.

CAMERA LUCIDA; Or, Strange Passages in Common Life.

By Miss BERTHA THOMAS, Author of 'Proud Maisie' and 'The Violin-Player.'

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

In this series of stories, chiefly of English society, the author presents various pictures of modern life, studied from somewhat novel points of view.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

POPULAR ROYALTY.

By ARTHUR H. BEAVAN, Author of 'Marlborough House and its Occupants.'

Royal 8vo. beautifully illustrated, cloth, 10s. 6d.

This book contains Life-Sketches of Her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Family, besides Four Chapters reviewing the national advance and changes during the last seventy or eighty years. A special feature of the book is the numerous Full-Page Illustrations, which appear by the special permission of Her Majesty the Queen, Her Imperial Majesty the Empress Frederick, and the Members of the Royal Family, some of whom have contributed the Photographs themselves. The Frontispiece consists of a Photogravure Reproduction of the original jewelled Miniature of the Queen, by Mrs. Corbould-Ellis, presented to the Emperor of China by Her Majesty.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATIONS, 1827-1892. The Experiences of Sixty-five Years from the Accession of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence as Lord High Admiral to the End of the Naval Administration of Lord George Hamilton. By the late Sir JOHN HENRY BRIGGS, Reader to the Lords and Chief Clerk to the Admiralty. Edited by Lady BRIGGS. Illustrated with 10 Photogravure Portraits. Demy 8vo. cloth, ONE GUINEA.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

The LIFE of NELSON: the Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain. By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c. 2 vols demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics.....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

IN DARKEST AFRICA; or, the Quest, Rescue, and Retreat of Emin, Governor of Equatoria. By HENRY M. STANLEY, M.P. D.C.L. LL.D., &c., Author of 'How I Found Livingstone,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition, Revised and Corrected throughout, with New Preface, a Map, and 150 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

JOURNEYS AMONG the GENTLE JAPS in the SUMMER of 1895. By the Rev. J. LL. THOMAS, M.A. F.R.G.S. With a Special Chapter on the Religions of Japan, a Map, and Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

PEN and PENCIL in PARLIA- MENT. By HARRY FURNISS. Profusely illustrated by the Author. Crown 4to. cloth, 5s.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

"Strikingly original and ingenious, animating, interesting, and puzzling.....Deserves grateful recognition by lovers of tales well told."—World.

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED. T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain.'

"The development of events is extremely interesting: it is invested at various stages with fine touches of tenderness, and the racy dialogue is a constant source of enjoyment."—Scotsman.

FIRST ISSUE AT 2s. 6d.

The MAGIC INK. By William BLACK. Forming the New Volume in the New Uniform and Complete Edition of Mr. Black's Novels.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

THIRD AND CHEAPER EDITION.

ANNALS of CRICKET. A Record of the Game, Compiled from Authentic Sources and my own Experiences during the last Twenty-three Years. By W. W. READ, of the Surrey County Team. With an Introduction by J. Shuter. With Illustrations and Portrait of the Author. Post 8vo. picture boards, 1s. Also limited Édition de Luxe, demy 8vo. 10s. 6d. net.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, LTD., St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

MR. MURRAY'S LIST.

MURRAY'S EUROPEAN HANDBOOKS.

MR. MURRAY begs to call attention to the INDEX and DIRECTORY with which his newer Handbooks are supplied. These contain all information as to Hotels, Conveyances, &c., and are constantly kept up to date, so that the purchasers of his Guide-Books are always supplied with the very latest information.

NORTHERN EUROPE.

HOLLAND and BELGIUM. 18 Maps and Plans. 6*s.*

The RHINE and NORTH GERMANY: The Black Forest, The Hartz, Thuringerwald, Saxon Switzerland, Rugen, The Giant Mountains, Taunus, Odenwald, Elsass, and Lothringen. 82 Maps and Plans. 10*s.*

DENMARK and ICELAND: Schleswig, Holstein, Copenhagen, Jutland, and Iceland. Maps and Plans. 7*s.* 6*d.*

SWEDEN: Stockholm, Upsala, Gothenburg, The Shores of the Baltic, &c. Maps and Plans. 6*s.*

NORWAY: Christiania, Bergen, Trondhjem, The Fjelds and Fjords. With special Information for Fishermen and Cyclists. By T. MITCHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 7*s.* 6*d.*

RUSSIA: St. Petersburg, Moscow, Finland, Crimea, Caucasus, &c. Edited by T. MITCHELL, C.B., H.B.M. Consul-General for Norway. Maps and Plans. 18*s.*

FRANCE, Part I.: Normandy, Brittany, The Seine and the Loire, Touraine, Bordeaux, The Garonne, Limousin, The Pyrénees, &c. 36 Maps and Plans. 7*s.* 6*d.*

FRANCE, Part II.: Central France, Auvergne, The Cévennes, Burgundy, The Rhone and Saône, Provence, Nimes, Arles, Marseilles, The French Alps, Alsace-Lorraine, Champagne, &c. 23 Maps and Plans. 7*s.* 6*d.*

CENTRAL EUROPE.

SOUTH GERMANY—AUSTRIA: Tyrol, Würtemberg, Bavaria, Salsburg, Styria, Hungary, and The Danube, from Ulm to the Black Sea. Two Parts. 34 Maps and Plans. Part I. 7*s.* 6*d.*; Part II. 6*s.*

SWITZERLAND: Alps of Savoy and Piedmont, Italian Lakes, and Part of Dauphiné. Maps. Two Parts.

Part I. The Bernese Oberland, Geneva, Lucerne, Engadine, &c. 6*s.*

Part II. The Alps of Savoy and Piedmont, Italian Lakes, and Part of Dauphiné. 6*s.*

SOUTHERN EUROPE.

SPAIN: Madrid, The Castiles, The Basque Provinces, Léon, The Asturias, Galicia, Estremadura, Andalusia, Ronda, Granada, Murcia, Valencia, Catalonia, Aragon, Navarre, The Balearic Islands, &c. In Two Parts. 20*s.*

PORTUGAL: Lisbon, Oporto, Cintra, Mafra, with an Account of Madeira, The Azores, and Canary Islands. Map and Plans. 12*s.*

The RIVIERA, &c.: From Marseilles to Pisa. With Outlines of the Routes thither, and some Introductory Information on the Climate and the Choice of Winter Stations for Invalids. With 16 Maps and Plans of Towns. 6*s.*

NORTH ITALY and VENICE: Turin, Milan, the Italian Lakes, Verona, Padua, Venice, Bologna, Ravenna, Parma, Modena, Genoa, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A., Author of 'Dame Europa's School.' With 34 Maps and Plans. 10*s.*

CENTRAL ITALY and FLORENCE: Tuscany, Umbria, the Marches, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 24 Maps and Plans. 6*s.*

ROME and its ENVIRONS. Rearranged under the Editorship of H. W. PULLEN, M.A. CLASSICAL ARCHÆOLOGY, by Prof. RODOLFO LANCIANI. SCULPTURE GALLERIES, by A. S. MURRAY, LL.D. PICTURE GALLERIES, by the Right Hon. Sir A. HENRY LAYARD, G.C.B. D.C.L. With numerous Maps and Plans. Post 8vo. 10*s.*

SOUTH ITALY: Naples, Pompeii; Sorrento, &c.; Capri, &c.; Amalfi, Pæstum, Taranto, Bari. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With 20 Maps and Plans. 6*s.*

SICILY: Palermo, Syracuse, &c. Edited by H. W. PULLEN, M.A. With Maps. 6*s.*

GREECE: The Ionian Isles, the Islands of the Ægean Sea, Albania, Thessaly, and Macedonia. New and Revised Edition. Maps and Plans. 20*s.*

NEW WORKS.

JUST OUT, crown 8vo. 7*s.* 6*d.*

WASTE and REPAIR in MODERN LIFE. A Series of Essays on the Maintenance of Health under Conditions which prevail at the Present Time. By ROBSON ROOSE, M.D.

Contents:—Wear and Tear of Modern Life—Rest and Repair in London Life—The Art of Prolonging Life—Health Resorts and their Uses—Infection and Disinfection—Clothing as a Preventive against Cold—A Contribution to the Alcohol Question—The Physiology of Fasting—The Spread of Diphtheria—The Metropolitan Water Supply—The Propagation and Prevention of Cholera.

SECOND EDITION, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

The STORY of a GREAT AGRICULTURAL ESTATE. An Account of the Origin and Administration of the "Beds and Bucks" and "Thorney" Estates. By the DUKE of BEDFORD.

A NEW WORK BY MR. GLADSTONE.

Crown 8vo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

LATER GLEANINGS: Theological and Ecclesiastical. A New Series of Gleanings of Past Years. By the Right Hon. W. E. GLADSTONE.

Contents:—The Dawn of Creation and Worship—Proem to Genesis—Robert Elsmere: the Battle of Belief—Ingersoll on Christianity—The Elizabethan Settlement—Queen Elizabeth and the Church of England—The Church under Henry—Professor Huxley and the Swine Miracle—The Place of Heresy and Schism—True and False Conceptions of the Atonement—The Lord's Day—General Introduction to Sheppard's Bible—Soliloquium and Postscript on the Pope and Anglican Orders.

With Portrait, crown 8vo. 5*s.*

ALICE, GRAND DUCHESS of HESSE, Princess of Great Britain. Letters to Her Majesty the Queen. With a Memoir by H.R.H. PRINCESS CHRISTIAN. A New and Cheaper Edition, Revised. Containing the Last Letter written by Princess Alice.

NOW READY, with Illustrations, crown 8vo. 6*s.*

HOW to LISTEN to MUSIC: Hints and Suggestions to Untaught Lovers of the Art. By HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL, Author of 'Studies in the Wagnerian Drama,' &c. With a Preface by Sir GEORGE GROVE.

JUST OUT, fcap. 8vo. 2*s.*

MURRAY'S CYCLIST'S ROAD-BOOK, from London through Chichester, Portsmouth, Southampton to the New Forest, and back by Romsey, Winchester, Dorking, Leatherhead, and Epsom. Illustrated by a Road Atlas at the end of the book.

With Maps and Illustrations, 8vo. 14*s.*

PHILIP and ALEXANDER of MACEDON. Two Essays in Biography. By DAVID G. HOGARTH, Fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford, Author of 'A Wandering Scholar,' &c.

"Written with spirit and in a fascinating manner; it will appeal alike to the student of history and the general reader.....Romance is outdone by the tale of the great Macedonians."—Pall Mall Gazette.

SECOND EDITION, 2 vols. 8vo. 32*s.*

The LIFE and LETTERS of BENJAMIN JOWETT, M.A., Master of Balliol College, Oxford. By EVELYN ABBOTT, M.A. LL.D., and the Rev. LEWIS CAMPBELL, M.A. LL.D. With Portraits and other Illustrations.

With Maps and Plans, 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12*s.*

HERODOTUS. The Text of Canon Rawlinson's Translation, with the Notes abridged for the Use of Students. By A. J. GRANT, M.A., of King's College; Professor of History, Yorkshire College; Author of 'Greece in the Age of Pericles.'

With Maps and Plans, crown 8vo. 9*s.*

EUROPE in the MIDDLE AGE. By Oliver J. THATCHER, Ph.D., and FERDINAND SCHWILL, Ph.D.

With Maps, 8vo. 18*s.*

The DAWN of MODERN GEOGRAPHY: a History of Travel and Geographical Science from the Conversion of the Roman Empire to 900 A.D. With an Account of the Achievements and Writings of the Early Christian, Arab, and Chinese Students and Explorers. By C. RAYMOND BEAZLEY, Fellow of Merton College, Oxford.

"A FASCINATING PAGE OF LITERARY HISTORY."—Illustrated London News.

In 2 vols. crown 8vo. with 2 Portraits, 24*s.*

JOHN FRANCIS AND THE 'ATHENÆUM.'

A LITERARY CHRONICLE OF HALF A CENTURY.

By JOHN C. FRANCIS.

"We have put before us a valuable collection of materials for the future history of the Victorian era of English literature."—Standard.

"No other fifty years of English literature contain so much to interest an English reader."—Freeman.

"A mine of information on subjects connected with literature for the last fifty years."—Echo.

"Rich in literary and social interest, and afford a comprehensive survey of the intellectual progress of the nation."—Leeds Mercury.

"This literary chronicle of half a century must at once, or in course of a short time, take a place as a permanent work of reference."
Publishers' Circular.

"The entire work affords a comprehensive view of the intellectual life of the period it covers, which will be found extremely helpful by students of English literature."—Christian World.

"A worthy monument of the development of literature during the last fifty years.....The volumes contain not a little specially interesting to Scotsmen."—Scotsman.

"The thought of compiling these volumes was a happy one, and it has been ably carried out by Mr. John C. Francis, the son of the veteran publisher."
Literary World.

"The volumes abound with curious and interesting statements, and in bringing before the public the most notable features of a distinguished journal from its infancy almost to the present hour, Mr. Francis deserves the thanks of all readers interested in literature."—Spectator.

"It was a happy thought in this age of jubilees to associate with a literary chronicle of the last fifty years a biographical sketch of the life of John Francis.....As we glance through the contents there is scarcely a page which does not induce us to stop and read about the men and events that are summoned again before us."—Western Daily Mercury.

"The book is, in fact, as it is described, a literary chronicle of the period with which it deals, and a chronicle put together with as much skill as taste and discrimination. The information given about notable people of the past is always interesting and often piquant, while it rarely fails to throw some new light on the individuality of the person to whom it refers."—Liverpool Daily Post.

"It is in characters so sterling and admirable as this that the real strength of a nation lies.....The public will find in the book reading which, if light and easy, is also full of interest and suggestion..... We suspect that writers for the daily and weekly papers will find out that it is convenient to keep these volumes of handy size, and each having its own index, extending the one to 20 the other to 30 pages, at their elbow for reference."
Liverpool Mercury.

"No memoir of Mr. Francis would be complete without a corresponding history of the journal with which his name will for ever be identified.....The extraordinary variety of subjects and persons referred to, embracing as they do every event in literature, and referring to every person of distinction in science or letters, is a record of such magnitude that we can only indicate its outlines. To the literary historian the volumes will be of incalculable service."
Bookseller.

"Our survey has been unavoidably confined almost exclusively to the first volume; indeed, anything like an adequate account of the book is impossible, for it may be described as a history in notes of the literature of the period with which it deals. We confess that we have been able to find very few pages altogether barren of interest, and by far the larger portion of the book will be found irresistibly attractive by all who care anything for the history of literature in our own time."
Manchester Examiner.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street, W.,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

(EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains:—

NOTES:—Lines by Mrs Norton, Dr Paris and Dr Penneck—Fall of Angels—D'Israeli—'Cocaine'—Font Stone, New South Wales Rifles—Amenities at Bath—Holy Thursday Folk-lore—Curious Confessional—"Honi soit qui mal y pense"—Hogg and Tannahill—"Bazzomy"—Slang—J. Withens—"Dolly."

QUERIES:—"Harvestry"—"Harveyized"—"Cappel-faced"—Col Galatin—The Three Lemons—Friends in Council—T. G. Belief—"Pyrography"—Jew's Harp—Earl of Beverley—Thoyts—Tom Dick and Harry"—Womersh—Silver Medal—Running Camp—Map—'Armorial Families'—Slavonic Names—Dog-gates—'Nature'—'Bible of Nature'—Milking Syphon—Bishopric of Ossory—Cheney Gate—Induction at Dorking—Tuscany—Peninsular Medal.

REPLIES:—"Eye-rhymes"—39th Foot—Ship Constitution—Walpole and his Editors—Unicorn—Thimble—St. Patrick's Purgatory—Rev. A. Symmer—Yiddish—Carrick—Names of Drugs—"Abraham's Bosom"—Hotham—"Conservative"—Holmby House—Good Friday Custom—'Dublin Gazette'—"Fullams"—'Il Penseroso'—'A tinker's curse'—Etonians—Yeomen of the Guard—Order of the Bath—Public-houses—"Halifax Shilling"—Wilkes—Evelyn—Cornish Superstition—Dr Beaumont—Caen Wood—Science in the Choir—The Derby—Old School at Parson's Green—Funeral Customs.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Roberts's 'Memoirs of Christie's'—White's 'Wordsworth and Coleridge MSS.'—Yarker's 'Comte de Gabalis'—'Folk-lore,' March.

Notices to Correspondents.

LAST WEEK'S NUMBER (June 12) contains:—

NOTES:—'Anglorum Feriæ'—Casanoviana—Books on Alchemy—Pre-Victorian M.P.s—'Origin of the Moss Rose'—"Callow"—Ghost-Name—Royal Processions—"Non sibi, sed toti"—Praying for the Crops—Error concerning Maize—'Puss in Boots'—"Apparata."

QUERIES:—"Dick's Hatband"—H. J. H. Martin—R. Colegate—"Lady in the Lobster"—Van Cortlandt—Captive from Wreck—Crosby Family—Pawne—Pronunciation of Evelyn—Heraldic—"To put in one's motto"—Holy Week Ceremonial—Anglo-Saxon Brooch—Dr. Sacheverell—Portreeve—Ogier—Italian Sonnet—Payne—Authors Wanted.

REPLIES:—Palfrey Money—Hole House—Stepney Church—Lord Byron's Remains—Hanwell Church—Value of Money—National Anthem—Archbishop Rotherham—Psalm Tune—Sneezing—Cambridgeshire—Holly Meadows—Grammarsow—Dolor—Dog Row—Military Banners—'History of Pickwick'—Monmouth Rebellion—"Consensus facit matrimonium"—"Rarely"—Best Ghost Story—'The A B C'—Coat of Arms—"Harry-carry"—Beds in the Hall—"Three acres and a cow"—Josiah Nisbet—Carnation—"Bob," an Insect—"Skates"; "Scratches"—Reversing Postage-Stamps—"Returns"—J. G. Whittier—Peter of Colechurch—Nonconformist Ministers—Miss Fairbrother—Rule the Roost—Chinese Folk-lore—Henri Waddington—Red, White, Blue—Countess Bruce—Pope's Villa—Authors Wanted.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Baring-Gould's 'English Minstrelsie,' Vol. VII.—Reviews and Magazines.

Notices to Correspondents.

Price 4*d.* each; by post, 4½*d.* each.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s.* 6*d.* English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
SOLD ONLY BY THE PUBLISHER.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

SPORT in NORWAY
A BOOK of PRIORY OBSERVANCES in the THIRTEENTH CENTURY
SWIFT'S PROSE WORKS
PATER'S REPRINTED ESSAYS
MR. THOMPSON'S NEW POEMS
A NEW THEORY of HEBREW ACCENTS and VOWEL-SIGNS
NEW NOVELS: Dear Faustina, A Rose of Yesterday, The Last Entry, A Fountain Sealed, The Gift of Life, Miss Tudor, A Spotless Reputation, Dans la Brume
TRAVELS in NORTH AMERICA.
BOOKS on FOLK-LORE
SCANDINAVIAN LITERATURE
BOOKS RELATING to INDIA
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS
LITERARY EXPENSES in ST MARGARET'S, WESTMINSTER: A NEW ARABIC DICTIONARY; JUNIUS'S EDITION of CHAUCER

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Geographical Publications; The Royal Observatory, Greenwich; Anthropological Notes; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—Venetian Missals; The Royal Academy; Minor Exhibitions; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM for June 5 contains Articles on

MR. McCARTHY'S HISTORY of our own TIMES from 1880
TWO LATIN CLASSICS in ENGLISH VERSE.
A FRENCH WRITER on JOAN of ARC.
HISTORY of MORAY and NAIRN.
NEW NOVELS—Mrs Crichton's Creditor, Old Corcoran's Money, Only a Flirt, Ripple and Flood, Blight, The Lady Grange, A Princess of Islam, Pilgrims of the Night; The Winds of March; A Full Confession; Le Double Joug.
The LITERATURE of IRISH SPORT.
RECENT VERSE
ECONOMIC LITERATURE.
STORIES of ADVENTURE.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
LORD LYTTON'S 'HAROLD'; An ALLEGED ERROR of VENERABLE BEDE'S, GIBBON'S LIBRARY; DEFOE the REBEL, The DATE of MINUCIUS FELIX.

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Dr James Croll; Annuals; Zoological Literature, A Singing Crocodile; Societies, Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—Venus and Apollo; English and Welsh Cathedrals, The Royal Academy, M. Français; Ancient Alexandria, The Pender Sale; Gossip.
MUSIC—Karl von Dittersdorf; The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Elizabethan Drama; Library Table; Gossip.

THE ATHENÆUM, EVERY SATURDAY,
PRICE THREEPENCE, OF
JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

SEELEY & CO.'S BOOKS.

SOCIAL TRANSFORMATIONS of the VICTORIAN AGE. By T. H. S. ESCOTT, Author of 'England: its People, Polity, and Pursuits.' Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.*

"Distinctly successful."—Times.

"The best survey of the social changes in the Victorian Age that has yet been published."—Morning Post.

"Full of sustained interest and genuine value, and is the best account of the many changes these eventful years have seen."—Daily Chronicle.

"One of the most worthy of the literary memorials that the present year has called forth."—Westminster Gazette.

TWO SIX-SHILLING BOOKS BY C. J. CORNISH.

LIFE at the ZOO. With Illustrations by Gambier Bolton. 6s.

"Without a single dull page."—World.

ANIMALS at WORK and PLAY: their Emotions and Activities. With Illustrations. 6*s.*

"A charming bit of leisure reading."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"It would be difficult to find a more fascinating book."—Daily News.

WORKS BY W. H. HADOW.

"His Brahms is from beginning to end most valuable and interesting. He passes the Masters' main works in rapid review, and of each and all he has something to say which it is desirable to remember."—Guardian.

STUDIES in MODERN MUSIC. Second Series. Frederick CHOPIN, ANTON DVORAK, JOHANNES BRAHMS. With 4 Portraits on Copper. Second Edition. Cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

"Each of these memoirs may be justly signalized as a literary gem of exceptional lustre and value."—Daily Telegraph.

STUDIES in MODERN MUSIC. Hector Berlioz, Robert SCHUMANN, RICHARD WAGNER. With 5 Portraits. Third Edition. 7*s.* 6*d.*

"He writes with striking thought, fulness and breadth of view; so that his essays may be read with much interest."
Athenæum.

London: SEELEY & CO., LIMITED, 38, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury.

DIGBY, LONG & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NEW NOVEL BY G. BERESFORD FITZGERALD.

A FLEETING SHOW. By the Author of 'An Odd Career,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"Good character sketching, shrewd criticism of life, and a thoroughly healthy tone."—Scotsman.

"Full of the clever writing of a man who knows character and the world."—Aberdeen Press.

NEW NOVEL BY HATTIL FOLL.

MAJOR CARLILE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"The story has the undeniable charm of freshness. Mr. Foll's style is both graceful and witty, and his characterization distinctly clever."
Glasgow Mail.

NEW NOVEL BY ROBEY F. ELDRIDGE.

The KESTYNS of CATHER CASTLE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Second Edition.

"Very beautiful and interesting. The Kestyns will doubtless find a large and appreciative audience."—Pall Mall Gazette.

NEW NOVEL BY JOHN BRIDGE.

DINNER for THIRTEEN. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"Smart writing and broad humour."
Court Circular.

"Briskly written and strong in characterization."
Liverpool Post.

NEW NOVEL BY CLEMENT A. MENDHAM.

A TROTH of TEARS. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. With a Frontispiece.

NEW NOVEL BY H. J. CHAYTOR.

The LIGHT of the EYE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

NEW DETECTIVE STORY BY J. H. SWINGLER.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The author has considerable literary ability, and knows how to write for the general reader."
Dundee Advertiser.

FLORENCE MARRYAT'S LATEST.

IN the NAME of LIBERTY. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Third Edition.

ALICE M. DIEHL'S LATEST.

A LAST THROW. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s. [Second Edition.

NEW BOOK OF TRAVEL.

GLIMPSES of LIFE in BERMUDA and the TROPICS. By MARGARET NEWTON. With 42 Illustrations by the Author. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"A book of more than ordinary note."—Globe.

NEW WORK ON ORNITHOLOGY.

The BIRDS of OUR COUNTRY. By H. E. STEWART, B.A. Illustrated throughout. Crown 8vo. pictorial cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d. Over 400 pages.

"It is very readable, and his book is to be depended on."—Illustrated London News.

"A delightful country companion. The illustrations are as good as the letterpress."—Bookman.

"Is a most useful and a remarkably cheap work."
Leeds Mercury.

AUTHORS may now send their MSS., suitable for Volume Publication, to DIGBY, LONG & CO., Publishers, 18, Bouverie-street, London, E.C.

ELLIOT STOCK'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 6s.

DIARY OF A TOUR THROUGH GREAT BRITAIN IN 1795.

By the Rev. WILLIAM MAC RITCHIE, Minister of the Parish of Clunie, Perthshire.

With an Introduction and Notes by DAVID MAC RITCHIE, Author of 'The Testimony of Tradition,' &c.

"Mr. David Mac Ritchie has done good service in giving to the world these simple notes of the journey from Edinboro' to London and back, on coach and horseback, by his great-uncle, the Rev. William Mac Ritchie, minister of the parish of Clunie, in Perthshire."—Sheffield Independent.

In large demy 8vo. appropriately bound in art linen boards, price 6s.

GEORGE MORLAND'S PICTURES. Their Present Possessors, with Details of the Collections, by RALPH RICHARDSON, F.R.S.E. F.S.A.Scot., Author of 'George Morland, Painter, 1763-1804.'

"All interested in the charming art of George Morland can now learn, by means of this publication, where the best examples of his art are to be found."—Glasgow Evening News.

In crown 8vo. tastefully printed, and bound in parchment, price 5s.

GLEANINGS from IBSEN (The Best and Choicest in Ibsen). Selected and Edited, by permission, by EMMIE AVERY KEDDELL and PERCY CROSS STANDING. With a Preface on Ibsenism.

"Its novelty ought to commend it to the general public. The compilers have also collaborated in a smart introduction, in which they refer to the beauty of Ibsen's poetical expression. This note of purely poetic quality is what they have been at pains to discover in compiling the Birthday Book."
Liverpool Daily Post.

In crown 8vo. cloth, illustrated, price 7s. 6d.

WREKIN SKETCHES. By EMMA BOORE.

"The chapters on Shrewsbury in the days of old, and the extracts from its record, are quaint foot-notes to history."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"Pleasant and instructive, dealing with a most picturesque part of Shropshire, rich in historical associations."
Leeds Mercury.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 5s.

TWENTY YEARS on the SASKATCHEWAN (N.-W. CANADA). By the Rev. WILLIAM NEWTON, Hon. Canon of Saskatchewan.

"Filled with useful facts, and bears evidence on almost every page of shrewd observation."—Speaker.

In crown 8vo. cloth, price 4s. 6d.

DIES DOMINICA. Being Hymns and Metrical Meditations for each Sunday in the Natural Year. By MARGARET EVANS and ISABEL SOUTHALL.

In crown 8vo. 1s.

VICTORIA, the GREAT and GOOD. An Essay on the Diamond Jubilee, June 22nd, 1897. By L. A. LAW.

NEW VOLUME OF VERSE.

In fcap. 8vo. cloth, 5s.

JENNIFRED, and other Verses. By SEPTIMUS G. GREEN.

"Pleasant and musical reading."—Scotsman.

"The title-poem is finely, even richly, coloured, and is suggestive of the romantic period in which its scenes are set. Mr. Green infuses considerable vigour into his lines."
Dundee Advertiser.

ELLIOT STOCK, 62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

Lawrence & Bullen's New Books.

The WHIRLPOOL: a Novel. By GEORGE GISSING. Crown 8vo. 6s. [New Edition.

"The character of Alma is one of those careful, accurate, and perfectly truthful studies which Mr. Gissing alone among English novelists can produce.....All who know Mr. Gissing's work will hasten to read 'The Whirlpool.' And there should be no lover of the art of fiction to whom his work is unknown."—Pall Mall Gazette.

MARGOT: a Novel of Student Life in Paris. By SIDNEY PICKERING. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"An exceptionally interesting and clever novel."—World.

"We have nothing but praise for this well-constructed and excellently written novel, the scene of which is mostly laid in Paris.....A very good plot, which, though full of incident and unexpected complications, never overtaxes our credulity, and is worked out in an admirable and perfectly natural way."—Pall Mall Gazette.

The SECRET ROSE. By W. B. Yeats. Illustrated by J. B. Yeats. With a cover designed by Althea Giles. Crown 8vo. 6s. net.

"A book that is full of beauties."—Saturday Review.

"Told by a poet of genius, and their very style enchants and enthrals you."—Truth.

"The author has a firm and delicate touch, a powerful imagination, and much humour."—Manchester Guardian.

The FLIGHT of the EAGLE. A Romantic History. By STANDISH O'GRADY. Crown 8vo. 6s.

"Mr. O'Grady has steeped his mind in the history of Elizabethan Ireland, and therefore all that he writes of it has value."—Athenæum.

"Mr. O'Grady, inspired by much knowledge of old Ireland and much enthusiasm for its chiefs, tells us a stirring tale."
Glasgow Herald.

MANY CARGOES. By W. W. JACOBS. Crown 8vo. 3s. 6d. [Fourth Edition.

"Their drollery is perfectly irresistible."—Punch.

DRY FLY FISHING.

The BOOK of the DRY FLY. By GEORGE A. B. DEWAR. With a Preface by the MARQUIS of GRANBY, and Plates (Plain and Hand-coloured) of Natural and Artificial Flies. Demy 8vo. 15s. net.

"An agreeable and even indispensable addition to the angler's library."—Times.

TO BE COMPLETED IN TWENTY MONTHLY PARTS. Price Two Shillings a Part

The ENCYCLOPÆDIA of SPORT. Edited by the EARL of SUFFOLK and BERKSHIRE, HEDLEY PEEK, and F. G. AFLALO. Imperial 8vo. Parts I., II., III., and IV. now ready. Part V. will be published on June 25.

LAWRENCE & BULLEN, LIMITED, 16, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

Just published, price 2s. 6d. post free,

GOUT and its CURE. By J. COMPTON BURNETT, M.D. "The author has had a wide experience in gout, and presents us with a very readable little book."—County Gentleman
London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN. Made in Three Sizes.
10s. 6d., 16s. 6d., and 25s. each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce.
We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

ALLEN'S SOLID LEATHER PORTMANTEAUS.
ALLEN'S VICTORIA DRESSING BAG.
ALLEN'S STRONG DRESS BASKETS.
ALLEN'S NEW CATALOGUE, post free.
West Strand, London. Discount 10 per cent.

EPPS'S COCOA.
THE MOST NUTRITIOUS.
EPPS'S COCOA.
GRATEFUL and COMFORTING.
EPPS'S COCOA.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children, and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

CHATTO & WINDUS'S NEW BOOKS.

FIFTH THOUSAND now ready, demy 8vo. cloth, 12s.

A HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES,
FROM 1880 TO THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

By JUSTIN McCARTHY, M.P.

"It deals with events in the author's old inimitable way. His hand has lost nothing of its cunning . . . The touch is still as light and as sure as ever . . . Nothing can surpass the ease of Mr. McCarthy's narrative style—his way of winding into his subject, and taking the reader with him in sustained interest to its close."—Daily News.

"Like the preceding volumes, the supreme value of the book lies in its readableness . . . Mr. McCarthy's pen has lost little, if anything, of its deftness and grace, as his spirit has lost nothing of its sweetness and geniality."—Scotsman.

"That he has produced a brilliant and interesting record none will deny."—Manchester Courier.

"The new volume has most of the merits which have made the preceding volumes a standard work. The interest never flags."—Westminster Gazette.

"We anticipate that this volume will be the book of the season . . . Everybody who begins to read it will wish to finish it."—Daily Chronicle.

"Mr. McCarthy is his own and only rival. Remembering the fascination of his earlier volumes, my Baroulte came to a study of this conclusion of the matter with some apprehension. He finds that the historian has kept his very best wine till the last . . . The volume is marked by those fine literary qualities, that rare power of condensation without loss of colour, that established the enduring fame of the earlier volumes. Some of the characterizations of public men are marvels of accuracy, models of style."—THE BARON DE B.-W. in Punch.

"This up-to-date appendix to a brilliant and deservedly popular work is wholly admirable, and lacks none of the high qualities which have been so deservedly applauded in the preceding volumes. The volume is worthy of its predecessors, and forms an invaluable contribution to later Victorian history."—World.

"The volume shows no mark whatever of the slightest failure of all the old charm and all the old strength. It is not surprising, under the circumstances, to hear that the public has extended to the new volume of the history the same enthusiastic welcome it gave to the old; and that already, within a few days of the issue of the first edition, a second has been demanded."—Evening Sun.

"The volume before us is in every respect a worthy sequel, both in matter and in manner, to its four companions. It has all the eloquence, all the clearness and precision, all the admirable impartiality, and all the vigour which have been so much admired in the earlier volumes of this comprehensive work."—Daily Mail.

"Mr. McCarthy's mode of treatment is, as before, graphic, picturesque, and singularly just.....An excellent piece of literary workmanship, and a most useful and interesting contribution to contemporary history."—Yorkshire Post.

2 vols. demy 8vo. cloth extra, 28s.

HISTORIC STUDIES IN VAUD, BERNE, AND SAVOY.

By General MEREDITH READ. With 31 Full-Page Illustrations.

"One is grateful for so vivid a peep into the past. It illuminates our knowledge of the lives of Gibbon and Rousseau and Voltaire. It is to be wished that all Americans who settle in Europe would turn their leisure to as good account as General Read."—Manchester Guardian.

"General Read has spared no pains or labour in the cataloguing, elucidating, and illustrating of his finds.....Three great literary names stand out from this record, and have fresh light thrown upon them from the dusty garrets of La Gotte—those, namely, of Rousseau, of Voltaire, and of Gibbon . . . Among its many illustrations are portraits, here first published, of Gibbon and others, and an admirable series of silhouettes of figures in Lausanne society by the hand of George Deyverdun."—Scotsman.

"It is a most learned, conscientious performance.....A large portion of the second volume is devoted to Voltaire and Rousseau, and Gibbon's residence, friendships, and correspondence at Lausanne."—Echo.

A FOUNTAIN SEALED. By Sir Walter Besant, Author of 'All Sorts and Conditions of Men.' With a Frontispiece by H. G. Burgess. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"It is one of the most delightful love stories which we have read this year. The grace of the minuet is in its stately and yet gay and easy style. Dainty and sweet in itself, the tale is also daintily and sweetly told.....It is altogether a beautiful story."—Daily Mail.

"The idyllic story is put into the mouth of the Quakeress who was almost a queen. It is told with all the wealth of picturesqueness and quaintness which Sir Walter Besant can infuse into a period of history he is fond of utilizing for his novels."—Scotsman.

"The tale is charmingly told, and no one has a happier way of making the past live again than Sir Walter Besant.....To come across his story of pretty Nancy is like opening some long-closed drawer which is yet fragrant with the fragrance of sweet lavender."—Daily Graphic.

NULMA: an Anglo-Australian Romance. By Mrs. Campbell Praed, Author of 'Mrs. Tregaskiss,' &c. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"We can recommend 'Nulma' as a thoroughly enjoyable story. Mrs. Praed, possibly as the result of her collaboration with Mr. Justin McCarthy, has learned to give a very pretty flavouring of actuality to her stories by introducing a semi-political background into her romance."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"'Nulma' is simply delightful .....Nulma, totally different from Mrs. Tregaskiss in character, circumstances, and destiny, is as living and as interesting as she.....The incidental people are admirable, and the book abounds in good things, most, too, when the girlish heroine is talking—surely a triumph for a novelist."—World.

"After all, the charm in her books is that they are bits of real life. You can always picture the characters, and they always behave like human beings—very charming human beings for the most part.....There is plenty of room for any number of pretty, wholesome, picturesque stories like 'Nulma.'"—Literary World.

"The book is artistic in treatment, and contains a subtle study of the feminine decadent temperament."—Daily News.

CARLTON PRIORS. By John Stafford, Author of 'Doris and I.' Crown 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 6s.

"Mr. Stafford has come on very much since his early effort 'Doris and I,' and 'Carlton Priors' should do much for his reputation."—Bookman.

"It contains a very pleasing and interesting story, and one that promises better things from the same pen."—Athenæum.

"The whole thing is distinctly pleasing in tone, and the author writes excellent English."—Black and White.

"The materials of the story are old and familiar, but they are woven with unusual taste and skill, and with a literary touch marked by great delicacy and refinement."—Scotsman.

HIS DEAD PAST. By C. J. Wills. Crown 8vo. cloth, 6s.

"A well-told story of English life with a spice of romance in it, and not a few fine touches.....Every character in the book is well drawn."—Scotsman.

WAR and a WHEEL: the Græco-Turkish War as seen from a Bicycle. By Wilfred Pollock. With a Map. Crown 8vo. 1s. [Immediately.

"GOD SAVE the QUEEN!" a Tale of '37. By Allen Upward, Author of 'The Prince of Balkistan,' &c. Crown 8vo. decorated cover, 1s.

OLD CORCORAN'S MONEY. By Richard Dowling. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"The mystery certainly keeps the reader on the qui vive until he has unravelled it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

RIE'S DIARY. By Anne Coates. Crown 8vo. silk cloth, gilt top, 3s. 6d.

"It is prettily and simply told, and there is genuine pathos in the closing scenes."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NINETEENTH-CENTURY MIRACLE. By "Z Z" (Louis Zangwill). Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"Mr. Zangwill interests, mystifies, perplexes, and finally startles the reader in his remarkable story."—Scotsman.

The LAST ENTRY. By W. Clark Russell. Crown 8vo. cloth, 3s. 6d.

"A rattling good salt-water yarn."—Daily Mail.

POPULAR EDITION OF MARK TWAIN'S WORKS.—Crown 8vo. blue cloth, 3s. 6d. each.

MARK TWAIN'S CHOICE WORKS. With Life, Portrait, and Illustrations.
MARK TWAIN'S LIBRARY of HUMOUR. With 197 Illustrations.
The INNOCENTS ABROAD. With 234 Illustrations.
ROUGHING IT, and The INNOCENTS at HOME. With 200 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER ABROAD. With 26 Illustrations.
The ADVENTURES of TOM SAWYER. With 111 Illustrations.
TOM SAWYER, DETECTIVE. With Photogravure Portrait.
A TRAMP ABROAD. With 314 Illustrations.
The PRINCE and the PAUPER. With 190 Illustrations.
The STOLEN WHITE ELEPHANT.
LIFE on the MISSISSIPPI. With 312 Illustrations.
The ADVENTURES of HUCKLEBERRY FINN. With 174 Illustrations. [July 15.
The GILDED AGE. With 212 Illustrations.
A YANKEE at the COURT of KING ARTHUR. With 220 Illustrations. [July 1.
The AMERICAN CLAIMANT. With 81 Illustrations.
The £1,000,000 BANK-NOTE.
PUDD'NHEAD WILSON. With Portrait and 6 Illustrations.

NEW TWO-SHILLING NOVELS.—Bound in handsome Picture Boards.

AT MARKET VALUE. By Grant Allen.
*BEYOND the DREAMS of AVARICE. By Sir Walter Besant.
The CHARLATAN. By Robert Buchanan and H. Murray.
*MR. JERVIS. By B. M. Croker.
*The MYSTERY of JAMAICA TERRACE. By Dick Donovan.
The WHITE VIRGIN. By George Manville Fenn.
*LADY PATTY. By Mrs. Hungerford.
MOUNT DESPAIR. By D. Christie Murray.
SAINT ANN'S. By W. E. Norris.
A COUNTRY SWEETHEART. By Dora Russell.
*The GOOD SHIP "MOHOCK." By W. Clark Russell.
*The PHANTOM DEATH. By W. Clark Russell.
IN the FACE of the WORLD. By Alan St. Aubyn.
*DAGONET ABROAD. By George R. Sims.
The PRINCE of BALKISTAN. By Allen Upward.

"*" Marked * may also be had in limp cloth, at 2s. 6d.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's-lane, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C., and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs. Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, June 19, 1897.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 3635. SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1897. PRICE THREEPENCE REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.

The CONCLUDING EVENING MEETING of the Session will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE-STREET, PICCADILLY, on TUESDAY, June 29, at 8 P.M., when a Paper, entitled 'The Binding of a God—a Study of the Basis of Idolatry,' will be read by Mr. W. CROOKE.

F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old-square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C., June, 1897.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATION.

The NEXT PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATION will be held at 20, HANOVER-SQUARE, LONDON, W., on JUNE 30, commencing at 10 A.M. If two or more Candidates desire to sit for examination at any of the large Provincial Towns, arrangements will be made for them to do so.

Candidates must (1) have passed the Preliminary Examination, or (2) produce such certificates of preliminary general education as will be approved by the Examination Committee, or (3) submit a certified declaration of having been for three years engaged in practical Library Work. Printed forms, on which this declaration must be made, may be obtained on application. Each Candidate must give notice, and pay the fee of ten shillings, on or before Monday, June 28 The Candidate is also required to specify which Sections of the Examination will be taken.

All certificates, fees, and other communications respecting the Examination must be sent to MR. J. W. KNAPMAN, Hon. Sec. of the Examination Committee, 17, Bloomsbury-square, London, W.C.

ROYAL SOCIETY of PAINTERS in WATER COLOURS, 5A, Pall Mall East, S.W.—126th EXHIBITION NOW OPEN. Admission 1s., 10 to 6.

SIEGFRIED H. HERKOMER, Jun., Secretary (pro tem.).

OPEN TO THE PUBLIC FREE 10 A.M. TO 6 P.M.

PUBLISHERS' PERMANENT BOOK EXHIBITION, 10, Bloomsbury-street, London, W.C.,

Where the Latest Productions of the Chief Houses may be inspected, BUT NOT PURCHASED.

LIBRARIES ARRANGED and CATALOGUED by an EXPERIENCED MAN. Reasonable terms and good testimonials.—Apply W., Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

THE Committee of the REDRUTH SCIENCE and ART SCHOOLS invite applications for the position of SCIENCE PRINCIPAL and LECTURER in CHEMISTRY and METALLURGY (Practical and Theoretical), MINERALOGY, &c.

Candidates are desired to forward particulars of their qualification to the Secretary not later than July 8, from whom further information may be obtained. W. K. WILTON, Secretary.

EPSOM COLLEGE.—ANNUAL EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS and EXHIBITIONS EARLY in JULY. New Junior Department just opened for 100 Boys. Preparation for London Matric. and Prel. Scient. Exams., the Army, Navy, and Universities. Numerous recent successes.—NEXT TERM BEGINS SEPTEMBER 16.—Apply to THE BURSAR, 5, The College, Epsom, Surrey.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held in JULY NEXT, TO FILL UP not less than FIVE RESIDENT, FIVE NON-RESIDENT QUEEN'S SCHOLARSHIPS, and TWO EXHIBITIONS.—Details may be obtained from THE HEAD MASTER, Dean's-yard, Westminster.

1897.—ALLIANCE FRANÇAISE (under official recognition of Minister of Public Instruction and University of France), 45, Rue de Grenelle, Paris. Summer Courses for Foreign Students. Fee for Single Separate Course, 10s.; for whole of Courses (July and August), 250 Lessons, Lectures, &c., 6l.—For information apply SECRETARY; or PAUL BARBIER, University College, Cardiff.

THE ALDEBURGH SCHOOL for GIRLS.—Head Mistress, Miss M. I. GARDINER, Nat. Sc. Tripos, Cambridge, late Assistant Mistress St. Leonard's School, St. Andrews. References: Mrs. Garrett Anderson, M.D.; the Rev. and Hon. T. Lyttelton; Arthur Sidgwick, Esq., M.A.; Mrs. Henry Sidgwick, &c.

SWITZERLAND.—HOME SCHOOL for a limited number of GIRLS. Special advantages for the Study of Languages, Music, and Art. Visiting Professors; University Lectures. Bracing climate; beautiful situation; and large grounds Special attention to health and exercise.—MLLE. HEISS, Waldheim, Berne.

SCHOOL for the DAUGHTERS of GENTLEMEN, Granville House, Meads, Eastbourne.—Thorough education. Highest references. Home comforts. Large grounds, with Croquet and Tennis Lawns.—For Prospectus apply to the PRINCIPAL

OXFORD.—THE SECRETARY, INFORMATION OFFICE, 44, High-street, Oxford (opposite Examination Schools), answers inquiries on all points concerning Oxford and Education generally. Fee, Five Shillings, to accompany inquiry.

SCHOLASTIC AGENCY WORK is undertaken by the MEN'S REGISTRY DEPARTMENT of the TEACHERS' GUILD on the lowest terms to cover necessary expenses. Registrar—W. H. FRICKER, M.A. (Oxon.). Personal interviews 3 to 5 Daily, except Thursdays.—Office: 74, Gower-street, W.C.

EDUCATION.—Thoroughly RELIABLE ADVICE can be obtained (free of charge) from Messrs GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who, from their extensive and personal knowledge of the best Schools for Boys and Girls, and successful Tutors in England and abroad, will furnish careful selections if supplied with detailed requirements.—36, Sackville-street, W.

ADVICE as to CHOICE of SCHOOLS.—The Scholastic Association (a body of Oxford and Cambridge Graduates) gives Advice and Assistance, without charge, to Parents and Guardians in the selection of Schools (for Boys or Girls) and Tutors for all Examinations at home or abroad.—A statement of requirements should be sent to the Manager, R. J. BEEVOR, M.A., 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, London, W.C.

GERMAN TUTOR (University Man) is willing to RECEIVE ONE or TWO PUPILS in his refined home. Perfectly able to undertake the whole education for a Literary or Business Career. Fourteen years' experience, and first-class English and Continental references.—TUTOR, care of Seyffardt's Buchhandlung, Amsterdam, Holland.

PUBLISHING PARTNERSHIP.—A Publisher, owner of a well-known established Book Publishing Business, having in preparation for this autumn what will be a very profitable and lasting publication, is prepared to take a JUNIOR PARTNER, with capital of 5,000*l.*, in view of a general extension of his business

The fullest particulars can be forthcoming to any bonâ fide likely Gentleman possessed of some knowledge of the Publishing Business.

Communications by letter, addressed to PUBLISHER care of Messrs. Shaen, Roscoe, Massey & Co., 8, Bedford-row, London, W.C., will receive attention should the advertiser consider the applicant suitable for the position referred to.

TO LECTURE COMMITTEES of Literary Societies, Institutes, &c.—The LECTURE AGENCY, Limited, The Outer Temple, Strand, London, W.C., acts as agent for all the leading Lecturers and Entertainers of the day.—Full particulars post free on application.

TYPE-WRITING by CLERGYMAN'S DAUGHTER and ASSISTANTS.—Authors' MSS. 1s. per 1,000 words. Circulars, &c., by Copying Process. MISS SIKES, West Kensington Type-writing Agency, 13, Wolverton-gardens, Hammersmith, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—MSS., Scientific, and of all Descriptions, Copied. Special attention to work requiring care. Dictation Rooms (Shorthand or Type-writing). Usual terms.—Misses E. B. & I. FARRAN, Hastings House, Norfolk-street, Strand, London (for seven years of 34, Southampton-street, Strand).

SECRETARIAL BUREAU.—Confidential Secretary, Miss PETHERBRIDGE (Natural Science Tripos), sends out Daily a trained staff of English and Foreign Secretaries, expert Stenographers, and Typists. Special staff of French and German Reporters. Literary and Commercial Translations into and from all Languages. Speciality—Dutch Translations, French, German, and Medical Type-writing.

INDEXING.—SECRETARIAL BUREAU, 9, Strand, London. Trained staff of Indexers. Speciality—Medical Indexing. Libraries Catalogued. Pupils trained for Indexing and Secretarial Work.

TYPE-WRITERS and CYCLES.—The standard makes at half the usual prices. Machines lent on hire, also Bought and Exchanged. Sundries and Repairs to all Machines. Terms, cash or instalments. MS. copied from 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—N. TAYLOR, 74, Chancery-lane, London. Established 1884. Telephone 6690. Telegrams, "Glossator, London."

TO AUTHORS.—The ROXBURGHE PRESS, LIMITED, 15, Victoria-street, Westminster, are OPEN to RECEIVE MANUSCRIPTS in all Branches of Literature for consideration with a view to Publishing in Volume Form. Every facility for bringing Works before the Trade, the Libraries, and the Reading Public. Illustrated Catalogue post free on application.

9, HART-STREET, BLOOMSBURY, LONDON.

MR. GEORGE REDWAY, formerly of York-street, Covent-garden, and late Director and Manager of Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., Limited, begs to announce that he has RESUMED BUSINESS as a PUBLISHER on his own account, and will be glad to hear from Authors with MSS. ready for publication, and consider proposals for New Books. Address as above.

THE AUTHORS' AGENCY. Established 1879. Proprietor, Mr. A. M. BURGHES, 1, Paternoster-row. The interests of Authors capably represented. Proposed Agreements, Estimates, and Accounts examined on behalf of Authors. MSS. placed with Publishers. Transfers carefully conducted. Thirty years' practical experience in all kinds of Publishing and Book Producing. Consultation free.—Terms and testimonials from Leading Authors on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHES, Authors' Agent, 1, Paternoster-row.

R. ANDERSON & CO., Advertising Agents, 14, COCKSPUR-STREET, CHARING CROSS, S.W., Insert Advertisements in all Papers, Magazines, &c., at the lowest possible prices. Special terms to Institutions, Schools, Publishers, Manufacturers, &c., on application.

C. MITCHELL & CO., Agents for the Sale and Purchase of Newspaper Properties, undertake Valuations for Probate or Purchase, Investigations, and Audit of Accounts, &c. Card of Terms on application.

12 and 13, Red Lion-court, Fleet-street, E.C.

Catalogues.

ELLIS & ELVEY Dealers in Old and Rare Books and Manuscripts.

NEW CATALOGUE (No. 86) of RECENT PURCHASES now ready, post free, Sixpence.

29, New Bond-street, London, W.

NOW READY, CATALOGUE, No. 20.—Drawings of the Early English School—Engravings after Turner, Constable, Reynolds, &c.—choice states of Turner's Liber Studiorum—Illustrated Books—Works by Professor Ruskin. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church-terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

Now ready,

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY, DRAMA, MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho-square, London, W.

BY those interested in AUTOGRAPHS, SOTHERAN'S NEW CATALOGUE should be applied for. It is especially rich in Examples of Charles Dickens, of which there are sixty-two, and Pope, Horace Walpole, Geo. Washington, Allan Ramsay, Dr. Johnson, Boswell, and many others are represented Post free.

H. SOTHERAN & Co. 37, Piccadilly, and 140, Strand, London.

FRANCE.—The ATHENÆUM can be obtained at the following Railway Stations in France:—

AMIENS, ANTIBES, BEAULIEU-SUR-MER, BIARRITZ, BORDEAUX, BOULOGNE-SUR-MER, CALAIS, CANNES, DIJON, DUNKIRK, HAVRE, LILLE, LYONS, MARSEILLES, MENTONE, MONACO, NANTES, NICE, PARIS, PAU, SAINT RAPHAEL, TOURS, TOULON.

And at the GALIGNANI LIBRARY, 224, Rue de Rivoli, Paris.

WILLIAMS & NORGATE, IMPORTERS OF FOREIGN BOOKS,

14, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London; 20, South Frederick-street, Edinburgh; and 7, Broad-street, Oxford.

CATALOGUES on application.

CATALOGUES FREE of SCARCE and CURIOUS BOOKS on Sale at Queen Anne's Olde Book Store by NELLIE GROSE, 16, Princes-street, Westminster Abbey (Daughter of Mrs. Grose, formerly of 37, Leicester-square).

CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS.

Fine Library Sets—Works illustrated by Cruikshank, Rowlandson, &c.—First Editions of the Great Authors (old and modern)—Early English Literature—Illuminated and other MSS.—Portraits—Engravings—Autographs.

CATALOGUE, just published, of Works on English, Scotch, Irish, and Welsh Topography, Heraldry, and Family History free on application.

MAGGS BROS.,
159, Church-street, Paddington, London, W.

CHEAP BOOKS.—THREEPENCE DISCOUNT in the SHILLING allowed from the published price of nearly all New Books, Bibles, Prayer-Books, and Annual Volumes. Orders by post executed by return. CATALOGUES of New Books and Remainders gratis and postage free.—GILBERT & FIELD, 67, Moorgate-street, London, E.C.

TEN POUNDS REWARD for decisive and indisputable proof of the existence in print or writing of the Motto MANUS HAEC INIMICA TYRANNIS, or of its use by any Family prior to the year 1650.—Address A., care of Parnell, 63, Southampton-row, W.C.

LARGE PICTURE BY MAYER.

'LA COUR D'ASSISE,' Exhibited at Paris Exhibition, FOR SALE.—May be seen at E. GALLAIS & Co., Wine Merchants, 90, Piccadilly, W.

CORNHILL MAGAZINE for JULY. Price One Shilling.

Contents.

The ENGLISHMAN'S CALENDAR (JULY).

MARSTON MOOR: an Anniversary Study. By C. H. Firth.

The POVERTY of the CLERGY. By the Rev. H. C. Beeching.

SOME FRAGMENTS from the RECOLLECTIONS of the late SIR CHARLES MURRAY.

PIERS PLOUGHMAN and ENGLISH LIFE in the FOURTEENTH CENTURY. By J. W. Mackail.

SULLIVAN'S BARGAIN. By B. M. Croker.

LEGAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST ANIMALS. By Dr. E. T. Withington.

TAVENDER'S LAST TERM. By G. H. Powell.

IN an ORCHARD. By John A. Bridges.

BELLA'S MR. BORWICK. By Katharine Silvester.

HOW to SCAN a PROSPECTUS. By Hartley Withers.

PAGES from a PRIVATE DIARY.

IN KEDAR'S TENTS. Chaps. 19-21. By Henry Seton Merriman, Author of 'The Sowers,' &c.

London: Smith, Elder & Co. 15, Waterloo-place.

THE RELIQUARY and ILLUSTRATED ARCHÆOLOGIST.

Edited by J. ROMILLY ALLEN, F.S.A. Price 2*s.* 6*d.* Quarterly.

The JULY Part contains—

SPITALFIELDS WEAVER. With Collotype Frontispiece.

ON an INSCRIBED LEADEN TABLET found at Dymock, in Gloucestershire. By E. Sidney Hartland, F.S.A. Three Illustrations.

QUIN ABBEY. By C. Parkinson. Four Illustrations.

The HISTORIC TOWN of YOUGHAL on the BLACKWATER. By H. Elrington. Five Illustrations.

FRENCH BAKER'S TALLIES. By Edward Lovett. Two Illustrations.

The EVOLUTION of the TEXTILE INDUSTRIES. I. Spinning. By J. Romilly Allen, F.S.A. Twelve Illustrations.

NOTES on NORTHORPE CHURCH. Illustrated.

PORTER'S PACK from COREA. Illustrated.

DISCOVERY of a SAXON INSCRIBED and ORNAMENTED CROSS SHAFT at ROLLESTON, Notts. Illustrated.

A SCOTTISH BEGGAR'S BADGE. Illustrated.

ANCIENT CUP, CONGLETON. Illustrated.

NOTICES of NEW PUBLICATIONS:—'Ethnographical Survey of the United Kingdom'—'The Ruined Cities of Ceylon'—'Lincoln's Inn Fields'—'Devonshire Wills'—'The Gilmans of Highgate and S. T. Coleridge.'

London: Bemrose & Sons, Limited, 23, Old Bailey; and Derby.

THE JUBILEE from a DECORATIVE POINT of VIEW: Illustrations of the Eleanor Cross, Northampton, and the Siddons Statue, Paddington Green; Dr. Cuypers, recipient of the Gold Medal of the Institute of Architects—Illustrations of his Works; Alterations to the Vienna Theatre, &c.

See the BUILDER of June 26, post free, 4½*d.*

Publisher of the Builder, 46, Catherine-street, London, W.C.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE-ART GALLERY.

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

PRODUCERS AND PUBLISHERS OF

PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS OF FAMOUS WORKS OF ART.

AUTOTYPES of the OLD MASTERS in the GREAT CONTINENTAL GALLERIES.

AUTOTYPES of MODERN ENGLISH ART.

AUTOTYPES of PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY.

AUTOTYPES of DRAWINGS by the OLD MASTERS.

AUTOTYPES of PICTURES in the FRENCH SALONS.

Those interested in Art, and in the recent developments of the Photographic Reproduction of Pictures, are invited to inspect the Company's extensive Collection of Autotypes and Autogravures of all Schools, now on view at their Gallery, 74, New Oxford-street, where may also be seen a series of framed examples, of specially designed patterns, made in oak, walnut, and other hard woods.

Catalogues and Price Lists post free on application to

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD-STREET, LONDON, W.C.

THE HANFSTAENGL GALLERIES,

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

(nearly opposite the National Gallery).

Inspection invited.

REPRODUCTION IN CARBON PRINT AND PHOTOGRAVURE.

PICTURES in the NATIONAL GALLERY. To be published in Ten Parts. Illustrated in Gravure, with Descriptive Text, written by CHARLES L. EASTLAKE, Keeper of the National Gallery. Cover designed by Walter Crane. Price to Subscribers, 7*l.* 10*s.*

[Part III. now ready.

The HOLBEIN DRAWINGS. By Special Permission of Her Majesty the Queen. 54 fine Reproductions of the Famous Drawings at Windsor Castle, bound in Artistic Cover. Price 5*l.* 5*s.*

The OLD MASTERS. Reproductions from BUCKINGHAM PALACE, WINDSOR CASTLE, NATIONAL GALLERY, LONDON; AMSTERDAM, BERLIN, BRUSSELS, CASSEL, DRESDEN, HAAG, HAARLEM, MUNICH, VIENNA.

LEADING ARTISTS of the DAY. 9,000 Reproductions from the Works of BURNE JONES, WATTS, ROSSETTI, ALMA TADEMA, SOLOMON, HOFFMAN, BODENHAUSEN, PLOCKHORST, THUMANN, &c.

CATALOGUES POST FREE.

16, PALL MALL EAST, S.W.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY.

FOR THE CIRCULATION AND SALE OF ALL THE BEST

ENGLISH, FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

TOWN SUBSCRIPTIONS from ONE GUINEA per annum.

LONDON BOOK SOCIETY (for weekly exchange of Books at the houses of Subscribers) from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

COUNTRY SUBSCRIPTIONS from TWO GUINEAS per annum.

N.B.—Two or Three Friends may UNITE in ONE SUBSCRIPTION and thus lessen the Cost of Carriage.

Town and Village Clubs supplied on Liberal Terms.

Prospectuses and Monthly Lists of Books gratis and post free.

SURPLUS LIBRARY BOOKS

NOW OFFERED AT

GREATLY REDUCED PRICES.

A NEW CLEARANCE LIST

(100 PAGES)

Sent gratis and post free to any address.

The List contains POPULAR WORKS in TRAVEL, SPORT, HISTORY, BIOGRAPHY, SCIENCE, and FICTION.

Also NEW and SURPLUS COPIES of FRENCH, GERMAN, ITALIAN, and SPANISH BOOKS.

Books Shipped to all parts of the World at Lowest Rates.

MUDIE'S SELECT LIBRARY, LIMITED,

30–34, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.;

241, BROMPTON-ROAD, S.W.;

48, QUEEN VICTORIA-STREET, E.C.; and at

BARTON ARCADE, MANCHESTER.

THE AUTHOR'S HAIRLESS PAPER-PAD. (The LEADENHALL PRESS, Ltd., 50, Leadenhall-street, London, E.C.)

Contains hairless paper, over which the pen slips with perfect freedom. Sixpence each 5*s.* per dozen, ruled or plain.

TO INVALIDS.—A LIST of MEDICAL MEN in all parts willing to RECEIVE RESIDENT PATIENTS, giving full particulars and terms, sent gratis. The list includes Private Asylums, &c; Schools also recommended.—Address Mr. G. B. STOCKER, 8, Lancaster-place, Strand, W.C.

FURNISHED APARTMENTS in one of the most pleasant positions in TUNBRIDGE WELLS. South aspect, good view, three minutes' walk from the town and common.—Write R. G., 18, Claremont-road, Tunbridge Wells.

Sales by Auction.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King-street, St. James's-square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, June 28, the COLLECTION of MODERN PICTURES of W. G. ARCHER, Esq., deceased, and from different Sources.

On TUESDAY, June 29, EARLY ENGLISH ENGRAVINGS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

On TUESDAY, June 29, interesting RELICS of Mrs. SARAH SIDDONS, the Great Actress; and MINIATURES, BOXES, and other OBJECTS of VERTU, including a SMALL COLLECTION, the Property of a BARONET.

On WEDNESDAY, June 30, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE of the late J. J. FARQUHARSON, Esq., and the late Rev. H. R. WADMORE.

On THURSDAY, July 1, WINES, the Property of BOODLE'S CLUB.

On THURSDAY, July 1, CHOICE CIGARS of the 1888, 1891, and 1894 Crops.

On THURSDAY, July 1, and Two Following Days, the REMAINING WORKS and the COLLECTION of G. P. BOYCE, R.W.S., deceased.

On MONDAY, July 5, the COLLECTION of PORCELAIN, PLATE, EMBROIDERIES, OBJECTS of ART, and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of the late G. P. BOYCE, Esq., R.W.S.

On TUESDAY, July 6, ENGRAVINGS and BOOKS from the COLLECTION of the late GEORGE RICHMOND, R.A., and OLD FRENCH ENGRAVINGS, the Property of a LADY.

On THURSDAY, July 8, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, forming a Portion of the COLLECTION of D. P. SELLAR, Esq.

On SATURDAY, July 10, the GOTT HEIRLOOMS, PICTURES of C. T. DODD, Esq., deceased, and important PICTURES by Sir T. Lawrence, P.R.A., and Sir H. Raeburn, R.A.

THE ASHBURNHAM LIBRARY OF PRINTED BOOKS. FIRST PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., THIS DAY SATURDAY, June 26, and Six Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the FIRST PORTION of the Magnificent LIBRARY of exceedingly Valuable and Rare PRINTED BOOKS, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL of ASHBURNHAM. This Portion comprises the Letters A—F only, and includes a Large Number of Books both English and Foreign of the highest degree of rarity and interest, amongst which may be mentioned the First Two Editions of Dame Juliana Berners's Book of Hawking, Hunting, &c., from 1486 to 1496—Ten Books printed by William Caxton—Three Books printed upon Vellum, including the only First Latin Aristotle—beautifully illuminated—the Gutenburg and 1462 Bibles and the Incunabula of Italy—a splendid series of the Rarest Bibles in various Languages, but chiefly English—Rare Editions of Ariosto, Boccaccio and Dante—the Earliest Editions of Chaucer to the End of the Sixteenth Century—the Chronicles of Sir J. Froissart, Arnold, Caxton, Froissart and Fabyan—Fine and Rare Special Breviaries—First Editions of the Writings of Andrew, Lord Bacon, John Bale, Hugh Broughton, Cocker, Cranmer, Defoe, Gawin Douglas, Drayton, Bleeding Fletcher, John Foxe, Fuller, &c.—many extremely Rare Books by the First Printers in the City of London, St. Albans, Ipswich, Oxford, Cambridge, and other Localities—a Fine Series of Bible Illustrations and Books with Engravings and Woodcuts—some Rare Books on America—and other Remarkable Items too numerous to particularize. Many of the Books have additional interest and value attached to them from the fact of their being either Presentation Copies from the Authors or from having belonged formerly to Celebrated Persons, and some are in Splendid Bindings done for Royal, Noble, and Famous Personages.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had, price Half-a-Crown each.

 A list of the Prices and Purchasers' Names at this Sale will be published shortly after its conclusion, and may be had of Messrs. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE, price 5*s.* each.

Coins and Medals, including the Collection of the late JOHN LOVEDAY, Esq., that of the late LORD AIRLIE, and other Properties.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, COINS and MEDALS, including the COLLECTION formed by the late JOHN LOVEDAY, Esq., of Caversham, during the last Century; the COLLECTION of the late Rev. JAMES BECK, M.A., of Bildeston, the COLLECTION of the late LORD AIRLIE, and other Properties, comprising Greek and Roman Coins in Gold, Silver, and Bronze—Anglo-Saxon and English Coins—English Gold Coins—Commemorative Medals—Foreign Coins &c., including many in fine preservation and of considerable rarity—Coin Cabinets—Numismatic Books.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of English and Foreign War Medals, formed by Col. WALFORD.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, July 5, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN WAR MEDALS and DECORATIONS, formed by Col. WALFORD, and other small Properties, comprising N.G.S. Medals with rare single clasps for "Bonne Citoyenne with Furieuse", "Nassau, 22nd March, 1808"; "Anhalt, 27th March, 1813", "Boat Service, 4th Feb. 1804"; "Boat Service, 2nd May, 1813", M.G.S. with single clasps for "Barrosa," "Chateauguay," "Fort Detroit," &c.—H.E.I.C. Medals for Rodriguez, Bourbon and Isle of France, Nepaul and Capture of Java—Army of India, 3-clasp for Assaye, Argaum, Gawilghur—rare Groups of Medals—Officer's Silver Medal for Egypt 1801—Indian Chief's Medal, AR. small size, including a Collection of English and Foreign Orders and Decorations, Victoria Cross and Legion of Honour (as a group), Gold Guelphic Medal of the Prince Regent, &c.—Medal Cabinets.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Collection of Etchings by the Old Masters, the Property of HEDLEY PEEK, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, July 7, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ETCHINGS by the OLD MASTERS formed in the last Century by one of the Bourbon Princes and now the Property of HEDLEY PEEK, Esq.; also a few very choice ENGRAVINGS, in Mezzotint and Colour, the Property of a LADY.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of Books on Angling of the late R. W. COLEMAN, Esq., of Pennsylvania.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, July 8 and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of BOOKS on ANGLING of the late ROBERT W. COLEMAN, Esq., of Pennsylvania, originally Collected by Rev. G. W. BETHUNE, American Editor of "Walton's Angler."

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Library of CYRIL DUNN GARDNER, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on SATURDAY, July 10 and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable LIBRARY of CYRIL DUNN GARDNER, Esq. (of Fordham Abbey, Cambridgeshire), comprising the Works of Standard English Authors in Old and Modern Editions—rare early printed English Books—Topographical Works of Baker, Blomfield, Dugdale, Thoroton, and others—a large Series of the Writings of Daniel Defoe—early printed and rare Books—Editiones Principes of Homer, Aristotle, Terentius Varro, Eusebius, &c.—Aldine and Elzevir Editions—a finely written Hebrew Bible on vellum of the Fifteenth Century, and a MS. of Ludolphus of Saxony's Life of Christ—fine Editions of French Writers—Illustrated and Architectural Works—Tracts on America—Books in fine bindings.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

THE MONTAGU COLLECTION OF COINS. FOURTH PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington-street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, July 15, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the FOURTH PORTION of the very valuable and extensive COLLECTION of ENGLISH (Copper, &c.), IRISH, SCOTTISH, and ANGLO-GALLIC COINS.

May be viewed two days prior. Illustrated Catalogues may be had, price One Shilling each.

FRIDAY NEXT.

100 Lots of Photographic and Scientific Apparatus and Miscellaneous Property.

MR. J. C. STEVENS will SELL the above by AUCTION, at his Great Rooms, 38 King-street, Covent-garden, on FRIDAY NEXT, July 2, at half-past 12 o'clock precisely.

On view the day prior 2 till 5 and morning of Sale, and Catalogues had.

Postage Stamps.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on TUESDAY, June 29, and Following Day, at half-past 5 o'clock precisely, rare BRITISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

Catalogues on application.

Library of J. F. SNAITH, Esq., late of the Madras Civil Service.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, July 1, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of J. F. SNAITH, Esq., late of the Madras Civil Service, comprising Annals of Sporting, 13 vols.—Shoberl's World in Miniature—Ackermann's Repository—Thackeray's Snob's Trip to Paris—Ingram's Memorials of Oxford, Large Paper—Percy Anecdotes—Hakluyt's Voyages, 16 vols.—Cruikshank's Comic Almanacks, Complete Set—Dickens's Works, 25 vols.—Jesse's Works, 10 vols.—Shakespeare's Works, edited by Dyce—Sowerby's English Botany—Pepys's Memoirs, extra illustrated—Archæological Journal, 51 vols.—Strickland's Queens of England and Scotland—Lewis and Clarke's Travels—Hamerton's Portfolio, 18 vols.—Aldrovandus Opera, 14 vols. in 13, &c.

Catalogues may be had; if by post, on receipt of stamp.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, July 14, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of WORKS on HORSEMANSHIP formed by Captain F. H. HUTH.

Catalogues in preparation.

Library of the late Professor C. TOMLINSON, F.R.S.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, July 15 and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late Professor C. TOMLINSON, F.R.S., comprising Works on the Occult Sciences—Philosophical Transactions and Proceedings of the Royal Society, complete set—Chemical Society's Journal, complete set—Aldine Poets and Miscellaneous Books in all Branches of Literature, both English and Foreign.

Catalogues in preparation.

MESSRS. HODGSON beg to announce the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery-lane, W.C., commencing at 1 o'clock each day:—

On MONDAY, June 28, LAW BOOKS, including a Library from one of the Colonies, comprising Reports in Common Law and Equity—Howell's State Trials, 34 vols.—useful Modern Text-Books—Oak and Mahogany Writing Tables, Bookcases, Office Chairs, &c.

On TUESDAY, June 29, and Three Following Days, a LARGE COLLECTION of MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the LIBRARY of an eminent DIVINE and other Collections, comprising Holmes's Queen Victoria, Japanese Edition—Walpole's Letters, 9 vols. Library Edition—J. H. Jesse's Works, 19 vols.—Grote's Greece, 12 vols.—Trollope's Florence, 4 vols.—De Quincey's Works, 15 vols.—Ralfe's Naval Chronology, 3 vols.—Bree's Birds, 4 vols.—Morris's Birds, 6 vols.—Ralf's British Desmids—Shelley's Poems, 3 vols.—Lamb's Album Verses—Rossetti's Early Italian Poets—Spenser's Works, 5 vols Pickering—Book Prices Current, 6 vols.—Edinburgh Review, 278 vols.—Revue des Deux Mondes, 224 vols.—The Athenæum, 62 vols.—Encyclopædia Britannica, 22 vols.—Encyclopædia Metropolitana, 30 vols.—Weimann's Botany, in Dutch, 8 vols.—Wood's Athenæ, by Bliss, 4 vols.—the Writings of the Fathers, Modern Divinity, &c.

May be viewed, and Catalogues had.

FOR SALE, a quaint and valuable COLLECTION of upwards of FORTY RARE and CURIOUS BOOKS, forming part of the LIBRARY of the late venerated Poet Laureate WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, D.C.L., including Works of Ancient and Modern Authors, Curious and Rare Editions of Old English Worthies, and other early Typography. The majority of the Works have the Poet's Autograph therein. Catalogues will shortly be ready, and may be had on application.—JOSEPH SAUL, Auctioneer, Southport.

NOTES and QUERIES. (EIGHTH SERIES.)

THIS WEEK'S NUMBER contains—

NOTES:—John Cabot—R. L. Stevenson and Burns—Bibliography at Columbian Exposition—Shamrock as Food—Decapitation of Voltaire—Rev. S. Wesley—Celtic Grave Slabs—"The black water"—"When sorrow sleepeth"—Misquotation—James Stuart of Tweedmouth.

QUERIES:—Murillo's 'Woman eating Porridge'—"Care creature"—Charterhouse—G. Smeeton—Cross, Lloyd, and Rose—"Chief magi"—'John Jasper's Secret'—Machiavelli—R. Johnston—Sir J. Saunderson—Monkish Latin—Comptroller of the Pipe—Precise Hour—Fee Farm Rents—Christian Policy—Author Wanted—M. Hamilton—"Garrolds"—R. Woolsey—Spring Gardens—Roman Arithmetic—"Tenification"—"C. R."—Puleston—Kerry Topography—Portrait of the Queen—Josselyn Arms—Statue of the Duke of Kent.

REPLIES:—Prime Minister—Cornish Hurling—Gretna Green Marriages—Religious Dancing—Royal Quarterings—Labels on Books—"All my eye and Peggy Martin"—Old London Tavern—Pinchbeck—Cousin—Scottish Graduates—Gillman Family—Church Registers—Hatchments—W. Crawford—Landguard Fort—J. Callow—Fuormos'—"Ha'porth of tar"—"Clavus griophili"—Buslet—First Ship Named—S and F—Rebellion of 1715—"Aceldama"—Sneezing—Misquotation—"Three acres and a cow"—McKinley—The "Barghest"—Chapel-Snake—Dacre Monument—Frozen Music—Provincial Pronunciation.

NOTES on BOOKS:—Baring-Gould's 'Lives of the Saints,' Vols. II. and III.—Palmer's 'Cathedral Church of Rochester'—Seamer's 'Cathedral Church of Oxford'—Richardson's 'George Morland's Pictures'—Florio's 'Essays of Montaigne'—James's Boethius's 'Consolations of Philosophy'—Sayle's 'In Praise of Music'—Rampini's 'Moray and Nairn.'

LAST WEEK'S NUMBER (June 19) contains—

NOTES:—Lines by Mrs. Norton—Dr. Paris and Dr. Penneck—Fall of Angels—D'Israeli—"Cocaine"—Font Stone—New South Wales Rifles—Amenities at Bath—Holy Thursday Folk-lore—Curious Confessional—"Honi soit qui mal y pense"—Hogg and Tannahill—"Bazzomy"—Slang—J. Withens—"Dolly."

QUERIES:—"Harvestry": "Harveyized"—"Cappel-faced"—Col Galatin—The Three Lemons—'Friends in Council'—T. G.—Belief—"Pyrography"—Jew's Harp—Earl of Beverley—Thoyts—'Tom, Dick, and Harry'—Wonersh—Silver Medal—Running Camp—Map—'Armorial Families'—Slavonic Names—Dog-gates—'Nature': 'Bible of Nature'—Milking Siphon—Bishopric of Ossory—Cheney Gate—Induction at Dorking—Tuscany—Peninsular Medal.

REPLIES:—"Eye-rhymes"—39th Foot—Ship Constitution—Walpole and his Editors—Unicorn—Thimble—St Patrick's Purgatory—Rev. A. Symmer—Yiddish—Carrick—Names of Drugs—"Abraham's Bosom"—Hotham—"Conservative"—Holmby House—Good Friday Custom—'Dublin Gazette'—"Fullams"—'Il Penseroso'—'A tinker's curse'—Etoniana—Yeomen of the Guard—Order of the Bath—Public-houses—"Halifax Shilling"—Wilkes—Evelyn—Cornish Superstition—Dr. Beaumont—Caen Wood—Science in the Choir—The Derby—Old School at Parson's Green—Funeral Customs

NOTES on BOOKS:—Roberts's 'Memoirs of Christie's'—White's 'Wordsworth and Coleridge MSS.'—Yarker's 'Comte de Gaballis'—'Folk-lore,' March.

Price 4*d.*; by post, 4½*d.*

Published by John C. Francis, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.

MACMILLAN & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

SEVEN NOVELS WORTH READING.

Price Six Shillings Each.

SECOND EDITION.

THE PHILANDERERS.

By A. E. W. MASON, Author of 'Morrice Buckler.'

ACADEMY.—"'The Philanderers' should add to Mr. Mason's reputation—a reputation which, I am convinced, will continue to grow."

A ROSE OF YESTERDAY.

By F. MARION CRAWFORD.

SCOTSMAN.—"It has a mature imaginative power, which stamps it as a novel of a high order."

MY RUN HOME.

By ROLF BOLDREWOOD.

ATHENÆUM.—"Rolf Boldrewood's last story is a racy volume. It has many of the best qualities of Whyte Melville, the breezy freshness and vigour of Frank Smedley, with the dash and something of the abandon of Lever.....His last volume is one of his best."

THE SECRET OF SAINT FLOREL.

By JOHN BERWICK.

SPEAKER.—"A book to be unreservedly recommended."

THE FALL OF A STAR: a Novel.

By Sir WM. MAGNAY, Bart.

OBSERVER.—"Contains some exciting and amusing incidents, and the tragic climax is decidedly novel."

THE QUEEN OF THE MOOR.

By FREDERIC ADYE.

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN.—"'The Queen of the Moor' is, like 'Westward Ho!' and 'Lorna Doone,' full of nature, and of human nature."

THE CHOIR INVISIBLE.

By JAMES LANE ALLEN,
Author of 'Summer in Arcady,' &c.

BRITISH WEEKLY.—"Certainly this is no commonplace book, and I have failed to do justice to its beauty, its picturesqueness, its style, its frequent nobility of feeling, and its large, patient charity."

12mo. 3*s.* 6*d.*

The PORT of MISSING SHIPS, and other Stories of the Sea. By JOHN R. SPEARS.

ILLUSTRATED STANDARD NOVELS.

NEW VOLUME.

Crown 8vo. cloth extra, antique paper, 3*s.* 6*d.*; "Peacock" Edition, gilt sides, back, and edges, 5*s.*

FRANK MILDMAY. By Captain MARRYAT. Illustrated by H. R. Millar. With an Introduction by DAVID HANNAY.

MACMILLAN & CO., LIMITED, London.

BY PROFESSOR CAMPBELL BLACK, F.R.S.E.

The MEDICAL ENVIRONMENT. 1*s.* net.
Hugh Hopkins, 17, West Regent-street, Glasgow.

The URINE in HEALTH and DISEASE. 7*s.* 6*d.*
Baillière, Tindall & Cox, 20, King William-street, London.

LECTURES on BRIGHT'S DISEASE. 2*s.* 6*d.*

The FUNCTIONAL DISEASES of the URINARY and REPRODUCTIVE ORGANS. 5*s.*
J. & A. Churchill, 7, Great Marlborough-street, London.

Just published, pp. 112, cloth, 1*s.* post free,

HÆMORRHOIDS and HABITUAL CONSTIPATION: their Constitutional Cure. By JOHN H. CLARKE, M.D. London: James Epps & Co., Limited, 170, Piccadilly, and 48, Threadneedle-street.

Just published, 1 vol crown 8vo price 5*s.*

THE CITIES of the DAWN: Naples, Athens, Pompeii, Constantinople, Smyrna, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Alexandria, Cairo, Marseilles, Avignon, Lyons, Dijon. With 31 Illustrations. By J. EWING RITCHIE ("Christopher Crayon").

"Some impressive descriptions of a holiday tour in the East, and a useful guide to future travellers."—Daily Mail.

"Full of interest from beginning to end."—East Anglian Daily Times.

London: T. Fisher Unwin, Paternoster-square.

FROM WALTER SCOTT'S LIST.

THE CONTEMPORARY SCIENCE SERIES.

TWO IMPORTANT NEW VOLUMES NOW READY.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

HALLUCINATIONS and ILLU-SIONS: a Study of the Fallacies of Perception. By EDMUND PARISH.

This work deals not only with the pathology of the subject, but with the occurrence of the phenomena among normal persons, bringing together the international statistics of the matter. It discusses fully the causation of hallucinations and the various theories that have been put forward; and, further, it examines and adversely criticizes the evidence which has been brought forward in favour of telepathy.

Crown 8vo. cloth, price 6*s.*

The PSYCHOLOGY of the EMO-TIONS. By Prof. TH. RIBOT.

Contains a very full exposition and defence of the physiological theory of the emotions, which regards all emotions, from the most elementary to the most exalted and refined, from—to quote one of the author's examples—the pain of a corn to the grief of unattained ideals of Michael Angelo's sonnets, as of identical nature, in the sense that they are the effect and not the cause of bodily changes, and that it is, therefore, incorrect to speak of the "expression of the emotions," the emotion itself being the consciousness of what we call its expression. In the course of his wide ranging exposition the author deals with the social and moral feelings, the sexual instinct, religion, art, the psychology of laughter, the morbid emotions, the classification of characters and temperaments, &c.

NEW EDITIONS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 6*s.* with Illustrations.

SECOND EDITION NOW READY.

MAN and WOMAN: a Study of Human Secondary Sexual Characters. By HAVELOCK ELLIS.

Crown 8vo. cloth, 3*s.* 6*d.*

FOURTH EDITION, COMPLETELY REVISED, NOW READY.

HYPNOTISM. By Dr. Albert Moll.

The new edition of this work—which is the most authoritative on the subject—has been revised throughout, and a considerable quantity of new and important matter added.

READY, UNIFORM WITH PREVIOUS YEARS' ISSUES

Crown 8vo. paper boards, 3*s.* 6*d.*

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1896.

With an Introduction 'On the Need for an Endowed Theatre.' By WILLIAM ARCHER. And a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY G. HIBBERT.

Copies may still be had, uniform with the above, of

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1893.

With an Epistle Dedicatory to Mr. Robert W. Lowe By WILLIAM ARCHER.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1894.

By WILLIAM ARCHER. With an Introduction by GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, and a Synopsis of the Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

The THEATRICAL WORLD of 1895.

By WILLIAM ARCHER. With a Prefatory Letter by ARTHUR W. PINERO, and a Synopsis of Playbills of the Year by HENRY GEORGE HIBBERT.

"THE MOST ATTRACTIVE BIRTHDAY BOOK EVER PUBLISHED."

Crown 4to. in new specially designed cover, cloth, price 6*s.*

"Wedding Present" Edition, in silver cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.* in box. Also in limp morocco, in box.

AN ENTIRELY NEW EDITION, REVISED THROUGHOUT.

With 12 Full-Page Portraits of Celebrated Musicians.

DEDICATED TO PADEREWSKI.

The MUSIC of the POETS: a Musicians' Birthday Book. Compiled by ELEONORE D'ESTERRE-KEELING.

This is an entirely new edition of this popular work. The size has been altered, the page having been made a little longer and narrower (9 by 6¼ inches), thus allowing space for a larger number of autographs. The setting-up of the pages has also been improved, and a large number of names of composers, instrumentalists, and singers has been added to those which appeared in the previous edition. A special feature of the book consists in the reproduction in facsimile of autographs and autographic music of living composers, among the many new autographs which have been added to the present edition being those of MM. Paderewski (to whom the book is dedicated), Mascagni, Eugen d'Albert, Sarasate, Hamish M'Cunn, and C. Hubert Parry. Merely as a volume of poetry about music, this book makes a charming anthology, the selections of verse extending from a period anterior to Chaucer to the present day.

Among the additional writers represented in the New Edition are ALFRED AUSTIN, ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER BENSON, JOHN DAVIDSON, NORMAN GALE, RICHARD LE GALLIENNE, NORA HOPPER, JEAN INGELOW, GEORGE MEREDITH, ALICE MEYNELL, COVENTRY PATMORE, MARY ROBINSON, FRANCIS THOMPSON, DR. TODHUNTER, KATHARINE TYNAN, WILLIAM WATSON, and W. B. YEATS

London:
WALTER SCOTT, LIMITED, Paternoster-square.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST.

A New Serial Story, by AGNES and EGERTON CASTLE, entitled The PRIDE of JENNICO, is begun in the JULY Number of TEMPLE BAR.

Now ready, price One Shilling.

THE TEMPLE BAR MAGAZINE.

Contents for JULY, 1897.

1. The PRIDE of JENNICO. By Egerton and Agnes Castle.
2. The COUNTESS BROWNLOW.
3. ALL in the MOONLIGHT.
4. SOME ASPECTS of the GREATER DUMAS.
5. SOME OLD NOVELS.
6. The DEAD MAN'S HAND.
7. DR. JOHN BULL.
8. The OLD LADY.
9. PLEASURES of the PAST.
10. BETHANY. By the Author of 'A Hard Little Cuss.'

"Miss MacKenzie's 'Story of the New South Wales Contingent' in the June number is one of those things which stir the heart of a patriot like the sound of a trumpet."
Review of Reviews.

LORD ROBERTS' FORTY-ONE YEARS IN INDIA.

The Nineteenth Edition of the above Work is now ready at all Libraries and Booksellers', in 2 vols. demy 8vo. with numerous Portraits on Steel and Copper, Maps, Plans, and Illustrations, price 36s.

NOW READY,

LETTERS FROM THE BLACK SEA

During the Crimean War, 1854-55.

By Admiral SIR LEOPOLD HEATH, K.C.B.

In crown 8vo. with Illustrations and Plans, 7s. 6d.

NEW WORKS OF FICTION.

SECOND EDITION READY THIS DAY.

DEAR FAUSTINA. By Rhoda BROUGHTON, Author of 'Red as a Rose is She.' In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"The dénoûment brings to an artistic and natural close a study of contemporary manner which will certainly enhance the author's reputation as an alert and penetrating observer of her sex."—World.

A SOCIAL SATIRE.—NOW READY.

PANTALAS. By Edward Jenkins, Author of 'Ginx's Baby.' In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 3s. 6d.

"It is difficult to know whether most to admire the humour and force of the picture of men and life which it presents or the profundity of its teaching as a lesson in sociology. It is in its way a brilliant little study in a great subject, full of sound common sense and quiet humour."—Scotsman.

"A very clever satire. Mr. Jenkins has a virile, caustic wit, and plies the lash with airy cultured skill."
Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW NOVEL.—NOW READY.

A TRICK of FAME. By H. Hamilton FYFE, Author of 'A Player's Tragedy.' In 2 vols. crown 8vo. 12s.

A STORY FOR CHILDREN.

A ROYAL SMILE: a Tale of York. By JANE RAINE. With an Introduction by W. P. FRITH, R.A. In fcap. 8vo. cloth, 2s.

BY THE AUTHOR OF 'A COUNTRY COUSIN.'

The CAREER of CLAUDIA. By F. M. PEARD, Author of 'The Rose Garden,' &c. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

BY A NEW WRITER.

IN a COUNTRY TOWN. By Honor PERCEVAL. In 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON,
New Burlington-street,
Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

HURST & BLACKETT'S LIST.

NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK.

Now ready, in 1 vol. small 4to. extra cloth, gilt top, Price HALF-A-GUINEA.

WOMEN NOVELISTS OF QUEEN VICTORIA'S REIGN.

A BOOK OF APPRECIATIONS.

The SISTERS BRONTE, by Mrs. OLIPHANT. GEORGE ELIOT, by Mrs. LYNN LINTON. Mrs. GASKELL, by EDNA LYALL. Mrs. CRAIK, by Mrs. PARR. And other Essays by CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, ADELINE SERGEANT, Mrs. MACQUOID, Mrs. ALEXANDER, and Mrs. MARSHALL.

"We may say at the outset that this volume stands high above the general level of books about books."—Daily News.

"A handsome and very readable volume; the book will attract feminine readers in particular, and will have a permanent value as an 'expert' review of a notable phase of Victorian literature."—Globe.

"Of the many books, notable and otherwise, for which this splendid date in our national history is responsible, very few, if any, are more valuable, fascinating, and instructive than the 'Women Novelists of Queen Victoria's Reign.'"
Pall Mall Gazette.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. demy 8vo. with Portrait of Author, 12s.

AN OLD SOLDIER'S MEMORIES.

By S. H. JONES-PARRY, J.P. D.L.,
Late Captain Royal Dublin Fusiliers,
Author of 'My Journey round the World,' &c.

"The author is able to impart a considerable degree of freshness to the story of his varied experiences in Burmah, the Crimea, and the Indian Mutiny."—Scotsman.

NEW EDITION, CONDENSED, REVISED, AND WITH MUCH NEW MATERIAL.

Now ready at all Booksellers', in 1 vol. large crown 8vo. with Portrait of Lady Hamilton, gilt top, 6s.

LADY HAMILTON AND LORD NELSON.

AN HISTORICAL BIOGRAPHY.

Based on Letters and other Documents in the Morrison Collection.

By JOHN CORDY JEAFFRESON,
Author of 'The Real Lord Byron,' &c.

NEW AND POPULAR NOVELS.

NEW NOVEL BY DR. GEORGE MAC DONALD.

Now ready at all Booksellers' and Libraries, in 1 vol. crown 8vo. price 6s.

SALTED with FIRE. By George MAC DONALD, LL.D., Author of 'Robert Falconer,' 'Sir Gibbie,' &c.

"Dr. Mac Donald's thoughtful and suggestive writing has long kept hold of that cultured section of the public which regards literary ability as the first requirement of the novelist."—Globe.

A FLAME of FIRE. By Mrs. H. R. HAWEIS, Author of 'The Art of Beauty,' 'Chaucer for Children,' 'The Bride's Garland,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"'A Flame of Fire' deserves commendation for a certain picturesqueness and vigour of writing, for strongly conceived incident, and for the bold incisiveness of its descriptive passages."—Globe.

BROKEN THREADS. By Compton READE, Author of 'Take Care Whom You Trust,' 'Who Was Then the Gentleman,' &c. 1 vol. crown 8vo. 6s.

"There is bright comedy all through Mr. Compton Reade's story, with just so much serious interest as is necessary to keep the book from being frivolous or trifling."
Scotsman.

London: HURST & BLACKETT, LIMITED,
13, Great Marlborough-street, W.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS.

ST. AUGUSTINE THIRTEENTH CENTENARY COMMEMORATION.

Published at the Special Request of the late Archbishop Benson.

The MISSION of ST. AUGUSTINE to ENGLAND ACCORDING to the ORIGINAL DOCUMENTS: being a Handbook for the Thirteenth Centenary. Edited by ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D., Canon of Canterbury. Crown 8vo. 5s.

GUARDIAN.—"Readers of all classes will find in its pages just what will best enable them to enter into the true meaning of this year's commemoration, and we hope that, in the words of Archbishop Benson it may be read by all English-speaking races. Enough has been said to show how valuable this book will be, not only to Churchmen but to scholars. Nobody can open its pages without reading, and nobody can read without deriving at the same time pleasure and profit."

ARNOLD of RUGBY: his School Life, and Contributions to Education. Edited by J. J. FINDLAY, M.A., late Scholar of Wadham College, Oxford; Principal of the College of Preceptors' Training College. With an Introduction by the Right Rev. the Lord Bishop of Hereford. Crown 8vo. 5s.

TIMES.—"Mr Findlay wishes to bring home Arnold's life and work to the teachers in elementary and middle-class schools, an excellent object, in the pursuit of which he deserves every success. An interesting portion of his book is the introduction by the Bishop of Hereford. . . . This brief, discriminating, and very practical paper. . . . ought to be read by schoolmasters and by parents alike, by both it will be found really valuable."

The JATAKA. Translated from the Pali, under the superintendence of Professor E. B. COWELL, by ROBERT CHALMERS, H. T. FRANCIS, R. A. NEIL, and W. H. D. ROUSE. In 6 or 7 vols. royal 8vo. 12s. 6d. each, net; to Subscribers who have paid their Subscription before the publication of each Volume, 10s. each, net. Vol. III. Translated by H. T. FRANCIS and R. A. NEIL. 12s. 6d. net.
[Ready July 1.

The LIFE-HISTORIES of the BRITISH MARINE FOOD-FISHES. By W. C. McINTOSH, M.D. LL.D., Professor of Natural History in the University of St. Andrews, and A. T. MASTERMAN, B.A. (Cantab.), B.Sc. (Lond.), Assistant Professor and Lecturer in Natural History in the University of St. Andrews. Demy 8vo. with 21 Coloured Plates, 21s.

The COLLECTED MATHEMATICAL PAPERS of the LATE ARTHUR CAYLEY, Sc.D. F.R.S., Sadlerian Professor of Pure Mathematics in the University of Cambridge. To be completed in 13 vols. Vol. XII. Demy 4to. 25s.

An INTRODUCTION to ABEL'S THEOREM and the ALLIED THEORY, including the Theory of the Theta Functions. By H. F. BAKER, M.A., Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge, University Lecturer in Mathematics. Royal 8vo. 25s. net.

An ESSAY on the FOUNDATIONS of GEOMETRY. By the Hon. B. RUSSELL, B.A., Fellow of Trinity College. Demy 8vo. 7s. 6d.

STATUTES of LINCOLN CATHE- DRAL. Arranged by the late HENRY BRADSHAW, sometime Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, and University Librarian; with Illustrative Documents. Edited for the Syndics of the University Press by CHR. WORDSWORTH, M.A. Part II. containing Statutes earlier and later than those in the "Black Book" with the "Novum Registrum" and Documents from other Churches of the Old Foundation. Demy 8vo. in Two Parts. [Nearly ready.

An ELEMENTARY OLD ENGLISH GRAMMAR. (Early West Saxon.) By A. J. WYATT, M.A., late Scholar Christ's College, Cambridge, External Examiner in English to Victoria University. Crown 8vo. 4s. 6d.

CAMBRIDGE GEOGRAPHICAL SERIES.

General Editor, F. H. H. GUILLEMARD, M.D., late Lecturer in Geography in the University of Cambridge.

A HISTORY of ANCIENT GEO- GRAPHY. By the Rev. H. F. TOZER, M.A., Honorary Fellow of Exeter College, Oxford. With Maps. Crown 8vo. 10s. 6d.

TIMES.—"The Rev. H. F. Tozer has written an acceptable, clever, and readable book. . . . The book is adapted for the general reader interested in the subject, and also to higher schools and Universities. Mr. Tozer has done his work satisfactorily and the volume is well supplied with maps."

CAMBRIDGE NATURAL SCIENCE MANUALS.—BIOLOGICAL SERIES.

General Editor, A. E. SHIPLEY, M.A., Fellow and Tutor of Christ's College.

The VERTEBRATE SKELETON. By S. H. REYNOLDS, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge. Crown 8vo. with Illustrations, 12s 6d.

CAMBRIDGE BIBLE FOR SCHOOLS AND COLLEGES.

General Editors, J. J. S. PEROWNE, D.D., Bishop of Worcester, A. F. KIRKPATRICK, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew.

NEW VOLUME.

The BOOKS of JOEL and AMOS. Edited by Rev. S. R. DRIVER, D.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Oxford. With Illustrations. Extra fcap. 8vo. 3s. 6d.

London: C. J. CLAY & SONS,
Camb. University Press Warehouse, Ave Maria-lane.

SATURDAY, JUNE 26, 1897.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
MR. WATTS-DUNTON'S JUBILEE POEM	829
A RIDE THROUGH WESTERN ASIA	830
MR. MONCURE CONWAY'S EDITION OF PAINE ...	830
SKETCHES OF NATIVE LIFE IN THE MALAY PENINSULA	831
MEMOIRS OF PETÖFI	832
DR. GASQUET'S ECCLESIASTICAL ESSAYS	833
NEW NOVELS (The Silence Broken; His Dead Past; Dracula; A Troth of Tears; Le Curé de Favières)	834—835
GODDARD'S ALEXANDER AND DIOGENES	835
ORIENTAL RELIGIONS—FRENCH BIOGRAPHY	836
SHORT STORIES—STORIES OF ADVENTURE ...	837—838
LAW-BOOKS—TRANSLATIONS	838
SCHOOL-BOOKS	839
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST OF NEW BOOKS ...	840—841
EDUCATION, TECHNICAL AND SECONDARY; AN ALLEGED ERROR OF VENERABLE BEDE'S; SCRINIA; A LOST MANUSCRIPT	841—842
LITERARY GOSSIP	842
SCIENCE — RECENT ENTOMOLOGY; ASTRONOMICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS; GOSSIP ...	842—844
FINE ARTS—HEAD'S CATALOGUE OF GREEK COINS; LIBRARY TALE; MODERN SOCIETY; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; ROMNEY'S PORTRAIT OF THOMAS PAINE; THE CITADEL OF CAIRO; SALES; GOSSIP ...	845—849
MUSIC—THE WEEK; SALE; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	849—850
DRAMA—THE WEEK; LIBRARY TABLE; THEOCRITUS ON THE STAGE; GOSSIP	850—852

LITERATURE

Jubilee Greeting at Spithead to the Men of Greater Britain. By Theodore Watts-Dunton. (Lane.)

IT is interesting to observe the growth in English poetry of the Imperial idea. That growth, necessarily, is of comparatively recent beginnings. For centuries the love and admiration of English poets were bestowed on Britain only. They felt in the smallness of the kingdom the pride we now feel in the largeness of the empire. It is of "England" alone that Shakspeare writes with such spontaneous enthusiasm — an "England" which, we should say, did not include Scotland, and certainly did not include the sister island. What inspired Shakspeare was this "little body with a mighty heart," this "precious stone set in a silver sea" — that "Albion" of which Drayton, Warner, Daniel, and William Browne discoursed with an enthusiasm only less ecstatic than Shakspeare's. Even when 'Rule, Britannia,' came to be written, all (apparently) that Thomson had in view was that "little body" which had so moved Shakspeare; it was of "Britons" only—of the men of this "tight little island"—that he sang. One notes similar limitations in Collins, in Campbell, in Southey, in Wordsworth. When Wordsworth addresses Milton, it is to tell him that "England" has need of him; he celebrates the flood of "British" freedom, but it is upon the "England" of Shakspeare and of Milton that his eyes are fixed.

Only of late years, with the "expansion" of England, has come an expansion of the poets' sympathies in this direction. Even Mr. Swinburne, whom Mr. Watts-Dunton in his characteristic dedication most truthfully describes as "our great contemporary writer of patriotic poetry"—even Mr. Swinburne, in his eloquent 'Commonweal,' his sonorous 'Armada,' his majestic 'England, an Ode,' has his intellect and fancy turned mainly (it is clear) upon the island-idol of Shakspeare. On the other hand, Mr. Swinburne was, in a sense, the first (published) poet of the Union — the first to proclaim the essential unity of the two islands, not one only, "set in a silver sea":

> Three in one, but one in three,
> God, who girt her with the sea,
> Bade our Commonweal to be:
> Nought, if now not one.

It is one of the charms and merits of Mr. Watts-Dunton's new poem that in the course of it he emphasizes in vivid and striking fashion this real and happy unity. He says that > —— sometimes falling on mine ears,

> Voices have vexed my soul with fears:
> What sorrows in the womb of future years
> Shall England know?

"How shall she stand when round the world Envy shall hiss?" He is comforted, in the first place, by the reflection that English, Scots, and Irish have fought, and will, if need be, fight again, shoulder to shoulder:—

> If but the thews of Englishmen
> In Drake's great day were strong for every foe,
> Shall England find her conqueror when
> Not English thews alone deal England's blow,
> When Scotland, that twin-sister, who,
> Alone among the nations, met her might
> With eyes unblenched, who ne'er withdrew
> From battle till her heather's blue
> Shone red with southron blood of men she slew,
> Strengthens the fight?
>
> When Ireland, once so fiercely brave
> 'Gainst England, standing now with many a scar
> From many a fight on field and wave—
> From Waterloo and Nile and Trafalgar—
> Brings memories of the men who died
> To keep two deathless Isles of Freedom free;
> When sons of three Great sisters ride
> In those proud ships with equal pride
> Ready for all the world and, side by side,
> Share Sovereignty?

This, says the poet,—

> This makes the billows leap along
> With finer gallop—leap because they know
> How love hath made the sisters strong
> To meet the foe, though all the world be foe.

The billows, however, hear "another sound"; and it is in his detection of that sound and in his insistence upon it that Mr. Watts-Dunton shows most markedly the breadth and depth of his poetical as well as of his political insight:—

> —— they hear another sound,
> A girdle of music round the orb of waters—
> Voices from those who, standing round
> All shores where ocean waves rebound,
> Stand there with British feet on British ground,
> Britannia's daughters—
>
> Voices of those whose bond of love,
> Binding them each to each o'er every sea,
> Is love of Her whose pulses move
> To peans of an Empire's Jubilee;
> Voices that come from distant lands—
> From elfin halls where gem-crowned Africa
> Opens at last her mystic hands,
> And from that eldest born who stands
> Between the world's two sister-ocean strands,
> Great Canada;
>
> And from those sisters of the South,
> Betrothed to stars of deeper soul than ours,
> Whose young lips feel the mother's mouth,
> Who still remember scent of English flowers:
> New Zealand shedding, far away,
> Fragrance of Albion o'er the vast expanse;
> Australias, round whose coral way
> Pacific billows write in spray
> A word in sunbows on the gleaming day—
> Faith's word, "Advance."

So far back as the early seventies the late Lord Tennyson, addressing the Queen in an epilogue to 'The Idylls of the King,' rebuked the suggestion that we should let Canada "go," and acclaimed "our ocean-empire with her boundless homes for ever-broadening England." Later still, when he rewrote (save for the opening stanza) his 'Hands all Round,' he called upon Englishmen to drink not only to the great name of England, but to "all her glorious empire"—to the "strong New England of the Southern Pole," to Canada "whom we love and prize," and so forth. Our lamented poet showed himself more and more appreciative of the Imperial idea. It was, however, left to Mr. Watts-Dunton to give to that idea the fullest, heartiest, most direct, and most vigorous expression yet accorded to it by an English poet.

In saying this we point to one only of the notable features of this 'Jubilee Greeting.' The poem is in two parts, and in the first the writer dwells with force and picturesqueness upon the impregnability of Britain within her ocean barriers. He opens with an address to our colonial visitors, embodying a tribute to the Queen's encouragement of colonial extension:—

> In this great year—this year of her
> Who loved you in your infant days, the Queen—
> Who when the timid sophister
> Was fain to narrow the divine demesne
> Of Freedom, bade it still expand—
> Loved you, in all her loveless realm alone—
> Ye come to her whose gentle hand
> Ay drew you to the Motherland,
> Drew you till Ocean's mighty waist was spanned
> By Britain's zone.

After this, the poet conceives the nation's Guardian Angel — the "Angel of the Channel"—as hovering over the waters whereon the Armada met its doom:—

> With Kings that Angel learnt to fight:
> Their hireling axes shivered in their helves:
> His foe is now the people's spite
> When bloody-minded nations kill themselves;
> But still, round England's sacred crags,
> His billowy squadrons roll round her ye love,
> Moving with glory of varying flags,
> With purple pennons, golden jags,
> Mirrored from every cloud that flies or drags
> Or streams above.

The poet further conceives the spirits of our forefathers as witnessing, well pleased, to-day's gathering of warships at Spithead:

> The eyes of heroes light the Past:
> The men who builded Time's heroic years,
> Who quelled the world 'neath sail and mast,
> Can see each armoured ship beyond the spheres—
> Can see yon flag of curling smoke
> From funnels of our Angel's Admiral, Steam—
> They talk of how the Armada broke
> Against Britannia's shield of oak
> Whilst there on wheels of storm with foam-flecked yoke
> He drove his team.

Students and critics of poetry will note that, for the purposes of this 'Greeting,' Mr. Watts-Dunton has invented a new and highly effective stanza, whose rhythmic and rhyming scheme furnishes the artist with opportunities here excellently utilized. Brother craftsmen will appreciate the skill with which phrase is built upon phrase, and line upon line—each stanza being wrought up powerfully to a clenching close. All intelligent readers will recognize the manliness of tone, the freshness of imagination, the unconventionality in metaphor, the vigour and verve in diction, which this poem presents. Familiarity with the whole corpus poetarum and personal association with the greatest of Victorian poets have in no way impaired the individuality of the writer, whose work conveys the impression of a strong poetic personality from which the best is to be hoped. Here, practically, is a new voice in English poetry, with an accent and a message of its own.

The 'Greeting,' it may be added, is accompanied by four sonnets "to those who carry the tongue of Shakspeare round the world." In the last of these—in which the poet gives voice to the idea of "Greater Britain" as conceived by the original coiner of that phrase, that is to say, as comprehending the United States—we meet with these happy lines:—

Come hither, pilgrims, where these rushes sway
'Tween grassy banks of Avon soft as moss!
For, if ye found the breath of Ocean sweet,
Sweeter is Avon's earthy, flowery smell,
Distill'd from roots that feel the coming spell
Of May, who bids all flowers that lov'd him meet
In meadows that, remembering Shakspeare's feet,
Hold still a dream of music where they fell.

A Ride through Western Asia. By Clive Bigham. With Illustrations. (Macmillan & Co.)

THIS is a modest title for a journey occupying a twelvemonth, embracing such difficult country as Armenia, the more unfrequented parts of Persia, Western Turkestan and Kashgar, and the Russian steppes to the northward. But the author, though he shows sufficient command of language, never uses it superfluously. His method, indeed, is to be commended. He does not inflict anything in the nature of a diary on the reader; on the contrary, he does not scruple to leave an occasional hiatus on his track. He will, perhaps, on entering a new region, devote only a few sentences of introduction to it, but they are so well chosen and condensed that we feel that for a work of this kind more would have been out of place. Besides, he is careful to note the general character and appearance of the district, and the strategic qualities of its strong places and positions; and the outline is further cleverly filled in, not merely with sufficient general information—chiefly second-hand, of course—on its history, resources, and so forth, but with the writer's personal impressions, and the experiences of the party in their intercourse with the natives everywhere. The pictures of this intercourse—sometimes stormy and critical, but varied and graphically told—must be drawn true to life, for they each have the unmistakable characteristic impress of the nation concerned—Turk or Persian or Russian or Chinese.

On the Russian steppe, though he records some pleasant conversations, he confesses to have been bored:—

"The little posthouses were clean, and the people pleasant, but the monotony of the road was intolerable.....The same Steppe, the same scattered groups of Kirghiz, the same little green villages and white posthouses, the same thunderstorm in the afternoon—how tired I got of them! It was quite an event to pass a gang of convicts guarded by a battalion of soldiers, manacled, but accompanied by their wives and children."

Travelling through Kurdistan from Baghdad to Kermanshah and Hamadan in February, he found the country under deep snow, so there is not much to be said,

"nothing worse happening than frost-bitten ears. We passed strings of Haj caravans and corpse caravans going to Kerbela. It is the great wish of all devout Shiahs to be buried near the shrine of Ali, and the horrid practice of transporting corpses there in batches for burial is resorted to. Some of the rich Persians we met were seated in kejavehs, but they looked miserably cold, and we were better off riding. The early morning and the late evening were the most trying, as when the sun was not up the cut-up snow on the track refroze, and we had to ride over a bad verglas. Once we had to cross ploughed land frozen to the hardness of iron, and very rough. Here I remember we passed a solitary Persian muffled up to the eyes, with a long grim-looking coffin slung across his saddle-bow, a sinister figure. Frequently we had to stop to shoot horses which had broken their legs and been left by their owners to die. The nights were spent in little Kurdish huts, where we were almost stifled by the smoke, and lived on partridges which cost us twopence apiece."

But this was pleasanter than their immediately preceding experience of riding through "the black fetid mud....up to the girths" in the streets of "four of the filthiest towns in the world," in the flooded country between Baghdad and the Persian frontier. The description of these great floods in proximity to, and partly submerging, a vast extent of desert, suggests great possibilities for this country under a different administration.

Asia Minor was closed to inquisitive Englishmen after the first Armenian massacres. Mr. Bigham attributes his successful passing of the various barriers to his good fortune; but a great part of his success, both here and elsewhere, may be ascribed to the personal qualities of the traveller, who seems to have made but very moderate use of the almighty bakshish, trusting in emergencies to diplomacy of the straightforward kind, which is so disconcerting to the Oriental. Thus, at the Persian town of Kara Aineh, the deputy ruler refused him an escort, but forbade him to proceed without one, and advised his return into Turkey:—

"His tone was irritating, so I produced my English passport, which I knew he could not read, and said:—'This is an order of the Queen of England. It orders all people on the way to help me, and if you do not, you will prepare trouble for yourself. I shall go on to-morrow morning, whether there is an escort or not, but it will be better for you if there is one.' 'It is no good; it is impossible to get soldiers,' said the deputy, going out of the room. I went to sleep, feeling depressed, but at four o'clock next morning there were five mounted soldiers at the door, who wanted to know if we were ready to start. The deputy had despatched a message to the Ked-Khoda in the night, and the latter had sent word that he had heard of the Queen of England, and would provide an escort for her subject."

There is a graphic description of the theft of his revolver—a serious matter—and its prompt restoration on the appearance on the scene of the chief eunuch and his farrashes, to the confusion of a rascally postmaster and his accomplices. But by the great majority of the Persian officials he was treated with true Persian courtesy and attention. Hunting parties and other festal entertainments were arranged for him, and guides and cicerones were provided or volunteered their services.

The notes of the journey through Russian Turkestan—along routes till recently practically closed to the traveller, but now, with Russian permission, offering few obstacles beyond those due to the character of the country—are short, but interesting. He was especially struck with the topographical skill and knowledge of the Russian officers, and declares the ordnance maps shown him at Osh to be the best he ever saw. The Turkomans—whose fighting qualities it was supposed would make them a valuable addition to the Russian power—are, we are told, a failure as cavalry, and are besides decreasing in numbers—their drastic treatment by Skobeleff having, perhaps, broken their spirit somewhat too effectually. The writer describes also the working of the Russian system of suppressing all subject nationalities, and fostering a stereotyped, but apparently genuine form of loyalty, and supplies some useful and significant details as to Russian railways, actual and prospective. He speculates on the proposal to divert the Oxus into the Caspian. The question of the levels is not yet, we believe, settled, and it may even be doubted whether the so-called ancient bed of the river, the Usboi, is anything but the remains of a chain of desiccated lakes. Anyhow, by the time the river had turned the "Great Karakum desert" into a "fertile cornfield," it would hardly be a navigable stream to the "N.E. corner of Afghanistan." It is rather loose geography, by the way, to say that "the Oxus rises just by Cabul and flows north"; and surely Samarkand is not supplied with water from the Oxus.

We may demur also to the derivation of the name Oxus from the Turkish Ak-su. Ethnologists will dispute the assertion that the Sarts are a people of Turki race who have settled in the towns. It is pretty well established that they are fundamentally of Tajik, i.e., Iranian origin. Nor is it universally admitted that the European races originated in the Pamir. We can hardly admit that "the word Pamir means in Persian 'roof of the world'"; and the Persian of the 'Shah Nameh' is by no means such an obsolete language as our author seems to imply. These, however, and a few slips in Eastern words and names, due probably to the absence of the author's final revision, are but slight defects in a volume of travel, the interest and merits of which are beyond the average.

The Writings of Thomas Paine. Collected and edited by Moncure Daniel Conway. 4 vols. (Putnam's Sons.)

Rights of Man: being an Answer to Mr. Burke's Attack on the French Revolution. By Thomas Paine. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Moncure Daniel Conway. (Same publishers.)

MR. CONWAY is as enthusiastic about Thomas Paine as Cobbett was, and he has done far more than Cobbett to explain the services of Paine to his contemporaries. The elaborate biography of him which Mr. Conway gave to the public five years ago is now supplemented with a complete and carefully revised edition of his works. Whether every scrap of paper upon which Paine wrote anything has an added value is extremely doubtful. Greater men than he have had their memories tarnished by injudicious admirers printing what did not deserve to see the light. A selection from Paine's writings would stand a better chance of perusal than the contents of these four volumes; and the reader who conscientiously plods through them will not share all Mr. Conway's admiration for his hero.

As a writer Paine did considerable service in America to the cause which he espoused. He crossed the Atlantic replete with grievances, when some of the North American colonists were brooding over imaginary wrongs. Samuel Adams in New England and Patrick Henry in Virginia were the apostles of political change owing to personal discontent; their private lives were not immaculate, and they took refuge in patriotism from inconvenient charges. In England, as Paine said, he had "no disposition for what is called politics." He had occupied a humble office in the Government service of his native land—an office which was thought to be a sufficient reward for Burns. Being discharged, not without reason, Paine was reinstated as a matter of favour, and he was again discharged for neglect of duty. If Paine had been allowed to remain in the service of the Government at home, and if Franklin had not been dismissed from the office of Deputy Postmaster-General of North America, it is possible that neither Samuel Adams nor Patrick Henry would have succeeded in convincing many of his fellows that their duty consisted in severing the link between the thirteen colonies and the motherland. Paine was married in 1759; in 1760 his wife died. In 1771 he was married for the second time, and in 1774 he separated from his wife. He started for North America in 1774 to begin a new career in a new world, and to reap rewards denied to him in the old.

Nothing had occurred to Paine himself to embitter him against the land of his birth, unless it were his second marriage. He found the American colonists dissatisfied and agitated, fearing tyranny which was a figment of excited brains, and grumbling about grievances akin to those of their fellows in Great Britain, and he set himself—with a vigour which cannot be disputed, and an implacability which cannot be excused—to decry and denounce the system of government in the land of his birth, and to depict a Utopia which has never been realized in the land of his adoption. The publication which first made him famous and mischievous was 'Common Sense,' which turned the heads of our colonial fellow citizens, and of which some of the opening sentences were not the most absurd, such as that in which Paine affirmed, and men read without a laugh, that "Government, like dress, is the badge of lost innocence; the palaces of kings are built upon the ruins of the bowers of Paradise." However, 'Common Sense' contributed to foment discontent in America, as the 'Letters' of Junius had done in a lesser degree in England, American discontent being exhibited in action by Washington and his army. What Paine expected to follow was less easy than he thought, and it has not yet been achieved: "We have it in our power to begin the world over again. A situation similar to the present hath not happened since the days of Noah until now. The birthday of a new world is at hand." For him the best argument was force. His pamphlet appeared in January, 1776, and the Declaration of Independence was not made till July. Till then, indeed, any colonist had as good a right as any other to his opinions; but Paine held that those who were loyal to the Crown, which still represented legal government in America, were traitors, saying that the line of distinction between English soldiers and the inhabitants of America taken in battle was that "the first are prisoners, but the latter traitors. The one forfeits his liberty, the other his head."

Reviewing Paine's works from a purely critical point of view, we are struck with the evidence which they afford of the writer being a man largely endowed by nature and lamentably wanting in culture, vain to a degree which it is difficult to measure, and as dogmatic as he was vain. He could express himself with clearness and force; if he had been as able to wield the rapier as the bludgeon, he would have been as formidable and inimitable a controversialist as Junius, Gibbon, or Paul Louis Courier. He was simply vulgar when he meant to be emphatic. Of the humour which never fails nor ceases to charm there is not a trace in his writings; of audacity in statement, the lowest form of literary art, there is overabundance. His imagination was equal to his humour. After the death of Montgomery at Quebec he wrote a 'Dialogue' between the ghost of the departed and "an American Delegate in a wood near Philadelphia," in which the ghost says that he still loves "Liberty and America," and is entrusted with the important errand of warning the Americans "against listening to terms of accommodation from the Court of Britain." Moreover, the ghost conveys the interesting information: "God did not excite the attention of all Europe—of the whole world—nay, of angels themselves, to the present controversy for nothing. The inhabitants of heaven long to see the Ark finished, in which all the liberty and true religion of the world are to be deposited." Mr. Conway has been diligent in annotating this edition, but he has omitted to mention in a foot-note where this "Ark" is now to be found. The following specimen of vulgarity—and it is but one out of many which might be given—is taken from 'The Crisis':—

> "Let them call me rebel, and welcome, I feel no concern from it; but I should suffer the misery of devils were I to make a whore of my soul by swearing allegiance to one [George III.] whose character is that of a sottish, stupid, stubborn, worthless, brutish man. I conceive likewise a horrid idea in receiving mercy from a being who at the last day shall be shrieking to the rocks and mountains to cover him, and fleeing with terror from the orphan, the widow, and the slain of America."

Paine has a high and dishonourable place among the denouncers of the land of their birth. His example is one which, on many a 4th of July and on other days, orators and journalists have vainly striven to surpass. In 'The Crisis' he wrote:—

> "There are such things as national sins, and though the punishment of individuals may be reserved to another world, national punishment can only be inflicted in this world. Britain, as a nation, is, in my inmost belief, the greatest and most ungrateful offender against God on the face of the whole earth: blessed with all the commerce she could wish for, and furnished by a vast extension of dominion with the means of civilizing both the eastern and the western world, she has made no other use of both than proudly to idolize her 'thunder,' and rip up the bowels of whole countries for what she could get: like Alexander, she has made war for sport, and inflicted misery for prodigality's sake."

If Paine's writings are read critically, it is noteworthy that offences against good taste, such as those which have been quoted, are many in number, just as they can be found in abundance in the speeches and writings of Burke, with whom he measured himself in the 'Rights of Man,' which Mr. Conway styles "the earliest complete statement of Republican principles." The truth is that the extreme and indefensible assertions of Burke concerning monarchy are as wanting in tact and value as those of Paine respecting republicanism. The essential difference between the two men is that the wildest views of Burke on the side which he blindly espoused are infinitely less absurd than the dithyrambics of Paine. Burke was often mistaken; Paine was seldom right. The statesman can sit at Burke's feet as a disciple, while he would consider it ignominy to treat Paine as a master. Burke was a political philosopher who had moments which were not wholly lucid, while Paine was a consistent demagogue of the type of Thersites or Cleon.

Mr. Conway has a respect for Paine's 'Age of Reason' which is strange in a man of his acuteness and accomplishments. It is true that Paine's contemporaries were shocked and terrified to learn that the religion which they professed had been controverted and scorned. Here again the argument of the writer was less obnoxious than his manner. His unbelief was not so uncompromising as his phrases, and if he had been a greater master in the art of putting things, he might have lived without reproach and died without leaving a name to be denounced.

In this edition, as we have said, all his writings have been rescued from an oblivion which was the kindest fate which could have befallen some of them. The best of his works are not his plans for the government of this world and his dogmatic decisions concerning another, but the inventions which prove his real capacity. His essay on yellow fever and how to prevent it in America is worth nearly the whole of his other writings. The iron bridge which he invented and constructed remains a masterpiece of engineering skill. Our forefathers would have looked askance upon any avowed reader of Thomas Paine's writings. Those of the present generation who read them in this complete and reverently edited form will be neither blamed nor edified, and their conclusion, after perusing them, will probably be that they cannot understand how an author of Mr. Conway's great ability and merit can regard Paine as deserving a high place among the instructors and benefactors of mankind.

In Court and Kampong: being Tales and Sketches of Native Life in the Malay Peninsula. By Hugh Clifford. (Grant Richards.)

IN the nineteen tales and sketches which compose this book its author has endeavoured to give the reader an insight into the manners, customs, and character of the Malay as he may still be found on the east coast and in the remote interior of the Malay Peninsula—of the native who has not yet been affected by contact with white men, and is "still in a state of original sin." There is, indeed, a good deal of sympathetic and picturesque description of tropical night and tropical day, of jungles and rivers, of moonlight and sun-glare; but throughout the book the chief aim is to portray character, to reveal to the European thoughts, passions, and aspirations which unfold themselves but slowly even to him who for long years has lived the life of his Asiatic associates in places remote from the sound of Western civilization, and has striven patiently to dispel the reticence which causes Orientals to seem in our eyes quite other than they are. In this effort Mr. Clifford has achieved a considerable success; and as he writes also in a bright style which has a distinctly literary flavour, his work is not less welcome for the information which it gives than interesting as a story-book. Those who delight in tales of thieving, treachery, bloodthirstiness, cruelty, and ill-starred lovers' violent ends will find much in this volume to suit their tastes; in fact, here and there the descriptions seem a little too gruesome: the realism and the detail might with advantage in some cases have been modified. It is the old story. If we are told that Medea has killed her children and have witnessed the last struggles of her passion before she goes behind the scenes, we do not care to be further horrified by an exact description of the jugulatory process. As examples of what we mean, the description of the Pĕn-angal—the wraith of a woman who, having died in childbirth, comes back to this world to frighten small children—may be referred to, and the story of the old crone who disinterred the still-born child.

One of the sketches deals with the cock-fights which are so dear to Malays, and with the contests between buffaloes that have been trained for the purpose. The author justly remarks that in the protected Malay states there are strong reasons why the British authorities ought not to interfere with these native customs, though the pious hope may be expressed that indirect means may be employed which will gradually cause such amusements to be dropped; Mr. Clifford is, however, hardly justified in regarding fox-hunting as perhaps as cruel as bull-fighting. The people who hunt foxes take no interest whatever in the mere worrying of the fox by the hounds; the excitement and exhilaration of a hard ride on horseback are what they care for; whereas the bloodshed and the fierce passions of the combatants are the principal attractions to those who watch two buffaloes struggling to the death. A melancholy picture is drawn of the condition of prisoners in independent Malay states, and we have good reason for believing that the picture is not too highly coloured; but when Mr. Clifford—who himself occupies an official position under the Straits Government—goes on to say that all these things "are happening to-day within shouting distance of Singapore," he will make his readers regret that he has not been a little more precise in his statement. The only place "within shouting distance" of Singapore is Johore, and we are far from convinced that the late Maharaja was the kind of man who would have allowed barbarities in his gaols. However that may be, the treatment of prisoners seems to be a subject with which—in the protected states—British influence might fittingly deal, and could deal with effect. It is not easy to say of tigers what they may do and what they may not, when hunger prompts them. Tiger stories at second-hand seldom lose anything in the telling; Mr. Clifford has a story, a thrilling story, excellently told. According to him seven men with spears and two women were sitting inside a thatched house one night when a tiger at the second attempt broke through the roof and killed all the occupants, save one man who hid himself. We feel, however, misgivings about this incident; would any tiger spring on to a roof without being certain what was underneath it? if he rolled off once would he spring a second time? While as to the seven armed men, they were singularly lacking in the courage and resource which natives usually display when menaced by a wild beast whose ways they understand.

We give here a specimen of the author's style, from the story of Bâyan the Paroquet, which tells how lovers' rivalry may end in a land where passion is quickly aflame and reverence for life is small:—

"Now it chanced that To' Mûda Long and Bâyan both desired the same girl, and she, it would seem, preferred the Paroquet to the young chieftain. Perhaps his good voice and the skill with which he sang.....turned the balance in his favour.....It only remained to seek a pretext for a quarrel, and this was easily found."

Then is described how "the young chieftain," having picked his quarrel, made a murderous assault one afternoon on Bâyan with his kris, and how the combatants were separated by the older men who were present:—

"Next morning Bâyan arose betimes, and, taking the long bamboos, in which water is stored and carried, he went down to the river to have his morning bath and to fetch water for his house.....Bâyan bathed in the river, filled his bamboos, and began to carry them to his house; but To' Mûda Long had been watching his opportunity, and he and two of his followers, all fully armed, had taken up a position in the middle of the path, by which Bâyan must pass back to his house. 'Thou wast over arrogant to me last night,' said To' Mûda Long as Bâyan approached, 'and now I will repay thee.' 'Have patience, To' Mûda, have patience,' said Bâyan, 'thy servant did not speak to thee; it was the boys who were unmannerly, and thy servant, being an old man, did reprove them!' 'It is not for the like of thee to reprove men, and the said boys are my people, the sons of my loins. I will cover their shame,' said To' Mûda Long, for the wolf was determined to pick a quarrel with the lamb, bleat he never so wisely. 'Have patience, To' Mûda!' again cried poor Bâyan, but the words were hardly out of his mouth before To' Mûda Long struck at him with his spear, but missed him. Then, as Bâyan retreated step by step, defending himself with the clumsy bamboo from the deft spear thrusts, no more words passed between them At last the spear went home. 'Bâsah! Bâsah! I have wetted thee!' cried To' Mûda Long, and he went in at his enemy, kris in hand, Bâyan beating him about the head with the now empty bamboo. When he got to close quarters, the deed was soon done, and the body of Bâyan the Paroquet, with seventeen rending wounds upon it, lay stark and hideously staring at the pure morning sky. There was loud talk of blood-money, and equally loud talk of reprisals, but nothing came of it; and though I often meet To' Mûda Long, who is as soft spoken and gentle in his manners as ever, Bâyan's death was never revenged, and the fact that he ever lived and sang is now well-nigh forgotten, even by those who knew him, and loved to hear his tales."

It is of Bâyan the singer, of To' Mûda Long, "the young chieftain," and of others like unto them, that Mr. Clifford has stories to relate, and they are stories that will bear reading a second time.

Memoirs of Petöfi. By Zoltan Ferenczi. 3 vols. (Budapest, Franklin Company.)

NEARLY half a century has elapsed since the greatest Hungarian poet perished upon the battle-field. Since that fatal day hundreds of books and pamphlets have been written about him; his poems have been translated into nearly every printed language, and periodicals wholly devoted to the elucidation of facts connected with his life or works have been published. Hitherto no adequate life of him has appeared. Numerous biographical sketches, all more or less inaccurate, have been issued from time to time and in several languages, but the ideal story of the poet, whose strong passions, strange adventures, and fiery genius are so emblematic of his time and clime, yet remains to be written.

The work under notice, consisting of three volumes and more than a thousand pages, is not, and scarcely professes to be, such a performance as we have indicated. Ferenczi's volumes contain a consecutive series of sketches, data, documents, and carefully authenticated reminiscences of Petöfi, and will be an invaluable storehouse for such a biography as suggested, should the author appear. For the present, and perhaps for all time, whoso wishes to know what Petöfi was and what he did must resort to this work. It is issued under the auspices of the Kisfaludy Society, and is all that its author claims for the result of his several years' unwearied research. Not a stone has been left unturned to arrive at the truth; unlike previous biographers, who have copied one another's legends with the exactitude of a Hebrew copyist, dreading to alter a tittle of the text, Ferenczi has sought out every iota at the fountain head. He has unearthed, and furnishes in facsimile, birth, marriage, and other certificates; he gives scholastic and military documents, personal affidavits and contemporary records, and, in fact, everything relating to Petöfi which bears the appearance of fact. He even devotes an entire chapter to the poet's ancestry, and supplies a pedigree carrying his descent back to the middle of the seventeenth century. Petöfi's ancestry was lowly, and such researches are about as valuable as those devoted to the forbears of Burns, only, whilst the Scottish bard's pedigree was purely imaginary, that of the Hungarian would seem to be trustworthy. That the work is overladen with foot-notes is unavoidable; the very nature of it necessitates them. The solution of a mathematical problem could not be worked out more precisely than has been the story told in these volumes. From the poet's birth on the 31st of December, 1823, till his death at the sanguinary fight of Segesvár on the 31st of July, 1849, every fact about him has been carefully collected and impartially set forth.

The story of his career has not been divested of its charm by the minute investigation it has undergone. Most of the romantic episodes of his life are shown to have really taken place, although many unimportant myths have been disproved or ignored. It is doubtful whether he was a "New Year's child," as generally alleged, even with his parents' approval; apparently he missed that distinction by a very short time, and was born at midnight on the 31st of December, 1823. Petöfi's father was a butcher, or, as we should deem it, a breeder of horses, sheep, and cattle. For a long time he was a wealthy man, possessing, according to history, countless hordes of live stock; but Ferenczi has managed, by means of the sheriff's schedule, to furnish an exact count. It was not until five years after his marriage that his hopes were flattered by the birth of a child—of Alexander, the future poet. During the boy's earlier years nothing was spared likely to conduce to the lad's future welfare, his worthy parents trusting to see him some day become an ornament of one of the learned professions. Those who know anything of the poet's story know how strangely he thwarted his parents' wishes. A circumstance that had much to do with Petöfi's after-career was the total loss of his father's fortune through a succession of unforeseen and undeserved calamities. Henceforth the poet's life was a constant series of migrations, thoroughly typical of a son of Arpád. His short residence at Aszód may be deemed one of the most fruitful in interest of his resting-places, for, as Petöfi tells us himself,

"1. Here I began to make verses.
2. Here I was first in love.
3. Here I first wanted to become an actor.
The versemaking was the result of love. The cause of my wishing to become an actor was not so remarkable as the results."

Theatre-going was strictly forbidden for pupils at the Aszód grammar school, and the poet's tutor, having discovered that young Alexander was a constant attendant at the dramatic entertainments of the town, informed the lad's father. The elder Petrovics (which was really the poet's family name, i. e., Peterson), when he heard this terrifying news, deemed his son was on the high road to perdition. To cure the lad of his stage madness he at once resorted to the strongest coercive means, not even foregoing personal chastisement. These hard measures drove Alexander from home, and started him on those wanderings which continued more or less during the remainder of his too brief life. After vain efforts to obtain a livelihood as an actor, the unfortunate lad was reduced to such extremities that, in his seventeenth year, he enlisted as a soldier. Barrack life and all its attendant misery proved nearly fatal to the young poet, although he tried to solace his despair by the composition of poems and songs. A severe illness probably saved him from deserting, and when he was able to leave the hospital a benevolent doctor managed to procure his discharge from the army. After a short stay under the parental roof and a few more wanderings the poet took up his residence in the town of Pápa, where at the High School he resumed his scholastic career, and formed a lifelong friendship with two lads who afterwards became famous as Orlai, the artist, and Jókai, the novelist. The three youngsters were ambitious, and planned for their future careers that Orlai should be an author, Jókai an artist, and Petöfi an actor. For what different purposes fortune destined their genius!

After various abortive attempts to become an actor, and after being literally driven into literature, Petöfi contrived to get a volume of poems published. The book excited little attention with the public, and only drew unfavourable notice from the press, so that the number of copies sold did not pay for the cost of the book's production, and yet it contained many pieces that are now world-famous. Gradually they found their way into the nation's heart, and Petöfi became a name to conjure with. The poet was not only full of imagination, he was passionate and impulsive. Of the many tales told to illustrate his idiosyncrasies none is more characteristic than those of his love affairs. Of these, the story of his intense affection for Ételka is the most extraordinary. This tale, which Ferenczi has spent much labour in investigating, is variously narrated by the biographers, but the following appear to be the facts.

Ételka Csapó was the sister-in-law of an intimate friend of the poet. When Petöfi met her at his friend's house she was only about fifteen, a beautiful fair girl, just emerging from childhood. Soon after this meeting her awfully sudden death, apparently from some complaint of the heart, revealed to the agonized poet how strongly he had loved Ételka, and so intense was his anguish at her loss that his friends feared for his reason. After he had helped to lay her body in the coffin, he watched by its side, unable to believe, notwithstanding medical testimony, that the beautiful girl was in anything more than a trance. When the fair form was carried away and interred, he followed as one in a dream, and for many days, and even during many tempestuous nights, he haunted the churchyard, often sobbing for hours on the earth where his beloved Ételka lay. And this was no young man's passing fancy, for not only did the poet embalm her memory in his 'Cypress Leaves,' a volume of memorial verse, but in after years he was found on the anniversary of her loss making a pilgrimage to her last resting-place, and weeping there bitterly. Other loves and losses gradually restored Petöfi to his senses, and after various amatory adventures he met Julia Szendrey, the lady who eventually became his wife. Naturally, the course of true love was rugged, and, being Petöfi's, was romantic. Julia's well-to-do parents objected to entrusting their daughter's fate to a poet whose present lot was as precarious as his future was uncertain. Their opposition only inflamed Petöfi's ardour. He determined to make Julia his bride or to end his existence. The lady decided to become his, eluded her parents, and wedded the man of her choice. Count Teleki, a great admirer of the poet, lent his country seat and all its belongings to the young couple, and there they spent the first weeks of what seems to have been a happy wedded life.

Great as Petöfi's renown had already become, it was nothing to the popularity he acquired when, during the political troubles of 1848 and 1849, he poured forth his patriotic songs in continuous profusion. His 'Talpra Magyar' was adopted as the national hymn, the 'Marseillaise' of Hungary. Naturally the poet volunteered to serve in the national army; he was given a captaincy, and for distinguished services in the field was placed on the staff of General Bem, who made him his adjutant. There are various anecdotes told in these 'Memoirs,' not only of his bravery against the enemy, but of his conflicts with the military authorities. He would not conform to the rules and regulations of military life. Ultimately his young life ended in a minor engagement against the Russians on July 31st, 1849, and his mangled form, unnoted and unknown, was flung into a common grave with the bodies of many comrades as gallant, but less distinguished. For many years the Hungarians refused to believe their beloved young poet had perished on the battle-field. Again and again the whole nation has been agitated by rumours that Petöfi was alive, a prisoner in the hands of the Russians, a slave in Siberia, or the like, and more than once persons have not only claimed to have seen him still alive, but even have had the audacity to try to pose as the poet himself. Much heated controversy has taken place, and much ink has been wasted, over the circumstances of the poet's death, but that all that was earthly of Petöfi perished in the fatal fight at Segesvár no reasoning man can now doubt. Ferenczi has thoroughly investigated the whole story, and supplies all the trustworthy evidence procurable.

Petöfi is so little known in England that it has been deemed preferable to draw attention to the story of his life rather more than to the manner in which it is told in these volumes. Still it should be stated that this sketch of the poet's life has been most carefully executed, and that no effort or labour has been spared to obtain authentic data for it; perhaps it is owing to this excessive carefulness that it scarcely conveys to our mind such a vivid picture of the man as he was as do some of the hasty and less elaborate sketches of him made by his contemporaries. It is, indeed, a difficult task to represent clearly to "the mind's eye" that being whose many eccentricities, defiance of conventionality, and, it must be confessed, overwhelming self-esteem, all combine to make up the living personality known as Petöfi.

A word of praise is due for the copious indices and other bibliographical information with which each volume is furnished, but the three portraits are badly executed and in no way expound the beauty of the two known originals by Barabas.

The Old English Bible, and other Essays. By Francis Aidan Gasquet, D.D., O.S.B. (Nimmo.)

Whatever Dr. Gasquet writes is of interest, and thanks are due to him for these essays, reprinted for the most part from Roman Catholic reviews. The chapters on monastic libraries and Scriptoria, although they do not contain much that is novel, bring the facts together from a number of scattered sources: those on Thomas Brunton, Bishop of Rochester (a forgotten preacher); on Henry VI.'s visit to Bury St. Edmunds; on monastic lesson-books; and on William of Worcester's Collectanea (to which is added an account of his correspondent Selling and of the school of Greek at Canterbury), are full of rare information, and are real contributions to history. Best of all are the essays on 'Recusancy,' in which the stores of Dr. Gasquet's notebooks are laid open, and on 'Religious Instruction in England,' which sketches the contents of the works of Pagula, De Burgo, Gorham, Mirk, Felton, and many other theologians whose names are familiar enough to many who never read a word of what they wrote. All of these articles will serve to enhance Dr. Gasquet's established reputation for an agreeable style, wide reading, and extensive manuscript research. Unfortunately he has also reprinted his two essays on the pre-Reformation English Bible, and in so doing has, we believe, shaken the confidence which his readers have felt hitherto in his scholarship and in his judgment. He has risked his reputation for the sake of a theory: that "the versions of the Sacred Scriptures edited by Messrs. Forshall and Madden, and commonly known as Wyclifite, are in reality the Catholic versions of our pre-Reformation forefathers," and were not of Wyclifite origin. At the end of the first essay he is "not prepared to deny that Wyclif may have had something to do with Biblical translations which we do not now possess"; at the end of the second he has reached this length. The theory is propounded to explain the fact that copies of the "Wyclifite" version were in the hands of orthodox persons. This fact is adequately established, and the evidence was worth reprinting, for it has been too much ignored. But because a few individuals were licensed to have copies of this version it cannot be said to follow that this was the Catholic "authorized version" and was allowed "free circulation." Nor can it be taken to disprove the Wyclifite origin of that version. The evidence of Wyclifite origin depends first on the entry in an Oxford manuscript that Nicholas Hereford wrote the translation to Baruch iii. 20. Dr. Gasquet thinks that this may be true, but observes that Hereford, though in 1382 he was a Wyclifite, was orthodox ten years later, and died a faithful son of the Church. Next Purvey's connexion with this version must be disproved or explained away, since he was undoubtedly not orthodox. "I believe," says Dr. Gasquet,

"that practically the only direct evidence to connect Purvey with this translation is the fact that his name appears in a single copy of the revision as a former owner."

Of the convincing indirect evidence adduced by Forshall and Madden he says no word.* It is derived from the General Prologue, found in ten manuscripts; but in Dr. Gasquet's view the Prologue cannot be by either Wyclif or Purvey, or by any "ardent follower of Wyclif," because the writer states that he used "scrupulous care to give the meaning of Holy Writ according to the interpretations of approved doctors and common glosses." But can Dr. Gasquet have read the Prologue? In passage after passage the writer shows himself a Lollard of the Lollards. One may suffice: "To speke onour of God and of his lawe..... is matir and cause whi prelatis.....sclaundren men and clepen hem lollardis, eritikis."

With regard to the evidence of Hus, Knighton, and Arundel, hitherto supposed to prove beyond doubt that Wyclif made a translation, Dr. Gasquet does not in the first essay go further than to say that Hus's statement is an exaggeration, since believers in the Wyclifite origin of the translation admit that Wyclif translated only a part, and not the whole of the Bible. But his suspicions are already aroused as to the existence of any translation by Wyclif on the ground that

"so far as he is aware Wyclif lays no stress on, or indeed in any way advocates, having the Scriptures in the vernacular, except so far as is implied in the claim that the Bible is the sole guide in faith and practice."

It is extraordinary that these words should have been allowed to stand after Mr. Matthew's attack upon them in the English Historical Review, and to the passages there quoted in proof to the contrary others might be added. In the second essay Dr. Gasquet proceeds to cancel the evidence of Knighton and Arundel by means of new and amazing interpretations. Knighton states that John Wyclif "translated from Latin into English the Gospel which Christ gave to clerks and teachers of the Church." We are told that "it is natural to understand that he refers to Christian teaching and ministry, so often then as now spoken of as the Gospel." Similarly Arundel, when he says that Wyclif "filled up the measure of his malice by devising the expedient of a new translation of Scripture in the mother-tongue," meant nothing "more than the vernacular rendering of passages of Holy Scripture, be they long or short." As for Hus, his statement is "obviously incorrect"; but Dr. Gasquet fails to notice that if the Wyclifite Bible is not Wyclifite, then Hus's evidence is unimpeached. Sir Thomas More himself, from whose statements Dr. Gasquet was led to some of his conclusions, admits that Wyclif made a translation, damned "not because it was new, but because it was naught." And again More says, "The clergy agreed that the English Bibles should remain which were translated afore Wyclif's days," but, as none existed except the "Wyclifite" version, it should follow that it was written "afore Wyclif's days," and Dr. Gasquet is not prepared to credit that. Further, we must no longer believe that there was any persecution of Lollards for using "the authorized Catholic version." We are to understand that Archbishop Arundel entirely approved the translation of the Scriptures, for Dr. Gasquet quotes "an old manuscript" used by Strype which records this fact. But the same old manuscript was printed in full by Foxe, and the sentence which follows immediately on the passage quoted is, "but after became the most cruel enemy that might be against English books." Dr. Gasquet has "come across one or at most two references," in the examinations of people charged with Lollard opinions, in which any mention is made of the use of the vernacular Scriptures, i.e. the case of John Turner and that of Ralph Mungin, "charged with having the Gospels of John Wyclif, whatever that may mean." We may call his attention further to Foxe's account of Margery Backster, to the depositions of Richard Fletcher, Nicholas Belward, and Sir Hugh Pie, and to the story of Richard Hilman; and as the passage in Purvey's Prologue, "God graunte to us alle grace to kunne wel and kepe wel holi writ, and suffre joiefulli sum peyne for it at the laste," means, according to Dr. Gasquet, "take trouble to understand God's word," it seems necessary to notice yet another sentence of Purvey's, not open to this explanation: "The lewid people crieth after holy writ to kunne it and kepe it with gret cost and peril of here life." Lastly, there is, Dr. Gasquet tells us,

"a curious piece of evidence, which seems to point to the conclusion that the archbishops and clergy of England at one time actually proposed that Parliament should sanction an approved vernacular translation.....Apparently this project was opposed by John of Gaunt, and it came to nothing."

The passage on which this extraordinary statement is based was printed by Foxe in 1563, in the first edition of the 'Acts and Monuments,' which happens to be full of misprints. It runs:—

"Also it is known to many men in the time of King Richard II., that into a parliament was put a Bible [not a misprint for Bill in Dr. Gasquet's opinion] by the assent of ii. archbishops and of the cleargy to adnull the Bible that time translated into Englishe, wyth other Englishe bokes of thexposition of the Gospell which when it was hard and seene of Lordes and of the commones. The [sic] Duke of Lancaster Jhon answered thereto right sharply, sayinge this sentence, we will not be refuse of all other nations. For sithen they have Gods law, which is the law of our belefe, in their own language we wil have oures in English, whosoever saye nay."

Dr. Gasquet need never want subjects for magazine articles if all history is to be rewritten in this fashion.

* A passage in Foxe, 'Acts and Monuments,' iii. 285, appears to have hitherto escaped notice. Foxe quotes from Tho. Walden in his second tome: "John Purvey was the library of the Lollards and glosser upon Wickliff."

NEW NOVELS.

The Silence Broken. By G. M. Robins (Mrs. L. Baillie Reynolds). (Hurst & Blackett.)

THIS "story of the unexplained" is written with so much earnest conviction on the part of the writer that it is really a pity it is not likely to be received in quite the same spirit by the average reader. Ghosts are apt to prove rather unmanageable properties in fiction. This one, for instance, can find no better means to convince her husband that she "died true" than to go to the trouble of standing for her portrait to an artist whom she had never seen in life, thereby showing an equal want of ingenuity and of any sense of humour. The last quality, indeed, is apparently seldom destined to be mated with a tendency to be greatly preoccupied with "the unexplained." And it needs something like genius to make any spiritual apparition nearly as interesting as corporeal personages in a novel.

His Dead Past. By C. J. Wills. (Chatto & Windus.)

IN many respects this is the most pleasing of Mr. C. J. Wills's numerous novels. The style of writing is easy and simple throughout; there are several dramatic and well-managed situations; and two of the characters (Woffles, "our leading tragedian," and Col. Finch, the club whist-player) are interesting. The title of the book refers to a young man who, while still at the "army-crammer's" establishment, marries the protégée of Woffles. The lady is disappointed to find her husband is poor and without prospects, and they willingly separate. Subsequent events cause the hero, Frank Tradescant, to regret these proceedings. We do not know if the writing of the book and its publication occurred without more than the usual interval of time. Mr. Wills's chronology is difficult to follow in any case. In one place he says his history deals "with events which occurred twenty years ago"; and there is a subsequent interval of thirteen years and more. Yet the hero at the age of sixteen drives in a carriage with rubber tyres, and speaks of a reigning emperor "who was sure to avenge Waterloo sooner or later." The book can be read by young and old with equal pleasure.

Dracula. By Bram Stoker. (Constable & Co.)

STORIES and novels appear just now in plenty stamped with a more or less genuine air of belief in the visibility of supernatural agency. The strengthening of a bygone faith in the fantastic and magical view of things in lieu of the purely material is a feature of the hour, a reaction—artificial, perhaps, rather than natural—against late tendencies in thought. Mr. Stoker is the purveyor of so many strange wares that 'Dracula' reads like a determined effort to go, as it were, "one better" than others in the same field. How far the author is himself a believer in the phenomena described is not for the reviewer to say. He can but attempt to gauge how far the general faith in witches, warlocks, and vampires—supposing it to exist in any general and appreciable measure—is likely to be stimulated by this story. The vampire idea is very ancient indeed, and there are in nature, no doubt, mysterious powers to account for the vague belief in such beings. Mr. Stoker's way of presenting his matter, and still more the matter itself, are of too direct and uncompromising a kind. They lack the essential note of awful remoteness and at the same time subtle affinity that separates while it links our humanity with unknown beings and possibilities hovering on the confines of the known world. 'Dracula' is highly sensational, but it is wanting in the constructive art as well as in the higher literary sense. It reads at times like a mere series of grotesquely incredible events; but there are better moments that show more power, though even these are never productive of the tremor such subjects evoke under the hand of a master. An immense amount of energy, a certain degree of imaginative faculty, and many ingenious and gruesome details are there. At times Mr. Stoker almost succeeds in creating the sense of possibility in impossibility; at others he merely commands an array of crude statements of incredible actions. The early part goes best, for it promises to unfold the roots of mystery and fear lying deep in human nature; but the want of skill and fancy grows more and more conspicuous. The people who band themselves together to run the vampire to earth have no real individuality or being. The German man of science is particularly poor, and indulges, like a German, in much weak sentiment. Still Mr. Stoker has got together a number of "horrid details," and his object, assuming it to be ghastliness, is fairly well fulfilled. Isolated scenes and touches are probably quite uncanny enough to please those for whom they are designed.

A Troth of Tears. By Clement A. Mendham. (Digby, Long & Co.)

'A TROTH OF TEARS' contains a large measure of all the faults of which a novel is capable. It is difficult to read the book with patience. Two consecutive sentences, selected almost at random, read thus:—

"An unaccountable determination had seized him to confront Sir Richard, which may probably be accounted for by the fact of the effect which the shocks of his former life had left. A strange excitability, which had aroused into action the lingering consequences of his dreadful illness, was upon him."

The writer's meaning sometimes appears dimly through his words, but it more often happens that he is unintelligible. The scenes on board ship are a travesty of nautical life.

Le Curé de Favières. Par Georges Ohnet. (Paris, Ollendorff.)

WE suppose that in these democratic days respect is due from us to the novelist who has the largest circulation in the world, and that there can be no doubt that M. Georges Ohnet's 'Le Maître de Forges' enjoyed a larger sale than any other novel of our times. In his new book M. Ohnet lies open to all the attacks of "Gyp" and his other literary enemies. Nothing can be feebler than the construction of the book, and its interest to us is slight. We have not taken in the past the same unfavourable view of some of M. Ohnet's books which has generally been that of the critics, and we have detected in them some of the qualities which the public seem to have found; but we cannot think that he is keeping up to even that level which he had previously attained.

A Satirycall Dialogve, or a Sharplye-Invectiue Conference betweene Allexander the Great and that truely Woman-hater Diogynes. [By William Goddard.] Imprinted in the Lowcountryes [? Dort ? 1615] for all such Gentlewomen as are not altogeather Idle nor yet well Ocvpyed. Edited by John S. Farmer. (Privately printed.)

Two other works of Goddard are extant, viz., 'A Neaste of Wasps' and 'A Mastif Whelp,' two copies of the former and one of the latter having survived the ravages of Time, who happily does not confine his rapacity to what is purely excellent and essentially precious. Of the work now before us only one copy is known to exist—that in the British Museum. So Goddard's productions have all narrowly escaped extinction. And it cannot be maintained that the loss to literature would have been very serious had they not done so—had they all been extinguished. But yet they have their value. In respect of both their language and their ideas they are of some service in illustrating an age that can never be too much illustrated—the age of Shakspeare and Bacon.

Goddard is one of the minor—or the minim?—satirists of the time. The best satirical spirit expressed itself in the favourite literary form of the age—in the dramatic form; but even then Juvenal had his followers, and in Donne and Marston we have the crude beginnings of the style that reached its perfection in the hands of Dryden and of Pope. Satire was in the air, so to speak, at the close of the sixteenth century. There is a passage in Shakspeare's 'As You Like It' of great interest in this connexion. "The melancholy Jaques" confesses to a passionate longing to be a satirist—to criticize and abuse society with all the freedom of an "allowed fool":—

I am ambitious for a motley coat.....
I must have liberty
Withal, as large a charter as the wind,
To blow on whom I please.....
Invest me in my motley. Give me leave
To speak my mind, and I will through and through
Cleanse the foul body of the infected world,
If they will patiently receive my medicine.

But the duke makes short work of all his profession of a moral purpose, and when he asks,

What for a counter would I do but good?

answers peremptorily,

Most mischievous foul sin in chiding sin;
For thou thyself hast been a libertine
As sensual as the brutish sting itself;
And all the embossed sores and headed evils,
That thou with licence of free foot hast caught,
Wouldst thou disgorge into the general world.

Evidently the duke—perhaps we may venture to say Shakspeare himself—is altogether impatient of those gentlemen who, forgetful of their own shortcomings, assume the right to lash everybody else—to "chide" every "breather in the world but" themselves, "against whom," if they were wise, they would "know most faults." Often enough the satirist deserves to be scourged quite as much as any one of his victims, or even more. It is an act of amazing self-confidence to take upon oneself the office of social censor and judge. And Jaques's aspirations in this line are very severely rebuked.

But Goddard, who without any of Jaques's wit yet so aspires, had, unhappily for himself, no good duke to repress him, and one of the results is this misogynical piece now reprinted. Of course he assures us that his intentions are good. He informs "the senseless Censurer" that

Wholly this book was made folly to show.

To be sure, its talk is in parts very gross; but

Pack hence, precision. Cry'st it is obsceane?

—as, indeed, a person not at all prudish might very justly cry—

Dive deeper, shallow pate. Know what I mean.

Clearly Goddard is far from easy in his mind as to what respectable readers will think of his verses:—

What for a counter would he do but good?

And certainly it is a little awkward to have to explain how admirable his meaning is. We are reminded of the Οὗτος ἀνὴρ artists. It is as if we saw a placard stuck up at the entrance of some unfragrant alley, "Please to take notice it is very wholesome here." We are afraid we cannot credit him with any profound moral emotion, or allow him to plead "facit indignatio versum." He tells his dubious stories with considerable unction, and he is more amused than outraged by them. He aims rather at entertainment than edification.

But his couplets and his stanzas are worth a glance. Even the meanest Elizabethan possesses some interest for us. The occurrence of "turn" in

> Nor can I turne my tongue
> To chaunte a Syren-charming quau'ring dittye may give some support to the lection "turn" in Amiens's song, altered by some editors into "tune," although it is the reading of the oldest texts:—

> And turn his merry note
> Unto the sweet bird's throat.

And other such points will offer themselves to the student. Wherefore, on the whole, we thank Mr. Farmer for the reproduction he has given us.

ORIENTAL RELIGIONS.

THOUGH nominally a new edition, Mr. W. Crooke's monograph on The Popular Religion and Folk-lore of Northern India (Constable & Co.), in two volumes, will probably be entirely new to the majority of our readers, for the first edition was printed in India and only a few copies reached this country. It deserved a better get-up as regards paper and print, though it might easily have been kept within the compass of a single volume, for the benefit at least of the purchasers of the new edition, for which an exceptionally high price has been fixed. Mr. Crooke's revision for this new edition has merely consisted of tolerably copious references to tolerably well-known Western parallels. It is to be regretted that he should have cumbered his book with so much general treatment of the specific superstitions he has noted during his official work in India. The time has at length arrived when a certain amount of specialization is accepted from folk-lorists, and we do not want réchauffés of the researches of Messrs. Tylor, Lang, and Frazer served up on all occasions. Mr. Crooke would have done better to have increased his Indian and decreased his Western examples. He would have done better, perhaps, if he had explained the somewhat capricious divisions that he has adopted for his subject. Mr. Crooke has revived a good word for the minor deities: he calls them "godlings," and his first three chapters deal with the godlings of nature, heroic and village godlings, and the godlings of disease. In the first of these chapters he deals with a multitude of minor deities, ranging from mother earth to aërolites. He includes all parts and all periods of India to make up his omnium gatherum, and the total result is somewhat confusing. Except the bare fact that somewhere in India at some time such and such an object has been worshipped or regarded with dread, Mr. Crooke has not very much that is instructive to say about godlings of nature, nor do his Western parallels help him out, and these again are thrown down on the paper without much discrimination. What is said of this opening chapter applies in large measure to the two succeeding ones on "godlings," but the two following chapters show something more of generalizing power, and they deal respectively with the worship of the sainted and of the malevolent dead. This refers to the marked distinction which is found throughout the whole folk-lore spirit world between the dead regarded as friendly and as malevolent. Mr. Frazer, in an interesting essay on 'Burial Customs' with which he commenced his career as a folk-lorist, refers entirely to the malevolent aspect; but this is contravened by many facts of folk-lore, and Mr. Crooke has, at any rate, the merit of recognizing and collecting those facts in his fourth chapter. The second volume of Mr. Crooke's work deals with a somewhat miscellaneous set of subjects: evil eye, tree and serpent worship, totemism and fetishism, animal worship, magic, and rural festivals. These topics cover what are, or have been, the most disputed questions in folk-lore. Mr. Crooke has for the most part wisely refrained from discussing primary causes, and has contented himself with describing the actual superstitions current on these various subjects throughout Northern India. But while he refrains in almost every case from giving a general description of the subject in its comparative aspects, on most occasions he makes a point of referring to the European parallels. These could, of course, be largely increased, especially as Mr. Crooke has evidently not made himself acquainted with continental research on these subjects; but we should have preferred to have seen them altogether removed to make place for several topics which Mr. Crooke has unaccountably left untouched or only very incidentally treated. Thus there is no section devoted to marriage ceremonies, which throw so much light upon the history of the family. Initiation ceremonies are almost entirely absent, though there is very much indeed to be learnt from them; and one would have been grateful for much more specific information on sacrificial rites among the Hindoos. A further difficulty with regard to Mr. Crooke's method is the fact that he treats on Hindoos without much discrimination, and includes pure Mohammedan customs, Parsee importations, and Buddhist survivals on the same level with the lowest practices of the hill tribes. The first thing to do in folk-lore is to discriminate origins in the hope that one day folk-lore may have its illumination to offer to ethnology. In no country is there so much promise of such illumination as in India, which is, as has so often been pointed out, a self-contained world containing almost all the types of humanity from the lowest to the highest. Mr. Crooke had an exceptional opportunity of making a really important contribution to folk-lore if he had used his abundant materials a little more critically and with a little more system. Even as it is, he has collected much of great value, and his work will for a long time be indispensable to the serious student of myth and custom, while its value is largely increased by an admirable series of photographs of Indian folk-lore objects.

The Buddhism of Tibet, or Lamaism. By L. Austine Waddell, M.B. (Allen & Co.)—This work not only adequately summarizes the results of previous investigations, but is also itself a valuable addition to our knowledge of probably the most curious of the many curious developments of Buddhism. The extent of the literature bearing more or less directly on the subject of Lamaism may be inferred from the bibliographical list, chiefly supplementary to that of Schlagintweit ('Buddhism in Tibet,' 1863), given in appendix ii. pp. 578–583. Regarded merely as a useful summary, this book is welcome; but it is much more than this. Its distinguishing feature is a careful and minute account—the result of personal experience—of the abstruse and complicated theory and practice of Lamaism as it actually exists at the present day. Mr. Waddell, who is well known by his many contributions to learned publications as a student of Eastern religion and folk-lore, has studied Lamaism under exceptionally favourable circumstances, and the account which he has here given would seem to be well-nigh exhaustive. It is not easy to suggest any topic connected with this religion—its divinities, saints, monastic orders, sects, ritual, music, architecture, and so on—to which he has not devoted his attention. The mass of facts thus accumulated will appeal not only to scholars who are bent on tracing the various stages by which the Buddhism of Buddha has arrived at this extraordinary combination of priestcraft and statecraft, but also to many others who are more generally interested in the religious, social, or political questions of the Further East. Exception may be taken to the inference drawn by the author on p. 9, from a passage in the 'Mahâvaṁsa,' that Buddhism flourished at Alexandria. The Alasaddâ of the 'Mahâvaṁsa,' like the Alasanda of the 'Milindapañha,' refers to a city usually known as "Alexandria ad Caucasum," situated somewhere in the Hindu Kush. Again, on p. 393, note 4, there seems to be some confusion of thought between the Nandas of Magadhâ, who are in all probability historical; the Nâgas of Padmâvati, who are certainly historical; and the purely imaginary Nâgas, or serpent deities. But, considering the very great variety of subjects dealt with in this book, mistakes of this kind are remarkably few. In the transliteration of Sanskrit words Mr. Waddell is usually consistent, but he is sometimes consistently wrong. There is no reason, for instance, why hînayâna should be consistently deprived of its first long vowel (everywhere, apparently, except in the index), while its companion mahâyâna is always correctly spelt. There are also too many careless printers' errors both in English and Sanskrit words. With these exceptions, which can easily be remedied in a second edition, we have nothing but praise both for the book and for the way in which it has been published. The illustrations—about two hundred in number—are to a great extent taken from drawings or photographs made on the spot, while others are of objects since acquired by the British Museum, and now exhibited in the Gallery of Religions arranged by the late Sir Wollaston Franks.

It is remarkable that though in Europe and in the East a considerable impetus has of late been given to the study of Buddhism—a religion no longer existing in its old home in India—the interesting and no less ancient cult of the Jains, still known all over the country, has received no general attention from students. Good material now, however, exists for such as desire information. Since the publication some ten years ago (Athen. No. 3063) of the first volume of his Gaina [Jain] Sûtras, Prof. H. Jacobi has contrived to amass further material for the study of the system, and in his lucid introduction to his second volume in the "Sacred Books of the East" (Oxford, Clarendon Press) he not only gives a sketch of the chief work done in the interval in this field of research, but traces further the history of the sect in its relation both to early Buddhism and to the several schools of orthodox Indian thought. It cannot be pretended that the Jain writings are attractive reading as literature; but some knowledge of this school is necessary for a correct appreciation of Indian thought as a whole. Though amongst the most severely ascetic of the religions of the East, Jainism has from time to time numbered sovereigns amongst its converts, and, curiously enough, has inspired a series of gorgeous ecclesiastical monuments in striking contrast to the severity of its creed.

FRENCH BIOGRAPHY.

Two French Queens, and other Sketches. By Caroline Gearey. (Digby, Long & Co.)—If "every one reads French in these enlightened days," the difficulty of perusing that "language as it was written two or three hundred years ago" must surely exist chiefly in Miss Gearey's imagination. As it happens, the authors of that period to whom her very limited researches have introduced her—Brantôme, Marguerite de Valois, De Thou, and St. Evremond—have received every elucidation from nineteenth century editors and compilers. Still, if, as we suppose, this work is designed chiefly for the benefit of young girls, whose historical diet is nowadays too much restricted to the dry bones served up in text-books, these sketches may to a certain extent be useful. But the story of Elizabeth of Valois, wife of Philip II. of Spain, is made wearisome by a simplicity of diction verging on childishness, by frequent repetitions of facts, by the harping on "the stern looks of the stern bridegroom" and "the sweetness of" the bride's "very sweet nature"; whilst the comicality of the attempt to make the life of Margaret of Valois, the most typical woman produced by the Renaissance, a fit subject for her readers may be judged by the statement that "Catherine of Medicis found time to exercise a prudent supervision over the education of her little daughter, who appears to have been brought up well and wisely." For the rest, moralizings are frequent, dates are few and not always correct, spelling and grammar are occasionally at fault. "Arrogate" is used for abrogate; "Belzunc" for Belzunce. If "a Spanish historian" wrote "coprirsi la testa," he did not use his own language. We find "Montecuculli," "Guilio," "Rochefoucald," "Points d'enfants," &c. Accents are omitted or too frequently misused. We are told that Marie Antoinette's son and daughter were at Versailles in 1737, and that the boy died in 1739, though that queen herself, we need scarcely say, was not born till 1755. Michaud states that the Empress Josephine, born in 1763, came to France when fifteen, i. e. in 1778, and was placed in a convent till her marriage with Comte de Beauharnais; not till after that event is she likely to have gone to Court. Yet Miss Gearey tells us that prior to the birth of Madame Royale, December, 1778, the fifteen-year-old creole was on such familiar terms with Marie Antoinette as to discuss with her the probable sex of the expected royal infant. No authority is given for this statement. Again, the reader is led to suppose that the National Fête of July 14th, 1792, took place in 1791. We will not object to July 15th, 1793, being here given as the day of Charlotte Corday's execution, for July 15th, 17th, and 19th have all been named by different historians of eminence; but we do consider that, as in the sketch of the Duchesse d'Angoulême prominence is given to the Duchesse de Berri, "the personification of valour," and mention made of her expedition into La Vendée in 1832, the scandal connected with that adventure should not have been ignored.

La Marquise de Condorcet, 1764–1822. Par Antoine Guillois. (Paris, Ollendorff.)—On the 28th of December, 1841, M. Arago, when discoursing on the life of his confrère Condorcet to the Académie des Sciences, referred to that philosopher's union with Mlle. de Grouchy in 1786. He observed, "Un géomètre qui se mariait semblait enfreindre un principe du droit," and recalled to his audience a letter written by D'Alembert in 1767 to Lagrange on hearing of the latter's marriage ('Œuvres de Condorcet,' publiées par Général O'Connor et M. F. Arago, vol. i. pp. xcv, xcvi). And now M. Guillois, writing in 1897 of the same event, is inspired to make verbatim the above epigram, and to support it with the same quotation from D'Alembert (pp. 65, 66). Such barefaced plagiarism is too frequent among compilers of M. Guillois's class. In fact, of Madame de Condorcet's life with her husband, 1786 to 1794, the one interesting as well as honourable portion of her career, her latest biographer has nothing to add to the details already published by MM. Arago and Michelet. We note, however, that whereas M. Guillois gives the 29th of March, 1794, as the date of Condorcet's death, M. Arago names the 8th of April ('Œuvres,' &c, vol. i. p. clvi), and in this Michelet appears to corroborate him (Michelet, 'Femmes de la Rév.,' pp. 101–103). The reminiscences of the heroine's childhood recorded by M. Guillois are inane; her experiences as chanoinesse are so meagre that they have to be eked out by those of another lady attached to another house. The story of the lovers and intrigues of the Marquise's widowhood—a scandal which, had Condorcet possessed the gift of second sight, might have cooled his advocacy of female franchise—comes strangely from M. Guillois, who has already charged Michelet with calumny for having accepted as not altogether incredible the innocuous idea that Mlle. de Grouchy's heart was not free when she married the middle-aged philosopher. The "Marquise" is intended to whet our appetite for the history of her uncle the Président Dupaty "en préparation," whilst we are from time to time informed that her brother-in-law Cabanis and her friends Madame Helvétius and the poet Roucher have already been served up to the public by the same caterer.

The two volumes of Lettres de Marie Antoinette, edited by M. Maxime de la Rocheterie and the Marquis de Beaucourt, can boast of little new material, one or two notes of trifling interest having alone rewarded the editors' researches in that direction. The real value of these volumes consists in the sifting of documents which have long been before the public, and in the consequent exposure of what M. de Beaucourt here condemns as the forgeries admitted into the collections of royal correspondence published by M. d'Hunolstein in 1864 and by M. Feuillet de Conches in 1864–73. The moment those letters appeared their genuineness was impeached, M. Sainte-Beuve eventually confessing that his original faith in them had been misplaced. There is no need to enter into the merits of that bygone dispute, and we shall merely give some idea of the extent to which M. de Beaucourt has carried his work of expurgation. Out of about one hundred and forty-two documents given by M. d'Hunolstein, ten only are accepted, and some of these are subject to reservation. The whole of the forty-four letters from the queen to her sister, the Archduchess Marie Christine, are condemned, and, indeed, their fictitious character seems evident enough so soon as we compare them with the undoubted productions of Marie Antoinette's pen. M. Feuillet de Conches printed sixteen letters from the queen to the Duchesse de Polignac; ten are here condemned as spurious. Numerous letters to the Princesse de Lamballe are also rejected, including M. F. de Conches's most precious possession, that which fell from the princess's hair at the moment of her massacre, and which is stained with her blood. It is certainly extremely awkward under these circumstances that as the Austrian Government now refuse that access to the Imperial archives which was granted years ago to M. F. de Conches, the letters copied by him from those sources have to be accepted subject to reservation by M. de Beaucourt. Sundry edifying details are furnished of the practices of autograph collectors and of autograph manufacturers. M. d'Hunolstein is believed to have paid no less than 85,000 francs for the packet of royal letters so disdainfully treated by M. de Beaucourt. M. de la Rocheterie, as might be expected, supplies an admirable and sympathetic study of the unfortunate queen. By-the-by, among the many portraits published of her we do not remember having ever seen a copy of the pastel drawing taken of her by Goëstier, a Polish artist, during her imprisonment in the Temple (Moniteur, October 25th, 1793).

Gabriel Monod: Portraits et Souvenirs. (Paris, Calmann Lévy.)—The essays here reprinted are only partly biographical; others, such as that on the Passion play at Ober-Ammergau, are descriptive. There is an interesting memoir of J. R. Green, and excellent notices of Vinet, Fustel de Coulanges, J. Darmesteter, and V. Duruy. The articles are marked by the scrupulously fine and liberal spirit that distinguishes M. Monod, and they are clearly, but not brilliantly written. There are some slips in the appreciative account of Green. He did not obtain a Fellowship at Jesus in 1861, nor, although a High Churchman, can he be said to have ever been a Ritualist. M. Monod writes about "les idées étroites et conventionnelles du ritualisme et de l'orthodoxie anglicane" with a very vague knowledge of what he is talking about, but he supplies an excellent account of 'The Short History.' A really admirable article on Georges Waitz deserves reading, and so does the essay on 'Richard Wagner et Bayreuth en 1876.'

SHORT STORIES.

MR. H. G. WELLS has happily given up the exaggerated horrors of 'The Island of Dr. Moreau' for stories quite in his best vein. He has all Jules Verne's convincing insouciance in telling the most wildly improbable stories. This result is largely gained by a solemn precision in the preliminary and unimportant details of the story. Thus in The Plattner Story (Methuen & Co.), as in 'The Apple,' 'The Argonauts of the Air,' and, in fact, all the stories dealing with the marvellous, the reader is prepared to accept anything after the minute description of the principal characters' commonplace vulgarity or the inglorious dulness of their surroundings. There is hardly any mystery left in their adventures, for one feels that it is almost impossible for anything out of the way to have happened to such people. This effect is heightened by a rigid avoidance of any attempt to dwell on the marvellous character of the prodigy described, be it a flying machine, or the fruit of the tree of knowledge, or what not. Precision in the unessential and vagueness in the essential are really the basis of Mr. Wells's art, and convey admirably the just amount of conviction. In his more possible stories he shows that his constant choice of commonplace characters is no fortuitous matter; all his characters would in themselves be fearfully dull, but by catching and crystallizing the point of reality which is to be found everywhere, in showing the individuality which underlies the veneer of gross conventionality, he often makes such stories of a most seizing interest.

East-End Idylls, by A. St. John Adcock (Bowden), is a collection of tales of contemporary life in the East of London. They are very varied in subject, and are written vividly and brightly. In one or two instances they would bear more detail with advantage; this is especially the case with one entitled 'The Street that was Condemned,' which is the best of the collection, and shows genuine pathos. The stories are provided with an introduction by Mr. J. G. Adderley, of St. Philip's Mission, Plaistow, who claims that "fiction" and "falsehood" are not synonymous terms, and that Mr. Adcock's narratives are as true as they often are sad. We should like them better if we did not find such expressions as "along with."

The White Hecatomb, and other Stories, by W. C. Scully (Methuen & Co.), is a volume which contains thirteen tales and sketches, mainly of Kaffir life and legend. All are carefully written, and nearly all are well worth reading. One of the best, entitled 'A Tramp's Tragedy,' is an exception to the majority in not dealing with native African subjects. It tells of the love of a Boer girl for an English working man, and is full of genuine pathos. The story in question might well have been worked out on a larger scale. It is as good as any in a previous volume by the same author, entitled 'Kaffir Stories.' Two in the volume now before us are stated to have appeared in the South African Telegraph. Such expressions as "I have lived longer than you in spite of the drought on the top of your head" and "I felt like a long-tailed finch trying to fly against the wind on a wet day" show a sense of humour. A quotation from the 'Table-talk of Mohammad' (so called) involves an obvious ambiguity which spoils the sense of the passage. It runs: "I have not left any calamity more hurtful to man than woman."

M. Marcel Prévost passes in Paris as the man who best understands the heart of woman. Unfortunately his success has caused him to be run after by that special public which appreciated 'Les Demi-Vierges,' and in his newest volume, Dernières Lettres de Femmes (Paris, Lemerre), there are signs that he has been writing rather for Gil Blas than for the best public and for posterity. It contains, however, a letter from a soldier's wife—dated 1806, and written in an admirable imitation of the Empire style—which redeems the book.

STORIES OF ADVENTURE.

Two years ago we reviewed a charming little book by Mr. R. H. Davis about a young American who was so fascinated by the picture of a royal princess in an illustrated paper that he pursued her all over Europe to lay his love at her feet; but he married somebody else. The idea seems a favourite one with the author, though his Soldiers of Fortune (Heinemann) begins where the other one ended; for here the young man meets in the first chapter a girl whom he had never seen, but whose portrait he had cherished in his watch for four years; but he also marries somebody else in the end. The young man is not so good as Mr. Davis's young men generally are. He is meant to be very noble and manly, and he has done all manner of fine things in different parts of the world—fought with the English in the Soudan, made railways in Mexico, and so on; but his casual nonchalance is a trifle exaggerated, and his obvious modesty, which, of course, only serves as a foil to his fine actions, becomes a little priggish; moreover, he hungers too much for appreciation from the woman he loves. In a word, he seems more a woman's man than a man's—he is an Anthony Hope hero manqué. But the adventures and exciting incidents in the book are admirable; the whole story of the little revolution in Olancho is most brilliantly told, though if one special incident were to be picked out, the story of the drive to the sea coast with the murdered president's wife is the most breathless. In spite of the hero this is really a great tale of adventure.

Though the practised novel-reader is familiar with the Australian story of squatter life and bushrangers, he will find that Mr. G. Firth Scott's The Track of Midnight (Sampson Low & Co.) has many elements of freshness. Midnight is the name of an arch-bushranger and squatter whose identity is only revealed at the last page. The love story is adequate; but the book depends for its interest on the local colour and the fighting, and in these passages the writer is at his best. The scene is laid in New South Wales, and the time is prior to the Victorian gold discoveries. For home readers one or two terms ought to have been more fully explained, such as "billy" and "billy-can"; and such a sentence as "He understood better when subsequent events had transpired" occurs too frequently.

LAW-BOOKS.

A First Book of Jurisprudence for Students of the Common Law. By Sir Frederick Pollock, Bart. (Macmillan & Co.)—This work is addressed to "readers who have laid the foundation of a liberal education and are beginning the special study of law." It is "not intended to lay out a general system of the philosophy of law, nor to give a classified view of the whole contents of any legal system." The object of the work is to lend a "helping hand" and a "warning voice" to the law student whilst making his way through the stage of "confusion" and "illusion" which he, in common with the students of most other sciences, encounters on the threshold of his career. The work is divided into two parts. Part I. deals with "General Legal Notions," and comprises chapters on the "Nature and Meaning of Law," "Justice according to Law," "The Subject-Matter of Law," "Divisions of Law," "Persons," "Things, Events, and Acts," "Relation of Persons to Things: Possession and Ownership," and "Claims of Persons on Persons: Relation of Obligations to Property." Part II. treats of "Legal Authorities and their Use," and is of a more practical character than Part I. It comprises chapters on "The Express Forms of Law," "The Sources of English Law," "Sovereignty in English Law," "Custom in English Law," "Law Reports," "Case-Law and Precedents," and "Ancient and Modern Statutes." Some parts of the book will interest not merely English-speaking students, but English-speaking lawyers generally, and even laymen. We refer in particular to the last four chapters of Part II. The chapter on "Law Reports" contains a succinct history of law reporting in England from the thirteenth century to the establishment of the 'Law Reports' in our own time, and the author's account of the early reports, and particularly of the Year-Books, will be found of much interest. These venerable works, we are surprised to find, are still occasionally referred to in the courts, and nowadays "oftener than they were fifty or sixty years ago." In the chapter on "Ancient and Modern Statutes" Sir Frederick Pollock calls attention to the great care with which Acts of Parliament were framed in the time of Edward I. At p. 332 he remarks that

"the great statute of 'Quia Emptores,' which is still embodied in the law not only of England but of most lands settled from England, concludes by defining what are now called the 'extent' and the 'commencement' of its operation with precision that modern draftsmen have restored only in our own time."

The book will be found a most excellent introduction to the study of law. We notice one typographical error, and only one, viz., "ensuing" for ensuring, in a quotation on p. 338.

The Principles of Equity and the Equity Practice of the County Court. By Andrew Thomson, LL.D. (Clowes & Sons.)—In the year 1865 an Act of Parliament, known as "the County Courts Act, 1865," conferred upon the county courts equitable jurisdiction to deal with a great variety of cases where the property, the subject of the litigation, does not exceed in amount or value 500*l*., the jurisdiction so conferred being concurrent with that of the Court of Chancery. Dr. Thomson's work treats chiefly of this equitable jurisdiction of the county courts, and deals with the subject exhaustively. But the work also, and almost of necessity, enters largely into a discussion of equitable principles in general. The book is carefully and lucidly written, and the author has been at great pains to make his work useful to practitioners in the Chancery Division of the High Court as well as to practitioners in and to the officers of the county courts. Dr. Thomson makes, on p. vii of the preface, a suggestion which, we think, is open to criticism. "It is submitted," he says,

"that a very considerable improvement would be effected if a court were constituted in the immediate vicinity of the Royal Courts of Justice, presided over by a judge of training and experience in equity business, whose primary, if not sole business, would be the trial and hearing, for the metropolitan districts, and perhaps some of the adjoining home counties, of cases within the equity jurisdiction of the county court."

The tendency of recent legislation has been, if not to fuse "law" and "equity," at least to bring them into closer relations with each other. The above suggestion, if carried into effect, would, in our opinion, be a step in the opposite direction.

Copyhold Enfranchisement with Reference to the Copyhold Act, 1894. By Arthur Draycott. (Effingham Wilson.)—This work deals with a very minute division of the law relating to copyholds. It is, the author says, intended as "a guide (1) to the steps to be taken to compel enfranchisement, and (2) to the compensation which ought to be paid to the Lord and Steward respectively." The work contains only thirty pages, and is one of the smallest law works we have ever seen. It treats the subject of enfranchisement in a popular style and may interest laymen, to whom in general the larger works on the subject would probably be repellent.

La Codification du Droit International de la Faillite. Par D. J. Jitta. (Sampson Low & Co.)—We have recently had the pleasure of noticing the valuable labours of a Dutch professor in the cause of Eastern law; we have now the agreeable duty of recommending to our readers—that is, to such of them as take an interest in juridical studies—the perusal of a very thoughtful work on European law by a professor of the same nationality. The subject of which Prof. Jitta treats is of much practical importance in modern times, for, as he truly observes, "Le cas d'un failli qui possède des biens ou qui a des dettes et des créances dans plusieurs pays n'est nullement rare." International arrangements now enable us to follow up crime in foreign countries; it is plain, therefore, that there is no impossibility in making analogous arrangements for following up debts and credits. The author does not conceal from himself the fact that the task of making such arrangements must be attended with difficulty—a difficulty, to use his own language, almost enough to make a man giddy. He has, however, applied himself to the task with vigour. The book consists of numerous chapters, each discussing and attempting to solve some particular question, and of two "avant-projets," or suggested forms, of which the first may be roughly described as that of a statute to be passed by the legislature of individual countries, the second as that of an international arrangement or treaty, to be agreed to by a community or aggregate of countries. The author is, no doubt, quite right in his opinion that the desired reform cannot be carried out without measures of both kinds; but it seems to us that they can scarcely be framed usefully for practical purposes without a knowledge of the existing law of each country which joins the alliance. The author would probably admit this, but would add, quite truly, that it is part of his business in presenting a new scheme to civilized nations in general to give approximate forms, embodying general principles, which may be adapted afterwards to the circumstances and requirements of each particular nation. Prof. Jitta has evidently an intense and laudable desire to promote his legal views for the benefit of mankind; if we have a fault to find with him it is that his language is sometimes so enthusiastic as to become poetical rather than legal. This is the case, for instance, when he states that there is a general tendency towards "universality, at least as the music of the future," and then laments that "this music is played at different pitches, which must be distinguished if cacophony is to be avoided." But who can write in the eloquent Gallic tongue without catching something of the glowing figurative spirit of the Gaul? Prof. Jitta's idea is excellent, whatever we may think of his metaphors, and we wish all success to his efforts.

TRANSLATIONS.

THE title of Mr. Arthur James's Plutus of Aristophanes up to Date; or, Mammon made Righteous (Ingalton Drake), might lead the reader to expect a modern burlesque of the ancient play, with a new plot, based upon the vagaries of company promoting and the "Kaffir Circus."

This expectation would be misleading. What Mr. James has done is to prepare a translation of the play of Aristophanes, in which, in order to make it more attractive to his Eton pupils, modern slang and modern allusions are substituted for ancient. As an expedient for arousing the attention of schoolboys—and those, as his graceful dedication says, not the "riper scholars," but others "less fine of brain, but of compacter thews"—this is both legitimate, and probably very wise; yet it is a question how far the result is satisfactory from the literary point of view. A translation may be good, and a parody may be good; but a cross between the two is likely to be unsuccessful. It is too like putting new cloth on an old garment, the result of which is upon record. From Zeus and Plutus the transition is rather abrupt to bicycles and Vanderbilts. The following is an example of Mr. James's method:—

Car. Russia's great Czar on Plutus rests his crown;
For him the Irish members throng the House.
Ch. And there 's the manning of the Navy! Come now!
Car. Who pays for the Indian troops in the Soudan?
Is 't not through him poor Jameson lies in gaol,
And those who tipped the wires for Jameson's raid?
Ch. And wasn't it for you the Claimant lied?
And our support of the Khedive in Egypt?—
Car. And the Eiffel Tower—
Ch. May it fall upon your thick head.

The fluency of the modern allusions is often spoilt by the necessity of making them correspond with those in the original; and the net result is neither Greek nor English. The 'Plutus' is not the most spirited or characteristic of the plays of Aristophanes; but, ingenious as Mr. James is, we doubt if his version, read by itself, would give any one unacquainted with the original a high conception of Greek humour. But for its primary purpose in illustrating the Greek to English schoolboys it may well have been very successful, as it deserved to be; and its publication may be useful to other schoolmasters and tutors.

In Virgin Soil, by Ivan Turgenev (Heinemann), Mrs. Garnett has translated the last of Tourguénief's great novels. This is not, however, its first appearance in English. The late Mr. Ashton Dilke, who was a student of the Russian language and literature at a time when very few possessed such knowledge, published an excellent translation. In this novel Tourguénief boldly deals with the Socialistic propaganda in Russia. The hero, Nezhdanov, is a déclassé, who has all the qualifications for regenerating his country except that he is too much of an idealist. But the hour has not come for his efforts. He must mutter in the words of Hamlet:—

The time is out of joint; O cursed spite,
That ever I was born to set it right.

After having made some abortive attempts, he realizes his powerlessness and commits suicide. His intended bride, the resolute Marianna, becomes the wife of a man who is more practical and capable. The object of Tourguénief is to show us how little ripe as yet his country is for these theories and dreams of the doctrinaire. The peasant does not understand his would-be deliverers. Markelov in the novel is bound and handed over to the police by the villagers. The characters are drawn with great vigour, especially the rowdy and ignorant merchant, Golushkin, and the wonderful old couple who reproduce the quaint manners of the age of Catherine. Tourguénief in others of his novels has loved to satirize this period. In the present case he seems to reproduce the Athanase Ivanovich and Pulcheria Ivanovna of Gogol's tale. Paklin is a mere eccentricity. Around all these actors are the simple, ignorant peasantry. Nezhdanov is impetuous and cannot bide his hour. The work will be done by the patient Solomin, who is sowing the seed like the man in Pushkin's verses, but perhaps with no better result. The cross-threads of the story (the love of Mashmina for Nezhdanov and her consequent jealousy of Marianna, and the unrequited passion of Markelov for the latter) put some ordinary human passion and life into this tale of stoical people. After all, there is nothing particularly to dislike in Sipyagin and his wife; they are not cruel or oppressive people, simply easy-going and rather self-indulgent folk, such as western countries of Europe — nay, even republican and up-to-date America — produce in thousands. We cannot, somehow or other, get up an antipathy to them. The story is well translated; perhaps a few notes would have been useful. What is the ordinary reader to understand by such names as Filaret, Pugatchev, Katkov, Dobrolyubov, and others, so familiar to Russians, and so unknown to Englishmen? How useful, for instance, a note on vol. i. p. 211 would have been to explain the names of the books, if only to remark that the 'Aonides' ('Aonidi') was the title of a collection of poems by leading Russian authors at the close of last century, edited by Karamzin, just the correct book for old-fashioned people to be reading. Mr. Edward Garnett gives us a red-hot political preface as usual, perhaps on this occasion with more reason than on others. For it is a novel with a tendency.

The Green Book. By Maurus Jókai. Translated by Mrs. Waugh. (Jarrold & Sons.)—Since his jubilee, almost rivalling the national millennium in popularity, it has been deemed quite invidious to attempt impartial criticism of Jókai or his works. Each romance as it appears in an English garb is announced to be his best or most popular, and there the matter ends. Let us say then at once that 'The Green Book; or, Freedom under the Snow,' as Mrs. Waugh, reversing its title, calls 'Szabadság a hó alatt vagy a zöld Könyv,' is not one of Jókai's finest works, despite its enthralling but complicated plot. In it the author has broken fresh ground, not, indeed, that he had not already dealt with Russian themes, but it was only in short and unimportant stories. To fit himself for the composition of this romance Jókai consulted an immense number of authorities, a list of which is given in the Hungarian original, but notwithstanding this praiseworthy industry he has not been enabled thoroughly to imbue his imagination with much Russian colouring; the whole work, with its many supernaturally gifted good and evil personages and its marvellous coincidences and events, is thoroughly typical of the style of its author's Orientally descended race. Marvels and mysteries, plots and counterplots, and sudden rises and falls of fortune are encountered on nearly every page, so that amid such a continual shifting of scenery the individuality of the numerous actors is apt to be lost sight of. Nevertheless, the work is a brilliant tour de force, thoroughly calculated to charm the novel-reading public by its ceaseless excitement: from first to last the interest never flags. The ultra-melodramatic tone is frequently lightened by touches of Jókai's native humour, such as when, in his reference to the Zaporogenes, he says:—

"Among that people are to be found the first indistinct traces of a longing after freedom, primitive, but still existent. This instinct reaches its culminating point in the propensity to rob their neighbours, turn their wives out of doors when tired of them, and take to themselves fresh ones, who may please them better."

The description of the great Neva flood is a magnificent word-picture, well worthy of ranking with the best of those marvellous delineations of natural catastrophes with which Jókai frequently enriches his romances. The moral of the work appears to be that after all a tsar, like a convict, may have some good in him. 'Szabadság a hó alatt' has been translated, amongst other languages, into German, and from that language Mrs. Waugh appears to have made her version, which is evidently much condensed from the original. She has not ventured upon giving Pushkin's poetry in English, nor (what will be much more annoying in a work of this character) has she made any attempt to translate the very many Russian words and sentences with which Jókai has besprinkled his chapters. The translation is, however, sprightly and well written, and the English better than most lady translators are wont to indulge in.

As the original English translation of Jókai's 'Az Érdély arány Kóra' ('Transylvanian Golden Age') has already been reviewed in the Athenæum, under the translator's title of 'Midst the Wild Carpathians (Jarrold & Sons), this reissue of it needs little beyond notice of its reappearance with a new title-page. There is no reason for changing our opinion of its merits; whilst deeming it a splendid tour de force, and a work full of the most exciting incidents and superb descriptions of Transylvanian scenery, we do not regard it as one of the best of Jókai's romances. It is a pity the errors of the first issue have not been corrected in this reprint, even if some of the stereos had to be sacrificed in the process.

SCHOOL-BOOKS.

The Troades of Euripides. By R. Y. Tyrrell. (Macmillan & Co.)—Euripides is not, we think, so much in vogue for school reading as Prof. Tyrrell in his introduction implies, nor can we regard 'The Trojan Women' as a good play, though it was doubtless a fine spectacle. The notes supplied in this edition seem hardly worthy of a well-known reputation, and are overloaded with verse translation. Paley's name should have been mentioned in the introduction, and more trouble should have been taken to secure the best text. The note on ἐκεῖσε (v. 61) is most perfunctory, and parallels should have been added. The "sense construction" (v. 59) is quite clear without the addition of the cumbrous term "accusative remotioris objecti"; in v. 440 σάρκα φωνήεσσαν is certainly bold, but it should not be forgotten that γῆρυν in v. 441 helps it out. Perhaps a reconstruction with φοινήεσσαν may be right. Μὴ οὐ (v. 982) is in origin quite complete in itself without ὅρα or the like before it, so that "the antecedent verb" can hardly be said to be "omitted" in such cases. Such an explanation is antiquated and misleading.

French Lessons for Middle Forms. By G. E. Fasnacht. (Macmillan & Co.)—Mr. Fasnacht's volume is, like the rest of his school-books, well arranged and accurate; but it is, in our opinion, over elaborate. The schoolboy, especially the fourth-form boy, is intolerant of syntax, and it is difficult to avoid thinking Mr. Fasnacht gives him too much. Most certainly he is burdened with too many words. A very fair amount of conversation can be maintained with quite a small vocabulary, and it is a ready command of a small vocabulary—not an imperfect one of a large stock of words—that the teacher should try to bring about.

Bacon's Essays. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Alfred S. West, M.A. (Cambridge, University Press.)—It is difficult to understand for whom Mr. West's edition is designed. It is scarcely intended for schoolboys; Mr. West himself apparently has "the general reader" in view, who is aided by a quantity of foot-notes which seem to intimate that, like the reader of the Shorter Catechism, he is considered a person of weak understanding, as at the outset he is told that "said jesting Pilate" means "said Pilate in derision"; and he is provided with an "Index of Proper Names," from which he may learn that Pilate was "Procurator of Judæa in the time of Tiberius." There is also a grammatical appendix, which would seem intended for the candidate for "locals" rather than "the general reader." When will editors understand the uselessness of overloading their books with comments?

Vocabulaire Technique des Chemins de Fer. Par Lucien Serraillier. (Whittaker & Co.)—This book will prove handy for reference, but it would have been more useful to the British learner if the genders of the French nouns had been indicated. Nor can we always agree with the renderings. "Gare maritime" is not invariably, as Calais shows, a "riverside station." "Union depôt," again, may be good American, but on this side of the Atlantic we say central station or general station. Coupon is curiously translated "circular tour ticket," and surely dog ticket is more usual than "dog card ticket."

Précis Writing and Office Correspondence. By E. E. Whitfield, M.A. (Methuen & Co.)—This seems a sensible handbook. "The Pan Britannica," on p. 116, is an unlucky misprint, as it is emphasized by clarendon type.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

ONE opens Sketches in Lavender, Blue and Green, by Mr. Jerome K. Jerome (Longmans & Co.), in some trepidation, for a dosing of the author's peculiar brand of witticism is not a thing to contemplate with equanimity. Your counterjumper, as Mr. H. G. Wells has shown, may be treated with a humour fit to shake the gods; but to treat the gods, or anything else, with a humour fit to shake the counterjumper is another and a less agreeable affair. The first half dozen stories, however, are reassuring. Not only are they not funny, but they do not even aim at being funny. They are very slight, indeed, and not particularly distinctive, but the negative relief readily takes the place of a positive virtue. Then comes 'The Man who would Manage,' own brother to the 'Idle Fellow,' and second cousin to the 'Three Men in a Boat.' The same blend characterizes the whole book. Whether the serious element is blue and the comic one green, or whether it is the other way round, may remain a moot point. Of the stories which endure criticism, the best is the rather uncanny one of 'Dick Dunkerman's Cat.' Another which has some merit is 'The Materialization of Charles and Mivanway,' which might, perhaps, have been written in an uninspired mood by Mr. Quiller Couch.

A Doctor's Idle Hours, by "Scalpel" (Downey & Co.), a volume of thirty-four essays, mainly on subjects connected with medical men and their patients, has much that will interest the general reader. Though they show little literary aptitude, and though they too often degenerate into platitude and "commonplace," these essays contain useful and sometimes interesting information. This is especially the case where the pseudonymous author deals with the uses of solid and liquid food, and with phases of health and disease. It is difficult to express equal satisfaction with the two concluding essays on Lord Randolph Churchill and Mr. W. E. Gladstone. Neither of these papers is above the average of contributions to a literary debating society, and there was no occasion for adding them to the volume.

MR. H. S. NICHOLS publishes in four volumes, beautifully illustrated with portraits, a good translation, by Mr. De V. Payen-Payne, of the well-known memoirs of Barère—that story of the French Revolution on which Macaulay wrote his article at the time of the appearance of the book, two years after Barère's death. It is curious to find Barère criticizing Lady Morgan. We are so accustomed to look upon Lady Morgan as early Victorian, and upon Barère as exclusively Revolutionary, that the fact that Barère survived into our times, and was a diner-out in the memory of people still living, will come to many readers as a surprise. Still, he was less of a survival than the Queen of Sweden (previously Madame Bernadotte, and, before, the Mlle. Clary who refused Bonaparte) or King Jerome, both of whom lived to see many years of the Second Empire, and the latter of whom, as M. Ollivier's new book reminds us, had ridden at the side of his nephew on the day of the coup d'état. Barère was, however, the last survivor, if we mistake not, of the men who made the French Revolution.

MR. STANFORD publishes an excellent little work, The British Navy, Past and Present, from the pen of Capt. S. Eardley-Wilmot, R.N., and Messrs. Sonnenschein & Co. a rather more bulky volume, The Royal Navy, by "a Lieutenant," beautifully illustrated, but also cheap. It is hardly true, as "a Lieutenant" thinks, that our engineer officers have a higher training than those of France. Some of the latter have the best training in the world.

Events of the Reign, 1837 to 1897, compiled by Mr. F. Ryland (G. Allen), and The Victorian Era, by Mr. Anderson Graham (Longmans & Co.), are both of them products of the Jubilee. Mr. Ryland's lists of events are more useful than Mr. Graham's optimistic narrative, which deals somewhat largely in blameless platitudes, but is likely to prove popular. The colouring of Mr. Graham's maps has gone wrong. We were not aware before that large portions of New Guinea and North Borneo were British possessions in 1837, or Aden either.

MESSRS. WARD, LOCK & Co. have now published Bells and Pomegranates: Second Series, by R. Browning, in their attractive issue of "Nineteenth Century Classics." The present volume is prefaced by a striking reproduction of Rossetti's drawing of the poet.

M. ÉMILE OLLIVIER was on delicate ground in the second volume of L'Empire Libéral, published by MM. Garnier Frères, as will be seen when we state that the title of the volume is Louis Napoléon et le Coup d'État; that M. Ollivier had been one of the opponents of the coup d'état which he now, in a sense, justifies; and that his father was one of its victims. He has extricated himself with ability from the position, but the necessities of the case make the volume rather one of pleadings than of history, for which, perhaps, in the true sense, the time has not yet come. With regard to the detail, M. Ollivier's picture of Louis Napoleon as a man is better than his picture of the coup d'état. His book is, indeed, more interesting as a series of biographical studies and sketches than as a complete view of the events of an epoch. For M. Ollivier, Louis Napoleon was a Bonaparte. Although he fully admits the parentage of Morny and many of the other irregularities of life of Queen Hortense, he holds that Napoleon III. was without doubt, in fact as well as in theory, the "nephew of his uncle." As M. Ollivier was trying to make Louis Napoleon the rightful head of the family, it is somewhat curious that he should have omitted the scene of the public celebration, during the Hundred Days, of the departure of Napoleon for the army on the Belgian frontier, for it was, on the whole, the most interesting episode which connected the two Napoleons who actually reigned over France. In the absence of the King of Rome, Napoleon on that occasion undoubtedly played off the children of his favourite adoptive child against his son—the prisoner of his enemies; and the position in which he placed them on that day and the regard that he paid them publicly were intended as a menace to the allies of setting up a succession, in the children of Queen Hortense, which ultimately was set up by the coup d'état in favour of the younger of them. With regard to the death of the elder, M. Ollivier does not even mention the general belief of the time that he was poisoned. No doubt all royal personages who die suddenly and whose deaths are not very clearly explained are poisoned, in the belief of a portion of the public; but the belief was undoubtedly more general in Italy in 1831 with regard to the death in the revolutionary army of the elder son of Queen Hortense, the brother of Louis Napoleon, than it has been in most such cases. M. Ollivier does his best to defend the somewhat ridiculous descents at Strasbourg and at Boulogne, and does not even believe in the Prince's eagle, "stuffed or living." He says that in the Boulogne case "an officer of the ship had taken an eagle and brought it with him as a bird of good augury"—an explanation which leaves us sceptical. M. Ollivier gives at length the details of the "Repression" by nominal republicans (mainly royalists in fact) after the days of June, '48—the accounts of the people shot, of those transported, and so forth—and describes the savage laws (as he calls them) which were put in force. It is hardly fair to omit, as he does, the account of the similar measures taken by Louis Napoleon after the coup d'état. The secret shooting of prisoners M. Ollivier denies in the latter case, while he asserts it in the former; but as to the transportations after the coup d'état there can be no doubt, and those transportations were in a great number of cases equivalent to a sentence of lingering death from the diseases of a frightful climate. M. Ollivier is also silent with regard to the story of the "insurrection" of the southern departments, commonly known as the "insurrection of the Var," which was, in fact, a rising of the peasantry on behalf of law and of the constitution against the successful act of violence of the President of the Republic.

WE have from the Scientific Press the issue for 1897 of Mr. Burdett's admirable Hospitals and Charities.

WE have on our table Tobias Smollett, by O. Smeaton (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—The Story of Victoria, R.I., by W. J. Wintle (S.S.U.),—Martin Luther, by G. Freytag, translated by H. E. O. Heinemann (Chicago, Open Court Publishing Co.),—The Millennium of Hungary and its People, edited by Dr. Joseph de Jekelfalussy (Budapest, Pesti Könyvnyomda-Részvénytársaság),—Property Law for General Readers, by W. C. Maude (E. Wilson),—Domestic Service in the United States, by Lucy M. Salmon (Macmillan),—Madras Government Museum: Bulletin, Vol. II. No. 1, Anthropology, by E. Thurston (Madras, Government Press),—Brazilian Exchange, by J. P. Wileman (E. Wilson),—Fads of an Old Physician, by G. S. Keith, M.D. (Black),—Musical Pitch and the Measurement of Intervals among the Ancient Greeks, by C. W. L. Johnson (Baltimore, Johns Hopkins University),—Inebriety, its Source, Prevention, and Cure, by C. F. Palmer (Oliphant, Anderson & Ferrier),—A Plea for the Unborn, by H. Smith (Watts & Co.),—Some Unrecognized Laws of Nature, by J. Singer and L. H. Berens (Murray),—Mountain Observatories in America and Europe, by E. S. Holden (Washington, the Smithsonian Institution),—Elements of Theoretical Physics, by Dr. C. Christiansen, translated by W. F. Magie (Macmillan),—Nature and the Book: Village Lectures, by the Earl of Mount Edgcumbe (Stanford),—The Finger and the Ring, by C. James (Ward & Downey),—A Minion of the Moon, by T. W. Speight (Chatto & Windus),—The Love-Philtre, and other Poems, by H. F. Schweitzer (Macqueen),—Elfinn's Luck, and other Poems, by A. E. Hills (Innes),—The Praise of Life, by L. Binyon (Mathews),—Songs and Sighs, by M. L. Pope (Exeter, Pollard),—Trumpets and Shawms, by H. H. Hay (Philadelphia, Arnold),—Vamba, an Historical Drama, by Luigi (Simpkin),—A Book of Scottish Poetry, selected and arranged by M. B. Synge (Arnold),—Shreds and Patches, by J. Dowman (Aberdeen, Jolly),—A Year's Teaching for Infant Sunday Schools, by Mrs. J. F. Morton (C.E.S.S.I.),—Godparents at Confirmation, by A. Salts, LL.D. (S.P.C.K.),—When were our Gospels Written? by C. Tischendorf (R.T.S.),—Éléments de Grammaire Comparée du Grec et du Latin, Vol. II. Morphologie, by P. Regnaud (Paris, Colin),—and Die Schrift der Mykenier, by H. Kluge (Cöthen, Schulze).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

Davids's (T. W. R.) Lectures on the Origin and Growth of Religion, cheap edition, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Academy Architecture, 1897, ed. by A. Koch, Vol. 1, 4/ net.
Wells's (J.) Oxford and its Colleges, 12mo. 3/ cl.

Poetry.

Courthope's (W. J.) The Longest Reign, an Ode, 4to. 2/6 swd.

History and Biography.

Beavan's (A. H.) Popular Royalty, royal 8vo. 10/6 cl.
Money's (A. L.) History of the Girls' Friendly Society, 2/6
Queen, Private Life of the, by One of Her Majesty's Servants, cr. 8vo. 2/6 cl.

Geography and Travel.

Bird's (G. W.) Wanderings in Burma, imp. 8vo. 21/ net, cl.
Darlington's Handbooks: London and Environs, by E. C. Cook, 12mo. 3/6 net.
Johnston's (Sir H. H.) British Central Africa, 30/ net.

Philology.

Epictetus, 2 vols. (reprinted from the Translation of George Long), 4to. 32/ net.

Science.

Huthwaite's (J. G.) Examples, Papers, and Problems in Arithmetic, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Ireland's (F. C.) Good Health, or the Physiology of Dietetics and Massage, cr. 8vo. 2/6 net.
Meadowcroft's (W. H.) The A B C of the X Rays, cr. 8vo. 4/

General Literature.

About's (E.) The King of the Mountains, translated by R. Davey, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
Bellamy's (E.) Equality, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Dale's (T. F.) The Game of Polo, 8vo. 21/ net.
French Volunteer of the War of Independence, translated and edited by R. B. Douglas, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.
Lawson's (H.) While the Billy Boils, cr. 8vo. 5/ cl.
Marryat's (Capt.) Frank Mildmay, illustrated by H. R. Millar, cr. 8vo. 3/6 cl.
St. Aubyn's (A.) In the Face of the World, cheap edition, 2/
Thomas's (B.) Camera Lucida, or Strange Passages in Common Life, cr. 8vo. 6/ cl.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Schwartz (E.): Die syrische Uebersetzung des ersten Buches Samuelis u. ihr Verhältniss zu MT., LXX., u. Trg., 2m.
Weiss (H.): Judas Makkabaeus, 2m.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Dieterich (A.): Pulcinella, pompejanische Wandbilder u. röm. Satyrspiele, 8m.
Gerhard (E.): Etruskische Spiegel, Vol. 5, Parts 15 and 16, 18m.

Philosophy.

Nietzsche (F.): Werke, Vols. 11 and 12, 16m.

Political Economy.

Hertzka (T.): Die Probleme der menschlichen Wirtschaft: Vol. 1, Das Problem der Güter-Erzeugg, 6m.

History and Biography.

Doniol (H.): M. Thiers, le Comte de Saint-Vallier, le Général de Manteuffel, la Libération du Territoire (1871–1873), 4fr.
Knod (G. C.): Urkunden u. Akten der Stadt Strassburg: Part 3. Die alten Matrikeln der Universität Strassburg, 1621–1793, Vols. 1 and 2, 36m.
Lanessan (J. L. de): La République Démocratique, la Politique Intérieure, Extérieure, et Coloniale de la France, 4fr.
Peter (H.): Die geschichtliche Litteratur üb. die römische Kaiserzeit bis Theodosius I. u. ihre Quellen, 2 vols. 24m.
Peytraud (L.): L'Esclavage aux Antilles Françaises avant 1789, 10fr.
Sand (George): Lettres à Alfred de Musset et à Sainte-Beuve, 3fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Dubois (M.) et Guy (Camille): Album Géographique: Vol. 2, Les Régions Tropicales, 15fr.

Philology.

Corpus Inscriptionum Græcarum Græciæ Septentrionalis: Vol. 3, Part 1, Inscriptiones Phocidis, Locridis, Ætoliæ, Acarnaniæ Insularum Maris Ionii, ed. G. Dittenberger, 22m. 50.
Gloeckner (F.): Homerische Partikeln m. neuen Bedeutungen, Part 1, 1m. 60.
Philologisch-historische Beiträge, Curt Wachsmuth zum 60 Geburtstage überreicht, 8m.

Science.

Ebert (H.): Magnetische Kraftfelder, Part 2, 10m.
Müller (G.): Die Photometrie der Gestirne, 20m.
Scheiner (J.): Die Photographie der Gestirne, 21m.

General Literature.

Beaume (G.): Perrette, 1fr.
Job: Karlsbad, la Journée d'un Buveur d'Eau, 3fr.

EDUCATION, TECHNICAL AND SECONDARY.

THE Duke of Devonshire, whose zeal for secondary and higher education is marked, went out of his way, at the opening last week of an International Congress on Technical Education, to affirm that he and Sir John Gorst were present at the first meeting "partly in their official capacities." It is not common for heads of Departments to dwell upon their official capacity when assisting in the public discussion of questions on which they may subsequently have to decide. The fact is that the Society of Arts undertook to arrange for the meeting of this Congress in England on the condition that the Government would give it such recognition as they could; and the attendance of the President and Vice-President of the Council was in fulfilment of the condition. But the Duke and Sir John have shown on other occasions that they are more than ready to play a popular and candid part in the encouragement of national education, and that, although the functions of their Department are almost entirely limited to elementary instruction, their interest is more deeply engaged in the organization of higher teaching. As this is practically inevitable for any intelligent President of the "Committee of Council," the question certainly suggests itself whether it would not be more reasonable to be perfectly frank in our educational policy, to appoint a Minister of Education, and to make his functions comprehensive.

That the Government are quite alive to the necessity of paying off the arrears of their debt to higher education has been proved within the past few weeks both in word and deed. The Duke of Devonshire has volunteered a significant promise that he will introduce before the end of the session, for the purpose of preliminary discussion, a Secondary Organization Bill. We call this promise significant, not only because it recognizes the claims of the secondary associations and professional conferences, but also because the demand for organization has been matured by the notable stimulus recently given to technical instruction, with which the Duke himself has been prominently concerned for ten years past. In this Bill, it may be anticipated, we shall find a sanction for local authorities resting on the county and borough Councils, under a central control which will include elements from Whitehall, South Kensington, and the Charity Commission; we shall find a secondary register, a delimitation of primary and secondary schools, an extension of existing grants so as to include all efficient schools, literary or technical, private or endowed; and it will rest with the secondary profession to read into such a Bill the guarantees which it deems necessary for the freedom, variety, and elasticity of secondary education. So much for the promise of the Government—unless we add the vague promise of a London University Bill as germane to the other. As for actual performance, it is satisfactory to record that the public grants to the University Colleges have been permanently increased from 15,500*l.* to 25,000*l.* a year. These grants are voted for institutions which provide "education of a University standard in Arts and Sciences"; and the beneficiary colleges are, henceforth, University and King's, London; Owens, Manchester; University College, Liverpool; Mason College, Birmingham; Yorkshire College, Leeds; the University Colleges of Nottingham, Sheffield, Durham, and Bristol; and Bedford College for women in London. These grants are independent of those in Scotland (except that Dundee receives 1,000*l.* from the grant under notice), and in Ireland and Wales, and of the meagre sum devoted to the London University. On the whole, the higher teaching is now fairly well provided for; and it remains to balance the generosity of Parliament to elementary and university instruction, and to secondary technical instruction, by such a reorganization as will enable the secondary literary schools to profit by the public grants.

The speakers at the Technical Congress naturally attached greater importance to the training of the eye and the hand than to "the curriculum of the grammar school," which one of them condemned as "eminently ill-fitted for modern requirements." But it is a mistake to suppose that eye and hand are of great use as instruments in science without the further instruments of intelligence and memory, which need as much special training as the other two. The main results of the Congress may be said to have been a stronger demand for technical work in schools, and for the practical side of technical work; a claim for a certain measure of compulsory technical training up to the age of seventeen or eighteen; the stress which was laid on the need for better organization and gradation, and, in that case, for more money; and the vigorous advocacy of a better system of commercial education. The Congress was eminently practical throughout, and its international character—especially now that it has established a permanent bureau—gives promise of utility in the future. It is a hopeful sign that amongst the delegates invited to this Congress were a certain number of educationists who have not been specially identified with what may be called the technical movement.

AN ALLEGED ERROR OF VENERABLE BEDE'S.

Tottenham, June 21, 1897.

MR. E. W. B. NICHOLSON believes that Bede is right on the point contended for by me, and that the passage in the 'Excidium' has been misunderstood by those writers who condemn Bede's view; but Mr. Nicholson's version of the passage itself, I find, depends for its intelligibility upon an interpolation made in support of Bede—namely, of the word "as," for which there is no authority. This greatly weakens Mr. Nicholson's support of my contention, which I regret. With regard to the construction with "qui," I cannot doubt that Mr. Nicholson has reasons for believing that, because a certain grammatical construction was avoided by correct writers of Latin prose, the author of the 'Excidium,' who was not a correct writer, would have avoided that construction also; but as those reasons are not recorded, I am unable to appreciate them. If we apply the criteria employed by Mr. Nicholson—namely, lapse of time and obsolescence—to the consideration of similar matters, we shall find that such a method of reasoning will mislead us. For instance, centuries before Nennius wrote the old deponent verb "dimicor" was displaced by the active form "dimico," and only survived in correct authors as an impersonal—sc. "dimicatur," "dimicabatur"; consequently (so Mr. Nicholson's method emboldens us to say) Nennius could not have used "dimicor." But Nennius did use it* (v. cap. xxxviii.), and the application of Mr. Nicholson's criteria, therefore, has induced us to make a confident assertion that is quite groundless. Due consideration, perhaps, has not been given by Mr. Nicholson either to the survival of "dimicentur" in the oldest complete manuscript of the 'Historia Brittonum,' or to the observations on ancient grammatical forms discoverable in Celtic authors made by Prof. Zimmer in his 'Nennius Vindicatus.'

It does not tend to alter my opinion of the tenability of the position I have assumed, namely, that "qui" is adverbial, when I find "quique quadragesimus quartus ut novi orditur annus" rendered "and which (as I know) begins [as] the forty-fourth year." There is an old rule respecting "qui" (v. 'Cledonii Art. Grammatic.,' ed. Keil, "Grammatici Latini," vol. v. p. 65) which says, "Qui, si habeat casum, pronomen est, si non, adverbium, ut qui pro unde." As the word "qui," if a pronoun, can only be in one case, namely, the nominative, it is clear that as we already have a nominative, namely, "annus," in the passage whose meaning is in dispute, "qui" cannot be a declinable word, and must, therefore, be adverbial. There can be no objection to rendering "ut novi" by "as I know," provided we remember that Gildas's "knowledge" of the battle at Mons Badonicus was drawn from the information of others. I prefer "I have learnt," however. Prof. Mommsen rejects these two words because he believes them to be meaningless. To me "ut novi" seems to be a very natural and proper phrase to find in the mouth of one who is making assertions about the events of the month in which he was born.

* 'Chronica Minora,' iii. p. 179: "Invitabo [sc. Hengistus] filium meum cum fratueli [sic] suo.....ut dimicentur contra Scottos" (Harley MS. 3859). Cp. ibid., Introd., p. 119: "Ad formam dimicentur.....sensu activo librarius adnotavit: antiqua grammatica."

I think that a definite meaning should be attached to the words "mense jam primo emenso," and it appears to me that they date the birth of Gildas in the first month of the calendar year of the Britons, and the commencement of the years of the era in the second month of that calendar year. As Mr. Nicholson expresses the intention of returning to this subject, I hope he will permit me to correct his suspicion that the calendar year of the schismatic Britons commenced on January 1st. Cummian, in his Paschal letter to Segene of Iona (written A.D. 634), enumerates certain points of difference between the Dionysian computation employed by the Church of Rome and the computation of the Scoto-British schismatics. One point in which the schismatics differed was in the commencement of the year: "Contrarium in kalendis," says Cummian.

A. ANSCOMBE.

SCRINIA.

MR. J. W. CLARK writes:—

"The reviewer of my work on the 'Augustinian Observances' (Athenæum, June 12th, p. 768) says that scrinia 'should be translated screens.' I should be glad of his authority for this meaning of the word. Ducange says that it signifies: (1) a repository for documents, χαρτοφυλάκιον; (2) a treasury, ærarium; (3) a chest to keep relics in; (4) a box, 'Gallicè coffre, olim escrin.'"

Way's 'Promptorium Parvulorum,' s.v. screne, gives "scrinium, ventifuga."

A LOST MANUSCRIPT.

MAY I use a little of your valuable space to tell a tale of human kindness and at the same time to ease my soul of a heavy burden of gratitude? A week ago a manuscript belonging to me was lost. It was the manuscript of a book I have lately completed, and represented the work of many months. I had no copy of it. Its loss meant to me the loss of a part of my being. Happily I knew nothing of my misadventure until I found my manuscript again on my study table, neatly wrapped, and addressed to me in a strange hand. Some one had found the manuscript, and seeing my address written on it had sent it to me at once by post. No word accompanied the package (herein is evidence of great delicacy of mind), so that the name of my good friend is unknown to me. But I feel that in these days of little faith in human nature it would be criminal in me to let such kindness pass without immediate acknowledgment. Some day I hope to find better words than these in which to express my deep gratitude. In the mean time, I pray that this letter may be read by my unknown benefactor, and to the furtherance of that end I humbly ask the co-operation of the press.

P.

Literary Gossip.

WE greatly regret to hear a very indifferent account of the health of Mrs. Oliphant.

THE Syndics of the Cambridge Press have arranged to publish in facsimile the celebrated Codex Bezæ, containing the Gospels and Acts and a fragment of the Catholic Epistles. The MS. was presented to the University by Beza in 1581, and contains more than 800 pages. The facsimiles will be printed on hand-made paper from copperplates made by M. Dujardin, of Paris, by the heliogravure process. It is believed that this process has never been employed before for so large a work. The Syndics hope to publish the book in January, 1898. It will be issued to those who subscribe before publication at ten guineas; after publication the price will be twelve guineas net. It will be seen that the Syndics of the Press have decided, in the interests of scholars, to bring out this facsimile at what is, considering the size of the MS. and the costliness of the process, a remarkably low price. A prospectus containing two specimen pages, which have been got ready by M. Dujardin, is in preparation, and will be issued shortly.

MESSRS. METHUEN will issue in October the first volume of Mr. Oman's 'History of the Art of War.' It will cover the period from the fall of the Roman Empire to the commencement of the general use of gunpowder in Western Europe. The first battle dealt with will be Adrianople (378) and the last Navarette (1367). There will appear later a volume dealing with the art of war among the ancients, and another covering the fifteenth, sixteenth, and seventeenth centuries.

MR. WICKHAM FLOWER has just corrected the proofs of a little volume on the defence of an old reading in Dante's 'Inferno.' The monograph is to be published by Messrs. Chapman & Hall very shortly.

MESSRS. OSGOOD, MCILVAINE & CO. have altogether amalgamated their business with that of Messrs. Harper & Brothers, of New York, and the business will henceforth be carried on under the style of Harper & Brothers. Mr. Clarence W. McIlvaine will have charge of the London house.

MR. ROUND will contribute to the Genealogist for July a paper on the Red Book of the Exchequer.

A LITERARY journal should not leave unnoticed the decease of Capt. Boycott, whose name added a word to the language which is likely to retain a permanent place.

A SECOND International Bibliographical Conference is to be held at Brussels from the 2nd to the 4th of August.

THERE is to be a "summer school" of French and German at the little university town of Marburg on the Lahn from July 6th to July 30th. Prof. Vietor will lecture on German pronunciation, Prof. Natorp on the Herbartian theory of education, and various French teachers will take part.

IN our next number we hope to publish a series of articles on the literature of the Continent for the twelve months. Belgium will be treated by Prof. Fredericq, Bohemia by Prof. Tille, Denmark by Dr. A. Ipsen, France by M. J. Reinach, Germany by Hofrath Zimmermann, Greece by Prof. Lambros, Holland by M. Crommelin, Hungary by M. L. Katscher, Italy by Commendatore Giacosa, Poland by Dr. Belcikowski, Russia by M. L. A. Bogdanovitch, and Spain by Don Rafael Altamira.

SCIENCE

RECENT ENTOMOLOGY.

The Natural History of Aquatic Insects. By Prof. L. C. Miall, F.R.S. (Macmillan & Co.)—In these speculative days, when even presidential addresses are devoted to the value of the theoretical method in entomology, it is quite refreshing to meet with an author who describes the life-histories of insects. There are symptoms of a revival in this real and delightful method of natural history, which had become classic, and threatened to remain so. Prof. Miall, in his preface, expresses a hope that he may "revive an interest in the writings of certain old zoologists—Swammerdam, Réaumur, Lyonnet, and De Geer—who are at present unjustly neglected"; and it is at least remarkable how much we are still indebted to, and dependent on, the researches of those observers. Sainte-Beuve well observed that a classic, according to the usual definition, is an old author canonized by admiration and an authority in his particular style, and truly the works of these old entomologists come under that description. There are patience and technical skill required in these investigations which are not common—these must be combined with that devotion to the study which few possess; while the method pursued is laborious, and not one immediately conferring fame or notoriety. The spirit is seen to-day in the patient and unassuming life-work of monographists, systematists, and enumerators; the antithesis is enunciated by generalization, speculation, and sometimes dogma. All are welcome, but we deplore the absence of the stranger. Prof. Miall has arrived at the conclusion that all insects were originally subject to terrestrial conditions, and that the aquatic members became so by slow adaptations consequent upon diversity of habit. "We can see almost all the steps of the adaptation on the shores of our rivers, lakes, and seas"; and, again, "the waters, both fresh and salt, have been successfully invaded by insects." This is in accordance with the views held by zoologists respecting some higher and lower forms of animal life, and it might almost be said that as man gradually explored the surface of the waters so other animals slowly entered their depths. The author in his study of aquatic insects has found, like other naturalists, that too often the apparently brilliant generalization of to-day is dispelled by further facts discovered on the morrow. As he remarks, "Before long we may expect some impracticable fact to start up, as if maliciously, and confound our theories." This is doubtless the cause of premature decay in so many classifications which are constructed on a present knowledge which is ever enlarging, and on scanty facts to which increase is constantly being made. In the classification of insects we clearly see that their larval and pupal stages must afford a clue to natural affinities; but Nature is constantly exhibiting an exception to our rule. Prof. Miall cites a sufficient instance:—

"The naturalist who should attempt to classify aquatic Diptera by the larva and pupa would place Chironomus plumosus and C. motitator in different families, yet the flies seem to differ in nothing of greater importance than the length of the first joint of the fore tarsus."

This book deserves the careful perusal of all entomologists who are prepared to study the subject as well as to enjoy its side-lights. To a great extent it is a résumé of the writings of old and neglected observers, but frequently, as Carlyle remarked, "the essence of originality is not that it be new."

The Hymenoptera Aculeata of the British Islands. By Edward Saunders, F.L.S. (Reeve & Co.)—Mr. Saunders is one of the few present entomological writers who have not confined their attention to butterflies and moths, or beetles. A few years ago he wrote a descriptive work on the Hemiptera-Heteroptera, and he now contributes a welcome addition to British entomological literature in the publication under notice, which treats of ants, bees, and wasps, or, in other words, the Hymenoptera Aculeata. We learn that the number of these insects now known to be indigenous to Britain is 374 recognized species, of which 20 are ants, 127 sand wasps, 23 true wasps, and 204 pollen-collecting bees. It is somewhat strange that there are not more workers and observers devoted to the study of these intensely interesting insects. They were among the earliest to claim the attention of intellectual men when a complete ignorance and disregard existed as to other insects. It has been remarked that the bee alone is much noticed in classical literature, though the wasp is not unmentioned. Solomon directed attention to the ant and "her ways," and Darwin declared that "the brain of an ant is one of the most marvellous atoms of matter in the world, perhaps more so than the brain of a man." The Hubers have written immortal observations on bees and ants, whilst Lubbock still found an open field for further investigations; and in the domestic economy and polity of ants and bees we seem, like Gulliver, only divided by some psychological barrier from understanding the intelligence and civilization of these advanced Lilliputians. Mr. Saunders's book does not deal with this part of the subject, being designedly more of a technical directory, giving names, addresses, and times of appearance; in fact, a clear and useful description of families, genera, and species as found in this country. This work is done so thoroughly that we cannot help expressing our regret that the details of the distribution of the species are confined to British localities alone, a practice not infrequent, and one that may be almost called "insular prejudice" in science. The author in his preface admits this lacuna, but seeks justification in the fact that "there is so much doubt about the identity of many of the British and continental species which bear the same names," that "to define areas at present would.....throw more light on the distribution of hymenopterists than on that of Hymenoptera." But this is somewhat serious reading, for Mr. Saunders admits much obligation "to the important papers on special groups of V. Hagens, Handlirsch, Kohl, Perez, and Schletterer"; and as so many of his identifications are necessarily made by comparison with continental types or descriptions, a disquieting doubt is raised as to the comparative value of British and continental determinations. Besides which, caution could be denoted by appending to the outside localities the names of the entomologists who have given such habitats, as is usually done in modern monographs. We make this complaint because the author's work is so good, and is so certain to be used as the universal text-book in this country for a long time to come; and we naturally regret that its sphere of usefulness should be narrowed—not by a defect, but by a curtailment which will prevent its circulation among other authorities than purely British hymenopterists, who must possess it.

British and European Butterflies and Moths. By A. W. Kappel and W. Egmont Kirby. (Nister.)—Facing the preface of this handsome book, we read, "The Letterpress, Coloured Plates, and Binding by E. Nister, Nuremberg, Bavaria." We presume for "letterpress" we should read printing, otherwise it is difficult to understand what share the reputed authors have had in the undertaking. Certainly, however, though the text is not from the hands of Herr Nister, the merit of the publication belongs to him, for its value consists in the beautiful plates, the handsome binding of the volume, and the excellent paper on which it is printed, which make it a desirable present or prize-book. When we turn from the plates to the text, we are reminded of the sensation we experience when, after having enjoyed music, we subsequently look at the libretto. In the preface we read that "though several books have appeared on the Macro-lepidoptera of Europe, a new work with good illustrations and of reasonable price may still be useful." It is to satisfy this want that the authors have issued the volume, though we thought that Mr. W. F. Kirby had issued more than one edition of his 'European Butterflies and Moths,' which was based on a well-known German work, and one to which the publication under notice also seems somewhat akin. However, no high scientific value is claimed by the authors for their book, as we are told "space has not permitted them to include all the European species," and only "nearly all those of the British Isles will be found described or figured." Consequently we are the more confirmed in our opinion that we now possess an introduction to a knowledge of European butterflies and moths in an édition de luxe, and that nothing more is intended. One merit is, however, claimed in that "all the British species have English names assigned to them, a feature which has been neglected in many books of recent date." This neglect is perhaps to be commended when we study some of these English names and inquire what can be their value. A few instances will suffice. Apamea dumerilii is Anglicized under the name of "Dumeril's Apamea," which seems a moderately self-evident proposition; whilst in the genus Tæniocampa, surely it would be as easy to remember a few Latin specific names as to burden the mind with a farrago of unmeaning and absurd appellations, such as "The Hebrew Character," "The Small Quaker," "The Common Quaker," "The Powdered Quaker," or "The Twin-spotted Quaker," when an ordinary entomologist would simply and more elegantly write respectively T. gothica, T. pulverulenta, T. stabitis, T. gracilis, and T. munda. The climax is perhaps reached in the genus Dyschorista, when D. suspecta is named "The Suspected Moth," and D. ypsilon "The Dismal Moth." We do not say that the authors have invented these monstrosities, but it is in any case enough to have reproduced and approved them.

ASTRONOMICAL NOTES.

AN annular eclipse of the sun will take place on the 29th prox., but it will cross land only over part of Central America and some of the West India islands, and then pass into the South Atlantic Ocean, just touching the easternmost point of the coast of Brazil. A partial eclipse will be seen over the greater part of North and South America, also a small one in West Africa. The planet Mercury will be in superior conjunction with the sun on the 15th prox., and will scarcely be visible in any part of the month. Venus will be at greatest western elongation from the sun on the 7th, and brilliant as a morning star during the month, moving in an easterly direction through the constellation Taurus, and passing nearly due south of the Pleiades in the first week. Mars is still visible after sunset in the western part of Leo, very near Regulus, but before the end of July will set too early to be seen. Jupiter is still brilliant in the eastern part of Leo, but will also cease to be visible about the end of next month. Saturn, therefore, will be the only planet to be seen in the evening after Jupiter has set; he is situated in the eastern part of Libra, and towards the end of next month will set about midnight.

Whilst Sir John Herschel was observing at the Cape of Good Hope in 1834, he discovered that κ Toucani was a double star, which has been confirmed by later observers, the magnitudes of the components being 5·6 and 7·8 respectively. Mr. R. T. A. Innes, who is now on the staff of the Royal Observatory at the Cape, and has devoted much attention to double stars, discovering many new pairs, noticed in 1895 the duplicity of a small star (numbered 353 in Lacaille's catalogue) little more than 5′ from κ Toucani. The magnitudes of the components of this pair are 7·7 and 8·7 respectively; and Mr. Innes has since noticed that they share in the proper motion of κ Toucani and its companion, so that we have here a probable case of a quadruple stellar system.

The Jubilee honours to astronomers include those of K.C.B. to Dr. Huggins and Prof. Lockyer, and C.B. to Mr. Christie, the Astronomer Royal.

The Rapport Annuel sur l'État de l'Observatoire de Paris pour l'Année 1896 was presented to the Council on the 5th of February last, and has just been distributed. M. Loewy, after paying an appropriate tribute to the memory of his famous predecessor, M. Tisserand, states that the most important events of the past year were the meetings at Paris of two astronomical congresses: the first, under the auspices of the Observatory, relating to the progress of the great photographic chart of the heavens and the construction of the catalogue of photographic stars; and the second, under the auspices of the Bureau des Longitudes, on the introduction of a uniform system of constants to be used in the calculation of astronomical ephemerides. Into the former of these, a great international work, to the completion of which and the results to be obtained from it all are now looking forward, M. Loewy enters in some detail. He further expresses his hope that by the year of the approaching Exhibition the great catalogue of stars, based upon meridian observations at Paris from 1837 to 1881, will be published. Two new volumes have recently appeared, the value and accuracy of which are greatly due to the devotion of M. Gaillot, ably seconded by M. Bossert. Good progress has been made by M. Bigourdan in his labours on the positions and dimensions of the nebulæ visible at Paris, which he estimates it will require three more years to complete, and also with the photographic atlas of the moon, under the charge of MM. Henry; one fascicule has already appeared, and a second will do so in the course of the present year. Observations have been actively continued with the meridian instruments, the objects being chiefly the stars in Lalande's catalogue, though the sun, moon, and great planets have not been neglected. Small planets, comets, nebulæ, and casual phenomena have been observed with the equatorials; whilst M. Deslandres obtained many results with the spectroscope in the early part of the year, after which he was deputed to proceed to Japan to observe the total eclipse of last August. Clouds greatly interfered with this, but they became thinner during the totality, and some photographs of the coronal ring were obtained, tending to confirm the view that the form of the corona is connected with the state of the solar spot period.

The third number of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani for this year contains a note by Prof. Tacchini on the distribution in latitude of the solar spots, faculæ, and protuberances during the first quarter of the year, and a continuation of the spectroscopical images of the sun's limb to the end of October, 1895. There is also a paper by Prof. Riccò on the so-called Wilsonian phenomenon of the solar spots, the reality of which, as is well known, the Rev. F. Howlett, a most assiduous observer during a long term of years, has strongly contested, but on which discussion is still occasionally renewed, the probable explanation being that if the spots are cavities, these are of such a shallow nature that the phenomenon in question is rarely, if ever, seen, and tends to disappear under close scrutiny.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—June 9.—Dr. H. Hicks, President, in the chair.—Dr. J. Ball and Mr. J. I. Lowles were elected Fellows.—The following communications were read: 'The Cretaceous Strata of County Antrim,' by Mr. W. F. Hume,—and 'An Account of the Portraine Inlier,' by Messrs. C. I. Gardiner and S. H. Reynolds.

NUMISMATIC.—June 17.—Annual General Meeting.—Sir J. Evans, President, in the chair.—The Silver Medal of the Society was awarded to Dr. Alfred von Sallet, the Director of the Royal Coin

Cabinet at Berlin, for his eminent services to the science of numismatics in all its branches during the past thirty years.—Dr. B. V. Head, who received the medal on behalf of Dr. von Sallet, in returning thanks dwelt upon the importance of Von Sallet's contributions to numismatics, more especially in the wide field of Greek and Roman research. The President then delivered his annual address, and the ballot was taken for the officers and Council for the ensuing year.

ZOOLOGICAL.—June 15.—Dr. St. George Mivart, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during May, and called attention to a fine collection of West Indian reptiles, presented by Mr. R. R. Mole on May 11th; and to two specimens of the blue penguin (Eudyptula minor), from New Zealand, purchased May 21st.—Dr. G. H. Fowler exhibited the unique specimen of Carcinus mænas recently described by Dr. Bethe, which carried a right thoracic leg on the left half of the sixth abdominal segment.—Dr. A. Keith exhibited a series of lantern-slides showing the arrangement of the hair and some other points of interest in the orang-outang (Simia satyrus) that had lately died in the Society's gardens.—Mr. O. Thomas read an account of the mammals obtained by Mr. J. Whitehead during the last three years in the Philippine Islands. During this expedition the peculiar mammal-fauna of the mountains of Northern Luzon had been discovered, and Mr. Thomas had already described no fewer than five new genera and eight new species belonging to it. The present paper contained a detailed account of the whole of Mr. Whitehead's collection, accompanied by the field-notes of the collector, and also descriptions of (1) Crunomys fallax, another new genus and species from Luzon, an animal allied to Chrotomys, but with very much the external appearance of Mus ephippium; (2) Nannosciurus samaricus, a pigmy squirrel from Samar, like N. concinnus, but much less rufous; and (3) Mus mindorensis, a blackish form of the Mus rattus group from the highlands of Mindoro.—A communication was read from Prof. T. W. Bridge 'On the Presence of Ribs in Polyodon (Spatularia) folium.' From the examination of a specimen Prof. Bridge had ascertained that Polyodon possessed a series of distinct and fully developed cartilaginous ribs.—Mr. R. I. Pocock read a paper 'On the Spiders of the Suborder Mygalomorphæ from the Ethiopian Region contained in the Collection of the British Museum.' Many new genera and species were described, the most interesting being the new genus Cyclotrematus, containing two new species collected in Mashonaland by Mr. J. ffolliott Darling; Stasinopus oculatus, sp. nov., from Bloemfontein, and Moggridgea whytei, sp. nov., obtained by Mr. A. Whyte on the Nyika Plateau. The discovery of new stridulating organs, consisting of modified setæ, lying between the mandible and the maxilla in Harpactina was also alluded to.—The following communications were also read: from Miss E. M. Sharpe, on the butterflies collected in the neighbourhood of Suakim by Mr. A. J. Cholmley: thirty species were enumerated, and the localities where the specimens were collected and the dates of their capture were recorded,—from Mr. W. E. Collinge, on two new slugs of the genus Parmarion from Borneo, viz., P. everetti and P. intermedium: the anatomy of the generative organs was described and compared with that of other members of the genus; P. intermedium, sp. nov., was regarded as an intermediate form, which in part lessened the value of the anatomical characters in Simroth's genus Microparmarion,—from Dr. A. Dubois, on certain specimens of birds in the Brussels Museum, and describing a supposed new species of woodpecker from Borneo, proposed to be called Tiga borneonensis,—from Mr. D. J. Scourfield, containing some preliminary notes and a report on the Protozoa, Tardigrada, Acarina, and Entomostraca collected by Dr. J. W. Gregory during his expedition to Spitsbergen in 1896,—from Mr. D. Bryce, on the Rotifera collected by Dr. Gregory's expedition in Spitsbergen,—and from Dr. Fowler, on the later development of Arachnactis albida (M. Sars) and on A. bowerii, sp. nov., being the third instalment of the 'Contributions to our Knowledge of the Plankton of the Faeroe Channel.'—Mr. G. A. Boulenger gave a list of the reptiles and batrachians collected in Northern Nyasaland by Mr. A. Whyte, and presented to the British Museum by Sir H. Johnston. Thirty-six species of reptiles and fifteen species of batrachians were enumerated, of which the following were described as new: Lygosoma johnstoni, Glypholycus whytii, Anthroleptis whytii, and Hylambates johnstoni.

HISTORICAL.—June 17.—Sir M. E. Grant Duff, President, in the chair.—Mr. F. H. Hill was elected a Fellow.—A paper was read by Prof. F. York Powell 'On an English "École de Chartes."'—A discussion followed, in which the systematic teaching of palæography in connexion with the work of the Public Record Office, British Museum, and other great libraries was advocated by Sir H. C. Maxwell-Lyte, the Earl of Crawford, Sir J. H. Ramsay, and Mr. F. Harrison.

ARISTOTELIAN.—June 14.—Mr. S. H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—The report of the executive committee and the accounts for the session were presented.—The officers for the ensuing session were elected as follows: President, Mr. B. Bosanquet; Vice-Presidents, Mr. Boutwood, Mr. J. H. Muirhead, and Mr. A. F. Shand; Editor, Mr. G. F. Stout; Honorary Secretary, Mr. H. W. Carr. A paper was read by Mr. J. H. Muirhead 'On the Ideal of Knowledge.'—The paper was followed by a discussion.

MEETINGS FOR THE ENSUING WEEK.

Mon. Hellenic, 5, Annual Meeting.
—. Institute of British Architects, 8.
—. Geographical, 8½, 'Recent Journeys in Persia,' Capt. M. Sykes.
Tues. Folk-Lore, 8, 'The Binding of a God—a Study of the Basis of Idolatry,' Mr. W. Crooke.

Science Gossip.

THE International Submarine Telegraph Memorial have raised a sum of nearly 8,000*l.*, with which they propose (1) to erect a bust in memory of the late Sir John Pender, (2) to endow a fund for an electrical laboratory at University College, and (3) to establish a Pender Scholarship at Glasgow. The executive committee is composed of such men as the Marquis of Tweeddale, Viscount Peel, Lord Kelvin, Lord Sackville Cecil, Sir Robert Herbert, Sir Albert Cappel, Sir Henry Mance, Mr. J. C. Lamb (Secretary to the Post Office), Mr. F. A. Bevan, Mr. Charles Bright, Dr. J. A. Fleming, Dr. Alexander Muirhead, Mr. J. Wilson Swan, Mr. E. M. Underdown, and Sir J. Wolfe Barry (President of the Institution of Civil Engineers).

MR. WOLFE BARRY, who declined knighthood when the Tower Bridge was opened, has been made a K.C.B.

THE International Congress of Mathematicians is to be held at Zürich from August 9th to 11th.

FINE ARTS

Catalogue of the Greek Coins in the British Museum: Caria, Cos, Rhodes, &c. By Barclay V. Head, D.C.L. With a Map and Forty-five Autotype Plates. Printed by order of the Trustees. (Quaritch.)

THE Department of Coins in the British Museum stands in no need of the apostolic injunction: "Be not weary in well doing." We have often said that next to the safe custody of a collection the production of accurate catalogues is the highest virtue of a curator, and the present Keeper of the Coins, encouraged, no doubt, by our exhortations, has devoted himself and his assistants steadily to this indispensable work. The present is, we believe, the fortieth volume of the catalogues published by his department, and the seventh written by Dr. Head himself. This latest addition to a truly monumental series describes the Greek coins of Caria and the adjacent islands. Dr. Head adopts Prof. Ramsay's delimitation of Caria—following the Mæander, the Caprus, the north-east spurs of the Salbacus mountains, and the river Indus from its source to the sea—and therefore includes Trapezopolis, Attuda, and Cidramus, but leaves Trales, Nysa, and some other cities to be treated in the volume on Lydia. In an exhaustive and scholarly introduction the various geographical questions involved are dealt with upon the latest information, derived partly from the explorations of Mr. J. L. Myres, of Christ Church, Oxford, who has established some important modifications in the regions north of the Ceramic Gulf, and has enabled several places to be precisely indicated in the excellent map which Mr. B. V. Darbishire has supplied. The history of each city is briefly stated in the introduction, with ample references to authorities, though the alphabetical order is perhaps hardly so satisfactory, from either the historical or the artistic point of view, as an order based upon geographical, political, or religious connexions. The artistic element, however, is the least important in the large majority of the 1,850 coins described in this catalogue. In the interior of Caria coinage was unknown up to the time of Alexander, and in most inland towns it began much later; whilst even in the cities on the coast there were few coins earlier than the Hecatomnid dynasty:—

"Speaking generally, it may be said that coined money did not come into common use as a medium of exchange in the towns and village communities of Central Caria until long after the age of Alexander the Great. The second century B.C., from the date of the victory of the Romans over Antiochus in B.C. 189, marks the beginning of a new state of things, and a rapid development of commercial activity accompanied by the introduction of autonomous coinages at all the principal centres of population.....From the beginning of the hegemony of Athens, B.C. 469, down to the time of her Sicilian losses during the Peloponnesian war, the Greek towns on the Carian coasts were for the most part attached to the Athenian League, and, with the exception perhaps of Cos, struck few coins. Nor was there any coinage as yet in the interior.....After the death of Tissaphernes the Satrapy of Caria south of the Mæander was bestowed by the Great King upon Hecatomnus of Mylasa, in whose family it remained down to the capture of Halicarnassus by Alexander, B.C. 334. The policy consistently adhered to by the Hecatomnids from first to last was the aggrandizement of their own family at the expense, on the one hand, of the independent Carian communities and of the semi-autonomous Greek cities and islands, and, on the other hand, of the King of Persia."

Nevertheless

"the failure of Athens to maintain her ascendency and to continue to levy tribute, the incompetence of Sparta to uphold the rule of the oligarchical minorities, and the utter impotence of Persia, all contributed to the independent growth of a few of the most favourably situated Greek cities on the coasts of Asia Minor and the adjacent islands, and to the increasing prosperity of such commercial centres as Rhodus, Halicarnassus, Cos, Ephesus, &c. This is clearly manifest from the renewed activity in the mints of all these places in the fourth century B.C."

A glance at the remarkable series of forty-five autotype plates, in which upwards of five hundred and fifty coins are admirably displayed, will confirm the preceding extracts. With the exception of the noble series of Cnidus (including the earliest representation of a human head—that of Aphrodite, the most human of goddesses—occurring on any coin), Cos, and Rhodes, and a few scattered examples, such as those of Calymna and Camirus, the coins described in this volume do not as a rule date from an earlier period than the second century B.C., and the great majority are of the Imperial time. Hence, with the exceptions just noted, we must not look for the artistic excellence which is pre-eminently associated with Greek coins of the earlier periods. Yet the Greek Imperial issues, despite their incontestable ugliness, are far from being uninteresting or unimportant. They tell us what were the local cults in distant parts of the Roman empire, and they show us the manner in which the people of Asiatic Greece (or Greek Asia) represented their divinities. Moreover, they preserve for us the forms of those sacred if barbarous images of strange Asiatic deities which were exhibited at the great festivals, and even portray in a dim fashion the statues of famous sculptors, such as the Aphrodite of Cnidus by Praxiteles, shown on plate xvi. In spite, however, of this archæological interest, the student will doubtless turn with a feeling of relief from these historical documents to the exquisite conceptions of the heads of Aphrodite and Helios as exhibited on the earlier coins of Cnidus and Rhodes. The manner in which the coinage illustrates the history of individual cities may be noticed, especially in the cases of Halicarnassus and Cnidus, whilst among the curious commentaries upon ancient cults may be mentioned the coin of Attuda bearing the name and bust of the god Mên Karou, whose temple on the left bank of the Caprus was still venerated in Strabo's time :—

"At the neighbouring village of Μηνὸς κώμη there was a spring of alkaline waters, and in connexion with this spring and with the hieron of the god a famous school of medicine, located apparently at Laodicea, thirteen miles distant. The heads of this school in Strabo's time were Zeuxis and Alexander Philalethes, whose names appear on coins of Laodicea of the reign of Augustus. If this establishment was dependent (as it seems to have been) upon the temple of Mên Karou, we may infer that among the manifold aspects under which Mên was worshipped that of a healer of diseases must be included. The Cock and the Serpent, which are elsewhere conspicuous among the attributes of this god, also point to a partial assimilation of Mên to Asklepios; and the occurrence of Asklepios and Hygieia as coin-types at Attuda is to some extent confirmatory of this hypothesis."

It should be noticed that Dr. Head not only does not confine his introductory remarks to data furnished by the Museum collection, but also adds a supplementary plate representing coins not included in that series. The volume, therefore, comprises a fairly exhaustive treatment of the whole subject as at present known to numismatists, and transcends considerably the limitations of a special catalogue. Of the technical descriptions of the coins it is only necessary to say that they maintain the almost fastidious standard of precision for which the 'Catalogue of Greek Coins' is celebrated, whilst the printing and plates confer much credit upon the producers.

Spenser's 'Faerie Queene,' a Poem in Six Books, with the Fragment Mutabilitie. Edited by T. J. Wise. Pictured by W. Crane. 2 vols. (G. Allen.)—The completion of Mr. Allen's venture even more than justifies what on the former occasion we said about it. First, Mr. Wise has added much to the value of the edition by including in his careful and elaborate preface various documents which are seldom found in modern reprints of the 'Faerie Queene,' such as Spenser's letter to Raleigh, a sort of "Argument" which is desirable "for that it giveth great light to the reader, for the better understanding" of the poet's "whole intention," as he called it; with this we have careful collations of various texts; and the noble second dedication of the epic to Elizabeth, with the author's hope that it might "live with the Eternitie of her Fame." A brief, but sufficient bibliography of Spenser's poems and a sort of skeleton chronology of the poet's life are welcome, together with facsimiles of the title-pages of various seventeenth century editions of the poem, the complimentary sonnets — some of which are gems in their way — and a number of what Mr. Wise calls "oddments" of various kinds. Spenser's minor poems are not, of course, included in these bulky volumes. Apart from the really great merits of the editor's and publisher's contributions to this elaborate publication, its immediate and more important occasion was doubtless the fact that Mr. Walter Crane had undertaken to illustrate the text with about two hundred and fifty designs on wood, of various sizes and degrees of elaboration. Naturally some of these are very unequal; indeed, not a few are hardly worthy of the artist or his theme, and the best of them are better in the originals—some of which we saw lately in the New Gallery—than in Messrs. Waterlow's transcripts of them. On the other hand, not a few are as fine as we have a right to expect from Mr. Crane, which is saying a great deal. Mr. Crane possesses a superabundance of invention and a sort of rapturous sympathy with romantic chivalry and the allegorizing mood of Spenser. Above all, he has true love for the picturesque, and as much delight in "colour" as it is possible for him to have, and without which no one can read the 'Faerie Queene' aright. Even his affectations and mannerisms do not unfit him to be the redundant illustrator of a poem, the artifices and mannerisms of which are as numerous and manifest as his own, and of exactly the same kind. Of course the only thing wanted to make these designs adequate to their function is colour, which doubtless was out of the question unless the draughtsman was prepared to work on such a scale and with such splendour of tints and wealth of light as M. Tissot used in illustrating the 'Life of Christ.' Even in respect to this inevitable shortcoming it is something to be able to say that no modern artist is so well qualified to illustrate Spenser with pictures as Mr. Crane, whose light and brilliant system of colouring, such as we notice in all his paintings, is the very thing for the 'Faerie Queene.' As to this, it is not to be forgotten that no one has done so much injustice to Mr. Crane as himself, because, mannered, dull, and weak as many of his drawings in black and white are, as, for example, in this volume not a few, some of his pictures please us still less in their lack of finish, purity of tints, and freshness. The least to be admired in the numerous cuts before us are such as the frontispiece to canto x. of book i., comprising, much as in a modern stained-glass window, whole-length standing figures of Speranza, Cælia, and Fidelia; these are the weakest of all Mr. Crane's weaker allegories, and as if their mannerisms and tameness were not enough, they are so far from being spontaneous and Spenserian as to be quite modern and statuesque. The next design illustrates 'Charissa' in the Spenserian mood and has style in it. Again we revert to trivialities and manner of the tamest in the design which shows how

> Fayre Una to the Redcrosse Knight
> Betrothed is with joy,

while a stage monarch of the transpontine realm blesses the happy pair with effusion. The next design to this is a headpiece of trumpeters, which, though of the simplest sort, is quite as fresh, energetic, and decorative as it is full of expression and incident. At the end of the same canto xii. book i. there is a drawing of the ship of joy which is worthy of the best mode of German book-decoration during the later part of the sixteenth century, to which it pleases Mr. Crane to refer us. Many of these designs for title-pages, headpieces, and tailpieces are quite beyond praise as examples of book-decorations and enrichments of a very masculine and stately sort, such as few could devise better than our artist. Mr. Crane's ideals of some of Spenser's heroines are generally much to the point; for instance, his "fayre Belphœbe" is a very fine and true presentment of that > —— goodlie Ladie clad in hunters weed,

> That seemd to be a woman of great worth
> And by her stately portance borne of heavenly birth.

Another fine example of Mr. Crane's aptitude as an illustrator of the 'Faerie Queene' occurs in the large print showing how Sir Artegall fought with and slew in the river the pagan knight Pollentè. The passion of this combat is magnificently depicted, from the huge horses bestridden by the champions to the way in which Sir Artegall holds his sword in delivering his blow. The interview of the treacherous Clarinda with Sir Artegall in prison (see the end of book v. canto v.) is in Mr. Crane's very finest mode and mood, and expresses the yearning of the warlike maid for the elfin knight with choiceness and force. The former is a charming figure. An equally good example is that in which Britomart slays the Amazon. In these, as in most of the specimens, there is plenty of the energy which informs the broad and masculine style of the designer, and when he should deal with such hideous and stupid monsters as the Blatant Beast he prudently omits them altogether, or keeps them in the backgrounds of his cuts. We are, by the way, not quite sure Mr. Crane appreciates Spenser's notions of the Blatant Beast. Much of his drawing of the naked figure is defective because of his carelessness or impatience; but when his subject attracts him, as where the Graces dance to Colin's music, where Belphœbe walks in the forest, and where the naked nymphs dance between the trees (book vi. canto x.), it is quite otherwise.

MODERN SOCIETY.

English Society sketched by G. du Maurier (Osgood) contains a large proportion of the most brilliant and characteristic designs of the humourist and wit we have lost. In delicacy and fine draughtsmanship the cuts as they were originally published were superior to those in this volume, and they cannot, of course, successfully bear comparison with the originals as they were lately exhibited in Bond Street and elsewhere. The outlines are a little blurred, while the darker shadows, which owe much of their intended value to their clearness and firmness, are but too often obscure. In spite of these technical shortcomings, and the absence of an index or even a list of the plates (they are not even numbered or dated !), this publication is valuable and delightful. Being what they are, it is interesting to compare them with Leech's and Doyle's. Du Maurier's resources were fewer; his types—especially those of his many tall and finely developed young women — were so much alike as to justify critics who call him a mannerist, which could not be said of Doyle or Leech. It is true that his strapping maids and portly matrons are better bred and more graceful than those of his forerunners; his little boys and little girls greatly surpass those of Doyle; and as an artist he cultivated style with a zest the other draughtsmen did not exhibit, while his sense of colour — a precious quality in book-illustration — far surpassed Doyle's, and was very nearly as fine as Leech's. Du Maurier's faculty of getting much out of an incident which promised literally nothing was as great as that of any English satiric artist. So plain is this to those who examine this book, that at least fifty examples might be given in which the most unpromising incidents assume a charm in his hands that is quite irresistible. Take one of them, and let us wonder who but Du Maurier could have done so well with a subject like that which so deftly and with so much spirit illustrates "the freemasonry of art," and delineates the meeting of a "man and a maid," both banjo-players, in a cornfield, whereupon he asks her to "give him the c," which she does with an "Oh, certainly." The figures are so admirable, true to life and character, and excellent in their style, that we forgive the mannerisms of the work, the hackneyed types of the figures, and the triviality of the incident, because the design's truthfulness and gracefulness redeem all its shortcomings, to say nothing of the faults, which are manifest enough. Mr. W. D. Howells, who supplies a rhapsodical introduction to the volume, pitches the notes of his admiration a great deal too high.

Messrs. Sampson Low & Co. publish Pen and Pencil in Parliament, compiled and illustrated by Mr. Harry Furniss, a picture book which has excellent letterpress, and the pictures of which are partly excellent, although by no means uniformly so. The great caricaturists of the day suffer, as no doubt did their progenitors of the last century, by each of them having some people that they are unable to caricature. Mr. Furniss, for instance, while he is excellent with Mr. Gladstone, with Sir Richard Temple, and with Mr. Speaker Peel, fails altogether with Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Keir Hardie. Mr. Chamberlain is apparently singularly difficult to caricature, but two of the leading caricaturists do him admirably, while the rest all fail. No one has ever failed so totally with Mr. Chamberlain as has Mr. Furniss in the greater portion of his work, although we remember a caricature of 'Chamberlain Brothers' which was more successful. Two views of Mr. Chamberlain are presented in the present book, of which one is a singularly excellent caricature of Mr. Austen Chamberlain, but not recognizable except by context as a caricature of the father. The other is very common, while Mr. Chamberlain has many disagreeable expressions from time to time, but always an air of intellectual distinction. This is entirely wanting in the portrait caricature at p. 44 in the present book. The rendering of Lord Randolph Churchill in his later days is admirable; the Chancellor, Lord Lathom, and Lord Cross, in a fancy sketch of a Royal Commission, are as good as possible; and a series of Mr. Gladstone in a great speech worthy to rank with the finest efforts of the greatest masters of caricature. Mr. Gladstone's excitement, at p. 37, is so powerfully rendered that we feel every muscle, we are clenched with the left hand and banged with the right as though we were "the box" itself. Mr. Furniss is not very successful with Lord Rosebery, a difficult subject, and fails totally with Sir William Harcourt, Sir F. Lockwood, and the ordinary member. The Lord Randolph Churchill of the last days, at p. 31, and the 'Mr. Gladstone Excited' really deserve permanent preservation. A marvellous Parliamentary gallery might be formed by accompanying such specimens of Mr. Furniss at his best with some of those of Mr. Chamberlain by other artists, and of Mr. Carruthers Gould's best work.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Fifth Notice.)

We come now to the remaining portraits. In Mrs. L. Phillips (No. 282) Miss E. Wright has found a charming subject, and painted it in, as Browning said, a very "French and fine" manner, which is an excellent illustration of the influence of Mr. Sargent, but it is somewhat too waxy and smooth to please a severe taste.—Mr. Shannon has painted C. S. Read, Esq. (333), who takes off his white hat and looks at us as if he had just come in from the garden and had made good use of the spud under his arm. It is a genial and happy portrait, full of character and inspired by an unusual sense of humour. As a picture it is excellent and sound, but not otherwise remarkable. Mrs. G. Peck's portrait (404) is almost too loosely treated. Jill (639) is a very natural and pleasing portrait by Mr. Shannon, to which we have referred before. Sir J. T. Hibbert (646), an officer in blue with a sword at his side and a cocked hat in his hand, is better as an admirable rendering of an astute and energetic expression than as a picture, good as it is in this respect. Mr. Wells's Miss D. P. Bowman (286) is decidedly good, for it is more luminous and better in colour than is usual with this conscientious Academician, whose portrait of himself, H. T. W. (226), lacks character, though sound and careful. His Bishop of Ripon (438) is thoroughly "official," and depicts a latter-day prelate to the life, but it is not otherwise interesting.—Really pretty, neat, and sweet is Mr. J. Sant's exercise in the manner of the Annuals and Forget-me-nots of our grandmothers' days, the likeness of a large-eyed boy, Jervoise (231). — A capital and thoroughly modern piece is the life-size, whole-length, bright and brilliant portrait of Mrs. C. Meyer (291), which is Mr. J. S. Sargent's masterpiece of the year, an excellent likeness and most charming as a painting. Its strongest point, perhaps, is the treatment of the rich, pure, and delicate bloom of the carnations, which, however, are, as is not seldom the case with the painter, rather artificial and a little feverish. The lady sits on a sofa, as Mr. Sargent's ladies are in the habit of doing, and thus displays the splendid exuberance of her gown of peach-blossom silk. The little boy behind her wears a dress of silver grey, which supplies the right note of colour complementary to his mother's carnations and peach-blossom dress. Behind the boy is a young girl, whose broad black sash and armlets complete an arrangement of colour which, though not particularly original, is in a high degree exquisite and scientific, and, as colour, was never better treated. The Hon. Laura Lister (605), the whole-length figure of a little girl in a black-and-white dress standing by a pedestal while looking shyly at us out of her serious grey eyes, is most charming, especially in the flesh-painting, the sober and delicate chromatic scheme, and the natural expression of the face and attitude. —Mr. Orchardson's portrait of the Provost of Oriel College, Oxford (355), appears to us—having seen it several times—about the least substantial and well studied of all his works of the kind, to unite, in fact, the flimsiness of unsound and meretricious execution with the dulness of official likeness-taking. It may, however, contest the palm of inferiority with Mr. Herkomer's portrait, The Baroness Deichmann (423). — Mr. R. Onslow Ford, a young painter whose entrance upon professional life is marked by the life-size portrait of Miss Onslow Ford (390), deserves congratulations upon the fine and original coloration, and the finish, care, and softness of the picture, which, however, though good as a likeness, is not quite just to the sitter. — Mr. J. S. Lucas, better known as a painter of anecdotes and costume subjects than as a taker of likenesses, contributes in Mrs. A. Tooth (422) a good picture, painted in a bright if rather showy and dexterous way, and designed with some grace. Mr. Lucas is less fortunate in his other contributions.

Mr. W. A. Breakspear's Miss F. Coats (470) is a good illustration of the painter's modest and refined mood, executed in a French manner. It is a careful and natural, life-size, whole-length portrait of a young lady, seated in full front view and dressed in white.—Mr. J. H. Lorimer gives in A Dog and a Mirror (591) two capital portraits, a very fine, handsome, and gentlemanly collie, seated before a mirror in which is reflected the head of the artist to whom he is sitting. The dog is excellently painted, and so well designed that he seems to appreciate the situation. It is—though not to be compared with it as a piece of tone—much better and more careful than 'A Dance' (497), to which we have already referred as by the same very unequal artist.—Mr. Ouless's Hon. Sir S. P. Fane (687) is good in all respects, especially in soundness and characterization. Similarly sound, unpretending, and sincere contributions by this artist are The Hon. W. F. D. Smith (84); The Lord Lister (296), an "official" example, with a commonplace pose; and Sir C. Seely (327), a better work in a better pose.—Some eminent French portrait painters have of late years been conspicuous at the Academy. Of their works may be mentioned the younger M. J. J. Benjamin-Constant's F. Ayer, Esq. (47), an admirable portrait, solid, learned, spirited, and well drawn. The Earl of Ava (194) is a life-size, three-quarters-length figure in profile, a good likeness, in which the flesh shadows are too brown and the hands too large.

One of the most distinguished French portrait painters of our time is adequately represented by the fine, homogeneous, and brilliant, life-size, whole-length Mlle. Gayrard-Pacini (942), a model English painters of ladies, and especially Mr. Herkomer, who seems to affect this beautiful sort of art, might well learn much from. It is by M. Léon Comerre, whose power in painting the carnations, modelling them with rare taste and care, grouping the tones and local colours of his pictures, was never better shown than in this beautiful, learned, and luminous piece. If we are right in supposing that in his best and most modest moods Mr. Herkomer looks on art such as this for his pattern, it will be well to point out where the French master excels our Academician; for instance, he is conspicuously superior to Mr. Herkomer in the purity and brightness of the whole work, where frankness and delicacy are the leading qualities instead of the chic and unsoundness of our Academician, and fine drawing and a good style occur instead of slightness and crude pretences without solidity and a chastened taste, sobriety instead of showiness. —We approach the end of the portraits in oil in Gallery XI. with Mr. Charlton's rather "cut-up," but bright and animated Lord Tredegar (1036).—Last of all, and probably the worst portrait of a lady in the whole Academy, is that in which Mrs. W. Parkinson (1045) was unlucky enough to be coarsely represented by Mr. M. Greiffenhagen. The face is soiled and the white gown is dirty. Her eyes stare and her cheeks are feverish. We are sorry for Mrs. W. Parkinson.

Besides the landscapes we have already named, the Academy contains an unusual number of commendable works. No. 560, by Mr. F. Goodall, represents, on a scale even more unnecessarily large than that of No. 209, Eton, from the Royal Library, Windsor Castle, and, in spite of its coldness and weakness of drawing and effect, it possesses the three noteworthy qualities we have admired in the pseudo-Nilotic landscape.—Mr. T. S. Cooper's Summer Afternoon (4), like his Tranquillity (127) and O'er the Brae of Balquhodder (197), is a marvel for so old a man. It is not worse than the artist has diligently produced during some sixty years. Verboeckhoven and other Dutch mechanics of this century, founding themselves upon the cattle painters of the seventeenth century, never had a more industrious and faithful follower than Mr. Cooper, whose cows would excite the wrath of "Peter Pindar," because they are veritably

Marble cattle in glass pastures grazing.

Time has marred his drawing, and the bodies of his cows become more and more distended. On the other hand, his pictures are as bright, his modelling is as laborious, his touch as firm, his colours are as clean, his grouping is as conventional, and his designs are as purposeless as ever.—Mr. Colin Hunter's Day of Rest (13) is disfigured by mannerisms as common and motives as dull and conventions as hackneyed as Mr.

Cooper's; but the touch is coarse, the crudities are more heedless of nature, and the veracity of the whole is much less easy to discover. In the course of his long career Mr. Cooper never vulgarized nature in the way of 'The Day of Rest,' which is by no means the worst of Mr. Hunter's pot-boilers. The sky may be described as machine-made; the clouds are formless and without the least hint that masses of vapour, being more or less solid, should be modelled according to the laws of perspective, while their lights and shadows are as those of other substances. In The Pool in the Wood (253), the most ambitious of Mr. Hunter's contributions, the clouds are like white wool, and water has the limpidity and brilliance of a scree of broken slate in a quarry. If Mr. Hunter sees nature thus he is to be pitied exceedingly.—Mr. G. Wetherbee's rather painty sea-piece Aphrodite's Realm (19) is not so choice as his works in a classic strain we have often admired.—More like nature than Mr. Hunter's coast-piece is Crossing the Stream (24), Mr. P. Graham's compound of his old materials, the well-known cows, rocks, peat-stained torrent, mist in paint, and mountains of worn-out sorts; the cows are almost as woolly as Mr. Hunter's clouds. Mr. Graham's gleam of sunlight, if still the best of his properties, is getting dingy and shabby. Although the materials of the sea-piece, No. 210, its rocks, mists, beds of black mussels, dashing waves, and flying spray, are quite as old as those of 'Crossing the Stream,' we like them better because there is more reality in them, and the picture, mainly on account of the black mussels, is a better example of colour. There is limpidity and wealth of light and tints in a Peter Graham of which a Colin Hunter knows nothing, and when Mr. Graham's compounds were new there was much to be thankful for in them.—The Tragic Sunset (28) of Mr. J. Finnie and The Golden Shore (35) of Mr. J. Olsson are, though scenic, and therefore artificial in differing ways, more or less effective.—At Polperro (46), by Mr. L. Watt, is a clear, bright, and veracious sketch of a Cornish quay-side with whitewashed cottages in pure daylight.—Mr. J. Farquharson's "The shortening winter day is near a close" (69) is a rather mannered and slight rendering of twilight deepening upon a snow-strewn woodland, but its sympathetic rendering of nature makes it welcome and pleasant to study. It is sounder than most Scottish landscapes of its class are wont to be.—Mr. J. MacWhirter's Affric Water, looking up (76), and Affric Water, looking down (85), make "a pair" of unexceptionable quality, richness of colour and tone, and but slightly marred by an excess of the vehicle, which, while it ensures limpidity to the pigments, tends to make all the work look thin and is not without danger for the pictures' permanence. The same remark applies in a less degree to this artist's much more ambitious though rather melodramatic illustration of Browning's "Childe Roland to the dark tower came" (247), a large tragedy in oil paint, which is conspicuous in Gallery III., and, in a somewhat less degree still, to his Alpine Meadows (483), which is the finest piece of colour and telling study of stormy sunlight in Gallery VI. As a fine critic, who was likewise a painter, said some time ago, "Vehicle goes a long way in a Scotchman's landscape," a remark which refers to an inherent vice of the school Mr. MacWhirter represents. Mr. MacWhirter's sense of the pathos of nature in landscape, a fine quality Scottish painters possess and cultivate in a higher degree than all but first-rate Englishmen seem to care for, is decidedly effective, though it is not of the grandest or most reticent kind. In this respect 'Childe Roland' misses its mark, and is a trifle stagey. This view of a mountain valley after sunset, while a lurid blood-red glare fills the horizon and the fringes of the slate-coloured clouds are dashed with fire, has a sort of obviousness which is somewhat out of keeping with the theme. Equally obvious are the figure of Childe Roland and the convenient rock he stands on, while he blows the "slug-horn" (the very name of which gladdened the heart of the poet who used it) in front of the dark grey turret perched on the crag above him, and distinct, yet half lost, against the ashy gloom of the sky. Apart from these really telling elements of a tragedy in landscape, Browning's devotees will recognize more of John Martin in 'Childe Roland' than of Gaspar Poussin or of Turner. It is, for all that, a fine picture, and were it not for the vehicle would be finer still. Perhaps, after all, no one could successfully paint what "the dark heart of man" recognizes in Browning's romance.

While in 'Childe Roland' we have more of the landscape than of the adventurous champion Browning put in the front in every part of the legend—a significant fact the painter has overlooked—in Mr. MacWhirter's 'Alpine Meadows' we have no figures, only a deep valley between cliffs, its cloudy distance purple and grey; in the foreground, rocks glistening in the sunlight like silver, and bedded deep in resplendent mountain flowers glowing with a hundred hues, while in the clear bluish shadow of the mid-distance lie the white towers and houses of a little town. It is a charming picture, somewhat forced, but full of light, and rich in colours such as only sub-Alpine landscapes yield. We may class this fine and able piece with its delightful neighbour by Mr. D. Murray, the brilliant, homogeneous, and beautiful Deeside (476), as two of the best naturalistic landscapes of the year.—Quite different from the last is the Tranquil Stream (83) of Mr. E. A. Waterlow, a restful view of a calm stream in silvery light, a veritable type of repose, silence, and the slowest movement. In the shallows cattle loiter in drinking, and the softened lustre of afternoon distinguishes the whiteness of a chalk-pit cut in the distant down, but it does not disturb the harmony pervading the colour, lighting, and grading of this charming example. Mr. Waterlow's Autumn Floods (217, not 270) depicts a river with what Coleridge called a "plangent" surface, delicately graded and harmonious in every element, brilliant in its lighting and tender in its colour, splendid in its reflections of golden, white, green, and blue—a picture which is distinguished for refinement, expansiveness, and breadth. Here, again, chalk downs are depicted with skill equal to that displayed in 'A Tranquil Stream,' but under quite a different aspect and effect of light and atmosphere. In the foreground, which has a touch of a Troyon about it, are placed a man about to ferry sheep across the water, a woman tramp, her baby, and a restless sheep-dog. Mr. Waterlow's Flowery Fields (369) is quite fresh, tender, broad, and true, and yet different from either of the others. A wide and level meadow, fully clad in autumnal flowers, has given to the painter an opportunity for exhibiting his uncommon adroitness in grading the surface of pasture land, and treating homogeneously the blossoms of different colours which grow there; a similar opportunity has given scope to his skill in grading the atmosphere where vapours seem to grow denser while we look. The painting of the tall elms, which seem almost asleep in the still autumnal air, has tested Mr. Waterlow's draughtsmanship and touch, while the soft charm of the nacreous clouds and the pale blue firmament they float in seems made to his hand. One of the choicest portions of this capital piece is the distance, half-veiled in the tender vapours which screen, or nearly screen, an old church tower and dense masses of foliage. Summer Flowers (680) depicts a meadow enamelled with blossoms of all hues, white predominating. The beautiful drawing of the slender aspen in the left foreground of trees, and its tender foliage, finely set against the pale azure of the sky, surcharged with vapours, but not darkened by any of them, remind us of Corot's inimitable draughtsmanship. This is the last of Mr. Waterlow's contributions.—Miss H. Alvis's Fringe of Devonshire (126) is a sober, sound, and faithfully coloured sketch of a rocky coast and the summer sea slowly surging round the islets which stand apart from the dark and lofty cliffs of slate. The land is not nearly so good as the sea.—When the Tide is Out (139), by Mr. J. S. Hill, is a pleasing study of cottages near the sea. It is in good keeping, and the colour is excellent.

There is too much that is feeble and formless about Mr. J. W. North's The Old Abbey Fish-ponds: Morning in March (152), the latter half of the title being, we suppose, an apology, though no justification, for the wool-like foliage and the thinness and "tintiness" of every other feature of the picture. It would be difficult to say whether this work or the next is the more barren of anything sufficiently definite for the eye to test its veracity by. The Promise of May (583) is rightly named so far as the title may be taken to indicate that there is nothing solid or completed in it. In An English Western Valley (606) the objects are again so attenuated and weakly and slightly painted as to be libels on the sumptuous vegetation of Somerset and Devon, to which the landscape is supposed to refer.

Mr. L. P. Smythe has not yet quite justified the hopes founded on his earlier works, but A Spring Carol (153) is meritorious.—Mr. R. Wane's On the Way to Mona's Isle (154) comprises a respectably painted and sympathetic sea, but it is rather heavy and deficient in motion and reflected light.—Mr. H. R. Rose's study in Venice, No. 158, portrays the marble façades with a felicitous touch, rich colours, and brilliancy.—Mr. F. Dean's Windy Day by the River (159) is happy in its way, and much better than a "Constable of the palette-knife" or a bad though genuine Constable, of which there are not a few, the cult of Constable being very much a matter of the market.—Lingering Light (161), by Mr. F. E. Bodkin, is poetic, homogeneous, tender, and solid, as such a theme should be. On the other hand, Mr. W. Logsdail's Bronze Horses of St. Mark's (252) is the most veracious and luminous of the many representations of the famous statues, and very well drawn indeed. — The Forest Team (248), by Mr. N. H. J. Baird, a group of horses pulling with vigour, is also excellently drawn and solid.—But in The Breezy Morn (268) of Mr. B. W. Leader we have the appearance of a fine and natural scene without the reality. Fast falls the Eventide (398) demands the same criticism on its showy fallaciousness, the speciousness of its treatment, and false sentiment. With these let us class the popularity-hunting and mosaic-like Autumn Gleam (554), the most mannered of all Mr. Leader's productions; while the little On a Surrey Common (913), being but a sketch, is, so far as it goes, more sincere, if not less mannered.—Of quite a different stamp, solid, delicate, modest, yet strong and profoundly pathetic in its simplicity, the charm of its glow, the wealth and breadth of its coloration, and the luminousness of its atmosphere, Mr. Leslie's fine Day of Rest (269), horses grazing in a sunlit meadow near trees that seem to be reposing in the windless air, deserves especial notice.

The Landscape (292) is a fine specimen of Sir J. Gilbert's romantic mood. The Ford (370) has, in a larger measure, the faults and excesses of 'Landscape,' with more of the peculiar fuliginousness of the tones and shadows which is the worst defect of Sir John's art. The light and colour in The Rain Squall (311) of Mr. W. J. Shaw, a capital sea-piece, are excellent. — It is unusual for a picture of Mr. A. Goodwin's to be too chalky, as is the case in a slight degree with an otherwise charmingly picturesque quasi-Oriental example which is called The King's Garden: Sindbad entertained at the Court of the King of the Indies (326). The luminous tenderness, the beautiful colour, and the graceful sentiment of this work are quite delightful. Florence (332), by the same artist, is Florence when seen as poets and painters see it. The atmosphere is exquisitely delicate, broad, full of softened light, and pure. Meyringen (1320), in the Water-Colour Room, is deliciously tender and refined, with the fuller tints of a pale and pure opal. Among the greatest charms of these works of Mr. Goodwin are the exquisite gradations of the air, light, and subtle hues and tones. He is more than himself this year.—Quite a different kind of art is that of the masculine, gloomy tragedy of the sea to which Mr. C. N. Hemy gives the suggestive name of Lost (334). It depicts with force and sympathy a turbulent sea breaking furiously at the foot of a rugged line of cliffs, the more distant of which are half hidden by dark grey vapour. To these cliffs the storm has brought an empty ship's boat, and before long will dash it against the iron-bound coast. The sea is a little too ghastly, and its glassy green could hardly exist where, surging and resurging, the waters plunge heavily against the cliffs. The Academicians were well advised when they bought with the Chantrey Fund his 'Pilchards,' which we have already treated; and they were also wise in purchasing Miss L. E. Kemp-Welch's Colt-hunting in the New Forest (346). Though rather rougher than is required, the surface of this picture and its colouring are well done—better, by a good deal, than they are in the works of the famous animal painter James Ward. The picture, too, is full of energy and new motives, and it is obviously the fruit of much spirit and many studies of horse life.

ROMNEY'S PORTRAIT OF THOMAS PAINE.

THE long-lost portrait of Thomas Paine, painted by Romney in 1792, has at length, I feel certain, been found.

The portrait was painted for Dr. Thomas Cooper, of Manchester, who emigrated with his household about a hundred years ago to the United States, where he had a distinguished career. After having been a judge, a prisoner of President Adams under the Alien and Sedition Act, Professor of Chemistry in Dickinson College, Pennsylvania, he became in 1819 President of South Carolina College. From this office he retired in 1834, and devoted his remaining years to the revision of the statutes of South Carolina (ten volumes). In that state, at Columbia, he died May 11th, 1840. A biography of Cooper has long been a desideratum, and I am told that one will ere long appear.

Cooper was an ardent "Paineite," both politically and religiously, and being a gentleman of means he could have had no reason to part with this portrait. Not long after his death it came into the hands of a Mr. Matsell, an official of Brooklyn, New York, and for many years it has been known to a small circle of "Free Inquirers" in that region. It was, however, always ascribed to the "Elder Jarvis"—John Wesley Jarvis—an artist in whose house Paine resided for a time in 1806. It was never publicly exhibited, nor in any sale, nor in the hands of a dealer, but about seven years ago came by private purchase to its present owner in New York, an admirer of Paine. Some years ago he called my attention to it, telling me that it was by the elder Jarvis, and this statement I accepted. But later I discovered that this was well-nigh impossible. Jarvis did not see Paine until he was many years older than in this portrait. He did make a little drawing of Paine, which was lithographed for a memorial, and he made the bust owned by the Historical Society of New York; but neither of these has any resemblance to this portrait, long ascribed to him. Moreover, this portrait was certainly not painted independently of the Romney, as any one can see by comparing it with Sharp's engraving, made in 1793. It is conceivable that Jarvis might have copied the Romney, but hardly credible that, especially in his youth (he was only twenty-three when he first saw Paine), he could have done such work as this. Another fact of importance is this: the younger Jarvis (Charles Wesley Jarvis) painted in 1857 (signed) a fine portrait of Paine now in my possession, and evidently from Sharp's engraving, this being proved by the eyes being grey. Now in this Romney portrait the eyes are a very dark brown, and I have contemporary evidence, lately found, that Paine's eyes were dark. If the younger Jarvis's father had ever painted this dark-eyed Paine, his son, continuing work in the same city, must have known it, and could not have made his erroneous conjecture about the eyes.

Having by these and other reasons ascertained that the tradition of the New York freethinkers as to the origin of the portrait was erroneous, I found many reasons for my present certainty that it is the veritable Romney. The owner was somewhat reluctant to believe that his picture was not a Jarvis, but as he desired to sell it I advised him to send it to London, where it has been placed, on the suggestion of Mr. Lionel Cust, in the National Portrait Gallery. I have there placed beside it a good copy of Sharp's large engraving of the subject, 1793.

It will thus be seen that it is not without long consideration, investigation, and consultation that I venture on this announcement. My hesitation has been largely due to the fact that some of the minor details differ from the Sharp engraving. The adventures of a picture in travelling about the world by land and sea a hundred years ago could not fail to tell on it, and it has been touched here and there, though happily the face is intact and justifies the strong encomium of John Romney upon it. The minor differences may be better traced by experts than by myself, whether due to a restorer or to Sharp's deviation from the original. I may mention that in 1794 Sharp engraved a smaller picture after the Romney, in which the lid of the table is treated differently from his engraving of 1793, and resembles the lid in this Romney. While the resemblances between the painting and the engraving are such as could not possibly occur in pictures of independent origin, the few differences sufficiently prove that the painting was not made from the engraving.

I have not the slightest doubt—and this accords with the opinion of persons well acquainted with Romney's work who have already examined the portrait—that the very striking and powerful face now to be seen in the National Portrait Gallery is the genuine Romney, and the only portrait of Paine now in existence which was painted from the man himself. The earlier portrait by Charles Willson Peale, long the valued possession of Joseph Jefferson, was a few years ago destroyed by the fire which consumed the summer residence in Cape Cod of that distinguished actor.

MONCURE D. CONWAY.

THE CITADEL OF CAIRO.

IT is curious that the part of mediæval Cairo which has been, perhaps, most neglected by archæologists is the famous citadel, commonly spoken of as Saladin's, but chiefly the work of his nephew El-Kāmil Mohammed. The truth is that the fortress has been so often altered and added to by the Mamlūk Sultans, and finally by Mohammed 'Alī, that it is exceedingly difficult to distinguish the original building from later accretions. M. Paul Casanova, of the Paris Bibliothèque Nationale, has published a useful memoir on the subject, in which he quotes and comments on most of the Arabic records bearing on the history of the citadel; but even he can do little to clear up the confusion that exists, and antiquaries are still divided upon many of the problems connected with the plan of the original fort. The Sultan Mohammed En-Nāsir in the fourteenth, and Mohammed 'Alī in the present century, seem to have been the authors of the most considerable changes, and the latter certainly altered almost the whole of the part connected with the Bāb-el-Azab and fronting the Rumeyla. Behind and under his additions are various remains of the older stages in the citadel's history; but these have never been properly explored. Only this year, when Capt. W. F. Myers and Mr. Stanley Lane-Poole were wandering about the roofs and passages in the quarter occupied by the Egyptian stores, over which Major Staveley Gordon, R.E., holds command, they unexpectedly walked into a large hall, with several bays or transepts, lofty arches, and a magnificent groined roof, which appears to have escaped the notice of all previous archæologists. This great hall, now filled with all sorts of dusty lumber, old donkey saddles of a former transport or commissariat service, rusty iron, &c., was used by Mohammed 'Alī as a cannon foundry. One of his old workmen, a veteran of over ninety, bore witness to this; but the evidence of the furnaces and the hole in the roof through which the cannon was hauled up to the battery platform was quite convincing without the testimony of this interesting survivor of Mohammed 'Alī's time. It was, however, clear that the hall belonged to a period long before that of the great pasha, and Mr. Lane-Poole believes that it is the "Lower Hall of Justice" built by the Mamlūk Sultan Beybars in the thirteenth century, and described by El-Makrizī as being below and outside the citadel wall, on the side facing the Meydān or horse-course. Capt. Myers also discovered a singular narrow passage leading out of the easternmost bay of the hall, and with the aid of Major Gordon's men he opened and pursued this passage some way into the interior of the citadel. More extensive excavation would be needed to discover where it comes out. It is remarkable that the hall and passage should have been passed over by travellers and archæologists, and there is no doubt that this discovery is but one of many that might be made if a thorough exploration of the citadel were undertaken.

When so much is being done for the mosques and gates of Cairo, especially since the last few years, by the Commission appointed for their preservation, it seems strange that nothing should have been attempted towards the excavation and restoration of the older parts of the citadel. Even the beautiful old mosque of En-Nāsir on its top has not received the care and attention that other mosques have had. The reason, no doubt, is that the citadel is a fortress, barrack, and arsenal under military command, and is, therefore, excluded from the purview of the Commission for the Preservation of the Monuments of Arab Art. Col. Green, however, the present C.R.E., is known to take a keen interest in the history and antiquities of the citadel, and is believed to be preparing a memoir on the subject. It cannot be doubted that he would welcome any efforts to explore the ancient passages and foundations that underlie the present surface, just as he gave every facility for the initial exploration of Capt. Myers. The work could be done by sappers at no great expense, under the supervision of Col. Green and of the architect of the Commission; and between the skilled survey of engineer officers and the architectural experience of Herz Bey, it ought to be possible to produce a satisfactory plan of the citadel and to establish the dates and lines of demarcation of the various stages in the growth of the fortress. No possible injury would be done to the works as a military position, for no general would dream of defending it from the present batteries, which are completely commanded by the heights of Mukattam behind. Nor need the exploration interfere in any serious degree with the present arrangement of the stores and ammunition. The excavation might be carried on gradually, piece by piece, and the modern barracks and other buildings need not be touched.

Lord Cromer has lately shown a faint interest in the preservation of Arab and Coptic monuments, and if the matter were laid before him he might possibly take it up. Whilst the subject is under consideration it is to be hoped that the English Consul-General will keep a watchful eye upon the new barracks which are to be built on the citadel. Notwithstanding the defects of the somewhat tawdry mosque of Mohammed 'Alī, the citadel and its pinnacles form a commanding and dignified feature in the view of Cairo from the desert or river, and it is important that any additions which may be made to its buildings should not deface the whole view by conspicuous incongruity. The average barrack of the approved sanitary pattern, beloved of the inspectors at the War Office, is probably the most revolting outrage upon architecture that meets the eye of man. We do not even except certain modern college buildings at Oxford or the new Record Office in Chancery Lane.

SALES.

Messrs. Christie, Manson & Woods sold on the 18th and 19th inst. the following from various collections. Drawings: Ford Madox Brown, The Entombment of Christ, 126*l.* Sir E. Burne-Jones, The Merciful Knight, 719*l.*; Buondelmonte's Wedding, Florence, A.D. 1215, 50*l.* D. G. Rossetti, The Bower Garden, 71*l.* J. W. North, "When Martinmas winds do blow," 110*l.* Pictures: L. Alma Tadema, The Ambuscade, Gonthramm Bosé, A.D. 572, 294*l.* J. Linnell, Young Anglers, 199*l.* H. W. B. Davis, Evening, 210*l.* Lord Leighton, King David, 136*l.*; Sibyl, 630*l.*; The Frigidarium, 687*l.* A. Moore, Battledore, 157*l.*; Shuttlecock, 147*l.*; The Musician, 152*l.* Colin Hunter, Baiters, 283*l.* W. Müller, A Winter Scene, with cottage, figures crossing a river in a boat, 504*l.* J. C. Hook, Spring, 183*l.* E. Long, An Ancient Custom, 420*l.*; Modern Cyprus, 126*l.*; Young England, 110*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

The numerous portraits illustrating the dramatic and musical art of England, which have been collected at the Grafton Gallery, will remain on view at least until the end of next month, if not a week or two longer. This collection is more attractive than several exhibitions which have been held in the same galleries. It includes such noteworthy pieces as Zoffany's 'Garrick and Mrs. Pritchard in "Macbeth,"' 'Garrick as Sir John Brute,' 'C. F. Abel,' 'Foote as Major Sturgeon,' and 'Foote and Watson in "The Devil on Two Sticks"'; Gainsborough's 'Garrick,' 'C. F. Abel,' 'Miss Linley and her Brother,' and others; Hogarth's 'Garrick as Richard III.' and 'Peg Woffington'; Romney's 'Sheridan'; Millais's 'Mrs. Langtry' and 'Mr. John Hare'; as well as works—more than five hundred in all—by J. Russell, Lely, Downman, Lawrence, Laurence, Harlow, Ramsay, Reynolds, Mr. J. S. Sargent, Mr. Sant, Mr. Shannon, Sir J. D. Linton, Mr. Orchardson, Mr. Alma Tadema, Maclise, Chartran, M. Dagnan-Bouveret, and Mr. Watts.

Among the recipients of honours on account of Her Majesty's Jubilee it is well to reckon three persons of note who are associated with the fine arts. Mr. W. B. Richmond, who was lately elected a Royal Academician, has, on account of his success in decorating St. Paul's with mosaics, been made a K.C.B.; Mr. Wyke Bayliss, President of the Society of British Artists, has been knighted; and Mr. Cuthbert Quilter, M.P., whose collection of modern pictures is one of the best and most select in the country, has received a baronetcy. Has Mr. Taylor, of the Board of Works, been made a K.C.B. as a reward for destroying the Rolls Chapel? His superiors professed to regret that act of stupid vandalism.

The Society of Miniaturists, to whose summer exhibition in the Grafton Gallery we referred last week, has collected about three hundred examples of its members' works, composed for the most part of capital portraits, such as suffice, when taken with the very fine works which are now at the Academy and the charming miniatures in the Graves Gallery, to prove that—prophecies to the contrary notwithstanding—the delightful art of portrait painting in small is by no means declining in this country; in fact, we never saw so many and such beautiful instances as are now to be seen at the galleries in question. Those in the Grafton Gallery comprise a number of choice things by excellent artists, and ought not to be overlooked, although, as a whole, the collection is not nearly so much to be admired as that in Burlington Gardens. In Grafton Street more than elsewhere lady painters as well as ladies' portraits predominate.

Considerable preparations are being made at the National Gallery for removing British pictures to Millbank, in order to the filling of Mr. Tate's gallery, which is rapidly approaching completion.

The Corporation of Tamworth has bought of the Marquis Townshend the remains of the castle of that place, which Scott associated with his imaginary Lord Marmion, and intends to employ it to hold a collection of works of local interest. The price was 3,000*l.*

Among the articles contained in the July number of the Genealogical Magazine will be one by the Rev. A. W. C. Hallen on 'Circumstantial Evidence in Heraldry,' and one by Mr. H. Murray Lane (Chester Herald) on Lane of Bentley Hall and King's Bromley Manor, whose family saved King Charles after the battle of Worcester.

In consequence of the garden party at Buckingham Palace and other arrangements connected with the Jubilee, fixed for June 28th, the annual meeting of the Society for the Promotion of Hellenic Studies is again postponed. It will be held on Monday, July 5th, at 5 P.M., when the President of the Society, Prof. Jebb, M.P., will take the chair.

A Correspondent writes:—

"It is Dr. Drury Fortnum's intention to present to the Ashmolean Museum at Oxford, as a memorial of the Jubilee, his entire collection of finger-rings, consisting of some eight hundred and twenty-five specimens, illustrative of that form of personal adornment from early Egyptian and through intervening times to the accession of Queen Victoria. This collection, together with that of his early Christian and other engraved gems and jewels, will shortly be conveyed to Oxford and arranged in specially made cases for their exhibition in the Ashmolean Museum."

The city of Antwerp is said to have decided to celebrate on a grand scale on March 22nd, 1899, the three hundredth anniversary of the birth of Van Dyck.

An exhibition of painted fans is shortly to be opened in Paris.

In a tomb of the necropolis of Vetulonia a golden treasury has been found, which is to be ranked amongst the most notable discoveries made in Etruria during these last years. It consists of a heap of ornamental objects belonging to the art of the eighth century B.C., the principal amongst which are eight large fibulæ, a fine necklace, two large earrings (decorated with meanders of tiny grains of gold), some splendid hairpins, and other articles of jewellery. The fibulæ and the hairpins are adorned with figures in repoussé and in filigree work, representing processions of fantastic animals of Oriental character and style, like the winged animals of the Corinthian vases and those of the well-known gold ornaments of the Regulini-Galassi tomb in the Vatican collection and of the treasury of Palestrina. Together with these female ornaments a sword has also been found in the same grave, while the remains of the skulls and bones have almost entirely disappeared. It was probably a family grave, in which husband and wife were buried. The objects will shortly be exhibited at the Etruscan Museum of Florence.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

Queen's Hall.—Philharmonic Society; Jubilee Concerts.
Covent Garden Opera.—'Siegfried'; the State Performance.
Crystal Palace.—Handel Festival.

The penultimate concert of the Philharmonic Society on Thursday last week was rendered noteworthy by the introduction of three works marked "First time." A set of variations for violoncello and orchestra by Tschaïkowsky, Op. 33, is marked in the score "Variations sur un Thème rococo." The air may be rococo, but the Russian composer has varied it in masterly style. There are seven variations and a lengthy coda, but the fifth and sixth were omitted on this occasion. The principal key is A major, but the third, which is the finest and most original of those performed on this occasion, is in C major. The solo part was played with much expression by Mr. Leo Stern. The first of the absolute novelties was a scena 'The Dream of Endymion,' for tenor voice and orchestra, suggested by Keats. In this Mr. Cowen has found material for inspiration, and he has written an elaborate piece in which his talents have found the fullest exemplification. The opening, "A nymph, whose unseen presence fills the air," is impassioned, the setting of the lines commencing "Ravishing music floats around" are appropriately melodious, and the final section, "Now would I dream again," though Wagnerian in spirit, shows no direct plagiarism. The vocal part of the scena was well sung, and Mr. Cowen, who conducted, had a cordial greeting. Mr. Edward German's new English fantasia "In Commemoration" is a discursive piece, commencing in a way that recalls Wagner's "Huldigung's March" without actual resemblance. The middle section is quieter, but brass and percussion are liberally brought in as the end approaches, and the whole terminates in a manner suggestive of national triumph. The fantasia is undoubtedly clever and inspiriting, and it would prove eminently suitable for promenade concerts, especially in the open air. Other items in the programme were Schumann's Pianoforte Concerto, tastefully played by Mlle. Adele aus der Ohe, Mendelssohn's 'Scotch' Symphony, Weber's 'Jubilee' Overture, and Sir Alexander Mackenzie's nautical overture 'Britannia.'

There were four concerts on a considerable scale on Saturday and Sunday last which were more or less associated with the Jubilee festivities. On the first-named day the orchestral performance at the Queen's Hall, with Mr. Henry J. Wood as conductor and Mr. Robert Newman as the concert-giver, drew a large audience, thanks mainly to Tschaïkowsky's immensely popular 'Symphonie Pathétique,' which was again interpreted with the fullest expression, and the association of M. Paderewski with Chopin's not particularly interesting Pianoforte Concerto in F minor, described in error as No. 2, though it was composed earlier than the superior work in E. The Polish executant also offered a brilliant interpretation of the piquant scherzo from Litolff's Concerto, No. 4, a work which has rarely, if ever, been heard in London. Miss Clara Butt was expressive alike in Handel's popular air "Ombra mai fù" and Gluck's "Divinités du Styx."

The second Sarasate recital at St. James's Hall and the "Diamond Jubilee Concert" under Mr. William Carter at the Albert Hall can only be formally recorded here.

On Sunday afternoon the first of two concerts was given by Mr. Robert Newman at the Queen's Hall, the most interesting feature of which was the new 'Te Deum' by Dr. G. C. Martin for the special service in front of St. Paul's Cathedral on Jubilee Day. It is a rather curiously constructed setting of the Ambrosian hymn, opening in the sombre key of F sharp minor. Quickly, however, the music becomes more jubilant and continues so to the end, with the singular exception that the "Sanctus," beginning with a descending passage in the initial key, is by no means jubilant in character for the first few bars. The music is subsequently worked up in a bright spirit, and ends with a repetition of the opening words, "We praise Thee, O God," in A major. The orchestration is somewhat noisy, but not more so than is desirable for the open-air interpretation for which the composition was intended. Other works suggestive of "Jubilee" time were rendered, the composers being Mr. Eaton Faning, Mr. F. H. Cowen, and Prof. Bridge. These may come up for criticism when performed in ordinary concert-room fashion on a week-day. The 'Hymn of Praise,' with Madame Fanny Moody, Madame Clara Samuell, and Mr. Ben Davies, followed, with Mr. Randegger conductor; and in the evening there was a Wagner concert, under the conductorship of Mr. Henry Wood.

If the interpretation of Wagner's 'Tristan und Isolde' last week was of unusual excellence, that of 'Siegfried' on Monday this week was even better. Few could have imagined that M. Jean de Reszké, who cannot be termed youthful, could look the part of the boyish hero so well and act it with such abounding spirits. In the final scene with Brünnhilde he assumed a little of the courtly grace of manner that distinguishes his Faust and Romeo, and of course he warbled the delicious music to perfection. As Brünnhilde Miss Susan Strong sang pleasantly, but scarcely infused sufficient emotional power into her representation of the Valkyrie's conflicting feelings. M. Édouard de Reszké's Wotan was as fine as before, and the same may be said of Herr Lieban as Mime; Mr. David Bispham as Alberich was altogether admirable, though it is an ungrateful part; and the orchestra under Mr. Anton Seidl again covered itself with glory. The stage arrangements were as good as could be expected in the midst of a busy season.

In this place nothing can be said respecting the exquisite decorations and the brilliant assemblage at the State performance on Wednesday evening, though let it be gladly recorded that there is now a disposition to give a more artistic impress to these functions than in former years, when the programme generally consisted of a mélange of heterogeneous items. Three entire acts of grand operas were given, the first being the second act of 'Tannhäuser,' with M. Van Dyck, Madame Eames, M. Plançon, and M. Renaud in the principal parts. Then came the scene in Juliet's chamber from Gounod's 'Roméo et Juliette,' with M. Jean de Reszké and Madame Melba, both of whom were in superb form as the hapless lovers. Lastly was given the fourth act of 'Les Huguenots,' M. Alvarez, Miss Macintyre, M. Plançon, and M. Renaud taking the leading parts. It is noteworthy that all three excerpts were performed in French, and that all were from tragic operas. The general arrangements were admirable, the whole reflecting the fullest credit on the Opera Syndicate.

Reference must now be made, though it need not be lengthy, to the concluding performance of the Handel Festival on Friday last week. This consisted, as a matter that admitted of no consideration, of 'Israel in Egypt,' indications, however, being apparent that the public would not object to a slight change in the arrangements, for, although the idea may be delusive, the fact remains that the total attendance fell short of that at any previous festival since 1865, numbering less than 68,000, against more than 87,000 at the most largely attended festival in 1883. The directors of the Crystal Palace need not, therefore, despond, for the conditions were all against an average number of visitors this year, and the supremacy of Handel is not in the least likely to suffer decay in England. A sufficient test will be afforded three years hence, when there will be no Jubilee celebrations to distract public attention. The word that can be said has been said on 'Israel in Egypt,' and we have little more to do than to make record of an exceptionally fine interpretation of this stupendous work, far better than that of three years ago. The choruses were sung with unflagging energy, and all the solos were well rendered by artists already named, and Mr. Manns steadily and laudably declined to accept encores, even for the Hailstone Chorus. After the usual compliments had been paid, accentuated by the fact that a time of national rejoicing was close at hand, the celebration, which was more than ordinarily successful in an artistic sense, came to an end.

SALE.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON held on June 16th an important sale of valuable violins—the principal lots being from the collections formed by the late Mr. V. Purrier, Mr. A. E. Harper, and Mr. A. Scheiber—the highest prices paid being as follows: Violin by Nicholas Lupot, 48*l*. Violin by Gagliano, 25*l*. Violin by Pressenda, 41*l*. Violin by Antonius Stradiuarius, 1729, in fine condition, 610*l*. Violin by Ruggerius, 50*l*. Violoncello by Amati, 73*l*. Violoncello by Joseph Hill, 25*l*. Violoncello by Rocca, 36*l*. Violoncello by W. Forster, 25*l*. Violin by Vuillaume, 19*l*. 10*s*.; and a Viola by the same maker for the same amount. Violin by Gabrielli, 34*l*. The sale, which was composed of 120 lots, realized over 2,000*l*.

Musical Gossip.

AT St. George's Chapel, Windsor, last Sunday, there were two special services, the first, in the morning, being attended by the Queen. This, naturally, must pass without comment; but mention may be made of the impressive rendering of the 'Lobgesang' in the afternoon by a choir and orchestra of over four hundred executants, the principal parts being taken by Madame Albani and Mr. Edward Lloyd. Sir Walter Parratt conducted, and the effect at times was almost overpowering, St. George's Chapel being perfect in acoustical properties.

THE music at the actual Jubilee service at the west front of St. Paul's Cathedral on Tuesday consisted merely of the 'Te Deum' above mentioned, two verses of the Old Hundredth Psalm, and one of the National Anthem, the antiphon printed in the service book being omitted. The effect in the open air was not perfect in a strictly musical sense, but it was touching.

THE orchestral concert at the Royal College of Music on Wednesday evening unfortunately clashed with the gala performance at Covent Garden, and consequently we can only mention that in the programme were a Pianoforte Concerto in E flat by Tschaïkowsky, Haydn's 'Military' Symphony in G, No. 12 of the Salomon set, and various items, vocal and instrumental, of smaller dimensions, all being rendered under Prof. Villiers Stanford.

MISS E. SHINNER (Mrs. Liddell) has retired from the Shinner Quartet, and Fräulein G. Wietrowitz is to lead it for the future.

MISS EDITH GREENHILL will give a pianoforte recital at the Salle Erard on the evening of July 6th. M. Marix Loevensohn will give a 'cello recital at the Salle Erard on the following afternoon.

M. LEON DELAFOSSE will have a pianoforte recital at St. James's Hall on the afternoon of July 6th, assisted by Madame Sarah Bernhardt, who will recite a poem, with musical adaptation, by M. Delafosse.

HERR RICHARD STRAUSS has composed two choruses in sixteen parts. It may be remembered that Thomas Tallis once wrote a song in forty parts, which has not been heard in London since it was sung by the late Mr. Henry Leslie's choir many years ago in St. James's Hall.

SEVEN THOUSAND seats have been sold in London alone for the forthcoming festival at Bayreuth, and no more are to be had in any direction.

HERR DAVID POPPER will revisit England in the autumn for one of the concerts of the Philharmonic Society, among other engagements, when he will introduce some of his new compositions.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK

MON.	Mr Carl Armbruster's Lecture Recital, 3, King's College
—	Messrs. Haddock and Ayres's Historical Recital, 3, Salle Erard.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Faust'
TUES.	Fitzner Quartet Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Patti Concert, 8, Albert Hall
—	Mr Ernest Fowle's Concert, 8, Queen's Small Hall
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden, 8, 'Der Evangelimann.'
—	Handel Society's Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
WED.	Mlle Ella Pancera's Pianoforte Recital, 3, St James's Hall.
—	Mr Wilhelm Ganz's Concert, 3, Portman Rooms.
—	Royal College of Music Concert, 7.45.
—	London Sunday School Choir's Commemorative Concert.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden
THURS.	Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden
FRI.	Royal Opera, Covent Garden
SAT.	Mr John Thomas's Harp Concert, 3, St James's Hall
—	Miss Gertrude Palmer's Concert, 3, Queen's Small Hall.
—	Royal Opera, Covent Garden

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

ADELPHI.—'Lorenzaccio,' Drama in Five Acts. By Alfred de Musset. Adapted for the Stage by M. Armand d'Artois.

IN producing in Paris the 'Lorenzaccio' of Alfred de Musset the motive has been less desire to do honour to the poet than ambition to provide Madame Bernhardt opportunities for the revelation of further phases of her genius. This end, such as it is, has been obtained. There is—we ask pardon for the suggestion—just a little too much of Madame Bernhardt in one or two scenes; but the whole is fine, as fine as any performance of a man by a woman is likely to be. That Lorenzo de Médicis would, whenever 'Lorenzaccio' was played, have to be presented by a woman was obvious from the first. Lorenzo's avowal of the nature and extent of his intimacy with Alexandre would have been intolerable on masculine lips, and there are descriptions of vice which, even as matters are, might with advantage have been spared. Still the piece, which Musset himself judged unsuitable for stage production, has been played in Paris and in London, and Madame Bernhardt has presented the hero and scored in so doing. What share Musset has in the triumph is not easily told. To twist about the innumerable scenes of the original so that the action might pass in five, or perhaps, as one scene serves for the second and fifth acts, we might say four scenes, is an irreverent, albeit a necessary proceeding; to omit the death scene of Louise Strozzi and the self-incrimination of the Marquise Cibo is pardonable; to obtain comic relief, by showing in the first act instead of the fifth the encounter between the little Strozzi and the little Salviati, may serve a purpose like that of the quarrels of the retainers in 'Romeo and Juliet.' To close the action with the murder of Alexandre, however important it may be from a popular and an histrionic standpoint, deprives the play of its historical value.

That Musset in writing 'Lorenzaccio' was to some extent inspired by 'Hamlet' is "apt and of great credit." Both are princes, scholars, and dreamers; both have a deadly mission, the execution of which they for a while postpone. Here resemblance practically ends. It is only in the performance, and not in the play, that the relations between Lorenzo and Catherine his aunt suggest those between Hamlet and Ophelia. There is, however, just this further point, that the question whether Lorenzo's dread of a sword is wholly feigned is as susceptible of debate as that of Hamlet's madness. Lorenzo is the very reverse of Hamlet in the way in which he shapes out from the first a special scheme of vengeance and prosecutes it deliberately and relentlessly to the close. It may be a minor matter that while Hamlet discountenances the drunken revels at the Court, Lorenzo on his cousin's arrival is invariably intoxicated before nightfall. To compare, however, with "the expectancy and rose of the fair state" of Denmark this minion of the duke, whose self-avowed avocations need for their description the pen of a Petronius, is impossible. Madame Bernhardt does not attempt to purge the character of Lorenzo. She accentuates, however, the resolution, and conveys very clearly the idea that his vice, like the folly of Brutus, is a mask. In so doing she presents rather the Lorenzo of history than the Lorenzaccio of Musset. In many of his heroes Musset, to some extent after the fashion of Byron, painted what he would have people believe to be portraits of himself. By his own avowal he had, as poet and artist, essayed so many forms of vice that he had lost his force and virility as well as his innocence. This is his perpetual outcry. This, too, is his Lorenzo, a man so sunk in crapulous debauch that he cannot cleanse his hands even with blood—the expiatory blood, that is, of his destined victim. This aspect of the hero Madame Bernhardt does not present, even though she speaks the words. With her the poet and the dreamer, and even the man of action, prevail over the sybarite and the cynic. This result is very possibly due to the omissions that have been made, the effect being to destroy the balance. In the opening scene, for instance, which is the same on the stage as in the book, Lorenzo does not attend his cousin in the abduction of the sister of Maffio, and such of the terribly cynical and impious words assigned him as are preserved are put into the mouth of Giomo, the duke's écuyer. The figure that is shown is at least picturesque, dramatic, and impressive, and conveys an idea (almost too modern for the date of the play) of nervous force conquering physical frailty and moral abasement. Whether the conception is right or wrong, the performance is worthy of Madame Bernhardt's reputation as an artist. It is superbly picturesque, though the wig perhaps is not quite satisfactory, and it has some splendid bursts of passion. Among Madame Bernhardt's supporters the place of honour belongs to M. Darmont, whose Alexandre presents exactly the character Musset depicts. In some other cases the express directions of the text are disregarded, and the minor characters are shown altogether other than they ought to be.

Mr. E. J. Castle, Q.C., the author of Shakespeare, Bacon, Jonson, and Greene (Sampson Low & Co.), started his course of study with a prejudice in favour of the Baconian authorship of Shakspeare's work, but he came to the natural conclusion on the authority of Greene, the poems, Meres, and Ben Jonson. There is nothing new in the arguments he brings forward to prove Shakspeare the author. The novelty of the book consists in Mr. Castle's attempt to sit on two stools at the same time. He says that some of the plays show good law, some incorrect law, and some no law at all. He begs the question of Bacon's intimacy with Shakspeare, and of his helping the poet in those "legal plays" which have correct law language. Thus 'Hamlet' he imagines written in collaboration with Bacon, 'Macbeth' by Shakspeare alone, ignoring the literary and artistic relations of these two plays. Mr. Castle does not seem to distinguish that Shakspeare's law comes from within, from the same general culture which he displayed of the other sciences, in a homogeneous tissue of thought; and not from without, by the superposition of phrases derived from legal advice. He forgets that Shakspeare's father must have had considerable familiarity with common law, that his cousin and correspondent Greene was a Stratford lawyer, and that his friend, the Earl of Southampton, was a member of Gray's Inn. In those days, before newspaper reports were published, the courts of law were haunted by students of life as well as the theatres, and the taverns affected by lawyers were not closed to others. Shakspeare himself was not without his private lawsuits. Frequently he borrowed his good and bad law en bloc, with the rest of his materials. Mr. Castle takes it for granted that there is a mystery in Shakspeare's life and a confusion about his authorship, therein showing his "Baconian" education. He awards to Bacon generally the low-comedy parts. With a very legal twist to a humorous account, he tries to prove Bacon the friend who gave Shakspeare the opportunity in 1594 of producing 'The Comedy of Errors' at the Gray's Inn Revels. The discussion in the Times after the representation of that play in the same hall on December 6th, 1895, elicited sounder arguments for considering the Earl of Southampton as the friend, and Bacon as the dramatic rival who tried, in the glory of the 'Masque of the Six Councillors,' to hide the disgrace brought on Gray's Inn by the unwarrantable introduction of Shakspeare's play. Mr. Castle considers 'Henry VIII.' to have been altered, not by Beaumont and Fletcher, but by Bacon and Jonson for the Folio of 1623, on the ground that Bacon was then writing a life of Henry VIII. But Rawley, who knew all Bacon's works, states that "Henry VIII. died under designation merely." Up to July, 1623, at least, Bacon was still "requesting access to the State Papers of Henry VIII.'s reign." Mr. Castle states that Malone is the only person who seems to have brought original research to bear on Shakspeare; but he may find in the British Museum many hundreds of books on Shakspeare, among which are at least a score of faithful and original works. There is a large field yet left, however, for willing and patient labour; but Mr. Castle has not given his subject nearly enough of careful study. He is even so careless as to give the date of Shakspeare's baptism as April 23rd, and to base arguments thereon, though the parish registers give the date as the 26th. His discussion on Shakspeare's coat of arms is far from complete or correct, and he does not allude, in connexion therewith, to the application made to quarter the Ardens' arms. He says there were no fires in Stratford to destroy Shakspeare's MSS. The assertion, repeated twice that Elizabeth was too astute to associate herself with a royal company of players as her successor did, can be contradicted by the most cursory glance at the Chamberlain's accounts. There are recorded frequent payments for plays, not only to the "Children of the Queen's Chapel," but to the "Queen's Players." Mr. Castle fancies the playing of "the boys" a new experiment. On two points Mr. Castle argues with reason: that Chettle's apology for Greene's words did not apply to Shakspeare, and that Shakspeare seems to have travelled and gone on the stage earlier than is generally supposed. The book would have had a better chance in the world of letters had it had an index, and had not the style been marred by frequent grammatical looseness, such as "those who received bribes like he had" (p. 272). It would have been better for Mr. Castle's credit and for Shakspearean criticism if he had decided his doubts as to the wisdom of publishing his MS. by an emphatic "Not yet." More study and more care might have given him the opportunity of eliminating his errors, condensing his style, and attaining more critical soundness.

Gleanings from Ibsen. Selected and edited by Emmie Avery Keddill and Percy Cross Standing. (Stock.)—Two enthusiasts of opposite sexes have formed an Ibsen birthday-book, to which they have prefixed an introductory essay on Ibsenism, failing in no respect of enthusiasm or apparent juvenility. On what principle the extracts are arranged under dates we fail to see. February 14th, April 1st, and May 1st are all, in a sense, significant dates. What has the first to do with this passage from 'Little Eyolf': "I had no fear. Here went death and I, it seemed to me, like two good fellow travellers. It all seemed so natural—so simple, I thought. In my family we don't live to be old"; the second with two lines from the 'League of Youth': "Tell me—why do you never think of yourself? Why have you no ambition?" or the third with this, again from 'Little Eyolf': "Don't you think he has a gentle, lovable aspect!" This year the 22nd of June might have suggested something better than a phrase from 'The Pretenders': "Trust in yourself, and you will be saved." Sometimes the sentence is obscure—"If I could choose, I should like best to be a clever dog" ('The Wild Duck'); sometimes trivial—"The champagne stood there, but you tasted it not" ('Little Eyolf'); sometimes rude—"Now you, too, are lying" ('Peer Gynt'). Ibsen lends himself, apparently, but poorly to the purposes of a birthday-book.

Études sur le Drame Antique. Par H. Weil. (Hachette & Cie.)—The title of this book is a little misleading. It consists chiefly of reprinted reviews. Only three of the papers are original studies: one of these appeared as long ago as 1865 in a learned journal; another on the Prometheus story, which shows the pertinence of Io's wanderings to the plot of the drama, only repeats what has been said earlier in one of the reprinted reviews. There seems also too much repetition of data which might surely be taken for granted. These complaints made, we may add that M. Weil moves with decision and confidence in the semi-darkness which surrounds Attic tragedy, and protests successfully against the somewhat airy fabrics raised by advanced critics. He will neither depreciate Euripides with Schlegel, nor believe that Aristophanes was a merely frivolous spirit, without principles or convictions. In the passage of Hyginus quoted on p. 88 the insertion of a negative against the MSS. is not "indispensable," and is a violent remedy at best. The passage may stand as the MSS. have it, if we understand ut to mean "although," not "in order that." We remark also that v. 1413 of the 'Hercules Furens,' as quoted on p. 205, does not represent the reading of the MSS. This should be stated, however admirable the conjecture may be.

THEOCRITUS ON THE STAGE.

At Bedford College last week the fifteenth idyl of Theocritus, familiar to English readers through Matthew Arnold's well-known rendering of it in his 'Essays in Criticism,' was performed by pupils of the College under the general direction of Mr. A. B. Cook. The experiment was interesting, and on the whole successful. The connexion between the street crowds in ancient Alexandria on the occasion of the festival of Adonis and the Jubilee celebration of the present week must have been obvious to the audience and helped to emphasize the curiously modern tone of the idyl. Mr. Cook explained that in the main the performance had three objects in view: (1) to raise funds for the extension of the College; (2) to give some idea of the home and public life of the ancient Greeks, a knowledge of which was so necessary to a proper appreciation of their literature; (3) to illustrate the effect of what is known as the "restored pronunciation of Greek."

We may hope that the first object was accomplished, and the second may be held to have been accomplished also; for the performance as a whole, granting the extreme difficulty of presenting on the stage what was not written with that object, was highly creditable. Mr. Cook in an introductory speech happily described the idyl as an ancient "Voces Populi," and one can imagine that if any of Mr. Anstey's inimitable scenes were put on the stage it would be found necessary to eke out the action by a good deal of by-play. The same thing was done in the present instance, and, perhaps inevitably, overdone. The result was that the action, instead of being brisk and full of life, seemed at times to drag. Miss Borrow threw herself heartily into the character of Praxinoa, but was rather too emphatic. Miss Rickwood's Gorgo was more natural. The final scene, in which the two women, with the rest of the crowd, at last make their way into the palace and see the figures of Adonis and Kypris, and hear the hymn to Aphrodite (beautifully set to music by the Rev. F. W. Bussell), was decidedly the most successful. Miss Rosamond Lucas, as the priestess of Adonis, was the central figure in this scene, and played her part admirably. Nothing could have been more graceful and appropriate than her movements, and the singing of the ode, in which she was supported by attendant maidens, was excellent.

It remains to say a word about the pronunciation. It had the advantage over that employed a week before at University College of being based more completely upon scientific principles, those, namely, that are laid down in Dr. Blass's well-known book. The effect, therefore, if unfamiliar, was on the whole more satisfactory. And as apparently the performers had been taught this mode of pronunciation from the outset, they seemed to use it with comparative ease, at any rate as far as regards the vowel sounds. It would, however, probably require a lifetime, if not more, to pronounce at the beginning of a word θ as th in "anthill," ϕ as ph in "uphill," and χ as keh in "bakehouse." As a matter of fact the aspirate in these cases was usually lost, though it was given with good effect when the combination occurred in the middle of a word. On the whole, it may be doubted whether this method of pronunciation will ever be generally "restored." Perhaps it will be left to the Women's University to accomplish such a feat.

Γ.

Dramatic Gossip.

Rumours were plentiful concerning the honours to be awarded the stage and its professors. These prove, as might have been and was expected, to be false, and the solitary distinction consists of a knighthood bestowed upon Mr. Bancroft, who is now practically on the retired list. It is better so. None will grudge the Bancrofts the recognition awarded to their services to the stage, which are real; and a more promiscuous bestowal of titles, such as we were told was menaced, would only have brought the distinction itself into contempt.

The representations at Her Majesty's of 'The Ballad-Monger' and 'The Red Lamp' are being continued, causing thus the postponement of 'A Man's Shadow.' Rehearsals of Mr. Grundy's adaptation of 'Mademoiselle de Belle-Isle' are, however, progressing. For the piece last named Miss Evelyn Millard and Miss Irene Vanbrugh have been engaged.

On the 30th inst. the St. James's will close. During the country tour which after an interval will follow Mr. Alexander will revive 'As You Like It,' with Miss Fay Davis as Rosalind, and will rehearse Mr. Carton's 'Tree of Knowledge' with a view to its production in London in the autumn.

M. Donnay's 'Douloureuse' has passed the censure, and will duly be given at the Lyric by Madame Réjane. Whether it will be recognized after the excisions on which authority has insisted remains to be seen.

On the 9th of July a compressed version of 'Arden of Feversham' will be given by the Elizabethan Stage Society at St. George's Hall. With it will be acted 'The King and the Countess,' an episode in 'Edward III.' Both pieces will be played, as in previous experiments of the society, "after the manner of the sixteenth century."

'The County Fair' has been rather hurriedly withdrawn from the Princess's, and is this evening replaced by 'In Sight of St. Paul's.'

To Correspondents.—R. B.—A. T.—F. E. W.—D. K.—J. B.—W. H. D. R.—received.

R. N. W.—You should write to the editor of the 'Dictionary,' as requested in the preliminary notice.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

NOW READY AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'.

POPULAR ROYALTY.

By ARTHUR H. BEAVAN,
Author of 'Marlborough House and its Occupants.'

Royal 8vo. beautifully illustrated, cloth, 10s. 6d.

This book contains Life-Sketches of Her Majesty the Queen and the Royal Family, besides Four Chapters reviewing the national advance and changes during the last seventy or eighty years. A special feature of the book is the numerous Full-Page Illustrations, which appear by the special permission of Her Majesty the Queen, Her Imperial Majesty the Empress Frederick, and the Members of the Royal Family, some of whom have contributed the Photographs themselves. The Frontispiece consists of a Photogravure Reproduction of the original jewelled Miniature of the Queen, by Mrs. Corbould-Ellis, presented to the Emperor of China by Her Majesty.

NAVAL ADMINISTRATIONS,

1827–1892. The Experiences of Sixty-five Years from the Accession of H.R.H. the Duke of Clarence as Lord High Admiral to the End of the Naval Administration of Lord George Hamilton. By the late Sir JOHN HENRY BRIGGS, Reader to the Lords and Chief Clerk to the Admiralty. Edited by Lady BRIGGS. Illustrated with 10 Photogravure Portraits. Demy 8vo. cloth, One Guinea.

CAPTAIN A. T. MAHAN'S NEW WORK.

The LIFE of NELSON: the Embodiment of the Sea Power of Great Britain. By Captain A. T. MAHAN, U.S.N., Author of 'The Influence of Sea Power upon History,' &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo. illustrated with many Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations, cloth extra, gilt top, 36s. net.

"Must henceforth become one of the greatest of naval classics.....By far the best 'Life of Nelson' that has ever been written."—Times.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

IN DARKEST AFRICA; or,

the Quest, Rescue, and Retreat of Emin, Governor of Equatoria. By HENRY M. STANLEY, M.P. D.C.L. LL.D., &c., Author of 'How I Found Livingstone,' &c. New and Cheaper Edition, Revised and Corrected throughout, with New Preface, a Map, and 150 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

JOURNEYS AMONG the

GENTLE JAPS in the SUMMER of 1895. By the Rev. J. Ll. THOMAS, M.A. F.R.G.S. With a Special Chapter on the Religions of Japan, a Map, and Portrait. Crown 8vo. cloth, 7s. 6d.

NEW ZEALAND RULERS

and STATESMEN, 1844–1897. By the Hon. WILLIAM GISBORNE, formerly a Member of the House of Representatives, and also of the New Zealand Ministry. With 50 Portraits. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s. [Next week.

NEWFOUNDLAND in 1897:

being Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee Year, and the Fourth Centenary of the Discovery of Newfoundland by John Cabot. By the Rev. M. HARVEY, LL.D. With a Map and Illustrations. Crown 8vo. cloth, 5s.

FOURTH EDITION IMMEDIATEY, AT ALL LIBRARIES.

The MASSARENES. By Ouida.

Crown 8vo. 580 pages, 6s.

"Ouida's latest novel, 'The Massarenes,' is, from every point of view, excellent."—Punch.

"So interesting that, in spite of its exceptional length, it will seem to most readers tantalizingly short."—Truth.

"Incomparably the best the author has ever written."
National Observer.

TWO NEW 6s. NOVELS.

The TRACK of MIDNIGHT.

By G. FIRTH SCOTT.

"Strikingly original and ingenious, animating, interesting, and puzzling.....Deserves grateful recognition by lovers of tales well told."—World.

The MISTRESS of the RANCH.

By FRED. T. CLARK, Author of 'On Cloud Mountain,' &c.

"The development of events is extremely interesting; it is invested at various stages with fine touches of tenderness, and the racy dialogue is a constant source of enjoyment."
Scotsman.

London:
SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & COMPANY, Ltd.,
St. Dunstan's House, Fetter-lane, E.C.

NOVELS FOR HOLIDAY READING.

SIX SHILLINGS.

FALSE DAWN. By Francis Prevost.

"There is a mingled delicacy and power.....intensely interesting.....The book is one to be read and remembered."—Speaker.

"Beautifully written, with real and rare powers both of psychology and of word painting."—Academy.

LAZY TOURS. By Louise Chandler Moulton.

"Has the inestimable power of taking her reader along with her."—Manchester Guardian.

"Compels us to read her book from cover to cover."—Daily Chronicle.

A MAN'S FOES. By Mrs. E. H. Strain.

"A powerful and impressive historical novel.....A chronicle of intense and unflagging interest."—Daily Telegraph.

"'A Man's Foes' is the best historical novel that we have had since Mr. Conan Doyle published 'Micah Clarke.".....An exceptionally fine romance."—Daily Chronicle.

FIVE SHILLINGS.

GUY BOOTHBY'S NOVELS.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED BY STANLEY L. WOOD.

The FASCINATION of the KING. [Ready immediately.

After the remarkable success of Mr. Boothby's previous novels, 'Dr. Nikola,' 'The Beautiful White Devil,' 'A Bid for Fortune,' &c., this book will be eagerly welcomed, and will, it is anticipated, secure an even greater success.

DR. NIKOLA. Fourth Edition.

"Deeply interesting.....The charm of the book is its remoteness from the ordinary scenes and ways of fiction; after reading it, one could almost fancy that one had stood within the gates of Lhassa the Blessed."—British Weekly.

The BEAUTIFUL WHITE DEVIL. Sixth Edition.

"An original idea worked out in original fashion. A book for all who like stories told in a bright, healthful style."—Globe.

A BID for FORTUNE. Third Edition.

IN STRANGE COMPANY. Fourth Edition.

The MARRIAGE of ESTHER. Third Edition.

ADVENTURES of MARTIN HEWITT. By ARTHUR MORRISON.

"Better than the usual run of detective tales, and havé a certain literary excellence which is not often to be met with."—Bookman.

AT RANDOM. By L. F. Austin.

"A series of fantasies which it would be difficult to over praise for their grace, their beauty, and their lightness. There is in them, too, a cetain seriousness and depth which add to the attraction. Nothing of the kind so good has recently been published."

DR. ROBERTSON NICOLL in the British Weekly.

THREE SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE.

SECOND EDITION.

FORDHAM'S FEUD. By Bertram Mitford.

"Altogether outside the conventional groove. Interest in the story never flags."

"A clever plot.....Told with real dramatic force."—Star. Scotsman.

CAPTAIN SHANNON. By Coulson Kernahan.

"Here is a story which every novelist should have thought of years ago. No man, possibly, but Conan Doyle could have treated such an admirable first idea as well as Mr. Kernahan has treated it."—Daily Chronicle.

A STUDY in SCARLET. By Conan Doyle.

"One of the cleverest and best detective stories we have yet seen.....Mr. Conan Doyle is a literary artist, and this is a good specimen of his skill."—London Quarterly Review.

LADY TURPIN. By Henry Herman.

"A breathlessly exciting tale."—Bookman.

QUEEN of NIGHT. By Headon Hill.

"A story of rare merit, in which knowledge of the world and of mankind is admirably utilized."—Scotsman.

A HUMBLE ENTERPRISE. By Ada Cambridge.

"It is a delightful story, refreshingly original, singularly well told, and absorbingly interesting from beginning to end."—Daily Mail.

SPINDLES and OARS. By Annie E. Holdsworth.

"We do not exaggerate when we say that there are very few books of living writers which we would not gladly exchange for such a work as she has now given us."

Manchester Courier.

ALL MEN are LIARS. By Joseph Hocking.

"This is a notable book. Thoughtful people will be fascinated by its actuality, its fearlessness, and the insight it gives into the influence of modern thought and literature upon the mind and morals of our most promising manhood."—Christian World.

The CRIME and the CRIMINAL. By Richard MARSH.

"A most novel plot, worked out with sensational power, familiar to all readers of Mr. Marsh's previous works."

MRS. BEETON'S COOKERY BOOKS.

620th Thousand.

THE BEST COOKERY BOOK IN THE WORLD.

Strongly bound, half-roan, price 7s. 6d.; cloth gilt, bevelled boards, gilt edges, 8s. 6d.; half-calf or half-morocco, 12s. 6d.; elegant full tree calf, 18s.

MRS. BEETON'S HOUSEHOLD MANAGEMENT. Containing 1700 PAGES, with THOUSANDS of RECIPES and INSTRUCTIONS, Hundreds of Engravings, and New Coloured Cookery Plates.

Crown 8vo. 670 pages, cloth gilt, 3*s.* 6*d.*

MRS. BEETON'S EVERY-DAY COOKERY and HOUSEKEEPING BOOK. With Coloured Plates and Full-Page and other Engravings.

TWENTY-FIRST AND ENTIRELY NEW EDITION.

Medium 8vo. cloth, 21*s.*; half-calf, 28*s.*; full or tree calf, 35*s.*

HAYDN'S DICTIONARY OF DATES AND UNIVERSAL INFORMATION.

A COMPLETE RECORD OF ALL NATIONS AND TIMES.

Containing the HISTORY OF THE WORLD TO THE AUTUMN OF 1895.

By BENJAMIN VINCENT, Hon. Librarian of the Royal Institution of Great Britain.

"'Haydn's Dictionary of Dates' is the most universal book of reference in a moderate compass that we know of in the English language."—Times.

Demy 8vo. cloth gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*; half-calf, 12*s.*

EVERY MAN his OWN MECHANIC. Being a Complete Guide for Amateurs. With about 900 Illustrations of Tools, Processes, Buildings, &c.

"A complete vade-mecum of the subjects upon which it treats."—Daily Telegraph.

Medium 8vo. 784 pages, cloth, 7*s.* 6*d.*

HOME CARPENTRY for HANDY MEN. By FRANCIS CHILTON-YOUNG, Author of 'Every Man his Own Mechanic,' &c. With over 550 Illustrations. A Perfect Mine of Practical Instruction in all kinds of Constructive and Decorative Work in Wood.

IMPORTANT WORK ON THE VIOLIN.—SECOND EDITION.

DEDICATED BY SPECIAL PERMISSION TO H.R.H. THE DUKE OF EDINBURGH.

Demy 8vo. cloth gilt, 10*s.* 6*d.*

VIOLIN-MAKING: as it Was and as it Is. A Historical, Theoretical, and Practical Treatise on the Art, for the Use of all Violin Makers and Players, Amateur and Professional. Preceded by an Essay on the Violin and its Position as a Musical Instrument. By EDWARD HERON ALLEN. With Photographs, Folding Supplements, and 200 Engravings.

"A book which all who love to hear or play the instrument will receive with acclamation."—Yorkshire Post.

Imperial 16mo. parchment, bevelled red edges, 7*s.* 6*d.*

The SCIENCE of the HAND; or, the Art of Recognizing the Tendencies of the Human Mind by the Observation of the Formation of the Hands. With Original Plates and Explanatory Diagrams by Miss Horsley.

"Undoubtedly curious.....It is not necessary to subscribe to the author's theories in order to derive entertainment from its odd, out-of-the-way learning and anecdotal illustration."—Daily News.

Royal 8vo. cloth gilt, 10*s.* 6*d.*; half-calf, 16*s.*

HOUSEHOLD MEDICINE: a Guide to Good Health, Long Life, and the Proper Treatment of all Diseases and Ailments. Edited by GEORGE BLACK, M.B. Edin. Accurately illustrated with 450 Engravings.

"Considerable is the care which Dr. Black has bestowed upon his work on 'Household Medicine.' He has gone carefully and ably into all the subjects that can be included in such a volume.....The work is worthy of study and attention, and likely to produce real good."

Athenæum.

Medium 8vo. cloth gilt, 7*s.* 6*d.*; half-calf, 12*s.*

HAYDN'S DOMESTIC MEDICINE. By the late EDWIN LANKESTER, M.D. F.R.S., assisted by Distinguished Physicians and Surgeons. With an Appendix on Sick Nursing and Mothers' Management. With full pages of Engravings.

"The best work of its kind."—Medical Press and Circular.

"The fullest and most reliable work of its kind."—Liverpool Albion.

THE JULY

WINDSOR MAGAZINE

(Ready JULY 2nd)

Will contain a Double-Page Supplement Illustrating a

CRICKET MATCH at LORD'S. By Lucien Davis, R.I.

CRICKETERS. By C. B. Fry.

A Special Illustrated Article on

The MONKEYS of INDIA. By Gambier Bolton.

The Opening Chapters of a very amusing New Serial, entitled

The SKIPPER'S WOOING. By W. W. Jacobs, Author of 'Many Cargoes.'

AND STORIES BY

HALL CAINE. | JOHN STRANGE WINTER. | ROBERT W. CHAMBERS, &c.

"This magazine is always replete with story, biography, portraiture, and general literature of the highest stamp of excellence, and is a production that stands facile princeps in the realm of serial literature."—Midland Herald.

"THE WINDSOR"

has eclipsed every other Sixpenny Magazine by being

BIGGER, BRIGHTER, and BETTER.

THE TIMES CALLS IT "WONDERFUL."

London: WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED, Salisbury-square, E.C.

"LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"
Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

Every Saturday, of any Bookseller or Newsagent in England, price 4*d.*; or free by post to the Continent, 4½*d.*

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN AND GENERAL READERS.

 Subscription, 10*s.* 3*d. for Six Months*; 20*s.* 6*d. for Twelve Months, including postage.*

The Sixth Series of NOTES AND QUERIES, complete in 12 vols. price 10*s.* 6*d.* each Volume, contains, in addition to a great variety of similar Notes and Replies, Articles of Interest on the following Subjects:—

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY.

The Plagues of 1605 and 1625—Wolves in England—Prices in the Middle Ages—Executions of 1745—The "Meal Tub Plot"—Episcopacy in Scotland—English Roman Catholic Martyrs—Hereward le Wake—Hiding-Places of Charles II.—Where did Edward II. die?—Battle between Armies of Suetonius and Boadicea—William III. at the Battle of the Boyne—"The Green Bag"—Confidential Letters to James II. about Ireland—Anne Boleyn's Heart—Hubert de Burgh—Henry Martin the Regicide—Lord Hussey and the Lincolnshire Rebellion.

BIOGRAPHY.

Luis de Camoens—Thomas Bell—Cromwell—William Penn—Nell Gwynne—Coleridge—Curll the Bookseller—Sir John Cheke—Gibson, Bishop of London—Thorpe the Architect—Sir Richard Whittington—Charles Wolfe.

BIBLIOGRAPHY and LITERARY HISTORY.

Shakspeariana—Chap-Book Notes—"Adeste Fideles"—"The Land of the Leal"—John Gilpin—'Reynard the Fox'—"Lead kindly Light"—Rabelais—London Publishers of 18th Century—The Welsh Testament—The Libraries of Balliol, All Souls', Brasenose, and Queen's Colleges, Oxford—Key to 'Endymion,'—Early Roman Catholic Magazines—Stuart Literature—The Libraries of Eton, and Trinity College, Cambridge—'Dame Europa'—Bibliography—Unpublished Letters of Dr. Johnson—"Rock of Ages"—'Eikon Basilike Deutera'—William of Tyre—Bibliography of Skating—'The Book'—Notes on the 'Religio Medici'—Authorship of the 'Imitatio'—Tristram Shandy—Critical Notes of Charles Lamb.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE.

Slavonic Mythology—Folk-lore of Leprosy—Lycanthropy—North Italian Folk-lore—Friday unlucky for Marriage—West Indian Superstitions—"Milky Way"—Folk-lore of Birds—Feather Superstition—Medical and Funeral Folk-lore.

POETRY, BALLADS, and DRAMA.

The Drama in Ireland—'Tom Jones' on the French Stage—'Auld Robin Gray'—'Harpings of Lena'—MS. of Gray's 'Elegy'—The 'Mystery' of S. Pantaleon—Rogers's 'Pleasures of Memory'—"Blue bonnets over the Border"—Swift's Verses on his own Death—Tennyson's 'Palace of Art'—Ballad of 'William and Margaret'—The Australian Drama—Poem by J. M. Neale—Shelley's 'Ode to Mont Blanc'—Hymns by Chas. Wesley—'Cross Purposes'—Tennyson's 'Dream of Fair Women'—'Logie o' Buchan.'

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS.

"To rule the roast"—"Licked into shape"—"Bosh"—Joining the majority—Up to snuff—"To the bitter end"—Conspicuous by his absence—Play old Gooseberry—"The grey mare is the better horse"—Bred and born—Drunk as David's sow—Cut off with a shilling—Tin=money—Getting into a scrape.

PHILOLOGY.

Tennis—Puzzle—Rickets—American Spelling—Snob—Jolly—Boycotting—Argosy—Jennet—Bedford—Maiden in Place-names—Deck of Cards—Masher—Belfry—Brag—Bulrush—Tram—Hearse—Whittling—Beef-eater—Boom—At bay.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY.

The Arms of the Popes—Courtesy Titles—Rolls of Arms—Book-plates—Earldom of Mar—Arms of the See of York—Fitzhardinges of Berkeley—Heraldic Differences—Barony of Valoines—Colonial Arms—Earldom of Ormonde—The Violet in Heraldry—Arms of Vasco da Gama—Seal of the Templars—Earldom of Suffolk.

FINE ARTS.

Hogarth's only Landscape—The 'Hours' of Raphael—Rubens's 'Daniel and the Lions'—Early Gillrays—Retzsch's Outlines—Portraits of Byron—Velasquez and his Works—Tassie's Medallions—Copley's 'Attack on Jersey.'

ECCLESIASTICAL MATTERS.

The Revised Version—Pulpits—The Episcopal Wig—Vestments—Temporal Power of Bishops—Easter Sepulchres—Canonization—The Basilican Rite—The Scottish Office—Tulchan Bishops—Seventeenth Century "Indulgence"—The "Month's Mind"—Clergy hunting in Scarlet—The Irish Hierarchy—Libraries in Churches—Lambeth Degrees—Fifteenth Century Rood-screens—Franciscans in Scotland—Bishops of Dunkeld—Prayer-Book Rule for Easter—Fur Tippets—The Church in the Channel Isles—Metrical Psalms—Order of Administration.

CLASSICAL SUBJECTS.

'Persii Satiræ'—Roman Arithmetic—The Alastor of Augustus—"Acervus Mercurii"—"Vescus" in Georgics iii. 175—Oppian—Juvenal's Satire ii.—Transliteration of Iliad i.—Aristophanes' 'Ranæ'—Simplicius on Epictetus—Tablet of Cebes—Imitative Verse—"Felix quem faciunt," &c.

TOPOGRAPHY.

Grub-street—Porta del Popolo—"Turk's Head" Bagnio—The Old Corner of St. Paul's Cathedral—Thames Embankments—Statue in Brasenose Quadrangle—Middle Temple Lane—Ormond-street Chapel—Roman Villa at Sandown—Ashburnham House—Carew Castle—Rushton Hall, Westenhaugh—Welton House.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Christian Names—Election Colours—Buried Alive—O. K.—Ladies' Clubs—Zoedone—Berkeley-square Mystery—Wife Selling—The Telephone—Scrutin de Liste—Crocodile's Tears—Jingo—The Gipsies—Hell-Fire Club—Tarots—Tobacco in England—Sea Sickness unknown to the Ancients—Names of American States—Carucate—Female Soldiers and Sailors—Mistletoe—Giants—Jewesses and Wigs—Memories of Trafalgar—Green Eyes—Beaumontague—Secret Chambers in Ancient Houses—The Bonaparte-Patterson Marriage—Ace of Spades—Wig Curlers—Female Churchwardens—The Opal—House of Keys—Church Registers—Arm-in-arm—E. O.—Napoleon's Legacy to Cantillon.

Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, London, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, The Fine Arts, Music, and The Drama.

Last Week's ATHENÆUM contains Articles on

The FIRST CROSSING of SPITSBERGEN.
The EARLY CELTIC CHURCH of WALES.
The SIKHS and SIKH WARS.
VAUGHAN'S POEMS.
VERNON LEE'S ESSAYS.
NEW NOVELS—My Run Home; A Nineteenth Century Miracle; My Lord Duke; In Vallombrosa; The Philanderers; Maurice Quain; Daughters of Thespis; Fierceheart the Soldier; His Double Self; The Dreams of Dania; False Dawn; Without Issue; The Fall of a Star; One Man's View; A Fleeting Show.
The BYZANTINE EMPIRE in the TENTH CENTURY.
BIBLICAL LITERATURE.
LAW-BOOKS.
The MILITARY HISTORY of the EIGHTEENTH CENTURY.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
SIR THOMAS ROE; An ALLEGED ERROR of VENERABLE BEDE'S; SALES; MATTHEW PRIOR as a BOOK-COLLECTOR; The HARLEY PAPERS.

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Medical Literature; Prof. K. R. Fresenius; Astronomical Notes; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—De Morgan on Early Egypt; Elementary Manuals; The Salons at Paris; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Jubilee Music; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; The 'Iphigeneia at Aulis'; Gossip.

The ATHENÆUM for June 12 contains Articles on

SPORT in NORWAY.
A BOOK of PRIORY OBSERVANCES in the THIRTEENTH CENTURY.
SWIFT'S PROSE WORKS.
PATER'S REPRINTED ESSAYS.
MR. THOMPSON'S NEW POEMS.
A NEW THEORY of HEBREW ACCENTS and VOWEL-SIGNS.
NEW NOVELS—Dear Faustina; A Rose of Yesterday; The Last Entry; A Fountain Sealed; The Gift of Life; Miss Tudor; A Spotless Reputation; Dans la Brume.
TRAVELS in NORTH AMERICA.
BOOKS on FOLK-LORE.
SCANDINAVIAN LITERATURE.
BOOKS RELATING to INDIA.
OUR LIBRARY TABLE—LIST of NEW BOOKS.
LITERARY EXPENSES in ST. MARGARET'S, WESTMINSTER; A NEW ARABIC DICTIONARY; JUNIUS'S EDITION of CHAUCER.

Also—

LITERARY GOSSIP.
SCIENCE—Geographical Publications; The Royal Observatory, Greenwich; Anthropological Notes; Societies; Meetings; Gossip.
FINE ARTS—Venetian Missals; The Royal Academy; Minor Exhibitions; Sales; Gossip.
MUSIC—The Week; Gossip; Performances Next Week.
DRAMA—The Week; Gossip.

THE ATHENÆUM, EVERY SATURDAY,

PRICE THREEPENCE, OF

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

NEW EDITION, price Two Shillings,

CELESTIAL MOTIONS: a Handy Book of Astronomy. Ninth Edition. With 3 Plates. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Has, we are glad to see, reached a ninth edition, which enables this excellent introduction to the facts of astronomy to be brought up to date."—Guardian.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

FIFTH EDITION, price Sixpence, cloth,

REMARKABLE COMETS: a Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Well adapted to accomplish their purpose."
Dr. B. A. GOULD, Editor of the Astronomical Journal.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

SECOND EDITION, price Fourpence,

BRIEF LESSONS in ASTRONOMY. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"Conveys a great deal of information without being in any way dry or technical."—Kentish Mercury.

G. Stoneman, 39, Warwick-lane, E.C.

SECOND EDITION, fcap. 8vo. cloth, price Sixpence,

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES: a Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times. By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

Edward Stanford, 26 and 27, Cockspur-street, Charing Cross, S.W.

MEMORY.
PROF. A. LOISETTE'S ASSIMILATIVE MEMORY SYSTEM.
The last, most complete, and perfect Edition.
Arranged for Self-Instruction.
Mind-Wandering cured. Speaking without notes. Indispensable in preparing for examinations. Any book learned in one reading.
Cloth bound, with Portrait and Autograph, price net $2 50 American, 10*s.* 6*d.* English, post free.
Prospectus, with opinions of Educators, Scientific, Professional, and Business Men all over the World, free.
Address A. LOISETTE, 237, Fifth-avenue, New York, or 200, Regent-street, London.
SOLD ONLY BY THE PUBLISHER

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.
Founded 1797.
HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH—Surrey-street.
LONDON OFFICES { 50, Fleet-street, E.C.; 71, 72, King William-st., E.C.; 195, Piccadilly, W.; and 1, Victoria-st., S.W.
Amount Insured £330,000,000
Claims Paid £12,350,000
Agents Wanted in Metropolitan District.—Applications to be made to either of the above London Offices.
Norwich, June 24th, 1897.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS
(TRAVELLING, RIDING, CYCLING, HUNTING, SHOOTING, &c.),
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY AND WORKMEN'S ACCIDENTS,
INSURED AGAINST BY THE
RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.
Established 1849.
Capital £1,000,000. Claims paid £3,750,000.
64, CORNHILL, LONDON. A. VIAN, Secretary.

THE SWAN FOUNTAIN PEN.
Made in Three Sizes.
10*s.* 6*d.*, 16*s.* 6*d.*, and 25*s.* each, post free.
Not until you write with a "SWAN" will you realize its inestimable value. The most prolific writers of to-day pronounce it as a perfect Pen.
A Pen as nearly perfect as inventive skill can produce. We only require your steel pen and handwriting to select a suitable pen.
Complete Illustrated Catalogue sent post free on application to MABIE, TODD & BARD, 93, Cheapside, E.C.; 95A, Regent-street, W., London. And 3, Exchange-street, Manchester.

THE NEW MAGAZINE OF GENEALOGY AND HERALDRY.
PUBLISHED MONTHLY, price ONE SHILLING
In handsome imperial 8vo. tastefully printed in old-face type, and illustrated.

THE GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE.

A Journal of Family History, Heraldry, and Pedigrees.

The GENEALOGICAL MAGAZINE combines interesting illustrated family histories with those accurate and detailed evidences which are the real value of genealogical writing.

Contents of No. 3 for JULY.

LANE of BENTLEY HALL (now of KING'S BROMLEY MANOR, co. STAFFORD). By Henry Murray Lane.
The ARMS of DORCHESTER.
CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE in GENEALOGY. By A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
The BARONS of LE POWER and COROGHMORE. By Count E. de Poher de la Poer.
An OFFICIAL TOUR of OLD. By Somerville Gibney.
The EVOLUTION of the MEDIÆVAL HELMET. (Concluded.) By F. R. Earles.
SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part IV. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.
NELSON and HIS ENCHANTRESS. (Continued.)
A LIST of STRANGERS. (Continued.) By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
DEVONSHIRE and WORTHY.
FINALITY.
ROSS of BLADENSBERG.
QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.
A GAZETTE of the MONTH, being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.
BY THE WAY.

Nos. 1 and 2 are still on Sale.

Contents of No. 1 for MAY.

The SURRENDER of the ISLE of WIGHT. By J. H. Round.
WILLIAM BRADFORD'S HISTORY of PLYMOUTH PLANTATION, COMMONLY KNOWN as 'The LOG of the MAYFLOWER.' By J. L. Otter.
AN ANCIENT AUGMENTATION.
The SOBIESKI STUARTS. By Henry Jenner, F.S.A.
SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part I. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.
A DEVONSHIRE MANUSCRIPT. By James Dallas, F.L.S.
A LIST of STRANGERS. By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
NELSON and HIS ENCHANTRESS.
QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.
A GAZETTE of the MONTH: being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.
BY THE WAY.

Contents of No. 2 for JUNE.

GRAHAM, EARL of MONTEITH. By Walter M. Graham Easton.
SHAKESPEARE'S FAMILY. Part II. By Mrs. Charlotte Carmichael Stopes.
The EVOLUTION of the MEDIÆVAL HELMET. Part II. By F. R. Earles.
WELSH PEDIGREES. By John Hobson Matthews.
BOOK-PLATES and their VALUE. By W. H. K. Wright.
NELSON and his ENCHANTRESS. (Continued.)
A LIST of STANGERS. (Continued.) By Rev. A. W. Cornelius Hallen.
MR. HALL'S REPLY to MR. HORACE ROUND.
QUERIES and CORRESPONDENCE.
A GAZETTE of the MONTH: being a Chronicle of Creations, Deaths, and other Matters.
BY THE WAY.

ELLIOT STOCK,
62, Paternoster-row, London, E.C.

EPPS'S COCOAINE.
COCOA-NIB EXTRACT. (TEA-LIKE.)
The choicest roasted nibs (broken-up beans) of the natural Cocoa on being subjected to powerful hydraulic pressure, give forth their excess of oil, leaving for use a finely flavoured powder—COCOAINE—a product which, when prepared with boiling water, has the consistence of tea, of which it is now, with many, beneficially taking the place. Its active principle being a gentle nerve stimulant, supplies the needed energy without unduly exciting the system.
SOLD ONLY IN LABELLED TINS.

WM. & GEO. LAW.
COFFEE—
SUGAR—
TEA.
104, NEW OXFORD-STREET, W.C.

DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.
The best remedy for
ACIDITY of the STOMACH, HEARTBURN, HEADACHE, GOUT, and INDIGESTION.
And Safest Aperient for Delicate Constitutions, Children and Infants.
DINNEFORD'S MAGNESIA.

"To urge our countrymen to prepare, while there is time, for a defence that is required alike by interest, honour, and duty, and by the traditions of the nation's history."—Daily Mail.

IMPERIAL DEFENCE.

BY

Sir CHARLES DILKE and SPENSER WILKINSON.

New and Revised Edition. 2*s.* 6*d.*

"Vitally important."—Pall Mall Gazette.

"A clear, forcible statement of the great problem of imperial defence."—New Saturday.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. 2, Whitehall-gardens, S.W.

RICHARD BENTLEY & SON'S LIST OF STANDARD WORKS.

HISTORY.

BY DR. MOMMSEN.

The HISTORY of ROME. By Prof. THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated by Dr. P. W. DICKSON. In 5 vols. crown 8vo. 3*l*. 6*d*.

The HISTORY of the ROMAN PROVINCES, from Cæsar to Diocletian. By Prof. MOMMSEN. Translated by Dr. P. W. DICKSON. 2 vols. demy 8vo. with 10 Maps, 36*s*.

BY DEAN HOOK.

LIVES of the ARCHBISHOPS of CANTERBURY, from St. Augustine to Juxon. By the Very Rev. WALTER FARQUHAR HOOK, D.D., late Dean of Chichester. Demy 8vo. The following Volumes sold separately as shown:—Vol. I. 15*s*.; Vol. II. 15*s*.; Vol. V. 15*s*.; Vols. VI. and VII. 30*s*.; Vol. VIII. 15*s*.; Vol. X. 15*s*.; Vol. XI. 15*s*.; Vol. XII. 15*s*.

BY PRESIDENT THIERS.

The HISTORY of the FRENCH REVOLUTION. By ADOLPHE THIERS. Translated by FREDERICK SHOBERL. With 50 Engravings. 5 vols. demy 8vo. 45*s*.

BY DR. CURTIUS.

The HISTORY of GREECE, from the Earliest Time down to 337 B.C. From the German of Prof. ERNST CURTIUS, Rector of the University of Berlin. By A. W. WARD, M.A. 5 vols. demy 8vo. each Volume separately, 18*s*. [Vols. I. and III. reprinting.

BY MR. JAMES.

The NAVAL HISTORY of GREAT BRITAIN. From the Declaration of War by France, in 1793, to the Accession of George IV. By WILLIAM JAMES. In 6 vols. crown 8vo. 42*s*.

BY PROFESSOR CREASY.

The FIFTEEN DECISIVE BATTLES of the WORLD. By Sir EDWARD CREASY, late Chief Justice of Ceylon. Thirty-seventh Edition, with Plans. Crown 8vo. canvas boards, 1*s*. 4*d*.; or in cloth gilt, red edges, 2*s*. Also a Library Edition. 8vo. with Plans, 7*s*. 6*d*.

The RISE and PROGRESS of the ENGLISH CONSTITUTION. By Sir EDWARD CREASY, late Chief Justice of Ceylon. An Account of the Primary Principles, and Formation and Development of the English Constitution, avoiding Party Politics. Fifteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

BY M. DE BOURRIENNE.

MEMOIRS of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. By FAUVELET DE BOURRIENNE, his Private Secretary. Edited by Colonel R. W. PHIPPS, late Royal Artillery. 4 vols. crown 8vo. with Illustrations, 36*s*.

BY DR. DORAN.

The QUEENS of ENGLAND of the HOUSE of HANOVER. By Dr. DORAN, F.S.A. Fourth and Enlarged Edition. 2 vols. 8vo. 25*s*.

BY M. GINDELY.

The HISTORY of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR. By ANTON GINDELY. Translated by Prof. TEN BROOK. 2 vols. large crown 8vo. with Maps and Illustrations, 24*s*.

BY SIR W. BESANT AND PROFESSOR PALMER.

The HISTORY of JERUSALEM. By Sir WALTER BESANT, M.A., and E. H. PALMER, M.A., late Professor of Arabic, Cambridge. Third Edition. Large crown 8vo. with Map, 7*s*. 6*d*.

BY MR. LORD.

The LOST POSSESSIONS of ENGLAND: Tangier, Minorca, Cuba, Manila, Dunkirk, Corsica, Buenos Ayres, Java, the Ionian Islands, &c. By WALTER FREWEN LORD. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

The LOST EMPIRES of the MODERN WORLD of PORTUGAL, SPAIN, FRANCE, and HOLLAND. By WALTER FREWEN LORD, Author of 'The Lost Possessions of England.' Crown 8vo. [In the press.

BIOGRAPHY.

BY THE HON. SIR HENRY KEPPEL.

The AUTOBIOGRAPHY of ADMIRAL of the FLEET SIR HENRY KEPPEL, G.C.B. D.C.L. From 1809 to the Present Time. With numerous Illustrations by the late Sir Oswald Brierly, Marine Painter to Her Majesty. In 2 vols. demy 8vo. [In the press.

BY FIELD-MARSHAL LORD WOLSELEY.

The LIFE of JOHN CHURCHILL, FIRST DUKE of MARLBOROUGH. Vols. I. and II., to the Accession of Queen Anne. By Field-Marshal VISCOUNT WOLSELEY, K.P., G.C.B., G.C.M.G., D.C.L., LL.D., Commander-in-Chief. In demy 8vo. with Portraits, and other Illustrations or Plans. Fourth Edition, 32*s*.

EDITED BY THE TWELFTH EARL OF DUNDONALD.

The AUTOBIOGRAPHY of a SEAMAN: THOMAS, TENTH EARL of DUNDONALD. With a Sequel relating Lord Dundonald's services in South America, and in the War of the Greek Independence. With Portraits, Charts, and Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

EDITED BY PRINCE RICHARD METTERNICH.

The AUTOBIOGRAPHY of PRINCE METTERNICH. Vols. I. and II., 1773-1815, demy 8vo. with Portrait, 36*s*. Vols. III. and IV., 1816-1829, demy 8vo. 36*s*. Vol. V., 1830-1835, demy 8vo. 18*s*.

BY LORD DALLING and THE HON. EVELYN ASHLEY.

The LIFE of VISCOUNT PALMERSTON. With Selections from his Diaries and Correspondence. By the late LORD DALLING and BULWER and the Hon. EVELYN ASHLEY. 2 vols. crown 8vo. with Frontispieces, 12*s*.

BY WILLIAM POWELL FRITH, R.A.

REMINISCENCES of W. P. FRITH, R.A. Eighth Edition. Crown 8vo. 6*s*.

BY SERJEANT BALLANTINE.

MR. SERJEANT BALLANTINE'S EXPERIENCES. Fourteenth Edition. Crown 8vo. 1*s*.; cloth, 1*s*. 6*d*.

BY FANNY KEMBLE.

RECORDS of LATER LIFE. By FRANCES ANNE KEMBLE. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 10*s*. 6*d*.

BY THEMSELVES.

MR. and MRS. BANCROFT: their Recollections On and Off the Stage. Eighth Edition. Crown 8vo. paper wrapper, 1*s*.; or in cloth, 1*s*. 6*d*.

MISS COBBE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

The LIFE of FRANCES POWER COBBE. By HERSELF. Third Edition, with Illustrations. In 2 vols. square crown 8vo. 21*s*.

BY MRS. BISHOP.

A MEMOIR of MRS. AUGUSTUS CRAVEN, Author of 'A Sister's Story.' With Extracts from her Diaries. By MARIA CATHERINE BISHOP. Third and Cheaper Edition, in crown 8vo. with Portrait of Mrs. Craven, 7*s*. 6*d*.

BY M. GUIZOT.

The LIFE of OLIVER CROMWELL. From the French of M. GUIZOT by Sir ANDREW R. SCOBLE, Q.C. Seventh Edition. With 2 Portraits, crown 8vo. 6*s*.

BY M. MIGNET.

The LIFE of MARY, QUEEN of SCOTS. From the French of M. MIGNET, by Sir ANDREW R. SCOBLE, Q.C. Seventh Edition. With 2 Portraits, crown 8vo. 6*s*.

BY MADAME CAMPAN.

The PRIVATE LIFE of MARIE ANTOINETTE. By JEANNE CAMPAN, First Lady-in-Waiting. With Memoir of Madame Campan, Notes, and Portrait. Crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6*s*.

BY JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A.

The LIVES of PAINTERS: Hogarth, Reynolds, Gainsborough, Fuseli, Lawrence, Turner. By JOHN TIMBS, F.S.A. Crown 8vo. with Portraits, 6*s*.

BY SIR F. MONTEFIORE, BART.

The PRINCESSE DE LAMBALLE. A Memoir, by Sir FRANCIS MONTEFIORE. In crown 4to. with numerous Portraits and other Illustrations, 12*s*. 6*d*.

BY THE DUC D'AUMALE.

LIVES of the PRINCES of the HOUSE of CONDÉ. By the DUC D'AUMALE. Translated by the Rev. R. BROWN-BORTHWICK. 2 vols. 8vo. with 2 fine Portraits, 30*s*.

TRAVEL AND NATURAL HISTORY

BY MR. SELOUS.

A HUNTER'S WANDERINGS in AFRICA. By FREDERICK COURTENAY SELOUS. With Map and 12 Full-Page Illustrations by Smit and Whymper. Third Edition. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. 18*s*.

BY MR. BALDWIN.

AFRICAN HUNTING and ADVENTURE from 1852 to 1860. By WILLIAM CHARLES BALDWIN, F.R.G.S. With Illustrations by Joseph Wolf and J. B. Zwecker, and Map. Third Edition. In 1 vol. demy 8vo. 18*s*.

BY GENERAL GREELY.

THREE YEARS of ARCTIC SERVICE, 1881-84, and the Attainment of the Farthest North. By ADOLPHUS W. GREELY, General U.S. Army. Third Edition. 2 vols. royal 8vo. 42*s*.

BY DR. GRAY.

AT the COURT of the AMIR. By JOHN ALFRED GRAY, M.B., late Surgeon to His Highness the Amir of Afghanistan. Demy 8vo. with Portrait and other Illustrations, 16*s*. [Reprinting.

BY MISS CROMMELIN.

OVER the ANDES, from the ARGENTINE to CHILI and PERU. By MAY CROMMELIN. Demy 8vo. with Illustrations, 12*s*. 6*d*.

BY FRANK BUCKLAND.

CURIOSITIES of NATURAL HISTORY. By FRANCIS TREVELYAN BUCKLAND. Popular Edition, with a few Illustrations. In 4 vols. small 8vo. price 2*s*. 6*d*. each.

BY MR. DAY.

The HORSE, and HOW TO BREED and REAR HIM. By WILLIAM DAY, Author of 'The Racehorse in Training,' &c. Second Edition. Demy 8vo. 16*s*.

MISCELLANEOUS.

THE FOURTH EARL OF ORFORD.

The LETTERS of HORACE WALPOLE. Edited by PETER CUNNINGHAM, F.S.A. 9 vols. demy 8vo. with 50 Illustrations on Steel, 5*l*. 5*s*. Hand-Made Paper Edition, with 6*l* Illustrations on Steel, cloth, 10*l*. 10*s*.; vellum, 12*l*. 12*s*.

BY M. GUILLEMIN.

The HEAVENS. An Illustrated Handbook of Popular Astronomy. By AMÉDÉE GUILLEMIN. Demy 8vo. with over 200 Illustrations, 12*s*.

BY THE REV. RICHARD HARRIS BARHAM.

The INGOLDSBY LEGENDS. A New Annotated Edition. Edited, with Notes, by Mrs. EDWARD A. BOND. Illustrations on Steel. In 3 vols. demy 8vo. 31*s*. 6*d*.

The CARMINE EDITION. Small demy 8vo. With 20 Illustrations on Steel, with gilt edges and bevelled boards, 10*s*. 6*d*.

The EDINBURGH EDITION. An Edition in Large Type, with 50 Illustrations. Crown 8vo. red cloth, 6*s*.

STANDARD WORKS OF FICTION.

JANE AUSTEN'S NOVELS. (Messrs. BENTLEYS' is the only Complete Edition, containing 'Lady Susan,' 'The Watsons,' and the Memoir by her Nephew.) In 6 vols. crown 8vo. 36*s*.

The COLLECTED WORKS of THOMAS LOVE PEACOCK, including his Novels, Fugitive Pieces, Poems, Criticisms, &c. Edited by Sir HENRY COLE, K.C.B. With Preface by LORD HOUGHTON. 3 vols. crown 8vo. 31*s*. 6*d*.

THE EDINBURGH EDITION.

MISS FERRIER'S NOVELS. 6 vols. small crown 8vo. This Edition is printed from the Original Edition corrected by the Author, of whom a short Memoir is prefixed in 'Marriage.'

THE CHEAP EDITIONS OF

MRS. HENRY WOOD'S NOVELS.

Each complete in One Volume, crown 8vo. Sold separately, in red cloth, gilt lettered, price 2*s*. 6*d*.; or in green cloth, price 2*s*.

London: RICHARD BENTLEY & SON, New Burlington-street,

Publishers in Ordinary to Her Majesty the Queen.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "The Editor"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "The Publisher"—at the Office, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Printed by JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.; and Published by JOHN C. FRANCIS at Bream's-buildings, Chancery-lane, E.C.
Agents for SCOTLAND, Messrs Bell & Bradfute and Mr. John Menzies, Edinburgh.—Saturday, June 26, 1897.

BINDING SECT. JUN 3 1966

AP
4
A8
1897
Jan.-June

The Athenaeum

PLEASE DO NOT REMOVE
CARDS OR SLIPS FROM THIS POCKET

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO LIBRARY